EXSTROPH'IA, Ex'strophy, Ec'strophē, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and στροφη, 'turning.' Extrover'sio, Extrover'sion. Eversion or turning out of a part —as of the eyelids. A term used by M. Chaussier for certain displacements of organs, and especially of the urinary bladder.

Exstroph'ia or Ex'strophy of the Bladder, (F.) Renversement de la Vessie, is a faulty conformation, in which the organ opens above the pubes; so that in the hypogastric region there is a red, mucous surface, formed by the inner coat of the bladder; on which two prominences are distinguishable, corresponding to the openings of the ureters.

EXSUCCATIO, Ecchymoma.

EXSUC'TIO, Suc'tio, Ecmyze'sis, from ex, 'out of,' and succus, 'a juice.' The action of sucking.

EXSUDATIO, Ephidrosis.

EXSUFFLATIO, Ecphysesis.

EXTEMPORA'NEOUS, Extempora'neus, Extempora'lis, from ex, and tempore, 'out of time.' Those prescriptions are called 'extemporaneous,' or 'magistral,' which are made on the spot, and composed according to the prescription of the physician.

EXTENSEUR COMMUN DES DOIGTS, Extensor digitorum communis — e. Commun des orteils. Extensor communis digitorum pedis — e. Court du Pouce, Extensor pollicis brevis—e. Long du pouce, Extensor longus pollicis — e. Petit des orteils, Extensor brevis digitorum pedis — e. Propre du petit doigt, Extensor proprius minimi digiti — e. Propre de l'Index, Extensor proprius indicis.

EXTENSIBIL'ITY, Extensibil'itas. A property, possessed by certain bodies, of being capable of extension or elongation.

EXTENSIO, Extension, Tetanus.

EXTEN'SION, Exten'sio, Tasis, Ec'tasis, Catat'asis, Anat'asis, from extendere, (ex, and tendere,) 'to stretch out.' An operation in surgery, in which either with the hands alone, or by straps, a fractured or luxated limb is pulled strongly, to restore it to its natural position. It is the opposite of Counter-extension.

EXTENSOR. Same etymon. (F.) Extenseur. A muscle, whose office is to extend certain parts.

Extensor Brevis Digito'rum Pedis, Ped'icus, Calcanéo-phalanginien commun, of Dumas; (F.) Muscle pédicux, Muscle petit extenseur des orteils, Calcanéo-sus-phalangettien commun—(Ch.) Carré du pied; Short Extensor of the Toes. A muscle, situate on the dorsal region of the foot. It arises from the external surface of the calcaneum, and at the anterior edge of a ligament, which unites that boue to the astragalus. Anteriorly, each of its divisions terminates by a small tendon, which is fixed successively, at the superior part of the posterior extremity of the first phalanx of the great toe, and to the second and last phalanges of the next three toes. Its use is to extend the first four toes, and to direct them a little outwards.

Extensor Carpi Radialis Brevis, see Radialis — e. Carpi radialis longus, see Radialis — e. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubital muscles.

Extenseur commun des Orteils. This muscle, also, is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is long, thin, flattened, simple, and fleshy above, and divided into four tendons below. It arises from the outer tuberosity of the tibia and the anterior surface of the fibula, and is inserted into the superior part of the posterior extremity of the second and third phalanges of the last four toes. It extends the three phalanges of these toes.

Extensor Digito'rum Commu'nis, Extensor digitorum communis manûs cum extenso'rē pro'prio auricula'ris, Digito'rum Tensor; (F.) Épicondylo-sus-phalangettien commun—(Ch.,)—Common Extensor of the Fingers, Extenseur commun des Doigts. A long, flattened muscle; simple above, and divided into four portions inferiorly. It is situate at the posterior part of the forearm; arises from the external tuberosity of the humerus; from the aponeurosis of the forearm, and from the aponeurotic septa situate between it and the neighbouring muscles, and is inserted at the posterior surface of the second and third phalanges of the last four fingers. This muscle extends the phalanges of the last four fingers upon each other, and upon the metacarpal bone. It can, also, extend the hand on the forearm.

Extensor Digitorum Longus, E. communis digitorum pedis — e. Longus digitorum pedis, E. communis digitorum pedis—e. Proprius hallucis, E. proprius pollicis pedis—e. Indicis, E. proprius indicis—e. Internodii ossis pollicis, E. longus pollicis — e. Primi internodii, Abductor longus pollicis.

Secun'di interno'dii,* (Douglas,) E. secun'di interno'dii ossis pol'licis; (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien du pouce,—(Ch.,) Court extenseur du pouce. Seated at the posterior and inferior part of the forearm. It is thin, long, and broader at its middle than at the extremities. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted behind the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the thumb, and aids in supination.

Extensor Pol'licis Longus; Extensor major pol'licis manûs, Extensor secun'di interno'dii, Extensor pollicis secun'dus, Extensor ter'tii interno'dii (Douglas,) Extensor interno'dii ossis pol'licis, (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangettein du pouce,—(Ch.,) Muscle long extenseur du pouce. This muscle is long, flat, and fusiform; and is seated at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted at the posterior part of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the last phalanx of the thumb upon the first.

Extensor Pro'prius In'dicis, E. proprius primi dig''iti manûs, E. In'dicis, Indica'tor, Extensor secun'di interno'dii in'dicis pro'prius, (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangettien de l'Index,—(Ch.,) Extenseur propre de l'Index. This muscle is long and thin; broader in the middle than at the extremities; and is situate at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna, and is inserted at the posterior part of the upper extremity of the second and third phalanges of the index-finger. It extends the three phalanges of the index-finger; and has, besides, the same uses as the other extremities of the fingers.

Extensor Pro'prius Min'imi Dig''iti, (F.) Épicondylo-sus-phalangettien du petit doigt,—(Ch.,) Extenseur propre du petit doigt. Situate on the inside of the Extensor communis digito'rum. It arises from the external condyle of the os humeri and the aponeurotic septa seated between it, the extensor communis digitorum, and the extensor carpi ulnaris; and is inserted into the last two phalanges of the little finger. Its use is to extend the little finger, and even the hand upon the forearm.

Extensor Pro'prius Pol'licis Pedis, E. proprius Hal'lucis, E. Longus (Douglas), E. pollicis longus, Péronéo-sus-phalangien du pouce, Péronéo-sus-phalangettien du pouce,—(Ch.) This muscle is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is fleshy, broad, flat above; small and tendinous below. It arises from the anterior part of the middle third of the fibula, and is inserted into the posterior part of the superior extremity of the last phalanx of the great toe. It extends the last phalanx of the great toe upon the first, and the first upon the first metacarpal bone.

Extensor Tarsi Magnus, E. Tarsi sura'lis. A name given, by some anatomists, to the gastrocnemius and soleus combined.

Extensor Tarsi Minor, Plantar muscle.

EXTENUATIO, Emaciation.

EXTERGENTIA, Detergents.

EXTER'NAL DISEASES, Extrin'sic Diseases, Morbi extrin'seci, Surgical diseases, (F.) Maladies externes. Those diseases which occupy the surface of the body, and form the object of surgical pathology, requiring, generally, external means, or surgical operations.

EXTERNAT. The post or office of an externe.

EXTERNE, see House-surgeon.

EXTERNUS AURIS, Laxator tympani — e. Mallei, Laxator tympani.

EXTESTICULATUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EXTINCTIO, Death — e. Hydrargyri, Extinction of Mercury — e. Mercurii, Extinction of Mercury.

Extinctio Vocis, (F.) Extinction de voix. The French use this term for cases in which the voice is not wholly suppressed, but produces only feeble sounds:—Incomplete aphonia.

EXTINC'TION OF MER'CURY, Extinc'tio Mercu'rii vel Hydrar'gyri. Trituration of mercury with lard or other substance, until the metallic globules disappear. The mercury is then so divided, that it forms a black powder, generally considered to be a protoxide of mercury, but, perhaps, erroneously.

EXTIRPATIO, Extirpation—e. Linguæ, Glossosteresis — e. Testiculorum, Castratio.

EXTIRPA'TION, Extirpa'tio, Exstirpa'tio, Abla'tio, Aphæ'resis, from extirpare, (ex, and stirps,) 'to root out.' The complete removal or destruction of any part, either by cutting instruments or the action of caustics. Thus, we speak of the extirpation of cancer, polypus, encysted tumour, &c.

EXTOMIUS, Eunuch.

EXTOZOA, Ectozoa.

EXTOZOAIRES. Ectozoa.

EXTOZOARIA, Ectozoa.

EXTRA-PELVIO-PUBI-TROCHANTÉRIEN, Obturator externus.

EXTRACTIF, Extractive.

EXTRAC'TION, Extrac'tio, Exæ'resis, Exoyo'gē, Exolcē, Exelcys'mus, Enchylo'sis, from extrahere, (ex, and trahere,) 'to draw out.' The act of removing an extraneous substance from any part of the body. Thus, a spliuter is said to be extracted. It is, also, applied to the removal of certain parts. The cataract is said to be extracted: a tooth is extracted, when carious, &c.

EXTRAC'TIVE, (F.) Extractif. Same etymon. A peculiar, immediate principle, which has been admitted in extracts. Thus, bitter extractive is the immediate principle of bitter vegetables, &c.

EXTRAC'TUM, Extract, Ecchylo'ma, (F.) Extrait. An extract is prepared by evaporating vegetable solutions, till a tenacious mass is obtained. When prepared from an infusion or decoction, it is called a watery, — from ether, an ethereal,—and from alcohol, an alcohol'ic or a spirituous extract. Both kinds contain all the principles of the vegetable, that are soluble in the menstrua with which they are prepared; but the volatile parts are dissipated, and some of the fixed parts are decomposed; the proper extractive is oxygenized, and the virtues of the vegetable substance consequently altered or destroyed. Extracts are hard, soft, or fluid: the consistence of the soft being such as to retain the pilular form without the addition of a powder. A patent was taken out many years ago, by a Mr. Barry, of London, for preparing them in vacuo; and, as the temperature is much lower than in the ordinary method, the virtues of the plant are less altered, and the extracts are generally green. Extracts are also prepared by displacement or percolation. They have, likewise, received different names, according to their predominant principle. The gummy or mucous, or mucilaginous, are those which are mainly composed of gum or mucilage. Gum tragacanth may be considered a pure gummy extract. Gelatinous extracts are those composed especially of gelatin; resinous extracts, those of a resinous character; extractoresinous, those composed of extractive or colouring matter and resin; gum-resinous, those containing gum and resin; and sapona'ceous or sapona'ceous saline, those containing a notable quantity of saline substances and a resinous matter, so combined with mucus and other soluble substances, that they cannot be separated.

EXTRACTUM ABSIN'THII CACU'MINUM, Extract of Wormwood. (A decoction defecated and evaporated.) The flavour is dissipated along with the essential oil. It is a bitter tonic. Dose, gr. x to ʒj, in pill.

EXTRACTUM ACONI'TI, Extract of Aconite, Succus spissa'tus aconiti napelli, (from the inspissated juice without defecation.) It is esteemed to be narcotic and diuretic; and has been given in the cases referred to under Aconitum. Dose, gr. j, gradually increasing it.

EXTRACTUM ACONI'TI ALCOHOL'ICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Aconite. (Aconit. in pulv. crass. ℔j; Alcohol. dilut. Oiv. Moisten the aconite with half a pint of diluted alcohol: let it stand for 24 hours: transfer it to a displacement apparatus, and gradually add the remainder of the diluted alcohol. When the last portion of this has penetrated the aconite, pour in from time to time water sufficient to keep the powder covered. Stop the filtration when the liquid which passes begins to produce a precipitate, as it falls, in that which has already passed. Distil off the alcohol, and evaporate to a proper consistence.— Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM AL'OËS PURIFICA'TUM, Purified extract of aloes. (The gummy part extracted by boiling water, defecated and inspissated.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xv.

EXTRACTUM ANTHEM'IDIS, E. anthemidis nobilis, E. chamœme'li, E. florum chamœme'li, Extract of Cham'omile. The volatile oil is dissipated in this preparation. It is a pure, grateful bitter, and is tonic and stomachic. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx, in pills.

EXTRACTUM ASPARAGI, see Asparagus.

EXTRACTUM BELLADON'NÆ, Succus spissa'tus at'ropæ belladon'næ, Extract of Belladon'na, (an expressed juice inspissated.) Properties same as those of the plant. Dose, gr. ¼, gradually increased. It dilates the pupil when applied to the eye.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ ALCOHOL'ICUM, Alcohol'ic extract of Belladonna. (Prepared like the extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM CANNABIS, see Bangue.

EXTRACTUM CASCARIL'LÆ RESINO'SUM, Resinous extract of cascaril'la. (Cort. cascarillæ, in pulv. crass. ℔j; Sp. vini rect. ℔iv. Digest for four days; then decant and strain; boil the residuum in ten pints of water to two; filter and evaporate the decoction, and distil the tincture in a retort, till both are thickened; then mix and evaporate to a pilular consistence.) Dose, gr. x to gr. xx, in pills.

EXTRACTUM CATHARTICUM, E. Colocynthidis compositum — e. Catechu, Catechu — e. Chamomeli, E. Anthemidis—e. Cicutæ, E Conii.

Extractum Cathol'icum, (F.) Extrait Catholique. This epithet is given to pills composed of aloes, black hellebore, and colocynth, resin of jalap, and scammony. See, also, Extractum colocynthidis compositum.

Extractum Cincho'næ, Extract of Cincho'na, E. Cor'ticis Peruvia'ni, E. Cincho'næ Mollē, E. of Bark. (A decoction evaporated.) The active principles are similar to those of the bark in substance; but it is not so effectual — owing to the chymical change induced in the drug during the boiling. When reduced, by drying, to a state fit for being powdered, it is called the Hard Extract of Bark, Extrac'tum Cor'ticis Peruvia'ni durum, E. Cincho'næ durum. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

Extractum Cinchonæ Resino'sum, E. Cinchonæ lancifo'liæ, E. Cinchonæ Rubræ resino'sum, Res'inous Extract of Bark, E. Cincho'næ Resi'næ. The aqueo-spirituous extract contains both the extractive and resin of the bark. Dose, gr. x to xxx.

Extractum Cinchonæ of the Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1842,) is directed to be prepared as follows: — Peruvian Bark, in coarse powder, ℔j; Alcohol, Oiv; Water, a sufficient quantity. Macerate the Peruvian bark with the alcohol for four days; then filter by a displacement apparatus, and when the liquid ceases to pass, pour gradually on the bark water sufficient to keep its surface covered. When the filtered tincture measures four pints, set it aside, and proceed with the filtration until six pints of infusion are obtained. Distil off the alcohol from the tincture and evaporate the infusion till the liquids are respectively brought to the consistence of thin honey; then mix and evaporate to form an extract.—Ph. U. S.

Extrac'tum Col'chici Ace'ticum, Ace'tous or Ace'tic Extract of Colchicum. (Colchic. rad. in pulv. crass. ℔j, Acid. acet. f℥iv, Aquæ q. s. To the acid add a pint of water, and mix this with the root. Put the mixture in a percolator, and pour on water until the liquid that passes has little or no taste. Evaporate to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. j to gr. iij.

Extractum Colocyn'thidis, Extract of Col'ocynth. A cathartic, in the dose of from gr. v to ℥ss.

Extractum Colocyn'thidis Compos'itum, Extractum Cathar'ticum, E. Cathol'icum, E. Querceta'ni, Compound Extract of Colocynth. (Colocynth. pulp. concis. ℥vj, Aloes pulv. ℥xij, Scammon. pulv. ℥iv, Cardamom. pulv. ℥j, Saponis ℥iij, Alcohol. dilut. cong. Macerate the pulp in the spirit at a gentle heat for four days; strain: add the aloes and scammony; then distil off the spirit and mix in the cardamom seeds. Ph. U. S.) It is a powerful cathartic, and is used in obstinate visceral obstructions, &c. Dose, gr. vj to ℥ss.

Extractum Coni'i, E. Cicu'tæ, Succus cicutæ spissa'tus, Extract of Hemlock, Succus spissatus conii macula'ti. (Expressed juice inspissated without defecation.) Employed in the same cases as the conium. Dose, gr. ij to ℈j.

Extractum Conii Alcohol'icum, Alcoholic Extract of Hemlock. (Prepared like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.)

Extractum Convolvuli Jalapæ, E. jalapæ—e. Corticis Peruviani, E. Cinchonæ.

Extract'um Cubeb'æ Flu'idum, Fluid Extract of Cubebs. (Cubebs exhausted by ether through percolation, and the solution evaporated. Ph. U. S.)

Extractum Dulcama'ræ, Extract of Bittersweet. (Prepared by displacement from bittersweet in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

Extractum Elate'rii, Elate'rium Extract of Elaterium. (The fecula of the expressed juice.) It is violently cathartic, hydragogue, and sometimes emetic. Dose, gr. ss. every hour till it operates.

Extractum Ergotæ, Ergotin.

Extractum Genis'tæ Cacu'minum, Extract of Broom Tops. Diuretic and stomachic. Dose, ℥ss to ℥j.

Extractum Gentia'næ, Ext. Gentia'næ lu'teæ, Ext. Radi'cis Gentia'næ, Extract of Gen'tian. (The evaporated decoction.) Prepared also by displacement. — Ph. U. S.) Properties like those of Gentian. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

Extractum Glycyrrhi'zæ; Extract of Liquorice, Succus Glycyrrhi'zæ inspissa'tus, Succus Liquirit''iæ. (The evaporated decoction.) It is demulcent, taken ad libitum.

Refined Liquorice, which is sold in the form of cylinders, is made by gently evaporating a solution of the pure extract of liquorice with half its weight of gum Arabic, rolling the mass and cutting it into lengths, and then polishing, by rolling them together in a box.

Extrac'tum Gram'inis, 'Extract of Grass.' An extract prepared from Triticum repens. It is considered by the Germans to be a mild tonic; and is greatly used, especially in convalescence from fever. It is probably devoid of all injurious properties, and as probably totally inefficacious.

Extractum Hæmatox'yli, E. Hæmatox'yli Campechia'ni, E. Scobis Hæmatox'yli, Extract of Logwood. (The evaporated decoction.) It is astringent. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

Extractum Radi'cis Helleb'ori Nigri, Ext. of Black Hell'ebore root, E. Hellebori nigri. (The evaporated decoction.) In large doses, this is cathartic; in smaller, diuretic, resolvent (?) and emmenagogue (?). Dose, as a cathartic, gr. x to ℈j; as an emmenagogue, gr. iij to gr. x.

Extractum Hellebori, of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1842), is prepared from Black Hellebore, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.

Extractum Hu'muli, Extract of hops, (the evaporated decoction.) It is tonic, anodyne (?), diuretic (?). Dose, gr. v to ℥j.

Extractum Hyoscy'ami, Extract of Henbane, Succus spissa'tus Hyoscyami nigri, Succ. Spiss. Hyoscyami. (The expressed juice, inspissated without defecation.) Its virtues are narcotic. Dose, gr. v to ℈ss.

Extractum Hyoscyami Alcohol'icum, Alcoholic Extract of Henbane. (Prepared from leaves of Hyoscyamus, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.)

Extractum Jala'pæ, E. Convol'vuli Jalapæ, E. Jala'pii, Extract of Jalap, E. Jala'pi. (A spirituous tincture distilled; and an aqueous decoction evaporated; the residua being mixed together: kept both soft and hard.) It is cathartic and hydragogue. Dose, gr. x to ℈j.

Extractum Jalapæ of the Ph. U. S. is prepared like the Extractum cinchonæ, Ph. U. S.

Extractum Jalapæ Resino'sum, Res'inous Extract of Jalap. This is cathartic.

Extractum Juglan'dis, Extract of Butternut. (Prepared by displacement from butternut, in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

Extractum Krame'riæ, Extract of Rhatany. (Prepared by displacement from rhatany, in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

Extractum Lactu'cæ, Extract of Lettuce, Succus spissa'tus Lactucæ sativæ. (Leaves of fresh lettuce ℔j; beat them in a stone mortar, sprinkling them with water; then express the juice and evaporate, without allowing it to subside until it acquires a proper degree of consistence.) It is said to be narcotic and diaphoretic. Dose, gr. iij to gr. x.

An extract is, sometimes, made from the juice of the wild lettuce, Lactuca viro'sa, which is regarded as diuretic.

EXTRACTUM MARTIS ACETICUM, Ferri Acetas—e. Nucis Vomicæ, see Strychnos nux vomica.

EXTRACTUM O'PII, E. Opii aquo'sum, E. Theba'icum, Extract of Opium, E. Opii gummo'sum, Lau'danum opia'tum seu simplex, Opium cola'tum seu depura'tum. (A watery solution defecated and evaporated.) Dose, gr. ss to gr. v.

EXTRACTUM PANCHYMAGO'GUM. A drastic medicine, composed of colocynth, bruised with its seeds; senna bruised; black hellebore root, Agaric, Scammony, in powder, Extract of Aloes, and Powder of Diarrhodon.

EXTRACTUM PAPAV'ERIS, E. Papav'eris somnif'eri, E. Papaveris albi, Extract of white poppy. (The decoction evaporated.) It possesses nearly the same virtues as opium, but is weaker. Dose, gr. ij to ℈j.

EXTRACTUM PIP'ERIS FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Black Pepper. (Black pepper exhausted by ether through percolation, the solution evaporated, and the piperin in crystals separated by expression. Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM PODOPHYL'LI, Extract of May-apple. (Prepared from podophyllum, in coarse powder, in the same manner as the Extract of cinchona.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM PURGANS, see Hedera helix — e. Quercetani, E. Colocynthidis compositum.

EXTRACTUM QUAS'SIÆ, Extract of Quassia. (Prepared by displacement from Quassia rasped. —Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM COR'TICIS QUERCÛS, Extract of oak bark. (The decoction evaporated.) It is astringent and tonic.

EXTRACTUM QUI'NIÆ, Quiniæ sulphas impu'rus. This is made by evaporating the liquor poured off the crystals of sulphate of quinia to the consistence of a pilular mass. Twenty-four grains will generally arrest an intermittent.

EXTRACTUM RHEI, Extract of Rhubarb. (A solution in diluted alcohol evaporated.) Uses like those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM RHEI FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Rhubarb. (Rhej in pulv. crass. ʒviij, Sacchar. ʒv, Tinct. Zingib. fʒss, Ol. fœnicul., Ol. anis. āā ♏iv; Alcohol. dilut. q. s. Digest the rhubarb, mixed with an equal bulk of coarse sand, with ʒxij of the diluted alcohol for 24 hours. Put the mass into the percolator, and pour on diluted alcohol until the liquid that passes has little odour or taste of rhubarb; evaporate to fʒv; dissolve it in the sugar, and mix the tincture of ginger and oils. Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM RU'DII, Extract of Rudius, (F.) Extrait de Rudius. Pills made of colocynth, agaric, scammony, roots of black hellebore and jalap, socotrine aloes, cinnamon, mace, cloves, and alcohol.

EXTRACTUM RUTÆ GRAVEOLEN'TIS, E. folio'rum Rutæ, Extract of Rue, Extractum Rutæ. (A decoction evaporated.) Tonic, stomachic. The volatile oil being dissipated in the boiling, this is not a good preparation. Dose, gr. x to ℈j.

EXTRACTUM FOLIO'RUM SABI'NÆ, Extract of Savine. (A decoction evaporated.) Tonic. The same remarks may be made on this preparation as on the last. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARIL'LÆ, Extract of Sarsaparil'la. (A strained decoction evaporated.) Virtues the same as those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x to ʒj. Extractum Sarsaparillæ of the United States Pharmacopœia is prepared from Sarsaparilla, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARILLÆ FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Sarsaparilla. (Sarsaparill. concis. et contus. ʒxvj, Glycyrrhiz. contus., Sassafr. rad. contus., āā ʒij, Mezerei concis. ʒvj, Sacchar. ʒxij, Alcohol. dilut. Oviij. Macerate, with the exception of the sugar, for 14 days; express and filter; evaporate to fʒxij; and add the sugar. Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM SATURNI, GOULARD'S, Liquor plumbi subacetatis—e. Scobis hæmatoxyli, E. hæmatoxyli.

EXTRACTUM SENNÆ FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Senna. (Sennæ in pulv. crass. ℔ijss; Sacchar. ʒxx; Ol. Fœnicul. fʒj; Sp. Æther. compos. fʒij; Alcohol. dilut. Oiv. Mix the senna and diluted alcohol; let the mixture stand for 24 hours; put it into a percolator, and gradually pour on water mixed with one third its bulk of alcohol, until a gallon and a half of liquid shall have passed; evaporate to fʒxx; add the sugar, and, when it is dissolved, the compound spirit of ether, holding the oil in solution.

EXTRACTUM SPIGE'LIÆ ET SENNÆ FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Spigelia and Senna. (Spigel. in pulv. crass. ℔j; Sennæ in pulv. crass. ʒvj; Sacchar. ℔iss; Potass. carbon. ʒvj; Ol. Carui, Ol. Anisi, āā fʒss; Alcohol. dilut. q. s. Pour on the spigelia and senna Oij of diluted alcohol; let it stand for 48 hours; place it in a percolator, and pour on gradually diluted alcohol until half a gallon has passed: evaporate to a pint; add the carbonate of potassa; and afterwards the sugar, previously triturated with the oils, and dissolve. Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM STRAMO'NII, E. Stramo'nii folio'rum, Extract of Stramo'nium, Extract of Stramo'nium leaves. (The expressed juice inspissated.) The Extractum Stramonii Sem'inis, Extract of Stramonium Seed, is made from the powdered seed by means of diluted alcohol, and with the aid of the percolator;—the solution being evaporated. Ph. U. S. Used as a narcotic in asthma and other spasmodic affections. Dose, gr. ij to gr. x.

EXTRACTUM TARAX'ACI, Ext. Herbæ et Radi'cis Tarax'aci, Extract of Dandeli'on. (The strained juice evaporated.) It has been considered deobstruent, laxative, and diuretic. Dose, gr. x to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM THEBAICUM, E. Opii.

EXTRACTUM VALERIA'NÆ, Extract of Vale'rian. (An expressed decoction evaporated.) The virtues of the valerian being dependent upon its essential oil, this is an objectionable preparation. Dose, gr. x to ʒj.

A fluid extract of Valerian, Extractum Valeria'næ flu'idum, has been introduced into the last edition of the Pharmacopœia U. S. (1851). It is prepared by exhausting the valerian by ether and alcohol, through the percolator, and evaporating.

There are some other extracts in the American and other Pharmacopœias, but they are prepared in the ordinary mode, and possess merely the virtues of the plants. They are besides, generally, of an unimportant character.

EXTRAIT, Extract—e. Alcoholique de noix vomique, see Strychnos nux vomica—e. des Fruits, Rob—e. Hémostatique de Bonjean, Ergotin.

EXTRA'NEOUS BODY, from extra, 'without.' Corpus extra'neum, C. exter'num, C. alie'num, (F.) Corps étranger. Any solid, liquid, or gaseous substance, inanimate or animate, proceeding from without, or formed in the body; and which constitutes no part of the body, but occupies, in the substance of the textures, or some of the cavities, a place foreign to it.

EXTRAVASA'TION, Extravasa'tio, from extra, 'out of,' and vasa, 'vessels.' Escape of a fluid—extravasa'tum—from the vessel containing it, and infiltration or effusion of the fluid into the surrounding textures.

EXTRAVASATUM, see Extravasatio.

EXTREM'ITY, Extrem'itas; from extremus, 'the outermost;' the end or termination of a thing. The limbs, acrote'ria, have been so called, —as the upper and lower extremities. It has been, also, used to express the last moments of life; as when we say, a patient is in 'extremity,' (F.) le malade est à l'extrémité, à toute extrémité. See Membrum.

EXTRIN'SIC, Extrin'secus. That which comes from without. This term has been used for muscles, which surround certain organs and attach them to the neighbouring parts; in order to distinguish them from other muscles, which enter into the intimate composition of these organs, and which have been named intrinsic. Thus, there are extrinsic and intrinsic muscles of the tongue, ear, &c.

EXTROVERSIO, Exstrophia.

EXTUBERANTIA, Protuberance.

EXTUBERATIO, Protuberance.

EXTUMEFACTIO, Swelling.

EXTUS'SIO, from ex, and tussis, 'a cough.' 'I cough with expectoration.'

EXU'BER, from ex, 'out of,' 'devoid of,' and ubera, 'breasts;' Apogalac'tos. 'A child which has been weaned.'

EXUDATION CORPUSCLES, see Corpuscles, exudation.

EXULCERATIO, Ecthlimma, Ulceration—e. Uteri, Hysterelcosis—e. Ventriculi, Gastrelcosis.

EXUMBILICATIO, Exomphalos.

EXUSTIO, Cauterization.

EXUTORIUM, Fonticulus.

EXUTORY, Fonticulus.

EYE, Sax. eaȝ, Teuton. Auge, O'culus, Ops, Omma, Ophthal'mos, Illos, Op'tilos (Doric,) Viso'rium Org'anum, (F.) Œil. The eye is the immediate organ of vision. It is seated in the orbit, while its dependencies, called by Haller Tutam'ina Oc'uli, occupy the circumference of the cavity, and are composed of the eyebrows, the eyelids, cilia, glands of Meibomius, &c. The Ball, Globe, or Bulb of the Eye, Bulbus Oc'uli, is covered anteriorly by the tunica conjunctiva; is moved by six muscles, four straight, two oblique, and is constituted of membranes, as the sclerotic, cornea, choroid, tunica Jacobi, retina, iris, hyaloid, and, in the fœtus, the membrana pupillaris; and of fluids, called Humours, or Media,—the aqueous, crystalline, and vitreous. The eyeball is invested with a membranous tunic, which separates it from the other structures of the orbit, and forms a smooth, hollow surface, by which its motions are facilitated. This investment has been called cell'ular capsule of the eye, oc'ular capsule, tu'nica vagina'lis oc'uli, vag''inal coat, and submus'cular fascia of the eye. The vessels of the eye proceed from the ophthalmic artery. The nerves, except the optic, are chiefly furnished from the ophthalmic ganglion. The following are the dimensions, &c., of the organ, on the authority of Petit, Young, Gordon, and Brewster:

| Length of the antero-posterior diameter of the eye, | 0.91 |
| Vertical chord of the cornea, | 0.45 |
| Versed sine of the cornea, | 0.11 |
| Horizontal chord of the cornea, | 0.47 |
| Size of pupil seen through the cornea, 0.27 to 0.13 | |
| Size of pupil diminished by magnifying power of cornea to, from | 0.25 to 0.12 |
| Radius of the anterior surface of the crystalline, | 0.30 |
| Radius of posterior surface, | 0.22 |
| Principal focal distance of lens, | 1.73 |
| Distance of the centre of the optic nerve from the foramen centrale of Sömmering, | 0.11 |
| Distance of the iris from the cornea, | 0.10 |
| Distance of the iris from the anterior surface of the crystalline | 0.02 |
| Field of vision above a horizontal line, 50° / Field of vision below a horizontal line, 70° | 120° |
| Field of vision in a horizontal plane, | 150° |
| Diameter of the crystalline in a woman above fifty years of age, | 0.378 |
| Diameter of the cornea, | 0.406 |
| Thickness of the crystalline, | 0.172 |
| Thickness of the cornea, | 0.042 |

FACE, Facies, Vultus, Voltus, Proso'pon, (F.) Face. The face is the anterior part of the head. It is formed of 13 bones, viz. the two superior maxillary, the two malar, the two ossa nasi, the two ossa unguis, the vomer, the two ossa spongiosa inferiora, the two palate bones, and the inferior maxillary, without including the frontal portion of the os frontis, and the 32 teeth, which may be considered to form part of it. Its numerous muscles are chiefly destined for the organs of sight, hearing, taste, and smell. Its arteries proceed from the external carotid: its veins end in the jugular, and its nerves draw their origin immediately from the brain.

The face experiences alterations in disease, which it is important to attend to. It is yellow in jaundice, pale and puffy in dropsy; and its expression is very different, according to the seat of irritation, so that, in infants, by an attention to medical physiognomy, we can often detect the seat of disease.

Hippocrates has well depicted the change which it experiences in one exhausted by long sickness, by great evacuations, excessive hunger, watchfulness, &c., threatening dissolution. Hence this state has been called Facies Hippocrat'ica, Facies Cadaver'ica, F. Tortua'lis. In this, the nose is pinched; the eyes are sunk; the temples hollow; the ears cold, and retracted; the skin of the forehead tense, and dry; the complexion livid; the lips pendent, relaxed, and cold, &c.

The term Face (F.) is likewise given to one of the aspects of an organ; thus, we say, the superior face of the stomach.

FACE, INJECTÉE, see Vultueux—f. Vultueuse, see Vultueux.

FACET', (F.) Facette. Diminutive of Face. A small face. A small, circumscribed portion of the surface of a bone, as the articular facette of a bone.

FACHINGEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are at no great distance from those of Geilenau, and two miles north of Wisbaden. They contain free carbonic acid; carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda; chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, magnesia, and iron.

FA'CIAL, Facia'lis. Belonging to, or connected with, the face.

Facial Angle, see Angle, facial.

Facial Artery, La'bial artery, An'gular or external max'illary artery, A. palato-labial—(Ch.) is a branch of the external carotid, which rises beneath the digastricus, and is distributed to almost every part of the face. It furnishes the inferior palatal, submental, superior labial, inferior labial, and dorsalis nasi.

Facial Line, see Angle, facial.

Facial Nerve, Portio dura of the 7th pair, Ramus du'rior sep'timæ conjugatio'nis, Sympathet'icus minor, Res'piratory nerve of the face, Par sep'timum sive facia'lē, Commu'nicans faciei nervus. This nerve arises from the inferior and lateral part of the tuber annulare, in the groove which separates it from the medulla oblongata, external to the corpora olivaria, and by the side of the auditory nerve. It issues from the cranium by the meatus auditorius internus; enters the aqueduct of Fallopius; receives a branch of the Vidian nerve; forms a gangliform swelling—Intumescen'tia gangliform'is;—sends off filaments to the internal muscles of the malleus and stapes; furnishes, according to many anatomists, that called Chorda Tympani; makes its exit at the foramen stylo-mastoideum, and divides into two branches—the temporo-facial, and cervico-facial. On the face it is termed, Pes anseri'nus, Plexus nervo'rum anseri'nus. See Portio Wrisbergii.

Facial Vein, Pal'ato-labial—(Ch.,) arises between the skin and frontalis muscle, and bears the name V. Fronta'lis, (F.) Veine frontale ou V. Préparate. It then descends, vertically, towards the greater angle of the eye, where it is called Angula'ris; and afterwards descends, obliquely, on the face, to open into the internal jugular, after having received branches, which correspond with those of the facial artery. It is only in the latter part of its course that it is called Facial Vein. Chaussier calls the external carotid artery, Facial Artery.

FA'CIENT, faciens, 'making,' from facio, 'I make.' A suffix, as in Calefacient, Rubefacient, &c., 'warm making,' 'red making.'

FACIES, Face—f. Cadaverica, see Face—f. Concava pedis, Sole—f. Hippocratica, see Face—f. Inferior pedis, Sole—f. Tortualis, see Face.

FACTICE, Factitious.

FACTIT''IOUS, Factit''ius, (F.) Factice, from facere, 'to make.' Artificial. That which is made by art, in opposition to what is natural or found already existing in nature. Thus, we say, factitious mineral waters, for artificial mineral waters.

FACULTAS, Faculty—f. Auctrix, Plastic force—f. Formatrix, Plastic force—f. Nutrix, Plastic force—f. Vegetativa, Plastic force—f. Zotica, Vis vitalis.

FACULTATES NATURALES, see Function.

FAC'ULTY, Facultas, Dy'namis, Power, Virtue. The power of executing any function or act. The collection of the intellectual faculties constitutes the understanding. We say, also, vital faculties for vital properties, &c.

FÆCAL, Stercoraceous—f. Retention, Constipation.

FÆCES, Plural of Fæx; Feces, Chersæ, 'the dregs of any thing.' Fec'ulence, (F.) Fèces. The alvine evacuations are so called; (F.) Garderobes; the excrements, Impurita'tes alvinæ, Fæcal matter. Sec Excrement.

Fæces Induratæ, Scybala.

FÆCOSITAS, Feculence.

FÆCULA, Fecula.

FÆCULENTIA, Feculence.

FÆCUNDATIO, Fecundatio.

FÆCUNDITAS, Fecundity.

FÆX, Feculence.

FAGA'RA OCTAN'DRA, Elaph'rium tomento'sum, Am'yris tomento'sum, from fagus, 'the beech,' which it resembles. The systematic name of the plant, which affords Tacamaha'ca, a resinous substance, that exudes from the tree Tacamahaca, which has a fragrant, delightful smell, was formerly in high estimation, as an ingredient in warm, stimulating plasters, and was given internally, like the balsams generally. The East India Tocamahac, Bal'samum Vir'idē, O'leum Mar'iæ, Bal'samum Cal'aba, Balsamum mariæ, Baume vert, is yielded by Calophyl'lum inophyl'lum seu Balsama'ria Inophyl'lum.

The name Tacamahac is also given to a resin furnished by Pop'ulus balsamif'era seu tacamaha'ca, which grows in the northern parts of America and Siberia.

Fagara Piperi'ta, (F.) Fagarier poivré; a native of Japan, possesses the qualities of pepper, and is used as such by the Japanese. It is, also, employed as a rubefacient cataplasm.

FAGARAS'TRUM CAPEN'SĒ. Nat. Ord. Xanthoxyleæ. A South African plant, the fruit of which is known to the Colonists as wild Cardamom; and, on account of its aromatic qualities, is prescribed in flatulency and paralysis.

FAGARIER POIVRÉ, Fagara octandria.

FAGOPYRUM, Polygonum fagopyrum.

FAGUS, F. sylvatica.

Fagus Casta'nea. The systematic name of the Chestnut Tree; Casta'nea, C. vulga'ris, Casta'nea vesca, Lo'pima, Mota, Glans Jovis Theophrasti, Ju'piter's Acorn, Sardin'ian Acorn; the Common Chestnut, (F.) Chataignier commun. Family, Amentaceæ. Sex. Syst. Monœcia Polyan*dria*. The Chestnut, Casta'nea nux, (F.) Chataigne, is farinaceous and nutritious, but not easy of digestion.

FAGUS CASTANEA PU'MILA. The Chin'capin or Chinquapin, Castanea Pumila, (F.) Chataignier nain. The nut of this American tree is eaten like the chestnut. The bark, Castanea, (Ph. U. S.) has been used in intermittents.

FAGUS PURPUREA, F. sylvatica.

FAGUS SYLVAT'ICA. The systematic name of the Beech, Fagus, F. sylves'tris seu purpu'rea, Oxya, Balan'da, Valan'ida; the Beech Tree, (F.) Hêtre. The Beech-nut or Beech-mast, (F.) Faine, affords an oil, by expression, which is of a palatable character, and is eaten in some places instead of butter. It has been supposed to be a good vermifuge, but it is no better than any mild oil.

FAGUS SYLVESTRIS, F. Sylvatica.

FAIBLESSE, Debility.

FAIM, Hunger—f. Canine, Boulimia—f. de Loup, Fames lupina.

FAINE, see Fagus sylvatica.

FAINTING, Syncope.

FAINTING-FIT, Syncope.

FAINTISHNESS, see Syncope.

FAINTNESS, Languor, Syncope.

FAIRBURN, MINERAL WATERS OF. The mineral waters at this place, which is in the county of Ross, in Scotland, are sulphureous, and frequented.

FAISCEAU, Fasciculus—f. Intemédiaire de Wrisberg, Portio Wrisbergii—f. Petit, Fasciculus.

FALCADINA, Scherlievo.

FAL'CIFORM, Falcifor'mis, Drepanoï'des, from falx, 'a scythe,' and forma, 'shape.' Having the shape of a scythe. This term has been applied to different parts. See Falx, and Sinus.

FALCIFORM EXPANSION OF THE FASCIA LATA is the scythe-shaped reflection of the fascia lata, which forms, outwards and upwards, the opening for the vena saphæna, and is attached to the crural arch by its superior extremity, forming the anterior paries of the canal of the same name.

FALLACIA, Hallucination.

FALLACIA OPTICA. An optic illusion.

FALLOPIAN TUBE, see Tube, Fallopian.

FALLTRANCK, Faltranck (G.), literally, a drink against falls. A vulnerary. It is a mixture of several aromatic and slightly astringent plants, which grow chiefly in the Swiss Alps, and hence the name—Vulnéraire Suisse—given to such dried plants cut into fragments. They are called, also, Espèces Vulnéraires, and Thé Suisse. Within the present century, in England, a kind of vulnerary beer was often prescribed, in country practice, in all cases of inward bruises. It bore the name Cerevis'ia nigra, or black beer, and was formed by infusing certain reputed vulnerary herbs in beer or ale.

The infusion of the Falltranck is aromatic, and slightly agreeable, but of no use in the cases for which it has been particularly recommended.

FALMOUTH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Falmouth in Cornwall, England, resembles that of Penzance: and, like it, is in many respects, a favourable retreat for the phthisical during the winter months.

FALSA VIA, False passage.

FALSE, Falsus, Nothus, Pseudo, Spu'rious, Bastard, (F.) Faux, Fausse. This epithet has been frequently added to peripneumony, pleurisy, &c., to designate a disease similar to these, but less severe. Most commonly, a severe catarrh or pleurodynia has received the name. See Peripneumonia notha.

FALSE PASSAGE, Falsa Via, (F.) Fausse Route. An accidental passage, made in surgical operations, and particularly in introducing the catheter. The catheter is sometimes passed through into the rectum.

FALSE WATERS, Hydrallan'tē, False Delivery. Water, which sometimes collects between the amnion and chorion, and is commonly discharged before the birth of the child.

We say, also, False Ribs, False Rhubarb, &c.

FALSETTO VOICE, see Voice.

FALSIFICA'TION, Adultera'tio, from falsus, 'false,' and facere, 'to make.' A fraudulent imitation or alteration of an aliment or medicine by different admixtures. Manga'nium, Manganisa'tio. It is synonymous with adulteration and sophistication.

TABLE OF COMMON FALSIFICATIONS OF SOME OF THE MOST USEFUL DRUGS, &c.

| MEDICINES. | ADULTERATIONS. | MODE OF DETECTION. |
|---|---|---|
| ACACIÆ GUMMI. | Gum Senegal..... | G. S. is clammy and tenacious. The A. G. is perfectly soluble in water, and its solution limpid. |
| ACETUM DESTILLATUM. | Sulphuric Acid..... | Acetate of barytes causes a white precipitate. |
| | Nitric Acid..... | By evaporating it, the residuum deflagrates, when thrown on burning charcoal. |
| | Copper..... | Supersaturate with ammonia—a blue colour is produced. |
| | Lead..... | Sulphuretted hydrogen causes a dark precipitate. |
| ACIDUM MURIATICUM. | Sulphuric Acid..... | Deposites by evaporation the salts it may contain; precipitates with solution of hydrochlorate of baryta if it contains sulphuric acid. |
| ——— NITRICUM. | Muriatic and Sulphuric Acids. | The presence of chlorine is indicated by a precipitate with nitrate of silver: that of sulphuric acid by the same result with hydrochlorate of baryta. |
| ——— SULPHURICUM. | Muriatic and Nitric Acids. | The presence of muriatic and nitric acid is indicated by the smell, when the acid tested is strongly heated. |
| ——— CITRICUM. | Tartaric and Oxalic Acids. | Their presence is indicated by forming a granular sediment in a concentrated solution of a neutral salt of potassa. |

| Medicines. | Adulterations. | Mode of Detection. |
|---|---|---|
| Æther Rectificatus. | Too dilute. | The S. G. detects this. |
| | Sulphuric Acid ..... | By acetate of baryta. Precipitate white. |
| | Alcohol ..... | With phosphorus a milky instead of limpid solution is formed. |
| Aqua Ammoniæ. Ammoniæ Carbonas. | Carbonic Acid ..... | A precipitation occurs on adding a solution of muriate of lime. It should be capable of complete volatilization by heat. |
| Ammoniacum..... | | The Guttæ Ammoniaci are white, clear, and dry. The lump Ammoniacum, lapis Ammoniaci, is often adulterated with common resin. |
| Ammonii Sulphuretum. | ..... | It ought to be entirely volatilized by a red heat. |
| | Lead. | Imparts a foliated texture, and is not vaporizable. |
| | Arsenic ..... | A smell of garlic is emitted when thrown on live coals, &c. |
| | Manganese and Iron. | Are not vaporizable. |
| Argenti Nitras. | Copper..... | The solution assumes a blue colour, when supersaturated with ammonia. It may be suspected when the salt deliquesces. |
| | Nitrate of Potassa. | The adulteration with nitrate of potassa is easily recognized by the fracture of a stick of it, which is radiated when pure, and granular if adulterated; or by precipitating a solution of the salts with a sufficient quantity of muriatic acid, and evaporating the clear liquor: the nitrate of potassa or other salts will remain. |
| Absenicum Album. | Chalk, Sulphate of Lime, Sulphate of Baryta. | Not volatizable by heat. |
| Balsamum Peruvianum. | A mixture of Resin and some Volatile Oil, with Benzoin. | Not easily detected. |
| Capsicum. Cayenne Pepper. | Chloride of Sodium..... | This disposes it to deliquesce. |
| | Red Lead ..... | Digest in acetic acid, and add a solution of sulphuret of ammonia — a dark-coloured precipitate will be produced. |
| Castoreum. Castor. | A mixture of dried blood, gum ammoniac, and a little real castor, stuffed into the scrotum of a goat. | Smell and taste will generally detect the fraud. |
| Cera Flava. Yellow Wax. | Earth or Peasmeal ..... | May be suspected when the cake is brittle and colour grayish. |
| | Resin..... | Put it in cold alcohol, which will dissolve the resin, without acting on the wax. |
| | Tallow ..... | Is known by the greater softness and unctuosity, and its smell when melted. Turmeric is generally added in this case to obviate the paleness. |
| Cera Alba. White Wax. | White Lead ..... | Melt the wax, the oxide will subside. |
| | Tallow ..... | The cake has not its ordinary translucency. |
| Cinchona. Bark. | This is variously adulterated, but generally with the Carthagena and other inferior barks. | Can only be detected by practice, and examining into the quantity of quinia or cinchonia it contains. |
| Coccus. Cochineal. | Pieces of dough formed in moulds, and coloured with cochineal. | Throw it into water, the adulteration will appear. |
| Colomba. | ..... | The true is distinguishable from the false Colomba by adding to an infusion of the root, a few drops of solution of sulph. iron, which gives to the infusion of the false Colomba a greenish black colour; but produces no change in the other. |
| Copaiba. Balsam of Copaiva. | Oil..... | If it does not retain its spherical form when dropped into water, its adulteration may be inferred. Mix one part of strong liquid ammonia of 22°, with three parts of copaiba. If pure, the mixture will, in a few minutes, become transparent; if not, it will remain opake. |
| Crocus. Saffron. | Fibres of smoked Beef .. | Affords an unpleasant odour when thrown on live coals. |
| | Petals of the Calendula officinalis, and Carthamus Tinctorius. | Infuse the specimen in hot water, and the difference will be perceptible. |

| Medicines. | Adulterations. | Mode of Detection. |
|---|---|---|
| Cubeba. Cubebs. | Turkey Yellow Berries, or the dried fruit of the Rhamnus Catharticus. | Detected by attentive examination. |
| Cusparіæ Cortex. Angustura Bark. | False Angustura sometimes sold for it. | The epidermis of the true Cusparia is characterized by being covered with a matter resembling the rust of iron. |
| Guaiaci Resina. Resin of Guaiacum. | Common Resin ..... | Detected by the turpentine smell emitted when thrown upon hot coals. |
| | Manchineel Gum ..... | Add to the tincture a few drops of spirit of nitre, and dilute with water; the guaicum is precipitated—the adulteration floats in the white striæ. |
| Hydrargyri Chloridum Mite. Calomel. | Corrosive Sublimate, and Subnitrate of Bismuth. | A precipitation will be produced by the carbonate of potass, from a solution made by boiling the suspected sample with a small portion of muriate of ammonia in distilled water; or, the presence of deuto-chloride of mercury is indicated, by warming gently a small quantity of calomel in alcohol, filtering and adding to the clear liquor some lime-water, by which a reddish yellow precipitate is afforded. When calomel is rubbed with a fixed alkali, it ought to become intensely black, and not exhibit any orange hue. |
| Hydrargyri Oxidum Rubrum. Red Precipitate. | Red Lead ..... | Digest in acetic acid: add sulphuret of ammonia, which will produce a dark coloured precipitate. It should be totally volatilized by heat. |
| Hydrargyri Sulphuretum Rubrum | Red Lead ..... | Digest in acetic acid, and add sulphuret of ammonia—a black precipitate will be produced. |
| Hydrargyri Sulphuretum Nigrum. | Ivory Black ..... | Throw a suspected portion on hot coals—the residuum will detect the fraud. |
| Iodine. | Plumbago, Charcoal, and Oxide of Manganese. | The tests of its purity are — that it is perfectly soluble in ether. Heated on a piece of glass or porcelain, it sublimes without residuum. |
| Jalapæ Radix. Jalap Root. | Bryony Root, spurious or false Jalap Root, and Liquorice Root. | Bryony root is of a paler colour, and less compact texture, and does not easily burn at the flame of a candle. Liquorice is detected by the taste. |
| Magnesia. | Lime ..... | Detected by the solution in dilute sulphuric acid affording a precipitate with oxalate of ammonia. |
| | Sulphuret of Lime ..... | Gives off when moistened, the smell of sulphuretted hydrogen. |
| Magnesiæ Subcarbonas. Carbonate of Magnesia. | Chalk ..... | Detected by adding dilute sulphuric acid to the suspected substance, when, if chalk be present, there will be a white insoluble precipitate. |
| | Gypsum ..... | Boil in distilled water, and test the solution by a barytic and oxalic reagent. |
| Manna. | A factitious article, consisting of honey or sugar, mixed with scammony, is sometimes sold for it. | The colour, weight, transparency and taste detect it. |
| Morphia et ejus Sales. Morphia and its Salts. | ..... | Morphia and its salts, when placed in contact with nitric acid, are coloured red; with persalts of iron, blue. They are perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and acidulated warm water. When morphia is mixed with narcotina, the adulteration is ascertained by mixing them with sulphuric ether, which dissolves the narcotina, without sensibly affecting the morphia. |
| Moschus. Musk. | Dried Blood ..... | The bag must not appear to have been opened. This may be suspected, if it emits a fetid smoke when inflamed. |
| | Asphaltum ..... | Discovered by its melting and running, before it inflames. |
| | Fine particles of Lead .. | Rub with water. The metallic particles will subside. |
| Olea Destillata. Essential Oils. | Fixed Oils ..... | Touch writing paper with it, and hold it before the fire: fixed oil leaves a stain of grease. |
| | Alcohol ..... | Add water. A milkiness and increase of temperature occurs. |
| Oleum Ricini. Castor Oil. | Olive or Almond or Poppy Oil. | Alcohol S. G. ·820 will mix with any proportion of castor oil, whilst it dissolves very little of the others. |

| Medicines. | Adulterations. | Mode of Detection. |
| Opium. | Extract of Liquorice, Bullets and Stones sometimes in it; Extract of Poppy, of Chelidonium majus; G. Arabic, G. Tragâcanth, Linseed Oil, Cow's Dung. | The best opium is covered with leaves and the reddish capsules of a species of Rumex. The inferior kinds have capsules adherent. It is bad when soft and friable, when intensely black or mixed with many impurities, and when sweet. The quantity of morphia affords the best test. |
| Potassii Iodidum. Iodide of Potassium. | Chlorides of Potassium and Sodium, Nitrate of Potassa. | The adulteration is ascertained by precipitating a solution of the salt with nitrate of silver, and treating the precipitate with ammonia, which dissolves the chloride of silver, without acting upon the iodide of this metal. |
| Quinlæ Sulphas. Sulphate of Quinia. | Mannite..... | Leaves no residue when submitted to calcination: is perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and in water slightly acidulated with sulphuric acid. |
| Strychnlæ et ejus Sales. Strychnia and its Salts. | Brucia..... | They are free from brucia when no colour is produced by contact with nitric acid. |
| Zinci Oxydum. Flowers of Zinc. | Chalk..... | Sulphuric acid excites an effervescence. |
| | White Lead..... | Sulphuric acid forms an insoluble sulphate of lead. |

FALTRANCK, Falltranck.

FALX. Anatomists have given this name to several membranous reflections having the shape of a falx or scythe.

Falx Cerebel'li, (F.) Faux du cervelet, Falx minor, Septum médian du cervelet (Ch.,) Septum Cerebel'li, Proces'sus falcifor'mis Cerebel'li, Septum Parvum occipita'lē, is a triangular process of the dura mater opposite the internal occipital protuberance. Its base is attached to the middle of the tentorium, and its top or apex bifurcates, to proceed to the sides of the foramen magnum. Its convex surface is towards the cranium, and its concave in the fissure or groove, which separates the two lobes of the cerebellum.

Falx Cer'ebri, Septum Cerebri, Falx major, Ver'tical supe'rior longitu'dinal proc''ess, Mediasti'num cerebri, (F.) Faux du cerveau, Repli longitudinal de la méninge, (Ch.,) Proces'sus falciformis duræ matris. The greatest process of the dura mater. It extends from the fore to the hind part of the skull, on the median line; is broad behind, and narrow before, and is lodged in the groove which separates the hemispheres from each other—the interlobular fissure. At its superior part is situated the longitudinal sinus (superior,) and at its lower, corresponding to the edge of the scythe, the inferior longitudinal sinus. Its anterior extremity is attached to the crista galli; its posterior is continuous with the tentorium cerebelli, and contains the straight sinus.

Falx Major, Falx cerebri — f. Minor, Falx cerebelli.

Falx of the Peritoneum, Great, Falx peritone'i max'ima, (F.) Grande faux du péritoine, Faux de la Veine Ombilicale, Falx of the umbilical vein, is a reflection of the peritoneum, which ascends from the umbilicus to the anterior and inferior surface of the liver.

Falces of the Peritone'um, Lesser, Falces Peritonc'i min'imæ, (F.) Petites faux du péritoine, are the lateral ligaments of the liver and the reflections which the peritoneum forms, raised up by the umbilical arteries.

Falx of the Umbilical Vein, Falx, great, of the Peritoneum.

FAMEL'ICA FEBRIS, from fames, 'hunger.' Fever accompanied with insatiable hunger. — Sylvius.

FAMELICUS, Hungry.

FAMES, Hunger — f. Bovina, Boulimia — f. Canina, Boulimia.

Fames Lupi'na, Lycorex'is, (F.) Faim de Loup. Authors have described, under this name, a kind of boulimia, or depravation of the digestive function, in which the patient eats voraciously, and passes his food, almost immediately afterwards, per anum.

FAMEX, Contusio.

FAMIGERATIS'SIMUM EMPLAS'TRUM, from fama, 'fame,' and gero, 'I wear.' A plaster, extolled in ague, and made of aromatic, irritating substances. It was applied to the wrist.

FAMILIARICA SELLA, Close stool.

FAMILY DISEASES, see Hereditary.

FAMIS, Contusio.

FAMIX, Contusio.

FANCULUM, Anethum.

FANCY MARK, Nævus.

FANG, Radix.

FANON (F.) from (G.) Fahne, 'a banner,' 'ensign,' 'standard.' Fer'ula, Lec'tulus stramin'eus, Thor'ulus stramin'eus. A splint of a particular shape, employed in fractures of the thigh and leg to keep the bones in contact.

The Fanons were divided into true and false.

The true consists of a cylinder of straw, strongly surrounded with a cord or riband, in the centre of which a stick is usually placed to ensure its solidity. The false consists of a thick piece of linen, made flat like a compress, and folded at the extremities. It was placed between the fractured limb and the true fanon. The Drap-fanon is a large piece of common cloth placed between the fractured limb, in which the fanons or lateral splints are rolled.

FANTOM, Phantom, from φανταεμα, 'a spectre.' (F.) Phantôme, Fantôme, Mannequin, Man'nekin. This word has two acceptations. It means the spectres and images which the imagination presents to the sick, when asleep or awake; and, also, the figure on which surgeons practise the application of bandages, or the accoucheur the manual part of midwifery, — Phanto'ma obstetric''ium.

FARCIMINALIS MEMBRANA seu TUNICA, Allantois.

FARCINOMA, Equinia.

FARCTU'RA, Fartu'ra; from farcire, 'to stuff.' The operation of introducing medicinal substances into the cavities of animals or of fruits, which have been previously emptied.

FARCTUS, Emphraxis

FARCY GLANDERS, see Equinia.

FARD, Paint.

FARDEAU, Mole.

FARFARA, Tussilago—f. Bechium, Tussilago.

FARI'NA, Al'phiton, Crimnon, Al'eton, Aleu'ron, Ale'ma, from far, 'corn,' of which it is made. Meal or flour. The powder, obtained by grinding the seeds of the gramineous, leguminous, and cucurbitaceous plants in particular. It is highly nutritious, and is much used, dietetically as well as medicinally.

Leath's Alimen'tary Fari'na, or Homœpath'ic Farina'ceous Food, is said to consist principally of wheat flour, slightly baked, and sweetened with sugar, together with potato flour and a very small quantity of Indian corn meal and tapioca.

FARINA AMYGDALARUM, see Amygdala.

FARINA, COMPOUNDED, BASTER'S, is said to consist of wheat flour, sweetened with sugar.

FARINA, NUTRITIOUS, MAIDMAN'S, is said to consist of potato flour, artificially coloured of a pink or rosy hue, the colouring matter being probably rose pink.

FARINA TRIT'ICI, wheaten flour; F. Seca'lis, Rye flour or meal; F. Hordei, Barley meal; F. Avena'cea, Oat meal, &c. See Amylum.

FARINÆ RESOLVENT'ES, (F.) Farines Résolutives. This name was formerly given to a mixture of the farina of four different plants; the lupine, Lupinus albus, the Ervum Ervilia, the Vicia faba, and the Barley, Hordeum distichum. They were recommended to form cataplasms.

FARINA'CEOUS, Farina'ceus, Farino'sus, (F.) Farineux, Mealy. Having the appearance or nature of farina. A term given to all articles of food which contain farina. The term Farinacea includes all those substances, called cerealia, legumina, &c., which contain farina, and are employed as nutriment.

Hard's farinaceous food is fine wheat flour, which has been subjected to some heating process. Braden's farinaceous food is said to be wheat flour, baked.

In Pathology, the epithet farinaceous, (F.) farineux, is applied to certain eruptions, in which the epidermis exfoliates in small particles similar to farina.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, BRADEN'S, see Farinaceous—f. Food, Hard's, see Farinaceous—f. Food, Homœopathic, see Farinaceous.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PLUMBE'S, is said to consist principally of bean or pea flour, most probably the former, with a little Tacca arrowroot, some potato flour, and a very little Maranta arrowroot.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PRINCE ALBERT'S, "for infants and invalids of all ages," is said to consist entirely of wheat flour, slightly baked.

FARINARIUM, Alica.

FARINES RÉSOLUTIVES, Farinæ resolventes.

FARINEUX, Farinaceous.

FARINOSUS, Farinaceous.

FARRIER, Hippiater.

FART, Sax. ϸeaɼt, from Teut. fahren, 'to go:' —fart, 'a voyage.' (G.) Furz. Bdellus, Bdolus, Bdelyg'mia, Bdelyg'mus, Porda, Physa, Physē, Flatus, Crep'itus, (F.) Pet. A sonorous or other discharge of wind from behind. A low word, but of respectable parentage.

FARTURA, Farctura.

FARTUS, Emphraxis.

FAS'CIA, from fascis, 'a bundle.' Liga'tio, Ligatu'ra, Alligatu'ra, Anades'mus, Vin'cula, Spar'ganon, Epides'mos, Vinctu'ra. A bandage, fillet, roller, ligature. The aponeurotic expansions of muscles, which bind parts together, are, likewise, termed Fasciæ: — Aponeuroses, Perimys'ia. See, also, Tænia.

FASCIA APONEUROTICA FEMORIS, Fascia lata aponeurosis — f. Capitalis, Bonnet d'Hippocrate, Capelina — f. Capitis, Diadema — f. Cooperi, F. Transversalis.

FASCIA, CRIB'RIFORM, Fascia Cribrifor'mis. The sieve-like portion of the fascia lata; so called from its being pierced by numerous openings for the passage of lymphatic vessels.

FASCIA DENTA'TA, Corps godronné of Vicq d'Azyr. A band of gray matter seen beneath the tænia hippocampi on raising it up, which runs along the inner border of the cornu ammonis. It is, as it were, crenated by transverse furrows.

FASCIA DIGITALIS, Gantelet—f. Diophthalmica, Binoculus — f. Dividens, Dividing bandage — f. Heliodori, T bandage.

FASCIA ILI'ACA, Il'iac aponeuro'sis. An aponeurosis which proceeds from the tendon of the psoas minor, or which arises from the anterior surface of the psoas magnus, when the former muscle does not exist. It is attached, externally, to the inner edge of the crest of the ilium, below, and anteriorly — on one side, to the crural arch, sending an expansion to the fascia transversalis; and on the other, continuous with the deep-seated lamina of the fascia lata, which forms the posterior paries of the crural canal. Within and behind, the fascia iliaca is attached to the brim of the pelvis, and is continuous with the aponeurosis, which M. Jules Cloquet has called Pelvian. The iliac aponeurosis covers the iliac and psoas muscles, which it separates from the peritoneum.

FASCIA INGUINALIS, Spica.

FASCIA LATA. A name given by anatomists to an aponeurosis, and to a muscle.

FASCIA LATA APONEUROSIS, Fascia aponeurot'ica fem'oris, Vagi'na fem'oris, Crural or Fem'oral Aponeuro'sis, is the most extensive in the body, and envelopes all the muscles of the thigh. Above, it is attached to the outer edge of the ilia; before, it arises from the crural arch by two distinct laminæ, separated by the femoral vessels, and becoming confounded a little below the part where the great vena saphæna opens into the crural vein. Of these two laminæ, the one is more anterior and thicker than the other, and may be considered as a prolongation of the aponeurosis of the external oblique. It is intimately united to Poupart's ligament. The other, which is thinner, is behind, and deeper seated, and, after its union with the former, proceeds to be inserted into the pubis. Inferiorly, the fascia lata becomes confounded with the tendon of the triceps, and is attached to the external tuberosity of the tibia. The use of the fascia lata, like that of other aponeuroses, is to strengthen the action of the muscles, &c.

FASCIA LATA MUSCLE, Tensor vagi'næ fem'oris, Fascia'lis, Membrano'sus, Mus'culus aponéuro'sis vel fasciæ latæ, Mus'culus fem'oris membrano'sus, (F.) Ilio-aponévrosi-fémoral, Ilio-aponévroti-fémoral—(Ch.), Tenseur de l'aponévrose fémorale. A muscle, situate at the upper and outer part of the thigh. It arises, above, from the outer part of the anterior and superior spine of the ilium; and is inserted, below, between the two laminæ of the fascia lata, which it stretches and raises when it contracts.

FASCIA, OBTURATOR, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Internal, see Pelvic aponeuroses — f. Pelvic, Lateral, see Pelvic aponeuroses — f. Pelvic, Superior, see Pelvic aponeuroses.

FASCIA PRO'PRIA. A layer of areolar tissue derived from the sheath of the femoral vessels,— or according to some from the cribriform fascia. It is one of the coverings of femoral hernia, and is generally pretty dense about the neck of the hernia; but thin or even wanting on its fundus.

Fascia Repens, Spica—f. Scapularis, Scapulary—f. Sculteti, Bandage of separate strips—f. Semicircularis, Tænia semicircularis—f. Spiralis, Ascia—f. Stellata, Stella—f. Submuscular, see Vaginal, (of the eye.)

Fascia, Subperitone'al, Subperitone'al aponeuro'sis. A thin tendinous layer on the outer surface of the peritoneum.

Fascia Superficia'lis, Superficial aponeuro'sis of the abdomen and thigh, (F.) Aponévrose superficielle de l'abdomen et de la cuisse. A very thin aponeurosis, which covers the muscles and aponeuroses of the abdomen; passes before the crural arch, to which it adheres with some degree of force; sends a membranous sheath, which surrounds the spermatic cord; and is continuous with the dartos, which it assists in forming. The fascia superficialis presents, beneath the crural arch, very distinct fibres, whose direction is parallel to the fold of the thigh. It is applied over the fascia lata aponeurosis, and is attached, internally, to the ascending ramus of the ischium, near the root of the corpus cavernosum. Before the descent of the testicle from the abdomen, the fascia superficialis is very manifestly continuous with the Gubernaculum testis.

Fascia Tformis, T bandage—f. Tortilis, Tourniquet.

Fascia Transversa'lis, F. Cooperi. An aponeurosis, which separates the transversalis muscle from the peritoneum in the inguinal region. It arises above the posterior edge of the crural arch, where it seems to be continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle. Above, it is lost in the areolar tissue at the internal surface of the transversalis abdominis. Within, it is continuous with the outer edge of the tendon of the rectus muscle and Gimbernat's ligament; below, it is continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique, and receives an expansion from the Fascia Iliaca. Towards its middle and a little above the crural arch, the fascia transversalis has the wide orifice of a canal, which is occupied, in the female, by the round ligament of the uterus; and, in man, furnishes an expansion, that serves as a sheath to the spermatic vessels.

FASCIÆ, Swathing clothes—f. Ligamentosæ Coli, see Colon.

FASCIALIS, Fascia lata muscle, Sartorius—f. Longus, Sartorius—f. Sutorius, Sartorius.

FASCIARUM APPLICATIO, Deligation.

FASCIATIO, Deligation, see Bandage—f. Cucullata, Couvrechef.

FASCIC'ULI INNOMINA'TI. Two large bundles of fibres in the interior of the medulla oblongata, behind the corpora olivaria, and more or less apparent between those bodies and the corpora restiformia. They ascend, and become apparent in the fourth ventricle, under the name Fascic'uli seu Proces'sus ter'etes.

Fasciculi, Median Posterior, of the Medulla Oblongata, Funiculi graciles—f. Musculorum, see Muscular fibre—f. Pyramidales, Ferrein, pyramids of—f. Teretes, Processus teretes, see Fasciculi innominati—f. Teretes Cordis, Columnæ carneæ.

FASCIC'ULUS, Phacel'lus, Pha'celus, Fas'cicle, from fascis, 'a bundle;' Desme'dion, 'a small bundle.' In Anatomy, it is employed in this sense; as "a fasciculus of fibres." (F.) Faisceau ou Petit Faisceau, Trousseau. In Pharmacy, it means manip'ulus, Cheirople'thes, χειροπλῆθης, 'a handful:'—Musa Brassavolus says,—as much as can be held in two fingers.

Fasciculus Cuneatus, Reinforcement, fasciculus of—f. of Reinforcement, Reinforcement, F. of.

FASCINOSUS, Membrosus.

FASCINUM, Penis.

FASCIOLA, Bandelette—f. Cinerea, Tuberculum cinereum—f. Hepatica, Distoma hepaticum—f. Humana, Distoma hepaticum—f. Lanceolata, Distoma hepaticum.

FASELUS, Phaseolus vulgaris.

FASTID'IUM, abridged from fatis tædium. Fastidiousness, Squeamishness, or the condition of a stomach that is readily affected with nausea.

Fastidium Cibi, Asitia, Disgust.

FASTIGIUM, Acme.

FASTING, from Sax. fæstan, Limo'sis expers protrac'ta, Anorex'ia mirabi'lis, Ine'dia, Jeju'nium. Loss or want of appetite, without any other apparent affection of the stomach; so that the system can sustain almost total abstinence for a long time without faintness. Some wonderful cases of this kind are on record. See Abstinence.

FAT, Pingue'do, Pim'elē, Piar, Pieï'ron, Lipos, Stear, Adeps, Sevum, Sebum, Corpus adipo'sum, Axun'gia, Fat, (F.) Graisse: from G. and A. S. Fett. A soft, white, animal substance; inodorous; insipid; oily; inflammable, easy to melt; spoiling in the air, and becoming rancid by union with oxygen: almost insoluble in alcohol; insoluble in water; soluble in fixed oils. Fat is formed of the immediate principles, stearin, margarin and olein, all of which are regarded as salts composed of stearic, margaric and oleic acids, and a common base, to which, from its sweetish taste, the name Glyc''erin has been given. To these are, almost always, joined an odorous and a colouring principle. Glycerin, Glyceri'na, has been introduced into the last edition of the Pharmacopœia of the U. S. (1851), in which it is directed to be prepared as follows:—Lead plaster, recently prepared and yet fluid; boiling water, of each a gallon; mix: stir briskly for 15 minutes; allow it to cool and pour off the liquid. Evaporate until it has the s. g. 1.15, and pass slowly through it a current of sulpho-hydric acid until a black precipitate is no longer thrown down. Filter and boil until the sulpho-hydric acid is driven off, and evaporate the liquid until it ceases to lose weight. Glycerin is a colourless or straw-coloured syrupy fluid; s. g. 1.25. It is soluble in water and in alcohol, but not in ether. It is used in the form of lotion, composed of half an ounce to ten fluidounces of water, in cutaneous diseases, as psoriasis, pityriasis, lepra and ichthyosis. It forms a kind of varnish, and might be useful in cases of burns.

Fat is found in a number of animal tissues, and is very abundant in the neighbourhood of the kidneys and in the epiploon. It is generally fluid in the cetacea; soft, and of a strong smell in the carnivora; solid, and inodorous in the ruminating animal; white, and abundant in young animals; and yellowish in old. It generally forms about a twentieth part of the weight of the human body. The fat, considered physiologically, has, for its function, to protect the organs; maintain their temperature; and to serve for nutrition in case of need; as is observed in torpid animals.

Fat, Corpulent—f. Cells, Fatty vesicles—f. Mackaw, see Cocos butyracea.

FATIGATIO, Copos.

FATIGUE, Copos.

FATTY, Adipo'sus, Adipa'tus, Pimel'icus, Pimelo'des, Sax. fæt; past participle of fedan, to feed, Ad'ipous, Pinguid, Pinguid'inous. Relating to fat. Resembling or containing fat. The cellular membrane has been called fatty or adipous; from an opinion that, in its areolæ, the fat is deposited. The areolar membrane, however, merely lodges, between its lamellæ and filaments, the vesicles in which the fat is contained.

FATTY LIG'AMENT, Ad'ipous ligament. This name has been given to a reflection of the synovial membrane of the knee joint, which passes from the ligamentum patellæ towards the cavity that separates the condyles of the femur.

FATTY MEMBRANE, Adipous membrane, Adipous tissue. The subcutaneous areolar tissue, or that containing the fatty or adipous vesicles.

FATTY VES'ICLES, Adipous vesicles, Sac'culi adipo'si, Fat cells. This name is given to small bursæ or membranous vesicles which enclose the fat, and are found situate in the areolæ of the areolar tissue. These vesicles vary much in size. Generally, they are round and globular; and, in certain subjects, receive vessels which are very apparent. They form so many small sacs without apertures, in the interior of which are filaments arranged like septa. In fatty subjects, the adipous vesicles are very perceptible, being attached to the areolar tissue and neighbouring parts by a vascular pedicle. Raspail affirms that there is the most striking analogy between the nature of the adipose granules and that of the amylaceous grains.

FATTY VESSELS, Adipous vessels. The vessels connected with the fat. Some anatomists have called Adipous canals, (F.) Conduits adipeux, the vessels to which they attribute the secretion of fat.

FATTY DEGENERATION OF THE LIVER, Adiposis hepatica—f. Liver, Adiposis hepatica.

FATU'ITAS, Moro'sis, Stultit''ia, Stupor mentis, Amen'tia; from fatuus, 'foolish.' Mental imbecility. Idiotism. Dementia. One affected with fatuity is said to be fat'uous.

FATUOUS, see Fatuity.

FAUCES, Isthmus, Pharynx, Throat.

FAUCETTE VOICE, see Voice.

FAUNO'RUM LUDIB'RIA. The sports of the Fauni. Some authors have called thus the incubus; others, epilepsy.

FAUSSE, False.

FAUSSE COUCHE (F.), Vanum partu'rium. Some authors have used this term for the expulsion of different bodies constituting false conceptions; such as moles, hydatids, clots of blood, &c. Most accoucheurs use the term synonymously with abortion.

FAUSSE POSITION (F.), False position. The French use this term, in vulgar language, to indicate any attitude in which torpor, tingling, and loss of power over the motion of a part, are produced by too strong contraction or painful compression.

FAUSSE ROUTE, False passage.

FAUSTI'NI PASTIL'LI, Faustinus's Lozenges. These were once celebrated. They were composed of burnt paper, quicklime, oxide of arsenic, sandarach, lentils, &c.

FAUX, False—f. du Cerveau, Falx cerebri—f. du Cervelet, Falx cerebelli—f. Grande du péritoine, Falx, great, of the peritoneum—f. Petite du péritoine, Falx, lesser, of the peritoneum—f de la Veine ombilicale, Falx, great, of the peritoneum.

FAVEUX, Favosus.

FAVIFORMIS, Favosus.

FAVO'SUS. Similar to a honeycomb. Faviform'is, Favous, from favus, cerion, 'a honeycomb.' (F.) Faveux. An epithet given to a species of porrigo. Cerion, Favus; means also a state of ulceration, resembling a honeycomb.

FA'VULUS; diminutive of favus, 'a honeycomb.' Favuli is used by Dr. Morton, of Philadelphia, for the honeycomb-like depressions in the lining membrane of the stomach—the stomach-cells of Messrs. Todd and Bowman.

FAVUS, Porrigo, Porrigo favosa, see Favosus.

FEATHERFEW, Matricaria.

FEBRIC''ITANS, Feb'riens, Enip'yros. One attacked with fever; from febricitare, 'to have a fever.'

FEBRICITATIO, Feverishness.

FEBRICOSUS, Feverish.

FEBRIC'ULA, Fe'veret. Diminutive of febris, 'fever.' A term employed to express a slight degree of fever. Ephemera.

FEBRICULOSITY, Feverishness.

FEBRIENS, Febricitans, Feverish.

FEBRIFACIENT, see Feverish.

FEBRIF'EROUS, Feb'rifer, from febris, 'fever,' and fero, 'I carry.' Fever-bearing, as a febriferous locality.

FEBRIFIC, see Feverish.

FEB'RIFUGE, Lexipyret'icus, Lexipyr'ctus, Pyret'icus, Alexipyret'icus, Antifebri'lis, Antipyret'ic, Febrif'ugus, from febris, 'a fever,' and fugare, 'to drive away.' A medicine which possesses the property of abating or driving away fever.

FEBRIFUGUM LIGNUM, Quassia.

FE'BRILE, febri'lis. Relating to fever, as febrile movement, febrile pulse, &c.

FEB'RUA; from februo, 'I purge.' In ancient mythology, a goddess who presided over menstruation.

FECAL, Stercoraceous.

FÉCES, Fæces.

FÉCONDATION, Fecundation.

FÉCONDITÉ, Fecundity.

FEC'ULA, Fæ'cula, diminutive of fæx, 'lee.' An immediate principle of vegetables, composed of hydrogen, oxygen, and carbon. It exists in several plants, and has different names, according to that which furnishes it. When extracted from wheat or barley, it is called starch, Am'ylum. When from Cycas circina'lis, Sago;—from Orchis mo'rio, Salep. We say, also, Fecula of the Potato, Bryony, Arum, Manioc, &c.

FECULA, GREEN. This name is given to a green, solid matter, of variable character, which is believed to be resinous, and which renders turbid several kinds of juices, extracted from vegetables. It is, also, called Chlorophyll.

FECULA AMYLACEA, Amylum — f. Marantæ, Arrow-root — f. Tapioka, see Jatropha manihot.

FEC'ULENCE, Fæculen'tia, Fæcos'itas, Fæx, Lemma, Fæ'ces, Lee, Deposit, Dregs. In Pharmacy, feculent, albuminous, or other substances, which are deposited from turbid fluids.

FEC'ULENT, Fæculen'tus, Hypot'rygus, Trygo'des. 'Foul, dreggy, excrementitious;' as a feculent fluid, feculent evacuations, &c.

FEC'UND, Fecun'dus, Fæcun'dus, (F.) Fécond. Same etymon as the next. Fruitful, Prolific.

FECUNDA'TION, Fæcunda'tio, Impregna'tion, Imprægna'tio, Ingravida'tio, Prægna'tio, Gravida'tio, Prægna'tus, Fructifica'tio, Cye'sis, Encye'sis, Encymo'sia, Procrea'tion, (F.) Fécondation. The act by which, in organized beings, the material furnished by the generative organs of the female, unites with that prepared by those of the male, so that a new being results.

FECUN'DITY, Eutoc'ia, Fæcun'ditas, Productiv'itas, (F.) Fécondité. The faculty of reproduction, possessed by organized bodies.

It has been estimated that throughout a country, taking one marriage with another, not more than 4 children are the result; and in towns only 35 children to 10 marriages.

FEE, Sostrum.

FEET, BURNING OF THE. A singular cachectic disease, described by Mr. Malcolmson as occurring in India, the prominent symptom of which was a sense of burning in the feet.

FÉGARITE, Cancer aquaticus, Stomatitis, pseudo-membranous.

FEIGNED DISEASES, Morbi dissimula'ti seu simula'ti seu cela'ti seu infitia'ti seu pseuda'lei, Sim'ulated diseases, Pretend'ed diseases, (F.) Maladies dissimulées, M. simulées, M. feintes, M. supposées. The tricks employed, by impostors, to induce a belief that they are attacked with diseases when they are not. These are generally assumed by beggars to obtain alms; by criminals to escape punishment; and by soldiers to be exempt from duty.

The following table exhibits the chief feigned diseases, with the means of detection.

A TABLE OF FEIGNED, PRETENDED, SIMULATED, OR EXCITED DISEASES OR DISQUALIFICATIONS.

| Diseases, &c. | How Feigned. | How Detected. |
|---|---|---|
| 1. Abortion. | By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood. | |
| 2. Abstinence. | ..... | By constant and minute attention. |
| 3. Amaurotic Blindness. | By applying the extract of belladonna or datura stramonium to the eye. | Amaurosis is characterized by dilated pupil. Where these substances have been applied, the effects will go off in ten days or a fortnight. |
| 4. Apoplexy. | By falling down as if deprived of sensation and consciousness. | By powerful stimulants; an electric shock; application of hot water, sternutatories, actual cautery, &c. |
| 5. Cachexia, Anæmia, and Debility. | Using substances to make the face appear pale and livid. Indulging freely in wine, and privation of sleep prior to examination. | By examining if the pulse be strong, and the skin hot, and whether there be loss of appetite or of strength, or swelling of the limbs. |
| 6. Excretion of Calculi. | Putting sand, pebbles, &c., into the urine. | By the aid of chymistry. We are acquainted with the chymical composition of urinary calculi. |
| 7. Cancerous Ulcer. | By gluing on a portion of a spleen with the smooth side to the skin, leaving on the outside the appearance of an ulcerated surface. | By noticing whether there be signs of cachexia, and by attentive examination of the part. |
| 8. Catalæpsy. | By seeming to be suddenly motionless, the joints remaining flexible, and external objects making no impression. | By powerful stimulants, as recommended under apoplexy. Letting fall a drop of boiling water on the back. Proposing to use the actual cautery, and seeing whether the pulse rises. |
| 9. Chorea. | By assuming the convulsive motions of a part which characterize chorea. | By examining the patient whilst he may imagine himself unobserved, and seeing whether the convulsive motions go on. By anæsthetics. (?) |
| 10. Contraction of Joints in General | ..... | Mode of discrimination sometimes so obscure as to deceive the most practised and attentive. |
| 11. Contraction of the Fingers. | ..... | Introduce a cord between the fingers and the palm of the hand, and gradually apply weights so as to expand the fingers. Confine him so that he cannot obtain his food without using his clenched hand. |
| 12. Convulsions. | ..... | When feigned, they do not present the rigidity of muscles or the rapidity of action which characterize the real. The mode of detection must be the same as in epilepsy. |
| 13. Opake Cornea. | Produced by the application of a strong acid, by acrid powders, as quicklime, &c. | The existence of the opacity can be detected by attentive observation. |
| 14. Cutaneous Diseases | Some articles of diet will bring on urticaria or nettle-rash, in particular individuals, as shell-fish, bitter almonds, &c. By acrids, acids, or any irritants applied to the surface. An ointment of tartarized antimony causes a painful pustular eruption. See Porrigo, in this list. | By careful examination on the part of practitioner and nurse. |

| Diseases, &c. | How Feigned. | How Detected. |
| 15. Deaf-Dumbness. | ..... | The really deaf and dumb acquire an expression of countenance and gestures which it is difficult to assume. |
| 16. Deafness. | It may be assumed or excited by putting a pea in the ear, or by inserting irritants, so as to induce inflammation and temporary loss of function. | Make a noise when not expected, and see if the countenance varies or pulse rises. Put to sleep by opium, and then fire a pistol close to the ear, when he may be thrown off his guard. Examine the ear to see if any trick has been played there. |
| 17. Death. | Some persons possess the power of suspending or moderating the action of the heart. | If suspected, the plan recommended under apoplexy will be found most efficacious. |
| 18. Debility, see Cachexia. | | |
| 19. Deformity. | ..... | Examine the part and its articulation, naked, and compare it with the opposite. |
| 20. Delivery. | After enlargement produced artificially, a subsidence of the tumefaction; the parts being moistened by borrowed blood, and the child of another substituted as the female's own. | Can only be positively detected by examination par vaginam. Soon after delivery, the vagina will be relaxed and the lochial discharge be flowing in greater abundance, the shorter the time that may have elapsed since delivery. |
| 21. Diarrhœa. | Said to have been caused by a mixture of vinegar and burnt cork. (?) May be occasioned by the use of any of the purgative roots, &c. | When diarrhœa is feigned by the lower classes, inspect the linen; if clean, the bowels are probably not much out of order. Let every individual have a close stool of his own; and inspect the evacuations, taking care that one suffering under the disease does not lend his evacuations to another. |
| 22. Dropsy. | May be feigned, like pregnancy, by wearing pads. The anasarcous condition of the lower limbs has been caused by applying a ligature round them. By inflating the cellular membrane of the abdomen. | Can be detected by attentive examination. There will be a want of that leucophlegmatic habit which accompanies and characterizes dropsy. |
| 23. Dysentery. | May be feigned, like diarrhœa, by adding a little blood to the evacuations, or by introducing a soap or some more irritating suppository. | Same rules as under diarrhœa. |
| 24. Epilepsy. | The foaming of the mouth has been produced by keeping a piece of soap in it. | Sensation in epilepsy is totally abolished. If any remain, disease probably feigned. Incontractility of pupil, which occurs in epilepsy, cannot be feigned. Same means to be used as in feigned apoplexy. |
| 25. Fever. | By various stimulants, as wine, brandy, pepper; swallowing a small quantity of tobacco, or introducing it into the anus. Flour or chalk used to whiten the tongue. Redness of skin, caused by friction with a hard brush. | This deceit is generally developed by a day or two's examination. Where flour or chalk has been used to whiten the tongue, the line of demarcation between the whitened part and the clean, healthy margin of the tongue, is too well marked to escape observation. |
| 26. Fistula in Ano. | By making an incision near the verge of the anus, and introducing into it an acrid tent, such as the root of white hellebore, &c. | By careful examination. |
| 27. Fractures. | There is generally nothing but the man's own testimony. He complains of pain in the part; if fracture of the skull be feigned, he states, perhaps, that he becomes deranged on tasting liquor. | By attentive examination. |

| Diseases, &c. | How Feigned. | How Detected. |
|---|---|---|
| 28. Hæmatemesis. | By drinking the blood of some animal, or using some coloured liquid, and then throwing it up. | By cutting off the supply of the fluid and careful examination. |
| 29. Hæmoptysis. | By secreting bullock's blood for the purpose of colouring the saliva; making small incisions in the mouth; using bole armeniac or paint of vermilion. | Blood from the lungs is frothy and light-coloured. Mouth and fauces must be carefully inspected, and the individual be observed. |
| 30. Hæmorrhoids. | By introducing bladders of rats or of small fish partly into the rectum. The linen has also been stained with borrowed blood. | The means are obvious. |
| 31. Heart, Diseases of, see Palpitation. | | |
| 32. Hepatitis. | ..... | Unless the person be a well-educated impostor, acute inflammation of the liver will be detected by the absence of marks of strong inflammatory action. Chronic liver disease is, frequently, not characterized by well-marked symptoms, and hence, when assumed, is difficult of detection. |
| 33. Hernia. | In the same manner as hydrocele; — by inflation. | The detection is easy. |
| 34. Hydrocele. | By puncturing the skin of the scrotum, and inflating the cellular membrane. | Do. |
| 35. Hydrocephalus. | By opening the integuments of the head, near the vertex, e. g. and blowing in air. | Do. |
| 36. Hysteria. | ..... | Does not easily resist the application of strong sternutatories to the nostrils. Attentive examination necessary. |
| 37. Insanity. | ..... | The expression of countenance cannot easily be feigned. Nor can the affection be kept up so long as in real mental alienation. The individual cannot do so long without food, sleep, &c. |
| 38. Jaundice. | By colouring the skin with an infusion of turmeric or tincture of rhubarb. Clay-coloured stools produced by taking daily a small quantity of muriatic acid. High-coloured urine by rhubarb taken internally. | The eyes cannot be coloured, although smoke has been used for this purpose. The skin must be washed to remove the colouring matter if any exist, and the supply of acid and rhubarb be prevented. |
| 39. Lameness. | By keeping the limb in a contracted state, and resisting any efforts to move it. | By two persons taking hold of the individual and moving rapidly along with him; and when they are tired, having relays. The impostor will generally give in. |
| 40. Menstruation. | By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood. | By cutting off the supply. |
| 41. Myopia. Short-Sightedness. | ..... | Present an open book, and apply the leaves close to the nose. If it cannot be read distinctly, when thus placed, or when glasses proper for short-sightedness are used, the disease is feigned. |
| 42. Ophthalmia. | Excited by a variety of acrid and corrosive substances applied to the eye; as lime, &c. A portion of black muslin, spread over the cornea. The eyelashes are sometimes extracted, and caustic applied to excite disease in the palpebræ. | When ophthalmia is thus excited, its progress is ordinarily very rapid, arriving at its height within a few hours. |
| 43. Ozæna. | By impregnating a piece of sponge with some offensive juices or oils, mixed with decayed cheese, and putting the imbued sponge into the nostrils. | |

| Diseases, &c. | How Feigned. | How Detected. |
|---|---|---|
| 44. Palpitation. | White hellebore, given in the dose of 10 or 12 grains, and repeated, will occasion general indisposition, and undue action of the heart. | Cut off the supply. |
| 45. Pains. | ..... | The detection is here often difficult. The non-existence of pain cannot be proved, and great pain may be present without any appearance externally. The imposition is more frequently detected by inconsistencies and contradictions in the patient's history of the case, than in any other manner. |
| 46. Shaking Palsy. | ..... | May be suspected, if the person be in an ordinary state of vigour. Try violent remedies and means, recommended under Chorea. |
| 48. Phthisis Pulmonalis. | Individuals with long necks and contracted shoulders have simulated phthisis, by covering the chest with blisters, cicatrices of issues, &c., and by taking drugs which cause paleness. | By attentive examination of the symptoms. |
| 49. Polypus Nasi. | By introducing the testicle of a young cock, or the kidney of a rabbit, into the nostril, and retaining it there by means of a sponge fastened to it. | |
| 50. Porrigo. Scalled Head. | By applying nitric acid to the head, after protecting the face with fatty substances; but the chronic state is imitated by the use of depilatories of different kinds applied sometimes in patches, so as to resemble the Porrigo decalvans. | |
| 51. Pregnancy. | By wearing pads, and assuming the longing after particular articles of diet, &c. | By the absence of the areola; the presence of a pad; and, if necessary, by examination per vaginam. |
| 52. Prolapsus Ani. | By a portion of the intestine of the ox, in which a sponge filled with a mixture of blood and milk is placed. | |
| 53. Prolapsus Uteri. | By a similar fraud. | |
| 54. Pulse, Weakness or Defect of. | By ligatures applied to the corresponding arm. | By examining whether the arteries of the two arms beat alike; and if a ligature be placed on the arm. |
| 55. Chronic Rheumatism. See Pain. | | |
| 56. Scrofula. | By exciting ulcers below the angles of the jaw. | By examining the general habit, and observing whether the ulcerations be glandular, and the discharge of a scrofulous character. |
| 57. Scurvy. | By covering the teeth with wax, and then applying acid, corrosive substances to the gums. | By examining the general habit; whether debilitated, cachectic, and possessing the usual general signs of scorbutus. |
| 58. Stammering. | ..... | Simulators of this defect generally state, that it is connate, or ascribe it to a fit of apoplexy or severe fever. Where the organs of speech were perfect, and the moral evidence of the previous existence of the infirmity was not satisfactory, the French authorities used to confine the soldiers, and not supply them with food, until they called for it without stammering. |

| Diseases, &c. | How Feigned. | How Detected. |
|---|---|---|
| 59. Stricture of the Urethra. | ..... | By passing a bougie. |
| 60. Swelling of the Legs. | By ligatures round the thighs. | Examine the limbs uncovered. |
| 61. Syncope. | Ligatures are sometimes used to prevent the pulse being felt. By applying lotions to the face to make it pale. | By using sternutatories. By the absence of some of the symptoms of syncope. Examine the naked arms. Wash the face. |
| 62. Tympany. | Persons have possessed the power of swallowing air, so as to distend the stomach, and simulate tympany. | |
| 63. Ulcer of the Ear. | By introducing a tent, imbued with blistering plaster into the ear, and repeating the application, until the tube becomes ulcerated, and a discharge of puriform matter is established. The fetid smell is imitated, by dropping into the ear a mixture of empyreumatic oil, asafœtida, and old cheese. Also, by introducing a little honey into the meatus. | By careful examination. |
| 64. Ulcers of the Legs, &c. | By corrosives, or irritants. Sometimes by abrasion, by rubbing sand on the shin-bone. At others, they are pretended, by gluing on a piece of spleen or the skin of a frog. | Artificial ulcers have, usually, a more distinct margin, and are more readily healed than others; the latter being generally indicative of an impaired constitution. |
| 65. Bloody Urine. | The fruit of the Indian Fig (Cactus opuntia) colours the urine as red as blood. Cantharides will cause it. Blood may also be procured and mixed with the urine. | By making the patient pass his urine in the presence of the physician, and examining the vessel before and after. By cutting off the supply of any substance, which could cause the appearance. |
| 66. Incontinence of Urine. | ..... | Difficult, at times, of detection. Give the person a full dose of opium, and introduce the catheter when he is asleep. If there be urine, the incontinence is feigned. |
| 67. Varicose Veins. | By a ligature, placed tightly round the limb. They may be excited in this manner, or aggravated if already existing. | By examining the limb. |

FEL, Bile—f. Anguillæ, see Bile—f. Bovinum, Bile of the Ox—f. Bovis, see Bile—f. Naturæ, Aloes—f. Tauri, see Bile—f. Terræ, Ludus Helmontii—f. Ursi, see Bile—f. Vitri, see Vitrum.

FELDSCHEEREN, Bathers.

FELINEUS, Bilious.

FELLEUS, Biliary, Bilious.

FELLIDUCUS, Cholagogue.

FELLIS OBSTRUCTIO, Icterus—f. Superfusio, Icterus—f. Suffusio, Icterus.

FELON, Paronychia.

FELTING, from Anglo-Saxon pelt, cloth or stuff made without weaving. Tangling. A term applied to the hair when inextricably interlaced, as occurs occasionally in women from inattention.

FÉLURE DE GLASER, Fissure, glenoid.

FELWORT, Gentiana lutea.

FEMALE, Fœm'ina, Gynē, (F.) Femelle, from φυω, 'I generate.' (?) In animals, the one that engenders and bears the young. It is, also, used adjectively;—as, the Female Sex, &c.

Female Parts, Vulva.

FEMELLE, Female.

FEMEN, Thigh, Vulva.

FEMINES'CENCE, Fœmineseen'tia, from fœmina, 'a female.' The possession or assumption of certain male characteristics by the female.—Mehliss.

FEMME EN COUCHE, Puerpera.

FEM'ORAL, Femora'lis, from femur, 'the thigh-bone.' Belonging or relating to the thigh; as Femoral artery, Femoral hernia, &c. See Crural.

FEMORALIS, Triceps cruris.

FÉMORO-CALCANIEN PETIT, Plantar muscle—f. Popliteal, great, Sciatic nerve, great—f. Popliti-tibial, Poplitæus muscle.

FEM'ORO-TIB'IAL, Femoro-tibia'lis. Belonging to the femur and tibia. The Femoro-tibial articulation is the knee-joint.

FEMUR, Merus, Me'rium, Os fem'oris. The thigh bone. (F.) L'os de la Cuisse. The strongest and longest of all the bones of the body, extending from the pelvis to the tibia, and forming the solid part of the thigh. The femur is cylindrical, slightly curved anteriorly, unsymmetrical and oblique downwards and inwards. The body of the bone is prismatic, and has, behind, a prominent ridge, the linea aspera.

Processes.
- Upper or Pelvic Extremity.
  - Head supported on a column or neck.
  - Great trochanter.
  - Lesser trochanter.
- Inferior or Tibial Extremity.
  - External condyle.
  - Internal condyle.
  - External tuberosity.
  - Internal tuberosity.

The femur ossifies from five points:—one on each process of the pelvic extremity; one in the body of the bone; and two on the condyles. It is articulated with the pelvis, tibia, and patella. See Thigh.

FÉMUR COL DU, Collum femoris—f. Moventium septimus, Iliacus internus—f. Moventium sextus, Psoas magnus—f. Summum, Vulva.

FENES'TRA. A window. (F.) Fenêtre. Anatomists have given this name to two apertures, situate in the inner paries of the cavity of the tympanum. The one of these is the Fenest'ra ova'lis, F. vestibula'ris, Fora'men ova'lē. It is oval-shaped; situate at the base of the stapes, and corresponds with the cavity of the vestibule. The other is the Fenest'ra rotun'da, F. Cochlea'ris, Fora'men rotun'dum. It is closed by a fine, transparent membrane, called Membra'na Tympani secun'daria, Tympanum minus seu secunda'rium, Membra'na fenestræ rotun'dæ, and corresponds to the inner scala of the cochlea.

Fenestra Oculi, Pupil.

FENES'TRAL, Fenestra'tus, from fenestra, 'a window.' (F.) Fenêtré et Fenestré. Bandages, compresses, or plasters with small perforations or openings, are so called. The openings prevent the detention of the discharge.

FENESTRATUS, Fenestral.

FENESTRÉ, Fenestral.

FENÊTRE, Fenestra.

FENÊTRÉ, Fenestral.

FENNEL, Anethum—f. Dogs', Anthemis cotula—f. Flower, Nigella—f. Hog's, Peucedanum—f. Sweet, Anethum—f. Water, Phellandrium aquaticum.

FENOUIL, Anethum—f. d'Eau, Phellandrium aquaticum—f. Marin, Crithmum maritimum—f. de Porc, Peucedanum—f. Puant, Anethum graveolens.

FENTE, Fissure—f. Capillaire, see Pilatio—f. Glénoïdale, Fissure, glenoid—f. Orbitaire. Orbitar fissure—f. Orbitaire inférieure, Sphenomaxillary fissure—f. Sphéno-maxillaire, Sphenomaxillary fissure—f. Sphénoïdale, Sphenoidal fissure.

FÉNUGREC, Trigonella fœnum.

FENUGRECK, Trigonella fœnum.

FER, Ferrum—f. Acétate de, Ferri acetas—f. Carbonate de, Ferri protocarbonas—f. Chaud, Pyrosis—f. Hydrate de, tritoxide de, Ætites—f. Iodure de, Ferri iodidum, see Iodine—*f. FERALIS PEDICULUS, see Pediculus.

FERINE, Feri'nus; 'savage, brutal;' Therio'des. A term, applied to any malignant or noxious disease. In France it is used only when joined to Toux; Toux férine, a dry, obstinate, and painful cough.

FERMENT, Fermen'tum, (quasi fervimentum,) Zyma, Zymo'ma, Leven, (F.) Lévain. The Iatrochymists applied this name to imaginary substances, Fermen'ta mor'bi, to which they attributed the power of producing disease, by exciting a fermentation in the humours.

FERMENTA'TION, Fermenta'tio, Zymo'sis, Æstua'tio, Causis, Brasmos. An intestinal movement, occurring spontaneously in a liquid; whence result certain substances, that did not previously exist in it.

The chemical physicians attributed all diseases to an imaginary fermentation of the humours.

Fermentation, Putrefactive, Putrefaction.

FERNAMBUCO WOOD, Cæsalpinia echinata.

FERRAMEN'TUM, Side'rion, Instrumen'tum fer'reum. Any surgical instrument made of iron. By the vulgar, in France, the word ferrements means the instruments used in difficult labours.

FERRARIA, Scrophularia aquatica.

FERRATUS, Chalybeate.

FERREIN, Canal of, Ductus Ferrei'ni. A triangular channel, which Ferrein supposed to result from the approximation of the free edges of the eyelids applied to the globe of the eye; and which he considered adapted for directing the tears towards the puncta lachrymalia, during sleep. The canal is, probably, imaginary.

The same name is likewise given to the cortical canals,—the first portions of the uriniferous ducts, whilst still in the cortical substance of the kidney.

Ferrein, Pyr'amid of, Pyr'amis Ferrei'ni. Each of the papillæ of the kidney, according to Ferrein, consists of, at least, 700 subordinate cones or pyramids. To these last the names 'pyramids of Ferrein,' Pyram'ides renā'les Ferrei'ni, Fascic'uli pyramida'les, have been given.

FERRI ACE'TAS, Extrac'tum martis ace'ticum, Ace'ticum martia'lē, Ac''etate of Iron, Iron Liquor, (F.) Acétate de fer. A preparation of the Dublin Pharmacopœia, made by digesting 1 part of carbonate of iron in 6 parts of acetic acid for three days, and filtering. Dose, as a tonic and astringent, ℥v to ℥xx, in water.

Ferri Ærugo, F. Subcarbonas—f. et Ammoniæ murias, Ferrum ammoniatum—f. Ammoniochloridum, Ferrum ammoniatum.

Ferri et Alu'minæ Sulphas, Sulphate of Iron and Alumina, is made by treating bicarbonated solution of soft iron and carbonated solution of pure washed alumina, with sulphuric acid. It has been recommended as a valuable astringent. Dose, from five to ten grains.

Ferri Ammo'nio-citras, Ammoniæ ferro-citras, Ferrum ammoni'aco-cit'ricum, Ammonio-citrate of iron, Citrate of ammonia and iron. Prepared by adding ammonia to citrate of iron, so as to neutralize the excess of acid. Dose, gr. v. to gr. viij. A Potassio-Citrate and a Sodio-Citrate of Iron have also been introduced; and a Citrate of the Magnetic Oxide of Iron prepared by combining the magnetic oxide with citric acid.

Ferri Ammonio-tartras, Ammonio-tartrate of Iron. This salt is best made by dissolving to saturation freshly precipitated hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of bitartrate of ammonia, and evaporating to dryness. It is very soluble. The dose is five grains or more in pill or solution.

Ferri Citras, Citrate of Iron. Two citrates of iron are prepared—the Sesquicitrate or Citrate of the Sesquioxide; and the Citrate of the Prot- oxide. The former is officinal in the Ph. U. S. They resemble, in their medical properties, the tartrate and the lactate of the metal.

Ferri Io'didum, F. Iodurc'tum, F. Hydri'odas, Iodide, Ioduret or Hydri'odate of Iron. (F.) Iodure de fer, (Iodin. ℥ij, Ferri rament. ℥j, Aq. destillat. Oiss.) Mix the iodine with a pint of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, stirring constantly. Heat the mixture gently until the liquid acquires a light greenish colour; then filter, and, after the liquid has passed, pour upon the filter half a pint of the distilled water, boiling hot. When this has passed, evaporate the filtered liquor, at a temperature not exceeding 212°, in an iron vessel, to dryness; keep the dry iodide in a closely stopped bottle. (Ph. U. S.)

Ferri Iodouretum, F. Iodidum.

Ferri Lactas, Lactate of Iron, Lactate of Protox'ide of Iron, (F.) Lactate de Fer. Prepared by digesting in a sand-bath, at a low temperature, diluted lactic acid with iron filings. It is employed in the same cases as the precipitated subcarbonate of iron, and especially in chlorosis. Twelve grains of the lactate may be given in the 24 hours, in the form of lozenges.

Ferri Limatu'ra Purifica'ta, Pu'rified Iron Filings:—purified by means of the magnet, for internal use. The filings are, also, called Ferri Scobs, F. Ramen'ta et Fila, Martis Limatu'ra, Spec'ulum In'dicum, Ferri in pul'verem resolu'tio, (F.) Limaille de Fer. They are considered to possess the general properties of iron:—the iron becoming oxidized.

Ferri et Magne'siæ Citras, Citrate of iron and magnc'sia, is prepared by dissolving hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of citric acid, saturated with carbonate of magnesia, and evaporating to dryness. It is soluble in water, and does not constipate. Dose from four grains to fifteen, in solution.

Ferri Phosphas, Phosphate of Iron, (Ferri Sulphat. ℥v, Sodæ Phosphat. ℥vi, Aquæ, cong. Dissolve the sulphate of iron and phosphate of soda, severally, in four pints of the water; then mix the solutions, and set the mixture by, that the powder may subside; lastly, having poured off the supernatant liquor, wash the phosphate of iron with water, and dry it with a gentle heat.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 5 to 10 grains as a chalybeate. Rarely used.

Ferri Pila, F. limatura—f. et Potassæ tartras, Ferrum tartarizatum—f. Potassio-citras, see Ferri ammonio-citras—f. Potassio-tartras, Ferrum tartarizatum.

Ferri Protocarbo'nas, Protocarbonate of Iron, (F.) Carbonate de Fer. The protocarbonate of iron, thrown down from a solution of the sulphate of iron by the carbonate of soda, readily attracts oxygen and becomes converted into the sesquioxide. To prevent this, it may be associated with honey and sugar, and the mixture be reduced by evaporation to a pilular consistence. The mass constitutes the Ferruginous Pills, Pilules ferrugineuses, of Vallet, Vallet's Pills. See Pilulæ Ferri Carbonatis. The Edinburgh Pharmacopœia contains the Ferri Car'bonas Saccharatum, Sac'charine Carbonate of Iron, prepared in this manner. It is the Ferrum Carbon'icum Saccharatum of Klauer.

The protocarbonate is given in the same diseases as the lactate of iron; ten or fifteen grains in the course of the twenty-four hours.

Ferri Protosulphas Viridis, F. Sulphas—f. Prussias, Prussian blue.

Ferri Pulvis, Fer réduit, F. réduit par l'hydrogène, Ferrum metal'licum, Powdered iron, prepared by passing a stream of hydrogen gas over the sesquioxide of iron, contained in an iron or porcelain tube heated to low redness. It is very liable to become oxidated, and must be kept in a dry, well-stopped bottle. It has been prescribed in anæmic, and especially in chlorotic cases. The ordinary dose is two grains three times a day, in pill made with sugar and gum. A formula for its preparation is given in the last edition of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1851).

Ferri et Qui'niæ Citras, Citrate of Iron and Qui'nia, formed by the union of four parts of citrate of iron and one part of citrate of quinia, has been prescribed in cases where a combination of these tonics is indicated.

Ferri Subcar'bonas, F. Car'bonas, Ferrum præcipita'tum, Chal'ybis Rubi'go præpara'ta, Ferri Rubigo. (The last two terms, as well as Ferru'go, are applied to the subcarbonate or rust, Æru'go Ferri, Cacaferri, formed by the action of moist air on metallic iron.) A protoxide of iron, oxidized by the decomposition of water; the carbonic acid being attracted from the air. Dose, gr. v to ℥ss and more.

Ferri Subcarbonas may be precipitated from sulphate of iron by carbonate of soda. The following is the formula of the Pharmacopœia of the United States:—Ferri sulph. ℥viij; sodæ carb. ℥ix; aquæ bullient. cong. Dissolve the sulphate of iron and carbonate of soda severally in four pints of the water, then mix the solutions, and, having stirred the mixture, set it by that the powder may subside: having poured off the liquor, wash the subcarbonate with hot water, wrap it in bibulous paper, and dry with a gentle heat. It is, also, called Ferri sesquiox'idum, Ox'idum ferri fuscum, Ox'idum ferri rubrum, Deuto-car'bonas Ferri fuscus, Crocus martis aperiens, Sesquioxide or peroxide of iron, (F.) Peroxide de fer, Safran de Mars apéritif.

Ferri Sulphas, Sal Martis, Vitriolum Martis, Vitriolum Ferri, Ferrum Vitriola'tum, Sulphas vel Protosulphas Ferri vir'idis, Calcadinum, Cal'cator, Cal'cotar, Chalcan'thum, Calcite'a, Atramen'tum suto'rium, Vit'riol, Vitriolum viridē, An'ima Hep'atis, Sulphate of Iron, Green Vitriol, Copperas, (F.) Sulfate de fer. The Pharmacopœia of the United States directs it to be made by the action of sulphuric acid ℥xviij, on iron wire, cut in pieces, ℥xij—water, a gallon—evaporating, crystallizing, and drying the crystals on bibulous paper. This salt is inodorous, and of a strong styptic taste. The crystals are light green, transparent, rhomboidal; and soluble in two parts of water. It is tonic and anthelmintic. Dose, gr. j. to vj and more.

Ferri Sulphas Calcinatum, Colcothar.

Ferri Sulphure'tum, Sul'phuret of Iron, Iron pyri'tes, (F.) Sulfure de fer; may be made by heating one part of sublimed sulphur, over three parts of iron filings in a crucible until the mass begins to glow. It is employed as a ready means for obtaining hydrosulphuric acid gas by the addition of sulphuric or chlorohydric acid.

Ferri Tannas, Ferrum tan'nicum, Tannate of Iron, (F.) Tannate de fer. This salt is usually obtained by adding a solution of a salt of sesquioxide of iron, as the persulphate, to a decoction of nut-galls. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, and has been extolled especially in chlorosis.

Ferri Tartarum, Ferrum tartarizatum — f. Tritoxydum, Colcothar.

Ferri Valeria'nas, Ferrum Valeria'nicum, Valer'ianate of Iron, (Fr.) Valérianate de fer. Formed by the action of valerianic acid on oxide of iron. It is a dark brick-red powder, insoluble in water, and has been given in hysteria complicating chlorosis. Dose, from two to four grains.

FERRICUS HYDRAS, Ferrum oxydum hydratum.

FERRUGINEUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGINOUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGO, Ferri subcarbonas, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum.

FERRUM, Mars, Side'ros, Metal'lum hæmatoiëët'icum, Iron, (F.) Fer. A metal of a bluish-gray colour; fibrous texture; brilliant and fine-grained fracture. Specific gravity 7.600 to 7.800; hard, ductile, malleable, and magnetic. The medicinal virtues of iron are tonic; producing fetid eructations, when it takes effect, owing to its meeting with acid in the stomach, which oxidizes it, and causes the evolution of hydrogen gas. When given in the metallic state, the filings are chiefly used; but the oxides and salts are most commonly employed.

Ferrum Ammoniacale, F. ammoniatum — f. Ammoniaco-citricum, Ferri ammonio-citras.

Ferrum Ammonia'tum, Mu'rias Ammo'niæ et Ferri, Ferri ammo'nio-chlo'ridum, Flores martia'les, Flores salis ammoni'aci martia'les, Ens martis, Ens Ven'eris Boy'lei, Sal martis muriat'icum sublima'tum, Sal ammoni'acum martia'lē, Ammo'nium muriat'icum martia'tym seu martia'lē, Aroph Paracel'si, Calen'dulæ minera'les, Ferrum ammoniaca'lē, Ammo'niated Iron, Ammo'nio-chloride of Iron, (F.) Muriate d'ammoniaque et de fer. A mixture of the hydro-chlorates of ammonia and iron. (?) (Ferri Subcarb. ℥iij; acid muriat. f ℥x; ammon. muriat. ℔ijss; aq. destillat. Oiv. Mix the subcarbonate with the acid in a glass vessel and digest for two hours; then add the muriate, previously dissolved in distilled water, and having filtered the liquor, evaporate to dryness. Rub to powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. iij. to gr. xv.

Ferrum Borussicum, Prussian blue — f. Carbonicum Saccharatum, Ferri protocarbonas — f. Cyanogenatum, Prussian blue — f. Hæmatites, Hæmatites—f. Magnes attractorium, Magnet—f. Metallicum, Ferri pulvis.

Ferrum Oxyda'tum Hydra'tum, Ferri Oxidum Hydra'tum (Ph. U. S.), Ferru'go, Hydras Fer'ricus, Hydro-oxide of Iron, Hydrated Oxide of Iron, Hydrated peroxide of Iron, Hydrated Tritoxide of Iron. It may be prepared by taking a solution of sulphate of iron, increasing its dose of oxygen by heating it with nitric acid, and precipitating the oxide by adding pure ammonia in excess, washing the precipitate, and keeping it moist.

The following is the formula adopted by the Pharmacopœia of the United States: Ferri Sulph. ℥iv; acid. sulphuric. f ℥iiiss; acid. nitric. f ℥vi, vel q. s., Liq. ammoniæ q. s., aquæ Oij. Dissolve the sulphate of iron in the water, and having added the sulphuric acid, boil the solution: then add the nitric acid in small portions, boiling the liquid for a minute or two after each addition, until the acid ceases to produce a dark colour. Filter the liquid, allow it to cool, and add the liquor ammoniæ in excess, stirring the mixture briskly; wash the precipitate with water, until the washings cease to yield a precipitate with chloride of barium, and keep it close in bottles with water sufficient to cover it.

It has been brought forward, of late, as an antidote to arsenic; and many cases of its efficacy have been published.

From 10 to 20 parts of the hydrated oxide would seem to be more than sufficient to convert 1 part of arsenious acid into the basic salt of iron.

Bitart.* ℥vijss, Aquæ destillat. cong. iss. Mix the subcarbonate of iron and the muriatic acid, and digest for two hours; pour the solution into a gallon of the distilled water; set aside for an hour, and pour off the supernatant liquor. To this add the liquor potassæ; wash the precipitate formed frequently with water, and, while yet moist, mix it with the bitartrate of potassa and half a gallon of the distilled water. Keep the mixture at the temperature of 140° for 30 hours, frequently stirring; filter the solution, and evaporate by means of a water bath, at the same temperature, to dryness.—(Ph. U. S.) It is one of the mildest of the salts of iron, and not unpalatable. Dose, gr. x. to ℥ss.

The Tinctu'ra Martis Aperitï'va, Tincture of Ludwig; Al'cohol cum Sulpha'tē Ferri tartarisa'tus; Tinctura Martis Glauberi is, essentially, a solution of this salt. It is also called Eau de Boule, and is used in contusions.

Helvetius's Styptic was composed of the filings of iron and tartar, mixed to a proper consistence with French brandy. It was called in England Eaton's Styptic; but this is now formed of Sulphate of Iron.

FEVER, Febris, from feritas, 'wildness,' or from fervor, 'heat,' or from februo, 'I purify:' Pyr, Pyr'etos, πυρετος, (F.) Fièvre. One of the most frequent and dangerous affections to which the body is liable. A person has an attack of fever, when he is affected with rigors, followed by increased heat of skin, quick pulse, languor, and lassitude. Rigors, increased heat, and frequency of pulse have each been assumed as the essential character of fever. It is not characterized, however, by any one, but depends upon the coexistence of many symptoms. Fevers have been usually divided into idiopathic or essential, and into symptomatic. The idiopathic arise without any obvious local cause. The symptomatic are dependent upon local irritation. Idiopathic fevers may be divided into three classes: 1. Those attended with distinct paroxysms:—intermittents. 2. Remittent and continued fevers: and, 3. Fevers complicated with eruptions or the exanthematous. These divisions admit of great variety, owing to climate, season, soil, age, &c. All ages and climates are liable to fever; and its exciting causes are very numerous. These causes may be common; as irritations in the intestines; external injuries, stimulants, &c.; or they may be specific; as miasmata, contagion, &c. The greatest diversity has prevailed regarding the theory of fever. Its primary seat has been placed in the brain, mucous membrane of the stomach and intestines, skin, nerves, blood-vessels, liver, vena cava, pancreas, &c. It would seem, however, that although, in fever, the whole of the functions are morbidly impressed, the arguments in favour of the impression being first made on the nervous system and the system of nutrition are the strongest. The exciting cause of fever, whatever it may be, produces an irregular action in the system of nutrition, which is soon conveyed to the rest of the system, owing to the extensive sympathy which exists between every part of the body; and it is probable, that all those local inflammations and congestions are the consequence, rather than the cause, of this disordered condition of the system. The general character of fever is clearly shown by examination of the blood. When fever is devoid of inflammatory complication, the quantity of fibrin is in no case augmented. It frequently remains in the healthy proportion, and at times diminishes to an extent not met with in any other acute disease. The alteration of the blood in fevers, which consists generally in a diminution of the fibrinous element, is the reverse of what occurs in inflammation.

Many phenomena of fever are influenced by that periodicity, which we notice in the execution of several of the functions of the body. The types of intermittents are strong evidences of such an influence.

In the treatment of fever, it is important, 1. To bear in mind its tendency, particularly in the case of the exanthemata, to run a definite course, and terminate in restoration to health. 2. The disposition to local determination or hyperæmiæ:—the most frequent cause of the fatal termination of fever: a circumstance requiring the vigilant attention of the physician. 3. That the symptoms must be attentively studied, in order to deduce, as far as possible from them, the indications of cure. Lastly, attention must be paid to the prevalent epidemic. There are particular seasons in which fevers are very malignant; and others in which they are as mild; circumstances which necessarily have an effect upon the treatment.

FEVER AND AGUE, Intermittent Fever—f. Acclimating, F. strangers'.

FEVER, ADE'NO-MENINGE'AL, Febris adeʹnomeningea, Febris mesenterʹica (BAGLIVI,) Morbus mucoʹsus, Febris mucoʹsa; Mucous fever, Gastroduodenopʹyra, Pituʹitous Fever, Catarʹrhal Fever, Phlegmapʹyra, Phlegmopʹyra, Phlegmatopʹyra, Gastro-Bronchiʹtis. Fever, accompanied with considerable mucous secretion; especially from the digestive tube.

FEVER, ADYNAM'IC, Febris adynamʹica, Asthenicopʹyra, Asthenicopyʹretus, Asthenopʹyra, Asthenopyrʹctus. Fever attended with great prostration of the vital powers—as Typhoid and Typhus fever.

FEVER, AFRICAN, Febris Africaʹna. The malignant bilious remittent fever, which prevails on the Western Coast of Africa.

FEVER, ALGID, see Algidus.

FEVER, ANOM'ALOUS, Febris anomʹala, F. errat'ica, F. irregulaʹris, F. vaga. A fever, whose progress and type are irregular.

FEVER, APHON'IC, Febris aphoʹnica. A variety of intermittent, in which the voice is lost during the paroxysm.

FEVER, APOPLEC'TIC, Febris apoplecʹtica, Comʹatose Fever, Febris comatoʹdes, F. Lethargʹica, F. soporoʹsa. An intermittent or continued fever, attended with apoplectic symptoms.

FEVER, ARTICULAR ERUPTIVE, Dengue—f. Articular rheumatic, Dengue.

FEVER, ARTIFIC''IAL, Febris artificiaʹlis, Febris artē promoʹta. Fever produced designedly by the internal or external use of stimulants.

FEVER, ASTHEN'IC, Febris asthenʹica. Fever accompanied with debility. It may include every variety of fever under certain circumstances, but is generally appropriated to typhus.

FEVER, ASTHMAT'IE, Febris asthmatʹica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of asthma.

FEVER, ATAXO-ADYNAM'IC; Febris ataxʹo-adynamʹica. Fever characterized by symptoms of ataxia and adynamia.

Fever, Cardit'ic. Intermittent fever, accompanied with pain at the heart.

Fever, Catarrhal, F. adeno-meningeal.

Fever, Cephalal'gic, Febris cephalal'gica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with intense pain of the head. Also, intermittent cephalalgia.

Fever, Cephal'ic, Febris cephal'ica. A febrile affection of children—intermediate between the acute form of active cerebral congestion and the chronic form — which is attended by fever, pain in the head, disorder, or more generally constipation of the bowels, and a train of phenomena often supposed to be premonitory of an attack of hydrocephalus.—Mauthner.

Fever, Cer'ebral, Brain fever. Fever, generally of an ataxic character, in which the brain is considerably affected.

Fever, Childbed, Fever, puerperal, Puerperal Fever — f. Childbed, Low, see Peritonitis.

Fever, Chol'eric, Febris choler'ica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of cholera morbus.

Fever, Choleric, of Infants, Cholera infantum.

Fever, Chronic, Febris chron'ica. Some authors apply this name to protracted fevers; others to hectic fever.

Fever, Colliq'uative, Febris tab'ida, Febris colliquati'va. Fever, characterized by rapid emaciation, copious evacuations, and rapid prostration of strength.

Fever, Comatose, F. apoplectic.

Fever, Conges'tive, Febris congesti'va. Fever accompanied by obscure symptoms; or by great oppression and depression; in which it is difficult — and often impossible — to induce reaction. Congestive fevers occur in various parts of this country, especially in the fall; and they are very common in India. The term congestive fever is often used in some parts of the south of the United States very indefinitely — to include winter typhus, and typhoid fevers, typhoid pneumonia, as well as intermittents and autumnal remittents.—Dickson.

Fever, Convul'sive, Febris convulsi'va. A pernicious intermittent or remittent, accompanied by convulsions.

Fever, Delir'ious, Febris cum delir'io, (F.) Fièvre délirante. A pernicious intermittent, characterized by delirium in the paroxysms.

Fever, Dep'uratory, Febris depurato'ria. A fever, to which was attributed the property of purifying the blood; or which indicated, that such a supposed depuration had occurred.

Fever, Diaphoret'ic, Febris diaphoret'ica, Febris sudato'ria. A pernicious intermittent, with excessive sweating during the fit.

Fever, Diary, Ephemera.

Fever, Diges'tive. The chilliness, followed by increased heat and quickness of pulse, which frequently accompanies digestion.

Fever, Double, (F.) Fièvre double ou doublée. An intermittent, which has two paroxysms in a given time, instead of one.

Fever, Double-Quartan. A fever, whose paroxysms occur two days in succession, and fail the third day; the first paroxysm resembling the 4th; and the second the 5th.

Fever, Double-Quotidian. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return twice every day at corresponding hours.

Fever, Double-Tertian. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return every day; the first corresponding with the 3d, the second with the 4th, and so on.

Fever, Duodec'imane, Febris duodecim'ana. A supposititious intermittent, whose paroxysms recur on the 12th day, or every 11 days.

Fever, Dynamic, Synocha — f. Endemial, Remittent F. — f. Endemic, Remittent F. — f. Endemical, Remittent F.—f. Enteric, see Typhus—f. Ephemeral, Ephemera.

Fever, Epilep'tic, Febris epilep'tica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with attacks of epilepsy.

Fever, Erot'ic, Febris erot'ica, (F.) Fièvre d'amour. A chronic fever, occasioned by unpropitious love.

Fever, Errat'ic, see Erratic — f. Eruptive, Exanthematica — f. Eruptive, articular, Dengue —f. Exacerbating, Remittent Fever.

Fever, Fainting, of Persia. A singular and fatal epidemic, presenting some points of analogy with cholera, which prevailed at Teheran in the autumn of 1842.

Fever, Gan'grenous, Febris gangræno'des. Fever, accompanied by gangrene of various parts, and especially of the limbs and genitals. Sénac describes an intermittent of this kind.

Fever, Gastral'gic. An intermittent accompanied with acute burning lacerating pain at the stomach.

Fever, Gastric, Febris gas'trica, F. gas'trica bilio'sa, Gastrocholo'sis, Hepatogastrocholo'sis, Stomach'ic fever, Syn'ochus Bilio'sa. A name, given by some to bilious fever, which has appeared to them to be dependent on an affection of the stomach. Also, called Menin'go-gastric fever, Febris meningo-gas'trica, Meningo-gastri'tis, Harvest fever, (F.) Fièvre de la Moisson, F. Méningo-gastrique.

Fever, Gastro-Adynam'ic, Febris gastro-adynam'ica. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are joined with those of adynamic fever.

Fever, Gastro-Angioten'ic. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious are united with those of inflammatory fever.

Fever, Gastro-Atax'ic. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are united with those of ataxic fever.

Fever, Gibraltar, Fever, yellow—f. Harvest, F. Gastric — f. Hæmagastric, F. yellow.

Fever, Hæmop'toic, Febris Hæmopto'ica. A variety of masked intermittent, in which periodical hæmoptysis is the chief symptom.

Fever, Hay, Catarr'hus æsti'vus, Summer Catarrh, Hay Asthma, Rose Catarrh, Summer Bronchi'tis. A catarrh to which certain persons are subject in summer, and which has been ascribed in England to the effluvium of hay, but this is not the probable cause. It is a catarrh with sneezing, headach, weeping, snuffling and cough, with, at times, fever and general discomfort. It is not uncommon in this country. It disappears spontaneously, — to recur on subsequent years about the same period.

Fever, Hebdom'adal. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms return weekly, and on the same day.

Fever, Hectic, see Consumption, and Hectic Fever.

Fever, Hepat'ic or Hepatal'gic. A pernicious intermittent, with violent pain in the right hypochondrium.

Fever, Hill. A modification of remittent, occurring in the hilly districts of India.

Fever, Hospital, Typhus gravior.

Fever, Hu'moral, Febris humoral'is. Fever, in which an alteration or deterioration of the humours is suspected.

Fever, Hun'gary, Febris Hungar'ica seu Pannon'ica seu Morbus Ungar'icus, Céphalon'osus, Vermis cer'ebri, (F.) Fièvre Hongroise ou de Hongrie. An epidemic typhus, common amongst the soldiers in barracks, in Hungary.

Fever, Hydrophob'ic, Febris hydrophob'ica. Pernicious intermittent with dread of liquids.

Fever, Hyster'ic, Febris hyster'ica. Hysteria, accompanied by fever. Hysteria, occurring with each paroxysm of intermittent.

Fever, Icter'ic, Febris icter'ica. Fever, accompanied by jaundice. Some intermittents exhibit this complication at each paroxysm.

Fever, In'fantile Remit'tent, Febris infan'tum remit'tens, F. vermino'sa, (of many), Spurious worm fever, Remittent fever of children, F. muco'sa vermino'sa, Hec'tica infan'tilis, Febris lenta. A fever occurring in childhood, which often assumes many of the characters of hydrocephalus. It appears generally to be dependent upon a morbid condition of the stomach and bowels.

Fever, Inflammatory, Synocha.

Fever, Insid'ious. Fever, which, at first, seems devoid of danger, but subsequently becomes of a more or less malignant character.

Fever, Intermittent, see Intermittent fever —f. Jail, Typhus gravior —f. Jungle, see Jungle fever —f. Lenticular, Miliary fever—f. Irritative, Irritation, morbid.

Fever, Lo'chial, Febris lochia'lis. That acceleration of the circulation which sometimes occurs during the discharge of the lochia.

Fever, Lung, Catarrh, Pneumonia.

Fever, Malig'nant, Febris malig'na. Fever which makes its approaches insidiously, and subsequently becomes formidable. Any fever which exhibits a very dangerous aspect. Typhus gravior.

Fever, Malig'nant Pestilential, Fever, yellow —f. Marsh, Elodes (febris.)

Fever, Masked, Febris larva'ta, (F.) Fièvre larvée, Dead Ague, Dumb Ague. Anomalous intermittent, the paroxysms of which have not the regular stages.

Fever, Meningo-gastric, Fever gastric.

Fever, Mesenter'ic, Febris mesenter'ica. A name given, by Baglivi, to a species of fever which appears to have belonged either to the mucous or bilious.

Fever, Milk, Febris lac'tea, (F.) Fièvre de lait ou laiteuse, F. lactée; Galactop'yra, Galactopyr'etus. The fever, which precedes or accompanies the secretion of milk in women recently delivered. It comes on generally about the third day after delivery, and is characterized by quick pulse; increased heat; redness of face; diminution or temporary suspension of the lochial discharge; tumefaction and tension of the breasts. It commonly terminates in twenty-four hours, and often with profuse perspiration. It requires the use of antiphlogistics, with dry diet.

Fever, Mixed, Synochus—f. Mucous, F. adeno-meningeal.

Fever Nephrit'ic, Febris nephrit'ica. Intermittent fever, accompanied with nephritic pain during the paroxysm.

Fever, Nervous, Febris nervo'sa seu neuro'des, Febris lenta nervo'sa, Neurop'yra, Neuropyr'etus. A variety of Typhus; the Typhus mitior of Cullen. By many, however, it is esteemed a distinct disease. See Typhoid fever.

Fever, Nervous, with Exanthematous Eruption, Typhus.

Fever, Niger. A malignant fever, of the bilious remittent kind, which proved fatal to many in the expeditions sent out by the British government to explore the Niger, in the years 1841-2, and previously Fever, Non'ane, Febris nona'na. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms recur every ninth day, or every eight days.

Fever, Oc'tane, Febris octa'na. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every eighth day.

Fever, Paludal, Intermittent —f. Paroxysmal, Remittent fever —f. Periodic, Intermittent.

Fever, Period'ical, Febris period'ica. An intermittent or remittent fever.

Fever Pernic''ious, Febris pernicio'sa. Intermittent fever, when attended with great danger, and which destroys the majority of those affected by it in the first four or five paroxysms; sometimes in the very first.

Fever, Pestilen'tial, Febris pestilentia'lis. The Plague. Also a severe case of typhus. The yellow fever and sweating sickness have, likewise, been thus designated.

Fever, Pestilential, of Cattle, Murr —f. Pituitous, F. adeno-meningeal.

Fever, Pleurit'ic. An intermittent or remittent, accompanied with inflammation of the pleura.

Fever, Pneumon'ic, Febris pneumon'ica. An intermittent, accompanied with inflammation of the lungs. Also, pneumonia.

Fever Poison, see Poison.

Fever, Pseudo. Irritation, morbid.

Fever, Puer'peral, Febris puerpera'lis, Childbed fever, (F.) Fièvre puerpérale. This name has been given to several acute diseases, supervening on delivery. It means, generally, a malignant variety of peritonitis, which runs its course very rapidly, and passes into a typhoid condition, unless met, at the very onset, by the most active depleting measures. By the generality of practitioners, it is esteemed to be eminently contagious; some, however, deny that it is so. See Peritonitis, and Puerperal fever.

Fever, Puerperal Adynamic or Malignant, see Peritonitis.

Fever, Puking, Milk sickness.

Fever, Pu'rulent, Febris purulen'ta. Fever, which accompanies suppuration.

Fever, Putrid, Typhus gravior.

Fever, Quintan, Febris quinta'na. A fever, whose paroxysms return every fifth day. It is seen rarely, or never.

Fever, Quotidian, see Quotidian —f. Red Tongue, see Typhus.

Fever, Reg'ular, Febris regula'ris seu exquisi'ta. An intermittent whose paroxysms follow a determinate type. It is opposed to atypic. Sometimes opposed to anomalous.

Fever, Remittent, see Remittent Fever —f. Remittent, infantile, see Fever, infantile remittent —f. Remittent of children, F. infantile remittent —f. Rheumatic, Rheumatism, acute —f. Root, Triosteum perfoliatum.

Fever, Scorbu'tic, Febris scorbu'tica. The febrile movement, which sometimes accompanies scorbutus or scurvy.

Fever, Seasoning, F., strangers'.

Fever, Sec'ondary. A febrile condition, which recurs in certain affections after having ceased; such as the secondary fever, which comes on at the time of the maturation of the variolous pustules, or as the eruption of scarlatina, &c., disappears.

Fever, Septan, Febris septa'na. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every six days, and consequently on the seventh.

Fever, Sextan, Febris sexta'na. A fever, which recurs every five days, and consequently on the sixth.

Fever, Ship, see Typhus.

Fever, Simple, Febris Simplex. Simple fever is that which has no predominant character—bilious, inflammatory, or nervous; and which is unaccompanied by any local determination, hyperæmia, or complication. It may be continued, remittent, or intermittent.

Fever, Simple Continued. This is the most favourable form of continued fever, and has a tendency to wear itself out, provided only the lædentia be avoided. The prognosis is consequently favourable, and the treatment simple; consisting in perfect repose of body and mind, abstinence, and relieving the thirst by cold drinks.

Fever, Singul'tous, Febris singulto'sa seu lygmo'des seu lyngo'des. Fever, accompanied with singultus or hiccough.

Fever, Spotted, Typhus gravior.

Fever, Ster'coral, Febris stercora'lis. Fever, produced by an accumulation of fæces in the intestines.

Fever, Stomachic, Gastric Fever.

Fever, Strangers', Accli'mating or Seasoning fever. Yellow, or remittent fever, which is endemic in certain places, and to which strangers are especially liable.

Fever, Subcontinual, Remittent Fever.

Fever, Subintrant, Febris subin'trans. An intermittent, in which one paroxysm is scarcely finished before the other begins.

Fever, Sweating, Sudor Anglicus.

Fever, Syn'copal, Febris syncopa'lis, F. minu'ta, (F.) Fièvre syncopale. A variety of pernicious intermittent, in which there is, in every paroxysm, one or more faintings.

Fever, Synochoid, Synochus.

Fever, Syphilit'ic, Febris syphilit'ica. Fever, accompanying syphilis, or supposed to be owing to a syphilitic taint.

Fever, Ter'tian, Febris tertia'na. A fever, whose paroxysm returns on the third day, and consequently every two days.

Fever, Trag''ic, Febris Trag''ica. A low fever, in which the patient declaims like an actor during the delirium.

Fever, Traumat'ic, Febris traumat'ica. The fever, which supervenes on wounds or great surgical operations.

Fever, Typhoid, see Typhus — f. Typhoid, of India, Cholera—f. Typhous, Typhus.

Fever, Ver'minous, Febris vermino'sa, Helminthop'yra, Worm fever. Fever, produced by the presence of worms in the digestive tube, or accompanied by their expulsion.

Fever, Vernal, Febris verna'lis. An intermittent or other fever occurring in the spring. Vernal intermittents were formerly considered salubrious.

"An ague in the spring
Is physic for a king."

Fever, Vesicular, Pemphigus.

Fever, Wal'cheren, Gall-sickness. The remittents and intermittents to which the British troops were exposed, who were attached to the expedition to Walcheren, in 1809.

Fever, Water Brain, Hydrocephalus internus — f. Winter, see Tongue, black — f. Worm, Verminous F.—f. Worm, spurious, Fever, infantile remittent.

Fever, Yellow, Febris flava, F. seu Pestis America'na, Cholo'sis America'na, Ochrotyphus, Loimocholo'sis, F. flava Americano'rum, Pestilen'tia hæmagas'trica, Pestis occidenta'lis seu intertrop'ica, Vom'itus niger, Epan'etus malignus flavus, Remitt'ens ictero'des, Tritœoph'ya America'na, Typhus ictero'des, F. trop'icus, F. contin'ua pu'trida ictero'des Caroliniensis, F. Elo'des ictero'des, Febris malig'na bilio'sa Amer'icæ, Ochvop'yra, Syn'ochus ictero'des, Fièvre matelote, Febris malig'na flava In'diæ Occidenta'lis, Ende'mial Causus of the West Indies, Causus trop'icus endem'icus, Bilious remitting yellow fever, Malignant pestilential fever, Fièvre jaune d'Amérique, Fièvre gastro-adynamique, Typhus miasmatique ataxique putride jaune, T. jaune, Vomito prieto, Vomito negro, Mal de Siam, Fièvre de la Barbade, F. de Siam, F. Ictérique, F. Gastro-hépatique, Hæmagas'tric Fever or Pes'tilence, Black vomit, Febris tox'ica, Febris trop'ica, Typhus d'Amérique, Bulam Fever, Gibraltar Fever, Barcelona Fever. A very acute and dangerous febrile affection; so called, because complicated, in its second stage, with jaundice, and accompanied by vomiting of black matter. Sauvages, Cullen, and others regard it as a variety of typhus; and Pinel, as a species of gastro-adynamic, or bilious putrid fever. It occurs, endemically, only within the tropics; but it has been met with epidemically in the temperate regions. Broussais regards the disease as gastro-enteritis, exasperated by atmospheric heat; so that it runs through its stages with much greater rapidity than the gastro-enteritis of our climates. The yellow colour of the skin, according to him, is owing to the inflammation of the small intestine,—and especially of the duodenum, — augmenting the secretion of the liver, and at the same time preventing its discharge into the duodenum. The pathology of this affection, as well as its origin, is still unsettled. The treatment must generally be of the most active nature at the onset; consisting in bleeding largely, and exhibiting mercury, so as to excite a new action, if possible; — the other symptoms being combated according to general principles. It must vary, however, according to the epidemic.

FEVERBUSH, Laurus benzoin, Prinos.

FEVER DROPS, Warburg's, see Bebeeru.

FEVERET, Febricula.

FEVERFEW, Matricaria.

Fe'verish, Fe'verous, Feb'riens, Febrico'sus, (F.) Fiévreux, from febris, 'fever.' That which causes fever or is febrifa'cient or febrif'ic; as feverish food, feverish diathesis, &c. Also, the state of one labouring under fever, Feversick.

Fe'verishness, Febricita'tio, Febriculos'ity. The state of having fever. A slight febrile disorder.

FEVEROUS, Feverish.

FEVERROOT, Pterospora andromedea.

FEVERSICK, see Feverish.

FEVERTREE, Pinckneya pubens.

FEVERWOOD, Laurus benzoin.

FEVERWORT, Eupatorium perfoliatum, Triosteum.

FIBER, Castor fiber.

FIBRA, Fibre — f. Aurea, Coptis — f. Nervea, Nerve-fibre—f. Sanguinis, Fibrin.

FIBRÆ ARCIFORMES, see Arciform.

Fibre, Fibra, Is, Ctedon, Filum. An organic filament, of a solid consistence, and more or less extensible, which enters into the composition of every animal and vegetable texture. The simple or elementary fibre of the ancients, from a particular assemblage and arrangement of which every texture of the body was conceived to be constituted, seems entirely ideal. The moderns usually admit, with Haller and Blumenbach, three elementary fibres or tissues. 1. The cellular or laminated, formed chiefly of thin plates, of a whitish colour and extensible, which seems to consist of concrete gelatin. 2. The nervous, pulpy, or medullary, formed of a soft substance, contained in a cellular sheath, and consisting of albumen united to a fatty matter. 3. The muscular, composed of round filaments, of a grayish or reddish colour, and formed of fibrin. Chaussier has added to these the albugineous fibre, but it seems to differ from the cellular fibre only in greater condensation of the molecules. See Fibrous.

A very small or ultimate fibre is called a Fibril, Fibril'la.

Fibre, Albugineous, see Albuginea.

FIBRES, CONVERG''ING. Nervous fibres, whose office it is to associate different portions of the nervous centres with each other. They form the Commissures.

Fibres, Diverg''ing. The fibres composing the columns of the medulla oblongata, which separate in their progress to the periphery of the cerebrum and cerebellum.—Gall and Spurzheim.

Fibres, Remak. Fibres described by Remak as peculiar to the sympathetic nerve, but which Valentin considers to be neurilemma, and to consist of fibro-cellular bundles.

FIBRIL, see Fibre.

FIBRILLA, Fibril — f. Muscularis, Muscular fibre.

FI'BRIN or Fib'rin, Fibrine, Fibri'na, Fibri'nē, Fibra san'guinis, Mate'ria fibro'sa, Lympha plas'tica. An immediate animal principle —solid, white, and inodorous; insipid; heavier than water; without action on the vegetable blues: elastic, when moist; hard and brittle when dry. It enters into the composition of the chyle and the blood, and forms the chief part of the muscles of red-blooded animals. In certain diseased actions, Fibrin or Coagulable lymph, gluten, is separated from the blood, and is found in considerable quantity on the surfaces of membranes, and in the cavities of the body. See Liquor Sanguinis.

Fibrin is likewise a proximate principle of vegetables, and differs but little in chemical composition from animal fibrin; nor does it differ much from albumen and casein. It is, however, more organizable than either. Albumen appears to be converted into fibrin, when it becomes eminently adapted for the formation of living tissue.

Fibrin is very nutritious.

FIBRINA'TION, Fibrina'tio. The act of adding fibrin to the blood. The opposite to defibrination.

FIB'RINOUS, Fibrino'sus. That which is composed of fibrin, or has the appearance of fibrin.

FIBRO-CAR'TILAGE, Fibro-cartila'go. An organic tissue, partaking of the nature of the fibrous tissue, and of that of cartilage. It is dense, resisting, elastic, firm, supple, and flexible. Fibro-cartilages are distinguished into,—1. Membraniform, or those which serve as moulds to certain parts, as the alæ nasi and eyelids. 2. Vaginiform, or those which form sheaths for the sliding of tendons. 3. Interarticular, those which are met with in the moveable articulations. 4. Uniting, (F.) Fibro-cartilages d'union, which form a junction between two bones, as the symphysis pubis. Fibro-cartilages are sometimes formed adventitiously, as the result of a morbid process in different organs.

Fibro-Cartilages, Tarsal, see Tarsus.

FIBROMA, Tumour, fibrous.

FIBRO-MUCOUS, Fibro-muco'sus. Possessing the nature of fibrous and of mucous membranes. A term applied to fibrous membranes, which are intimately united with other membranes of a mucous nature, as the pituitary membrane, the membrane of the urethra, &c.

FIBRO-SEROUS, Fibro-sero'sus. Possessing the nature of fibrous and serous membranes. Membranes, composed of a fibrous, and a serous sheet, intimately united: — as the Dura Mater, Pericardium, Tunica albuginea testis, &c.

FI'BROUS, Fibro'sus. Composed of fibres. Certain membranes, as the dura mater, periosteum, ligamentous capsules of the joints, &c., are fibrous. The fibrous system of Bichat includes the system of organs formed by the albugineous fibre of Chaussier. It comprises, particularly, the periosteum and perichondrium; the articular capsules and ligaments; the tendons; the dura mater, pericardium, tunica sclerotica, tunica albuginea testis, outer membrane of the spleen, &c. Under simple fibrous tissues, certain writers have classed the white and yellow fibrous tissues, and areolar tissue. Both the yellow and the white may be detected in the areolar tissue. The white is said to exist alone in ligaments, tendons, fibrous membranes, aponeuroses, &c. The yellow exists separately in the middle coat of the arteries, the chordæ vocales, ligamentum nuchæ of quadrupeds, &c. It differs from the white in possessing a high degree of elasticity.

Fibrous Growth, Tumour, fibrous — f. Matter of the Brain, see Cerebrum — f. Membranes, see Membranes, fibrous.

FIB'ULA, Cruris ra'dius, Canna minor, Os per'onē, Perone'um, Fac''ilē minus, Sura, Arun'do minor, Fist'ula Cruris, Tib'ia min'ima, Os tib'iæ minus, 'a clasp.' The splinter bone of the leg. (F.) Péroné. The long, small bone, situate at the outer part of the leg. The superior or tibial extremity of the fibula is rounded and forms the caput or head. It is articulated with the tibia. Its inferior or tarsal extremity is broader than the superior. It is articulated with the tibia and astragalus, and forms the malleolus externus or uter ankle by means of its coronoid process. The body of the bone has three faces, having more or less prominent edges. It is separated from the tibia by the interosseous space, and is developed by three points of ossification; one at the body, and one at each extremity. It prevents the foot from turning outwards.

FIBULAD, see Fibular Aspect.

FIBULAR, Peroneal.

Fibular Aspect. An aspect towards the side on which the fibula is situated.—Barclay. Fib'ulad is used by the same writer adverbially, to signify 'towards the fibular aspect.'

FIBULATIO, Infibulatio.

FIC, Ficus.

FICAIRE, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICARIA, Scrophularia aquatica—f. Communis, Ranunculus ficaria — f. Ranunculoides, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Verna, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICATIO, Ficus.

FICOSA EMINENTIA, Ficus.

FICUS, Sycē, Sy'cea, Sycum, Syco'sis, Syco'ma, Fica'tio, Fico'sus Tumor, Fico'sa eminen'tia, Maris'ca, (F.) Fic. A fleshy excrescence, often soft and reddish, sometimes hard and scirrhous, hanging by a peduncle, or formed like a fig; occurring on the eyelids, chin, tongue, anus, or organs of generation. The fici seated on the last-mentioned parts are generally of a syphilitic character.

Ficus, F. Carica.

Ficus Car'ica, F. commu'nis. The systematic name of the fig tree; (F.) Figuier. Carica, Ficus, Ficus vulga'ris, Ficus commu'nis, Sycē, συκη, (F.) Figue: the fig — Ficus, (Ph. U. S.) — is a pleasant fruit when ripe; as well as when dried in the state in which it is found in the shops. It is used, at times, in place of a cataplasm; especially in gum-boils.

Ficus Communis, F. Carica — f. Indiæ grana, Coccus cacti — f. Indica, Musa paradisiaca, see Caoutchouc and Lacca—f. Religiosa, see Lacca.

FIDERIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, in the Canton of the Grisons, are strong, acidulous, and alkaline and possess all the virtues of the class.

FIDGETS. Of doubtful etymology. Dysphor'ia simplex, D. nervo'sa, Erethis'mus simplex, Tituba'tio, (F.) Frétillement. General restlessness and troublesome uneasiness of the nerves and muscles; with increased sensibility, and inability of fixing the attention, accompanied with a perpetual desire of changing the position. See Agacement des Nerfs.

FIDICINALES, Lumbricales manus.

FIEL, Bile.

FIGURA VENOSA, Circulus venosus.

FIGURATIO, Imagination.

FIGURE, Countenance.

FIGURÉ, (F.) An epithet for a compressive bandage, applied over the head after bleeding from the frontal vein. It has also been called bandage royal.

FIGWORT, Scrophularia nodosa — f. Water, greater, Scrophularia aquatica.

FILACEOUS, Filamentous.

FILA NERVEA, Nerve-fibres.

FIL'AMENT, Filum, Filamen'tum, from filum, 'a thread.' This word is used synonymously with fibril; thus, we say, a nervous or cellular filament or fibril. Also, the glairy, thread-like substance, which forms in the urine in some diseases, and which depends on a particular secretion from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages.

FILAMEN'TOUS, Filamento'sus. Filaceous; threadlike; filiform. Containing threadlike substances, as the tunica filamentosa or decidua: — Filamentous urine; urine containing threadlike substances.

FILAMENTUM, Frænum.

FILARIA GUINEENSIS, Dracunculus — f. Hominis bronchialis, see Worms — f. Medinensis, Dracunculus — f. Oculi, see Worms.

FILICULA, Polypodium filix mas — f. Dulcis, Polypodium vulgare.

FIL'IFORM, Filiform'is, from filum, 'a thread,' and forma, 'form;' having the shape of a thread; as the filiform papillæ of the tongue. See Papillæ.

FILING, Limatio.

FILIPENDULA, Spiræa filipendula.

FILIUS ANTE PATREM, Tussilago.

FILIX FŒMINEA, Pteris aquilina — f. Florida, Osmunda regalis — f. Mas, Polypodium filix mas — f. Non ramosa dentata, Polypodium filix mas — Nymphæa, Pteris aquilina — f. Pinnata, Polypodium filix mas — f. Veneris, Adiantum pedatum.

FILLE, Girl.

FILLET, Fascia, Laqueus.

FILTRA'TION, Filtra'tio, Percola'tio, E'thisis, Ethis'mus. A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in passing a fluid through a filter or strainer, for the purpose of clarifying it. In ancient physiology, it meant the action by which the different humours of the body are separated from the mass of the blood.

FILTRUM. A filter. Any porous material; such as sand, some kinds of freestone, powdered charcoal, pounded glass, flannel, unsized paper, &c., through which a fluid is passed for the purpose of separating it from the matters suspended in it.

FILUM, Filament — f. Musculare, Muscular fibre — f. Tæniaforme, Tæniola.

FILUM TERMINA'LE. A slender ligament, prolonged from the nervous sheath, formed by the spinal pia mater, which descends through the centre of the cauda equina, and is attached to the dura mater, lining the canal of the coccyx.

FIM'BRIA, Parar'ma. A band; a fringe; as the fimbria or fimbriated extremity of the Fallopian tube.

FIMBRIÆ CARNOSÆ COLI, Epiploic appendages — f. Tubarum Fallopii, see Tube, Fallopian.

FIMUS, Bor'borus, Onthus, Stercus. Dung: excrement.

FIMUS seu STERCUS AN'SERIS, Goose-dung, was applied as a poultice to the feet in malignant fever. See Chenocoprus.

FIMUS EQUI'NUS, Stercus equi non castra'ti, Stone horse-dung, was once thought anti-pleuritic.

FIMUS VACCÆ, Cow-dung, was employed as a cataplasm, especially in gout.

FINCKLE, Anethum.

FINGER, Digitus — f. Ring, Annular finger — f. Stall, Digitale.

FINIS ASPERÆ ARTERIÆ, Larynx

FIOLE, Phiala.

FIR, MOSS, UPRIGHT, Lycopodium selago —f. Scotch, Pinus sylvestris — f. Spruce, Norway, Pinus abies — f. Tree, silver, European, Pinus picea—f. Yew-leaved, Pinus abies.

FIREDAMP, Hydrogen, carburetted — f. Persian, Anthracion—f. St. Anthony's, Erysipelas—f. Weed, Erechthites hieracifolia, Senecio.

FIRING, Cauterization.

FISHSKIN, Ichthyosis.

FISH-TONGUE. An instrument — so called from its shape—used by some dentists for the removal of the dentes sapientiæ.

FISSICULA'TIO, from fissiculare, 'to cut off,' 'open,' 'make incisions.' An old word for an opening made with a scalpel.

FISSIPARITÉ, see Generation.

FISSIPAROUS, see Generation.

FISSURA, Fissure—f. Capillorum, Distrix—f. Contrajacens, Contra-fissura—f. Cerebri longitudinalis, Fissure, longitudinal, of the Brain — f. Magna vulvæ, see Rima — f. Pilaris, Trichismus.

Fissu'ra Longitudina'lis, Ante'rior et Poste'rior. Two vertical fissures in the median line, in front of, and behind, the medulla oblongata, which divide it superficially into two symmetrical lateral columns.

Fissura Transversa Magna Cerebri, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain.

FISSURE, Fissu'ra, Schisma, Scissu'ra, Rhegē, Rhegma, Rhegmus, from findere, 'to cleave;' a long and narrow cleft or opening in a bone — Rhagē, ῥαγη, Ceasma, κεασμα. (F.) Fissure, Fente.

Fissure has various acceptations. 1. A fracture, Catag'ma fissu'ra, in which the bone is cracked, not separated, as in fracture. 2. A narrow, long, and superficial solution of continuity, around the external openings of the mucous membranes. A sort of chap, observed on the hands, particularly on the callous hands, of workmen, in certain mechanical employments. 3. Small, chapped ulcerations, sometimes noticed in young children, owing to the contact of the fæces and urine with the fine delicate skin of the thighs, nates, and genital organs. 4. Clefts of a more or less deep nature, occurring on the genital organs in the vicinity of the anus, in those labouring under syphilis. These are usually called rhagades. See Monster.

Fissure of Bichat, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain—f. Capillary, see Pilatio.

Fissure, Central. The aggregate of the cavities or ventricles of the brain. Meckel considers this but one cavity in the form of a cross.

Fissure of Glaser, Fissure, glenoid — f. of Glaserius, F. Glenoid.

Fissure, Glenoid, Fissure of Glaser or Glase'rius, (F.) Fissure ou Scissure de Glaser, Fente glenoïdale ou Félure de Glaser, divides the glenoid cavity of the temporal bone into two parts, and gives passage to the chorda tympani, &c.

Fissure of the Helix. A small vertical fissure of the helix of the ear, a little above the tubercle for the attachment of the attrahens aurem muscle.

Fissure, Infraorbitar, Suborbitar fissure.

Fissure, Longitudinal, of the Brain, Fissu'ra cer'ebri longitudina'lis. The space which separates the two hemispheres of the brain.

Fissure, Orbitar, see Orbitar fissure — f. Orbitar, inferior, Spheno-maxillary fissure — f. Orbitar, superior, Sphenoidal Fissure.

Fissure of Rolan'do. A transverse fissure placed between two superior cerebral convolutions, which are met with above the fissure of Sylvius.

Fissure, Semilu'nar. A notch at the anterior edge of the cerebellum, where it receives fibres which connect it to the cerebellum and mesocephalon.

Fissure of Syl'vius, Fissu'ra vel Fossa Magna Syl'vii. A deep, narrow sulcus, which ascends obliquely backwards from the temporal ala of the sphenoid bone, near to the middle of the parietal bone, and which parts the anterior and middle lobes of the cerebrum on each side.

Fissure of Sylvius, Ventricle, fifth.

Fissure of the Tragus. A fissure on the anterior surface of the tragus of the ear.

Fissure, Transverse of the Brain, Great transverse fissure, Fissure of Bichat, Fissu'ra seu Rima transver'sa magna cer'ebri. A fissure, which passes beneath and behind the edge of the middle lobe of the brain, and extends beneath the hemisphere of one side to the same point of the opposite side.

FIST, A. S. ꝼẏꝛꝛ, πυγμη, Pygmē, Pugnus, (F.) Poing. The clenched hand.

FIS'TULA, Syrinx, Syrin'ga, Aulos—when of a small size, Aulis'cos. A solution of continuity, of greater or less depth and sinuosity; the opening of which is narrow, and the disease kept up by an altered texture of parts, so that it is not disposed to heal. A fistula is incomplete or blind, when it has but one opening; and complete when there are two, the one communicating with an internal cavity, the other externally. It is lined, in its whole course, by a membrane, which seems analogous to mucous membranes. Incomplete fistulæ may be internal or external. The former are those which open internally; the latter those which open externally. External incomplete fistulæ are kept up by caries or necrosis of bones, by extraneous bodies in any of the living textures, or by purulent cavities, the walls of which have not become united. Internal incomplete fistulæ generally soon become complete, since the discharge that escapes from them into the cavities into which they open, has a constant tendency to make its way outwardly, and soon occasions ulceration of the integuments. Fistulæ have received different names, according to the discharge which they afford, and the organs in which they are seated, — as lachrymal, biliary, salivary, synovial, urinary — Fis'tula uri'næ, U'rias. The great object of treatment, in fistulous sores, is to bring on an altered condition of the parietes of the canal, by astringent or stimulating injections, caustics, the knife, pressure, &c. Those which are dependent on diseased bone, cartilage, tendon, &c., do not heal until after the exfoliation of the diseased part. Fistulæ of excretory ducts are produced either by an injury of the duct itself or by the retention and accumulation of the fluids to which they have to give passage. Thus, Fis'tulu lachryma'lis, Dacryosyr'inx, Emphrag'ma lachryma'lē, Hydrops sacci lachryma'lis, Dropsy of the lachrymal sac, commonly proceeds from the obliteration of the nasal ducts, or from atony of the lachrymal sac; which circumstances prevent the tears from passing into the nostrils.

Fistula in Ano, Archosyr'inx, generally occurs from some mechanical pressure or impediment. The principal indication in the treatment of these fistulæ of the excretory canals being to put a stop to the constant discharge of the secretions, &c., through the preternatural channel, the fistulous passage is at times laid open, and a communication established with the natural excretory canal; at others, strong pressure is employed to procure its obliteration.

Fistula Belliniana, Uriniferous tube—f. Cibalis, Œsophagus — f. Cruris, Fibula — f. Duræ matris, Sinus of the dura mater — f. Lachrymalis, see Fistula—f. Nervorum, Neurilemma—f. Sacra, Medulla spinalis, Vertebral column—f. Spiritalis, Trachea—f. Urinaria, Urethra—f. Ureterum renum, see Calix—f. Urinæ, see Fistula—f. Ventriculi, Œsophagus.

FISTULES STERCORAIRES, see Stercoraceous.

FIS'TULOUS, Fistulo'sus, Syring''icus, Syringo'des. Relating to, or resembling, a fistula; as 'a fistulous opening.'

FIT-ROOT, Monotropa uniflora.

FITS, NINE DAY, Trismus nascentium.

FIVE FINGERS, Panax quinquefolium.

FIXATIO MONONŒA, Melancholy.

FIXED, Fixus, from figere, 'to fasten.' A body not capable of being volatilized by fire is said to be fixed. Thus, we say fixed oils, in contradistinction to volatile oils.

FIXEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. This spring is four leagues from Waldsassen, in Bavaria. It contains carbonic acid, holding in solution carbonates of lime and magnesia, chlorides of lime and magnesia, carbonate of soda and silica. In Bavaria, it replaces the Seltzer water.

FIXI DENTES. The teeth of the second dentition.

FLABELLA'TION, Flabella'tio, from flabellare, to agitate the air. An operation recommended by Ambrose Paré, which consists in keeping fractured limbs cool, as well as the dressings surrounding them, by the renewal of the air around them, either by the use of a fan, or the repeated change of position of the parts affected.

FLABELLUM ET VENTILABRUM CORDIS, Pulmo.

FLACCID'ITY, Flaccid'itas, from flaccidus, 'flabby,' 'soft.' Softness of a part, so as to offer little resistance on pressure.

FLAG, BLUE, Iris versicolor—f. Dwarf, Iris lacustris—f. Myrtle, Acorus calamus—f. Root, Acorus calamus.

FLAGELLATIO, Mastigosis.

FLAMBE, Iris Germanica—f. Bâtard, Iris pseudacorus.

FLAMBOISE, Ignis sylvaticus.

FLAME, VITAL, Vital principle.

FLAMMA, Fleam—f. Cordis, Biolychnium—f. Vitalis, Biolychnium.

FLAMMÉ, Fleam—f. Vitale, Vital principle.

FLAMMETTE, Fleam.

FLAMMON, Lachesis rhombeata.

FLAMMULA, Fleam, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Cordis, Biolychnium—f. Jovis, Clematis recta—f. Vitalis, Animal heat, Biolychnium, Vital principle.

FLANCKS, Flanks.

FLANKS, Il'ia, Il'ea, La'gones, Lap'ara, Ceneo'nes, (F.) Flancs, Les Îles. The regions of the body which extend, on the sides, from the inferior margin of the chest to the crista ilii.

FLAP, (F.) Lambeau. A portion of the soft parts of the body separated from those beneath, but still attached by the base. Hence there may be 'flap wounds,' (F.) Plaies à lambeaux, and 'flap operations,' (F.) Opérations à lambeaux.

FLAP OPERATION OF AMPUTATION, Amputation à lambeaux.

FLAT TOP, Vernonia Noveboracensis.

FLATUARIUS, Alchymist.

FLAT'ULENCE, Flatulen'tia, Flatus, Flatuos'itas, Aëriflux'us, Pneumato'sis ventric'uli et Pn. enter'ica, Pneumatosis, Bdes'ma, Hyperpneus'tia, Clydon, Physa, Polyphy'sia, Limo'sis Fla'tus, Ereux'is, Bombus, Flatuos'ity, Wind, Wind'iness, Ventos'ity, Vapour, (F.) Ventosité, Flatuosité. Emission of wind by the mouth or anus, or accumulation of wind in the digestive tube.

FLATULENT, Windy.

FLATULENTIA, Flatulence.

FLATUOSITÉ, Flatulence.

FLATUOSITY, Flatulence.

FLATUS, Crepitation, Flatulence—f. Furiosus, Ambulo-flatulentus—f. Spinæ, Spina ventosa.

FLAVEDO CORTICUM CITRI, see Citrus medica.

FLAVOUR, from (F.) flairer, 'to smell.' The quality of a sapid body, which is appreciated by the taste and smell combined, and more especially by the latter. Some physiologists consider that flavour is effected through the smell alone.

FLAVUS, Yellow.

FLAX, COMMON, Linum usitatissimum—f. Purging, Linum catharticum—f. Seed, see Linum usitatissimum—f. Seed tea, Infusum lini compositum—f. Toad, Antirhinum linaria.

FLEA, COMMON, Pulex irritans.

FLEABANE, GREAT, Conyza squarrosa—f. Various-leaved, Erigeron heterophyllum—f. Bane, Canada, Erigeron Canadense—f. Philadelphia, Erigeron Philadelphicum—f. Skevish, Erigeron Philadelphicum.

FLEAM, Flamma, Flam'mula, Schaste'rion, Fosso'rium, Phlebot'omum. A surgical instrument used for the operation of phlebotomy. (F.) Flamme, Flammette. It consists of a small metallic box, containing a spear-pointed cutting instrument, which, by means of a spring, can be forced into the vein. It is much used in Germany and some other European countries, and is not unfrequently employed in America; but is scarcely ever seen in France or Great Britain.

FLEAWORT, Plantago psyllium.

FLÉCHISSEUR, Flexor—f. Court commun des orteils, Flexor brevis digitorum pedis—f. Court du petit doigt, Flexor parvus minimi digiti—f. Court du petit orteil, Flexor brevis minimi digiti pedis—f. Profond des doigts, Flexor profundus perforans—f. Sublime des doigts, Flexor sublimis perforatus—f. Superficiel des doigts, Flexor sublimis perforatus—f. Court du gros orteil, Flexor brevis pollicis pedis—f. Grand commun des orteils, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans—f. Long commun des orteils, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans—f. Long du gros orteil, Flexor longus pollicis pedis—f. Court du Pouce, Flexor brevis pollicis manûs.

FLECTENS PAR LUMBORUM, Quadratus lumborum.

FLEGMEN, Flemen.

FLEMEN, Flegmen. A tumour about the ankles. Also, a chap on the feet and hands.

FLERECIN, Gout.

FLESH, Caro, Sarx, (F.) Chair. Every soft part of an animal is so named; but more particularly the muscles, which are called muscular flesh.

FLESH, PROUD, Fungosity.

FLETUS, Lachrymatio.

FLEURS, Flowers, Menses—f. Blanches, Leucorrhœa—f. de Muscade, Mace—f. de Soufre, Sulphur sublimatum.

FLEXIBIL'ITY, Flexibil'itas, from flectere, 'to bend.' Capability of being bent. A physical property of the tissues, which varies greatly according to the structure. The tendons exhibit this property in a marked manner.

FLEXIO, Campsis, Flexion.

FLEX'ION, Flex'io, Campē, from flectere, 'to bend.' The state of being bent. The action of a flexor muscle.

FLEXOR. Same etymon. (F.) Fléchisseur. A muscle, whose office it is to bend certain parts.

FLEXOR BREVIS DIGITO'RUM PEDIS PERFORA'TUS, F. Subli'mis, Flexor brevis, Flexor digito'rum brevis sive perforatus pedis, Perfora'tus seu

flexor secun'di interno'dii digito'rum pedis, Calcanéo-sous-phalangettien commun, — Calcanéo-sous-phalangien commun, — (Ch.) (F.) Muscle court fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, placed at the middle of the sole of the foot. It is narrower and thicker behind than before, where it is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior part of the inferior surface of the os calcis, and is inserted at the inferior surface of the second phalanx of the last four toes. It bends the second phalanges of the toes on the first, and the first on the metatarsal bones; in this manner augmenting the concavity of the vault of the foot.

Flexor Brevis Minimi Digiti, F. parvus minimi digiti.

Flexor Brevis Min'imi Dig''iti Pedis, Para'thenar minor, (F.) Court fléchisseur du petit orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangien du petit orteil — (Ch.) A muscle, situate at the anterior and outer part of the sole of the foot. It arises from the posterior extremity of the fifth metatarsal bone, and is inserted into the posterior part of the first phalanx of the little toe, which it bends.

Flexor Brevis Pol'licis Manus, Flexor secun'di interno'dii, Thenar, Flexor primi et secun'di ossis pol'licis, (F.) Court fléchisseur du pouce, Carpophalangien du pouce — (Ch.) Demi-interosseux du pouce. A muscle, situate at the outer part of the palm of the hand. It is divided into two portions by the tendon of the Flexor longus pollicis. It arises from the os magnum, the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the third metacarpal bone; and is inserted into the superior part of the first phalanx of the thumb, and into the two ossa sesamoidea at the articulation of the first phalanx with the first metacarpal bone. Its use is to bend the first phalanx of the thumb on the first metacarpal bone, and the latter upon the trapezium.

Flexor Brevis Pol'licis Pedis, Flexor brevis, Flexor hal'lucis vel brevis pol'licis, (F.) Tarso-phalangien du pouce, Court fléchisseur du gros orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangettien du premier orteil — (Ch.) It is situate at the anterior and inner part of the sole of the foot; is thin and narrow behind, thick and divided into two portions before. It arises from the inferior part of the os calcis and the last two cuneiform bones, and is inserted at the inferior part of the base of the first phalanx of the great toe, and into the two sesamoid bones of the corresponding metatarso-phalangian articulation. It bends the first phalank of the great toe on the first metacarpal bone.

Flexor Carpi Radialis, Palmaris magnus — f. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubital (muscles) — f. Hallucis, F. brevis pollicis pedis — f. Hallucis longus, F. longus pollicis pedis.

Flexor Longus Digito'rum Pedis Profun'dus Per'forans; Per'forans seu Flexor profun'dus, Perodactyle'us, Peronodactyl'ius, Peronodactyliæ'us, Peronedactyl'ius, Flexor digito'rum longus sive Perforans pedis, Perforans seu Flexor tertii internodii digito'rum pedis; (F.) Tibio-phalangettien — (Ch.), Grand ou long fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, situate at the posterior and deep-seated part of the leg. It is broader at its middle than at its extremities, the inferior of which is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior surface of the tibia, and its tendons are attached to the posterior part of the lower surface of the three phalanges of the last four toes. It bends the three phalanges on each other, and the toes on the metatarsus, and extends the foot on the leg.

The Accesso'rius Flexo'ris Longi Digito'rum Pedis, Caro quadra'ta Syl'vii, C. accesso'ria, Massa car'nea Jaco'bi Syl'vii, Planta'ris verus, (F.) Accessoire du long fléchisseur commun des orteils, Carrée, is a small muscle of the sole of the foot, which passes obliquely from the os calcis to the outer edge of the flexor longus, whose force it augments, and corrects its obliquity.

Flexor Longus Pol'licis Manus, Flexor longus pollicis, Flexor tertii interno'dii, Flexor tertii internodii sive longis'simus pollicis; (F.) Radio-phalangettien du pouce, — (Ch.) Situate at the anterior and profound part of the forearm. It arises from the upper three quarters of the anterior surface of the radius and interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by a tendon, into the anterior surface of the last phalanx of the thumb. It bends the second phalanx of the thumb on the first; the first on the corresponding metacarpal bone, and this upon the radius. It can, also, bend the hand on the forearm.

Flexor Longus Pollicis Pedis, Flexor Hal'lucis vel Pollicis longus, (F.) Péronéo-phalangien du gros orteil, Long fléchisseur du gros orteil, Péronéo-sous-Phalangettien du pouce, — (Ch.) It is situate at the posterior and profound part of the leg. It arises from the posterior surface of the fibula and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by means of a long tendon, into the inferior part of the first phalanx of the great toe. It bends the third phalanx on the first, and this upon the corresponding metatarsal bone. It augments the concavity of the sole of the foot, and extends the foot on the leg.

Flexor Parvus Min'imi Dig''iti, Abduc'tor minimi digiti, Hypoth'enar Riola'ni, Flexor brevis minimi digiti manûs, Hypoth'enar minimi digiti, (F.) Carpo-phalangien du petit doigt — (Ch.), Court fléchisseur du petit doigt. It arises from the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the process of the os unciforme, and is inserted at the inner side of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the little finger. It bends the first phalanx of the little finger.

Flexor Perforans, F. profundus perforans — f. Perforatus, F. sublimis perforatus — f. Primi internodii, Opponens pollicis — f. Primi internodii digitorum manus, Lumbricalis manus — f. Primi et secundi ossis pollicis, F. brevis pollicis manus.

Flexor Profun'dus Per'forans, F. Profundus, F. Per'forans, F. Per'forans vulgo profundus, Flexor ter'tii interno'dii digito'rum manûs vel Per'forans manûs; (F.) Cubito-phalangettien commun — (Ch.,) Fléchisseur profond des doigts. A thick, flat, long muscle, seated beneath the Flexor sublimis perforatus. Its upper extremity is simple, and arises from the anterior surface of the ulna and from the interosseus ligament. Its inferior extremity terminates by four tendons, which, after having passed through the slits in the sublimis, are inserted into the anterior surface of the last phalanges of the four fingers. It bends the third phalanges on the second, and, in other respects, has the same use as the flexor sublimis perforatus.

Flexor Secundi Internodii Digitorum Pedis, F. brevis digitorum pedis — f. Tertii internodii, F. longus pollicis manûs — f. Tertii internodii digitorum manûs, F. profundus perforans — f. Tertii internodii digitorum pedis, F. longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans — f. Ossis metacarpi pollicis, Opponens pollicis — f. Perforatus pedis, F. brevis digitorum pedis — f. Sublimis, F. brevis digitorum pedis.

Flexor Subli'mis Perfora'tus, F. Perfora'tus, (F.) Fléchisseur sublime ou superficiel des doigts, Épitroklo-phalangien commun, — (Ch.) It is a thick, flat, muscle, seated at the anterior part of the forearm. Its upper extremity, which is simple, arises from the internal condyle of the os humeri; — from the coronoid process of the ulna, and from the anterior edge of the radius. Its lower extremity divides into four tendons, which slide under the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and are inserted into the second phalanges of the last four fingers, after having been slit to allow the tendons of the flexor profundus to pass through them. This muscle bends the second phalanges on the first; these on the carpal bones, and the hand on the forearm.

FLEXURA, Curvature—f. Sigmoidea, Sigmoid flexure.

FLIXWEED, Sisymbrium sophia.

FLOCCI, see Villous membranes.

FLOCCILATION, Carphologia.

FLOCCILEGIUM, Carphologia.

FLOCCITATION, Carphologia.

FLOCCORUM VENATIO, Carphologia.

FLOCCULI, see Villous membranes.

FLOC'CULUS; diminutive of floccus, 'a lock of wool'—Pneumogas'tric lob'ule, Lob'ulus pneumogas'tricus. A long and slender prominence, extending from the side of the vallecula around the corpus restiforme to the crus cerebelli, lying behind the filaments of the pneumogastric nerves.

FLOR DE MISTELA, see Mistura.

FLORENCE, CLIMATE OF. This agreeable Italian city is by no means a favourable residence for the phthisical invalid. Sir James Clark affirms, indeed, that he does not know any class of invalids for whom Florence offers a favourable residence. It is subject to sudden vicissitudes of temperature, and to cold, piercing winds during the winter and spring.

FLORES BENZOES, Benjamin, flowers of—f. Boracis, Boracic acid—f. Macidos, see Myristica moschata—f. Macis, Mace—f. Martiales, Ferrum ammoniatum—f. Salis ammoniaci martiales, Ferrum ammoniatum.

FLORIDA, CLIMATE OF, see Saint Augustine.

Florida, Waters of. Near Long Lake, in Florida, United States, which communicates with St. John's River by a small creek, there is a vast fountain of hot mineral water, issuing from a bank of the river. From its odour it would seem to be sulphureous.

FLORION, Influenza.

FLOS, Anthos. A flower. Also, the finest and noblest part of a body, and virginity.

Flos, Jovis, Crocus—f. Salis, Soda, subcarbonate of—f. Sanguineus monardi, Tropæolum majus—f. Trinitatis, Viola tricolor—f. Virginitatis, Hymen.

FLOUR, COLD, Pinoli.

Flour, Patent, Jones's. A farinaceous preparation, which is said to consist of wheat-flour, with tartaric acid and carbonate of soda.

Flour, Potato, see Solanum tuberosum.

FLOWER DE LUCE, Iris Germanica.

FLOWERS, Flores, (F.) Fleurs. The ancient chymists gave this name to different solid and volatile substances obtained by sublimation. The term is not yet entirely banished from chymical and medical language, as Flowers of Benjamin, Flowers of Sulphur, &c.

Flowers, Menses.

Flowers, Four Carmin'ative, Quat'uor flores carminati'vi, were chamomile, dill, fever-few, and melilot.

Flowers, Four Cordial, Quat'uor flores cordia'les, were formerly, borage, bugloss, roses, and violets.

FLUCTUATIO, Fluctuation—f. Aurium, Tinnitus aurium.

FLUCTUA'TION, Fluctua'tio, from fluctus, 'a wave;' Undula'tio, (F.) Ondulation. The undulation of a fluid collected in any natural or artificial cavity, which is felt by pressure or by percussion, properly practised—peripheric fluctuation. In ascites, the fluctuation is felt by one of the hands being applied to one side of the abdomen, whilst the other side is struck with the other hand. In abscesses, fluctuation is perceived by pressing on the tumour, with one or two fingers alternately, on opposite points.

Fluctuation Peripheric, see Fluctuation—f. Rhonchal, see Rhonchal—f. by Succussion, see Succussion.

FLUELLEN, Antirhinum elatine.

FLUELLIN, Veronica.

FLUEURS, Menses—f. Blanches, Leucorrhœa.

FLUID, Flu'idus, from fluere, 'to flow.' The human body is chiefly composed of fluids. If one, weighing 120 pounds, be thoroughly dried in an oven, the remains will be found not to weigh more than 12 or 13 pounds; so that the proportion of fluids to liquids in the body is about 9 or 10 to 1.

Table of Fluids of the Human Body.

|---|---|
| 1. Blood. | |
| 2. Lymph. | |
| 3. Exhaled or Perspiratory. | Transpiration of the mucous, serous, and synovial membranes; of the areolar membrane; of the adipous cells; of the medullary membrane; of the interior of the thyroid gland; of the thymus; suprarenal capsules; eye; ear; vertebral canal, &c. |
| 4. Follicular. | Sebaceous humour of the skin; cerumen; gum of the eye; mucus of the mucous glands and follicles; that of the tonsils, of the glands of the cardia, the environs of the anus, the prostate, &c. |
| 5. Glandular. | Tears; saliva; pancreatic fluid; bile; cutaneous transpiration; urine; fluid of the glands of Cowper; sperm; milk; of the testes and mammæ of the new-born child. |

FLUIDE SÉMINAL, Sperm.

FLUIDUM NERVEUM, Nervous fluid—f. Cerebro-spinale, Cephalo-spinal fluid.

FLUKE, Distoma hepaticum—f. Liver, Distoma hepaticum.

FLUMEN DYSENTERICUM, Dysentery.

FLUMMERY, (Scotch) Sowens. A preparation of oatmeal, which forms a light article of food during convalescence. It may be made as follows:—Take of oatmeal or groats, a quart. Rub with two quarts of hot water, and let the mixture stand until it becomes sour: then add another quart of hot water, and strain through a hair sieve. Let it stand till a white sediment is deposited; decant, and wash the sediment with cold water. Boil this with fresh water till it forms a mucilage, stirring the whole time.

FŒTAB'ULUM. An encysted abscess.—Marcus Aurelius Severinus.

FŒTAL, Fœta'lis. Relating to the fœtus. A name, given to the parts connected with the fœtus. Thus we say—the fœtal surface of the placenta, in contradistinction to the uterine or maternal surface.

FŒTAL CIRCULATION differs from that of the adult in several respects. Commencing with the placenta, where it probably undergoes some change analogous to what occurs in the lungs in extra-uterine existence, the blood proceeds by the umbilical vein as far as the liver, where a part of it is poured into the vena porta; the other proceeds into the vena cava inferior; the latter, having received the suprahepatic veins, pours its blood into the right auricle. From the right auricle, a part of the blood is sent into the right ventricle; the rest passes directly through into the left auricle, by the foramen ovale. When the right ventricle contracts, the blood is sent into the pulmonary artery; but as the function of respiration is not going on, no more blood passes to the lungs than is necessary for their nutrition; the remainder goes directly through the ductus arteriosus into the aorta. The blood, received by the left auricle from the lungs, as well as that which passed through the foramen ovale, is transmitted into the left ventricle; by the contraction of which it is sent into the aorta, and by means of the umbilical arteries, which arise from the hypogastric, it is returned to the placenta.

FŒTAL HEAD. The diameters of this at the full period are as follows:—1. The Biparietal or transverse, extending from one parietal protuberance to the other, and measuring 3½ inches. 2. The Temporal, from one temple to another, 3 inches. 3. The Occipito-mental, from the occiput to the chin; the greatest of all, 5 inches. 4. The Occipito-frontal or antero-posterior, 4¼ or 4½ inches. 5. The Cervico-bregmatic, from the nape of the neck to the centre of the anterior fontanelle. 6. The Fronto-mental, from the forehead to the chin, about 3½ inches. 7. The Trachelo-bregmatic, from the front of the neck to the anterior fontanelle, 3½ inches. 8. The Vertical diameter, from the vertex to the base of the cranium.

FŒTAL NUTRITION, Cyotrophy.

FŒTATION, Pregnancy.

FŒTICIDE, Fœticid'ium, from fœtus, and cædere, 'to kill;' Aborticid'ium. Criminal abortion.

FŒTIDUS, Fetid.

FŒTOR, Dysodia—f. Oris, Breath, offensive.

FŒTUS, Fetus, Cye'ma, Onus ventris, Sar'cina, from feo, 'I bring forth.' The unborn child. By κυημα, Cye'ma, Hippocrates meant the fecundated, but still imperfect, germ. It corresponded with the term embryo, as now used; whilst εμβρυον, 'embryo,' signified the fœtus at a more advanced stage of utero-gestation. The majority of anatomists apply to the germ the name embryo, which it retains until the third month of gestation, and with some until the period of quickening; whilst fœtus is applied to it in its latter stages. The terms are, however, often used indiscriminately. When the ovule has been fecundated in the ovarium, it proceeds slowly towards, and enters the uterus, with which it becomes ultimately connected by means of the placenta. When first seen, the fœtus has the form of a gelatinous flake, which some have compared to an ant, a grain of barley, a worm curved upon itself, &c. The fœtal increment is very rapid in the first, third, fourth, and sixth months of its formation, and at the end of nine months it has attained its full dimensions—Enfant à terme. Generally, there is but one fœtus in utero; sometimes, there are two; rarely three. The fœtus presents considerable difference in its shape, weight, length, situation in the womb, proportion of its various parts to each other, arrangement and texture of its organs, state of its functions at different periods of gestation, &c. All these differences are important in an obstetrical and medico-legal point of view. The following table exhibits the length and weight of the fœtus at different periods of gestation, on the authority of different observers. Their discordance is striking. It is proper to remark, that the Paris pound — Poid de Marc — of 16 ounces, contains 9216 Paris grains, whilst the avoirdupois contains only 8532.5 Paris grains, and that the Paris inch is 1.065977 English inch.

FOLLIC'ULAR, Follic'ulous, Follic'ulose, Folliculo'sus, from 'follicle.' Relating or appertaining to a follicle, — as 'follicular inflammation,' inflammation affecting crypts or follicles.

FOLLICULE, Crypta — f. Ciliaire, Meibomius, gland of — f. Dentaire, Dental follicle — f. Palpébral, Meibomius, gland of.

FOLLICULES DE GRAAF, Folliculi Graafiani.

FOLLIC'ULI GRAAFIA'NI, Ova seu O'vula Graafia'na, Follicles or Vesicles of De Graaf, Ova'rian ves'icles, (F.) Follicules ou Vésicules de Graaf. Small spherical vesicles in the stroma of the ovary, which have two coats; the outer termed ovicapsule and tunic of the ovisac; the latter ovisac and membra'na propria; vésicule ovulifère of M. Pouchet. They exist in the fœtus. The ovum — ovule of some — is contained in, and formed by, them.

Folliculi Rotundi et Oblongi Cervicis Uteri, Nabothi glandulæ — f. Sanguinis, Globules of the blood — f. Sebacei, Sebaceous glands.

FOLLICULOSE GLAND, Crypta.

FOLLICULUS, Vulva.

Follic'ulus A'eris, Air-chamber. A space at the larger end of the bird's egg, formed by a separation of the two layers of the shell membrane, which is inservient to the respiration of the young being.

Follicules Dentis, Dental Follicle — f. Fellis, Gall-bladder — f. Genitalis, Scrotum.

FOMENT, Fove're, (F.) Étuver, Bassiner. To apply a fomentation to a part.

FOMENTA'TION, Fomenta'tio, Fotus, Py'ria, Thermas'ma, Chlias'ma, Æone'sis, Perfu'sio, Asper'sio, Fomen'tum, (quasi fovimentum,) from fovere 'to bathe.' A sort of partial bathing, by the application of cloths which have been previously dipped in hot water, or in some medicated decoction. They act, chiefly, by virtue of their warmth and moisture, except in the case of narcotic fomentations, where some additional effect is obtained.

A dry fomentation is a warm, dry application to a part; — as a hot brick, wrapped in flannel; — a bag, half filled with chamomile flowers made hot, &c.

Fomentation Herbs, Herbæ pro fotu. The herbs, ordinarily sold under this title by the English apothecary, are — southernwood, tops of sea wormwood, chamomile flowers, each two parts; bay leaves, one part. ℥iijss of these to Ovj of water.

FOMENTUM, Fomentation.

FOMES MORBI, Fomes mali. The focus or seat of any disease. (F.) Foyer.

Fomes Ventriculi, Hypochondriasis.

FOM'ITES, from fomes, 'fuel, any thing which retains heat.' Enaus'ma, Zop'yron. A term applied to substances which are supposed to retain contagious effluvia; as woollen goods, feathers, cotton, &c.

FONCTION, Function.

FOND, Fundus.

FONDANT, Solvent.

FONGIFORME, Fungoid.

FONGOÏDE, Fungoid.

FONGOSITÉ, Fungosity.

FONGUS, Fungus — f. Médullaire, Encephaloid.

FONS, Fontanella — f. Lachrymarum, see Canthus — f. Medicatus, Water, mineral — f. Pulsans, Fontanella — f. Pulsatilis, Fontanella — f. Salutarius, Water, mineral — f. Soterius, Water, mineral — f. Vitalis, Centrum vitale.

FONSANGE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Fonsange is situated near Nismes in France. The water is sulphuretted.

FONTA'NA, CANAL OF. A canal of a triangular shape, at the inner side of the ciliary circle; partly formed by the groove at the inner edges of the cornea and sclerotica.

FONTANEL'LA. A fontanel; — diminutive of fons, 'a fountain.' Fons pulsat'ilis, Fons pulsans, Vertex pal'pitans, Fons, Bregma, Fontic'ulus, Lacu'na, Mould. The opening of the head. A name, given to a space occupied by a cartilaginous membrane, in the fœtus and new-born child, and situate at the union of the angles of the bones of the cranium. There are six fontanels. 1. The great or sincip'ital or anterior, situate at the junction of the sagittal and coronal sutures. 2. The small or bregmat'ic or posterior, situate at the part where the posterior and superior angles of the parietal bones unite with the upper part of the os occipitis. 3. The two sphenoidal, in the temporal fossæ; and, 4. The two mastoid, or of Casserius, at the union of the parietal, occipital, and temporal bones.

FONTES, see Fons — f. Medicati Plumbarii, Plombières, mineral waters of — f. Sulphurei calidi, Waters, mineral, sulphureous.

FONTICULE À POIS, see Fonticulus.

FONTIC'ULUS, Fontanel'la, Exuto'rium, Ex'utory, Issue, (F.) Fonticule, Cautère. A small ulcer produced by art, either by the aid of caustics or of cutting instruments; the discharge from which is kept up with a view to fulfil certain therapeutical indications. The Pea issue, (F.) Fonticule à pois, is kept up by means of a pea placed in it. This pea, (F.) Pois à cautère, is sometimes formed of wax; at others, the young, blasted fruit of the orange is employed. The common dried garden pea answers the purpose. The seton is also an issue.

FOOD, Aliment — f. Farinaceous, see Farinaceous — f. of the Gods, Asafœtida.

Food, Prince of Wales's. A farinaceous preparation, which is used in the same cases as arrow-root, is said to consist entirely of potato-flour.

FOOL'S STONES, MALE, Orchis mascula.

FOOT, Pes — f. Flat, see Kyllosis — f. Griffon's, Gryphius pes.

FOOTLING CASE. A presentation of the foot or feet in parturition.

FORA'MEN, Trema, from foro, 'I pierce.' Aulos, (F.) Trou. Any cavity, pierced through and through. Also, the orifice of a canal.

Foram'ina Thebe'sii. Openings resembling vascular orifices, found below the orifice of the vena cava superior in the right auricle, which are supposed to be the openings of veins.

FORATIO, Trepanning.

FORCE, from fortis, 'strong.' Vis, Poten'tia, Energi'a, Dy'namis, Cratos. Any power which produces an action. Those powers which are inherent in organization are called vital forces. We say, also, organic force, and muscular force, to designate that of the organs in general, or of the muscles in particular. To the latter the word Dynamis, δυναμις, corresponds; and the absence of this force is termed adyna'mia. The vital forces have to be carefully studied by the pathologist. The doctrine of diseases is greatly dependent on their augmentation or diminution; freedom or oppression, &c.

FORCE-REAL, MINERAL WATERS OF. The name of a mountain, situate four leagues from Perpignan in France. The water is chalybeate.

FORCEPS, quasi. ferriceps, from ferrum, 'iron,' and capio, 'I take.' Pincers, Labis, Volsel'læ. An instrument for removing bodies, which it would be inconvenient or impracticable to seize with the fingers. (F.) Pinces, Pincettes. There are various kinds of forceps, 1. The ordinary kind, contained in every dressing-case, for removing lint, &c. from wounds or ulcers. (F.) Pinces à anneaux. 2. Dissecting or Lig'ature or Arte'rial Forceps, (F.) Pinces à dissection, P. à ligature, to lay hold of delicate parts. 3. Pol'ypus Forceps, Tooth Forceps, Forceps of Museux for laying hold of the tonsils or other parts to be removed. 4. The Bullet Forceps, Strombul'eus, (Fr.) Tireballe. 5. The Litho'tomy Forceps, Litholabon, Lithogo'gum, Tenac'ula, Volsel'la, which resembles the Craniotomy Forceps, (F.) Tenettes.

Forceps is also an instrument used by obstetrical practitioners to embrace the head, and bring it through the pelvis. It consists of two branches, blades or levers; one of which, in the case of the short forceps, is passed over the ear of the child, and the other opposite to the former, so that the blades may lock. When the head is secured, included between the blades, the operation of extraction can be commenced. See Parturition.

Forceps, see Corpus callosum — f. Anterior, see Corpus callosum — f. Arterial, see Forceps — f. Bullet, see Forceps — f. Craniotomy, see Forceps — f. Deceptoria, see Forceps — f. Lithotomy, see Forceps — f. of Museux, see Forceps — f. Polypus, see Forceps — f. Tooth, see Forceps.

FORD'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND, see Balsam of horehound.

FOREARM. Antibra'chium, Pygmē, Pars inferior bra'chii, Cu'bitus, (F.) Avant-bras. The part of the upper extremity, comprised between the arm and the hand. It is composed of two bones —radius and ulna—and 20 muscles.

FOREHEAD, Front.

FORENSIC ANATOMY, see Anatomy — f. Medicine, Medicine, legal.

FORES, Genital organs.

FORESKIN, Prepuce.

FORFEX, Scissors—f. Dentaria, Dentagra.

FORFIC'ULA AURICULA'RIA, Earwig. An insect of the Order Orthoptera, which occasionally enters the meatus auditorius externus, and excites intense pain. It may be destroyed by tobacco-smoke, or by oil poured into the meatus.

FORGES, MINERAL WATERS OF. Forges is situate four leagues from Gournay, in the department of Seine Inférieure, France. There are three springs, which are acidulous chalybeates. These are called Royal, Reinette, and Cardinal, in honor of Louis XIII., Queen Anne of Austria, and Cardinal Richelieu, who used them.

FORMATIVE, Plastic.

FORMI'CA, Myrmex. The ant or pismire. (F.) Fourmi. It contains an acid juice and gross oil, which were formerly extolled as aphrodisiacs. The chrysalides of the animal are said to be diuretic and carminative; and have been used in dropsy. 2. Also the name of a black wart, verru'ca formica'ria, with a broad base and cleft surface; so called because the pain attending it resembles the biting of an ant, μυρμηκια, myrmc'cia. — Forestus. 3. A varicose tumour on the anus and glans penis. 4. Also, miliary herpes.

FORMICA AMBULATORIA, Herpes circinatus — f. Corrosive, Herpes exedens.

FORM'ICANT, Myrme'cizon, Formi'cans, from formica, 'an ant.' (F.) Fourmillant. An epithet given to the pulse, Pulsus formi'cans, when extremely small, scarcely perceptible, unequal, and communicating a sensation like that of the motion of an ant through a thin texture.

FORMICA'TION, Formica'tio, Myrmecias'mus, Myrmeci'asis, Myrmecis'mus, Myrmeco'sis, Stupor formi'cans. Same etymon. (F.) Fourmillement. A pain, compared with that which would be caused by a number of ants creeping on a part.

FORMIX, Herpes esthiomenus.

FOR'MULA, from forma, 'a form.' (F.) Formule, Ordonnance. The receipt for the formation of a compound medicine; a prescription.

FORM'ULARY, Formula'rium, Codex medicamenta'rius, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Narthex. A collection of medical formulæ or receipts.

FORMULE, Prescription.

FORMYL, PERCHLORIDE OF. Chloroform.

FORNIX, 'an arch or vault.' For'nix cer'ebri, Cam'era, Fornix trilat'erus, Psalis, Psalid'ium, Testu'do cer'ebri, Arcus medulla'ris, (F.) Trigone cérébral — (Ch.,) Voûte à trois piliers, Triangle Médullaire. A medullary body in the brain, below the corpus callosum and above the middle ventricle, on the median line. This body, which is curved upon itself, terminates anteriorly by a prolongation, which constitutes its anterior pillar or crus, (F.) Pilier antérieur, and posteriorly by two similar prolongations, called posterior pillars or crura. See Achicolum, and Vault.

FORNIX CEREBRI, Fornix.

FORPEX, Scissors.

FORTIFIANT, Corroborant, Tonic.

FORTRAITURE, Hysteralgia.

FOSSA, Fo'vea, from fodio, 'I dig.' Scamma. A cavity of greater or less depth, the entrance to which is always larger than the base. The fossæ of bones have been called simple, when they belong to one bone only, as the parietal fossæ; and compound, (F.) Fosses composées, when several concur in their formation, as the orbitar fossæ, temporal fossæ, &c.

FOSSA AMYG'DALOID, Amyg'daloid excava'tion. The space between the anterior and posterior pillars of the fauces, which is occupied by the tonsils.

FOSSA AMYN'TÆ. A kind of bandage, used in fractures of the nose; so called, by Galen, from Amyntas of Rhodes, its inventor. It consisted of a long band, applied round the head, the turns of which crossed at the root of the nose.

FOSSA CANINA, Canine fossa.

FOSSA CEREBEL'LI, (F.) Fosse cérébelleuse. The inferior occipital fossa, which lodges the corresponding portion of the cerebellum.

FOSSA CORONA'LIS, Coro'nal or frontal fossa. A depression on the orbitar plate of the frontal or coronal bone, which supports the anterior lobe of the brain.

FOSSA CORONOÏ'DEA, Cor'onoid fossa. A cavity before the inferior extremity of the humerus, in which the coronoid process of the ulna is engaged during the flexion of the forearm.

FOSSA COTYLOIDEA, see Cotyloid.

FOSSA, DIGAS'TRIC, Fossa digas'trica. A deep groove on the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which gives origin to the digastric muscle.

FOSSA ETHMOIDA'LIS, Ethmoid fossa. A shallow gutter on the upper surface of the cribriform plate of the ethmoid bone, on which is lodged the expanded portion of the olfactory nerve.

FOSSA GENU, Poples.

FOSSA GUTTURA'LIS, Gut'tural fossa. The depression which forms the guttural region of the base of the cranium, between the foramen magnum and posterior nares.

FOSSA HYALOIDEA, see Hyaloid (Fossa) — f. Iliac, see Iliac fossæ — f. Infra-orbitar, Canine fossa—f. Infra-spinous, see Infra-spinata fossa.

FOSSA INNOMINATA. The space between the helix and antihelix of the ear.

FOSSA, ISCHIO-RECTAL, Perineal fossa — f. Jugularis, Jugular fossa—f. Lachrymalis, Lachrymal fossa — f. Magna Muliebris, Vulva — f. Magna Sylvii, Fissura Sylvii.

FOSSA, MENTAL, Fossa menta'lis. A small depression on each side of the symphysis on the anterior surface of the body of the maxilla inferior, for the attachment of muscles.

FOSSA NAVICULARIS, Navicular fossa.

FOSSA OCCIPITA'LIS, Occip'ital fossa. The occipital fossæ are four in number; the superior or cerebral, and the inferior or cerebellous. They are separated by a groove, which lodges the lateral sinus.

FOSSA OVALIS, see Ovalis fossa — f. Palatina, Palate—f. Perinæi, Perineal fossa — f. Pituitaria, Sella Turcica.

FOSSA POPLITE'A, Poplite'al fossa. The hollow of the ham;—the popliteal region.

FOSSA SCAPHOIDES, Navicularis fossa—f. Suborbitar, Canine fossa.

FOSSA, SUBPYRAM'IDAL, F. subpyramida'lis. A deep fossa under the pyramid and behind the fenestra rotunda in the middle ear, remarkable for its constancy, and pierced by several foramina at the bottom.

FOSSA SUPRA-SPHENOIDALIS, Pituitaria fossa—f. of Sylvius, Ventricle, fifth—f. Umbilicalis, see Liver.

FOSSÆ CEREBRA'LES, Cer'ebral fossæ. Fossæ or excavations at the base of the cranium. They are nine in number; three occupy the median line, and three are placed at each side. They are distinguished into anterior, middle, and posterior.

FOSSÆ DIGITALES, see Impression.

FOSSE BASILAIRE, Basilary fossa — f. Sous-épineuse, Infra-spinata fossa — f. Sus-épineuse, Fossa supra-spinata.

FOSSES CONDYLOÏDIENNES, Condylo-idea foramina—f. Nasales, Ouvertures postérieures des, Nares, posterior.

FOSSETTE, (F.) Diminutive of fossa. Scrobic'ulus, Both'rion. Several depressions are so called. A dimpled chin, Fossette du menton, consists in a slight depression, which certain persons have on the chin. 2. A dimple of the cheek, (F.) Fossette des joues, a depression which occurs on the cheeks of certain persons when they laugh. Scrobic'ulus cordis, Anticar'dion, Præcor'dium, (F.) Fossette du cœur. The depression observed on a level with the xiphoid cartilage at the anterior and inferior part of the chest. It is, also, called pit of the stomach, (F.) Creux de l'estomac.

FOSSETTE, Fos'sula, A'aulus, Bothrium, is also a small ulcer of the transparent cornea, the centre of which is deep.

FOSSETTE ANGULAIRE DU QUATRIÈME VENTRICULE, Calamus scriptorius—f. du Cœur, Scrobiculus cordis.

FOSSORIUM, Fleam.

FOSSULA, Argema, Fossa, Fossette, Fovea.

FOTHERGILL'S PILLS, see Pilulæ aloes et colocynthidis.

FOTUS, Fomentation—f. Communis, Decoctum papaveris.

FOU, Insane.

FOUGÈRE FEMELLE, Asplenium filix fœmina, Pteris aquilina—f. Grande, Pteris aquilina—f. Mâle, Polypodium filix mas.

FOULURE, Sprain.

FOUNDLING HOSPITAL, Brephotropheum.

FOURCHE, (F.), fourché, 'cleft;' from furca, 'a fork.' Aposte'ma Phalan'gum. A French provincial term for small abscesses which form on the fingers and hands of working-people. Also, an instrument, invented by M. J. L. Petit, for compressing the ranine artery in cases of hemorrhage from that vessel.

FOURCHETTE', Furcil'la, a little fork. Fur'cula. A surgical instrument used for raising and supporting the tongue, during the operation of dividing the frænum.

Fourchette, in anatomy, is, 1. The posterior commissure of the labia majora, called also, Frænum and Fur'cula Labio'rum. 2. The cartilago ensiformis: so called from its being sometimes cleft like a fork. Also, the semilunar notch at the superior or clavicular extremity of the sternum.

FOURMI, Formica.

FOURMILLANT, Formicant.

FOURMILLEMENT, Formication.

FOUSEL OIL, see Oil, fusel.

FO'VEA, diminutive, Fove'ola, from fodio, 'I dig.' Bothros. A slight depression. Fos'sula. The pudendum muliebre; see Vulva. Also, the fossa navicularis. A vapour-bath for the lower extremities.

FOVEA AXILLARIS, Axilla—f. Elliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Hemisphærica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Lacrymalis, Lachrymal fossa—f. Oculi, Orbit—f. Semi-elliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Sulciformis, see Crista Vestibuli.

FOVEOLA, Fovea.

FOXBERRY, Arbutus uva ursi.

FOXGLOVE, Digitalis.

FOYER, Fomes morbi.

FRACTURA, Fracture—f. Dentis, Odontoclasis.

FRACTURE, Fractu'ra, from frangere, fractum, 'to break,' 'bruise.' Catag'ma, Catag'ma Fractu'ra, Catax'is, Clasis, Clasma, Agmē, Agma, Diar'rhagē. A solution of continuity in a bone, Osteoc'lasis. A simple fracture is when the bone only is divided. A compound fracture is a division of the bone with a wound of the integuments communicating with the bone,—the bone, indeed, generally protruding. In a com'minuted fracture, Alphite'don, αλφιτηδον, Carye'don Catag'ma, καρυηδον καταγμα, the bone is broken into several pieces; and in a complicated fracture there is, in addition to the injury done to the bone, a lesion of some considerable vessel, nervous trunk, &c. Fractures are also termed transverse, oblique, &c., according to their direction. The treatment of fractures consists, in general, in reducing the fragments when displaced; maintaining them when reduced; preventing the symptoms, which may be likely to arise; and combating them when they occur. The reduction of fractures must be effected by extension, counter-extension, and coaptation. The parts are kept in apposition by position, rest, and an appropriate apparatus. The position must vary according to the kind of fracture. Commonly, the fractured limb is placed on a horizontal or slightly inclined plane, in a state of extension; or rather in a middle state between extension and flexion, according to the case.

FRACTURE EN RAVE, Raphanedon.

FRACTURE OF THE RADIUS, BARTON'S, Barton's Fracture. A term applied to a fracture of the lower extremity of the radius, which commences at the articular surface, and extends upwards for an inch or more, to terminate on the dorsal aspect. Owing to the extensor muscles drawing up the separated portion of the bone, and with it the carpus, a deformity results, which has been confounded with simple dislocation. In consequence of the fracture having been well described by Dr. John Rhea Barton, of Philadelphia, it is often called after him.

FRACTURES PAR RÉSONNANCE, see Contrafissura.

FRÆNA EPIGLOT'TIDIS, Glosso-epiglottic ligaments—f. Morgagnii, F. of the Valve of Bauhin.

FRÆNA OF THE VALVE OF BAUHIN, (F.) Freins de la valvule de Bauhin. A name given by Morgagni to the projecting lines formed by the junction of the extremities of the two lips of the ileocœcal valve. They are also called Frœna and Retinac'ula Morgagn'ii.

FRÆNULUM, see Frænum, Bride—f. Clitoridis, Frænum clitoridis—f. Labiorum, Fourchette—f. Novum, Tænia semicircularis.

FRÆ'NULUM VELI MEDULLA'RIS ANTERIO'RIS. A narrow slip, given off by the commissure of the encephalic testes, which strengthens the junction of the testes with the valve of Vieussens.

FRÆNUM, Fre'num; (F.) Frein, 'a bridle.' Fræ'nulum, Filel'lum, Filamen'tum. 'A small bridle.' A bridle. Names given to several membranous folds, which bridle and retain certain organs.

FRÆNUM CLITOR'IDIS, Fræ'nulum Clitor'idis, (F.) Frein du Clitoris. A slight duplicature formed by the union of the internal portions of the upper extremity of the nymphæ.

FRÆNUM GLANDIS, F. Penis.

FRÆNUM LABIO'RUM, (F.) Frein des lèvres. There are two of these; one for the upper, the other for the lower lip. They unite these parts to the maxillary bone, and are formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth. Also, the Fourchette.

FRÆNUM LINGUÆ, Fræ'nulum seu Vin'culum Linguæ, Glossodes'mus, File'tum, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la langue, is a triangular reflection, formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth, and situate between the inferior paries of that cavity and the inferior surface of the tongue. When the frænum extends as far as the extremity of the tongue, it cramps its movements, interferes with sucking, &c. This inconvenience is remedied by carefully snipping it with a pair of scissors. The French call this l'opération du filet.

Frænum Penis, F. seu Fræ'nulum seu Vin'culum Præpu'tii, F. Glandis, Cynodes'mion, Cynodes'mus, Vin'culum Cani'num, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la verge, is a membranous reflection which fixes the prepuce to the lower part of the glans. When too short, it prevents the prepuce from sliding over the glans.

Frænum Præputii, F. Penis.

FRAGA'RIA, from fragro, 'I smell sweetly.' The Strawberry, Fraga'ria vesca seu vulga'ris seu semper-florens, Chamæ'batos, (F.) Fraisier. The fruit is agreeable and wholesome, and the roots have been used as tonic and slightly diuretic. The fruit is the Fragrum, κομαρον of the ancients; (F.) Fraise.

Fragaria Anserina, Potentilla anserina—f. Pentaphyllum, Potentilla reptans—f. Tormentilla officinalis, Potentilla tormentilla.

Fraga'ria Virginia'na, Wild Strawberry. An indigenous plant, which has astringent leaves.

FRAGILE VITREUM, Fragilitas ossium.

FRAGIL'ITAS, Ruptibil'itas, from frango, 'I break.' Fragility, Brittleness. The state of being easily broken or torn.

Fragil'itas Os'sium, Osteopsathyro'sis, Brittleness of the bones, Friabil'ity of the bones, Paros'tia frag''ilis, Frag''ilē vit'reum. Pathologists have given this name to the extreme facility with which bones break in certain diseases of the osseous texture. It is owing to a deficiency of the animal matter.

FRAGMENT, Fragmen'tum, Fragmen, Ramen'tum, from frangere, 'to break.' The French use this term for the two portions of a fractured bone; thus, they speak of the superior and the inferior fragment.

Fragments, Prec''ious. A name formerly given, in Pharmacy, to the garnet, hyacinth, emerald, sapphire and topaz. The Arabs falsely attributed to them cordial and alixiterial properties.

FRAGON, Ruscus.

FRAGUM, see Fragaria.

FRAISE, see Fragaria.

FRAISIER, Fragaria.

FRAMBŒ'SIA, Frambœ'sia, Lepra fungif'era, from Framboise, (F.) 'A raspberry.' Syph'ilis In'dica, Anthra'cia ru'bula, Thymio'sis, Thymio'sis seu Lues In'dica, Vari'ola Amboinen'sis, Lepra fungif'era, Scroph'ula Molucca'na. The Yaws, Epian, Pian. A disease of the Antilles and of Africa, characterized by tumours, of a contagious character, which resemble strawberries, raspberries, or champignons; ulcerate, and are accompanied by emaciation. The Pian, for so the Indians call it, differs somewhat in America and Africa.

Pian of Amer'ica, Frambœ'sia America'na, Anthra'cia Bu'bula Americana, occurs under similar circumstances with the next, and seems to be transmitted by copulation. The tumours have a similar form, and are greater in proportion to their paucity. In some cases they are mixed with ulcers.

Pian of Guin'ea, Frambœ'sia Guineen'sis, Anthra'cia Ru'bula Guineen'sis, is common amongst the negroes, especially in childhood and youth. It begins by small spots, which appear on different parts, and especially on the organs of generation and around the anus; these spots disappear, and are transformed into an eschar, to which an excrescence succeeds, that grows slowly, and has the shape above described.

The treatment is nearly the same in the two varieties. The tumours will yield to mercurial friction, when small. When large, they must be destroyed by caustic. In both cases, mercury must be given to prevent a recurrence.

An endemic disease resembling yaws was observed in the Feejee Islands by the medical officers of the United States' Exploring Expedition. It is called by the natives Dthoke.

Frambœsia Illyrica, Scherlievo—f. Scotica, Sibbens.

FRAMBOISE, Rubus idæus.

FRANCOLIN, Attagen.

FRANGES SYNOVIALES, Synovial glands.

FRANGULA ALNUS, Rhamnus frangula.

FRANKINCENSE, COMMON, see Pinus abies—f. True, Juniperus lycia.

FRANZENSBAD, FRANZBAD, or FRANZENSBRUNN, MINERAL WATERS OF. A celebrated water at Eger, in Bohemia, which contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid gas. The springs are also called Franzensbrunnen.

FRAPPER, Percuss.

FRASERA CAROLINIENSIS, see Calumba—f. Officinalis, see Calumba—f. Walteri, see Calumba.

FRATER UTERINUS, see Uterinus frater.

FRATERNITAS, Adelphixia.

FRATRATIO, Adelphixia.

FRAXINELLA DICTAMNUS, Dictamnus albus—f. White, Dictamnus albus.

FRAXINUS AMERICA'NA, White Ash; and

Fraxinus Quadrangula'ta, Blue Ash, indigenous; have bitter and astringent barks, and have been used as antiperiodics.

Fraxinus Apetala, F. excelsior—f. Aurea, F. excelsior—f. Crispa, F. excelsior—f. Excelsa, F. excelsior.

Frax'inus Excel'sior. The systematic name of the Ash tree, Frax'inus, Ornus seu Fraxinus sylves'tris, Fr. apet'ala seu au'rea seu crispa seu excel'sa seu pen'dula seu verruco'sa, Bume'lia seu Macedon'ica Fraxinus, Bumelia. Ord. Oleaceæ. (F.) Frêne. The fresh bark has a moderately strong, bitterish taste. It has been said to possess resolvent and diuretic qualities, and has been given in intermittents. The seeds, called Birds' tongues, Linguæ avis, Ornithoglos'sæ, have been exhibited as diuretics, in the dose of a drachm. Its sap has been extolled against deafness.

Fraxinus Florifera, F. ornus—f. Macedonica, F. excelsior.

Fraxinus Ornus, Fraxinus me'lia seu panicula'ta seu florif'era, Ornus mannif'era seu rotundifo'lia. The systematic name of the tree whence manna flows. This substance is also called Manna Calabri'na, Ros Calabri'nus, Aërom'eli, Drosom'eli, Drysom'eli, Mel aë'rium, Succus orni concre'tus. In Sicily, not only the Fraxinus Ornus, but also the F. rotundifolia and F. excelsior are regularly cultivated for the purpose of procuring manna, which is their condensed juice. In the Ph. U. S. it is assigned to Ornus Europæa. Manna is inodorous, sweetish, with a very slight degree of bitterness; in friable flakes, of a whitish or pale yellow colour; opake, and soluble in water and alcohol. It is laxative, and is used as a purgative for children, who take it readily on account of its sweetness. More generally it is employed as an adjunct to other purgatives. Dose, ʒss to ʒij. Its immediate principle is called Mannite or Mannin. This has been recommended by Magendie as a substitute for manna. Dose, ʒij, for children.

Fraxinus Paniculata, F. ornus—f. Quadrangulata, see F. Americana—f. Rotundifolia, F. ornus.

FRAYEUR NOCTURNE, Panophobia.

FRECKLES, Ephelides.

FREEMAN'S BATHING SPIRITS, see Linimentum saponis compositum.

FREIN, Frænum—f. du Clitoris, Frænum clitoridis—f. de la Langue, Frænum linguæ—f. des Lèvres, Frænum laborium—f. de la Verge, Frænum penis.

FREINS DE LA VALVULE DE BAUHIN, Fræna of the valve of Bauhin.

FREINWALDE, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are in Brandenburg, twelve leagues from Berlin. They contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of lime, carbonates of lime and magnesia, iron, &c., and are used in asthenic diseases.

FRÉMISSEMENT, Shuddering.

FRÉMISSEMENT CATAIRE (F.), 'Cat's purr.' Purring Tremor. Laënnec has given this name to the agitation which is sensible to the hand, when applied on the præcordial region, and which he considers a sign of ossification or other contraction of the auriculo-ventricular openings. The name was chosen by him from the analogy of the sound to the purring of a cat.

FREMITUS, Bruissement, Frémissement, Shuddering.

The Pec'toral or Vocal Frem'itus, Pectoral Vibra'tion, Tactile vibration, is an obscure diffused resonance of the voice, which is felt when the hand is applied to the chest.

FRENA, Alveolus.

FRÊNE, Fraxinus excelsior—f. Épineux, Xanthoxylum clava Herculis.

FRENULUM, see Frænum.

FRENUM, Frænum.

FRET, Chafing, Herpes.

FRÉTILLEMENT, Fidgets.

FRICATIO, Friction.

FRICATORIUM, Liniment.

FRICĒ, Fricum, Frico'nium. A medicine which the ancients employed under the form of friction. They distinguish the Fricē siccum and F. mollē.—Gaubius.

FRICONIUM, Frice.

FRICTA, Colophonia.

FRICTIO, Friction—f. Humida, see Friction—f. Sicca, see Friction.

FRIC'TION, Fric'tio, Frica'tio, Anat'ribē, Anatrip'sis, Trypsis, Chirap'sia, from fricare, 'to rub.' The action of rubbing a part of the surface of the body more or less forcibly, with the hands, a brush, flannel, &c., constituting Xerotrib'ia, Xerotrip'sis, Fric'tio sicca or dry friction; or with ointments, liniments, tinctures, &c., constituting moist friction, Fric'tio hu'mida. It is a useful means for exciting the action of the skin.

FRICTRIX, Tribade.

FRICTUM, Liniment.

FRICUM, Frice.

FRIGEFACIENTIA, Refrigerants.

FRIGID, Frig''idus, (F.) Froid: same etymon as Frigidity. Cold. Not easily moved to sexual desire; Imbel'lis ad ven'erem. Impotent.

FRIGIDARIUM, Bath, cold.

FRIGID'ITY, Frigid'itas, from frigidum, 'cold.' A sensation of cold. Also, impotence, and sterility. Frigidity of the stomach is a state of debility of that organ, imputed to excessive venery,—the Anorex'ia exhausto'rum of Sauvages.

FRIGIDUS, Frigid.

FRIGORIF'IC, from frigus, 'cold,' and fio, 'I make. That which has the power of producing cold. The best FRIGORIFIC MIXTURES are the following. Their effects are owing to the rapid absorption of heat when solids pass into the liquid state.

FRIGORIFIC MIXTURES WITH SNOW.

| Mixtures. | Therm. falls. |
|---|---|
| Snow, or pounded ice, two parts by weight; / Chloride of Sodium..... 1. | From any temperature. to—5° |
| Snow or pounded ice..... 5. / Chloride of Sodium..... 2. / Mur. of Ammonia..... 1. | to—12° |

FRIGUS, Cold—f. Tenue, see Rigor.

FRISSON, Rigor.

FRISSONNEMENT, Horripilation.

FROGLEAF, Brasenia Hydropeltis.

FROG TONGUE, Ranula.

FROGS' SPAWN, Sperma ranarum.

FROID, Cold, Frigid—f. Glacial, Ice-cold.

FROISSEMENT, (F.) 'Rubbing, bruising.'

FROISSEMENT PULMONAIRE, Bruit de froissement pulmonaire, Pulmonary crumpling sound. A name given by M. Fournet to a respiratory sound, which communicates to the ear the sensation of the rubbing (froissement) of a texture compressed against a hard body. It is by no means well defined.

FRÔLEMENT, (F.) 'Grazing or touching lightly.'

FRÔLEMENT PÉRICARDIQUE, Bruit de frôlement péricardique. Rustling noise of the pericardium. A sound resembling that produced by the crumpling of a piece of parchment or of thick silken stuff, accompanying the systole and diastole of the heart. It indicates roughness of the pericardium induced by disease.

FROMAGE, Cheese.

FROMENT, Triticum.

FRONCEMENT, Corrugation.

FRONCLE, Furunculus.

FRONDE, Funda.

FRONT, Frons, Meto'pon, Forehead, Brow. That part of the visage, which extends from one temple to the other, and is comprised in a vertical direction, between the roots of the hair and the superciliary ridges.

FRONTAL, Fronta'lis. Relating or belonging to the front. This name has been given to several parts. Winslow, Sömmering, and others, call the anterior part of the occipito-frontalis—the frontal muscle or fronta'lis, Musculo'sa Frontis Cutem movens substan'tia Par (Vesalius).

FRONTAL ARTERY, A. supra-orbita'lis, is given off by the ophthalmic, which is itself a branch of the internal carotid. It makes its exit from the skull at the upper part of the base of the orbit, and ascends the forehead between the bone and the orbicularis palpebrarum; dividing into three or four branches, which are distributed to the neighbouring muscles.

FRONTAL BONE, Os frontis, Os corona'lē, Os inverecun'dum, Meto'pon, Os puppis, Os Ratio'nis. A double bone in the fœtus, single in the adult, situate at the base of the cranium, and at the superior part of the face. It forms the vault of the orbit; lodges the ethmoid bone in a notch at its middle part; and is articulated, besides, with the sphenoid, parietal, and nasal bones, the ossa unguis, superior maxillary, and malar bones.

FRONTAL FURROW extends upwards from the frontal spine, and becomes gradually larger in its course, to lodge the upper part of the superior longitudinal sinus, and to give attachment to the falx cerebri.

FRONTAL NERVE, Palpēbro-frontal—(Ch.,) is the greatest of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve,—the first division of the 5th pair. It proceeds along the superior paries of the orbit, and divides into two branches:—the one, internal, which makes its exit from the orbitar fossa, passing beneath the pulley of the oblique muscle:—the other, external, issuing from the same cavity, by the foramen orbitarium superius.

FRONTAL PROTU'BERANCE, Frontal tuberos'ity, Tuber fronta'lē, Suggrun'dium supercilio'rum. The protuberance of the frontal bone above the superciliary arch.

FRONTAL SI'NUSES, Fronta'les Sinus, Metopan'tra, Prosopan'tra, Sinus Supercilia'res, S. pituita'rii frontis, Cavern'æ frontis, are two deep cavities in the substance of the frontal bone, separated from each other by a medium septum, and opening, below, into the anterior cells of the ethmoid bone.

FRONTAL SPINE, Crista inter'na, is situate in the middle of the under part of the bone, and is formed by the coalescence of the inner tables for the attachment of the falx cerebri.

Surgeons have given the name FRONTA'LIS to a bandage or topical application to the forehead. Such have, also, been called τρομετωπιδια and ανακολλημαται.

FRONTAL TUBEROSITY, Frontal protuberance.

FRONTA'LĒ, from frons, 'the forehead.' A medicine applied to the forehead.

FRONTALIS ET OCCIPITALIS, Occipito-frontalis.

FRONTALIS VERUS, Corrugator supercilii.

FRONTODYMIA, see Cephalodymia.

FRONTO-ETHMOID FORAMEN, Cæcum foramen—f. Nasal, Pyramidalis nasi—f. Sourcilier, Corrugator supercilii.

FROSTBITE, Congelation.

FROSTWEED, Erigeron Philadelphicum, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROSTWORT, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROTH'Y, from Gr. αφρος, 'froth.' (?) Spumo'sus, (F.) Spumeux, Écumeux, Mousseux. An epithet given to the fæces or sputa, when mixed with air.

FROTTEMENT, see Bruit de frottement.

FROTTEMENT GLOBULAIRE. A name given by M. Simonnet, to the pulse in aortic regurgitation, when it is jerking, and, in well marked cases, appears as if the blood consisted of several little masses, which passed in succession under the finger applied to the artery.

FRUCTIFICATIO, Fecundation.

FRUCTUS HORÆI, Fruit, (summer)—f. Immaturus, Abortion.

FRUGIV'OROUS, Frugiv'orus, from fruges, 'fruits,' and voro, 'I eat.' One that eats fruits.

FRUIT, Fructus, from frui, 'to enjoy.' Carpos. In botany, the seed with its enclosing pericarp. In a medical sense it may be defined to be:—that part of a plant which is taken as food. The effects of fruits on the body, in a medical as well as a dietetical point of view, are various. They may be distinguished into classes: for, whilst the Cerealia, for example, afford fruits, which are highly nutritious, the Summer Fruits (Fructus Horæ'i,) which include strawberries, cherries, currants, mulberries, raspberries, figs, grapes, &c., are refrigerant and grateful, but afford little nourishment.

FRUIT-SUGAR, Glucose.

FRUMENT, Fru'menty, Fur'menty, from frumentum, 'wheat' or 'grain,' quasi frugimentum; from fruges, 'fruit.' Pottage made of wheat. Food made of wheat boiled in milk.

FRUMEN'TUM. Same etymon. Sitos. Any kind of grain from which bread was made;—especially wheat.

FRUMENTUM, Triticum—f. Corniculatum, Ergot—f. Cornutum, Ergot—f. Luxurians, Ergot—f. Temulentum, Ergot—f. Turgidum, Ergot.

FRUSTRATOIRE, (F.) Any liquor, taken a short time after eating, for the purpose of assisting digestion when difficult. Sugared water. eau sucrée, or water with the addition of a little brandy, or some aromatic substance, is commonly used for this purpose.

FRUTEX BACCIFER BRAZILIENSIS, Caaghivuyo—f. Indicus spinosus, Cara schulli.

FUCUS, F. vesiculosus, Paint.

FUCUS AMYLA'CEUS, Jaffna Moss, Ed'ible Moss, Ceylon Moss, Ploca'ria can'dida, Gracila'ria lichenoï'des, Sphærococ'cus lichenoï'des, Gigarti'na lichenoï'des, Fucus lichenoï'des, Marine Moss. This moss belongs to the natural order Algæ. It was introduced some years ago into England, from India. It is white, filiform and fibrous, and has the usual odour of sea-weeds. Its medical properties are similar to those of Irish moss.

FUCUS, BLADDER, F. vesiculosus.

FUCUS CRISPUS, Lichen Carrageen, Chondrus,

Ch. crispus, Sphærococ'cus crispus, Ulva crispa, Chondrus polymor'phus, Irish moss, Carrageen or Corrigeen moss, (F.) Mousse d'Irlande, M. perlée. This Fucus, of the Natural Family Algæ, is found on the coasts of England, Ireland, Western France, Spain, and Portugal, and as far as the tropics. It is also a native of the United States. In Ireland, it is used by the poor as an article of diet. As met with in America, it is of a light yellow colour, and resembles plates of horn, crisped and translucent. An agreeable jelly is obtained from it by boiling it in water or milk, which forms a good article of diet in consumptive cases. Its properties are indeed exactly like those of the Iceland Moss.

Fucus Helminthocorton, Corallina Corsicana — f. Inflatus, F. vesiculosus — f. Lichenoides, F. amylaceus — f. Saccharine, Rhodomela palmata.

Fucus Vesiculo'sus, F. infla'tus, Hal'idrys vesiculo'sa, Quercus Mari'na, Fucus, Bladder Fucus, Sea Oak, Sea Wrack, Yellow Bladder Wrack, (F.) Varec vésiculeux, Chêne marin. It has been said to be a useful assistant to sea-water, in the cure of disorders of the glands. When the wrack, in fruit, is dried, cleaned, exposed to a red-heat in a crucible with a perforated lid, and is reduced to powder, it forms the Æ'thiops vegetab'ilis— the Pulvis Quercûs Mari'næ of the Dublin Pharmacopœia—which is used, like the burnt sponge, in bronchocele and other scrofulous swellings. Its efficacy depends on the iodine it contains. Dose, gr. x to ℈ij, mixed in molasses or honey. See Soda.

FUGA DÆMONUM, Hypericum perforatum.

FUGA'CIOUS, Fugax, from fugere, 'to fly.' An epithet given to certain symptoms, which appear and disappear almost immediately afterwards; as a fugacious redness,—a fugacious swelling, Tumor fugax, &c.

FUGAX, Fugacious.

FUGE, from fugo, 'I expel,' 'an expeller.' A common suffix. Hence, Febrifuge, Vermifuge, &c.

FU'GILE, Fugil'la. This term has several acceptations. It means, 1. The cerumen of the ear. 2. The nebulous suspension in, or deposition from, the urine. 3. An abscess near the ear.—Ruland and Johnson. 4. Abscess in general.

FUGILLA, Fugile.

FULGUR, Astrape.

FULIG''INOUS, Fuligino'sus, Lignyo'des, (F.) Fuligineux, from fuligo, 'soot.' Having the colour of soot. An epithet given to certain parts, as the lips, teeth, or tongue, when they assume a brownish colour, or rather, are covered with a coat of that colour.

FULI'GO, Lignys, Soot, (F.) Suie, &c. Woodsoot, Fuligo Ligni, consists of volatile alkaline salt, empyreumatic oil, fixed alkali, &c. A tincture, Tinctu'ra Fulig''inis, prepared from it, has been recommended as a powerful antispasmodic in hysterical cases. (Fulig. lign. ℥ij; potass. subcarb. ℔ss; ammon. muriat. ℥j; aquæ fluviat. Oiij. Digest for three days.) This tincture bears the name Soot drops and Fit drops. An ointment of soot has been used in various cutaneous diseases.

Fuligo Alba Philosophorum, Ammoniæ murias.

FULIGO'KALI, from fuligo, 'soot,' and kali, 'potassa.' This is an analogous preparation to anthrakokali; soot being used in the place of coal. It is employed in the same diseases. What might be regarded as a weak solution of fuligokali has been used for many years in Philadelphia, under the names medical lye, soot tea, alkaline solution, and dyspeptic lye.

FULLERS' EARTH, Cimolia purpurescens.

FULMEN, Astrape.

FULMICOTON, see Collodion.

FULNESS, Reple'tio, Plen'itude, Plethor'a, Reple'tion. The state of being filled. Also, a feeling of weight or distention in the stomach or other part of the system.

FUMA'RIA, Fuma'ria officina'lis seu media, Fumus terræ, Capnos, Herba melancholif'uga, Fu'mitory, Common Fu'mitory, Fumiter'ra, Sola'men Scabioso'rum, (F.) Fumeterre. The leaves are extremely succulent, and have a bitter, somewhat saline, taste. The infusion of the dried leaves and the expressed juice of the fresh plant have been extolled for their property of clearing the skin of many disorders of the leprous kind.

Fuma'ria Bulbo'sa, F. cava seu major, Borckhausen'ia cava, Capnoï'des cava, Aristolachi'a faba'cea seu cava seu vulga'ris rotun'da, Coryd'alis bulbo'sa seu cava seu tubero'sa, Capnor'chis. The root of this plant was formerly given as an emmenagogue and anthelmintic. (F.) Fumeterre bulbeuse.

Fumaria Cava, F. bulbosa — f. Major, F. bulbosa—f. Media, Fumaria—f. Officinalis, Fumaria.

FUMETERRE, Fumaria.

FUMIGATIO, Fumigation — f. Antiloimica Gaubii, see Disinfection — f. Guytoniensis, see Disinfection—f. Smythiana, see Disinfection.

FUMIGA'TION, Fumiga'tio, from fumus, 'smoke.' Suffi'tus, Suffit''io, Suffumina'tio, Suffumig''ium, Suffimen'tum, Apocapnis'mus, Thymia'ma, Epithymia'ma, Hypothymia'ma, Hypothymia'sis, Thymia'sis, Capnis'mos, Hypocapnis'mos, Hypat'mus, Hypatmis'mus, Anathymia'sis. An operation, the object of which is to fill a circumscribed space with gas or vapour; with the intention either of purifying the air, of perfuming it, or of charging it with a substance proper for acting upon a part of the surface of the human body. Hence, fumigations have been distinguished into aqueous, aromatic, sulphureous, mercurial, disinfecting, Guytonian, &c. Benzoin generally constitutes the chief ingredient in the Fumigating Pastilles, to which any variety of odoriferous substances may be added. The following is one formula:

℞. Benzoin. ℥j; cascarillæ, ℥ss; myrrh. ℈j; ol. myrist., ol. caryoph. āā gtt. x; potassæ nitrat. ℥ss; carbon. lign. ℥vj; mucil. trag. q. s.

Fumigation, Chlorine, see Disinfection — f. Nitrous, see Disinfection — f. Oxymuriatic, see Disinfection.

FUMITERRA, Fumaria.

FUMITORY, Fumaria.

FUMUS ALBUS, Hydrargyrum—f. Citrinus, Sulphur—f. Terræ, Fumaria.

FUNAMBULA'TIO, from funis, 'a cord,' and ambulare, 'to walk.' An exercise with the ancients, which consisted in scaling ropes.

FUNC'TION, Func'tio, Ac'tio, (F.) Fonction; from fungor, 'I act,' 'perform.' The action of an organ or system of organs. Any act, necessary for accomplishing a vital phenomenon. A function is a special office in the animal economy, which has as its instrument, an organ or apparatus of organs. Thus, respiration is a function. Its object is the conversion of venous into arterial blood, and its instrument is the lungs. The ancient physiologists divided the functions into vital, animal, and natural. They called vital functions those which are essential to life, as innervation, circulation, respiration; animal functions, those which belong to the encephalon; viz.: the functions of the intellect, the affections of the mind, and the voluntary motions; and natural functions, Faculta'tes seu Actio'nes natura'les, those relating to assimilation, such as the actions of the abdominal viscera, of the absorbent and exhalant vessels, &c. Bichat divided the functions into those which relate to the preservation of the individual, and those that relate to the preservation of the species. The former be subdivided into animal and organic. The animal functions or functions of relation are those of the intellect, sensation, locomotion, and voice. The organic functions include digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, secretion, nutrition, and calorification. The functions, whose object is the preservation of the species—the organic, nutritive, or vegetative functions—are all those that relate to generation; — such as conception, gestation, accouchement, &c. Each of these admits of numerous subdivisions in a complete course of Physiology;—for so the doctrine of the functions is called.

FUNCTIONAL DISEASES, see Organic Diseases.

FUNDA, Sphen'donē, (F.) Fronde. A bandage, composed of a fillet or long compress, cleft at its extremities to within about two inches of its middle. It is used in diseases of the nose and chin, and especially in cases of fracture of the lower jaw. In such case it has, also, been called Mentonnière, because placed beneath the chin; from (F.) Menton, 'the chin.'

FUNDAMENT, Anus—f. Falling down of the, Proctocele.

FUNDAMEN'TAL, from fundare, 'to lie deeply.' Some anatomists have called the sacrum Os Fundamenta'lē, because it seems to serve as a base to the vertebral column. The sphenoid bone has likewise been so denominated, from its being situate at the base of the cranium.

FUNDUS, (F.) Fond. The base of any organ which ends in a neck, or has an external aperture; as the Fundus vesicæ, F. uteri, &c. Also, the Vulva.

Fundus Vaginæ, Laquear vaginæ.

FUNES CORDIS, Columnæ carneæ—f. Semicirculares, Semicircular canals.

FUNGIFORM PAPILLÆ, see Papillæ of the Tongue.

FUN'GOID, Fungoï'des, Myco'des, Fungifor'mis, Fun'giform, (F.) Fongoïde, Fongiforme, from fungus, 'a mushroom,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' That which has the shape of, or grows in some measure like a mushroom, as the fungoid or fungiform papillæ of the tongue.

Fungoid Disease, Encephaloid.

FUNGOS'ITY, Fungos'itas, Caro luxu'rians, C. fungo'sa, Ecsarco'ma, Proud Flesh, Hypsersarco'ma, Hypersarco'sis, (F.) Fongosité. The quality of that which is fungous: — fungous excrescence, Excrescen'tia fungo'sa. The fungosities which arise in wounds or ulcers are easily repressed by gentle compression, dry lint, the sulphas cupri, or other gentle caustics. At times, the more powerful are necessary, and sometimes excision is required.

FUNGUS, Myces, (F.) Fongus, Champignon. The mushroom order of plants; class Cryptogamia, in the Linnæan system. In Pathology, the word is commonly used synonymously with fungosity, myco'sis. M. Breschet has proposed to restrict the term fungosity to vegetations which arise on denuded surfaces, and to apply the term fungus to the tumours which form in the substance of the textures, without any external ulceration. Fici and warts, for example, would be fungi of the skin.

Fungus Albus Saligneus, Dædalea suaveolens—f. Articuli, Spina ventosa—f. Bleeding, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Cancrosus hæmatodes, Hæmatodes F.—f. Cancrosus medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebralis, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebri, Encephalocele—f. Chirurgorum, Lycoperdon—f. Cynosbati, Bedeguar—f. Hæmatodes, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Igniarius, Boletus igniarius—f. Laricis, Boletus laricis—f. of Malta, Cynomorion coccineum—f. Medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Melanodes, Melanosis—f. Melitensis, Cynomorion coccineum—f. Petræus marinus, Umbilicus marinus—f. Quercinus, Boletus igniarius—f. Rosarum, Bedeguar—f. Salicis, Dædalea suaveolens—f. Sambucinus, Peziza auricula.

FUNIC BELLOWS' SOUND, see Bellows' Sound, funic.

FUNIC'ULI GRAC''ILES, Poste'rior Mc'dian Columns or Fascic'uli of the medul'la oblonga'ta. Along the posterior border of each corpus restiforme, and separated from it by a groove, is a narrow white cord, separated from its fellow by the fissura longitudinalis posterior. The pair of cords are the funiculi graciles. Each funiculus forms an enlargement—processus clavatus—at its upper end, and is then lost in the corpus restiforme.

Funic'uli Sil'iquæ. Longitudinal fibres seen in the groove which separates the corpus olivare from the corpus pyramidale and corpus restiforme. They enclose the base of the corpus olivare,—those which lie on its inner side forming the funic'ulus inter'nus; and those on its outer side the funiculus externus.

FUNICULUS, Cord—f. Externus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Internus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Spermaticus, Spermatic cord—f. Tympani, Chorda tympani.

Funic'ulus Umbilicalis, Funis umbilica'lis, Intestin'ulum, Vin'culum umbilica'lē, Umbilical cord, Navel string, diminutive of Funis, 'a cord.' (F.) Cordon ombilicale. A cord-like substance, which extends from the placenta to the umbilicus of the fœtus. It is composed of the chorion, amnion, an albuminous secretion called the Jelly of the Cord, cellular substance, an umbilical vein, and two umbilical arteries. The former conveys the blood from the placenta to the fœtus — the latter return it. All these parts are surrounded by a sheath — Investitu'ra seu Vagi'na funic'uli umbilica'lis. Its usual length is from 16 to 22 inches.

Funiculus Varicosus, Cirsocele.

FUNIS, Cord, Laqueus—f. Argenteus, Medulla spinalis—f. Hippocratis, Achillis tendo—f. Umbilicalis, Funiculus umbilicalis.

FUNNEL, see Infundibulum.

FUR, Enduit.

FURCELLA, Fur'cula; diminutive of furca, 'a fork.' The upper part of the sternum, the clavicle. The Fourchette.

Furcella Inferior, Xiphoid cartilage.

FURCHMUHL, MINERAL WATERS OF. These Bavarian springs contain carbonic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, carbonates of lime and soda; chlorides of lime and magnesium, oxides of iron and magnesium, &c.

FURCILLA, Fourchette.

FURCULA, Furcella, Clavicle, Fourchette.

FUREUR UTÉRINE, Nymphomania.

FURFUR, Bran, Pit'yron, Ach'yron, Apobras'ma, Lemma, Cantabru'no, (F.) Son. The decoction is sometimes employed as an emollient.

FURFURA, Scarf.

FURFURA'CEOUS, from furfur, 'bran.' Scurfy, Canica'ceous, Pithyri'nus, Pityroïdes, Pityro'des. Resembling bran. A name given to eruptions, in which the epidermis is detached in small scales resembling bran. Also, a bran-like sediment observed at times in the urine;—Urina furfura'cea, Sedimen'tum Uri'næ pityroïdes.

FURFURATIO, Porrigo, Pityriasis.

FURFURISCA, Pityriasis.

FU'RIA INFERNA'LIS. A kind of vermiform insect, scarcely two lines long, common in Sweden, which flies about and stings both man and animals, exciting the most excruciating torture.

FURIBUNDUS, Maniodes.

FURIOSUS, Maniodes.

FURIOUS, Maniodes.

FURMENTY, Frument.

FURNAS, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal chalybeate water in St. Michael's, Azores, which contains carbonic acid, and carbonate of iron.

FURONCLE, Furunculus.

FURONCLE GUÊPIER. A malignant boil, Wasp's nest boil, which generally attacks the nape and region of the neck, and rarely others than old people. Hence it has been called Old People's boil.

FUROR, Mania—f. Brevis, Rage—f. Mania, Mania—f. Uterinus, Nymphomania.

FURROW, MENTO-LABIAL, see Mento-labial furrow.

FURUNCULI ATONICI, Ecthyma—f. Ventriculus, see Furunculus.

FURUN'CULUS, from furiare, 'to make mad.' Chi'adus, Chi'oli, Doth'ien, Dothion, Furun'culus suppurato'rius, F. Verus, F. benig'nus, Phyma furun'culus, Absces'sus nuclea'tus, a furuncle, a boil, a bile. (F.) Furoncle, Froncle, Clou. A small phlegmon, which appears under the form of a conical, hard, circumscribed tumour, having its seat in the dermoid texture. At the end of an uncertain period, it becomes pointed, white or yellow, and gives exit to pus mixed with blood. When it breaks, a small, grayish, fibrous mass sometimes appears, which consists of dead areolar tissue. This is called the Core, Sctfast, Ventric'ulus seu Nucleus Furun'culi, (F.) Bourbillon. The abscess does not heal until after its separation. The indications of treatment are,—to discuss by the application of leeches and warm fomentations;—or, if this cannot be done, to encourage suppuration by warm, emollient cataplasms. When suppuration is entirely established, the part may be opened or suffered to break, according to circumstances.

FURUNCULUS GANGRÆNOSUS, Anthrax—f. Malignus, Anthrax.

FUSÉE PURULENTE, (F.) The long and sinuous route which pus takes, in certain cases, in making its way to the surface. These Fusées almost always form beneath the skin between the muscles; or along aponeuroses, bones, tendons, &c.

FUSEL OIL, see Oil, fusel.

FUSIBLE, see Fusion.

FUSIBILITY, see Fusion.

FUSION, Fu'sio, Melting, Liquefaction; from fundere, fusum, 'to melt.' In chymistry, the transition of a solid body into a liquid by the aid of heat. Substances capable of such transition are said to be fusible; or to be possessed of fusibility.

FUSTIC TREE, Cladastris tinctoria.

FUTUTOR, Tribade.

G.

THE Greek G, Γ, with the ancient Greek physicians, signified an ounce.—Rhod. ad Scribonium.

GABALLA, Cabal.

GABELLA, Mesophryon.

GABIR'EA, γαβιρεα. A fatty kind of myrrh, mentioned by Dioscorides.

GÆOPHAGIA, Geophagism.

GÆOPH'AGUS, from γαια, 'earth,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' One who eats earth.

GAGEL, Myrica gale.

GAGUE SANG, Caque-sang.

GAHET, Cagot.

GAÏAC, Guaiacum.

GAILLET ACCROCHANT, Galium aparine—g. Crochant, Galium aparine—g. Jaune, Galium verum—g. Vrai, Galium verum.

GAÎNE, Vagina or sheath—g. de l'Apophyse styloïde, Vaginal process of the temporal bone—g. de la veine porte, Vagina or sheath of the vena porta.

GALA, γαλα, genitive γαλακτος, milk; hence:

GALACTACRA'SIA, from γαλα, 'milk,' and ακρασια, 'imperfect mixture.' A morbid mixture or constitution of the milk.

GALACTACRATIA, Galactia.

GALACTÆ'MIA, from γαλα, γαλακτος, 'milk,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' A condition of the blood in which it contains milk.

GALACTAGOGA, Galactopoietica

GALACTAPOSTEMA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALAC'TIA, Galactirrhœ'a, Galactorrhœ'a, from γαλα, 'milk.' Lactis redundan'tia, Polygalac'tia, Galactoze'mia. A redundant flow of milk, either in a female who is suckling, or in one who is not. It may occur without being provoked by suckling. When to a great extent, it sometimes causes wasting; Tabes lac'tea, T. nutri'cum. Dr. Good uses Galac'tia, in his Nosology, for 'morbid flow or deficiency of milk,' Galactacrati'a.

GALACTICUS, Lactic.

GALACTIFER, Galactophorous.

GALACTINE, Casein.

GALACTINUS, Lactic.

GALACTIRRHŒA, Galactia.

GALACTIS, Galaxias.

GALACTIS'CHESIS, Galactos'chesis, Lactis reten'tio, from γαλα, 'milk,' and ισχειν, 'to restrain.' Retention or suppression of milk.

GALACTITES, Galaxias.

GALACTOCATARACTA, Cataract, milky.

GALACTO'DES, from γαλα, 'milk,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' In Hippocrates, the term signifies milkwarm, and likewise a milky colour, as of the urine—uri'na galacto'des.

GALACTODIÆ'TA, Diæ'ta lac'tea, from γαλα, 'milk,' and διαιτα, 'diet.' A milk diet.

GALACTODIARRHŒA, Cœliac Flux.

GALACTOGANGLION, Milk knot.

GALACTOHÆ'MIA, Galacthæ'mia, from γαλα, 'milk,' and 'αιμα, 'blood:' Lactis sanguinolen'ti Excre'tio. The secretion of bloody or bloodlike milk.

GALACTOMASTOPARECTOMA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALACTOM'ETER, Lactom'eter, from γαλα, 'milk,' and μετρον, 'measure.' An instrument for appreciating the quantity of cream in milk. It is a kind of graduated separatory or éprouvette—the degrees on the scale indicating the thickness of the layer of cream that forms on the surface of the milk.

GALACTON'CUS, Tumor lac'teus, from γαλα, 'milk,' and ογκος, 'a swelling.' A milk tumour.

GALACTOPH'AGOUS, Galactoph'agus, Lactiv'orus, sometimes used substantively; from γαλα, 'milk,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' That which feeds on milk. A name given to certain people, with whom milk appears to constitute the chief nourishment.

GALACTOPHORA, Galactopoietica.

GALACTOPH'OROUS, Galac'tifer, Lac'tifer, Lactif'erous, from γαλα, 'milk,' and φερω, 'I carry.' That which carries milk.

GALACTOPH'OROUS or LACTIF'EROUS DUCTS, are those which convey the milk, secreted by the mammary gland, towards the nipple, where their external orifices are situate. The Lacteals have also been so called.

GALACTOPH'ORUS. Some accoucheurs have given this name to an instrument intended to facilitate sucking, when the faulty conformation of the nipple prevents the child from laying hold of it.

GALACTOPH'YGUS, from γαλα, 'milk,' and φευγειν, 'to shun.' That which arrests or disperses the secretion of milk. Hence Galactoph'yga Medicamen'ta.

GALACTOPLA'NIA, Mctas'tasis seu Aberra'tio seu Viæ extraördina'riæ lactis, Galactorrhœ'a erro'nea, from γαλα, 'milk,' and πλανη, 'wandering.' Extravasation of milk into the areolar membrane. Secretion of milk elsewhere than from the breasts.

GALACTOPLERO'SIS, from γαλα, 'milk,' and πληρωσις, 'repletion.' Redundance of milk.

GALACTOPOEA, Galactopoietica.

GALACTOPOESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPOIESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPOIET'ICA, Galactoph'ora, Galactago'ga, Galactopoe'a, from γαλα, 'milk,' and ποιεω, 'I make.' Substances, to which has been attributed the property of favouring the secretion of milk and augmenting its quantity.

GALACTOPO'SIA, from γαλα, 'milk,' and ποσις, 'drink.' The drinking of milk. Treatment of a disease by means of milk.

GALACTOP'OTES, Galactop'otus, Lacti'potor. Same etymon. A drinker of milk. One subjected to a milk diet.

GALACTOPYRA, Fever, milk.

GALACTOPYRETUS, Fever, milk.

GALACTORRHŒA, Galactia — g. Erronea, Galactoplania — g. Saccharata, Saccharorrhœa lactea.

GALACTOSACCHARUM, Saccharum lactis.

GALACTOSCHESIS, Galactischesis.

GALACTO'SIS, Galactopoie'sis, Galactopoe'sis, Secre'tio lactis, from γαλακτομαι, 'I am changed into milk.' The secretion or formation of milk.

GALACTOTROPHĒ, Galactotroph'ia, from γαλα, 'milk,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Nourishment by means of milk.

GALACTOZE'MIA, from γαλα, 'milk,' and ζημια, 'loss.' Loss of milk. Also, Galactia.

GALACTU'CHOS, from γαλα, 'milk,' and εχειν, 'to have.' Suckling. Giving milk.

GALACTURIA, Chyluria.

GALANGA, Maranta galanga.

GALANGAL, Maranta galanga.

GALANGALE, Cyperus longus.

GALARHŒUS LATHYRIS, Euphorbia lathyris—g. Palustris, Euphorbia palustris.

GALARIPS, Allamanda.

GALAXIA, Thoracic duct.

GALAX'IAS, Galacti'tes, Galac'tis. A milk stone. A stone supposed to be capable of promoting the secretion of milk.

GALBANUM, see Bubon galbanum—g. Longleaved, Bubon galbanum.

GAL'BULUS, from galbus, 'yellow.' A kind of congenital jaundice, in which the yellow colour continues through life. It is rather a defect in colour than a disease.—Vogel.

GALE, Myrica gale—g. Odorant, Myrica gale—g. Sweet, Myrica gale.

GALE, Psora—g. Canine, Psoriasis—g. Épidémique, Eczema—g. Miliaire, Psoriasis—g. Sèche, Lichen, Psoriasis.

GA'LEA. A helmet, from γαλη, 'a cat;' of the skin of which it was formerly made. A name given to the amnios, and, also, to the bandage of Galen. In Pathology, it indicates a headach affecting the whole head. See, also, Caul.

GALEA APONEUROT'ICA CAP'ITIS, Ga'lea tendin'ea Santori'ni, Ga'lea cap'itis, Membra'na epicra'nia. The tendinous expansion which unites the frontal and occipital portions of the occipito-frontalis muscle.

GALEAMAUROSIS, Amaurotic cat's eye.

GALEAN'CON, Galian'con, from γαλεα, 'a cat,' 'a weasel,' and αγκων, 'an elbow.' Muste-la'ncus. One who has two short arms.

GALEAN'THROPY, Galeanthro'pia, from γαλη, 'a cat,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man.' A variety of melancholy in which the patient believes himself changed into a cat. An affection similar to lycanthropy and cynanthropy.

GALE'GA, G. officina'lis seu vulga'ris seu Per'sica, Ruta capra'ria, Goat's Rue, (F.) Rue de chèvre, Faux Indigo. It is slightly aromatic, and was once used as a sudorific and alexiterial in malignant fevers, &c.

GALEGA PERSICA, Galega.

GALEGA VIRGINIA'NA, Tephro'sia Virginia'na, Turkey Pea, Hoary Pea, Devil's shoestrings, Virginia Goat's rue or cat-gut, is used in some parts of the United States as an anthelmintic. The decoction of the root is given.

GALEGA VULGARIS, Galega.

GALENE, Graphites.

GALENEA, Graphites.

GALEN'IC, Galen'ical, Galen'icus, Galc'nius, from Galenus. That which relates to the doctrine of Galen or to Galenism. Used, substantively, for drugs that are not chymical.

GALENIC MEDICINE, Galenism.

GA'LENISM, Galen'ic med'icine. The doctrine of Galen.

GA'LENIST, Galenis'ta, Galenis'tes. A follower of the doctrine of Galen.

GALENIUS, Galenic.

GALEOBDOLON, Galeopsis.

GALEOPDOLON, Galeopsis.

GALEOPSIS, Lamium album.

GALEOP'SIS, Galiop'sis, Galeob'dolon, Galeop'dolon, La'mium rubrum, Urti'ca iners magna fœtidis'sima, Stachys fœ'tida, Hedge nettle, (F.) Ortie morte des bois. This plant was formerly reckoned a vulnerary and anodyne.

GALEOPSIS ANGUSTIFOLIA, G. grandiflora—g. Dubia, G. grandiflora.

GALEOP'SIS GRANDIFLO'RA, G. Ochroleu'ca seu la'danum seu angustifo'lia seu du'bia seu prostra'ta seu villo'sa, Tetrahit longiflo'rum, G. Seg'etum, Herba Sideri'tidis. This plant is regarded in Germany as a bitter resolvent. It is the basis, also, of a celebrated nostrum, the Blankenheimer Tea, called, likewise, Lieber's pectoral and phthisical herbs (Liebersche Brust oder Auszehrungs-Krauter,) which has enjoyed great repute in pectoral complaints. The tops of the plant are given in decoction, (℥j, boiled in a pint of water for a quarter of an hour.) This quantity to be taken in a day.

GALEOPSIS LADANUM, G. grandiflora—g. Ochroleuca, G. grandiflora—g. Prostrata, G. grandiflora—g. Segetum, G. grandiflora.

Galeop'sis Versic'olor, is possessed of the same virtues.

Galeopsis Villosa, G. grandiflora.

GALEROPIA, Oxyopia.

GA'LIA. An ancient composition, in which galls were an ingredient; the Galia pura. There was, also, a Galia aromat'ica, moscha'ta vel musca'ta, which consisted of a mixture of several perfumes, such as musk.

GALIANCON, Galeancon.

GALIOPSIS, Galeopsis.

GALIPÆA FEBRIFUGA, Cusparia febrifuga—g. Officinalis, see Cusparia febrifuga.

GALIPOT, see Pinus sylvestris.

GA'LIUM, Gal'lium, (from γαλα, 'milk,' because some species curdle milk.) G. verum.

Galium Album, G. Mollugo.

Ga'lium Apari'nē, G. infest'um seu aparinoï'des seu brachycarp'on seu scaber'rimum, Valan'tia apari'nē, Apari'nē his'pida, Aparinē, Lappa, Philanthro'pus, Ampelocar'pus, Omphalocar'pus, Ixus, Asphari'nē, Asper'ula, Goose-grass, Cleaver's bees, Cleavers, Goose-share, Hayriff. Family, Rubiaceæ. Sex. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia. (F.) Gaillet accrochant, G. crochant, Gratteron. The expressed juice has been given as an aperient diuretic in incipient dropsies; also, in cancer.

Galium Aparanoides, G. aparine.

Ga'lium Asprellum, Rough bed-straw, Rough ladies' bed-straw: indigenous; has the diuretic properties of most of its genus.

Galium Brachycarpon, G. aparine — g. Caucasicum, G. verum.

Galium Circæ'zans, Wild Liquorice, Master of the Woods. An indigenous plant, which flowers from June to August. It is demulcent and diuretic, and is a popular domestic remedy.

Galium Infeste, G. aparine — g. Luteum, G. verum.

Galium Mollu'go, Galium album seu Tyrolen'sē, Greater ladies' bed-straw, Alys'sum Plin'ii, (F.) Caillelait blanc. The herb and flowers have been used, medicinally, in epilepsy.

Galium Odoratum, Asperula odorata—g. Scaberrimum, G. aparine.

Ga'lium Tincto'rum, an American species, closely allied in properties to G. verum.

Galium Tyrolense, G. mollugo—g. Tuberculatum, g. Verum.

Ga'lium Verum, Ga'lium, G. lu'teum seu Cauca'sicum seu tubercula'tum, Ladies' bed-straw, Cheese-rennet, Bed-straw, Cleavewort, Goose-grass, Savoyan, Clabber-grass, Milksweet, Poor Robin, Gravel-grass, (F.) Gaillet jaune, G. vrai, Vrai Caillelait. The tops were used in the cure of epilepsy. The leaves and flowers possess the property of curdling milk.

GALL, Bile, see Eczema impetiginodes, Quercus infectoria, and Vitrum — g. of the earth, Prenanthes — g. Nut, see Quercus infectoria — g. of the Ox, see Bile—g. Sickness, Fever, Walcheren—g. Turkey, see Quercus infectoria.

GALL-BLADDER, Vesic'ula fellis, Chol'ecyst, Cholcys'tis, Follic'ulus fellis, Cystis fel'lea, Vesi'ca fellea, Vesic'ula bilis. Vesi'ca bilia'ria, Follic'ulus fel'leus, Cystis choled'ochus, (F.) Vésicule du fiel ou Vésicule biliaire, Réservoir de la bile. A membranous, pyriform reservoir, lodged in a superficial depression at the inferior surface of the right lobe of the liver. It receives, by the hepatic and cystic ducts, a portion of the bile secreted by the liver, when the stomach is empty, which becomes in it more acrid, bitter, and thick. It receives an artery, called the cystic. Its veins empty into the vena porta. Its nerves come from the hepatic plexus, and its lymphatic vessels join those of the liver.

GALLA, see Quercus infectoria — g. Maxima Orbiculata, see Quercus infectoria.

GALLÆ QUERCÛS, see Quercus infectoria—g. Tinctoriæ, see Quercus infectoria—g. Turcicæ, see Quercus infectoria.

GALLATURA, Molecule.

GALLI GALLINACEI CAPUT, Gallinaginis caput.

GALLINAG''INIS CAPUT, Galli gallina'cei Caput, Caput gallina'ceum, Verumonta'num, Crista urethra'lis, Crête uréthrale, — (Ch.,) from Gallinago, 'a woodcock.' An oblong, rounded projection, formed by the mucous membrane in the spongy portion of the urethra, at the sides of which the ejaculatory ducts open.

GAL'LIPOT. Perhaps from gala, 'finery.' (?) A pot painted and glazed or merely glazed, and commonly used to hold medicines.

GALLITRICHUM, Salvia sclarea.

GALLIUM, Galium.

GALLSTONES, Calculi, biliary.

GALLUS, Eunuch.

GALREDA, Gelatin.

GALVANISATION, Galvanization.

GAL'VANISM, Galvanis'mus, Electric''itas anima'lis, E. Galvan'ica vel metal'lica, Irritamen'tum metallo'rum vel metal'licum, Vol'taism, Volta'ic or Chemical or Contact Electricity. A series of phenomena, consisting in sensible movements, executed by animal parts, which are endowed with irritability, when placed in connexion with two metallic plates of different nature, between which a communication is established by direct contact or by means of a metallic wire. Galvanism has been employed medicinally in the same cases as electricity, and especially in neuralgic affections. It is often applied in the form of plates,—"Mansford's plates." In asthma, for example, a small blister, the size of a dollar, may be placed on the neck over the course of the phrenic and pneumogastric nerves, and another on the side, in the region of the diaphragm. One metal is placed mediately or immediately over the vesicated surface on the neck, and another over that in the side. They are then connected by means of a wire. The new nervous impression, in this way induced, is often signally beneficial.

GALVANIZATION, Galvanisa'tio, (F.) Galvanisation. The act of affecting with galvanism.

GALVANOPUNCTURE, Electropuncture.

GANGLIAR, Ganglionic.

GANG'LIFORM, Gang'lioform, Ganglifor'mis. Having the shape of a ganglion. A name generally given to a knot-like enlargement, in the course of a nerve.

GANGLIOLUM, Diminutive of ganglion. A small ganglion.

GANG'LION, Gang'lium, 'a knot.' A name given to organs differing considerably from each other in size, colour, texture, functions, &c. They are divided into glandiform, lymphatic, and nervous. 1. Glandiform ganglions, called also adenoid, vascular, and sanguineous ganglions, blind, aporic, and vascular glands, glandulæ spuriæ, &c., are organs of whose functions we are, in general, ignorant; and which have the appearance of glands. They are formed of agglomerated globules, pervaded by blood-vessels, surrounded by areolar membrane, and contain a milky or yellowish fluid. To this class belong the spleen, thymus, thyroid, and supra-renal glands. 2. Lymphat'ic ganglions. See Conglobate. 3. Nervous ganglions, Ganglia seu Nodi seu Nod'uli Nervo'rum, Ganglio'nes, Tumo'res seu Plexus ganglioform'es, Plexus glandifor'mes, Tuber'cula nodo'sa Nervo'rum, Divertic'ula spirituum anima'lium, Ganglia of increase, Form'ative gang'lia. Enlargements or knots in the course of a nerve. They belong, in general, to the system of the great sympathetic. One exists on the posterior root of every spinal nerve, and on one cerebral,—the 5th. Bichat regarded them as so many small brains, or centres of nervous action, independent of the encephalon, and intended exclusively for organic life. Being formed by the union of the cerebral and spinal nerves, they may send out the influence of both these nervous centres to the parts to which the nerves proceeding from them are distributed. Ganglia are chiefly composed of vesicular neurine; and appear to be concerned in the formation and dispensation of nerve power.

GANGLION. Same etymon. Emphy'ma encys'tis ganglion. A globular, hard, indolent tumour, without change in the colour of the skin; of a size varying from that of a pea, to that of an egg, and always situate in the course of a tendon. The tumour is formed of a viscid, albuminous fluid, contained in a cyst of greater or less thickness. The cyst is sometimes loose; but in the majority of cases it communicates, by a narrow footstalk, with the sheath of a tendon, or even with the synovial capsule of a neighbouring articulation. The causes are generally unknown. The treatment consists in compression, percussion, the use of discutients, extirpation, or incision.

GANGLIONARY, Ganglionic.

GANGLIONES GANGLIOFORMES, Ganglions, nervous.

GANGLION'IC, Ganglion'icus, Gan'glionary, Gan'gliar. Relating to ganglia. Nerves are so called in the course of which ganglions are met with; as the greater part of the branches of the great sympathetic or trisplanchnic, the posterior roots of the spinal nerves, &c. Ganglionics, according to Dr. Pereira, are agents, which affect the ganglionic or great sympathetic system of nerves,(?)—as stimulants and sedatives.

GANGLIONIC NERVE, Trisplanchnic nerve—g. Nervous System, see Trisplanchnic nerve.

GANGLIONI'TIS, Ganglii'tis, from γαγγλιον, 'a ganglion,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a nervous ganglion. Sometimes used for inflammation of a lymphatic ganglion.

GANGRÆNICUS, Gangrenous.

GANGRÆNODES, Gangrenous.

GANGRÆNOPS'IS, Cancer aquaticus; also, gangrenous inflammation of the eyelids, Blepharit'is gangræno'sa.—Siebenhaar.

GANGRÆNO'SIS, Gangrœnescen'tia, from γαγγραινα, 'gangrene.' The state of being gangrenous or of becoming gangrenous.

GANGRÆNOSUS, Gangrenous.

GANGRENE, Gangræ'na, Cancre'na, Hot mortification, (F.) Gangrène, G. Chaude, Asphyxie des parties. Privation of life or partial death of an organ. Authors have generally distinguished mortification into two stages; naming the first incipient or gangrene. It is attended with a sudden diminution of feeling in the part affected; livid discoloration; detachment of the cuticle, under which a turbid fluid is effused; with crepitation, owing to the disengagement of air into the areolar texture. When the part has become quite black, and incapable of all feeling, circulation, and life, it constitutes the second stage, or mortification, and is called sphac''elus. Gangrene, however, is frequeutly used synonymously with mortification, — local asphyxia being the term employed for that condition, in which the parts are in a state of suspended animation, and, consequently, susceptible of resuscitation. When the part is filled with fluid entering into putrefaction, the affection is called humid gangrene, (F.) Gangrène humide: on the other hand, when it is dry and shrivelled, it constitutes dry gangrene; (F.) Gangrène sèche. To this class belongs the gangræ'na scni'lis, G. Pot'tii, Presbyosphac''elus, or spontaneous gangrene of old people, which rarely admits of cure. Whatever may be the kind of gangrene, it may be caused by violent inflammation, contusion, a burn, congelation, the ligature of a large arterial trunk, or by some internal cause inappreciable to us.

The treatment, both of external and internal gangrene, varies according to the causes which produce it. Gangrene from excessive inflammation is obviated by antiphlogistics; and that from intense cold by cautiously restoring the circulation by cold frictions, &c. When the gangrene has become developed, the separation of the eschars must be encouraged by emollient applications, if there be considerable reaction; or by tonics and stimulants, if the reaction be insufficient.

GAN'GRENOUS, Gangræ'nicus, Gangræno'sus, Gangræno'des. Affected with or relating to gangrene.

GANJAH, Gunjah.

GANTELET (F.), Chirothe'ca, Fas'cia digita'lis, Gauntlet; from (F.) gant, 'a glove.' A sort of bandage which envelops the hand and fingers, like a glove. It is made with a long roller, about an inch broad; and is applied so that the fingers are covered to their tips, when it is called Gantelet entier ou complet. The Demi-gantelet includes only the hand and base of the fingers. Both bandages are used in fractures and luxations of the fingers, burns of the hand, &c. See Chirotheca.

GANTS DES DAMES, Condom—g. de Notre Dame, Digitalis.

GAPING, Yawning.

GARANCE, Rubia.

GARCIN'IA CAMBO'GIA, G. gutta, Cambogia gutta, Mangosta'na Cambogia. A tree of Ceylon, Family Guttiferæ, which affords a concrete juice similar to Gamboge.

GARCINIA GUTTA, G. Cambogia.

GARCIN'IA MANGOSTA'NA, Mangosta'na Garcin'ia. The systematic name of the Mangos'tan or Mangous'tan tree, Mangosta'na. It grows in great abundance in Java and the Molucca islands. The fruit, which is about the size of an orange, is delicious, and is eaten in almost every disorder. The dried bark is used medicinally in dysentery and tenesmus; and a strong decoction has been much esteemed in ulcerated sore throat.

GARDE-MALADE, Nurse.

GARDEROBE, Artemisia abrotanum.

GARDEROBES, Fæces.

GARDOUCHES, Vesiculæ seminales.

GARETUM, Poples.

GARGALISMUS, Gargalus.

GAR'GALUS, Gar'galē, Gargalis'mus, Titilla'tio, Irrita'tio, Pruri'tus. Titillation, irritation, itching. Also, masturbation; and, rarely, animal magnetism.

GARGAREON, Uvula.

GARGARISATIO, Gargarism.

GAR'GARISM, Gargaris'mus, Gargaris'ma, Anagargalic'ton, Gargaris'mum, Collu'tio, Diaclys'ma, Anagargaris'ton, Anagargarism'us, Anaconchylis'mus, Anaconchylias'mus, Titillamen'tum, from γαργαριζω, 'I wash the mouth.' A gargle. Any liquid medicine, intended to be retained in the mouth, for a certain time, and to be thrown in contact with the uvula, velum pendulum, tonsils, &c. For this purpose, the liquid is agitated by the air issuing from the larynx, the head being thrown back. Gargles are employed in cynanche tonsillaris and other diseases of the fauces, and are made of stimulants, sedatives, astringents, refrigerants, &c., according to circumstances.

The process is termed gargling, gargarisa'tio.

The term colluto'rium or collutorium oris is generally restricted to a wash for the mouth.

GARGET, Phytolacca decandra.

GARGLE, Gargarism.

GARGLING, see Gargarism.

GARLIC, Allium—g. Hedge, Alliaria.

GAROSMUM, Chenopodium vulvaria.

GAROU BARK, Daphne gnidium.

GARRETUM, Poples.

GARROPHYLLUS, Eugenia caryophyllata.

GARROT (F.), from garotter, 'to tie fast.' A small cylinder of wood, used for tightening the circular band, by which the arteries of a limb are compressed, for the purpose of suspending the flow of blood in cases of hemorrhage, aneurism, amputation, &c.

GARROTILLO, Cynanche maligna.

GARRULITAS, Loquacity.

GARU'LEUM BIPINNA'TUM. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Compositæ; known under the name Snakeroot, from its reputed effects as an antidote to the bites of venomous serpents. The root is a great favourite with the Boers in chest diseases—as asthma—and in affections in which a free secretion from the mucous membrane of the bronchia is indicated. It has diaphoretic properties, and acts as a diuretic in gout and dropsy. It is given in decoction or tincture. Dr. Pappe thinks the root ought to have a place in the Materia Medica.

GARUM, γαρον. The ancient Romans gave this name to a kind of pickle made by collecting the liquor which flowed from salted and half-putrefied fish. It was used as a condiment.—The Geoponics, Humelberg on Apicius, Martial, &c.

GASCARILLA, Croton cascarilla.

GASTEIN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Gasteiu or Gasteiner Wildbad is in the Noric Alps, Austria. The waters are thermal. Temp. 106° to 118° Fah. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, chloride of potassium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, magnesia, manganese, iron, &c.

GASTER, γαστηρ. The abdomen. At times, but rarely, the uterus. Also, the stomach, in particular; Hence:

GASTERALGIA, Gastralgia.

GASTERANAX. A name given by Dolæus to a hypothetical vital principle, corresponding to the Archæus of Van Helmont, the seat of which he placed in the lower belly. See Bithnimalca.

GASTERANGEMPHRAXIS, Gasterangiemphraxis.

GASTERANGIEMPHRAX'IS, Gasterangemphrax'is, Gasteremphrax'is. Obstruction of the pylorus, from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' αγχω, 'I strangle,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.'—Vogel. Also, and properly, obstruction or congestion of the vessels of the stomach.

GASTERASE, Pepsin.

GASTERASTHENI'A, Imbecil'itas seu Aton'ia seu Lax'itas ventric'uli; from γαστηρ, 'stomach, and ασθενεια, 'debility.' Debility of the stomach.

GASTERECHE'MA, Son'itus stomach'icus; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and ηχημα, 'sound.' Sound presumed to be heard on auscultating the region of the stomach.

GASTEREMPHRAXIS, Gasterangiemphraxis.

GASTERHYSTEROTOMY, Cæsarean Section.

GASTRÆ'MIA; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Determination of blood to the stomach.

GASTRALGIA, Cardialgia.

GASTRANEURYSMA, Gastrectasis.

GASTRATROPH'IA, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and ατροφια, 'wasting.' Atrophy of the stomach.

GASTREC'TASIS, Gastrecta'sia, Gastraneurys'ma, Dilata'tio ventric'uli: from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the stomach.

GASTRELCOBROSIS, Gastrobrosis ulcerosa.

GASTRELCO'SIS, Ulcera'tio seu Exulcera'tio seu Ul'cera ventric'uli, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and 'ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of the stomach. When accompanied with hectic, it constitutes Gastrophthi'sis, Gastroph'thoë.

GASTRELYTROTOMIA, see Cæsarean Section.

GASTRENCEPHALO'MA, Gastromyelo'ma, Gastromyclo'sis, Gastroëncephalo'sis; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and εγκεφαλος, 'the brain.' Encephaloid of the stomach.

GASTRENCHYTA, Stomach pump.

GASTRENTERIC, Gastroentericus.

GASTRENTERITIC, Gastroenteritic.

GASTRENTEROMALA'CIA, Gastrenteromalax'is, from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' εντερον, 'intestine,' and μαλακια, 'softening.' Softening of the stomach and intestines.

GASTREPATICUS, Gastrohepatic.

GASTREPATI'TIS, Inflamma'tio ventric'uli et hep'atis; from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' and 'ηπαρ, 'liver.' Inflammation of the stomach and liver.

GASTREPIPLOICUS, Gastroëpiploic.

GASTRERETHIS'IA; from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' and ερεθιζω, 'I irritate.' Irritation of the stomach.

GASTRIC, Gas'tricus; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach.' Belonging or relating to the stomach.

GASTRIC AR'TERIES are three in number, Arte'ria gastro-epiploi'ca dextra, A. gastro-epiploi'ca sinis'tra, and A. corona'ria ventri'culi.

GASTRIC JUICE, Succus gas'tricus, Men'struum seu Fermentum Ventric'uli, (F.) Suc Gastrique, Gastric Acid. A fluid, secreted from the mucous membrane of the stomach. As met with, it is a mixture of the fluids secreted by that organ with those of the supra-diaphragmatic portion of the alimentary canal. Owing to such admixture, the most contrary properties have been assigned to it. That such a fluid is secreted, which concurs powerfully in digestion, is evident from many considerations, and has been positively proved by the author and numerous others. It was found by him to contain, in man, chlorohydric and acetic acids. The gastric fluid in cases of sudden death sometimes corrodes and perforates the stomach: giving rise to interesting questions in medical jurisprudence.

GASTRIC NERVES. The two cords by which the pneumogastric nerves terminate, and which descend on the two surfaces of the stomach; as well as the filaments of the great sympathetic, which accompany the gastric vessels.

GASTRIC PLEXUS, Plexus corona'rius ventri'culi. A nervous net-work, formed by the solar plexus. It accompanies the Arteria coronaria ventriculi, and passes along the lesser curvature of the stomach, to which it gives branches.

GASTRIC VEINS follow the same distribution as the arteries, and open into the Vena porta abdominis.

GAS'TRICISM, Gastricis'mus, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach.' A name by which is designated the medical theory, that refers all, or almost all, diseases to an accumulation of saburræ in the digestive passages.

GASTRILOQUE, Engastrimyth.

GASTRILOQUIST, Engastrimyth.

GASTRILOQUUS, Engastrimyth.

GASTRIMARGUS, Glutton.

GASTRINUM, Potash.

CASTRISMUS, Gluttony, see Saburra.

GASTRIT'IC, Gastrit'icus; same etymon as the rest. Relating to gastritis.

GASTRI'TIS, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Ventric'uli inflamma'tio, Cauma gastritis, Empres'ma gastritis, Inflamma'tio gastritis, Cardial'gia inflammato'ria, Febris stomach'ica inflammato'ria, Inflamma'tio ventric'uli, I. stom'achi, Phleg'monē ventric'uli, Inflammation of the stomach, (F.) Inflammation de l'Estomac, Gastrite, Catarrhe gastrique. A disease, characterized by pyrexia; great anxiety; heat and pain in the epigastrium, increased by taking any thing into the stomach; vomiting and hiccup. Gastritis may either be seated in the peritoneal or mucous coat. It is most frequently in the latter—Esogastri'tis, Endogastri'tis, Gastromycoderi'tis,—being excited directly by acrid ingesta. It requires the most active treatment;—bleeding, blistering, fomentations, diluents, &c. Some degree of inflammation of the mucous coat of the stomach was considered by the followers of Broussais to be present in almost all fevers; and the various forms of dyspepsia have been supposed by some to be nothing more than chronic endogastri'tis.

GASTRITIS ARTHRITICA, Cœliagra.

GASTRO-ARTHRITIS, Gout—g. Ataxia, Dyspepsia—g. Atonia, Dyspepsia—g. Bronchitis, Fever, adenomeningeal—g. Entérite intense Sy-

GASTROBRO'SIS, Perfora'tio ventric'uli, Gastrorrhex'is, (F.) Perforation de l'Estomac; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and βρωσις, 'the act of gnawing.' Corrosion and perforation of the stomach.

GASTROBRO'SIS ULCERO'SA, Gastrelcobro'sis. Destruction and perforation of the coats of the stomach by ulceration.

GASTROCE'LE, from γαστηρ, 'the belly,' and κελη, 'a tumour.' Hernia of the stomach, Hernia ventric'uli, (F.) Hernie de l'Estomac. Hernia, formed by the stomach through the upper part of the linea alba: a disease, the existence of which has been doubted by many. See Epigastrocèle.

GASTRO-CEPHALI'TIS; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the stomach and head,—a not uncommon concomitant of certain malignant fevers.

GASTROCHOLOSIS, Fever, gastric.

GASTROCNEME, Sura.

GASTROCNEMIA, Sura.

GASTROCNE'MII, from γαστηρ, 'the belly,' and κνημη, 'the leg.' The name of the two fleshy masses which occupy the posterior and superficial part of the leg, Gemelli; (F.) Gastrocnémiens, Jumeaux de la jambe, Bifémoro-calcaniens—(Ch.:) the two constituting the Gastrocne'mius exter'nus, of English anatomists. These muscles are distinguished into internal and external, which are distinct above, but united at their inferior extremity. They are long, flat, and thick; and arise—the former from the posterior part of the outer condyle of the femur; the latter, from the posterior part of the inner condyle of the same bone. The aponeurosis, which unites these muscles below, joins with that of the solaris, and forms with it, a large tendon, which, under the name Tendo-Achillis, is inserted at the posterior part of the calcaneum. These muscles extend the foot on the leg, and the leg on the foot. They can, also, bend the leg and the thigh reciprocally on each other. For the Gastrocnemius internus, see Soleus.

GASTROCŒLIACUS, Cœliac.

GASTROCŒLICUS, Cœliac.

GASTROCOLIC, see Epiploon, gastrocolic.

GASTROCOLICA, Cardialgia.

GASTROCOLI'TIS, from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' and κωλον, 'colon.' Inflammation of the stomach and colon.

GASTROCOLPOTOMIA, see Cæsarean section.

GASTRODID'YMUS, Did'ymus, Symphyogas'trius, Psod'ymus; from γαστηρ, 'the belly,' and διδυμος, 'a twin.' A monstrosity in which twins are united by the abdomen.

GASTRODUODE'NAL, Gastroduodena'lis; from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' and duodenum. Relating to the stomach and duodenum.

GASTRODUODENOPYRA, Fever, adenomeningeal.

GASTRODYNE, Cardialgia.

GASTRODYNIA, Cardialgia—g. Flatulenta, Colica flatulenta.

GASTROËNTER'IC, Gastroënter'icus, Gastrenter'ic, Gastrenter'icus, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and εντερον, 'intestine.' Relating to the stomach and intestine.

GASTROËNTÉRITE, Gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERIT'IC, Gastroënterit'icus, Gastrenterit'ic, Gastrenterit'icus; same etymon as the next. Relating to gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERI'TIS, Inflamma'tio ventric'uli et Intestino'rum, (F.) Gastro-entérite, Gastroenter'ic disease, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' εντερον, 'an intestine,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the stomach and small intestine. According to Broussais, the essential fevers of authors are gastro-enteritis, simple, or complicated.

GASTROËPIP'LOIC, Gastro-epiplo'icus, Gastrepiploïcus, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and επιπλοον, 'the epiploon.' That which relates to the stomach and epiploon.

GASTROËPIPLOIC ARTERIES, or Gastric inferior, are two in number, and distinguished into right and left. The right, also called Gastro-hepatic, Gastrica inferior dextra, Gastro-epiplo'ica dextra, is furnished by the hepatic artery. It descends behind the pylorus, and passes from right to left, along the great curvature of the stomach. It gives branches to the pancreas, duodenum, stomach, omentum majus, and terminates by anastomosing with the Gastro-epiplo'ica sinis'tra, Gastrica sinis'tra, Gastrica infe'rior sinis'tra. This—the left—arises from the splenic artery. It is of considerable magnitude, and passes from left to right, along the great curvature of the stomach, distributing its branches more particularly to the stomach and omentum majus. It terminates by joining the right gastro-epiploic.

GASTROEPIPLOIC GANGLIONS are the lymphatic ganglions or glands, situate towards the great curvature of the stomach, between the two anterior laminæ of the omentum majus.

GASTROEPIPLOIC VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into right and left. They empty themselves;—the former, into the superior mesenteric: the latter, into the splenic vein.

GASTROHÆMORRHAGIA, Hæmatemesis.

GASTROHEPAT'IC, Gastro-hepat'icus, Hep'ato-gas'tricus, Gastrepat'icus; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and ηπαρ, 'the liver.' Relating to the stomach and liver. This name has been given to several organs. See Epiploon, gastrohepatic, &c.

GASTROHYSTEROTOMY, Cæsarean section.

GASTROLIENALIS, Gastrosplenicus.

GASTROLITHI'ASIS, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and λιθιασις, 'formation of stone.' The formation of concretions, gastrol'ithi, in the stomach.

GASTROMALACIA, Gastromalaxia.

GASTROMALAX'IA, Gastro-mala'cia, Gastromalaco'sis, Malacogas'ter, Malax'is ventric'uli, Dissolu'tio ventric'uli, Emollit''io ventric'uli, Pseudophlogo'sis ventric'uli resoluti'va et colliquati'va, Metamorpho'sis ventric'uli gelatinifor'mis, Ero'sio et perfora'tio sponta'nea ventric'uli, Resolu'tio et diabro'sis ventric'uli, (F.) Ramollissement de l'Estomac, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and μαλαξις, 'softening.' Softening of the stomach, induced at times by the gastric secretions after death,—Resolu'tio ventric'uli autopeptica.

GASTROMANTIS, Engastrimyth.

GASTROMETROTOMIA, Cæsarean section.

GASTROMYCODERIS, see Stomach.

GASTROMYCODERITIS, see Gastritis.

GASTROMYELOMA, Gastroencephaloma.

GASTRONOSUS, Gastropathia.

GASTROPARAL'YSIS, Gastroplegia, Paral'ysis ventric'uli; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and παραλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the stomach.

GASTROP'ATHY, Gastropathi'a, Gastron'osus, Gastronu'sus, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and παθος, 'disease.' Disease of the stomach.

GASTROPERIODYN'IA; Sool (India.) A violent periodical neuralgic pain at the pit of the stomach, not uncommon in Hindoostan.

GASTROPHREN'IC, Gastro-phren'icus, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and φρενες, 'the diaphragm.' Belonging to the stomach and diaphragm.

Gastrophrenic Ligament is a reflection of the peritoneum, which descends from the inferior surface of the diaphragm to the cardia.

GASTROPHTHISIS, Gastrelcosis.

GASTROPHTHOE, Gastrelcosis.

GASTROPLEGIA, Gastroparalysis.

GASTROR'APHY, Gastrorrha'phia, Gastror'rhaphē, Sutu'ra abdomina'lis, from γαστηρ, 'the belly,' and ραφη, 'a suture.' The suture used for uniting wounds penetrating the abdomen, when they are too extensive or too unequal to be kept in contact by position, adhesive plaster, or appropriate bandages. The interrupted and quilled sutures are those chiefly employed.

GASTRORRHAGIA, Hæmatemesis.

GASTRORRHEXIS, Gastrobrosis.

GASTRORRHŒ'A, from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Blennorrhœ'a seu Fluxus ventric'uli, (F.) Flux muqueux de l'estomac, Catarrhe stomacal. A morbid condition of the stomach, which consists in the secretion of an excessive quantity of mucus from the lining membrane of the stomach. Also, Cœliac flux.

GASTROSCIR'RHUS, Indura'tio ventric'uli scirrho'sa, Scirrhus seu carcino'ma ventric'uli. Scirrhous induration or cancer of the stomach.

GASTROSCOPIA, Abdominoscopia.

GASTRO'SIS. A generic name for diseases which are seated in the stomach.—Alibert.

GASTROSPLE'NIC, Gastrosple'nicus, Gastrolienea'lis, from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' and σπλην, 'the spleen.' Relating to stomach and spleen.

GASTROSTENOSIS, Stricture of the stomach.

Gastrostenosis Cardi'aca et Pylor'ica; from γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and στενος, 'narrow.' Narrowness of the cardiac and pyloric orifices of the stomach from cancer of that organ.

GASTROT'OMY, from γαστηρ, 'the belly,' and τομη, 'incision.' Several different operations have been so called. 1. The Cæsarean Section. 2. An incision made into the abdomen for the purpose of removing some internal strangulation or volvulus; or to reduce hernia, Laparot'omy: and, 3. The opening made in the stomach, to remove a foreign body which has passed into it through the œsophagus.

GASTRYPERNEU'RIA, from γαστηρ, 'stomach,' 'υπερ, 'above,' and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Morbidly increased activity of the nerves of the stomach.

GÂTEAU FÉBRILE, Ague cake.

GATTILIER, Vitex.

GAUDIA FŒDA, Masturbation.

GAULTHE'RIA, G. seu Gaulthe'ria procum'bens, Gautie'ra repens, Mountain Tea, Partridge Berry, Berried Tea, Grouseberry, Deerberry, Spice berry, Tea berry, Red berry, Wintergreen, Red berry Tea, Ground berry, Ground ivy, Ground holly, Hill berry, Box berry, Chequer berry. An American plant, which is one of the principle articles of the materia medica of some Indian tribes. The infusion of the leaves is stimulant and anodyne, and is said to have been used, with advantage, in asthma. The oil — Oleum Gaultheriæ, Ph. U. S.,—is used, chiefly on account of its pleasant flavour, to cover the taste of other medicines.

GAUNTLET, Gantelet.

GAUQUAVA, Smilax China.

GAUTIERA REPENS, Gaultheria.

GAY FEATHER, Liatris spicata.

GAYAC, Guaiacum.

GAYLUSSAC'IA RESINO'SA, Vaccin'ium resino'sum, Black Huckleberry. An indigenous plant, whose fruit is sweet and agreeable.

GAZ, Gas, Air. Van Helmont first designated by this name, — the etymology of which is unknown, — the carbonic acid developed in the vinous fermentation. Afterwards, the term was appropriated to every permanently elastic fluid; that is, which preserves its aëriform state at all temperatures: and ultimately it was extended to all aëriform bodies; — which were divided into permanent and non-permaent gazes. The latter are generally termed vapours: — they return to the liquid state, when a portion of their caloric is abstracted. The permanent gazes, or gazes properly so called, are numerous, and may be divided into four sections with regard to their effects on the animal economy.

|---|---|
| 1. Irrespirable gazes. | Carbonic acid, ammoniacal gaz, muriatic acid gaz, deutoxide of azote, nitrous acid gaz, and chlorine. |
| 2. Negatively deleterious gazes. | Hydrogen, azote. |
| 3. Positively deleterious gazes. | Oxygen, protoxide of azote, carburetted hydrogen, carbonic oxide, sulphuretted hydrogen, and arseniuretted hydrogen. |

It is proper to remark that the term respirable has been very differently employed by different writers. Sometimes it has meant the power of supporting life when applied to the blood in the lungs. At others, all gazes have been deemed irrespirable, which are incapable of being introduced into the lungs by voluntary efforts,—without any relation to their power of maintaining vitality; and this is perhaps the best sense. The gazes were, at one time, employed in medicine, under great expectations,—especially by the enthusiastic Beddoes; but they are now scarcely ever had recourse to. They differ, considerably, in their effects on the animal economy. Some, as oxygen, are exciting; others, as azote, depressing; whilst others, again, as the Protoxide of azote or laughing gas, produce the most singular effects.

Gaz, Pul'monary, Gaz of the lungs. A name given to the expired air; which contains—besides common air, an increase of carbonic acid, water, and some animal matter.

Gaz Sang'uinis, Gaz anima'lē san'guinis, Hal'itus san'guinis, Aura san'guinis, Hæmat'mus. The halitus, or vapour, given off by freshly drawn blood.

GAZELLE, Antilopus.

GÉANT, Giant.

GEBÂRPULVER, Ergot.

GEDE'OLA. The convex part of the liver.—Du Cange.

GEILNAU, MINERAL WATERS OF. Geilnau is a village in the grand duchy of Nassau, at no great distance from Frankfort. The waters contain carbonic acid, carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda, chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, magnesia, and iron.

GEISMAR, MINERAL WATERS OF. The mineral waters of Geismar, in Bavaria, are acidulous chalybeates.

GEISUM, Geison. The part of the frontal bone over the eyes.

GELAPPIUM, Convolvulus jalapa.

GELASINI DENTES, Incisive teeth

GELASMUS, Canine laugh.

GEL'ATIN, Gel'atine, Gelatina, Galreda, from (F.) Gelée, 'gelly or jelly.' An immediate animal principle. It is semitransparent, insipid, inodorous, insoluble in cold water, very soluble in hot, which it thickens, and transforms into gelly on cooling. Gelatin is a very nutritious substance; and, when dissolved in a considerable quantity of water, forms an emollient fluid, much used in therapeutics, but not the most easy of digestion.

GELATIN OF WHARTON, Gelatina Whartonia'na, Jelly of tee Cord. A soft, dense, fluid, gelatinous substance, which envelops the umbilical cord, and is conceived, by some, to be inservient to the nutrition of the fœtus.

GELATINA AQUATICA, Brasenia hydropeltis.

GELATIO, Congelation.

GELÉE, Gelly.

GELLY. Jelly, Jus gela'tum, Gelu, Jus coagula'tum, (F.) Gelée. A substance of a soft consistence, tremulous, and transparent, which is obtained by an appropriate treatment, from animal and vegetable matters: hence the distinction into animal and vegetable jelly. The former is merely a concentrated solution of gelatin, left to cool.

Vegetable Jelly is found in the juice of the currant, mulberry, and of almost all acid fruits, when ripe. It is of itself colourless, but almost always retains a little colouring matter of the fruit which has furnished it. It has an agreeable taste; is scarcely soluble in cold water, but boiling water dissolves it readily: the jelly is, however, almost all deposited on cooling. If this aqueous solution be boiled for a long time, it becomes analogous to mucilage, and loses the property of being jellied on cooling.

GELSEMI'NUM NIT'IDUM, Yellow Jes'samine. The flowers, root, &c., of this shrub, are narcotic, and the effluvia from the former are said sometimes to induce stupor.

GELU, Gelly.

GELUS, Risus.

GEMELLI, Gastrocnemii, Ischio-trochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMEL'LUS, Gem'inus, Did'ymus, 'a twin.' (F.) Jumeau, Jumelle, Besson, Bessonne. One of two children, twins, born at the same accouchement, or gestation. Also, relating to twins, as "a twin conception."

GEMELLUS MUS'CULUS. Cowper applies this name to the long portion of the triceps brachialis united to the inner portion.

GEMINI, Ischio-trochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMINUM CENTRUM SEMICIRCULARE, Tænia semicircularis.

GEMINUS, Gemellus.

GEMIPOMA, Mamma.

GÉMISSEMENT, see Moaning.

GEMMA, Granulation—g. Oculi, Crystalline.

GEMMATION, GENERATION BY, see Generation.

GEMMIPARITÉ, see Generation.

GEMMIPAROUS, see Generation.

GEMUR'SA, a corn; also a name given by the ancients to a disease seated between the toes; —the nature of which is unknown to us.

GEN, Gen'esis, 'generation,' from γενναω, 'I make.' Hence Hydrogen, Osteogeny, &c.

GENA. The Cheek, Genys, Parei'a, Gamphē, Gamphe'lē, Gnathos, Gnathmus, Mala, (F.) Joue. The cheeks form the lateral parts of the mouth. Externally, they have no precise limits: they are continuous, above with the lower eyelid; below, they descend as far as the base of the jaw; before, they terminate at the alæ nasi, and at the commissures of the lips; and behind, at the ear. Their thickness varies, according to the degree of fatness of the individual. They are formed of three layers; — one dermoid, another muscular, and the third mucous.

GENCIVES, Gingivæ.

GENEI'AS, Lanu'go prima, Probar'bium. The downy hairs, which first cover the cheek. Also, a bandage which passes under the chin.

GENEION, Beard, Mentum.

GENERAL ANATOMY, see Anatomy.

GÉNÉRALE, Influenza.

GENERATIO, Generation—g. Æquivoca, see Generation—g. Calculi, Lithia—g. Homogenea, see Generation—g. Primigena, see Generation—g. Primitiva, see Generation—g. Originaria, see Generation—g. Spontanea, see Generation.

GENERATION, Genera'tio, Gen'esis, Genne'sis, Gonē, Gonus, Procrea'tio, Procreation, Breeding, from γενω, or γενναω, 'I engender.' Under this name physiologists comprehend the aggregate of functions, which concur, in organized beings, towards the production of their kind. The act of generation means the union of the sexes. See Coition. The writers of antiquity believed, that all organized bodies are produced either by what is termed univ'ocal or regular generation, Homogen'esis, genera'tio homogen'ea, propaga'tio, which applies to the upper classes of animals and vegetables, or by spontaneous generation, Autogon'ia, heterogen'esis, generatio heterogen'ea, æquiv'oca, primiti'va, primig''ena, origina'ria, sponta'nea, spontéparité (Dugès), which they considered applicable to the very lowest classes only, as the mushroom, the worm, the frog, &c. There are still many distinguished naturalists who consider that beings low in the scale of animality, are produced in the latter way. Spontaneous generation and equivocal generation have been regarded by many to be synonymous. Others, however, mean by spontaneous generation, the production of a new being from the mere combination of inorganic elements; whilst by equivocal generation they understand the evolution of a new being from organized beings dissimilar to themselves, through some irregularity in their functions, or through the incipient decay or degeneration of their tissues. As to the mode in which regular generation is accomplished, there have been many views. According to the doctrine of Hippocrates, and of the ancient philosophers, the ovaries of the female furnish a prolific fluid, similar to that of the male; and the fœtus results from the mixture of the two seeds in copulation. Steno and others conceived, that the ovaries contain ova, which are not developed until vivified by the male sperm. Bonnet and Spallanzani believed in the pre-existence of germs, created since the origin of the world, but encased in each other, and becoming developed in succession; whence it would follow that the ovary of the first female must have contained the germs of all subsequent generations: and that the number of these germs must go on always diminishing, until ultimately extinct. This was the system of the evolution of germs. According to Leeuenhoek, the ovaries do not contain eggs, but vesicles destined to receive animalcules; which, in his view, live in the sperm. Thousands of these animalcules are thrown into the uterus during copulation, and the most expeditious and vigorous reaches the ovary, after having scattered and destroyed its competitors. Buffon — admitting the hypothesis of the two seeds — supposed that they were formed of molecules proceeding from every part of the body of each parent; and that, by a kind of elective affinity, those which were furnished by the head, the trunk, or the extremities of the male parent, could only unite with those proceeding from the same parts of the female. Before him, Maupertuis, admitting, with many of the ancient philosophers, the system of Epigenesis, and adopting, as regarded the composition of the sperm, a theory analogous to that of Buffon, had supposed that the molecules, capable of being organized, were attracted towards a centre; that the nose attracts the two eyes; the body, the arms; the arms, the hands, &c., nearly as the particles of a salt, dissolved in a liquid, arrange themselves in regular crystals around the same nucleus. These and various other systems have been successively proposed and abandoned, and the mystery of generation remains impenetrable.

The simplest kind of reproduction does not require sexual organs. The animal separates into several fragments, which form so many new individuals. This is Fissip'arous generation, Fissiparism, G. from fission, (F.) Fissiparité, Scissiparité. Gemmip'arous generation, (F.) Gemmiparité, consists in the formation of buds, sporules or germs on some part of the body, which at a particular period drop off and form as many new individuals. In Ovip'arous generation, (F.) Oviparité, the egg is hatched out of the body. In ovovivip'arous generation, the new being is hatched in the excretory passages. In vivip'arous generation, the new individual is born under its appropriate form; and in marsu'pial or marsupiate generation, the young being, born at a very early stage of development, is received and nourished in a marsupium or pouch. In alternate generation, the young not only do not resemble the parent at birth, but remain dissimilar during their whole life, so that their relationship is not apparent until a succeeding generation. Thus, the cercaria undergoes a change into the distoma.

All the acts comprising the function of generation in man may be referred to five great heads. 1. Copulation. 2. Conception or fecundation. 3. Gestation or Pregnancy. 4. Delivery or Accouchement: and, 5. Lactation.

GENERATION, ACT OF, see Generation—g. Equivocal, see Generation—g. by Fission, see Generation—g. Fissiparous, see Generation—g. by Gemmation, see Generation—g. Gemmiparous, see Generation—g. Marsupial, see Generation—g. Organs of, female, see Vulva—g. Oviparous, see Generation—g. Regular, see Generation—g. Spontaneous, see Generation—g. Univocal, see Generation—g. Viviparous, see Generation.

GEN'EROUS, Genero'sus. A name given to wines which contain a great quantity of alcohol.

GENESIOL'OGY, Genesiolog''ia, from γενεσις, 'generation,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of generation.

GÉNÉSIQUE, LE, Appetite, venereal.

GENESIS, Generation.

GENÊT, Spartium scoparium—g. à Balai, Spartium scoparium—g. des Teinturiers, Genista tinctoria.

GENETHLIACUS, from γενεθλιος, 'natal,' 'pertaining to nativity.' A name given by the ancients to certain astrologers, who, from the state of the heavens at the time of the birth of an individual, predicted his future character and the events of his life.

GENET'ICA, from γενεσις, 'origin,' 'rise.' Diseases of the sexual functions: the 5th class in Good's Nosology. Also, agents that act on the sexual organs.—Pereira.

GENETICOS, Genital.

GENEVA, Gin—g. Hollands, see Spirit.

GENÉVRIER, Juniperus communis.

GENGIVITE, Ulitis.

GÉNI, Genian.

GE'NIAN, Genia'nus, Ge'nial, from γενειον, 'the chin.' The Genian apoph'ysis or Process, (F.) Apophyse génienne ou géni, is situate at the posterior part of the symphysis menti, and is formed of four small tubercles.

GENICULATUM, see Corpora geniculata.

GÉNIE, Ge'nius. The French sometimes apply this term to diseases nearly synonymously with nature; as Génie inflammatoire, G. bilieux, G. adynamique. Some use it in the same sense as type; Génie intermittent. The unwonted predominance of any mental faculty is also so called.

GÉNIEN, Genian.

GENIÈVRE, Gin, Juniperis communis (the berry.)

GENI'OGLOSSUS, Genio-hyoglos'sus, from γενειον, 'the chin,' and λγωσσα, 'the tongue.' Mesoglossus, Mesoglot'tus, Nonus linguæ mus'culus. The name of a flat, triangular muscle, which extends from the genian apophysis to the inferior surface of the os hyoides and tongue, which it carries forward.

GENIOHYODES, Geniohyoideus.

GENIOHYOGLOSSUS, Genioglossus.

GENIOHYOIDES, Geniohyoideus.

GENI'OHYOIDEUS, Geniohyo'des, Genωhyoï''des, Mento-bicorn'eus, from γενειον, 'the chin,' and 'υοειδης, 'the os hyoides.' A muscle which arises from the genian apophysis, and is inserted at the anterior part of the body of the os hyoides. Its use is to raise the os hyoides, and carry it forwards. It may, also, contribute to depress the lower jaw in contracting towards the os hyoides.

GENI'O-PHARYNGE'US, from γενειον, 'the chin,' and φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx.' A name given, by some anatomists, to a bundle of fibres which passes from the lower jaw to the sides of the pharynx, and forms part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GEN'IPA OBLONGIFO'LIA, Huito. A plant of Peru, with the juice of which the Indians paint their legs, to protect them against the stings of insects.

GENIPI ALBUM, Artemisia rupestris—g. Blanc, Artemisia rupestris—g. Verum, Achillea atrata.

GENISTA, Spartium scoparium—g. Canariensis, see Rhodium lignum—g. Hirsuta, Spartium scoparium—g. Scoparia, Spartium scoparium.

GENIS'TA SPINO'SA IN'DICA, Bahel Schulli. An oriental tree, a decoction of the roots of which is diuretic. The leaves boiled in vinegar have the same effect.—Ray.

GENIS'TA TINCTO'RIA, Genistoï''des tincto'ria, Spar'tium tincto'rium, Dyers' broom, Dyers' weed, Green weed, Wood waxen, (F.) Genêt des Teinturiers. A shrub cultivated in this country and in Europe. The flowering tops and seed have been used in medicine. It has the same properties as Spartium scoparium.

GENISTOIDES TINCTORIA, Genista tinctoria.

GEN'ITAL, Genita'lis, Genet'icos. Same etymon as Generation. That which belongs to generation.

GEN'ITAL ORGANS, Sex'ual Organs, Puden'da, Natura'lia, Natu'ra, Ædœ'a, Me'zea, Me'sa, Mo'rion, Genital parts, Noble parts, Nat'ural parts, Private parts, Priv'ities, Privy parts, Privy Members, the Parts, Pars, Pars corporis seu obscœ'na, Fores, Partes genita'les seu generatio'ni inservien'tes, P. obscœnæ, Me'zea, Veren'da, Pedes, Inguen, Genita'lia, Gennet'ica. Gymna,

Membra puden'da, Or'gana generatio'ni inservientia, (F.) Organes génitaux, Parties génitales, P. honteuses, P. génitoires, P. nobles, P. sexuelles, P. naturelles, Les Parties. The parts that are inservient to the reproduction of the species. These are very different in the male and female. In man, they are numerous; some secreting the sperm, as the testicles and their appendages; others retaining it, as the vesiculæ seminales; and another for carrying it into the organs of the female,—the penis. In the female, the parts of generation form an apparatus, perhaps more complicated than that of the male. Some are incervient to copulation, as the vulva, vagina, &c.; others to conception and the preservation of the product for a determinate time, as the uterus and its appendages; whilst others concur in the alimentation of the infant after birth, as the mammæ.

GENITALE, Sperm—g. Caput, Glans.

GENITALIA, Genital organs — g. Viri, Pudibilia.

GEN'ITO-CRURAL NERVE, Nervus gen'itocrura'lis, Subpu'bial nerve, Inter'nal in'guinal nerve. A branch of the second lumbar nerve, which passes through the psoas muscle, and, approaching the femoral arch, divides into two branches,—an internal, scrotal, or gen'ital, nervus spermaticus seu puden'dus exter'nus, and an external or femoral cutaneous branch, lumbo-inguinalis.

GENITU'RA. That which is feeundated or engendered in the maternal womb. This word has been used synonymously with embryo, fœtus, and infant. Also, the sperm; and the penis. See Gone.

GENIUM, Mentum.

GENNESIS, Generation.

GENNETICA, Genital Organs.

GENNETICOCNES'MUS, from γεννητικος, 'genital,' and κνησμος, 'itching.' Itching of the genital organs.

GENNETICON'OSI, Genneticonu'si, from γεννητικος, 'genital,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Diseases of the genitals.

GENOA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of this Italian city and its vicinity has been often selected as favourable for the phthisical valetudinarian during the winter; but it is now admitted to be decidedly improper for pulmonary affections, being subject to frequent and rapid changes of temperature, and to dry cold winds from the north, alternately with warm moist winds from the south-east.—Sir James Clark.

GENONU'SI, Morbi sexûs, from γενος, 'sex,' and νουσος, 'disease.' Sexual diseases.

GENOS, Sex.

GENOU, Genu.

GÉNOUILLÉS, (Corps,) Corpora geniculata.

GENRE, Genus.

GENSANG, Panax quinquefolium.

GENTIA, Gentianina.

GENTIAN, Gentiana lutea, Triosteum — g. Blue, Gentiana catesbæi—g. Catesbian, Gentiana catesbæi — g. White, Laserpitium latifolium — g. Southern, Gentiana catesbæi — g. White, Triosteum—g. Yellow, Gentiana lutea, see Calumba.

GENTIANA, G. lutea — g. Alba, Laserpitium latifolium — g. Cachenlaguen, Chironia Chilensis —g. Centaurium, Chironia centaurium.

Gentiana Catesbæ'i; G. Catesbia'na, Blue Gentian, U. S., Catesbian Gen'tian, Southern Gentian, Bluebells, Bitterroot. It is a pure and simple bitter, and the root may be used wherever that of the Gentiana lutea is proper.

Gentia'na Chirayta, G. Chirayi'ta, Henrice'a Pharmaceaer'cha, Swer'tia, Chirayi'ta, Agatho'tes Chirayi'ta, Ophe'lia chira'ta, Chiret'ta, Chirayi'ta, Chirae'ta. A native of India, which has been much employed in that country, in dyspepsia, and as an antiperiodic in intermittents. It is preferred by some to sarsaparilla, where the latter is considered to be indicated,—as after large quantities of mercury have been taken, or where profuse salivation has been induced. It has also been advised in atonic leucorrhœa. It yields its virtues to alcohol and water.

Gentiana Crinita, see G. quinqueflora—g. Gerardi, Chironia centaurium.

Gentia'na Lu'tea. The systematic name of the officinal gentian; Gentia'na, Gentia'na major, G. vet'erum, Gentia'na rubra, Swer'tia lu'tea, Aste'rias lu'tea, Yellow Gentian, Felwort. Ord. Gentianeæ. (F.) Gentiane jaune. This is a plant common in the mountains of Europe. The root is almost inodorous, extremely bitter, and yields its virtues to ether, alcohol, and water. It is tonic and stomachic; and in large doses, aperient. Dose, gr. x. to ℈ij. It is most frequently, however, used in infusion or tincture.

Gentiana Major, G. lutea—g. Peruviana, Chironia Chilensis.

Gentia'na Quinqueflo'ra, Five-flowered Gentian; and Gentia'na Crini'ta, Fringed Gentian, indigenous, are possessed of like virtues.

Gentiana Rubra, G. lutea — g. Veterum, G. lutea.

GENTIANE JAUNE, Gentiana lutea.

GENTIANI'NA, Gentianine, Gentianin, Gentia'nia, Gentia. A supposed neutral substance, obtained from gentian, and, by some, presumed to be its active principle. It is not so.

GENTILITIUS, Hereditary.

GENU, Gony, γονυ, (F.) Genou. The articulation of the leg with the thigh;—the Femoro-tibial or knee-joint, the knee. It is the most complicated in the body, and is formed by the inferior extremity of the femur, the superior extremity of the tibia, and the rotula. The articular surfaces of the bones are covered by layers of cartilage—more or less thick—and by the synovial membrane of the articulation. The soft parts of this joint are,—the ligamentum patellæ, two lateral ligaments, distinguished by the names internal and external; a posterior ligament, Ligamen'tum posti'cum Winslow'ii; two crucial ligaments, —the one anterior, and the other posterior; two interarticular fibro-cartilages; some albugineous fibres, which form an imperfect capsule, &c. The knee receives its arteries from the femoral and popliteal. They bear the name articular. Its veins have the same distribution as the arteries, and discharge their blood into the saphena and crural. Its nerves are furnished by the sciatic, popliteal, and crural. The joint is protected by the tendons and muscles which surround it.

The French use the term Articulation en genou for a joint, in which the head of a bone is received into a bony cavity of another, where it rolls and moves in all directions.

Genu Corporis Callosi, see Corpus callosum.

GENUGRA, Gonagra.

GENUINUS, Legitimate.

GENUS, (F.) Genre. A collection or group of species, analogous to each other, and which can be united by common characters. When a species cannot be referred to a known genus, it constitutes a distinct one.

Genus Curationis, Ratio medendi.

GENYANTRAL'GIA, from γενειον, 'the maxilla,' αντρον, 'the antrum, and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRI'TIS, from γενειον, 'the maxilla,' αντρον, 'the antrum,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRUM, Antrum of Highmore.

GENYOCYNANCHE, Cynanche parotidæa.

GENYS, γενυς, 'the jaw;' also the chin. See Gena.

GEOFFRÆ'A INER'MIS, G. racemo'sa seu Piso'nis seu Jamaicen'sis, Vouacap'oua America'na, Geoffræ'a, Geoffroy'a, Cabbag''ium, Cabbage Tree, Cabbage Bark Tree, Worm-Bark Tree, Andi'ra inerm'is seu racemo'sa. Nat. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The odour of the bark is very unpleasant. It is anthelmintic and cathartic. Dose of the powder, ℈j to ℈ij.

GEOFFRÆA JAMAICENSIS, G. inermis—g. Pisonis, G. inermis—g. Racemosa, G. inermis.

GEOFFRÆ'A SURINAMEN'SIS, Andi'ra Surinamen'sis, has similar properties.

Huttenschmidt has separated their active principles, to which he has given the names Jamaicine and Surinamine. They are all alkaline.

GEOFFRÆA VERMIF'UGA, Andira ibai, Arriba, Skolemo'ra Fernambucensis; a South American plant has a fruit, the almond of which, called angéline, has a reputation at Rio Janeiro as a vermifuge. Dose, a grain to fifteen; or it may be given in infusion.

GEOFFROYA, Geoffræa inermis — g. Jamaicensis, G. inermis.

GEOG'RAPHY, MED'ICAL, Geogra'phia Med'ica. The description of the surface of the globe as regards the influence of situation on the health, vital functions, and diseases of its inhabitants — vegetable and animal; but principally on those of man.

GEOPH'AGISM, Geophag''ia, Gæophag''ia, from γη, 'earth,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' The act or practice of eating earth. See Chthonophagia.

GERÆOLOG''IA, Geratolog''ia, from γηρας, 'old age,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine, or a description, of old age.

GER'ANIS, from γερανος, 'a crane,' which it resembled. A bandage, used by the ancients in cases of fractured clavicle. Some authors attribute it to Hippocrates; others, to Perigenes.

GERA'NIUM, same etymon, because its pistil is long, like the bill of the crane. The Crane's Bill.

GERANIUM FŒTIDUM, G. Robertianum—g. Maculatum, see Geranium, and G. Moschatum.

GERANIUM MOSCHA'TUM; Erod'ium Moschatum, (F.) Bec de grue musqué. A European plant, esteemed to be excitant and diaphoretic.

GERANIUM NOVEBORACENSE, G. Maculatum—g. Purpureum, G. Robertianum.

GERANIUM ROBERTIA'NUM; G. fœ'tidum seu purpu'reum, Stinking Crane's Bill, Herb Robert, (F.) Herbe à Robert, Bec de Grue Robertin. This plant was, at one time, used as an antispasmodic and slight stimulant, as well as for an external application in various painful sores and inflammations.

Most of the species of geranium have been used as astringents. In some of the northwestern parts of the United States, the root of the Geranium macula'tum — Gera'nium, (Ph. U. S.) — G. Noveboracen'sē, Spotted Crane's Bill, Crowfoot, Alum root, Tormentil, Stork bill—is called Racine à Becquet, after a person of that name. It is highly extolled by the Western Indians as an antisyphilitic.

GERAS, Senectus.

GERM, Germen, Blastē, Blaste'ma. The rudiment of a new being, not yet developed, or which is still adherent to the mother.

GERM FORCE, Plastic force.

GERMANDER, COMMON, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Creeping, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Marum, Teucrium marum — g. Small, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Water, Teucrium scordium.

GERMANDRÉE AQUATIQUE, Teucrium scordium — g. Maritime, Teucrium marum — g. Officinale, Teucrium chamædrys — g. Scorodone, Teucrium scordium.

GERME FAUX, Conception, false.

GERMEN, Germ, Sperm — g. Dentale, Dental Pulp—g. Falsum, Mole—g. Spurium, Conception, false.

GERMINAL CELL, see Cytoblast—g. Membrane and Vesicle; see Molecule — g. Nucleus, see Molecule—g. Spot, see Molecule—g. Vesicle, see Molecule.

GERMS, DISSEMINATION OF, Panspermia.

GEROBOS'CIA, Gerontobos'cia, from γηρας, 'old age,' and βοσκη, 'food.' Nourishment or maintenance proper for the aged.

GEROCOMEUM, Gerocomium.

GEROCO'MIA, Gerocom'icē, Gerontocom'icē, from γερων, 'an aged person,' and κομειν, 'to take care of.' The part of medicine whose object is the preservation of the health of the aged:— the hygiene of old people.

GEROCOMICE, Gerocomia.

GEROCOMI'UM, Gerocome'um, Presbyodochi'um, Gerontocomi'um, Gerotrophe'um, same etymon. An hospital for the aged.

GÉROFLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GÉROFLÉE JAUNE, Cheiranthus cheiri.

GERONTATROPHIA, Marasmus senilis.

GERONTOBOSCIA, Geroboscia.

GERONTOCOMICE, Gerocomia.

GERONTOCOMIUM, Gerocomium.

GERONTO'PIA, from γηρας, 'old age,' and ωψ, 'the eye.' Weakness of sight of the aged.

GERONTOTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GERONTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GEROTOX'ON, Gerontox'on, Gerontotox'on, Mac'ula cor'neæ arcua'ta, Arcus seni'lis; from γερων, 'an old person,' and τοξον, 'a bow.' A bow-shaped obscurity at the under margin of the cornea, common to old people.

GEROTROPHEUM, Gerocomium.

GEROTROPHIA, Geroboscia.

GERSA, Plumbi subcarbonas—g. Serpentariæ, see Arum maculatum.

GESTA, 'things done,' from gerere, gestum, 'to do,' 'carry.' A Latin term, introduced by Hallé into medical language, to designate, among the objects which belong to hygiene, the functions which consist in the voluntary movements of muscles and organs. In the class Gesta are found sleep, the waking state, movements or locomotion, and rest.

GESTA'TION, Gesta'tio, Phora, from gestare, 'to carry.' The time during which a female who has conceived carries the embryo in her uterus. See Pregnancy. Gestation, likewise, signifies the bearing or carrying of an individual; a kind of exercise easier than that in which he moves by virtue of his own powers. Thus, we speak of gestation on horseback, in a carriage, &c.

GESTATION, PROTRACTED. Pregnancy protracted beyond the usual period. See Pregnancy.

GESTICULA'TION, Gesticula'tio, same etymon. The act of making many gestures; a symptom in disease, which indicates great encephalic erethism. It is met with in numerous affections.

GETHYL'LIS SPIRA'LIS. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amaryllideæ, the orange-coloured fruit of which has a peculiar fragrance. An infusion in spirit or tincture is used in flatulence and colic.

GEUM, G. rivale — g. Caryophyllatum, G. ur banum — g. Nutans, G. rivale — g. Palustre, G. rivale.

Geum Rivalē, G. palus'trē seu nutans, Caryophylla'ta aquat'ica seu nutans, Benedic'ta sylves'tris, Water avens, (F.) Benoîte aquatique, B. des Ruisseaux. Family, Rosaceæ. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Polygynia. The root of this plant, Geum (Ph. U. S.), is astringent. It has been much extolled in the cure of intermittents, diarrhœa, hemorrhage, &c.

Geum Urbanum, G. caryophylla'tum, Caryophylla'ta, C. vulga'ris seu urba'na, Caryophyll'us vulga'ris, Sanamun'da, Lagophthal'mus, Caryophyl'la, Janamun'da, Common avens, Herb Bennet, Herba benedic'ta, (F.) Benoîte. The root of this plant has a smell not unlike that of cloves. Taste bitterish, austere; virtues yielded to water and alcohol. It has been used in intermittents, dysentery, chronic diarrhœa, debility, &c. Dose, ʒss to ʒj of the powder.

Geum Vernum, Western early avens, has the same properties as Geum Virginia'num, White avens, Avens, Evan root, Choc'olate root, Bennet, Throat root, Cure-all, (F.) Benoîte de Virginie, is common from Maine to Carolina and Kentucky, flowering in June and July. It has the same medical properties as Geum rivale.

GEUMA, Taste.

GEUSION'OSI, from γευσις, 'taste,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Geusionu'si. Diseases of the organ or sense of taste.

GEUSIS, Taste. Rarely, the root of the tongue—Radix linguæ.

GEUTHMOS, Taste.

GEZIR, see Pastinaca opoponax.

GÉZIT, Cagot.

GÉZITAIN, Cagot.

GHERKIN, see Cucumis sativus.

GHITTA JEMOCO, Cambogia.

GIALAPPA, Convolvulus Jalapa.

GIANT, Gigas, (F.) Géant. One much above the ordinary stature.

GIBBA, Hump.

GIBBER, Hump.

GIBBEROSITAS, Gibbositas.

GIBBOS'ITAS, Gibberos'itas, Cypho'sis, Rhachio-cypho'sis, from (F.) Gibbeux, (L.) Gibbus, 'something arched or vaulted; prominent.' Gibbos'ity, Gib'bousness, Curvature of the spine, Hybo'ma. A symptom which occurs in different diseases; particularly in rickets and caries of the vertebræ. See Hump.

Gibbositas Cariosa, Vertebral disease.

GIBBOUSNESS, Gibbositas.

GIBBUS, Hump—g. Pottii, Vertebral disease.

GIBLETS. According to Minsheu, from Gobbet, Goblet; but, according to Junius, from (F.) Gibier, 'game.' The word seems to be the old (F.) Gibelez, Gibelet, &c., i. e. Gibier, (L.) Cibarium, food, (F.) Abattis. It means, generally, the parts which are cut off from a goose before it is roasted. Also, the extremities of fowls, such as the head, wings, feet; to which are sometimes added, the liver, gizzard, &c. Soup, made from these, is moderately nutritious.

GIDDINESS, Vertigo.

GIDDY, Vertiginous.

GIGANTEUS, Gigantic.

GIGANTESQUE, Gigantic.

GIGAN'TIC, Gigante'us, Giganto'des, (F.) Gigantesque. Relating to one much above the ordinary stature.

GIGANTODES, Gigantic.

GIGARTINA HELMINTHOCHORTON, Corallina Corsicana—g. Lichenoides, Fucus amylaceus

GIGARUS SERPENTARIA, Arum dracunculus.

GIGAS, Giant.

GILARUM, Thymus serpyllum.

GILEAD, BALM OF, see Amyris opobalsamum.

GILET DE FORCE, Waistcoat, strait.

GILL, Glechoma hederacea.

Gill-go-by-ground, Glechoma hederacea.

GILLA THEOPHRASTI, Zinci sulphas — g. Vitrioli, Zinci sulphas.

GILLE'NIA STIPULA'CEA, Small-flowered Ind'ian Physic has the same properties as Gille'nia Trifolia'ta, Spiræ'a trifolia'ta, Common Gille'nia, Indian Physic, Western Dropwort, Indian Hippo, Ip'ecac, Bowman's root, Meadow sweet, Bewmont root. Nat. Ord. Rosaceæ. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Pentagynia. The root of this shrub,—Gille'nia, (Ph. U. S.)—which grows plentifully in the United States, is a safe and efficacious emetic, in the dose of about 30 grains. It resembles ipecacuanha in its properties.

GILLIFLOWER, Dianthus caryophyllus.

GIM'BERNAT'S LIGAMENT. A fibrous, triangular expansion, which is detached from the posterior and inner part of the crural arch, and is inserted into the crest of the pubis. This ligament forms the inner part of the superior aperture of the crural canal. It is one of the most frequent causes of strangulation in crural hernia.

GIN, Hollands, Gene'va, (F.) Genièvre. This spirit, which is distilled from corn and juniper berries, or from some substitute for them, is largely used in Great Britain; and is extremely detrimental, to the lower classes particularly. It possesses the properties of other spirituous liquors, but is, in popular medicine, more used than other varieties, in cases of colic or intestinal pain of any kind. See Spirit.

Gin Drinker's Liver, Liver, nutmeg — g. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

GINGEMBRE, Amomum zingiber.

GINGER, Amomum zingiber—g. Beer powder, see Amomum zingiber—g. Indian, Asarum canadense — g. Jamaica, concentrated essence of, see Amomum zingiber — g. Preserved, see Amomum zingiber—g. Wild, Asarum Canadense.

GINGIBRA'CHIUM, from gingivæ, 'the gums,' and brachium, 'the arm.' A name given to the scurvy, because the gums and arms are chiefly affected by it. It has, also, been called Gingipe'dium, because the lower limbs are in many cases the seat of scorbutic spots. See Porphyra nautica.

GINGIPEDIUM, see Gingibrachium, Porphyra nautica.

GINGI'VÆ, from gignerē, 'to beget,' because the teeth are, as it were, begotten in them. (?) The gums, ουλα, U'la, Carnic'ula, (F.) Gencives. The portion of the mucous membrane of the mouth which covers the maxillary bones to the level of the alveolar arches. The gums are formed of a red tissue, more or less solid, and of a fibro-mucous nature, which adheres strongly to the necks of the teeth, and transmits, between the roots and their alveoli, a very thin expansion,—the alveolo-dental periosteum. The gums fix the teeth and contribute greatly to their solidity. In the aged, after the loss of the teeth, they become fibrous and very solid, and are inservient to mastication.

GINGIVA'LIS, Ulcet'icus, U'licus; from gingivæ, 'the gums.' Relating to the gums.

GING'LYMOID, Ginglymoï'deus, Ginglymo'des, from γιγγλυμος, 'a ginglymus,' and ειδος, 'resemblance. Resembling a ginglymus or hinge. An epithet applied to joints which resemble a hinge, as a ginglymoid joint.

GIN'GLYMUS, Cardinamen'tum, Cardo, 'a hinge.' (F.) Charnière, Articulation en charnière. A species of diarthrodial articulation, which only admits of motion in two directions, like a hinge, —as the knee-joint or elbow-joint.

GINSENG, Panax quinquefolium — g. Blue, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes — g. Yellow, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes—g. Horse, Triosteum—g. White, Triosteum.

GIRAFFE, Dengue.

GIRARD ROUSSIN, Asarum.

GIRDLE, Cingulum.

GIRL. This seems, formerly, to have been an appellation common to both sexes. Many etymologists deduce the word from the Su. Goth. Karl, 'a man.' It means a young female, (L.) Filia, from φιλειν, 'to love.' (F.) Fille.

GIROFLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GIROFLÉE JAUNE, Cheiranthus cheiri.

GISSA, Cynanche parotidæa.

GIZZARD, Ventriculus callosus.

GLABELLA, Mesophryon.

GLABELLAD, see Glabellar.

GLABEL'LAR, from glabella, 'the space be the eyebrows.' An epithet for an aspect towards the glabella.—Barclay. Glabellad is used adverbially by the same writer to signify 'towards the glabellar aspect.'

GLABRITIES, Calvities.

GLACE, Ice.

GLACIALE, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum.

GLACIALIS HUMOR, Crystalline.

GLACIES, Ice.

GLADIOLUS, Machærion—g. Cæruleus, Iris Germanica.

GLADI'OLUS COMMU'NIS, G. vulga'ris, Victoria'lis rotun'da, Cornflag, Victoria'lis feminea, (F.) Glayeul. The root of this plant has been considered aphrodisiac. Applied in cataplasm, it has been extolled against scrofulous tumours.

GLADIOLUS LUTEUS, Iris pseudacorus—g. Vulgaris, G. communis.

GLADIUS, Penis.

GLAMA, Lippitudo, Chassie.

GLAND, Glan'dula, Gran'dula, from glans, 'an acorn, a kernel.' Aden. The ancient anatomists gave this name to a number of organs of a texture generally soft, and a shape more or less globular, but differing greatly in their nature and functions. They applied it, for instance, 1. To those organs which separate from the blood, any fluid whatever. When such organs were composed of several lobules, united by common vessels, they received the name conglomerate glands, as the parotid, pancreas, &c. 2. To the reddish and spongy, knot-like bodies, which are met with in the course of the lymphatics. These they called conglobate glands; — see Ganglion (lymphatic;) and 3dly and lastly, to various other organs, whose intimate texture and functions are still unknown, as the Pineal gland, Pituitary gland, Glands of Pacchioni, Thyroid gland, Thymus gland. Supra-renal glands, &c. Chaussier restricts the word gland to those softish, granular, lobated organs, composed of vessels, and a particular texture, of which there are in the human body, the lachrymal, salivary, and mammary, the testicles, the liver, pancreas, and kidneys. These permanent glands, or glands with permanent ducts, are all destined to draw from the blood the molecules necessary for the formation of new fluids; and to convey these fluids externally, by means of one or more excretory ducts. Several glands besides their excretory ducts, have especial reservoirs, in which the fluids, secreted by them, collect, remain for a greater or less space of time, and undergo slight modifications before being evacuated; — such are, the gall-bladder for the liver, the urinary bladder for the kidneys, &c. Each gland has an organization peculiar to it, but we know not the intimate nature of the glandular texture. — Malpighi believed that the vessels terminate in small, solid masses, to which he gave the name — glandular grains or acini. In these, he considered, the excretory ducts originate. Ruysch thought that the glands are entirely vascular, and that the excretory ducts are immediately continuous with the vasa afferentia, &c. The best view, perhaps, is, that the exhaling or secreting vessel is distributed on the animal membrane, which forms the blind extremity of the excretory duct, and that the secretion is effected through it by means of cells.

The term glande (F.) is sometimes appropriated to the tumour formed by inflammation or engorgement of a lymphatic ganglion.

GLAND, Glans—g. Accessory, of the Parotid, see Parotid — g. Globate, Conglobate gland — g. Prostate, Prostate—g. Salivary, abdominal, Pancreas.

GLANDAGE, Adenophyma.

GLANDULAIRE, Glandular.

GLAND'ULAR, Glandula'ris, Glandulo'sus, (F.) Glandulaire, Glanduleux. Having the appearance, form, or texture of Glands; as a glandular body, a glandular texture, &c.

Glandular Substance of the Kidney, see Kidney.

GLANDULE OF MALPIGHI, see Corpora Malpighiana.

GRANDULEUX, Glandular.

GLANDULO'SO-CARNEUS. Ruysch gives this epithet to fleshy excrescences which he found in the bladder.

GLANDULOSUS, Glandular.

GLANS, ('an acorn.') Bal'anus, Cyt'taros, Cuspis, Caput, C. Penis, Genita'lē caput, (F.) Gland. The extremity of the penis and of the clitoris. The glans penis is of a conical, slightly flattened shape. It is continuous with the urethra, which opens at its apex; and is circumscribed by a projecting edge, called the Coro'na glandis. It is covered by a thin mucous membrane; is furnished, at its base, with sebaceous follicles, called glan'dulæ odorif'eræ Tyso'ni, the secretion from which is termed Smegma prepu'tii; and can, almost always, be covered by the reflection of the skin, called the prepuce. Lastly, it is formed of a spongy texture, susceptible of being thrown into erection.

Glans, Bronchocele, Pessary, Suppository.

Glans Clitor'idis is smaller. It is imperforate, and likewise covered with a sort of prepuce formed by the mucous membrane of the vulva.

Glans Jovis Theophrasti, Fagus castanea—g. Ulnæ, Olecranon—g. Unguentaria, Guilandina moringa, Myrobalanus.

GLAREA, Gravel.

GLASS, Vitrum.

GLAUBER'S SALTS, Soda, Sulphate of.

GLAUCEDO, Glaucoma.

GLAUCO'MA, from γλαυκος, 'sea-green.' Glauco'sis, Glauce'do, Cataract'a glauca, Oc'ulus cæ'sius, Cæ'sius, Phtharma glauco'ma, Parop'sis glauco'sis, Apoglauco'sis. Amongst the older pathologists, this word was used synonymously with cataract. It is now ordinarily applied to opacity of the vitreous humour or of the tunica hyaloidea, which manifests itself by a grayish, or greenish spot, apparent through the pupil. The diagnosis is generally difficult; and the disease is almost always incurable.

Glaucoma Woulhousi, Cataract.

GLAUCOSIS, Glaucoma.

GLAYEUL, Gladiolus vulgaris — g. Puant, Iris fœtidissima.

GLECHO'MA HEDERA'CEA, G. hirsu'tum, Heder'ula, Chamæcle'ma, C. hedera'cea, Calamin'tha hedera'cea, Calamin'ta humil'ior, Chamæcis'sus, Hed'era terres'tris, Nep'eta glecho'ma, Panace'a pec'toris, Ground-ivy, Gill, Gill-go-by-ground, Alehoof, Robin runaway, (F.) Lierre terrestre, Terrette. This plant has a strong smell, and a bitterish, somewhat aromatic, taste. It has been considered expectorant and tonic.

GLECHON, Mentha pulegium.

GLECHONI'TIS. Wine, impregnated with the Glechon, γληχων, mantha pulegium, or pennyroyal.

GLECOMA HIRSUTUM, G. hederaceum.

GLEET, see Gonorrhœa.

GLEME, Chassie, Lippitudo.

GLENĒ, γληνη. The pupil. The anterior part of the eye. The eyeball. The eye. According to some, the crystalline lens. Also, a glenoid cavity.

GLENITIS, Phacitis.

GLENOID, Glene.

Gle'noid, Glenoïd'al, Glenoïda'lis, Glenoï'des, Gleno'des, Glenoï'deus, from γληνη, 'the pupil,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' (F.) Glénoïde, Glenoïdale. Any shallow, articular cavity, Glenē, which receives the head of a bone; such as, 1. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the scapula, Fossa glenoïdea, Omocot'ylē, Acetab'ulum hu'meri, Cav'itas hu'meri glenoïdes, Entypo'sis, is situate at the anterior angle of the scapula; and is articulated with the head of the humerus. 2. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the temporal bone. It is seated between the two roots of the zygomatic process, and receives the condyle of the lower jaw.

Glenoid Lig'ament, (F.) Ligament Glénoïdien, is a fibro-cartilaginous ring or bourrelet, which seems formed by the expansion of the tendon of the long head of the biceps brachialis, and surrounds the glenoid cavity of the scapula, the depth of which it increases.

GLÉNOÏDALE, Glenoid.

GLISCHRAS'MA, Glis'chrotes, from γλισχραινω, (γλια, 'glue,') 'I become glutinous.' Lentor, viscidity.—Hippocrates.

GLISCHROCH'OLUS, from γλισχρος, 'viscid,' and χολη, 'bile.' An epithet for excrement which is glutinous and bilious.

GLISCHROTES, Glischrasma.

GLISOMARGO, Creta.

GLOBE, Bandage (head)—g. of the Eye, see Eye—g. Flower, Cephalanthus occidentalis.

GLOBULAIRE PURGATIVE, Globularia alypum.

GLOBULA'RIA AL'YPUM, Globula'ria, Montpel'lier Turbith, (F.) Globulaire purgative, Turbith blanc. The leaves of this plant are bitter, and have been used in intermittents and in constipation. See Alypon.

GLOB'ULE, Glob'ulus, Sphæ'rion, Sphæ'rula. A small globe.

Globules of the Blood, Blood globules, Blood-corpuscles, Blood-disks, Blood-vesicles, Glob'uli, Vesic'ulæ, Sphæ'rulæ seu Follic'uli san'guinis, (F.) Globules du sang, are small, circular bodies, which are particularly observable when the transparent parts of cold-blooded animals are examined by the aid of the microscope; and are met with in the blood of all animals. They are circular in the mammalia, and elliptical in birds and cold-blooded animals; are flat in all animals, and generally composed of a central nucleus enclosed in a membranous sac. Chemically, they consist of hæmatin and globulin—hæmato-globulin.

GLOBULE D'ARANTIUS, see Sigmoid valves—g. du Sang, Globule of the blood.

GLOBULES, GANGLION, see Neurine—g. Chyle, see Chyle—g. Lymph, see Lymph—g. Milk, see Milk—g. Mucous, see Mucus—g. Pus, see Pus—g. Pyoid, see Pus.

GLOBULI ARTERIARUM TERMINI, see Acinus—g. Sanguinis, Globules of the blood—g. Tartari martiales, Ferrum tartarizatum—g. Tartratis ferri et lixiviæ, Ferrum tartarizatum.

GLOB'ULIN, Glob'uline, Blood ca'sein. The colourless substance that remains after the abstraction of the colouring matter of the blood-corpuscle. It is a peculiar albuminous principle. The globulin of Berzelius consists of the envelopes of the blood globules, and of the part of their contents that remains after the extraction of the hæmatin. Lecanu regards it as identical with albumen; and, according to Mulder, it belongs to the combinations of protein.

The term globulin is likewise given by M. Donné to small granulations appertaining to the chyle, which are observable in the blood with the microscope. They are small white roundish, isolated or irregularly agglomerated grains; of about the 1-300 of a millimètre in diameter, and are regarded by M. Donné as the first elements of the blood globules. They are the white granulated corpuscles of Mandl.

GLOBULUS ARANTII, see Sigmoid valves—g. Nasi, see Nasus—g. Sanguineus, Punctum saliens—g. Stapedis Ossis, Os orbiculare.

GLOBUS HYSTER'ICUS, Nodus Hyster'icus, An'gonē, Anad'romē. A sensation, experienced by hysterical persons, as if a round body were rising from the abdomen towards the larynx, and producing a sense of suffocation.

GLOBUS MAJOR, see Epididymis—g. Minor, see Epididymis—g. Martialis, Ferrum tartarizatum.

GLOBUS UTERI'NUS. A term applied by accoucheurs to the round tumour, formed by the uterus in the lower part of the abdomen, immediately after delivery.

GLOMERATE, Conglomerate.

GLOM'ERULE, Glomer'ulus; from glomus, 'a clew of thread.' A ball or clew, formed by an agglomeration of vessels; as Glomerule of Malpighi; see Corpora Malpighiana.

GLOSSA, Glotta, 'the tongue.' The power of speech. Hence:

GLOSSAGRA, Glossalgia.

GLOSSAL'GIA, Glos'sagra, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the tongue.

GLOSSANIS'CHUM, Glossanoch'eus, Glossanochum, from γλωσσα, 'tongue,' and ανεχειν, 'to hold up.' An instrument for holding up the tongue.

GLOSSANOCHEUS, Glossanischum.

GLOSSANOCHUM, Glossanischum.

GLOSSAN'THRAX, Pestis glossan'thrax, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and ανθραξ, 'a carbuncle.' Carbuncle of the tongue. A disease more common in cattle than in man.

GLOSSEPIGLOT'TIC, Glossepiglot'icus. Relating to the tongue and epiglottis, as Ligamen'tum glossepiglott'icum.

GLOSSIANUS, Lingual muscle.

GLOSSI'TIS, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Glosson'cus inflammato'rius, Angi'na lingua'ria seu lingua'lis, Inflamma'tio Linguæ, Inflammation of the tongue, (F.) Inflammation de la Langue. When confined to the mucous membrane, it is of slight importance. That which affects the whole of the tongue is a serious disease, and requires the vigorous use of antiphlogistics. It is rare.

GLOSSOC'ACĒ, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and κακος, 'evil.' Ulceration of the tongue, with symptoms of adynamic fever.

GLOSSOCARCINO'MA, Glossoscir'rhus, Carcino'ma Linguæ, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Cancer of the tongue.

GLOSSOCAT'OCHUS, Glossocat'ochē, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and κατεχω, 'I arrest.' Linguæ Deten'tor, Spec'ulum Oris, (F.) Abaisseur de la langue. An instrument, the invention of which is attributed to Paulus of Ægina, and which was employed to depress the tongue, in order to examine diseases of the fauces. It was composed of two branches; one of which had, at its extremity, a plate for depressing the tongue; whilst the other, shaped like a horse-shoe, was applied under the chin. The finger, or the handle of a spoon, or a spatula, is now alone used in similar cases. See Catagoglossum.

GLOSSOCE'LĒ, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and κηλη, 'hernia,' 'tumour.' Hernia of the Tongue, Paraglos'sē, Prolap'sus linguæ, Glossomegis'tus, Glossopto'sis. Projection of the tongue from the mouth. It depends, generally, on an inflammatory swelling of the organ. At times, however, a chronic glossocele, or sort of œdematous engorgement, is met with; which proceeds to a great length, and deforms the dental arches, the lips, &c. Inflammatory glossocele must be combated by antiphlogistics. In the œdematous kind, such as is sometimes caused by excessive salivation, the infiltrated fluid may be pressed back by the hand of the practitioner, to get the tongue behind the teeth; and it may be kept there by a piece of gauze tied over the mouth. The chronic, elongated kind sometimes requires amputation of a portion of the organ.

GLOSSOCOMA, Glossospasmus.

GLOSSOC'OMON, Glossoc'omum, Glossocomi'on, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and κμειvo, 'to guard.' The ancients gave this name to a small case for holding the tongues of their wind-instruments. By extension, it was applied to the box or cradle in which fractured limbs were kept. We find, in the ancient writers, a Glossocomon of Hippocrates, of Nymphodorus, Galen, &c.

GLOSSODESMUS, Frænum linguæ.

GLOSSO-EPIGLOT'TICUS. That which belongs to the tongue and epiglottis. Some anatomists have so denominated certain fleshy fibres, which pass from the base of the tongue towards the epiglottis. These muscles are more evident in some of the mammalia than in man; and their use seems to be,—to raise the epiglottis, and to remove it farther from the glottis. Santorini, who described them after Eustachius, calls them Retracto'res Epiglot'tidis.

GLOSSO-EPIGLOT'TIC LIG'AMENTS, Frœna epiglot'tidis. Three folds of mucous membrane, which connect the anterior surface of the epiglottis with the root of the tongue.

GLOSSOG'RAPHY, Glossogra'phia, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the tongue.

GLOSSO-HYAL. A name given, by Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire, to the posterior cornua of the os hyoides.

GLOSSOL'OGY, Glossolog''ia, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and λογος, 'a treatise,' 'a discourse.' A treatise on the tongue.

GLOSSOL'YSIS, Glossople'gia, Paral'ysis linguæ, P. Nervi hypoglossi, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Paralysis of the tongue.

GLOSSOMANTI'A, Progno'sis ex linguâ, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and μαντεια, 'divination.' Prognosis from the state of the tongue.

GLOSSOMEGISTUS, Glossocele, Paraglosse.

GLOSSON'CUS, from γωλσσα, 'the tongue,' and ογκος, 'tumour.' Exonco'sis linguæ. Swelling of the tongue.

GLOSSONCUS INFLAMMATORIUS, Glossitis.

GLOSSO-PALATINUS, Glosso-staphylinus—g. Pharyngeal, Pharyngo-glossal.

GLOSSO-PHARYNGEAL, Glosso-pharyngeus—g. p. Nerve, Pharyngo-glossal nerve.

GLOSSO-PHARYNGEUS, Glosso-pharyngeal, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx.' Belonging to the tongue and pharynx. Some anatomists thus designate certain fleshy bundles, which arise from the lateral parts of the base of the tongue, and are inserted into the parietes of the pharynx. They form part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GLOSSOPLEGIA, Glossolysis.

GLOSSOPTOSIS, Glossocele.

GLOSSOSCIRRHUS, Glossocarcinoma.

GLOSSOSCOP'IA, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and σκοπεω, 'I view.' Inspection of the tongue as an index of disease.

GLOSSOSPAS'MUS, Glossoco'ma, Spasmus lin'guæ, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Cramp or spasm of the tongue.

GLOSSOSPA'THA, Spat'ula pro orē, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and σπαθη, 'spatula.' A spatula for pressing down the tongue to enable the fauces to be examined.

GLOSSO-STAPHYLI'NUS, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and σταφυλη, 'the uvula.' Glossopalati'nus, Pala'to-glossus, Constric'tor Isthmi Fau'cium. A small, thin, narrow, and long muscle, which arises from the base of the tongue, and is inserted at the inferior and lateral part of the velum palati, in the anterior pillar of which it is situate. Its use is to contract the isthmus faucium, by depressing the venum palati, and raising the base of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTERE'SIS, Linguæ extirpa'tio, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and στερησις, 'privation.' Extirpation of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTROPH'IA, from γλωσσα, 'tongue,' and στρεφω, 'I turn.' Doubling of the point of the tongue upwards and backwards,—said to have been a mode of suicide. (?)

GLOSSOT'OMY, Glossotom'ia, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' Dissection of the tongue. Amputation of the tongue.

GLOSSYPERTROPH'IA, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' ὑπερ, 'over,' and τρεφειν, 'to nourish.' Hypertrophy or supernutrition of the tongue.

GLOTTA, Glossa, Tongue.

GLOTTIS, γλωττις, (also, the mouth-piece of a flute,') Lig'ula. A small oblong aperture, in the larynx, comprised between the chordæ vocales. It is narrow, anteriorly; wider, posteriorly; and is capable of being modified by muscular contraction, as may be required by the voice. It is by the chordæ vocales, that voice is produced. The glottis is nearly an inch long in the adult male: less in the female and child.

Glottis is, by some, used synonymously with ventricle of the larynx: with others, it includes the whole of the larynx.

GLOTTIS, LIPS OF THE, Thyreo-arytenoid ligaments.

GLOUGLOU D'UNE BOUTEILLE, Gurgling.

GLOUTERON, Aretium Lappa—g. Petit, Xanthium.

GLOUTIUS, Gluteal—g. Maximus et extimus, Glutæus maximus—g. Secundus et medius, Glutæus medius—g. Tertius et intimus, Glutæus minimus.

GLOUTON, Glutton.

GLOW WORM, Cicindela.

GLUANT, Glutinous.

GLUCOSE, from γλυκυς, 'sweet.' Grape sugar, Fruit sugar, Starch sugar, Diabetic sugar, Honey sugar. A variety of sugar, that occurs naturally in many vegetable juices, and in honey. Compared with cane sugar, it is much less soluble in water, and less disposed to crystallise; and, when injected into the blood-vessels, does not pass off to the like extent by the kidneys.

GLUCOSURIA, Diabetes mellitus.

GLUE BONE, Osteocolla.

GLUE FISH, Ichthyocolla.

GLUTÆUS MAGNUS, G. major—g. Major, G. Maximus.

GLUTÆ'US MAX'IMUS, Glutæ'us major, Maximus et ex'timus glou'tius, G. magnus, Ilio-sacro-fémoral; Sacro-fémoral, (Ch.,) (F.) Muscle grand fessier. This muscle is situate at the posterior part of the pelvis, and at the upper and posterior part of the thigh. It is large, thick, and quadrilateral; and is attached, above, to the posterior part of the crista ilii, to the part of the ilium comprised between the crista and the upper curved line, to the posterior surface of the sacrum, coccyx, and great sacro-sciatic ligament; and below, it terminates by a broad aponeurosis, which is inserted into the rugged surface that descends from the trochanter major to the linea aspera of the femur. This muscle extends the thigh on the pelvis, and rotates the thigh outwards. It is greatly concerned in station and progression.

GLUTÆ'US ME'DIUS, Glou'tius Secun'dus et Mé'dius, (F.) Ilio-trochantérien: Grand Ilio-trochantérien, (Ch.,) Moyen Fessier. This muscle is situate in part beneath the preceding; it is broad, very thick, radiated, and triangular; attached, above, to the crista ilii, and to the part of the outer surface of that bone comprised between the three anterior fourths of its crista, its upper curved line, and its lower; and below, it ends by a tendon, inserted at the upper edge of the great trochanter. It is an abductor of the thigh; but can turn the thigh outwards or inwards, according as its posterior or inferior fibres are thrown separately into contraction.

GLUTÆ'US MIN'IMUS, Glutæ'us minor, Ilio-ischii-trochantérien, Ter'tius et In'timus Glou'tius (F.) Petit Fessier;—Petit Ilio-trochantérien (Ch.) This muscle, which is situate beneath the preceding, is flat, triangular, and with radiated fibres. It is attached, above, to the external surface of the os ilii, from the inferior curved line to the acetabulum; and, below, is inserted into the anterior part of the great trochanter. It has the same uses as the preceding.

GLUTÆUS MINOR, G. minimus.

GLU'TEAL, Glou'tius, Glutæ'us, from γλουτος, 'the nates,' or 'buttocks.' (F.) Fessier. That which belongs or relates to the nates. This name has been given to many parts which compose the nates.

Gluteal Aponeurosis. The upper and back part of the femoral fascia. In it is a remarkable opening, called the gluteal arch, for the passage of the gluteal vessels and nerves.

Gluteal Arch, see Gluteal aponeurosis.

Gluteal Artery, Poste'rior Il'iac Artery, (F.) Artère fessière, is one of the largest branches of the hypogastric. It makes its exit from the pelvis at the upper part of the superior sciatic foramen; gains the posterior part of the pelvis, and divides into two branches: — the one superficial, the other deep-seated. The last subdivides into three secondary branches, whose ramifications are distributed particularly to the Glutæi, Longissimus Dorsi, Sacro-lumbalis, &c., and anastomose with the sciatic and internal circumflex arteries.

Gluteal Nerve, (F.) Nerf Fessier, is a large branch, furnished by the 5th pair of lumbar nerves. It is chiefly distributed to the glutæi muscles.

Gluteal Vein, (F.) Veine fessière, follows the same march as the artery of the same name.

GLUTEN, Glu'tinum, Lentor, 'glue, paste.' Veg''etable Gluten, Veg''etable Ca'sein. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is soft, of a grayish white, viscid consistence, and very elastic. Exposed to the air, it becomes hard, brown, and fragile; and, in moist air, putrefies. Water and alcohol do not dissolve it. It is soluble in vegetable, and in weak mineral acids, at a high temperature. The farinæ, in which it is found, are those preferred for the preparation of bread; on account of the property it has of making the paste rise. It is a compound of protein, and hence has been ranged amongst the "proteinaceous alimentary principles" by Dr. Pereira. By washing wheaten dough with a stream of water, the gum, sugar, starch and vegetable albumens are removed: the ductile, tenacious, elastic, gray mass left is the gluten, common gluten, Beccaria's gluten. Pure gluten is the soluble portion on boiling common gluten in alcohol.

Gluten Articulorum, Synovia—g. Beccaria's, see Gluten — g. Bread, see Bread, gluten — g. Common, see Gluten—g. Pure, see Gluten.

GLUTI, Nates.

GLUTIA, Nates, Quadrigemina corpora

GLUTINANS, Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIF, Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIO, Agglutination.

GLUTINEUX, Glutinous.

GLU'TINOUS, Glutino'sus, Collo'des, from gluten, 'paste, glue.' (F.) Glutineux, Gluant. An epithet given to substances taken from the animal or vegetable kingdom, and endowed with unusual viscidity. The decoctions of marshmallows, and figs, and the jelly of hartshorn, are said to be glutinous.

GLUTINUM, Gluten.

GLUTOI, Nates.

GLUTTON, same etymon as the next. Gastrimar'gus, Hel'luo, Mando, Gulo'sus, Lurco, (F.) Glouton, Gourmand, Goulu. An excessive eater.

GLUT'TONY, from glutio, 'I swallow,' gluttus, 'the gullet.' Limo'sis Helluo'num, Gastris'mus, (F.) Gourmandise. Excessive appetite, owing often to habitual indulgence.

GLUTTUS, Œsophagus.

GLUTUS, Trochanter major.

GLYCANSIS, Edulcoration.

GLYCAS'MA, from γλυκυς, 'sweet.' A sweet wine, prepared from must.—Linden.

GLYCERATON, Glycyrrhiza.

GLYCERIN, see Fat.

GLYCIPICROS, Solanum dulcamara.

GLYCISIDE, Pæonia.

GLYCYPHYTON, Glycyrrhiza.

GLYCYRRHI'ZA, from γλυκυς, 'sweet,' and ριζα, 'a root.' Glycyrrhi'za Glabra seu Lævis, Liquorii''ia Scyth'ica, Glycera'ton, Glycyph'yton, Liq'uorice, Lic'orice, Adip'sos, Alcacas, Al'imos, (F.) Réglisse. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The root of this southern European plant is inodorous; has a sweet taste; is mucilaginous; and leaves, when unpeeled, a degree of bitterness in the mouth. It is used as a demulcent, and chiefly in catarrh. The extract, made from it and sold in the shops, is known under the name Spanish Liquorice or Liquorice Juice, (F.) Jus de Réglisse.

Pectoral Balsam of Liquorice—a quack preparation—is said by Dr. Paris to consist chiefly of Paregoric Elixir, strongly impregnated with Oil of Aniseed.

GLYCYRRHŒ'A, from γλυκυς, 'sweet,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' A discharge of saccharine fluid from the system.

Glycyrrhœa Urinosa, Diabetes mellitus.

GLYSTER HERBS, Herbæ pro Enem'atē. The herbs ordinarily sold by the English apothecary under this title, are: — mallow leaves, one part; chamomile flowers, one part. (℥iss to Oj of water.)

GNAMPSIS, Curvature.

GNAPHALIUM DIOICUM, Antennaria dioica.

Gnaphalium Margarita'ceum; Cudweed, Life everlasting. An indigenous plant, growing in woods and fields, and flowering in August. Its virtues are not defined, and the same may be said of Gnaphalium Polyceph'alum; Sweet-scented Life everlasting.

GNATHALGIA, Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHANCYLO'SIS, from γναθος, 'the jaw,' and αγκυλωσις, 'stiffness of joint.' Ancylosis of the lower jaw.

GNATHI'TIS, Inflamma'tio genæ, from γναθος, 'the cheek, the jaw.' Inflammation of the cheek or upper jaw.

GNATHMUS, Gnathus.

GNATHOCEPH'ALUS, from γναθος, 'the jaw,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A monster who has no head visible externally, but exhibits voluminous jaws. —G. St. Hilaire.

GNATHOCYNANCHE, Cynanche parotidæa.

GNATHONEURALGIA, Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHOPLAS'TICĒ, from γναθος, 'cheek,' and πλαστικος, 'formative.' The formation of an artificial cheek.

GNATHOPLE'GIA, Gnathoparal'ysis, from γναθος, and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the cheek. Gnathoparalysis is employed by Fuchs to signify paralysis of the lesser portion of the trifacial nerve, which supplies the muscles of mastication.

GNATHORRHAG''IA, from γναθος, and 'ρηγνυμι, 'to burst forth.' Hemorrhage from the internal surface of the cheeks.

GNATHOSPASMUS, Trismus.

GNATHUS, Gnathmus, from κναω, 'I scrape, rub.' The cheek, the jaw. Also, the part of the jaws in which the teeth are fixed.—Hippocrates, Foësius. See Bucca, Gena, and Maxillary Bone.

GNESIOS, Legitimate.

GNOME, Intellect.

GNOSIS, γνωσις, 'knowledge.' A common suffix, as in Diagno'sis, Progno'sis, &c.

GOACONAX, see Toluifera balsamum.

GOATS' BEARD, COMMON, Tragopogon.

GOATS' MILK, see Milk, goats' — g. Milk, artificial, see Milk, goats'— g. Thorn, Astragalus verus.

GOBELET ÉMÉTIQUE, Goblet, emetic.

GOBLET, EMETIC, Poc'ulum emet'icum, Calix vomito'ria, (F.) Gobelet émétique. A vessel, made by pouring melted antimony into a mould. By putting wine into this and allowing it to stand some time, it acquires the property of producing vomiting. This kind of emetic has been long rejected, as the practitioner could never be certain of the dose he exhibited.

GODESBERG, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters at Godesberg, a German mile from Bonn, are an efficacious, acidulous chalybeate, formerly known by the name, Draitsch Water. They contain chloride of sodium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, and carbonate of iron.

GODFREY'S COR'DIAL. A celebrated nostrum, for which Dr. Paris has given the following formula. Infuse ℥ix of sassafras and of the seeds of carraway, coriander, and anise, each ℥j, in six pints of water. Simmer the mixture until reduced to ℔iv: then add ℔vj of treacle, and boil the whole for a few minutes. When cold, add ℥iij of tincture of opium. The following form is recommended by a committee of the Philadelphia college of Pharmacy. Tinct. Opii, Oiss; Syrupi Nigri, Oxvj; Alcoholis, Oij; Aquæ, Oxxvj; Carbonatis Potassæ, ℥ijss; Olei Sassafras, f℥iv, M. It is anodyne.

GODRONNÉ, (Canal,) Cana'lis Petitia'nus, Couronne ciliaire, Canal de Petit, Canal goudronné, Canal or Bul'lular Canal of Petit. Petit gave this name (from (F.) godron, 'a plait or fold,') to the semicircular canal, formed by the tunica hyaloidea around the edge of the crystalline; because it appears, as it were, plaited or festooned.

GOGGLE-EYE, Strabismus.

GOITRE, Bronchocele — g. Leaf, see Laminaria.

GOITRE STICKS. In South America the stems of a seaweed are so called, because they are chewed by the inhabitants where goitre prevails.—Royle.

GOIT'ROUS, (F.) Goîtreux. Relating or appertaining to goitre. One affected by Goitre or Bronchocele,—Goitred.

GOLD, Aurum, Chrysos, Sol, Rex metallo'rum, (F.) Or. A solid, yellow, very brilliant, hard, very ductile, malleable, tenacious, and heavy metal; found in nature, either in its native state, or combined with a little silver, copper, or iron. S. g. 19·25.

Muriate of Gold, Chloride of Gold, Auri Chlo'ridum, A. Terchlo'ridum, A. Mu'rias, A. Chlorure'tum, Aurum Muriat'icum, A. Chlora'tum, A. Oxydula'tum muriat'icum, A. Sali'tum, (F.) Chlorure d'or, Muriate d'or, Hydro-chlorate d'or has been admitted into the Pharmacopœia of the United States, and into that of Paris, &c. The formulæ, however, differ. That of the United States is a muriate with two bases; and is prepared, according to the form of Dr. Chrestien, by dissolving the gold in a mixture of nitric and muriatic acids, and adding chloride of sodium to the residuum after evaporation; then redissolving and evaporating slowly to dryness. The Parisian formula for the Muriate d'or, Murias seu Chlorure'tum Auri, consists in simply dissolving the gold in the acids, and evaporating to dryness. It has been recommended as an antisyphilitic in old, rebellious, venereal affections, exostoses, and in venereal, scrofulous or cancerous glandular enlargements. Dose, gr. 1-8th to gr. ss, rubbed on the tongue or gums. Internally, one-sixteenth of a grain, in pill.

Various other preparations, as the Cy'anide or Tercy'anide, (Auri Cyan'idum, A. Cyanure'tum, A. Tercyan'idum, (F.) Cyanure d'or;) the metallic gold in a state of division (Aurum metal'licum, Pulvis Auri, (F.) Or divisé,) obtained by amalgamating gold with mercury and driving the latter off by heat; and in the form of filings (Aurum lima'tum; the Chloride of Gold and Sodium, (Aurum muriat'icum natrona'tum, A. muriat'icum, A. chlora'tum natro'natum, Chlore'tum Au'ricum Chlore'to na'trii, Mu'rias Au'rico-na'tricum, Chlorure'tum auri et natrii, So'dii auro-terchlo'ridum, Hydrochlorate or muriate of Gold and Soda, (F.) Chlorure d'or et de Sodium, Hydrochlorate ou muriate d'or et de Soude; the Nitro-muriate of Gold, (Aurum Nitrico-muriat'icum, Auri nitromu'rias, (F.) Nitromuriate d'or;) the Oxide of Gold, (Auri Ox'idum, Aurum Oxida'tum, Auri terox'idum, Perox'ide of gold, Auric acid, (F.) Oxide d'or); and the Iodide of Gold, (Auri Io'didum, A. Iodure'tum, (F.) Iodure d'or,) have been employed in the like affections, and with similar results.

Gold-Beater's Skin. The intestina recta of the ox, which have been beaten quite smooth, for the manufacture of gold leaf. Used as a defensive dressing for slight cuts, &c.

GOMPHI'ASIS, Gomphias'mus, from γομφος, 'a nail.' A disease of the teeth, and particularly of the molares; looseness of the teeth in their sockets. Agomphia'sis. Pain in the teeth. Odontalgia.

GOMPHIASMUS, Gomphiasis.

GOMPHIOI, Molar teeth.

GOMPHOCAR'PUS CRISPUS. A South African plant, the root of which, formerly known to the Dutch apothecaries as Radix Asclepiadis crispæ, is extremely bitter and acrid; and, on account of its diuretic virtues, a decoction or infusion of it has been advised in various kinds of dropsy. A tincture of it is said to be valuable in colic.

GOMPHOMA, Gomphosis.

GOMPHO'SIS, Cardinamen'tum, Clava'tio, Gompho'ma, Coagmenta'tio, Inclava'tio, from γομφος, 'a nail.' Engompho'sis. An immovable articulation, in which one bone is received into another, like a nail or peg into its hole. Gomphosis is only met with in the articulations of the teeth with the alveoli. It is, also, called Articulation par implantation.

GOMPHUS, Clavus.

GONACRASIA, Spermatorrhœa.

GONACRATIA, Spermatorrhœa.

GON'AGRA, Gon'yagra, from γονυ, 'the knee,' and αγρα, 'a prey.' "That which attacks the knees." Gout in the knees. Paracelsus calls it Gen'ugra.

GONAL'GIA, from γονυ, 'the knee,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the knee. Gonyal'gia. This is almost always produced by gout. It may, however, depend on some other disease, either of the knee or of another part—particularly of the hip-joint.

GONARTHRI'TIS, from γονυ, 'the knee,' αρθρον, 'joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the knee-joint.

GONARTHROCACE, Gonocace.

GONAURA, see Sperm.

GONDOLE OCULAIRE, Scaphium oculare.

GONDRET'S AMMONIACAL CAUSTIC, Pommade de Gondret—g. Counter-irritant, Pommade de Gondret.

GONĒ, Gonos, Genitu'ra. The semen; (hence, gonorrhœa)—the uterus, offspring. Hippocrates. See Epigone and Generation.

GONECYSTIDES, Vesiculæ seminales.

GONECYSTI'TIS, Inflamma'tio vesicula'rum semina'lium, from γονη, 'sperm,' κυστις, 'bladder,' and itis, 'denoting inflammation.' Inflammation of the vesiculæ seminales.

GONEPŒUS, Spermatopœus.

GONEPOIETICUS, Spermatopœus.

GONFLEMENT, Swelling.

GONGRONA, Bronchocele.

GONGROPHTHISIS, Pthisis pulmonalis.

GONGYLIDIUM, Pilula.

GONGYLION, Pilula.

GONGYLIS, Pilula.

GONIOM'ETER, Goniom'etrum; from γωνια, 'an angle,' and μετρον, 'a measure.' An instrument for measuring angles.

A 'FACIAL GONIOMETER' has been invented by Mr. Turnpenny, of Philadelphia, which is well adapted for measuring the facial angle.

GONOBOLIA, Ejaculation, spermatic.

GONOC'ACĒ, Gonarthroc'acē, from γονυ, 'the knee,' and κακος, 'evil.' Tumor genu albus. White swelling of the knee. Hydrarthus.

GONOCELE, Spermatocele.

GONOĪ'DES, from γονη, 'seed,' and ειδος, 'appearance.' Genitu'ræ sim'ilis. Similar to sperm. Sperm'atoid, Spermatoï'des, Spermato'des. A term appropriated to any substance which resembles sperm.

GONOPOIETICUS, Spermatopœus.

GONORRHÉE BÂTARDE, Gonorrhœa spuria.

GONORRHŒ'A. Erroneously called from γονη, 'sperm,' and ρεω, 'I flow,' because the older writers believed it to be a flux of semen. Blennorrhag''ia, Blennorrhœ'a, Blennure'thria, Phallorrhœ'a, Medorrhœ'a, M. viri'lis, Catar'rhus Gonorrhœ'a, C. ure'thræ, Urethri'tis, Inflamma'tio ure'thræ, Urethral'gia, Profiu'vium muco'sum ure'thræ, Blennorrhœ'a urethra'lis, Catarrhus urethra'lis, (F.) Écoulement, Uréthrite, Urétrite. An inflammatory discharge of mucus from the membrane of the urethra in both sexes; and from that of the prepuce in man, and the vagina in woman. It may be excited spontaneously, or by irritants applied directly to the membrane; but is, usually, produced by impure connexion. Two great varieties have been generally reckoned.—1. GONORRHŒA PURA VEL BENIG'NA. That which does not follow an impure connexion; (F.) Échauffement, Blennorrhag''ia benigna, Caulorrhœ'a benig'na, Catar'rhus Ure'thræ, Gonorrhœ'a catarrha'lis, G. non contagio'sa: — and 2. GONORRHŒA IMPU'RA, malig'na, contagio'sa, syphilit'ica, et virulen'ta; Fluor albus malig'nus, Fluxus vene'reus, Blennorrhœ'a luo'des, Myxio'sis, Lues gonorrho'ica, Scroph'ulæ gonorrho'icæ, Tuber'cula gonorrho'ica, Clap, (F.) Chaudepisse; that which is the result of impure commerce. The French, also, distinguish the Chaudepisse sèche, or that unaccompanied with discharge; and the Chaudepisse chordée, Gonnorrhœa corda'ta, or that accompanied with chordee, and which, of course, occurs only in the male. It is the kind that most frequently engages the attention of the practitioner, and is characterized by mucous discharge from the urethra or vagina, intermixed with specific matter, and accompanied by burning pain on micturition. It is decidedly infectious. It is, however, a distinct disease from syphilis, and never produces it. Its duration is various, but the inflammatory symptoms usually subside in four or five weeks; leaving generally behind more or less of the gonorrhœa mucosa or gleet. Gonorrhœa of every kind, attended with any inflammatory symptoms, is best treated by the antiphlogistic regimen; avoiding every kind of irritation, and keeping the body cool by small doses of salts, and the urine diluted by the mildest fluids. After the inflammatory symptoms have subsided, cubebs, or the balsam of copaiba, exhibited in the dose of a teaspoonful, three times a day, will be found effectual: indeed, during the existence of the inflammatory symptoms, it often affords decided relief. Injections are rarely required.

Sometimes, gonorrhœa affects the glans; when it is called Gonorrhœa Spu'ria, G. Bal'ani, Balanoblennorrhœ'a, Balannorrhœ'a, Balani'tis, Blennorrhag''ia spu'ria vel notha, (F.) Blennorrhagie du gland, Gonorrhée bâtarde, Fausse Blennorrhagie. It requires only cleanliness and cooling lotions.

Some other varieties of gonorrhœa have been enumerated, but they are of little moment.

In consequence of repeated attacks of gonorrhœa, or of the debility induced by a single attack, it not unfrequently happens, as already remarked, that a constant, small discharge occurs, or remains behind, after all danger of infection is removed. The great difference between it and gonorrhœa is, that it is uninfectious. The discharge consists of globular particles, contained in a slimy mucus, and is generally devoid of that yellow colour which characterizes the discharge of gonorrhœa virulenta. It is unattended with pain, scalding, &c. To this state the names Gleet, Gonorrhœ'a muco'sa, Blennorrhœ'a chron'ica, Blennorrhœ'a, &c., have been given. It is commonly a disease of some duration, and demands the use of the copaiba, astringent injections; and, if obstinate, the introduction of the bougie.

GONORRHŒA BALANI, G. spuria — g. Benigna, Leucorrhœa — g. Catarrhalis, G. pura — g. Chordata, Chordee.

GONORRHŒA DORMIEN'TIUM, G. Oneirog'onos. The seminal discharge which occurs during sleep, and is occasioned by libidinous dreams. See Pollution.

GONORRHŒA LAXO'RUM, G. libidino'sa, Spermorrhœ'a aton'ica, consists of a pellucid discharge from the urethra, whilst awake, without erection of the penis, but with venereal thoughts.

GONORRHŒA LAXORUM, Pollution, G. libidinosa —g. Mucosa, (gleet,) see Gonorrhœa—g. Noncontagiosa, G. pura — g. Notha inveterata, Leucorrhœa — g. Oneirogonos, G. dormientium, Pollution—g. Vera, Pollution, Spermatorrhœa.

GONOS, Gone.

GONOSTROMA, Proligerous disc.

GONY, γονυ, Genu, 'the knee;' hence:

GONYAGRA, Gonagra.

GONYALGIA, Gonalgia.

GONYC'ROTUS, from γονυ, 'the knee,' and κροτεω, 'I strike.' One who is knock-kneed, or in-kneed. See Entogonyancon.

GONYON'CUS, from γονυ, 'the knee,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A swelling of the knee.

GOODYE'RA PUBES'CENS, Tussa'ca reticula'ta, Satyr'ium, Neott'ia, Rattlesnake leaf, Rattlesnake Plantain, Networt, Netleaf, Scrofula weed. An indigenous plant, used empirically in scrofula — the fresh leaves being applied to the sores. It is employed by the Indians.

GOOSEFOOT, Chenopodium anthelminticum — g. Angular-leaved, Chenopodium bonus Henricus—g. Stinking, Chenopodium vulvaria.

GOOSEGRASS, Galium aparine, G. verum.

GOOSESHARE, Galium aparine.

GORGE, Throat—g. Grosse, Bronchocele — g. Mal de, Cynanche.

GORGERET, Gorget — g. Lithotome, Gorget, lithotomy—g. à Repoussoir, see Gorget.

GORGET, from (F.) gorge, 'the throat.' Cana'lis canalicula'tus, Ductor canalicula'tus, (F.) Gorgeret. An instrument representing a long gutter, in the shape of a throat, which is especially employed in the operations of lithotomy and fistula in ano.

GORGET, CUTTING, see Gorget, and Lithotomy.

GORGET, LITHOT'OMY, (F.) Gorgeret Lithotome, Cutting Gorget, is the one used in the operation for the stone, for the purpose of dividing the prostate and the neck of the bladder, so as to enable the surgeon to introduce the forceps and extract the stone. At the end of this gorget is a crest or beak, which fits the groove of the staff, and admits of the gorget being passed along it into the bladder. Besides cutting, there are also blunt gorgets, intended to be introduced into the wound — their concavity serving as a guide for the forceps into the bladder.

The chief modifications in the gorget have been made by Andouillet, Bell, Blicke, Bromfield, Cline, Desault, Foubert, Hawkins, Larrey, Lefèvre, Michaelis, Thomas, &c.

GORGET FOR FISTULA IN ANO consists of a semi-cylindrical wooden staff, four inches long, without including the handle, and furnished with a wide groove. This is introduced into the rectum, to prevent the point of the bistoury from injuring the intestine, when the internal orifice of the fistula is deeply situate, and it is desirable to perform the operation by incision. This instrument, invented by Marchettis, has been modified by Percy, Runge, &c.

Desault invented an instrument for conducting the wire by the anus, in the operation for fistula by ligature. He called it Gorgeret à repoussoir.

GORGO'NEI FONTES. Fountains described by Libavius as containing water which possessed a petrifying property; probably, water holding in solution supercarbonate of lime.

GORGOSSET, Pyrosis.

GOSIER, Pharynx, Throat.

GOSSUM, Bronchocele.

GOSSYP'IUM, Gossyp'ium Herba'ceum; Gossyp'ion Xylon, Xylum, Bombax, Cotton, (F.) Coton. Family, Malvaceæ. Sex. Syst. Monadelphia Polyandria. The seeds of the Cotton Tree, Gossip'ium arbor'eum, have been administered in coughs, on account of the mucilage they contain. The cotton wool is used in medicine for making moxas, &c.

GOTIUM, Bronchocele.

GOUDRON, see Pinus sylvestris.

GOUET, Arum maculatum.

GOUÈTRE, Bronchocele.

GOULARD'S LOTION, see Lotion, Goulard's.

GOULARD WATER, Liquor plumbi subacetatis dilutus.

GOULU, Glutton.

GOURD, Cucurbita — g. Bitter, Cucumis colocynthis—g. Bottle, Cucurbita pepo.

GOURD WORM, Distoma hepaticum.

GOURMANDISE, Gluttony.

GOURME, Porrigo larvalis. Vulgarly, in France, any cutaneous eruption.

GOUSSE, Legumen.

GOUT, Arthri'tis, Arth'ragra, Arthral'gia, Morbus domino'rum, Malum articulo'rum, Morbus articula'ris, Gutta, Arthro'sia Pod'agra, Podal'gia, Pod'agra, Arthrit'icus verus, Arthri'tis Podagra, Podagra Arthri'tis, Flux'io arthrit'ica, Febris arthrit'ica, F. Podag'rica, Arthrodyn'ia podag'rica, Cauma podag'ricum, Flerecin, Gastro-arthri'tis, Misopto'chos, (F.) Goutte. The gout was formerly regarded as a catarrh, and received its name from (F.) goutte, (L.) gutta, 'a drop;' because it was believed to be produced by a liquid, which distilled, goutte à goutte, 'drop by drop, on the diseased part. This name, which seems to have been first used about the year 1270, has been admitted into the different languages of Europe. Gout is an inflammation of the fibrous and ligamentous parts of the joints. It almost always attacks, first, the great toe; whence it passes to the other smaller joints, after having produced, or been attended with, various sympathetic effects, particularly in the digestive organs: after this, it may attack the greater articulations. It is an affection which is extremely fugitive, and variable in its recurrence. It may be acquired or hereditary. In the former case, it rarely appears before the age of thirty-five; in the latter, it is frequently observed earlier. It is often difficult to distinguish it from rheumatism. A combination is, indeed, supposed to exist sometimes; hence called Rheumatic gout. During the paroxysm or fit, a burning, lancinating pain is experienced in the affected joint, attended with tumefaction, tension, and redness. One or more joints may be attacked, either at the same time or in succession; and, in either case, the attack terminates by resolution in a few days. This is the Arthri'tis acu'ta, inflammato'ria vel regula'ris, Regular gout, Arthro'sia pod'agra regula'ris, Arth'ragra legit'ima seu vera seu genui'na seu norma'lis, (F.) Goutte régulière chaude. At other times, pains in the joints exist, of more or less acute character; the swelling being without redness. These pains persist, augment, and diminish irregularly, without exhibiting intermission, and, consequently, without having distinct paroxysms. The disease is then called aton'ic, asthen'ic, imperfect or irregular gout, Chronic G., Arthri'tis aton'ica vel asthen'ica, Arthro'sia Podagra larva'ta, Dysarthri'tis. It is, also, commonly called in France Goutte froide, Goutte blanche. It may appear primarily, or succeed attacks of regular gout.

Gout does not always confine itself to the joints. It may attack the internal organs: when it is called Arthritis aber'rans seu errat'ica seu planet'ica, Arth'ragra anom'ala, Pod'agra aber'rans, Vare'ni, Wandering, misplaced, or anomalous gout, (F.) Goutte vague.

Ret'rograde gout, Arthritis retrog'rada, Podagra retrog'rada, Arthro'sia Podagra complica'ta,

Rece'dent, mispla'ced gout, (F.) Goutte remontée, G. malplacée, G. rentrée, is when it leaves the joints suddenly and attacks some internal organ, as the stomach, intestines, lungs, brain, &c.

Gout is also called, according to the part it may affect, Podagra, Gonagra, Chiragra, &c. It may be acute or chronic, and may give rise to concretions, which are chiefly composed of urate of soda. See Calculus, (arthritic.) It may, also, give occasion to nodosities, when it is called Arthritis nodo'sa, (F.) Goutte noueé.

The treatment is of the antiphlogistic kind, and the local disorder should be but little interfered with. Colchicum seems to have great power over the disease. It forms the basis of the Eau médicinale d'Husson, a celebrated French gout-remedy. The bowels must be kept regular by rhubarb and magnesia; and a recurrence of the disease be prevented by abstemious habits.

Gout, Diaphragmatic, Angina pectoris.

Gout, Paper, so called, Charta antiarthrit'ica, Charta antirheumat'ica, is made by spreading a very thin layer of a mixture of an ethereal or spirituous extract of the bark of mezereon root, with wax, spermaceti, and oil, over the surface of paper.

GRACILARIA LICHENOÏDES, Fucus amylaceus.

GRAC''ILIS, Macer, Macilen'tus. Slender, lean. Also, the slender Rectus inte'rior fem'oris sive Grac''ilis interior, Sous-pubio-crêti-tibial, Sous-pubio-prétibial (Ch.), Droit ou grêle interne de la cuisse. This muscle is situate at the inside of the thigh. It is thin and very long; and arises from the descending ramus of the pubis, to be inserted at the inner and inferior part of the tuberosity of the tibia. It bends the leg and causes abduction of the thigh. See Grêle.

Gracilis, Anterior, Rectus femoris.

GRAD'UATE, Gradua'tus, from gradus, 'a step,' 'a degree.' In medicine, one who has attained a degree, evidenced by a diploma—usually, the degree of doctor.

GRÆA, γραια. The pellicle, which forms on milk. The folds of skin round the umbilicus. An old woman.

GRAIN, Granum; the 60th part of a Troy, and the 72d part of a Poids de marc drachm.

Grain, Oily, Sesamum orientale.

GRANULATED LIVER, Cirrhosis.

GRANULA'TION, Granula'tio, from granum, 'a grain.' Gemma, (F.) Bourgeon, B. charnu. Granulations are the reddish, conical, flesh-like shoots, which form at the surface of suppurating wounds and ulcers. They are the product of inflammatory excitement, and may be produced in indolent ulcers, by exciting the parts by proper stimulants. They form the basis of the cicatrix.

Granulation is, likewise, a name given by the modern French physicians to an organic lesion, consisting in the formation of small, round, firm, shining, semi-transparent tumours, of the size and shape of millet-seed, or of a pea; which are met with in the lungs particularly, and in considerable quantity; often without materially interfering with their functions.

In pharmacy, granulation is a process by which a metal is reduced to fine grains, by melting it, and causing it, whilst liquid, to pass through a kind of sieve into a vessel of water, — as in the making of shot: — or by shaking or rubbing the melted metal in an appropriate box or vessel,— as in the formation of granular tin or granulated zinc.

GRANULATIONS CÉRÉBRALES, Glandulæ Pacchioni.

Granula'tions Mil'iary, or Miliary tu'bercles, are the small, transparent grains, of variable size, from that of a millet-seed to that of a grain of hemp, which are presumed to be the primitive state of tubercles.

GRAN'ULE, Gran'ulum; diminutive of granum, 'a grain.' A small grain; a small compact particle; a cytoblast.

Gran'ules Sem'inal, Gran'ula sem'inis. Minute, rounded, granulated bodies, observable in the semen, which are, in all cases, much less numerous than the spermatozoids. See Sperm.

GRANVILLE'S LOTION, see Lotion, Granville's counter-irritant.

GRAPE, see Vitis vinifera — g. Sea-side, see Kino.

Grape-Cure, (F.) Cure du raisin, (G.) Traubencur. A mode of medication in Germany, which consists in the use of the grape for both meat and drink; nothing more at the farthest being allowed than a piece of dry bread. This diet is continued for weeks. Its effects are altogether revellent, and resemble in many respects those of hydropathy.

GRASSET, (F.) The anterior region of the thigh, bounded below by the patella.

GRASSEYEMENT (F.), Sonus blæsus, Rotacis'mus, from (F.) gras, 'thick.' 'Speaking thick.' According to Sauvages, a vicious pronunciation of the letter r. They who speak thick, like the Inhabitants of Newcastle, in England, or of Havre, in France, have difficulty in pronouncing the r, and they frequently substitute for it the letter l; but this does not properly constitute Grasseyement. It consists in this: that, in words in which the letter r is joined to another consonant, a sort of burring or guttural rolling is heard, nearly like that produced by gargling. See Rotacism.

GRASUS, Cinabra.

GRATELLE, Psoriasis.

GRATIA DEI, Gratiola officinalis.

GRATIOLA CENTAURIODES, G. officinalis.

Gratio'la Officina'lis, Digita'lis min'ima, Gra'tia Dei, Gratiola Centaurioides, Hedge hyssop, Herb of Grace. It is a native of the South of Europe. (F.) Herbe au pauvre homme. The plant is inodorous; taste strong, bitter, nauseous. It is possessed of anthelmintic, purgative, emetic, and diuretic properties. Dose, ten grains.

GRATTERON, Galium aparine.

GRATTOIR, Raspatorium.

GRAVATIF, Heavy.

GRAVE, Serious—g. Plant, Datura sanguinea.

GRAVEDO, Catarrh, Coryza—g. Neonatorum, Snuffles.

GRAVEL, Lith'ia rena'lis areno'sa, Lithi'asis nephrit'ica, L. rena'lis, (F.) Gravelle. A disease occasioned by small concretions, similar to sand or gravel, Gla'rea, (F.) Gravier, which form in the kidneys, pass along the ureters to the bladder, and are expelled with the urine. These concretions, which are commonly composed of uric acid and an animal matter, are deposited at the bottom of the vessel, immediately after the excretion of the urine; and, by their hardness and resistance under the finger, differ considerably from the ordinary sediment of that liquid. A vegetable diet and alkaline drinks are the best prophylactics. See Calculi, Urinary. A fit of the Gravel, Nephral'gia calculo'sa seu areno'sa, Co'lica nephrit'ica, is the excruciating suffering induced by the passage of gravel from the kidney to the bladder. It can only be relieved by anæsthetics, opiates, the warm bath, &c.

When the deposit is in fine particles, it is termed Sand, Are'na, Are'nula, Psam'ma, Psammus.

Gravel Grass, Galium verum.

Gravel, Pileous or Hairy, (F.) Gravelle pileuse. A species of gravel containing hairs, phosphate of lime, ammoniaco-magnesian phosphate, and a little uric acid.—Magendie.

GRAVELEUX, Calculous.

GRAVELLE, Chalaza, Gravel — g. Pileuse, Gravel, pileous.

GRAVEOLENS, Fetid.

GRAVID, Pregnant.

GRAV'IDINE; from gravidus, 'pregnant,' gravis, 'heavy.' A sediment in the urine of pregnant women, which by its decomposition gives rise to the pellicle kyestein. It differs from albumen, casein and gelatin.—Stark.

GRAVIDITAS, Fecundation, Pregnancy — g. Abdominalis, Pregnancy, abdominal — g. Extra-uterina, see Pregnancy—g. Extra-uterina in Ovario, Pregnancy, ovarian — g. Extra-uterina Secundaria, Metacyesis — g. Interstitialis, Pregnancy, interstitial—g. Molaris, Mole—g. Spuria, Pregnancy, false — g. Tubaria, Salpingo-cyesis — g. Uteri substantiâ, Pregnancy, interstitial — g. Uterina, Pregnancy.

GRAVIER, Gravel.

GRAVIMETER, Areometer.

GRAVIS, Heavy.

GRAV'ITY, SPECIF'IC, Gravitas specif'ica, (F.) Pesanteur spécifique. The relation between the weight of a body and its bulk; thus, supposing four bodies to be of the same size, but to weigh, one four, another three, another two, and the fourth one; the specific gravity of the first will be four times greater than that of the last. The specific gravities of different bodies are, therefore, as the weights, bulk for bulk. For solids, and liquids, water is taken as the unit; atmospheric air for the gases. Thus, water is 1.000; mercury at the common temperature, 13.58. Whence, we conclude mercury is between thirteen and fourteen times heavier than water.

GRAY MATTER OF THE BRAIN, Cortex cerebri, see Neurine.

GREASE, from (F.) Graisse, 'fat.' A specific inflammation, affecting the skin of the heels of the horse, which is especially interesting from the circumstance, that the matter, if inserted under the cuticle of an unprotected individual, may give rise to an affection — grease-pox, variolæ equinæ — which preserves the person from small-pox. (?)

GREASE, BARROW'S, Adeps suilla — g. Goose, Adeps anserina — g. Molten, Gras-fondure — g. Pox, see Grease.

GREENHEART, see Bebeeru.

GREENHOW'S TINCTURE FOR THE TEETH, Spiritus armoraciæ compositus.

GREEN SICKNESS, Chlorosis.

GREENWEED, Genista tinctoria.

GRÊLE (F.), Grac'ilis, 'long and thin.' This epithet is given by the French to various parts, as the Apophyse Grêle du Marteau, the slender apoph'ysis or process of the mal'leus, a long process situate at the anterior part of the neck of the malleus, which passes out by the fissure of Glaserius. It is also called the Apoph'ysis of Rau, although it was already known to Fabricius ab Aquapendente and to Cæcilius Follius.

GRÊLE, Chalaza — g. Interne de la Cuisse, Gracilis.

GRÉMIL OFFICINALE, Lithospermum officinale.

GREMIUM, Vulva.

GRENADE, Influenza.

GRENADIER, Punica granatum.

GRENADIN, see Punica granatum.

GRENIERS, Vesiculæ seminales.

GRENOUILLE, Rana esculenta.

GRENOUILLETTE, Ranula.

GRÉOULX, MINERAL WATERS OF. Sulphuretted springs in the department of Basses-Alpes, France.

GRESSURA, Perinæum.

GRESSUS, Walking.

GREVEURE, Hernia.

GRIELUM, Apium petroselinum, Smyrnium olusatrum.

GRIFF, see Mulatto.

GRIFFO, see Mulatto.

GRINCEMENT DES DENTS, Brygmus.

GRINDERS, Molar teeth — g. Asthma, see Asthma, grinders' — g. Rot, Asthma, grinders'.

GRINDING MILL, see Pulverization.

GRIPES, Tormina, Colic.

GRIPES, WATERY. A popular name for a dangerous disease of infancy, common in England, which does not differ essentially from the cholera infantum of this country.

GRIPHOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

GRIPPE (F.), from gripper, 'to gripe,' 'catch hold of.' A vulgar name for several catarrhal diseases, which have reigned epidemically; as the influenza.

GRIPPÉ, Pinched.

GRITS, Groats, (Sax.) ȝpiċċa; (G.) Gries, 'gravel, grits.'

GRIT GRUEL, Water gruel. This is made as follows: — Take three ounces of grits; wash them well in cold water, and, having poured off the fluid, put them into four pints of fresh water, and boil slowly until the water is reduced one-half; then strain through a sieve. It is a good demulcent, and is employed also as a vehicle for clysters.

GROAN, see Suspirium.

GROATS, German Grutze; Grutum, Ave'na excortica'ta; (F.) Gruau, Oatmeal, (Yorkshire.) Oats, hulled, but unground, (Lancashire.) Hulled oats, half ground. Oats that have the hulls taken off; Grits. When crushed, they are termed Embden groats. In America, fine hominy is called Grits, and wheat prepared in the same way is likewise so designated. It is also called wheaten hominy.

GROATS, CRACOW, Semolina.

GROG-BLOSSOMS, Gutta rosea.

GROG-ROSES, Gutta rosea.

GROMWELL, Lithospermum officinale.

GROOVE, Furrow, Sulcus, (F.) Rainure. Icelandic, grafa, Sax. ȝrafan, 'to dig.' A channel or gutter, in a bone or surgical instrument. See Coulisse.

GROOVE, PRIMITIVE, Primitive streak or trace, Nota primiti'va. A bright streak in the long axis of the pellucid part of the area germinativa, after it presents a central pellucid and a peripheral opake part, and passes from the round to the pear shape.

GROOVED. Same etymon. Sulca'tus, Stria'tus, Canalicula'tus, (F.) Cannelé ou Canelé ou Canaliculé; Canaliculated. Having a small channel or gutter.

GROS, Drachm — g. Cou, Bronchocele.

GROSEILLIER NOIR, Ribes nigrum — g. Rouge, Ribes rubrum.

GROSSE GORGE, Bronchocele.

GROUNDSEL, Senecio.

GROUSEBERRY, Gaultheria.

GROWTH, from Dutch groeyen, Crescentia, Anaplo'sis, Anaptyx'is, (F.) Croissance. The development of the body; particularly in the direction of its height. Also, any adventitious tissue; thus, we speak of a morbid growth or formation.

GRUAU, Groats.

GRUB, Larve, see Ectozoa.

GRUEL, GRIT, see Grits—g. Water, see Avena, and Grits.

GRUFF, from Teutonic ge, and ruh, 'rough.' In pharmacy, the coarse residue, which will not pass through the sieve in pulverization.

GRUMEAU, Coagulum.

GRUMOUS, Grumo'sus, from grumus, 'a clot.' Clotted.

GRUMUS, Coagulum.

GRUTUM. 'Groats.' Grutum Mil'ium, Mil'ium. A hard white tubercle of the skin, resembling, in size and appearance, a millet-seed. It is confined to the face. See, also, Groats.

GRYPH'IUS PES. The Griffon's foot, (F.) Pied de Griffon. An instrument of which Ambrose Paré speaks, which was used for extracting moles from the uterus.

GRYPHOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

GRYPO'SIS, from γρυποω, 'I incurvate.' Incurva'tio. Curvature or crookedness in general. Crookedness or incurvation of the nails. See Onychogryposis.

GRYPOTES, see Grypus.

GRYPUS. One who has a crooked or aquiline nose. The condition is termed Gry'potes.

GUA'CO, Hua'co. The name of a plant, Eupato'rium Guaco, described by Humboldt and Bonpland under the name Mika'nia Guaco, which grows in the valleys of Madalena, Rio-Cauca, &c., in South America. The negroes use the juice against the bites of poisonous reptiles;—both in the way of prevention and cure. It has been, of late, brought forward as a remedy in cholera.

GUAIAC, see Guaiacum.

GUAIACI LIGNUM, see Guaiacum—g. Resina, see Guaiacum.

GUAIACINE, see Guaiacum.

GUAI'ACUM, G. Officina'lē; G. America'num, Lignum vitæ, L. sanctum, L. benedic'tum, Palus sanctus, Lignum In'dicum, Hagiox'ylum, (F.) Gayac, Gaïac. The resin—Guai'aci Resi'na, Guai'ac, (F.) Résine ou Gomme de Gaïac—and the wood—Guaiaci lignum—are both used in medicine. Their odour is slightly fragrant; taste warm and bitter, of the resin more so than of the wood. The resin is concrete, brittle; colour, externally, greenish; internally grayish. Water dissolves about one-tenth; alcohol 95 parts. It is soluble, also, in liquor potassæ 15 parts, liquor ammoniæ 38 parts. The powder is whitish, but changes to green in the air. The base of the guaiacum is a peculiar resin, called Guaiacine.

Guaiacum is stimulant and diaphoretic; and in large doses, purgative. It is administered in chronic rheumatism, gout, cutaneous diseases, and the sequelæ of syphilis. Dose of resin, gr. v to xx.—to purge, gr. xx to xl.

GUALTHERIA, Gaultheria.

GUANO,—according to Tschudi, properly Huanu,—is formed of the excrements of different kinds of marine birds—mews, divers, sheerbreaks, &c., but especially of the Sula variega'ta. It is found in enormous layers in the South American islands of the Pacific, and is used as manure.

GUARANA, Paullinia.

GUARAPO. A fermented liquor made, in Peru, of sugar-cane pulp and water. It is a very favourite beverage of the negroes.—Tschudi.

GUARD (for a bed,) Alèse.

GUARERBA ORBA, Momordica elaterium.

GUAVA APPLE, Psidium pomiferum.

GUAYAVA, Psidium pomiferum.

GUBERNAC'ULUM DENTIS, (Gubernaculum, 'a rudder.') A cord, which passes from the follicle of the permanent tooth along a small long canal behind the alveolus of the milk tooth, and becomes continuous with the gum. The gubernaculum has been supposed to direct the permanent tooth outwards. The canal has been termed Iter dentis.

GUBERNACULUM TESTIS, G. t. Hunteri, Ligamen'tum suspenso'rium Testis, (F.) Gouvernail du testicule. A triangular, fibro-cellular cord; which, in the fœtus, arises from the ramus of the ischium and the skin of the scrotum, and proceeds to the posterior part of the testicle, before this organ issues from the abdomen. It has been supposed to be a continuation of the fascia superficialis with muscular fibres from the internal oblique muscle, which pass upwards to the testis when in the abdomen; and by their contraction draw the testis down, and ultimately form the cremaster muscle.

GUÊPE, Wasp.

GUÉRISON, Cure.

GUÉRISSABLE, Curable.

GUI, Viscum album.

GUILANDI'NA MORIN'GA, Hyperanthe'ra moringa. A plant, which affords the Ben nut, and the lignum nephriticum. It is also called Morin'ga Oleïf'era seu Zeylan'ica seu Nux ben seu Pterygosperm'a. The nut Ben, Glans unguenta'ria, Ben Nux, Bal'anus Myrep'sica, Sandalum cæru'leum, Oily Acorn or Ben nut, is a West India nut which furnishes an oil, O'leum Balani'num, that does not become rancid by age, and is hence used by perfumers. It is purgative.

The wood of the Guilandina is called Lignum Nephrit'icum, and has been used in decoction, in affections of the urinary organs.

GUIMAUVE, Althæa—g. Veloutée, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

GUM-LANCET, Dentiscal'pium, Odontog'lyphon, (F.) Déchaussoir. An instrument for separating the gum from the cervix of the tooth, prior to extraction. It is formed much like a fleam. The operation itself is called Lancing the gums, Den'tium scalptu'ra, (F.) Déchaussement.

GUMBOIL, Parulis.

GUMMA, (F.) Gomme. An elastic tumour, formed in the periosteum, occupying particularly the cranium and sternum, and produced by the syphilitic virus, when it has been long in the constitution. It is so called, because, when opened, it contains a matter like gum.

GUMMI, Commi, κομμι, (F.) Gomme. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is a solid, uncrystallizable, inodorous substance, of a mawkish taste, unchangeable in the air, insoluble in alcohol, but soluble in water, with which it forms a mucilage. It is obtained from various species of mimosa and prunus; and consequently there are many varieties of gum. They are used in medicine as demulcents, emollients, and relaxants, particularly in catarrh, intestinal irritations, &c.; and in Pharmacy, they are employed in the formation of emulsions, pills, &c.

GUMMI NOSTRAS, (F.) Gomme du Pays; Indig"enous Gum. These generic names are given to several species of gum, which flow spontaneously from certain indigenous fruit trees, — such as the almond, cherry, peach, apricot, &c. The indigenous gums have nearly the same properties as gum Arabic; but they are inferior to it.

GUMMI ORENBURGENSE, see Pinus larix—g. Panacis, see Pastinaca opoponax—g. ad Podagram, Cambogia.

GUMMI-RESINA, Gum-Resin. A milky juice, obtained by making incisions into the branches, stalks and roots of certain vegetables. Gum-resins are compounds of resins, gum, essential oil, and different other vegetable matters. They are solid, opake, brittle, of a strong odour, acrid taste, variable colour, and are heavier than water. Water dissolves a part of them, and alcohol another; hence proof spirit is the proper menstruum. The generality of the gum-resins are powerful stimulants to the whole or to parts of the economy. The chief are asafœtida, gum ammoniac, euphorbium, galbanum, camboge, myrrh, olibanum, opoponax, scammony, aloes, &c.

GUNNERA PERPEN'SA. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Urticaceæ; the decoction of which is taken as a domestic remedy by the farmers, as a tonic in dyspepsia. A tincture has been used in gravel. An infusion of the leaves is demulcent, and is employed in pulmonary affections. The leaves are applied fresh, to cure wounds and ulcers.

GURGITELLO, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring in the isle of Ischia. Temp. at its source, 176° Fah. It contains carbonic acid, carbonates of lime, magnesia, iron and soda, sulphates of lime and soda, chloride of sodium and silica.

GURGLING. 'Gushing with noise,' as water from a bottle. (F.) Gargouillement, same etymon as gargle. The rhonchus or râle heard on auscultation when there is a cavity in the lungs containing pus. It is the 'cavernous rattle or rhonchus,' Râle caverneux. The size of the bubbles heard varies, and hence the rhonchus has been called cavernous and cavern'ulous, (F.) Râle cavernuleux. If the cavern be large, this râle will nearly resemble the gurgling of a bottle (glouglou d'une bouteille;) if, on the contrary, the cavern be small, it will not differ from the râle muqueux.

GURGULIO, Penis, Uvula.

GUTTA. A Drop, Stalag'ma, Alun'sel, Stilla, (F.) Goutte. A quantity of liquid, generally valued, in pharmacy, at the weight of a grain. The weight, however, varies according to different circumstances, as the degree of tenacity of the fluid, and the extent of moist surface to which the suspended drop is attached before it falls; and it was found by Mr. Alsop to be influenced by the size of the bottle, and the angle of inclination at which it was held during the operation of dropping. The following are some of his results as to the number of drops required to measure a fluidrachm, when dropped from a large and a small bottle.

| | From a large bottle. | From a small bottle. |
|---|---|---|
| (fʒj) Diluted sulphuric acid | 24 drops | 84 drops |
| Scheele's hydrocyanic acid | 35 | 70 |
| Distilled water | 31 | 54 |
| Solution of ammonia | 40 | 48 |
| Tincture of opium | 84 | 135 |
| Rectified spirits | 100 | 130 |
| Tincture of chloride of iron | 100 | 150 |

GUTTA PERCHA. The concrete juice of a tree —Isonan'dra gutta—which is indigenous in Singapore and its vicinity, and belongs to the Natural order Sapotaceæ. Plunged in boiling water it softens, when it may be moulded like caoutchouc to any form, which it retains on cooling. Splints and other instruments have been made of it.

GUTTA ROSACEA SYPHILITICA, Crown of Venus.

GUTTA ROSEA, Gutta Rosa'cea, Ion'thus corymb'ifer, Crusta serpigino'sa, C. prurigino'sa, Acnē rosa'cea, Rose'ola acno'sa, Thylacii'tis, Bacchia, Butiga, Carbuncled Face, Rosy Drop or Whelk, Copper-nose, Bottle-nose, Grog-blossoms, Grog-roses, (F.) Couperose, Goutte Rose, Bourgeons, Dartre pustuleuse couperose. An eruption of small, suppurating tubercles, with shining redness, and an irregular granular appearance of the skin of the part of the face which is affected. The redness commonly appears first at the end of the nose, and then spreads on both sides. It is often produced by hard drinking. Its cure must be attempted by regular regimen, and cooling means internally: weak spirituous or saturnine lotions externally. The affection is usually very obstinate.

GUTTA SERENA, Amaurosis.

GUTTÆ NIGRÆ, Ace'tum o'pii, Common Black Drop. (Opii ℥viij, aceti destillat. ℔ij, Infuse.)

The celebrated Black Drop, Lan'caster or Quaker's Black Drop, may be made as follows. Take half a pound of opium sliced; three pints of good verjuice, (juice of the wild crab,) one and a half ounce of nutmegs, and half an ounce of saffron. Boil to a proper thickness, and add a quarter of a pound of sugar, and two spoonfuls of yeast. Set the whole in a warm place, near the fire, for six or eight weeks; then place it in the open air until it becomes a syrup. Lastly, decant, filter, and bottle it up, adding a little sugar to each bottle. One drop is equal to three of laudanum; and it is nearly devoid of all the unpleasant exciting effects of the latter. An analogous formula is contained in the Pharmacopœia of the United States under the name Ace'tum opii, Vinegar of Opium.

GUTTALIS CARTILAGO, Arytenoid Cartilage.

GUTTERIA, Bronchocele.

GUTTUR. The throat; the larynx; the trachea.

GUTTUR GLOBOSUM, Bronchocele—g. Tumidum, Bronchocele.

GUT'TURAL, Guttura'lis, from guttur, 'the throat.' Relating or belonging to the throat.

The Superior Thyroideal Artery is sometimes called Guttural Artery.

A Guttural Cough is one occasioned by irritation of the larynx or trachea.

A Guttural Sound is one produced, as it were, in the throat.

GUTTURIS OS, Hyoïdes os.

GUTTURNIA, Arytenoid cartilages.

GYMNA, Genital Organs.

GYMNASION, Exercise.

GYMNA'SIUM, from γυμνος, 'naked.' Palæs'tra. An establishment amongst the ancients, intended for bodily exercises, as wrestling, running, &c.; a term now used in Germany, more especially for an academy or higher school.

GYMNAST, Gymnas'tes, Gymnas'ta; same etymon. The manager of a gymnasium. One, whose profession it is to prevent or cure diseases by gymnastics.

GYMNAS'TICS, Gymnas'tica, Medici'na gymnas tica seu euect'ica, Somacet'ics. Same etymon. That part of hygienic medicine which treats of bodily exercises. It is called Med'ical Gymnastics. The ancients had also Athlet'ic Gymnastics, and Mil'itary Gymnastics. Herodicus, of Selivræa, first proposed gymnastics for the cure of disease.

GYMNOC'LADUS CANADEN'SIS, Coffee Tree, Mahogany, Nickar Tree, Bondue. An indigenous tree, which grows from Ohio to Louisiana. The leaves are cathartic, and said to contain cytisin. The seeds are a good substitute for coffee.

GYMNOGRAMME CETERACH, Asplenium ceterach.

GYMNOSIS, Denudation.

GYNÆ'CANER, from γυνη, 'a woman,' and ανηρ, 'a man.' Vir effœmina'tus. An effeminate man.

GYNÆCEA, Gynæceia.

GYNÆCEI'A, Gynæci'a, Gynæce'a, from γυνη, 'a woman.' The catamenia;—the lochia. The diseases of women in general.—Hippocrates, Galen, Foësius.

GYNÆCEUM, Antimonium, Vulva.

GYNÆCE'US, from γυνη, 'a woman.' Belonging to women. Female. Feminine.

GYNÆCIA, Gynæceia, Menses.

GYNÆCOLOG''IA, Gynecol'ogy, from γυνη, 'a woman,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of the nature, diseases, &c. of women.

GYNÆCOMA'NIA, from γυνη, 'woman,' and μανια, 'mania,' 'rage.' That species of insanity, which arises from love for women. Some have used the word synonymously with nymphomania.

GYNÆCOMAS'TUS, Gynæcomas'thus, from γυνη, 'woman,' and μαστος, 'a breast.' A man whose breasts are as large as those of a woman.—Galen, Ingrassias.

A considerable enlargement of the breasts of a female was formerly called Gynæcomas'ton.

GYNÆCOMYS'TAX, from γυνη, 'woman,' and μυσταξ, 'the beard.' The hair on the pubes of women.—Rolfink.

GYNÆCOPHO'NUS, from γυνη, 'a woman,' and φωνη, 'voice.' A man who has an effeminate voice.

GYNANDRIA, Hermaphrodeity.

GYNANDRUS, Gynanthropus.

GYNANTHRO'PUS, Gynan'drus. An hermaphrodite who belongs more to the male than to the female sex.

GYNATRE'SIA, from γυνη, 'a woman,' and ατρητος, 'imperforate.' Closure or imperforation of the external parts of generation of the female.

GYNE, Female.

GYNECOLOGY, Gynæcologia.

GYNIDA, Hermaphrodite.

GYNOARIUM, Ovarium.

GYNOPLAS'TIC, Gynoplas'ticus, from γυνη, 'a woman,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The gynoplastic operation is employed for opening or dilating the closed or contracted genital openings of the female.

GYPSY-WEED, Lycopus sinuatus, and L. Virginicus.

HÆMA, 'αιμα, 'αιματος, 'blood.'

HÆMACHROINE, Hæmatine.

HÆMACHRO'SES, ((G.) Hämachrosen,) from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and χρωσις, 'coloration.' A family of diseases in which the blood has its colour different from usual, as in purpura and cyanosis.—Fuchs.

HÆMACY'ANIN, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and κυανος, 'blue.' A blue colouring matter, detected by Sanson in healthy blood, and in bile by some chemists, but not by others.

HÆMADON'OSUS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' Hæmatangion'osus, Hæmatangionu'sus, Hæmatangio'sis. Disease of the blood-vessels.

HÆMADOSTO'SIS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and οστωσις, 'a bony tumour.' Ossification of the blood-vessels.

HÆMADYNAMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HÆMADYNAMOM'ETER, Hæmatodynamom'eter, Hæmadynam'eter, Hæmom'eter, Hæmatom'eter, (F.) Hémadynamètre, Hémomètre; from 'αιμα, 'blood,' δυναμις, 'power,' and μετρον, 'a measure.' An instrument for measuring the force of the blood in the vessels. It consists of a bent glass tube, the lower bent part of which is filled with mercury. A brass head is fitted into the artery, and a solution of carbonate of soda is interposed between the mercury and the blood, which is allowed to enter the tube for the purpose of preventing its coagulation. The pressure of the blood on the mercury in the descending portion of the bent tube causes the metal to rise in the ascending portion; and the degree to which it rises indicates the pressure under which the blood moves.

HÆMAGASTRIC PESTILENCE, Fever, yellow.

HÆMAGOGUM, Pæonia.

HÆMAGO'GUS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and αγω, 'I drive off.' A medicine which promotes the menstrual and hemorrhoidal discharges.

HÆMAL, from 'αιμα, 'blood.' Relating to the blood or blood-vessels.

HÆMAL ARCH. The arch formed by the projections anteriorly from the body of the vertebræ of the ribs and sternum. It encloses the great blood-vessels.—Owen.

HÆMAL AXIS, Aorta—h. Spine, Sternum.

HÆMALO'PIA, Hæmophthalmia, Hæmalopis.

HÆMALOPIS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMALOPS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMAN'THUS COCCIN'EUS. A beautiful South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amaryllideæ, the bulb of which is employed as a diuretic. It is given as an oxymel in asthma and dropsy. The fresh leaves are antiseptic, and applied to foul, flabby ulcers, and in anthrax.

HÆMAPERITONIRRHAG''IA, (F.) Hémapéritonirrhagie; from 'αιμα, 'blood,' περιτοναιον, 'peritoneum,' and ραγη, 'a violent rupture.' An exhalation of blood into the peritoneum.

HÆMAPHÆ'IN, Hæmatophæ'um, Hæmophæ'um, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and φαιος, 'of a dusky colour.' A term applied by Simon to the brown colouring matter of the blood, supposed by some to be nothing more than hæmatin modified by an alkali.

HÆMAPH'OBUS, Hæmoph'obus, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and φοβος, 'dread.' One who has a dread of blood:—who cannot look at it without fainting.

HÆMAPOPHYSES, Costal cartilages, see Costa.

HÆMAPOR'IA, Hæmatapor'ia, Hæmatopo''ia, Oligohæ'mia, Oligæ'mia, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and απορος, 'poor.' Paucity of blood. See Anæmia.

HÆMAPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMAS, 'αιμας, gen. 'αιμαδος. A blood-vessel.

HÆMASTATICA, Hæmatostatica.

HÆMASTAT'ICĒ, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ιστημι, 'I remain,' 'reside.' A science, which treats of the strength of the blood-vessels; Hymastat'ics.

HÆMATANGIONOSUS, Hæmadonosus.

HÆMATANGIOSIS, Hæmadonosus.

HÆMATAPORIA, Hæmaporia.

HÆMATAPORRHOSIS, Cholera.

HÆMATEC'LYSIS, Hæmotex'ia, Hæmotex'is, Hæmatosep'sis, San'guinis dissolu'tio; from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and εκλυσις, 'loosening.' Dissolution of the blood.

HÆMATELÆUM, see Blood.

HÆMATEM'ESIS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and εμεω, 'I vomit.' Vom'itus cruen'tus, Hæmorrha'gia Hæmatem'esis, Vom'itus seu Vomit''io San'guinis, Gastrorrhag''ia, Gastro-hæmorrhag''ia, Hæmorrhag''ia ventric'uli, Hæmorrhœ'a ventric'uli, Vomiting of Blood, (F.) Hématémèse, Vomissement de sang. Hæmatemesis is generally preceded by a feeling of oppression, weight, and dull or pungent pain in the epigastric and in the hypochondriac regions; by anxiety, and, occasionally, by syncope. Blood is then passed by vomiting, and sometimes, also, by stool, — the blood being generally of a grumous aspect. Hæmatemesis may be active or passive, acute or chronic. The blood effused proceeds, almost always, from a sanguineous exhalation at the surface of the mucous membrane of the stomach. It is often observed in females whose menstrual secretion is irregularly performed. It is not of much danger, except when connected with disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen. On dissection of those who have died from protracted hæmatemesis,—for the acute kind is comparatively devoid of danger,—the mucous membrane of the stomach is found red and inflamed, or black, and the vessels considerably dilated. Complete abstinence from food; rest; the horizontal posture; bleeding, if the hemorrhage be active; cold, acidulous drinks, &c., constitute the usual treatment.

HÆMATENCEPHALUM, Apoplexy.

HÆMATEPAGOGE, Congestion.

HÆMATERA, Hepatirrhœa.

HÆMATERUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATERYTHRUM, Hæmatin.

HÆMATEXOSTOSIS, Osteosarcoma.

HÆMATHIDROSIS, Sudor cruentus.

HÆMATHORAX, Hæmatothorax.

HÆMATIASIS, Hæmatonosus.

HÆMAT'ICA, from 'αιμα, 'blood.' Diseases of the sanguineous function:—the third class in the nosology of Good. Also, medicines that act on the blood.—Pereira.

HÆMATICA DOCTRINA, Hæmatology.

HÆMATICUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATIDROSIS, Sudor cruentus.

HÆ'MATIN, Hæmati'na, Hem'atine, Hæmatosin, Hem'atosine, Hæmater'ythrum, Hæmer'ythrum, Zoöhem'atin, Hemachro'in, Cru'orin, Rubrin, Glob'ulin of some; from αιμα, 'blood.' The red colouring matter of the blood. It resides in distinct particles or globules, and, in the opinion of some observers, in the envelope of the globules. It appears to be of a peculiar character, and one that has not yet been determined by the chemist. That the colour of the blood is not owing to the peroxide of iron which it contains, is shown by the fact mentioned by Scherer, that he removed the iron by acids, and yet a deep red tincture was formed when alcohol was added to the residuum.

HÆMATIN'IC, Hæmatin'icus: from hæmatin, 'the red colouring matter of the blood.' An agent that augments the number of red corpuscles of the blood.—Pereira.

HÆMATINUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATIS'CHESIS, Hæmis'chesis, Hæmocryph'ia, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ισχειν, 'to suppress.' The retention or suppression of a natural or artificial flow of blood.

HÆMATISMUS, Epistaxis, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATISTH'MUS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ισθμος, 'pharynx.' Hemorrhage into the pharynx.

HÆMATI'TES, Hæmati'tis, from 'αιμα, 'blood.' Resembling blood. Lapis Hæmati'tes. A beautiful ore of iron, called also, Bloodstone, O'chrea rubra, Ox'ydum fer'ricum crystalliza'tum nati'vum, Ferrum Hæmatites. When finely levigated, and freed from the grosser parts, by frequent washings with water, it has been long recommended in hemorrhage, fluxes, uterine obstructions, &c., in doses of from one scruple to three or four. Also, a vessel that contains blood, 'αιματικος φλεψ.

HÆMATMUS, Gaz sanguinis.

HÆMATOCATHAR'TICA, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and καθαρσις, 'purification or purgation.' Remedies for purifying the blood.

HÆMATOCE'LE, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' A tumour formed by blood. By some, this term has been applied to a tumour formed by blood, effused into the areolar texture of the scrotum. Others have used it for tumours arising from effusion of blood into the tunica vaginalis:—hæmatocele, according to them, differing from hydrocele, only in the character of the effusion.—Heister. Others, again, have applied it to effusions of blood into the interior of the tunica albuginea itself.—Richter. The first is the usual acceptation. It is most commonly caused by wounds or contusions; and requires the use of antiphlogistics, discutients, &c. Sometimes it is necessary to evacuate the effused blood.

HÆMATOCELE ARTERIOSA, Aneurism.

HÆMATO-CEREBRIFORM DISEASE, Encephaloid.

HÆMATOCHE'ZIA, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and χεζω, 'I go to stool.' Sedes cruen'tæ, Catarrhex'is vera, Enterorrhag''ia simplex, Diarrhœ'a cruenta seu sanguinolen'ta, Hæ'mato-diarrhœ'a, Hæmorrhag''ia intestino'rum, En'tero-hæmorrhag''ia, (F.) Hémorrhagie des intestins, Écoulement de sang par l'Intestin. Discharge of blood by stool. See Melæna.

HÆMATOCHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATOCŒ'LIA, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and κοιλια, 'the cavity of the abdomen.' Effusion of blood into the abdomen.

HÆMATOCOL'PUS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and κολπος, 'vagina.' Effusion of blood into the vagina. Accumulation of blood owing to occlusion of the vagina.

HÆMATOCYANOSIS, Cyanopathy.

HÆMATOCYSTE, Hæmatoma saccatum.

HÆMATOCYST'IS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and κυστις, 'bladder.' Hemorrhage into the bladder.

HÆMATO'DES, Hæmatoï'des, Sanguin'eus, Hæ'matoid, He'matoid, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ειδος, 'appearance.' That which contains blood, or has the character of blood.

HÆMATODES FUNGUS, Hæmatomy'ces, Fungus cancro'sus hæmato'des, Melæ'na fungo'sa carcino'des, Angidiospon'gus, Angiomy'ces, Hæmatospon'gus, Tumor fungo'sus sanguin'eus seu anom'alus, Spon'goid inflammation, Pulpy or Medullary Sarco'ma, Carcino'ma Hæmato'des, Carcino'ma Spongio'sum, Bleeding Fungus, Soft Cancer, (F.) Carcinôme sanglant, Hématoncie fongoïde. An extremely alarming carcinomatous affection, which was first described, with accuracy, by Mr. John Burns, of Glasgow. It consists in the development of cancerous tumours, in which the inflammation is accompanied with violent heat and pain, and with fungus and bleeding excrescences. Even when the diseased part is extirpated, at a very early period, recovery rarely follows; other organs being generally implicated at the same time. Fungus hæmatodes was the term first applied to the disease by Mr. Hey of Leeds. Mr. J. Burns called it Spongoid inflammation, from the spongy, elastic feel, which peculiarly characterizes it, and continues even after ulceration has taken place. The disease has, most frequently, been met with in the eyeball, the upper and lower extremities, testicle and mamma; but it occurs in the uterus, ovary, liver, spleen, brain, lungs, thyroid gland, and in the hip and shoulder-joint.

Some French surgeons designate, by this name, those tumours which were formerly termed anormales, cavernuses, variqueuses, called Erectiles by Dupuytren, Hématoncies, by Alibert, and Telangiectasiæ by Gräfe.

HÆMATODIARRHŒA, Hæmatochezia.

HÆMATODYNAMOMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HÆMATOGASTER, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and γαστηρ, 'stomach.' Effusion of blood into the stomach.

HÆMATOGENETICA, Hæmatopoietica.

HÆMATOGLOBULIN, see Globules of the blood.

HÆMATOGRA'PHIA, Hæmatog'raphy, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the blood.

HÆMATOID, Hæmatodes.

HÆMATOL'OGY, Hematol'ogy, Hæmatolog''ia, Hæmat'ica doctri'na, (F.) Hématologie, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' That part of medicine which treats of the blood.

HÆMATOLOGY, PATHOLOG''ICAL, (F.) Hématologie pathologique. Observation of the blood to detect its varying characters in disease.

HÆMATOL'YSES, (G.) Hämatolysen, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and λυσις, 'solution.' An order of diseases in which there is diminished coagulability of the blood.—Fuchs.

HÆMATOLYTICUM, Spanæmic.

HÆMATO'MA, Thrombus, Tumor sanguin'eus. A bloody tumour, especially of the scalp of the new-born.

HÆMATO'MA SACCA'TUM. An encysted tumour containing blood—Hæmatocys'tē.

HÆMATOMANTI'A, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and μαντεια, 'divination.' Judgment of disease from the appearance of the blood.

HÆMATOMATRA, Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMETACHYSIS, Transfusio sanguinis.

HÆMATOMETRA, Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMMA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOMPHALOCE'LE, Hæmatom'phalum, Hæmatompha'lus, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which encloses a bloody serum; or which has, at its surface, a number of varicose veins; constituting Varicom'phalus.

HÆMATOMPHALUM, Hæmatomphalocele.

HÆMATOMYCES, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÆMATON'CUS, (F.) Hématoncie, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Alibert has given this name to the Nævi mater'ni, Varicose tumours. He admits three varieties:—the H. fongoïde, H. framboisée, and H. tubéreuse.

HÆMATON'OSUS, Hæmati'asis, Hæmatopathi'a, Hæmopathi'a, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and νοσος, 'disease.' A disease of the blood. Blood-disease.

HÆMATOPATHIA, Hæmatonosus.

HÆMATOPEDESIS, see Diapedesis.

HÆMATOPERICAR'DIUM, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and περικαρδιον, 'pericardium.' Effusion of blood into the pericardium.

HÆMATOPHÆUM, Hæmaphæin.

HÆMATOPHIL'IA, Hæmophil'ia, Hæmorrhophil'ia, Idiosyncra'sia hæmorrhag''ica, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and φιλεω, 'I love.' A hemorrhagic diathesis.

HÆMATOPHLEBES'TASIS. Sudden suppression of a hemorrhage;—from στασις 'αιματος φλεβων, 'suppression of the blood of the veins.'—Galen.

HÆMATOPHOB'IA, Hæmophob'ia, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and φοβος, 'dread.' Dread or horror at the sight of blood, producing syncope, &c.

HÆMATOPHTHALMIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPH'THORES, (G.) Hämatophthoren; from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and φθορα, 'corruption.' An order of diseases in the classification of Fuchs, in which the blood is materially altered in its composition, as in typhus.

HÆMATOP'ISIS, (F.) Hématopisie. M. Cupuron, of Paris, has applied the term Hématopisie utérine, from analogy with Hydropisie utérine, to a collection of blood which sometimes takes place in the uterus, when, owing to faulty conformation, the exit of the menstrual flux is prevented.

HÆMATOPLA'NIA, Hæmatoplane'sis, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and πλανη, 'wandering.' A vicarious hemorrhage.

HÆMATOPLA'NIA MENSTRUA'LIS, Menstruation, vicarious.

HÆMATOPLETHORA, Plethora.

HÆMATOPŒA, Hæmatopoetica.

HÆMATOPOESIS, Hæmatosis.

HÆMATOPOËT'ICA, Hæmatopœ'a, Hæmatogenet'ica, 'bloodmakers,' from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ποιεω, 'I make.' Agents that favour hæmatosis. Iron was called by the ancients metal'lum hæmatopoet'icum.

HÆMATOPOIESIS, Hæmatosis.

HÆMATOPORIA, Hæmaporia.

HÆMATOPS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPSIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPTYSIA, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMATOPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMATORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.

HÆMATORRHAGIA, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATORRHŒA, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATORRHOSIS, Cholera.

HÆMATORRHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATOSCHEOCE'LĒ, Hæmoscheoce'lē, Hæmatos'cheum, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' οσχεον, 'scrotum,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Effusion of blood into the scrotum.

HÆMATOSCHEUM, Hæmatoscheocele.

HÆMATOSCOP'IA, Hæmoscop'ia, (F.) Hémorrhoscopie, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and σκοπεω, 'I view.' An examination of blood drawn.

HÆMATOSEPSIS, Hæmateclysis.

HÆMATOSIN, Hæmatin.

HÆMATO'SIS, Exæmato'sis, Enhæmato'sis, Hæmatopoie'sis, Hæmatopoe'sis, Procrea'tio sanguinis; Decarboniza'tion, Atmospheriza'tion of the blood; Sanguifica'tion; from 'αιμα, 'blood.' The transformation of the venous blood and chyle into arterial blood by respiration. Called, also, Aëra'tion, Arterializa'tion of the blood. Formation of blood in general.

HÆMATOSPILIA, Purpura hæmorrhagica.

HÆMATOSPONGUS, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÆMATOSTAT'ICA, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and στατικη, 'statics.' Ischæ'mia, Hæmastat'ica, Hæmatostat'ics, Hæmostat'ics, Enæ'ma, (F.) Hématostatiques, Hémastatiques, Hémostatiques. The doctrine of the motion of the blood in living bodies. Also, remedies for stopping blood.—Catastaltica.

HÆMATOS'TEON, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and οστεων, 'a bone.' Effusion of blood into the bones or joints.

HÆMATOSYMPHORESIS, Congestion.

HÆMATOSYNAGOGE, Congestion.

HÆMATOTELANGIOSIS, Telangiectasia.

HÆMATO'TIS, Hæma'tus, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ους, gen. ωτος, 'the ear.' Effusion of blood into the inner ear.

HÆMATOTHO'RAX, Hæmatho'rax, Hæmotho'rax, Hæmop'tysis inter'na, Pleurorrhœ'a sanguin'ea, Pneumorrhag''ia inter'na, Hemorrhag''ia Pleu'risy, Pleural hem'orrhage, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and θωραξ, 'the chest.' Extravasation of blood into the chest.

HÆMATOX'YLON CAMPECHIA'NUM, Aca'cia Zeylon'ica, Logwood. The part of the tree, used in medicine, is the wood, Hæmatox'yli Lignum, Lignum Campechen'sē, L. Campechia'- num, L. Campesca'num, L. In'dicum, L. Sappan, L. Brasilia'num rubrum, L. cæru'leum, (F.) Bois de Campêche. Family, Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. Logwood is almost inodorous; of a sweetish, subastringent taste; and deep red colour. Its virtues are extracted both by water and alcohol. It is astringent and tonic, and is used in the protraeted stage of diarrhœa and dysentery.

HÆMATURESIS, Hæmaturia.

HÆMATU'RIA, Hæmature'sis, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ουρεω, 'I make urine.' Voiding of blood by urine. Hæmorrhag''ia hæmatu'ria, H. ex viris urina'riis, Hæmure'sis, Hæmu'ria, Mictio cruen'ta, M. Sanguin'ea, Mictus Cruen'tus seu Sanguineus, Hæmorrhœ'a via'rum urinaria'rum, Sanguis in Uri'na, Bloody urine, (F.) Pissement de Sang, Hématurie. Hemorrhage from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages. Like other hemorrhages, it may be active or passive. It may proceed from the kidneys, bladder, or urethra. The essential symptoms are: — blood, evacuated by the urethra; preceded by pain in the region of the bladder or kidneys, and accompanied by faintness. Whencesoever it proceeds, hæmaturia usually takes place by exhalation. Rupture of vessels is by no means common in the mucous membranes. Active hæmaturia requires general or local blood-letting; diluent and cooling drinks; absolute rest, and the horizontal posture. The chronic kind is more troublesome. It requires acidulated or aluminous drinks; chalybeates and tonics in general. When hæmaturia is excessive, cold injections may be thrown into the rectum or into the vagina of women, and topical applications be made to the perinæum.

HÆMATURIA CYSTICA, Cystorrhagia—h. Ejaculatoria, Spermatocystidorrhagia — h. Seminalis, Spermatocystidorrhagia—h. Stillatitia, Urethrorrhagia.

HÆMATUS, Hæmatotis.

HÆMAXIS, Blood-letting.

HÆMENCEPHALUS, Apoplexy.

HÆMERYTHRUM, Hæmatin.

HÆMIDROSIS, see Diapedesis.

HÆMISCHESIS, Hæmatischesis.

HÆMI'TIS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the blood. (F.) Hémite. The alteration of the blood that occurs in inflammatory diseases. — Piorry.

HÆMO-ARTHRITIS, Rheumatism, (acute.)

HÆMOCARDIORRHAG''IA, Apoplex'ia cordis, Apoplexy of the heart, from 'αιμα, 'blood.' καρδια. 'the heart,' and 'ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Effusion of blood into the substance of the heart.

HÆMOCERCH'NOS. This term has received two acceptations, owing to the different senses in which κερχνος is employed; signifying, sometimes, hissing; at others, dry. Consequently, the Hellenists have translated the compound word, at times, by spitting of blood, with hissing in the throat; at others, by evacuation of dry matters.

HÆMOCRYPHIA, Hæmatischesis.

HÆMODES, Sanguine.

HÆMO'DIA, Hæmodias'mus, Hemo'dia, Hebetu'do seu Stupor Den'tium, from 'αιμωδεω, ('αιμα, 'blood,' and οδους, 'a tooth,') 'I have pain in the teeth.' Pain in the teeth,—and more especially Agacement, or the setting on edge of those bodies by acid or acerb substances. It is also called Odon'tia Stupo'ris, Odontal''gia hæmo'dia, Dolor den'tium & stride'rē, Cataplex'is, Odontamblyog'mus, Odonthyperæsthe'sis, Tooth-edge.

HÆMODIASMUS, Hæmodia.

HÆMOIDES, Sanguine.

HÆMOPATHIA, Hæmatonosus.

HÆMOPERICAR'DIUM, Pericardi'tis exsudato'ria, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and pericardium. Effusion of blood into the pericardium.

HÆMOPERITONÆ'UM, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and περιτωναιον, 'peritoneum.' Effusion of blood into the peritoneum.

HÆMOPEX'IÆ, (G.) Hämopexien, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and πηξις, 'coagulation.' An order of diseases in which there is increased coagulability of the blood.—Hyperino'sis san'guinis.—Fuchs.

HÆMOPHEUM, Hæmaphein.

HÆMOPHILIA, Hæmatophilia.

HÆMOPHOBIA, Hæmatophobia.

HÆMOPHTHAL'MIA, Hæmatophthal'mia, Hæmatop'sia, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' Hæmalo'pia, Hæmalo'pis, Hæ'malops. Effusion of blood into the eye. When the extravasation is external, it is called H. exter'na, Hypospha'gma and Hæmalops externus; when internal, Hæmophthal'mia inter'na, Hydrophthal'mus cruen'tus, Hypoch'ysis hæmato'des, Hæmatom'ma, and Hæ'malops inter'nus. A blood-shot eye.

HÆMOPLANIA MENSTRUALIS, Menstruation, vicarious.

HÆMOPLETHORA, Plethora.

HÆMOPROCTIA, Hæmorrhois.

HÆMOPTOE, Hæmoptysis — h. Laryngea et Trachealis, Tracheorrhagia.

HÆMOPTOSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMOP'TYSIS, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and πτυω, 'I spit.' Spitting of blood, Hæmorrhag''ia Hæmop'tysis, Hæmap'tysis, Hæmatoptys'ia, Hæmatop'tysis, Emp'toē, Emop'toē, Empto'ica pas'sio, Hæmoptys'mus, Hæmopto'sis, Sputum sangu'inis, San'guinis fluor pulmo'num, Emopto'ica pas'sio, Hæmotis'mus, Hæmorrhœ'a pulmona'lis, Cruen'ta exspui'tio, Hæmorrhag''ia pulmo'nis, Pas'sio hæmopto'ica, Rejec'tio sang'uinis è pulmo'nibus, Expectora'tio sang'uinis, Hæmorrhag''ia Bron'chica, Pneumorrhag''ia, Pneumonorrhag''ia, Pneumonorrhœ'a, Bronchorrhag''ia, Emp'tysis, Hæmop'toē, Sputum cruen'tum, (F.) Hémoptysie, Crachement de sang, Expectoration de sang. Hemorrhage from the mucous membrane of the lungs; characterized by the expectoration of more or less florid and frothy blood. It is generally preceded by cough; dyspnœa; sense of heat in the chest, &c. It is important to discriminate between hæmoptysis, produced by some accidental cause acting irregularly or periodically on the lungs; and that which is, as it were, constitutional, and dependent on some organic affection of the lungs, or some faulty conformation of the chest. These two varieties differ as much in their prognosis and method of treatment, as in their causes. Constitutional hæmoptysis is a serious disease, almost always announcing phthisis pulmonalis. The accidental variety is chiefly dangerous by frequent recurrence, or too great loss of blood.

The general causes of hæmoptysis are the same as those of other kinds of hemorrhage. It has, besides, particular causes; such as too great exercise of the lungs; — loud speaking, playing on wind instruments, breathing acrid vapours, &c. It usually occurs between puberty and the age of 35. A sudden and terrific kind of hæmoptysis is sometimes met with; consisting in a great afflux of blood to the lungs. This has been called Pul'monary Ap'oplexy, Apoplex'ia pulmona'lis, A. pulmo'num, Pneumorrhag''ia, Infarc'tus hæmorrhag''icus pulmo'num, (F.) Apoplexie pulmonaire, Hémoptysie foudroyante, Hémorrhagie interstitielle du Poumon. Infiltration of blood into the air-cells may occur without any hæmoptysis.

Physical signs. Percussion may not always aid us in hæmoptysis, but generally a circum-scribed dulness will be perceived. The inspiratory murmur, on auscultation, is feeble or absent, locally; and is replaced by bronchial respiration and bronchophony. A fine liquid crepitus is detected around the affected part; and in the larger tubes, near the spine, a liquid bubbling rhonchus is usually heard. The value of these signs is determined by the nature of the expectoration. The treatment of hæmoptysis must be like that of internal hemorrhage in general.

Hæmoptysis Interna, Hæmatothorax—h. Laryngea et Trachealis, Tracheorhagia—h. Phthisis. Phthisis pulmonalis.

HÆMOPTYSMUS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMORMESIS, Hyperæmia.

HÆMORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.

HÆMORRHAGE, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMORRHAG''IA, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' San'guinis profiu'vium copio'sum, Sanguiflux'us, Hæmatocl'ysis, Aimorrhœ'a, Hæmorrhœ'a, Hæmatorrhag''ia, Hæmatis'mus, Hæmatorrhœ'a, Hæmator'rhysis, Hæmorr'hysis, Profiu'vium seu Prorup'tio seu Eruptio sanguinis, Profu'sio Sang'uinis, Hem'orrhage, Hæmorrhage, Bleeding, Loss of blood, Rupturing, bursting, or breaking of a blood-vessel, (F.) Hémorrhagie ou Hémorhagie, Perte de sang, Flux de sang. Any discharge of blood from vessels destined to contain it; with or without rupture of their coats. Hemorrhages may be spontaneous or traumatic: the first belong to the domain of medicine, the latter to that of surgery. They may, also, be internal or external; general—as in scurvy—or local. The hemorrhages by exhalation—those which chiefly interest the physician—have been classed, by Pinel, as follows:—1. Hemorrhage of the Mucous Membranes; Epistaxis, Hæmoptysis, Hæmatemesis, Hæmorrhoids, Hæmaturia, Uterine Hemorrhage. 2. Hemorrhage of the Tissues; Cutaneous, Cellular, Serous, Synovial.

Hemorrhages have generally been distinguished into active and passive: in other words, into those dependent upon augmentation of the organic actions, and those dependent upon debility. According to Broussais, no spontaneous hemorrhage is passive; all are active,—that is, produced by increased action and excess of irritation of the blood-vessels: they may occur with debility, but not from debility. He calls those only passive hemorrhages, which are owing to an external lesion of the vessels. Hemorrhages have been, by some, divided into constitutional, or those depending on original conformation:—accidental, or those produced by some adventitious cause; supplementary, or those which succeed others; symptomatic, critical, &c.

When hemorrhage takes place into any tissue, or is interstitial, it receives the name, with many, of apoplexy.

Active Hemorrhage, Hemorrhag''ia acti'va, H. arteriō'sa, Cauma hæmorrhag''icum, Angeiorrhag''ia, occurs chiefly in the young and plethoric. Good living; the use of fermented liquor—excessive exercise, or too sedentary a life, may perhaps be ranked as predisponent causes. It is commonly preceded by heaviness and pulsation in the part,—owing to the afflux of blood and consequent hyperæmia,—and by coldness of the extremities. The blood, evacuated, is generally of a florid red. In such active hemorrhages, the great indications of treatment will be, to diminish plethora where it exists, and to lessen the heart's action. Bleeding, purgatives, and cold, will be the chief agents.

Passive Hemorrhage, Hæmorrhag''ia passi'va, H. Veno'sa, Profu'sio, P. hæmorrhag''iea, occurs in those of weak constitution; or who have been debilitated by protracted disease, poor diet, long watching, excessive evacuations, &c.

The direct causes may be:—previous active hemorrhage; scorbutus, or any thing capable of inducing atony or asthenic hyperæmia of the small vessels. These hemorrhages are not preceded by excitement or by any signs of local determination. They are usually accompanied by paleness of the countenance; feeble pulse; fainting, &c. The indications of treatment will be:—to restore the action of the small vessels and the general tone of the system: hence the utility of styptics and cold externally; and of tonics and astringents, creosote, mineral acids, &c., internally. Hemorrhage also occurs from mechanical hyperæmia, as when hæmoptysis is produced by tubercles in the lungs; hæmatemesis by disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen, &c.

In Traumatic Hemorrhages, or those which are the consequences of wounds of arterial or venous trunks, the blood is of a florid red colour, and issues by jets and pulses, if it proceed from an artery; whilst it is of a deeper red, issues slowly and by a continuous flow, if from a vein. If the capillary vessels be alone divided, the blood is merely effused at the surface of the wound. Of the means used for arresting these traumatic hemorrhages, some act mechanically as absorbents, ligature, and compression; others chymically, as fire, caustics, creasote, astringents, &c.

HÆMORRHOI'DAL, Hæmorrhoi'dal, Hæmorrhoïda'lis, Hæmorrhoïdeus. Relating to hemorrhoids; as hemorrhoidal flux, hemorrhoidal tumours, &c.

Hemorrhoidal Arteries have been distinguished into superior, middle, and inferior. 1. The first is the termination of the inferior mesenteric artery, which assumes the name superior hemorrhoidal, when it reaches the upper and posterior part of the rectum. 2. The middle hemorrhoidal is furnished by the hypogastric or internal pudic. It ramifies on the inferior and anterior part of the rectum. 3. The inferior hemorrhoidal arteries are branches of the internal pudic, furnished to the inferior part of the rectum and to the muscles of the anus.

Hemorrhoidal Nerves. These emanate from the sciatic and hypogastric plexuses; and cover the rectum with their numerous filaments.

Hemorrhoidal Veins follow the same distribution, and generally empty themselves into the lesser mesenteric. Some of them assist in the formation of the hypogastric vein.

Hemorrhoidal Vessels, Vasa sedat'lia, are those vessels which are distributed to the rectum —the seat of hemorrhoids.

HÆMORRHOIDALES NODI, Hæmorrhois.

HÆMOR'RHOIS, Aimor'rhoïs, Asclepias'mus, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Aimor'roïs, Proc'tica Maris'ca, Maris'ca, Proctal'gia Hæmorrhoïda'lis, Morbus Hæmorrhoidalis, Piles, (F.) Hémorrhoïdes. The essential symptoms of this affection are: — Livid and painful tubercles or excrescences, (Hemorrhoid'al Tumours,) usually attended with a discharge of mucus or blood, (Hemorrhoid'al flux, Proctorrhœ'a, Hæmoproc'tia, Hæmorrhœ'a vasorum hæmorrhoïda'lium, (F.) Hémaproctie.) The most common causes of piles are a sedentary life; accumulation of fæces in the rectum; violent efforts at stool; pregnancy, &c. The precursory symptoms are: — pains in the loins; stupor of the lower limbs; and uneasiness in the abdomen and rectum, with more or less gastric, cerebral, and indeed general disorder; — constituting the Diath'esis Hæmorrhoida'lis, Motus seu Turba Hæmorrhoida'lis, and Moli'men Hæmorrhoida'lē, of most of the writers of Continental Europe. To these symptoms follow one or more round, smooth, renitent, painful, pulsating, and erectile tumours, around the margin of the anus, or within the anus; some pouring out blood occasionally. After having remained, for a time, tense and painful, they gradually shrink and disappear. The chief symptoms, occasioned by hemorrhoidal tumours, when much inflamed, are;—constant pain, liable, however, to exacerbations, and obliging the patient to preserve the horizontal posture, and to become augmented by the least pressure, or by the passage of the fæces.

Hæmorrhoids have generally been distinguished into — Hæmorrhoïdes Fluen'tes seu Marisco'sæ, Proc'tica Maris'ca cruen'ta, Bleeding or Open Piles; and into H. non fluen'tes, Proc'tica Maris'ca cæca, Hæmorrhoï'des cæcæ seu furen'tes, Hæmorrhoida'les nodi, Shut or blind piles. They have, also, been divided into internal or occult, and external, according to their situation; and into accidental or constitutional.

Hemorrhoidal Tumours are extremely troublesome, by their disposition to frequent recurrence; and they are apt to induce fistula; otherwise, they are devoid of danger. When anatomically examined, they are found not to consist in a varicose dilatation of the veins of the rectum; but to be formed of a very close, spongy, texture; similar to that which surrounds the orifice of the vagina; and to be erectile, like it. They are surrounded by a delicate membrane, and have no internal cavity. The treatment, in mild cases of hemorrhoidal tumours, is simple. Rest; the horizontal posture; the use of mild laxatives, as sulphur, castor oil, and emollient glysters, will be sufficient. If they be much inflamed, leeches may be applied; and warm cataplasms or cold lotions, according to circumstances, be prescribed, with abstinence, and cooling drinks. Afterwards, an ointment, composed of powdered galls and opium, may afford relief. It is in the relaxed kind, that such ointment, and the internal use of Ward's Paste, can alone be expected to afford much benefit. If, after repeated attacks, the tumours remain hard and painful, and threaten fistula, they may be removed.

By Hemorrhoidal Flux, Fluxus hæmorrhoïdalis, Proctorrhag''ia, is meant the hemorrhage which takes place from the rectum, owing to hemorrhoids. It is a common affection. The quantity of blood discharged is various: at times, it is very trifling; at others, sufficient to induce great debility, and even death. It is announced and accompanied by the same symptoms, as precede and attend hemorrhoidal tumours. Like other hemorrhages it may be active or passive; accidental or constitutional. The prognosis is rarely unfavourable. The affection may, almost always, be relieved by properly adapted means. These resemble such as are necessary in hemorrhages in general. Perfect quietude, — mental and corporeal, light diet, cooling drinks; bleeding if the symptoms indicate it; astringents, (if the disease be protracted and passive,) such as the Tinctura Ferri Chloridi; aspersions of cold water on the anus: astringent injections; plugging and compression. Such will be the principal remedial agents. When the hemorrhage has become habitual or is vicarious, some caution may be required in cheeking it; and, if inconvenience arise from a sudden suppression, its return may be solicited by the semicupium, sitting over warm water; aloetic purgatives, glysters, irritating suppositories, &c.; or leeches may be applied to the anus.

To the internal bleeding pile, a soft, red, strawberry-like elevation of the mucous membrane, Dr. Houston, of Dublin, gives the name vascular tumour. For its removal he recommends the application of nitric acid, so as to produce sloughing of its surface.

Some authors have described a species of Leucorrhœ'a Ana'lis or whitish discharge from the anus, which often attends ordinary hæmorrhoids. This they have called Proctica maris'ca muco'sa, Hæmor'rhoïs alba, Hæmorrhag''ia muco'sa, Leucor'rhoïs, &c. It requires no special mention.

Hæmorrhois ab Exaniâ, Proctocele—h. Procedens, Proctocele.

HÆMORRHOÏS'CHESIS, from 'αιμοῤῥοις, 'hæmorrhois,' ρεω, 'I flow,' and ισχεω, 'I restrain.' Reten'tio fluxus hæmorrhoïda'lis. Suppression or retention of the hemorrhoidal flux.

HÆMORRHOPHE'SIS, Absorp'tio sang'uinis, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and ροφαω, 'I sip up.' Absorption of blood.

HÆMORRHOPHILIA, Hæmatophilia.

HÆMORRHOSCOPIA, Hæmatoscopia.

HÆMORRHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMOSCHEOCELE, Hæmatoscheocele.

HÆMOSCOPIA, Hæmatoscopia.

HÆMOSPASIA, see Hæmospastic.

HÆMOSPAS'TIC, (F.) Hémospasique, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and σπαω, 'I draw.' An agent which draws or attracts blood to a part; as a cupping-glass. The operation is termed Hæmospa'sia, (F.) Hémospasie. It is generally applied to a process by which the air is exhausted over a considerable surface, as over one or more of the extremities, by an appropriate pneumatic apparatus.

HÆMOSTA'SIA, Hæmos'tasis, Epid'esis, San'guinis stagna'tio, (F.) Hémostasie, from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and στασις, 'stagnation.' Stagnation of blood. This name has, also, been given to any operation, the object of which is to arrest the flow of blood.

HÆMOSTATICS, Hæmatostatica.

HÆMOTELANGIOSIS, Telangiectasia.

HÆMOTEXIA, Hæmateclysis.
HÆMOTEXIS, Hæmateclysis.
HÆMOTHORAX, Hæmathorax.
HÆMOTISMUS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMOT'ROPHY, Hæmotroph'ia; from 'αιμα, 'blood,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Excess of sanguineous nourishment.—Prout.

HÆMURIA, Hæmaturia.
HÆMURESIS, Hæmaturia.
HÆMYDOR, Serum of the blood.
HÆREDITARIUS, Hereditary.
HÆSITATIO, Balbuties.
HÆVEA GUIANENSIS, see Caoutchouc.
HAGARD, Haggard.

HAGE'NIA ABYSSIN'ICA, Brayera anthelmin'tica, Bank'sia Abyssin'ica. An Abyssinian tree of the family Rosaceæ; Sexual system, Icosandria Digynia, which the natives plant round their habitations, as an ornament. The infusion or decoction of its flowers is employed by them as an anthelmintic, especially in cases of tapeworm. It is called, there, Cusso or Kosso, and Habbi.

HAGGARD, (F.) Hagard. The French use the term Air hagard, Œil hagard, 'Haggard air,' 'Haggard eye,' for a physiognomy, in which there is at once an expression of madness and terror.

HAGIOSPERMUM, Artemisia santonica.
HAGIOXYLUM, Guaiacum.
HAIL, Chalaza.

HAIR, Sax. hær, Crines, Pilus, Thrix, Pile, (F.) Poil. A conical, corneous substance, the free portion or shaft, scapus, of which issues to a greater or less distance from the skin, to the tissue of which it adheres by a bulb, Bulbus pili, seated in the areolar membrane,—where alone it is sensible. The hair receives various names in different parts—as Beard, Cilia, Eyebrows, Hair of the head (Capilli,) &c.

HAIR, FALLING OFF OF THE, Alopecia—h. Matted, Plica—h. Muscular, Dracunculus—h. Plaited, Plica—h. Trichomatose, Plica—h. Worm, Seta equina, see Ectozoa.

HAIRY, Pileous.
HAL, Salt.

HALA'TION, Hala'tium; diminutive of 'αλς, 'salt.' A pungent remedy, with the ancients, which contained salts.

HALCHEMI'A. The alchymists so called the art of fusing salts: from 'αλς, 'salt,' and χεω, 'I pour out.'—Libavius.

HALCYON, Alcyon.
HALCYONIUM ROTUNDUM, Pila marina.
HALE, Ephelides.
HALEINE, Breath—h. Courte, Dyspnœa.

HALELÆ'ON, Halelæ'um, from 'αλς, 'salt,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' Oleum Sali mixtum. A mixture of oil and salt, for removing swellings of the joints.—Galen.

HALÉTÉRATION, Alteration.

HALF-CASTE, Half-Cast, see Caste. A term applied, in India, to the offspring of a Hindoo and a European. Since, extended to the offspring of mixed races. The subjoined list from Tschudi's Travels in Peru, 1838—1842, shows the parentage of the different varieties of half-casts, and also the proper designations of the latter, as observed in South America.

| Parents. | Children. |
|---|---|
| White Father and Negro Mother, | Mulatto. |
| White Father and Indian Mother, | Meztizo. |
| Indian Father and Negro Mother, | Chino. |
| White Father and Mulatta Mother, | Cuarteron. |
| White Father and Mestiza Mother, | Creole (only distinguished from the white by a pale brownish complexion.) |
| White Father and China Mother, | Chino-blanco. |
| White Father and Cuarterona Mother, | Quintero. |
| White Father and Quintera Mother, | White. |
| Negro Father and Mulatta Mother, | Zambo-negro. |
| Negro Father and Meztiza Mother, | Mulatto oscuro. |
| Negro Father and China Mother, | Zambo chino. |
| Negro Father and Zamba Mother, | Zambo-negro (perfectly black.) |
| Negro Father and Cuarterona or Quintera Mother, | Mulatto (rather dark.) |
| Indian Father and Mulatta Mother, | China-oscuro. |
| Indian Father and Meztiza Mother, | Mestizo-claro (frequently very beautiful.) |
| Indian Father and China Mother, | Chino-cholo. |
| Indian Father and Zamba Mother, | Zambo-claro. |
| Indian Father with China-chola Mother, | Indian (with rather short frizzy hair.) |
| Indian Father and Cuarterona or Quintera Mother, | Meztizo (rather brown.) |
| Mulatto Father and Zamba Mother | Zambo (a miserable race.) |
| Mulatto Father and Meztiza Mother, | Chino (of rather clear complexion.) |
| Mulatto Father and China Mother, | Chino (rather dark.) |

See Mulatto.

HALICA, Alica.
HALICACALUM, Physalis.
HALICES, Pandiculation.
HALIDRYS VESICULOSA, Fucus vesiculosus.

HALINA'TRUM, Halini'trum, Haloni'trum; from 'αλς, 'salt,' and natrum or natron. A name given by the ancients to subcarbonate of soda, containing a little subcarbonate of ammonia, which is found, ready-formed, on the plaster of damp walls, in places inhabited by man or animals. Also, Potassæ nitras.

HALINITRUM, Halinatrum.
HALINUS, Saline.

HAL'ITUOUS, Halituo'sus, from halitus, 'vapour.' (F.) Halitueux. The skin is said to be halitueuse, when covered with a gentle moisture. The vapour, exhaled in all the cavities of the body, so long as the blood is warm, is called Hal'itus. The odorous vapour, exhaled by the blood itself whilst warm, is called Hal'itus San'guinis.

HALITUS, Breath—h. Oris Fœtidus, Breath, offensive—h. Sanguinis, Gaz sanguinis. See Halituous.

HALL, MINERAL WATERS OF. The springs of Hall, in Upper Austria, contain iodine.

HALLUCINATIO HYPOCHONDRIASIS, Hypochondriasis—h. Vertigo, Vertigo.

HALLUCINA'TION, Hallucina'tio, Halucina'tio, Falla'cia, Illu'sio sensûs, Socor'dia, Alu'sia, Illu'sio, Allucina'tio, Parora'sis, Somnia'tio in statu vig''ili, Ido'lum, Waking dream, Phan'tasm, from allucinari, 'to err;' 'to be deceived.' A morbid error in one or more of the senses. Perception of objects, which do not in fact exert any impression on the external senses. Hallucination or delusion almost always, if not always, depends on disorder of the brain, but is not an index of insanity, unless the patient believes in the existence of the subject of the hallucination.

HALLUS, Pollex pedis.
HALLUX, Pollex pedis.
HALME, Muria.

HALMYRO'DES, Salsugino'sus, Saisusiy''inous, from 'αλμυρις, ('αλμη, 'sea-water,' 'αλς, salt,') 'a salt liquor,' saltish. An epithet given to any affection, in which the heat feels pungent under the finger of the physician.—Hippocrates.

HALMYRUS, Saline.

HALO, Areola.

HALO SIGNA'TUS. The impression made by the ciliary processes on the anterior surface of the vitreous humour. So called from its consisting of a circle of indentations.—Sir C. Bell. Called by Haller, Striæ retinæ subject'æ ligamen'to ciliari.

HALODERÆ'UM, from 'αλς, 'salt,' and δεραιον, 'a collar,' (δερη, 'neck.') Colla'rium sali'num. A collar of salt applied to the neck, as in cases of croup.

HALOGENE, Chlorine.

HALOIDUM OXYGENATUM, Potassæ murias hyperoxygenatus.

HALONIITIS, Induration of the cellular tissue.

HALONITRUM, Halinatrum.

HALOPE'GÆ, from 'αλς, 'αλος, 'salt,' and πηγη, 'a spring.' Mineral waters whose chief ingredient is common salt—chloride of sodium.

HALOS, Areola.

HALOT'YLĒ, Cul'cita sali'na, from 'αλς, 'salt,' and τυλη, 'a bolster.' A bolster or pillow of salt recommended in croup.

HALS, 'αλς, 'salt;' hence Halogene, Haloid, &c.

HALTE'RES. Pieces of lead held in the hands by the ancients to assist them in leaping.

HALUCINATIO, Hallucination.

HALYCODES, Saline.

HALYCIS MEMBRANACEA, Bothriocephalus latus—h. Solium, Tænia solium.

HAM, Poples.

HAMAME'LIS VIRGINIA'NA, H. Virgin'ica, Witch hazel, Winter witch hazel, Snapping Hazelnut, Winter bloom. The bark of this tree, which is a native of the United States, is somewhat bitter and sensibly astringent; but it has not been much used. A cataplasm of the inner rind of the bark is said to have been found efficacious in painful inflammation of the eyes.

HAMARTHRI'TIS, Holarthri'tis, Catholarthri'tis, Arthri'tis universa'lis, from 'αμα, 'at once,' and αρθριτις, 'gout.' Gout in all the joints. Universal gout.

HAM'MA, Nodus, 'a tie.' A knot, used for retaining bandages on any part.—Hippocrates. A truss.

HAMPSTEAD, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, situate in the neighbourhood of London, are a good chalybeate.

HAMSTRING, To, see Hamstrings.

HAMSTRINGS, (F.) Jarretiers. The strings or tendons of the ham.

The HAMSTRING MUSCLES are the biceps femoris, whose tendon forms the outer hamstring; and the semimembranosus, semitendinosus, gracilis and sartorius, whose tendons form the inner hamstring.

'To hamstring' means to cut the strings or tendons of the ham.

HAMULAR PROCESS, see Hamulus.

HAM'ULUS. Diminutive of hamus, 'a hook.' A hook or crook: Ancis'tron. Also, any hook-like process; as the hamulus or hamular process of the pterygoid process.

HAMULUS LAMINÆ SPIRALIS, see Lamina spiralis.

HAMUS, see Hamulus.

HANCHE, Haunch.

HAND, Manus.

HANDS, DROPPED, Hand-drop, Wrist-drop. A popular term for the paralysis of the hand, induced by the action of lead.

HANGERS, Crusta genu equinæ.

HANGNAIL, (F.) Envie. A portion of epidermis, detached so as to tear the integument in the vicinity of the finger nails.

HANNEBANE, Hyoscyamus.

HAPANTIS'MUS, Badly formed from πας, or 'απας, 'all.' Oblitera'tio comple'ta. The matting or growing together of organic parts.

HAPHĒ, 'αφη, 'feeling, touch.' Hence:

HAPHON'OSI, Haphonu'si, from 'αφη, 'the touch.' Morbi tactûs. Diseases of the sense of touch.

HAPLOACNE, Acne simplex.

HAPLOPATHI'A, from 'απλος, 'simple,' and παθος, 'disease.' Morbus simplex. A simple or uncomplicated affection.

HAPLOTOM'IA, Simplex sec'tio, Incis'io simplex, Opera'tio simplex, from 'απλος, 'simple,' and τομη, 'incision.' A simple incision.

HAPSIS, Touch.

HAPTODYSPHOR'IA, Tactus dolorif'icus; from 'αφη, 'touch,' and δυσφορος, 'difficult to be borne.' Painful to the touch.

HAPTOT'ICA, Haptot'icē, from 'αφη, 'touch.' The doctrine of the phenomena of touch.

HARD, (G.) hart, Durus, Scleros, (F.) Dur. That which offers much resistance. In anatomy, the hard parts are those which compose the osseous basis of the body; in other words, the skeleton. See Pulse, hard.

HARD'S FARINACEOUS FOOD, see Farinaceous.

HARDESIA, Hibernicus lapis.

HARDHACK, Spiræa tomentosa.

HARE-LIP, Lagochi'lus, Lagos'toma, Lagon'tomum, Lagen'tomum, La'bium Lepori'num, Olopho'nia Labii Loba'ta, Lepori'num rostrum, (F.) Bec de Lièvre. A fissure or perpendicular division of one or both lips. It has been so called, in consequence of the upper lip of the hare being thus divided. Hare-lip is generally congenital; at other times it is accidental, or produced by a wound, the edges of which have not been brought into contact, and have healed separately. It is simple, when there is but one division; double, when there are two; and complicated, when there is, at the same time, a division or cleft of the superior maxillary bone and of the palate—Cleft or fis'sured palate, Wolf's jaw, Rictus lupi'nus; or a projection of the teeth into the separation of the lip.

In the Hare-lip operation, there are two indications to be fulfilled. First, to pare, with the knife or scissors, the edges of the cleft, and, afterwards, to preserve them in contact; in order to cause adhesion. This last object is accomplished by means of pins, passed through the edges of the division; in other words, by the twisted suture. The projecting teeth must, of course, be previously removed. If there be separation of the palate, it will become less and less after the union of the lip, or the operation of staphyloraphy may be performed upon it.

HARE'S EAR, Bupleurum rotundifolium—h. Eye, Lagophthalmia.

HARGNE, Hernia—h. Anévrysmale, Cirsomphalus.

HARICOT, Phaseolus vulgaris—h. Grand de Peron, Jatropha curcas.

HARMALIA, Aliment.

HARMONY, Harmo'nia, Harmos, primarily from αρω, 'I adjust.' Anatomists have called Suture by Harmony or simply Harmony, False or superficial suture, Sutu'ra os'sium spu'ria, Compa'ges os'sium per lin'eam sim'plicem, an immovable articulation, in which the depressions and eminences, presented by the bony surfaces, are but slightly marked; so that it might be presumed that the junction of the bones took place by simple apposition of their surfaces. An instance of harmony occurs in the union of the superior maxillary bones with each other.

HARMUS, Articulation, Harmony.

HAR'ROWGATE, MINERAL WATERS OF. The villages of High and Low Harrowgate are situate in the centre of the county of York, near Knaresborough, twenty miles from York, and fifteen from Leeds. Here are several valuable sulphurous and chalybeate springs. The sulphureous springs contain chloride of sodium, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, bicarbonate of soda, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid, carburetted hydrogen, and azote. The chalybeate springs contain protoxide of iron, chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, carbonic acid, azote, and oxygen. For the former, Harrowgate is celebrated and frequented.

HARROWGATE SALTS, ARTIFICIAL, are much employed, and not unfrequently by those who drink the genuine water, for the purpose of increasing its aperient power. They may be made as follows:—Sulph. Potass. cum Sulph. ℥vj; Potass. bitart. ℥j; Magnes. Sulph. in pulv. ℥vj. M. The usual dose is a teaspoonful, in a small tumblerful of tepid water, early in the morning.

HARROWGATE WATER, ARTIFICIAL, may be formed of common salt, ℥v; water, Oiij; impregnated with the gas from sulphuret of potass, and sulphuric acid, āā ℥iv. The following form has also been recommended. ℞. Sulphat. Potass. cum sulph. (Ph. Ed.) ℥j; Potass. bitart. ℥ss; Magnes. sulphat. ℥vj; Aquæ destillat. Oij. One-half to be taken for a dose.

HARTFELL, MINERAL WATERS OF. Hartfell Spa is about five miles from Moffat, in Scotland. The water is a chalybeate, and is much used.

HARTSHORN, Cervus, Cornu cervi, Liquor cornu cervi — h. Red, Spiritus lavandulæ compositus — h. and Oil, Linimentum ammoniæ carbonatis.

HARTS' TONGUE, Asplenium scolopendrium.

HARTWORT OF MARSEILLES, Seseli tortuosum.

HASCHICH, see Bangue.

HASTA, Penis — h. Nuptialis, Penis — h. Virilis, Penis.

HASTELLA, Splint.

HASTINGS, CLIMATE OF. This place has the reputation of being one of the mildest and most sheltered winter residences on the south coast of England. Owing to its low situation, and the height of the neighbouring cliffs, it is protected in a great degree from all northerly winds; and hence is found a favourable residence generally for invalids labouring under diseases of the chest.

HASTULA REGIS, Asphodelus ramosus.

HATFIELD'S TINCTURE, see Tinctura Guaiaci ammoniata.

HAUNCH, Coxa, Coxen'dix, of the Latins; αγχη, or ισχιον, of the Greeks; Ancha, Ischion, Osphys, Hip, Cossa, (F.) Hanche. The region of the trunk which is formed by the lateral parts of the pelvis and the hip-joint, including the soft parts. In women, on account of the greater width of the pelvis, the haunches are more marked and prominent than in men.

HAUSTEL'LATE, Haustella'tus, from haurio, haustus, 'I drink up.' An epithet for the structure of mouth, which is adapted for drinking or pumping up liquids. Insects, which possess that kind of mouth, are so named. Ehrenberg refers the fancied spermatozoon to the haustellate entozoa.

HAUSTUS, Po'tio, Potiun'cula. A Draught. A liquid medicine, which can be taken at a draught.

HAUSTUS NIGER, see Infusum sennæ compositum.

HAUT MAL, Epilepsy.

HAVAN'A or HAVAN'NAH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Cuba is often selected for the phthisical invalid during the winter months, and so far as regards elevation and comparative equability of temperature, it is more favourable for those of weak lungs than that of the United States. The mean annual temperature is high (78°), but the difference between the mean temperature of the warmest and coldest months is twice as great as at Madeira.

HAW, BLACK, Viburnum prunifolium.

HAWKNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

HAWKWEED, VEINY, Hieracium venosum.

HAWTHORN, WHITE, Mespilus oxyacantha.

HAY, CAMEL'S, Juncus odoratus—h. Asthma, Fever, Hay.

HAYRIFF, Galium aparine.

HAZEL, BEAKED, Corylus rostrata—h. Crottles, Lichen pulmonarius—h. Nut, snapping, Hamamelis Virginiana — h. Nut tree, Corylus avellana—h. Witch, Hamamelis Virginiana.

HEAD, Sax. heafod, heafd, heaved; the past participle of heafan, 'to heave up.' Caput, Cephalē, Cy'bē, (F.) Tête. The head forms the upper extremity of the body, and tops the skeleton. It consists of the cranium and face. The first, which comprises all the superior and posterior part, has the encephalon in its cavity: the latter forms only the anterior part, and serves as the receptacle for the greater part of the organs of the senses.

HEAD, WATER IN THE, Hydrocephalus.

HEAD ACH, Cephalæa, Cephalalgia — h. Ach, intermittent, Cephalalgia periodica—h. Ach, sick, Cephalæa spasmodica.

HEADY, same etymon as Head. (F.) Capiteux. That which inebriates readily. An epithet, applied to wines, which possess this quality.

HEAL-ALL, Collinsonia Canadensis, Prunella vulgaris, Scrophularia nodosa.

HEALING, Curative—h. Art, Medicine.

HEALTH, Sanitas.

HEALTHY, Salutary.

HEARING, HARDNESS OF, Deafness — h. Perverse, Paracusis perversa.

HEART, Sax. heorte, Germ. Herz, Cor, Cear, Cer, Car'dia, κεαρ, κηρ, καρδια, (F.) Cœur. An azygous muscle, of an irregularly pyramidal shape; situate obliquely and a little to the left side, in the chest;—resting on the diaphragm by one of its surfaces:—suspended by its base from the great vessels; free and movable in the rest of its extent, and surrounded by the pericardium. The right side of the body of the heart is thin and sharp, and is called Margo acu'tus: the left is thick and round, and termed Margo obtu'sus. It is hollow within, and contains four cavities; two of which, with thinner and less fleshy walls, receive the blood from the lungs and the rest of the body, and pour it into two others, with thick and very fleshy parietes, which send it to the lungs and to every part of the body. Of these cavities, the former are called auricles, the latter ventricles. The right auricle and right ventricle form the Pulmonic or right or anterior heart, (F.) Cœur du poumon, C. du sang noir, C. droit, C. antérieur: and the left auricle and ventricle, the systemic, corporeal, left, or aortic heart, (F.) Cœur du corps, C. gauche, C. aortique ou C. rouge. In the adult, these are totally distinct from each other, being separated by a partition; — the sep tum cordis. Into the right auricle, the venæ cavæ,—superior and inferior,—and the coronary vein, open. The pulmonary artery arises from the right ventricle; the four pulmonary veins open into the left auricle, and the aorta arises from the left ventricle.

The mean weight of the heart, in the adult, from the twenty-fifth to the sixtieth year, is, according to Bouillaud, from eight to nine ounces. The dimensions, according to Lobstein and Bouillaud, are as follows:—Length, from base to apex, five inches six lines: breadth, at the base, three inches; thickness of the walls of the left ventricle, seven lines; at a finger's breadth above the apex, four lines; thickness of the walls of the right ventricle, two and a quarter lines; at the apex, half a line; thickness of right auricle, one line; of the left auricle, half a line. The heart is covered, externally, by a very thin, membranous reflection from the pericardium. The muscular structure of which it is constituted is much thicker in the parietes of the ventricle than in those of the auricles. Its cavities are lined by a very delicate membrane, the endocardium, which is continuous with the inner membrane of the arteries, as regards the left cavities, and with that of the veins, as regards the right. Its arteries—the coronary—arise from the commencement of the aorta. Its nerves proceed, chiefly, from the pneumogastric and the cervical ganglions of the great sympathetic. The heart is the great agent in the circulation. By its contraction, the blood is sent over every part of the body. Its action does not seem to be directly owing to nervous influence received from the brain or spinal marrow, or from both. The circulation may, indeed, be kept up, for some time, if both brain and spinal marrow be destroyed.

When the ear is applied to the chest, a dull, lengthened sound is heard, which is synchronous with the arterial pulse. This is instantly succeeded by a sharp, quick sound, like that of the valve of a bellows or the lapping of a dog, and this is followed by a period of repose. The first sound appears to be mainly produced by the contraction of the ventricles; the second, by the reflux of the blood against the semilunar valves. These are what are called the Sounds of the Heart. Dr. C. J. B. Williams thinks that the word lubb-dup conveys a notion of the two sounds. The Beating or Impulse of the heart, Heart-stroke, against the parietes of the chest is mainly caused, perhaps, by the systole of the heart, which tends to project it forwards. It is doubted, however, by some, whether the impulsion be produced by the dilatation or the contraction of the ventricles.

The following table exhibits the different actions of the heart, and their coincidence with its sounds and impulse. It presumes, that the period from the commencement of one pulsation to that of another is divided into eight parts; and if the case of a person, whose pulse beats sixty times in a minute, be taken, each of these parts will represent the eighth of a second.

| Eighths of a Second. | |
|---|---|
| Last part of the pause, | 1. Auricles contracting; ventricles distended. |
| First sound and impulse, | 4. Ventricles contracting; auricles dilating. |
| Second sound, | 2. Ventricles dilating; auricles dilating. |
| Pause, | 1. Ventricles dilating; auricles distended. |

The heart is subject to different organic diseases; the chief of which are aneurism, contraction of the apertures, and rupture of its parietes.

Heart, Atrophy of the, Atroph'ia seu Arid'ra Cordis, Phthisis Cordis, Cardiatroph'ia, Acardiotroph'ia. A condition of the organ in which there is diminution in the thickness of the parietes of the whole organ.

Heart, Beating of the, see Heart—h. Dilatation of the, see Aneurism—h. Displacement of the, Ectopia Cordis—h. Fatty, Steatosis cordis.

Heart, Hy'pertrophy of the, Hypertroph'ia Cordis, Hypercor'dia, Hypersarco'sis Cordis, Hypercardiotroph'ia, Cardiaux'ē, Aneurys'ma cordis acti'vum (Corvisart), Cor bovi'num, (F.) Hypertrophie du Cœur. Supernutrition of the muscular parietes of the heart, which are thicker than usual; the cavities being generally diminished. The physical signs which indicate it are the following. In cases of long standing, the præcordial region is generally prominent; the pulsations of the heart are visible over a greater extent than natural; and a marked vibration is communicated to the hand when placed on the cardiac region. The dull sound on percussion is more extensive than natural; and on auscultation there is a permanent increase of the force and extent of the heart's action; there is no increase, however, of frequency, and the rhythm is regular. The pulse is generally strong, full, and hard.

Heart, Hypertrophy with Dilatation of the, Active an'eurism, Eccen'tric hy'pertrophy. In this affection, the pulsations can be seen and felt over a larger space, and the apex is more to the left and lower down than natural. The impulse is less steady, but at times more violent than that which accompanies simple hypertrophy. Percussion gives more distinct evidence of the enlargement, the sound being more extensively dull. On auscultation, the impulse is often violent, but irregular: in extreme cases, it produces the sensation of a large mass of flesh rolling or revolving beneath the ear. The pulse is strong, full, and vibratory. The shock of the heart's action is often transmitted to the whole person, and to the bed on which the patient is lying.

Heart, Concentric Hypertrophy of the, Cardiarctie, is when the parietes augment at the expense of the cavities.

HEARTBURN, Ardor ventriculi, Cardialgia.

HEARTWORT, Laserpitium album.

HEAT, past participle of Sax. hætan, 'to make warm.' Calor, Therma, Θερμη. (F.) Chaleur. The material cause, which produces the sensation—or the particular sensation itself—produced by a body of an elevated temperature, on our organs, especially on the organs of touch. Modern chymists have given the name Calo'ric to the principle, whatever may be its nature, which is the cause of heat. When we touch a body of a temperature superior to our own, a portion of caloric passes from the body to the hand, and produces the sensation of heat. If, on the contrary, we touch a body of a temperature inferior to our own, we communicate a portion of our caloric to it, and experience the sensation of cold. Our own sensations are but imperfect indexes of temperature. Two men meeting at the middle of a mountain,—the one ascending, the other descending,—will experience different sensations. The one ascending, passes from a warmer to a colder atmosphere; — the one descending from a colder to a warmer.

The chief instrument for measuring heat, used in medicine, is the thermometer. Of this there are three kinds: — that of Fahrenheit, that of Réaumur, and that of Celsius or the Centigrade. The following Table exhibits the correspondence of these different thermometric scales.

t Vinegar freezes.
u Strong wine freezes.
v A mixture of one part of alcohol and three of water freezes.
w Cold at the battle of Eylau, 1807
x A mixture of equal parts of alcohol and water freezes.
y A mixture of two parts of alcohol and one of water freezes.
z Melting point of quicksilver.

To reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 5, and add 32: thus, 40° Cent. × 9 ÷ 5 + 32 = 104° Fahr. To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Centigrade, subtract 32, multiply by 5, and divide by 9: thus, 104° Fahr. — 32 × 5 ÷ 9 = 40° Cent. To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 4, and add 32: thus, 32° Réaum. × 9 ÷ 4 + 32 = 104° Fahr. To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Réaumur subtract 32, multiply by 4, and divide by 9: thus, 104° Fahr. — $32 \times 4 \div 9 = 32$ Réaum. To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Centigrade, multiply by 5, and divide by 4: thus 32° Réaum. $\times 5 \div 4 = 40°$ Cent.; and, lastly, to reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Réaumur, multiply by 4, and divide by 5: thus, 40° Cent. $\times 4 \div 5 = 32°$ Réaum.

The human body can bear a high degree of heat diffused in the atmosphere. There are cases on record, where air of 400° and upwards, of Fahrenheit's scale, has been breathed with impunity for a short time. It can likewise withstand very severe cold. In the expedition of Capt. Back to the Arctic regions, the thermometer was as low as —70° of Fahr. Excessive heat disposes the body to gastric and intestinal diseases, and particularly to inflammation and enlargement of the liver; hence, the frequency of such affections within the torrid zone. Heat is often used therapeutically: the actual cautery, at a white heat, disorganizes the parts to which it is applied: a lesser degree occasions violent inflammation. Heat higher than that of the human body is excitant; of a lower degree, sedative. Excessive cold acts as a powerful sedative — inducing sleep, the tendency to which, after long exposure, becomes irresistible. See Cold. Many of the topical applications — as cataplasms — act wholly by virtue of their warmth and moisture.

Heat, Ardor vene'reus, Pruri'tus, (F.) Chaleur des Animaux, Rut, is the periodical sexual desire experienced by animals, — Œstrua'tion. It is supposed by some to be owing to the periodical maturation and discharge of ova, — Ovula'tion.

Heat, Acrid, see Acrid — h. Animal, see Animal Heat.

Heat, Inter'nal, (F.) Chaleur interne, is a sensation of heat felt by the patient, but not sensible to the touch. External heat, (F.) Chaleur extérieure, that which can be felt by others. Heat, Ardor, is called moist, (F.) haliteuse, when accompanied with moisture, like that felt after bathing; dry, (F.) sèche, when the skin has not its ordinary softness. It is called acrid and pungent, (F.) âcre et mordicante, when it conveys a disagreeable tingling to the fingers. The French employ the terms nervous heat and errat'ic heat, Chaleur nerveuse and Chaleur erratique, for that which comes by flushes, alternating with chills, and which moves rapidly from one part to another. M. Double has used the term septic heat, (F.) Chaleur septique, for that which produces a pungent sensation on the hand, similar to that of the acrid heat, but milder and more uniform, and which is accompanied with feebleness and frequency of pulse, &c.

Heat, Prickly, Lichen tropicus.

HEATH, COMMON, Erica vulgaris.

HEAUTOPHONICS, see Autophonia.

HEAVINESS, Somnolency.

HEAVING, Vomiturition.

HEAVY, Gravis, (F.) Gravatif, from Sax. heapan, 'to heave.' An epithet given to any pain which consists in a sensation of weight or heaviness, or is accompanied by such sensation.

HEBDOMADARIA, Octana.

HEBĒ, 'ηβη, Juven'ta, Juven'tas, Juven'tus, Hora In antiquity, the goddess of puberty. The word has been employed to designate, 1. The first hair that grows on the pubes, 2. The pubic region, and 3. Puberty.

HEBĒTES, Adolescens.

HEBETOR, Adolescens.

HEBETUDO ANIMI, Imbecility — h. Dentium, Hæmodia — h. Visus, Amblyopia, Caligo.

HEBRADENDRON CAMBOGIOIDES, see Cambogia.

HEBREWS, MED'ICINE OF THE. Medicine seems to have been at a very low ebb with the ancient Hebrews. Of anatomy they knew nothing. Their physiology was imperfect and filled with superstitions; and their therapeutics unsatisfactory. Hygiene appears to have been most attended to. Of the other departments of medicine we cannot judge of their knowledge.

HECATOMA PALUSTRIS, Ranunculus sceleratus.

HECATOMPHYLLUM, Rosa centifolia.

HEC'TEUS, 'εκτευς. A Greek measure, containing about 72 chopines or pints.

HECTIC FEVER, Febris hec'tica, Hecticop'yra, Hecticopyr'etos, Hec'tica, Amphimer'ina hec'tica, Febris phthis'ica, Syntecop'yra, Syntecticop'yra, Febris marasmo'des, Marasmop'yra, Febris tab'ida, Leucopyr'ia, Epan'etus hec'tica, Febris lenta, F. amphimer'ina hec'tica, Febris amato'ria, Chloro'sis amato'ria, (F.) Fièvre Hectique, F. Étique, from 'εξις, 'habit of body;' because in this disease every part of the body is emaciated; or, perhaps, from εκτηκω, 'I consume,' 'I am exhausted.' The name of a slow, continued, or remittent fever, which generally accompanies the end of organic affections, and has been esteemed idiopathic, although it is probably always symptomatic. It is the fever of irritation and debility; and is characterized by progressive emaciation, frequent pulse, hot skin, — especially of the palms of the hands and soles of the feet, — and, towards the end, colliquative sweats and diarrhœa. Being symptomatic, it can only be removed by getting rid of the original affection. This is generally difficult and almost hopeless in the disease, which it most commonly accompanies,—consumption.

HECTICA, Hectic Fever—h. Infantilis, Fever, infantile remittent.

HECTICOPYRA, Hectic fever.

HECTICOPYRETOS, Hectic fever.

HEC'TISIS, (F.) Étisie. Same etymon. The state of those who have hectic fever.

HEC'TOGRAMME, Hectogram'ma, from 'εκατον, 'a hundred,' and γραμμα. A measure of 100 grammes, i. e. 3 ounces, 1 drachm, and 44 grains, Troy.

HECTOLITRE. A measure containing 100 litres or 26.42 wine pints.

HECUSIUS, Voluntary.

HEDEO'MA, Hedeo'ma pulegioi'des, Cuni'la pulegioi'des, Melis'sa pulegioïdes, Pennyroyal, Tickweed, Stinking Balm, Squawmint. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Labiatæ. An indigenous plant, common in all parts of the United States, and which, where it is abundant, perfumes the air for a considerable distance. It is employed in the same cases as the mints and the English pennyroyal. In popular practice it is used as an emmenagogue.

The O'leum Hedeo'mæ (Ph. U. S.) or Oil of Pennyroyal is used as a stimulating carminative, dropped on sugar. Dose, 2 to 6 drops.

HEDERA ARBOREA, H. Helix.

Hed'era Helix, Hed'era arbo'rea, Bac'chica, Cissos, κισσος, Cittos, κιττος, Ed'era, Corymbe'tra, Corym'bos, Ivy, (F.) Lierre. The taste of ivy leaves is bitter, styptic, and nauseous. They are not used in medicine. According to Haller, they were recommended in Germany against the atrophy of children; and the common people of England sometimes apply them to running sores and to keep issues open. The berries were supposed, by the ancients, to have an emetic and purgative quality; and a watery extract was made from them, called by Quercetanus Extractum purgans. From the stalk of the tree a resinous juice exudes, in warm climates, called Gummi Hed'erœ, (F.) Gomme de lierre, Resine de lierre. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, but is not used.

HEDERA TERRESTRIS, Glechoma hederacea.

HEDERULA, Glechoma hederacea.

HEDISARUM ALHAGI, Agul.

HEDRA, 'ἑδρα, 'ἑδρη, 'a vestige,' 'a seat.' A seat. A fracture of the bones of the cranium, in which the trace of the fracturing instrument is still perceptible. It was, also, used by the ancients, for the anus, the breech, excrement, a privy, a night-chair, and for the bottom of an abscess.

HEDROCELE, Proctocele.

HEDYCH'ROUM, from 'ἡδυς, 'sweet,' and χροα, 'colour.' A remedy of a pleasant colour. Applied to certain trochs, the chief constituent of which was Theriac.

HEDYPHO'NIA, from 'ἡδυς, 'sweet,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Sweetness of voice.

HEDYPNEUS'TUS, Hedyp'nous, from 'ἡδυς, 'sweet,' and πνεω, 'I breathe.' Breathing sweetly or softly. Smelling sweetly.

HEDYPNOIS TARAXACUM, Leontodon taraxacum.

HEDYSARUM ALHAGI, Agul.

HEDYSMA, Condiment.

HEEL, see Calcaneum.

HELCENTERITIS, Dothinenteritis.

HELCO'DES, Ulcerated, Ulcerous.

HELCOL'OGY, Helcolog''ia; from 'ελκος, 'ulcer,' and λογος, 'discourse.' The doctrine of, or a treatise on, ulcers.

HELCOMA, Ulcer.

HELCOPHTHAL'MIA, Ophthal'mia ulcero'sa. Ophthalmia with ulceration.

HEL'COS, from 'ελκος, 'an ulcer.' Hence:

HELCOSIS, Elcosis, Ulceration — h. Cerebri, Encephalopyosis—h. Laryngis, Phthisis laryngea —h. Pulmonalis, Phthisis pulmonalis—h. Renalis, Nephrelcosis — h. Uteri, see Metrophthisis — h. Vesicæ, Cystophthisis.

HELCOSTAPHYLO'MA; from 'ελκος, 'ulcer,' and σταφυλωμα, 'staphyloma.' Staphyloma ending in ulceration.

HELCOXERO'SIS, from 'ελκος, 'ulcer,' and ξηρωσις, 'dryness.' The drying of an ulcer.

HELCTICA, Epispastics.

HELCUS, Ulcer.

HELCYD'RION, Helcyd'rium, 'ελκυδριον, Ulcus'culum, a small ulcer, a superficial ulceration of the cornea.—Galen, Paulus, Foësius.

HELCYS'TER, from 'ελκω, 'I draw.' An iron hook or crotchet for extracting the fœtus. See Crotchet.

HELENIUM, Inula helenium.

HELEN'IUM AUTUMNA'LE, False Sunflower, Sneezewort, Sneezeweed, Swamp Sunflower, Yellow star, Ox-eye. An indigenous herb, with large golden-yellow compound flowers, which appear in August. All its parts are bitter and somewhat acrid, and when snuffed up the nostrils in powder are powerful sternutatories.

HELIAN'THEMUM CANADEN'SE, Cistus Canaden'sis, Frostwort, Frostweed, Rock-rose. An herbaceous plant, having large yellow flowers, which grows in all parts of the United States, and flowers, in the Middle States, in June. It has an astringent, slightly aromatic, and bitterish taste. It has been prescribed in scrofula, but probably is nothing more than an aromatic tonic.

HELIAN'THEMUM CORYMBO'SUM, Rock rose, an indigenous plant, is used in the same cases.

HELIASIS, Astrabolismus, Insolation.

HELICH'RYSUM NUDIFO'LIUM, Caffee-tea. A South African plant. Nat. Ord. Compositæ, which is demulcent, and, in the form of infusion, is recommended in catarrh, phthisis, and other pulmonary affections.

HELICHRYSUM SERPYLLIFO'LIUM, Hottentot's tea, and HELICHRYSUM AURICULA'TUM have similar virtues.

HELICIA, Age.

HEL'ICINE, Helic''inus, Helicoï'des, Helico'des, from helix, 'the tendril of the vine.' Resembling the tendril of the vine.

HELICINE ARTERIES of the penis, as described by J. Müller, are short vessels given off from the larger branches, as well as from the finest twigs of the artery of the organ: most of those come off at a right angle, and project into the cavity of the spongy substance, either terminating abruptly or swelling out into a club-like process without again subdividing. Almost all these vessels are bent like a horn, so that the end describes half a circle or somewhat more. They have a great resemblance to the tendrils of the vine, whence their name. A minute examination of them, either with the lens or the microscope, shows that, although they at all times project into the venous cavities of the corpora cavernosa, they are not entirely naked, but are covered with a delicate membrane, which, under the microscope, appears granular.

HEL'ICIS MAJOR. A muscle of the ear, which originates from the anterior, acute part of the helix, upon which it ascends and is inserted into the helix. It pulls the part into which it is inserted a little downwards and forwards.

HELICIS MINOR. This muscle originates from the under and fore part of the helix, and is inserted into the helix, near the fissure in the cartilage, opposite the concha. Its use is to contract the fissure.

HELICOIDES, Heliciue.

HELICOTRE'MA, from 'ελιξ, 'helix, cochlea,' and τρημα, 'a foramen.' The hole by which the two scalæ of the cochlea communicate at the apex.

HELIGMUS, Convolution.

HELIKIA, Age.

HELIONOSIS, Insolation.

HELIOSIS, Astrabolismus, Insolation.

HELIOTROPE, Heliotropium Europæum.

HELIOTROPION, Cichorium intybus.

HELIOTRO'PIUM EUROPÆ'UM, H. erectum seu canes'cens seu supi'num, Verruca'ria, The He'liotrope, (F.) Tournesol, Herbe aux verrues. This plant is considered to possess aperient properties; and to be capable of destroying cutaneous excrescences; hence one of its names.

HELIX, Capre'olus, from ελειν, 'to envelop,' 'surround.' The fold is thus called, which forms the outer circumference or ring of the external ear.

HELIX, Limax.

HELIX POMA'TIA. A large kind of snail, transported from the south of Europe to England by Sir Kenelm Digby, for his lady when in a decline. It was considered highly restorative.

HELLEBORASTER, Helleborus fœtidus — h. fœtidus, Helleborus fœtidus.

HELLEBORE, Dracontium fœtidum—h. American, Veratrum viride—h. Black, Helleborus niger —h. Blanc, Veratrum album—h. Noir, Helleborus niger—h. Stinking, Helleborus fœtidus—h. Swamp, Veratrum viride—h. White, Veratrum album.

HELLEBORIS'MUS, Elleboris'mus. The method of treating disease, amongst the ancients, by hellebore. This comprised not only the choice, preparation, and administration of the medicine, but, likewise, the knowledge and employment of preliminary precautions and remedies proper for aiding its action, and preventing the pernicious effects which it might occasion.

HELLEBORUS. H. niger—h. Albus, Veratrum album—h. Grandiflorus, H. niger—h. Trifolius, Coptis.

Helleb'orus Fœ'tidus, Helleboras'ter, H. fœ'tidus, Elleboraster, Stinking Hel'lebore or Bear's foot, Setterwort, (F.) Hellébore ou Ellébore fétide, Pied de Griffon. The leaves of this plant are said to be anthelmintic. The smell of the fresh plant is extremely fetid, and the taste bitter and acrid. It usually acts as a cathartic.

Helleborus Niger, H. grandiflo'rus, Elleb'orus niger, Melampo'dium, Melanorrhi'zum, Ec'tomon, Black Hel'lebore, Melampode, Christmas Rose, (F.) Hellébore noir. The root of this European plant—Helleborus, (Ph. U. S.)—has a disagreeable odour, and bitter, acrid taste. It is possessed of cathartic properties, and has been recommended as an emmenagogue. It has been given in mania, melancholia, dropsy, suppressed menses, &c. Dose, gr. x to ℈j, as a cathartic.

HELLECEBRA, Sedum.

HELLENIA GRANDIFLORA, Costus.

HELMET-FLOWER, YELLOW, Aconitum Anthora.

HELMET POD, Jeffersonia Bartoni.

HELMINS, Plur. Helmin'thes seu Elmin'thes, from 'ελμινς, 'a worm.' A worm; an entozoon:—hence:

HELMINTHAGOGUE, Anthelmintic.

HELMINTHI, Worms.

HELMINTHIA, Helminthiasis—h. Alvi, Worms.

Helmin'thia Errat'ica. Worms, introduced by accident and without finding a proper habitation in the stomach or intestines; producing spasmodic colic, with severe tormina, and occasionally vomiting or dejections of blood; the 12th genus of the order Enterica, class Cœliaca, of Good.

Helminthia Podicis, Worms.

HELMINTHI'ASIS, from 'ελμινς, 'a worm.' A generic name for the condition which gives occasion to the presence of intestinal worms. It is, also, called Helmin'thia, Vermina'tio, Morbus vermino'sus, Status vermino'sus, Sabur'ra vermino'sa, Scoleci'asis, Scolece'sis, Entozoögen'esis, Parasitis'mus intestina'lis, Worm disease, Invermina'tion. See Worms.

HELMINTHIC, Anthelmintic.

HELMINTHOCHORTUM, Corallina Corsicana.

HELMINTHOCOLICA, Colica verminosa.

HELMINTHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana.

HELMINTHOL'OGY, Helmintholog''ia, from 'ελμινς, 'a worm,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on worms.

HELMINTHONCUS, Malis—h. Medinensis, Dracunculus.

HELMINTHOP'YRA, Helminthopyr'etos, Febris vermino'sa, from 'ελμινς, 'a worm,' and πυρ, 'a fever.' Fever occasioned by worms. See Fever, verminous.

HELMINTHOPYRETOS, Helminthopyra.

HELMINTHUS GORDII, Seta equina.

HELODES, Elodes.

HELONIAS DIOICA, Chamælerium luteum—h. Lutea, Chamælerium luteum—h. Officinalis, see Veratrina.

HELOPYRA, Elodes (febris.)

HELOPYRETUS, Elodes (febris.)

HELOS, Clavus, Marsh.

HELO'SIS, Helo'tis: from 'ελω, 'I turn.' Eversion of the eyelids, and convulsions of the muscles of the eyes. Plica Polonica. Strabismus.

HELOTIS, Helosis, Plica.

HELUS, Clavus, Helos.

HELXINE, Parietaria.

HEMACHROIN, Hæmatin.

HÉMADYNAMÈTRE, Hæmadynamometer.

HÉMAPÉRITONIRRHAGIE, Hæmaperitonirrhag''ia; from 'αιμα, 'blood,' peritonæum, and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Hemorrhage into the peritoneum.

HÉMAPROCTIE, Hæmorrhois.

HÉMASTATIQUES, Hæmatostatica.

HÉMATIDROSE, Sudor cruentus.

HEMATIN, Hæmatin.

HÉMATO-ENCÉPHALIE, Apoplexy.

HEMATOID, Hæmatodes.

HÉMATOLOGIE, Hæmatology.

HEMATOLOGY, Hæmatology.

HÉMATOMYÉLIE, Hémorrhagie de la Moëlle Épinière.

HÉMATONCIE, Hæmatoncus, see Hæmatodes fungus—h. Fongoïde, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÉMATOPISIE, Hæmatops.

HEMATORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.

HEMATOSIN, Hæmatin.

HEMERA, 'ημερα, 'a day.' Dies. Hence:

HEMERALOPIA, see Nyctalopia.

Hemeralo'pia, from 'ημηρα, 'the day,' and οπτομαι, 'I see.' Hæmeralops, Dyso'pia tenebra'rum, Cali'go tenebra'rum, Parop'sis Noctif'uga, Visus diur'nus, Nyctalo'pia, (of some,) Nyctotyphlo'sis, Amblyo'pia crepuscula'ris, Cæcitas crespuscula'ris seu noctur'na, A'cies diur'na, Daysight, Day-vision, Hen blindness, Night blindness, (F.) Vue diurne, Aveuglement de Nuit. A disease, in which the eyes enjoy the faculty of seeing, whilst the sun is above the horizon, but are incapable of seeing by the aid of artificial light. Its causes are not evident. The eye, when carefully examined, presents no alteration, either in its membranes or humours.

HEM'ERALOPS, Dorea. One labouring under hemeralopia. Also, Hemeralopia.

HEMERATYPHLOSIS, Nyctalopia.

HEMERODROMA, (febris) Ephemera.

HEMEROPATHI'A; from 'ημερα, 'a day,' and παθος, 'an affection.' A disease, which continues only a day; or, which is only observed during the day.

HEMI, 'ημι, 'ημισυς, 'half,' 'semi.' Hence:

HEMIAMAUROSIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIANDRUS, Eunuch.

HEMIANOR, Eunuch.

HEMIANTHROPIA, Mania.

HEMIANTHROPUS, Eunuch, Maniac.

HEMIAZYGA, (Vena) see Azygos vein.

HEMICEPHALÆA, Hemicrania.

HEMICEPHALÆUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPHALIUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPHALUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPH'ALUS, Semiceph'alus, from 'ημι, 'half,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' One who has half a head.

HEMICRA'NIA, Hemicephalæ'a, Migra'na, Grana, Hemipa'gia, Hemipe'gia, Heterocra'nia, Monopa'gia, Monope'gia, Cephalæ'a Hemicra'nia, Hemipathi'a, Megrim, from 'ημισυς, 'half,' and κρανιον, 'cranium.' (F.) Migraine. Pain, confined to one half the head. It is almost always of an intermittent character;—at times, continuing only as long as the sun is above the horizon; and hence sometimes called Sun-pain,—and is cured by cinchona, arsenic, and the remedies adapted for intermittents.

Hemicrania Idiopathica. Neuralgia, facial.

HEMIDES'MUS IN'DICUS, Periplo'ca In'-

dica, Ascle'pias Pseudosar'sa, Sarsaparil'la In'dica, Nannari, Indian Sarsaparilla. A Hindoostanee plant, the root of which has a peculiar aromatic odour, and a bitterish taste. It is used in India as a substitute for sarsaparilla.

HEMIDIAPHORE'SIS, Transpira'tio Unilat'era; from 'ημι, 'half,' and διαφορησις, 'perspiration.' Perspiration of one half the body.

HEMIEC'TON, Hemiec'teon, Semisex'tum. A vessel capable of containing 36 chopines or pints, and in which fumigations were made in diseases of the uterus and vagina.—Hippocrates.

HEMIM'ELES, from 'ημισυς, 'one half,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A genus of monsters, in which the upper or lower extremities are very defective — mere stumps,—and the fingers and toes are entirely wanting or very imperfect.—G. St. Hilaire.

HEMIMŒ'RION, from 'ημισυς, and μοιρα, 'a part.' 'One half.'—Foësius. Also, half a drachm. —Erotian.

HEM'INA. A Greek measure, answering to the Cotyle, κοτυλη, i. e. one half the sextarius, or about half a pint, English.

HEMIOBOL'ION, Hemiob'olon. Half the obolus. A weight of about five grains.—Gorræus.

HEMIO'LION. A weight of 12 drachms, or oz. 1½.—Galen. See Sescuncia.

HEMIO'PIA, Hemiop'sis, Hemiopi'asis, Suffu'sio dimidi'ans, Visus dimidia'tus, Marmor'ygē Hippoc'ratis, Hemiamauro'sis, Amauro'sis dimidia'ta, from 'ημισυς, 'one half,' and οπτομαι, 'I see.' Depraved vision, in which the person sees only one half of an object.

HEMIOPIASIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIOPSIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIPA'GES, Dicor'yphus dihypogas'trius, Oc'topus synapheoceph'alus, from 'ημι, 'half,' and πηγνυμι, 'I fasten.' A monstrosity, in which twins are united from the navel to the vertex.—I. G. Saint Hilaire.

HEMIPAGIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPATHIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPEGIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPHO'NIA, from 'ημι, 'half,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Great weakness of voice.

HEMIPLE'GIA, Hemiplex'ia, Paral'ysis Heiniplegia, Semiple'gia, Semi-sidera'tio, from 'ημισυς, 'one half,' and πλησσω, or πληττω, 'I strike.' Paralysis of one side of the body. See Paralysis. One so palsied is said to be hemipleg''ic, semisidera'tus.

Hemiplegia Facialis, Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMIPLEXIA, Hemiplegia.

HEMIPROSOPLEGIA, Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMISPHÆRÆ CEREBRI, Hemispheres of the brain.

HEM'ISPHERE, Hemisphæ'ra, Hemisphæ'rium, from 'ημισυς, 'one half,' and σφαιρα, 'a sphere.' One half of a sphere or of a body having a spheroidal shape.

Hemispheres of the Brain, Hemisphæ'ræ cer'ebri, Hemispher'ical gan'glia, are the upper spheroidal portions of the brain, separated from each other by the falx cerebri.

HEMISPHERICAL GANGLIA, Hemispheres of the brain.

HÉMITE, Hæmitis.

HEMITRITÆ'A, (FEBRIS,) F. Semi-tertia'na, Febris sesquial'tera, (F.) Semi-tierce, Fièvre demitierce. A semi-tertian fever, so called because it seems to possess both the characters of the tertian and quotidian intermittent. — Galen, Spigelius.

HEMIUNCIA, Hemiuncion.

HEMIUN'CION, Hemiun'cia, Semun'cia, Semiun'cia. Half an ounce.

HEMLOCK, Conium maculatum — h. American, Cicuta maculata—h. Bastard, Chærophyllum sylvestre — h. Common, Conium maculatum — h. Dropwort, Œnanthe — h. Gum, see Pinus Canadensis — h. Pitch, see Pinus Canadensis — h. Spruce, Pinus Canadensis — h. Water, American Cicuta maculata—h. Water, fine-leaved, Phellandrium aquaticum—h. Water, Cicuta aquatica—h. Wild, Cicuta maculata.

HÉMOCARDIOPLASTIES, see Polypus.

HEMODIA, Hæmodia.

HÉMO-ENCÉPHALORRHAGIE, Apoplexy.

HÉMOHÉPATORRHAGIE, Hepatorrhagia.

HÉMOMÈTRE, Hæmadynamometer.

HÉMOMYÉLORRHAGIE, Apoplexy, spinal.

HÉMOPTYSIE, Hæmoptysis — h. Foudroyante, see Hæmoptysis.

HEMORRHAGIP'AROUS, (F.) Hémorrhagipare, from hæmorrhagia, 'hemorrhage,' and parire, 'to bring forth.' That which gives occasion to hemorrhage: thus, softening of the neurine may be hemorrhagiparous.

HÉMORRHINIE, Epistaxis.

HÉMORRHOÏDAIRE, (F.) One who is subject to hemorrhoids.

HÉMORRHOÏDES, Hæmorrhois — h. Aveugles, Cæcæ hæmorrhoides. See Hæmorrhois.

HÉMORRHOSCOPIE, Hæmatoscopia.

HÉMOSPASIE, Hæmospasia.

HÉMOSPASIQUE, Hæmospastic.

HÉMOSTASIE, Hæmostasia.

HÉMOSTATIQUES, Hæmatostatica.

HEMP, INDIAN, Apocynum cannabinum, Bangue—h. Wild, Ambrosia trifida.

HEMPSEED, see Cannabis sativa.

HENBANE, Hyoscyamus.

HENBIT, Lamium amplexicaule.

HEN-BLINDNESS, Hemeralopia.

HENNÉ, Lawsonia inermis.

HENRICEA PHARMACEARCHA, Gentiana chirayita.

HENRICUS RUBENS, Colcothar.

HEPAR, 'ηπαρ, 'genitive,' 'ηπατος, 'liver.' A name for substances resembling liver in appearance. The ancient name for the liver of sulphur, Hepar sul'phuris; which is sometimes a compound of sulphur and potassium; at others, of sulphur and potassa. See Potassæ sulphuretum.

HEPAR ADULTERINUM, Spleen.

HEPAR ANTIMONIA'TUM is a compound of a sulphuret of antimony and an alkali. See Oxydum stibii sulphuretum.

HEPAR MARTIA'LE. A compound of sulphuret of potass and an oxide of iron.

HEPAR SANGUINIS, see Blood — h. Sinistrum, Spleen — h. Sulphuris salinum, Potassæ sulphuretum—h. Sulphuris volatile, Ammoniæ sulphuretum—h. Uterinum, Placenta.

HEPATAL'GIA, Hepatodyn'ia, Neural'gia he'patis, Col'ica hepat'ica, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the liver. Neuralgia of the liver, (F.) Névralgie du Foie.

HEPATALGIA CALCULOSA, Colica hepatica—h. Petitiana, Turgescentia vesiculæ felleæ — h. Phlegmonoides, Hepatitis.

HEPATAPOSTE'MA, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and αποστημα, 'an abscess.' Abscess of the liver.

HEPATARIUS, Hepaticus.

HEPATATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia seu Aridu'ra he'patis, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and atrophia, 'atrophy.' Atrophy of the liver:—a general concomitant of Cirrho'sis he'patis.

HEPATAUXĒ, Hypertroph'ia he'patis, (F.) Hyperhe'patotrophie, Hypertrophie du foie. Hypertrophy of the liver.

HEPATECHE'MA, Son'itus hepat'icus, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and 'ηχημα, 'sound.' Sound rendered by the liver on percussion.

HEPATEMPHRAX'IS, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Emphrax'is hepatis, Hepatic obstruction.—Ploucquet.

HEPATENCEPHALO'MA, Hepatomyelo'ma, Fungus he'patis medulla'ris, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.' Encephaloid of the liver.

HEPATE'RUS, Hepat'icus, Jecora'rius. A variety of diarrhœa, Fluxus hepaticus.—Gorræus.

HEPATHÆMORRHAG''IA, Hæmorrhag''ia hepat'ica, Hepatorrhag''ia, Apoplex'ia hepat'ica, (F.) Hémorrhagie du foie, Hémohépatorrhagie, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and 'αιμορραγια, 'hemorrhage.' Hemorrhage from the liver.

HEPAT'IC, Hepat'icus, Hepata'rius, Hepate'rus, Hepatoïdes, Hepato'des, Jecora'rius, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver.' Belonging or relating to or resembling liver.

HEPATIC AR'TERY, Arte'ria Hepat'ica. One of the three branches given off by the cœliac. It passes towards the inferior surface of the liver; where it divides into two branches, a right and a left, which proceed towards the corresponding parts of that organ. The right branch gives off the cystic artery. Before dividing, the hepatic artery sends off two considerable branches, the A. pylorica and Gastro-epiploica dextra.

HEPATIC DUCT, Ductus hepat'icus, (F.) Canal hépatique, is about three fingers' breadth in length, and of the size of a quill. It is formed by the union of the biliary ducts, and joins the cystic duct at a very acute angle, to form the ductus choledochus. Its function is to convey the bile from the liver towards the duodenum.

HEPATIC PLEXUS, Plexus hepat'icus, consists of nervous filaments, sent by the cœliac plexus to the liver, which accompany the hepatic artery.

HEPATIC VEINS, Supra-hepatic Veins, Venæ cavæ hepat'icæ, (F.) Veines sus-hépatiques, Intralob'ular veins, do not follow the course of the arteries of the same name. They arise in the substance of the liver; converge towards the posterior margin of that viscus, and open into the vena cava inferior. They convey away the blood carried to the liver by the hepatic artery and vena porta.

HEPAT'ICA. Medicines believed to be capable of affecting the liver.

HEPATICA, H. triloba — h. Americana, H. triloba — h. Fontana, Marchantia polymorpha — h. Nobilis, H. triloba—h. Stellata, Asperula odorata.

HEPATICA TRIL'OBA, H. America'na, Anemo'nē hepat'ica seu nob'ilis, Herba trinita'tis, Hepat'ica, Hepat'icus flos, Trifo'lium hepat'icum, Trifo'lium au'reum, Liverwort, Liverweed, Trefoil, Noble Liverwort, Herb Trin'ity, (F.) Hépatique des jardins. This plant—Hepat'ica (Ph. U. S.)—is a gentle astringent, but not possessed of much virtue.

HEPATICULA, Hepatitis, chronic.

HEPATICUS, Hepateros — h. Flos, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIFICATIO, Hepatization.

HÉPATIQUE ÉTOILÉE, Asperula odorata —h. des Fontaines, Marchantia polymorpha—h. des Jardins, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIRRHŒ'A, Fluxus hepat'icus, Dysenter'ia hepat'ica, Diarrhœ'a hepat'ica, Hepatorrhœ'a, Hepatocholorrhœ'a, Hepatodysenter'ia, Hepatorrhag''ia, Hæmate'ra, Aimate'ra, (F.) Flux hépatique, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' A species of diarrhœa in which the excreted matters seem to come from the liver, or are much mixed with bile.

HEPATIS EMUNCTORIA, Inguen—h. Suspensorium, Ligament, suspensory, of the liver.

HEPATISATIO, Hepatization — h. Pulmonum, Hepatization of the Lungs.

HÉPATISATION, Hepatization — h. Grise, see Hepatization—h. Rouge, see Hepatization.

HEPATITES VENA, Cava vena.

HEPATI'TIS, Empres'ma hepati'tis, Cauma hepati'tis, Inflamma'tio he'patis, I. Jecino'ris, Febris hepat'ica inflammato'ria, Hepatal'gia phlegmonoï'des, Morbus jecino'ris, Hepatophlegmonē, Inflammation of the liver, (F.) Hépatite, Inflammation du foie, Pièce (Provincial). It may be seated either in the peritoneal covering, Sero-hepati'tis, or in the substance of the liver, or in both, Puro-hepati'tis, and may be acute or chronic. The peculiar symptoms are:—pain in the right hypochondrium, shooting to the back and right shoulder, and increased on pressure; difficulty of lying on the left side; sometimes jaundice with cough, and synocha. Its termination is generally by resolution: — in tropical climates it often runs on to suppuration, Jec'oris vom'ica, Hepati'tis apostemato'sa, the abscess breaking either externally, or forming a communication with the intestines or chest, or breaking into the cavity of the abdomen. The causes are those of inflammation in general. Heat predisposes to it; hence its greater frequency in hot climates. On dissection of those who have died of it, the liver has been found hard and enlarged; colour of a deep purple; or the membranes have been more or less vascular; or adhesions, or tubercles, or hydatids, or abscesses, or biliary calculi may be met with. The treatment must be bold. Bleeding, general and local, fomentations, blisters, purgatives, and the antiphlogistic regimen. In hot climates especially, a new action must be excited by mercury as early as possible.

HEPATITIS APOSTEMATOSA, see Hepatitis.

HEPATITIS, CHRONIC, Hepati'tis chron'ica, Inflamma'tio he'patis lenta, Hepatitis occul'ta, Hepatic'ula, Subinflamma'tio he'patis, (F.) Chronohépatite, Chronic liver disease, is not as common as is believed. It may be suspected from the existence of the symptoms above mentioned, when in a minor degree; enlargement, constant dull pain in the region of the liver; sallow countenance; high-coloured urine; clay-coloured fæces, &c. The great object of treatment is to excite a new action by mercury and counter-irritants, and to keep the liver free by cathartics.

Hepatitis Cystica, Cholecystitis—h. Occulta, H. chronic.

HEPATIZA'TION, Hepatisa'tio, Hepatifica'tio, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver.' Conversion into a liver-like substance. Applied to the lungs when gorged with effused matters, so that they are no longer pervious to the air;—Hepatisa'tio pulmo'num, Carnifica'tio pulmo'num. In such state, they are said to be hepatized.

Hepatization, Red, (F.) Hépatisation rouge, Endurcissement rouge, Ramollissement rouge, characterizes the first stage of consolidation of the lungs in pneumonia.

Hepatization, Gray, (F.) Hépatisation grise, Induration grise, Ramollissement gris, Infiltration purulente, characterizes the third stage, or stage of purulent infiltration.

HEPATIZON, Chloasma.

HEPATOC'ACĒ, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and κακος, 'evil.' Gangrene of the liver.

HEPATOCE'LĒ, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and κηλη, 'a tumour;' Her'nia hepat'ica; Hernia of the liver. The liver has never been found entirely out of the abdominal cavity. Increase of its bulk, or injuries of the parietes of the abdomen, have been the sole cause of the protrusions which have been occasionally met with, especially in infants, in whom the upper part of the linea alba is very weak, and indeed scarcely seems to exist. Sauvages has distinguished two species of hepatocele: — the ventral (in the linea alba), and the umbilical or hepatomphalum.

HEPATOCHOLORRHŒA, Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATOCO'LICUM. A ligament of the liver, described by Haller, as passing from the gall-bladder and contiguous sinus portarum, across the duodenum to the colon. Another, termed Hepato-renal, descends from the root of the liver to the kidney. They are both peritoneal.

HEPATOCYS'TIC, Hepatocys'ticus, Cystidepat'icus, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and κυστις, 'bladder.' Relating to the liver and gall-bladder.

Hepatocystic Duct, Ductus hepatocyst'icus. The choledoch duct.

HEPATODYNIA, Hepatalgia.

HEPATODYSENTERIA, Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATOGASTRIC, Gastrohepatic.

HEPATOGASTROCHOLOSIS, Fever, bilious, Fever, gastric.

HEPATOG'RAPHY, Hepatogra'phia; from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which describes the liver.

HEPATOHÆ'MIA, Hyperæ'mia he'patis, Hepatic Engorgement, (F.) Hyperémie du Foie, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Sanguineous congestion of the liver.

HEPATODES, Hepatic.

HEPATOIDES, Hepatic.

HEPATOLITHI'ASIS, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and λιθιασις, 'formation of stone.' The formation of concretions, Hepatol'ithi, in the liver.

HEPATOL'OGY, Hepatolog''ia, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and λογος, 'a discourse,' 'treatise.' A treatise on the liver.

HEPATOMALA'CIA, Malaco'sis he'patis, (F.) Ramollissement du Foie. Softening of the liver.

HEPATOMYELOMA, Hepatencephaloma.

HEPATON'CUS, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumefaction of the liver.

HEPATOPAREC'TAMA, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and παρεκταμα, 'considerable extension.' Excessive enlargement of the liver.

HEPATOPATHI'A, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and παθος, 'suffering.' Liver-Disease. Disease of the liver.

HÉPATOPATHIE CANCÉREUSE, Hepatoscirrhus—h. Tuberculeuse, Hépatostrumosie.

HEPATOPHLEGMONE, Hepatitis.

HEPATOPHTHI'SIS, Phthisis hepat'ica, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and φθιω, 'I consume.' Consumption from suppuration of the liver.

HEPATORRHAGIA, Hepatirrhœa, Hepathæmorrhagia.

HEPATORRHEX'IS, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Rupture of the liver.

HEPATORRHŒA, Hepatirrhœa.

HÉPATOSARCOMIE, Hepatoscirrhus.

HEPATOSCIR'RHUS, from 'ηπαρ, 'liver,' and σκιρρος, 'cancerous induration.' Scirrhus he'patis, Encephalo'sis of the liver, Carcinoma of the liver, (F.) Hépatosarcomie, Hépatopathie cancéreuse, Cancer du Foie. Scirrhus or Cancer of the liver.

HÉPATOSTRUMOSIE, Tuber'cula he'patis, (F.) Tubercules du Foie, Hépatopathie tuberculeuse; from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and struma, 'a tumour,' 'a scrophulous tumour.' Tubercle of the liver.

HEPATOT'OMY, from 'ηπαρ, 'the liver,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' Dissection of the liver.

HEPIALOS, Epialos.

HEPS, see Rosa canina.

HEPSEMA, Decoction.

HEPSESIS, Decoction.

HEPTAL CYCLE, see Cycle.

HEPTAL'LON GRAVEOLENS, Hogwort, Bear's fright. An indigenous plant, which has a fetid porcine smell; and is said to be used by the Indians as a diaphoretic, cathartic, &c.

HEPTAPHAR'MACUM, from 'επτα, 'seven,' and φαρμακον, 'a remedy.' A medicine composed of seven substances; cerusse, litharge, pitch, wax, colophony, frankincense, and bullock's fat. It was regarded as laxative, suppurating and healing.

HEPTAPHYLLUM, Tormentilla.

HEPTAPLEURON, Plantago major.

HERACLEUM, see H. lanatum — h. Branca, H. spondylium.

Heracle'um Spondyl'ium, H. Bran'ca, Branca ursi'na, B. German'ica, Spondyl'ium, Sphondyl'ium, Cow Parsnep, All-heal, (F.) Berce, Branc-ursine bâtarde, Fausse Acanthe. Family, Umbelliferæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. The root of this plant has a strong, rank smell; and a pungent, almost caustic taste. It has been given as a tonic, stomachic and carminative; both in powder and in decoction. The Russians, Lithuanians, and Poles obtain from its seeds and leaves, by fermentation, a very intoxicating spirituous liquor, which they call Parst.

The root of Heracle'um Lana'tum, Masterwort, Cow parsnep,—Heracle'um (Ph. U. S.)—is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

HERACLEUS MORBUS, Epilepsy.

HERB, Herba, Bot'anē. Any ligneous plant which loses its stalk during the winter.

Herb Christopher, Actæa spicata.

Herb-Doctor, Botan'ical Doctor, Botan'ical physic''ian. One who treats diseases altogether by herbs; as the—so called—"Thompsonians."

Herb of Grace, Gratiola officinalis—h. Mastich, common, Thymus mastichina — h. Mastich, Syrian, Teucrium marum—h. Robert, Geranium Robertianum — h. of Saint Cunegonde, Eupatorium cannabinum—h. Sophia, Sisymbrium sophia —h. Trinity, Hepatica triloba.

HERBIV'OROUS, Herbiv'orus, from herba, 'grass,' and voro, 'I eat.' An epithet applied to animals which feed on herbs.

HER'BORIST, Herba'rius. One who deals in useful plants. An Herb'alist or Herb'arist.

HERBORIZA'TION, Herba'rum inquisit''io. An excursion, made with the view of collecting plants. Such excursions are directed by the Apothecaries' Company of London, for the use of their apprentices, &c.

HERBS, FIVE CAP'ILLARY, Quinque herbæ capilla'res, were, anciently, hart's tongue; black, white, and golden maiden-hair, and spleenwort.

HERBS, FIVE EMOL'LIENT, Quinque herbæ emollien'tes, were, anciently, beet, mallow, marshmallow, French mercury, and violet.

HERCULES ALLHEAL, Pastinaca opoponax.

HERCULEUS MORBUS, Epilepsy.

HÉRÉDITAIRE, Hereditary.

HERED'ITARY, Hæredita'rius, Heredita'rius, Gentilit''ius, Sym'phytos, Syn'genes, (F.) Héréditaire, from hæres, 'an heir.' An epithet given to diseases, communicated from progenitors. Such diseases may exist at birth; or they may supervene at a more or less advanced period of existence. Hereditary diseases, Morbi hereditа'rii, (F.) Maladies héréditaires, often prevail amongst several members of a family, or are family diseases or complaints.

HERMAPHRODE'ITY, Hermaphrodis'ia, Hermaphroditis'mus, Hermaphrodis'mus, Fab'rica androg''yna, Androgyn'ia, Gynan'dria, Hermaph'rodism; from Ἑρμῆς, 'Mercury,' and Ἀφροδίτη, 'Venus.' Appertaining to Mercury and Venus. Union of the two sexes in the same individual.

HERMAPHRODISIA, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPH'RODITE. Same etymon. Hermaphrodi'tus, Gynida, Androg''ynus. One who possesses the attributes of male and female: who unites in himself the two sexes. A term, applied to an animal or plant which is, at the same time, both male and female. True hermaphrodites are only met with in the lower degrees of the animal scale, amongst the zoophytes, mollusca, or gasteropoda. The individuals of the human species, regarded as hermaphrodites, owe this appearance to a vicious conformation of the genital organs; a kind of monstrosity, which renders them unfit for generation, although an attentive examination may exhibit the true sex. Hermaphrodites have, likewise, been described, which, instead of uniting the attributes of both sexes, cannot be considered male or female. These have been called neutral hermaphrodites.

HERMAPHRODITISMUS, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPHRODITUS, Hermaphrodite.

HERMET'ICA DOCTRI'NA, Hermetica ars, (F.) Hermétique. The doctrine of Hermes, a celebrated Egyptian philosopher, who is considered the father of alchemy. That part of chymistry, whose object was the pretended transmutation of the metals.

HERMODAC'TYLUS, Dactyle'tus, An'ima articulo'rum, from Ἑρμῆς, 'Mercury,' and δακτυλος, 'a finger;' or rather from Hermus, a river in Asia, upon whose banks it grows, and δακτυλος, 'a date;' or from Ἑρμῆς, 'Mercury,' and δακτυλος, 'a date;' (F.) Hermodactyle, Hermodacte ou Hermodate. The root of the Hermodactyl was formerly used as a cathartic. By some, it is supposed to be identical with the Iris tubero'sa. The best testimony seems to be in favour of its being a variety of the colchicum, — Col'chicum Illyr'icum.

HERMODATE, Hermodactylus.

HERMOPH'ILUS, from Ἑρμῆς, 'Mercury,' and φιλος, 'a lover.' One who is fond of mercury as a medicine.

HER'NIA, Ramex, Ruptu'ra, R. hernio'sa, Crepatu'ra, Ectop'ia hernio'sa, Celē, Rupture, Burst, (F.) Hargne, Descente, Effort, Greveure, Rompeure. Any tumour, formed by the displacement of a viscus or a portion of a viscus, which has escaped from its natural cavity by some aperture and projects externally. Herniæ have been divided into,—1. Hernia of the Brain; Encephalocele; 2. Hernia of the Thorax; Pneumocele; 3. Hernia of the Abdomen.

Abdom'inal Herniæ are remarkable for their frequency, variety, and the danger attending them. They are produced by the protrusion of the viscera, contained in the abdomen, through the natural or accidental apertures in the parietes of that cavity. The organs, which form them most frequently, are the intestines and the epiploon. These herniæ have been divided, according to the apertures by which they escape, into:

1. Inguinal or Supra-Pu'bian Herniæ. These issue by the inguinal canal: they are called Bubonoce'lē, when small; and Scrotal Hernia or Oscheoce'lē, in man, when they descend into the scrotum; — Vulvar Hernia or Puden'dal or La'bial Hernia, Episioce'lē, in women, when they extend to the labia majora. 2. Crural or Femoral Hernia, Me'roce'lē, when they issue by the crural canal. 3. Infra-Pu'bian Hernia, (F.) Hernie sous-pubienne, Oödcoce'lē, Her'nia foram'inis ova'lis, when the viscera escape through the opening, which gives passage to the infra-pubian vessels. 4. Ischiat'ic Hernia; when it takes place through the sacro-sciatic notch. 5. Umbil'ical Hernia, Exom'phalos, Omphaloce'lē; when it occurs at the umbilicus or near it. 6. Epigas'tric Hernia;—occurring through the linea alba, above the umbilicus. 7. Hypogas'tric or Infra-umbil'ical Hernia, Cœlioce'lē, Hypogastroce'lē, — when it occurs through the linea alba below the umbilicus. 8. Perinæ'al Hernia, Mesoscelocelē, Her'nia perinæ'i, Perinæoce'lē, Perineoce'lē—when it takes place through the levator ani, and appears at the perineum. 9. Vag''inal Hernia, Colcoce'lē seu Elytrocelē — through the parietes of the vagina. 10. Diaphragmat'ic Hernia, Diaphragmatoce'lē; when it passes through the diaphragm.

Herniæ are likewise distinguished,—according to the viscera forming them, — into Enteroce'lē, Epiploce'lē, En'tero-epiploce'lē, Gastroce'lē, Cystoce'lē, Hepatoce'lē, Splenoce'lē, &c.

When a hernia can be restored to its natural cavity, by the aid of pressure, &c., properly applied, it is said to be reducible. It is, on the contrary, irreducible, when adhesion, bulk, &c., oppose its return. When the aperture, which has given passage to the hernia, occasions more or less constriction on the protruded portion, the heruia is said to be incarcerated or strangulated: and, if the constriction be not removed, constipation, hiccough, vomiting, and all the signs of violent inflammation, followed by gangrene, supervene, with alteration of the features, small pulse, cold extremities, and death.

The therapeutical indications are, — 1. As regards reducible hernia: — to replace the viscera in the abdomen by the taxis; and to retain them there by the use of a truss, which, if properly adapted, may effect a radical cure. 2. As regards irreducible hernia: — to support the tumour by an appropriate suspensory bandage. 3. As regards strangulated hernia: — to have recourse to the taxis; blood-letting; warm bath; tobacco glysters; ice to the tumour; and, if these should not succeed, to perform an operation, which consists in dividing the covering of the hernia, and cutting the aponeurotic ring, which causes the strangulation; — reducing the displaced viscera, unless their diseased condition should require them to be retained without;—dressing the wound appropriately;—restoring the course of the fæces by means of gentle glysters;—preventing or combating inflammation of the abdominal viscera;—conducting the wound to cicatrization, by appropriate means; and afterwards supporting the cicatrix by a bandage.

The word hernia was also used, of old, for the scrotum, and, not unfrequently, for the testicle.

Hernia Humora'lis, Empres'ma Orchi'tis, Didymi'tis, Orchi'tis, Orchidi'tis, Inflamma'tio tes'tium, Inflamma'tion of the Testicle, Swelled Testicle, Hernia Ven'eris, Orchioce'lē, Orchidoce'lē, Orchidon'cus, (F.) Inflammation du testicule, Orchite. Swelling and inflammation of the testicle is a common symptom of gonorrhœa—Chaudepisse tombée dans les Bourses; but it may arise from external injuries, or from other causes. It is a disease, which cannot be mistaken, and the treatment must obviously be strongly antiphlogistic, supporting the testicle during the treatment, and for some time afterwards: methodical compression has also been found useful. The disease is not generally of a serious character, going off as suddenly as it comes on. As it affects the epididymis more especially, when supervening on gonorrhœa or blennorrhœa, it is sometimes termed blenorrhag''ic epididymi'tis.

HERNIAIRE, Hernial, Herniaria glabra.

HER'NIAL, Hernia'rius, (F.) Herniaire. Belonging to, or concerning hernia: — as Hernial Bandage, Hernial Sac, &c.

The (F.) Hernié, is applied to a part enveloped in a hernial sac. (F.) Hernieux, Cele'ta, Celo'tes, Rup'tured, Burst, Bursten, means one affected with hernia; and Chirurgien herniaire, one who devotes himself to the treatment of hernia.

HERNIA'RIA GLABRA, H. vulga'ris seu hirsu'ta seu alpes'tris seu an'nua seu cine'rea seu frutico'sa, Milligra'na, Em'petrum, Rupture-wort, from hernia, 'rupture.' (F.) Herniaire, Tarquette, Herniole. This plant, which, as its name imports, was formerly considered efficacious in the cure of hernia, seems destitute of all virtues.

HERNIARIUS, Hernial.

HERNIE CHARNUE, Sarcocele—h. de l'Épiploon, Epiplocele—h. de l'Estomac, Gastrocele—h. Inguinale, Bubonocele — h. du Nombril, Exomphalos—h. Ombilicale, Exomphalos—h. de la Vessie, Cystocele.

HERNIÉ, Hernial.

HERNIEMPHRAG'MUS, Herniemphrax'is, from hernia, and εμφραγμος, 'obstruction.' The mechanical obstruction of a hernial canal for the radical cure of the hernia.

HERNIEUX, Hernial.

HERNIOLE, Herniaria glabra.

HERNIOTOMY, Celotomia.

HERO'IC, Hero'icus, Hero'ius, Hero'us, from ηρως, 'a hero.' An epithet applied to remedies or practice of a violent character.

HERPEDON, Herpes.

HERPEN, Herpes.

HERPES, Erpes, Herpe'don, Herpen, Serpens, from 'ερπω, 'I creep;' because it creeps and spreads about the skin; Eephly'sis Herpes, Cytis'ma Herpes, Tetter, Fret, (F.) Dartre, Olophlyctide. A vesicular disease, which, in most of its forms, passes through a regular course of increase, maturation, decline, and termination in from 10 to 14 days. The vesicles arise in distinct, but irregular clusters, which commonly appear in quick succession, and near together, on an inflamed base; generally attended with heat, pain, and considerable constitutional disorder. The term, like all others which refer to cutaneous diseases, has not been accurately defined. The ancients had three varieties: the miliary, κεγχριαιος; vesicular, φλυκταινωδης, and cro'ding, εσθιομενος. Bateman has the following varieties: 1. HERPES PHLYCTÆNO'DES, Herpes milia'ris, Eephly'sis Herpes Milia'ris, (F.) Dartre phlyctenoïde, in which the vesicles are millet-sized; pellucid; clusters commencing on an uncertain part of the body, and being progressively strewed over the rest of the surface; succeeded by fresh crops. 2. HERPES ZOSTER, Zoster, Zona ig'nea, Z. serpigino'sa, Ignis Per'sicus, Cinzilla, Sacer ignis, Eephly'sis Herpes zoster, Herpes peris'celis, Erysip'elas zoster, Erysip'elas phlyctænoï'des, E. pustulo'sa, Zona, Cir'cinus, Perizo'ma, (F.) Ceinture, C. dartreuse, Feu Persique, Érysipèle pustuleux, Shingles, in which the vesicles are pearl-sized; the clusters spreading round the body like a girdle; at times confluent, and occasionally preceded by constitutional irritation. 3. HERPES CIRCINA'TUS, Formi'ca ambulato'ria, An'nulus repens, Herpes Serpi'go, Serpi'go, Eephly'sis Herpes Circina'tus, Ringworm, Vesic'ular Ringworm, consisting of vesicles with a reddish base, uniting in rings; the area of the rings slightly discoloured, often followed by fresh crops. 4. HERPES LABIA'LIS, and 5. HERPES PRÆPUTIA'LIS, Aphthæ præpu'tii, Ulcus'cula præpu'tii, appearing, respectively, on the lips and prepuce. 6. HERPES IRIS, Iris, Rainbow-worm, occurring in small circular patches, each of which is composed of concentric rings of different colours. To these may added, HERPES EX'EDENS, Eephly'sis Herpes ex'edens, Herpes esthiom'enus, H. depas'cens, H. ferus, H. estiom'enus, H. ferox, Darta exeoriati'va seu malig'na, Lupus vorax, Formi'ca corrosi'va, Formix, Pap'ula fera, Ul'cerative Ringworm, Nir'les, A'gria, (F.) Dartre rongéante, in which the vesicles are hard; clusters thronged; fluid dense, yellow or reddish, hot, acrid, corroding the subjacent skin, and spreading in serpentine trails.

All the varieties demand simply an antiphlogistic treatment, when attended with febrile irritation. The herpes circinatus, alone, requires the use of astringent applications which have the power of repressing the eruption.

HERPES DEPASCENS, H. exedens — h. Esthiomenus, H. exedens—h. Estiomenus, H. exedens —h. Farinosus, Pityriasis—h. Ferox, H. exedens —h. Ferus, H. exedens—h. Furfuraceus, Pityriasis — h. Furfuraceus circinatus, Lepra, H. exedens — h. Miliaris, H. phlyctænoides — h. Periscelis, H. zoster — h. Serpigo, H. circinatus — h. Tonsurans, Porrigo decalvans.

HERPET'IC, Herpet'icus, (F.) Dartreux. Possessing the nature of herpes.

HERPETOG'RAPHY, Herpetograph'ia, from 'ερπης, 'herpes,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the different forms of herpes.

HERPE'TON, Herpet'icon, from 'ερπειν, 'to creep.' A creeping eruption or ulcer. — Hippocrates.

HERPYLOS, Thymus serpyllum.

HERRENSCHWAND'S SPECIFIC, see Specific of Herrenschwand.

HESPERIS ALLIARIA, Alliaria.

HETERADELPH'IA, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and αδελφος, 'a brother.' A double monstrosity, in which the components of the double bodies are very unequal, and of which one portion may be regarded as the stem or trunk, to which another organized part, or even a whole body, less developed than itself, is affixed like a parasite.

HETEROCHRON'ICUS, Heteroch'ronus, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and χρονος, 'time.' Relating to difference of time.

Pulsus heterochron'icus. A pulse of varying rhythm. An irregular or intermittent pulse.

HETEROCHYMEU'SIS, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and χυμευσις, 'mixture.' A state of the blood in which it contains other matters than in health, as urea, bile, &c.

HETEROCLITE, see Homology, and Tissues.

HETEROCRANIA, Hemicrania.

HETEROCRIN'IA, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and κρινω, 'I separate.' Modification in the situation of secretions.—Andral.

HETEROGENESIS, see Generation.

HETEROLALIA, Heterophonia.

HETEROLOGOUS TISSUES, see Tissues.

HETEROMORPH'ISM, Heteromorphis'mus, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and μορφη, 'shape.' A deviation from the natural shape of parts.

HETEROMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HETEROPATHIC, Allopathic.

HETEROPHO'NIA, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and φωνη, 'voice.' A cracked or broken voice. A change of the voice or speech—Heterola'lia.

HETEROPHTHAL'MIA, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' A difference in the two eyes, — as when one squints, or is of a different colour.

HETEROPLAS'TY, Heteroplas'ticē, Heteropla'sia, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' Irregular plastic or formative operations, that do not admit of exact classification.

HETEROPROSO'PUS, from 'ετερος, 'different,' and προσωπον, 'countenance.' A monster having two faces.—Gurlt.

HET'EROPUS, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and πους, 'foot.' One who has one foot different from the other.

HETEROREXIA, Malacia.

HETERORRHYTH'MUS, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' Having another rhythm. An epithet given to the pulse, when it is such, in any individual, as is usually felt at a different age.

HETEROS, from 'ετερος, 'the one of two,' 'the other.' Hence:

HETEROSARCO'SES, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A class of diseases which consist in the formation of accidental tissues.—Gendrin.

HETEROTAX'IA, (F.) Héterotaxie, from 'ετερος, and ταξις, 'order.' A malformation, which consists in the general transposition of organs. A change in the relation of organs.

HETEROTOP'IA, from 'ετερος, 'other,' and τοπος, 'place.' A deviation from the natural position of parts.

HÊTRE, Fagus sylvatica.

HEUCHERA, see H. cortusa — h. Acerifolia, H. cortusa.

HEUCHE'RA CORTU'SA, H. America'na, H. Acerifo'lia, H. Vis'cida, Cortu'sa America'na, Alum

Root, Amer'ican San'icle, Ground-maple, Cliff-weed, Split-rock. The root — Heuchera (Ph. U. S.) — is a powerful astringent, and is the basis of a cancer powder. The American Indians apply the powdered root to wounds, ulcers, and cancers. It is said to have been sold for colchicum.

HEUCHERA VISCIDA, H. cortusa.

HEUDELOTIA AFRICANA, see Bdellium.

HEVEA GUIANENSIS, see Caoutchouc.

HEXAGIUM, Sextula.

HEXATHYRIDIUM VENARUM, see Worms.

HEXIS, 'ἕξις. Habit, habit of body, constitution. Hence, hectic, cachectic, &c.

HIA'TUS, from hiare, 'to gape,' 'to open.' A foramen or aperture. Mouth. The vulva. Also, yawning.

HIATUS DIAPHRAG'MATIS AÖR'TICUS, Semicir'culus exsculp'tus. The opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the abdominal aorta.

HIATUS FALLOPII, see Aquæductus Fallopii — h. Occipito-pétreux, Lacerum posterius foramen — h. Sphéno-pétreux, Lacerum anterius foramen.

HIATUS OF WINSLOW, Fora'men of Winslow. An opening — situate behind the lesser omentum, and behind the vessels and nerves of the liver — which forms a communication between the peritoneal cavity and that of the omenta.

HIBER'NICUS LAPIS, Teg'ula Hiber'nica, Arde'sia Hiber'nica, Harde'sia, Irish Slate. A kind of slate or very hard stone, found in different parts of Ireland, in masses of a bluish-black colour, which stains the hands. It has been taken, powdered, in spruce-beer, against inward contusions.

HIBISCUS, Althæa.

HIBIS'CUS ABELMOS'CHUS, Abelmos'chus moscha'tus. The name of the plant, whose seeds are called Grana Moschi or Musksced. It is the Belmus'chus, Abelmos'chus, Granum Moschi, Ket'mia Ægyptiaca, Moschus Ar'abum, Ægyp'tia moscha'ta, Bamix moscha'ta, Alce'a, Alcea Ind'ica, Alcea Ægyptiaca Villo'sa, Abelmosch, Abelmusk, Muskmallow, (F.) Graine de Musc, Herbe à la poudre de Chypre, Ambrette, Guimauve veloutée. It is indigenous in Egypt and the Indies. The seeds are chiefly used as perfumes; and especially in the formation of Cyprus Powder.

HIBIS'CUS POPULE'US, Balimba'go. A small Molucca tree. The fruit is full of a juice similar to camboge. The root is emetic. It is used in chronic diarrhœa, colic, dyspepsia, &c.

HICCOUGH, Singultus.

HICCUP, Singultus.

HICK'ORY. The name of several American trees of the genus Carya; Order, Juglandaceæ. The leaves are usually aromatic; and are reputed to be antispasmodic (?). The bark of those species that have bitter nuts, as Carya ama'ra and C. porci'na, is somewhat astringent. Some of them bear fruit that is much esteemed, as Carya olivæformis, Pecan' or Peccan' nut, and C. sulca'ta, Shellbark.

HIDDEN SEIZURES. An expression employed by Dr. Marshall Hall for obscure encephalic and spinal attacks, of an epileptoid character for example, which may be immediately owing to trachelismus.

HIDRISCHESIS, Hidroschesis.

HIDROA, Desudatio, Échauboulures, Hydroa, Sudamina.

HIDRON'OSUS, Hidronu'sus, from 'ἱδρως, 'sweat,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' A disease accompanied by violent sweats. Sudor Anglicus.

HIDRONUSUS, Hidronosus.

HIDROPEDESIS, Ephidrosis.

HIDROPHOROS, Sudoriferous.

HIDROPOETICUM, Sudorific.

HIDROPYRA, Sudor Anglicus.

HIDROPYRETOS, Sudor Anglicus.

HIDRORRHŒA, Ephidrosis.

HIDROS, 'ἱδρως, Sudor, 'sweat.' Hence — Hidropyra, Hidrosis, &c.

HIDROS'CHESIS, Hidris'chesis, Reten'tio sudo'ris, from 'ἱδρως, 'sweat,' and σχεσις, 'retention.' Suppression of perspiration.

HIDRO'SIS, Hidro'sis, Suda'tio, from 'ἱδρως, 'sweat.' Sudation, Sweating, Ephidrosis.

HIDROTERION, Achicolum.

HIDROTERIUM, Sudorific.

HIDROTICUM, Sudorific.

HIDRO'TIUM, Diminutive of 'ἱδρως, 'sweat.' A gentle sweat or perspiration.

HIDROTOPŒUM, Sudorific.

HIÈBLE, Sambucus ebulus.

HI'ERA DIACOLOCYN'THIDOS, from 'ἱερος, 'holy.' Hiera of Colocynth. An electuary, composed of 10 parts of colocynth, as much agaric, germander, white horehound, stœchas: — 5 parts of opoponax, as much sagapenum, parsley, round birthwort root, and white pepper: — 4 parts of spikenard, cinnamon, myrrh, and saffron; and 3 pounds, 3 ounces, and 5 drachms of honey.

HIERA OF COLOCYNTH, H. Diacolocynthidos — h. Logadii, Hiera picra.

HIERA PICRA, from 'ἱερος, 'holy,' and πικρος, 'bitter.' Holy bitter, Pulvis aloët'icus, formerly called Hiera loga'dii, when made into an electuary with honey. It is now kept in the form of dry powder; — prepared by mixing socotrine aloes one pound, with 3 ounces of canella alba. See Pulvis aloes cum canellâ.

HIERA SYRINX, Vertebral column, Epilepsy.

HIERACI'TES, 'ἱερακιτης, from 'ἱεραξ, 'a hawk,' Lapis Accip'itrum. The ancient name of a precious stone, believed to be capable of arresting the hemorrhoidal flux. — Pliny, Galen, Paulus.

HIERACIUM LACHENALII, H. murorum.

HIERA'CIUM MURO'RUM, H. Lachenalii, Pulmona'ria Gall'ica, Auric'ula mu'ris major, (F.) Épervière des murailles, Pulmonaire des Français. A European plant, which is a slight tonic.

HIERACIUM OLERACEUM, Sonchus oleraceus.

HIERACIUM PILOSEL'LA. The systematic name of the Auric'ula Muris, Pilosel'la, P. Alpi'na, Myoso'tis, Mouse-ear, (F.) Piloselle, Oreille de Souris. This plant contains a bitter, lactescent juice, which has a slight degree of astringency. The roots are more powerful than the leaves.

HIERA'CIUM VENO'SUM, Rattlesnakeweed, Veiny Hawkweed, indigenous, has similar properties.

HIERANOSUS, Chorea, Epilepsy.

HIERAX, Accipiter.

HIEROBOTANE, Verbena officinalis.

HIEROGLYPH'ICA, from 'ἱερος, 'holy,' and γλυφω, 'I carve.' A name given to the signs employed in medicine; and, also, to the folds in the hands, feet, and forehead, which afford chiromancy its pretended oracles.

HIEROPYR, Erysipelas.

HILL'S BALSAM OF HONEY, see Balsam of Honey, Hill's — h. Essence of Bardana, Tinctura guaiaci ammoniata.

HILLBERRY, Gaultheria.

HILL FEVER, see Fever, hill.

HILON, (F.) Hilum, improperly Hilus. A name given by some writers to a small blackish tumour, formed by the protrusion of the iris through an opening in the transparent cornea, so called from its comparison with the hile or black mark presented by the vicia faba at one of its extremities. In Botany, the Hile or Hilum is the cicatricula of a seed, which indicates the place by which it was attached in the cavity of the pericarp. It is the umbilicus of the seed. The fissure of the spleen, kidney, &c., is, also, sometimes called Hilus.

HILUS, Hilon.

Hilus Liena'lis, Incisu'ra liena'lis. The concave part of the spleen.

Hilus Rena'lis, Incisu'ra rena'lis. The concave part of the kidney.

HIMANTOMA, see Himas.

HIMANTOSIS, Himas.

HIMAS, 'ιμας, 'a thong of leather.' The uvula; likewise, elongation, and extenuation of the uvula. It is also called Himanto'sis, Himanto'ma. See Staphylœdema.

HIMEROS, Libido.

HIP, Haunch—h. Bone, Ischium—h. Disease, Coxarum morbus—h. Joint, Coxofemoral articulation—h. Tree, Rosa canina.

HIP'PACĒ, 'ιππακη, from 'ιππος, 'a horse.' Ca'seus Equi'nus. A cheese prepared from mare's milk.

HIPPANTHRO'PIA, from 'ιππος, 'a horse,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man.' A variety of melancholy, in which the patient believes himself changed to a horse. The Greek word 'ιππανθρωπος, means the fabulous Centaur.

HIPPASIA, Equitation.

HIPPEIA, Equitation.

HIPPEUSIS, Equitation.

HIPPIĀTER, Hippiätros, Med'icus equa'rius. A farrier. A horse doctor. Used also for one who treats the diseases of other domestic animals; Veterina'rius, Mulomed'icus, Med'icus Veterina'rius, Zoiätrus.

HIPPIATRI'A, Hippiat'rica, Hippiat'ricē, Medici'na equa'ria, from 'ιππος, 'a horse,' and ιατρικη, 'medicine,' (F.) Hippiatrique. A science, whose object is the knowledge of the diseases of the horse. It is sometimes made to include other domestic animals. See Veterinary art.

HIPPIATRIQUE, Hippiatria.

HIPPIATRUS, Hippiater.

HIPPO, Euphorbia corollata—h. Indian, Gillenia trifoliata.

HIPPOCAMPE GRANDE, Cornu ammonis.

HIPPOCAMPUS MAJOR, Cornu ammonis.

Hippocam'pus Minor, Pes hippocam'pi minor, Pes hippopot'ami minor, Unguis, U. Avis, U. Halleri, O'crea, Collic'ulus ca'veæ posterio'ris ventriculo'rum latera'lium, Calcar a'vis, Un'ciform Em'inence, (F.) Ergot, Éperon. A medullary tubercle or projection, observed in the posterior cornu of the lateral ventricle of the brain.

HIPPOCENTAUREA CENTAURIUM, Chironia centaurium.

HIPPOCRAS, Claret.

HIPPOCRATES, CAP OF, Bonnet d'Hippocrate—h. Sleeve, Chausse.

HIPPOCRAT'IC, Hippocrat'icus. Relating to Hippocrates, or concerning his doctrine,—as Hippocratic doctrine, Hippocratic face, &c.

HIPPOC'RATIST. A partisan of the Hippocratic doctrine.

HIPPOGONYOLEPUS, Crusta genu equinæ.

HIPPOLAPATHUM, Rumex patientia.

HIPPOLITHUS, Bezoard of the horse.

HIPPOMARATHRUM, Peucedanum silaus.

HIPPOPATHOL'OGY, Hippopatholog''ia, from 'ιππος, 'a horse, παθος, 'a disease,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science of the diseases of the horse. Pathology of the horse.

HIPPOPHAGOUS, Equivorous.

HIPPOPUS, see Kyllosis.

HIPPOS, Equus.

HIPPOSELINUM, Smyrnium olusatrum.

HIPPOSTEOL'OGY, Hipposteolog''ia, from 'ιππος, 'a horse,' οστεον, 'a bone,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' Osteology of the horse.

HIPPOT'OMY, Hippotom'ia, from 'ιππος, 'a horse,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' Anatomy of the horse.

HIPPU'RIA, from 'ιππος, 'a horse,' and ουρον, 'urine,' because the urine contains hippuric acid, which is found in the urine of the horse. A pathological condition, in which there is an excess of hippuric acid in the urine.

HIPPURIC ACID, see Acid, hippuric.

HIPPU'RIS VULGA'RIS, from 'ιππος, 'a horse,' and ουρα, 'a tail.' The systematic name of the Horse's Tail, Mare's Tail, Equise'tum minus, Equise'tum, (F.) Prêle, Presle, Asprêle. It is an astringent, and frequently used, as tea, by the vulgar, in diarrhœa and hemorrhage. The same virtues are attributed to the Equise'tum arven'sē, fluviat'ilē, limo'sum, &c.

HIPPUS, Equus, Nicta'tio, from 'ιππος, 'a horse.' A disease of the eyes, in which, from birth, they perpetually twinkle, like those of a man on horseback. (?) Also, a tremulous condition of the iris, which occasions repeated alternations of contraction and dilatation of the pupil; Iridot'romus, Tremor I'ridis.

HIPS, Sax. heopa. The fruit of the dog-rose, Rosa Cani'na: chiefly used as a confection. See Confectio Rosæ Caninæ.

HIRCIS'MUS, Hircus, Hirquus, from hircus, 'a goat.' Stinking like a goat:—applied especially to the odour of the secretions of the axilla.

HIRCUS, Canthus (greater), Hircismus, Tragus—h. Alarum, Cinabra.

HIRQUITALITAS, from hircus, 'a goat,' Paropho'nia pu'berum. Goat's voice. See Egophony.

HIRQUUS, Hircus, Canthus (greater), Hircismus, Tragus.

HIRSU'TIES, Das'yma, Das'ytes, Tricho'sis, Hirsu'ties, Hair'iness. Growth of hairs on extraneous parts, or, superfluous growth on parts; as in cases of bearded women.—Good.

HIRU'DO, The Leech, Sanguisu'ga, Bdella. In medicine, the Hiru'do Medicina'lis, Bdella Medicina'lis, or Medicinal Leech, (F.) Sangsue, is employed. In the United States, H. dec'ora is used. The leech lives in fresh water, and feeds on the blood of animals, which it sucks, after having pierced the skin with its three sharp teeth. This habit has been taken advantage of, to produce local blood-letting. In applying the leech, the part must be wiped dry; and if there be difficulty in making it suck, a little milk or cream may be applied. When satiated, it will drop off, and by applying a little salt or vinegar to its head it will disgorge the blood. A good English leech will take about half an ounce of blood, including that which flows by fomenting the part subsequently. The American takes less.

Hirudo Artificialis, Antlia sanguisuga—h. Decora, see Hirudo—h. Medicinalis, Hirudo.

HIRUNDINARIA, Asclepias vincetoxicum, Lysimachia nummularia.

HIRUN'DO, Chel'idon, from hærendo, 'sticking;' because it sticks its nests against the houses. (?) The Swallow. The nests of the swallow were once employed as rubefacients, boiled in vinegar.

HISPANICUM VIRIDE, Cupri subacetas.

HISPIDITAS, Dystœchiasis, Phalangosis.

HISPIDULA, Antennaria dioicum.

HISSING RESPIRATION, see Râle sibilant.

HISTIOLOGY, Histology.

HISTODYAL'YSIS, from 'ιστος, 'organic texture,' and διαλυσις, 'dissolution.' A morbid dissolution of the tissues.

HISTOGEN'IA, Histog''eny, from 'ιστος, 'the organic texture,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' The formation and development of the organic textures.

HISTOLOGIA, Histology.

HISTOLOG''ICAL, Histolog''icus. Same etymon as the next. Relating to histology. Applied, also, at times, to the natural transformations that occur in the tissues in the embryo, in contradistinction to morphological, which applies to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo.

HISTOL'OGY, Histolog''ia, Histiol'ogy, Histiolog''ia, from 'ιστος, 'the organic texture,' and λογος, 'a description.' Anatomy (general). The term is, also, more particularly appropriated to the minute anatomy of the tissues. See Anatomy.

HISTON'OMY, Histonom'ia, from 'ιστος' 'the organic texture,' and νομος, 'law.' The aggregate of laws, which preside over the formation and arrangement of the organic tissues.

HIS'TORY, MED'ICAL, Histo'ria Medici'næ. A narration of the chief circumstances, and the persons connected with them, in the progress of medicine.

HIST'OS, 'ιστος, 'the organic texture.' Textu'ra seu Tela organ'ica.

HISTOT'OMY, Histotom'ia from 'ιστος, 'organic texture,' and τομη, 'incision.' Dissection of the tissues.

HIVE SYRUP, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

HIVES, Cynanche trachealis, Urticaria, Varicella. In Scotland, according to Dr. Jameson, Hives or Hyves means any eruption of the skin, proceeding from an internal cause; and, in Lothian, it is used to denote both the red and the yellow gum. In the United States, it is vaguely employed: most frequently, perhaps, for Urticaria.

Hives, Bold, Urticaria.

HOARSENESS, Raucedo.

HOB-NAIL LIVER, Cirrhosis of the liver. Liver, nutmeg.

HOCK, Poples.

HOG-LICE, Onisci aselli.

HOGWORT, Heptallon graveolens.

HOLANENCEPHA'LIA, from 'ολος, 'entire,' and anencephalia, 'absence of brain.' Entire absence of brain,—the same as Anencephalia.—G. St. Hilaire.

HOLARTHRITIS, Hamarthritis.

HOLCE, 'ολκη, 'a dram.'—Galen.

HOL'CIMOS, 'ολκιμος, from 'ολκη, 'a weight,' A tumour of the liver.

HOLCUS SORGHUM, Panicum Italicum.

HOLERA, Cholera.

HOLLANDS, Gin.

HOLLY, AMERICAN, Ilex opaca — h. Common, Ilex aquifolium—h. Dahoon, Ilex vomitoria — h. Ground, Pyrola maculata — h. Ground, Pyrola umbellata—h. Sea, Eryngium maritimum.

HOLLYHOCK, COMMON, Alcea rosea.

HOLMES WEED, Scrophularia nodosa.

HOLMICOS, Alveolus.

HOLMOS, Mortar.

HOLOCYRON, Teucrium chamæpitys.

HOLONARCO'SIS, from 'ολος, 'whole,' and ναρκωσις' 'stupor.' Narcosis of the whole body. Torpefactio universa'lis.

HOLOPHLYCTIDES, Phlyctæna.

HOLOSTEUM ALSINE, Alsine media.

HOLOSTEUS, Osteocolla.

HOLOTETANUS, see Tetanus.

HOLOTONIA, Holotonicus, Tetanus.

HOLOTON'ICUS, 'ολος, 'the whole,' and τεινω, 'I stretch.' Holoton'ia. A spasm of the whole body. A variety of tetanus.—Sauvages.

HOL'YWELL, MINERAL WATERS OF. Holywell is a town in Wales, and takes its name from the famous well of St. Winifred. It is a simple cold water, remarkable for its purity.

HOMAGRA, Omagra.

HOMEOPATHY, Homœopathy.

HOMERDA, Stercus humanum.

HOME'RIA COLLI'NA. A poisonous South African plant, Nat. Ord. Iridæ, the bulb of which acts as a violent acro-narcotic, producing fatal results very speedily.

HOMESICKNESS, Nostalgia.

HOMICI'DAL, Truculen'tus, Ferus, from homo, 'man,' and cædo, 'I kill.' Pertaining or relating to homicide or the killing of man.

Homicidal Insanity, Homici'dal Monoma'nia, (F.) Monomanie homicide. Insanity, with an irresistible impulse to destroy life.

HOMILIA, Coition.

HOM'INY. A word of Indian derivation. Maize or Indian corn hulled and coarsely broken. It is prepared for food by being mixed with water and boiled.

Hominy, Wheaten, see Groats.

HOMIOSIS, Homoiosis.

HOMME, Homo.

HOMO, (F.) Homme, Man.—the chief and most perfect of the mammalia; in Greek, ανθρωπος, Anthro'pos, from ανα, 'upwards, and τρεπω, 'I turn;' because man, alone, of all animals, possesses the natural power of standing erect. He is, also, the only animal whose incisor teeth, wedged in a projecting jaw, are absolutely vertical. Man is especially distinguished from other mammalia by the faculty, which he possesses, of classing his ideas; comparing them with each other; and connecting, representing, and transmitting them by signs and articulate sounds. He possesses, in the highest degree, all the attributes of intelligence,—memory, judgment, and imagination. He inhabits all countries,—the burning regions of the torrid zone, and the chilling atmosphere of the polar climes. In different situations, he presents, in his figure, colour, and stature, differences which have caused mankind to be divided by naturalists into races or varieties. The number of such races can only be approximated. Blumenbach admits five, the Caucasian, Ethiopian, Mongolian, Malay, and American. Every division must necessarily be arbitrary, and the individuals composing each variety are far from being alike.

Homo Alatus, see Alatus.

Homo Cauda'tus, 'Tailed man.' A fabulous, tailed variety of the human species, 'incola orbis antarctici,' admitted by Linnæus, although he is uncertain whether to rank them with men or apes!

Homo Fatuus, Idiot.

HOMOED'RUS, from ομου, 'together,' and εδρα, 'seat.' Having the same seat. Morbi homoëdri:—diseases that have the same seat.

HOMŒOMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HOMŒOPATH, Homœopathist.

HOMŒOPATH'IC, Homœopath'icus, Homœop'athes. Relating to homœopathy.

HOMŒOP'ATHIST, Ho'mœopath, Homœopath'icus, Homœopathis'ta, Homœopathis'tes. One who believes in homœopathy.

HOMŒOP'ATHY, Homœopathi'a, Ars homœopath'ica, Homeop'athy, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and παθος, 'affection.' A fanciful doctrine, which maintains, that disordered actions in the human body are to be cured by inducing other disordered actions of the same kind, and this to be accomplished by infinitesimally small doses, often of apparently inert agents; the decillionth part of a grain of charcoal, for example, is an authorized dose.

HOMŒOZ'YGY, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and ζυγος, 'I join together.' (F.) Soi-pour-soi. The law association of organs, by which like parts adhere to like parts.—Serres.

HOMOETHNIA, Sympathy.

HOMOGENESIS, see Generation.

HOMOIOPATHIA, Sympathy.

HOMOIO'SIS, Homio'sis, from ὁμοιοω, 'I resemble,' 'I assimilate.' An elaboration of the nutritious juice, by which it becomes proper for assimilation.

HOMOLINON, see Apolinosis.

HOM'OLOGUE, Homol'ogus, same etymon as homology. A term applied to the same organ in different animals under every variety of form and function.

HOMOL'OGY, from ὁμοιος, 'like,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of similar parts. Thus, the two sides of the body are said to be 'homologous.' Homol'ogous, homomorph'ous, or homœomorph'ous tissues, are those that resemble others; in opposition to heterol'ogous, het'eroclite, or heteromorph'ous, which are new formations. Homology seems now to be accepted as the designation of the doctrine or study, the subject of which is the relations of the parts of animal bodies.—Owen.

HOMOMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HOMONOPAGIA, Cephalalgia.

HOMOPH'AGUS, from ὡμος, 'raw,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' One who eats raw flesh.

HOMOPLAS'TY, Homoëpla'sia, from ὁμοιος, 'like,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The formation of homologous tissues.

HOMOPLATA, Scapula.

HOMOT'ONOS, Æqua'lis, from ὁμος, 'equal,' and τονος, 'tone.' That which has the same tone. A continued fever, whose symptoms have an equal intensity during the whole course of the disease, has been so called. See Acmasticos, and Synocha.

HONESTY, Lunaria rediviva.

HONEWORT, FIELD, Sison amomum.

HONEY, Mel—h. Balsam of, Hill's, see Mel—h. Bloom, Apocynum androsæmifolium — h. of Borax, Mel boracis—h. Clarified, Mel despumatum — h. Prepared, Mel præparatum — h. of Roses, Mel rosæ—h. of Squill, compound, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

HONEYCOMB BAG, Reticulum.

HONEYSUCKLE, BUSH, Diervilla trifida.

HONEY SUGAR, Glucose.

HONGLANE, Coptis teeta.

HONOR CAPITIS, see Capillus.

HONORARIUM, Sostrum.

HONTEUX, Pudic.

HOODWORT, Scutellaria lateriflora.

HOOK, Sax. hoce, hooc, Dutch, hoeck, Uncus, Unc''inus, Anc'yra, (F.) Érigne, Airigne ou Érine. An instrument, consisting of a steel wire, flattened at the middle, and having the extremities crooked and pointed. Some hooks are furnished with a handle at one extremity—the other having one or two hooks;—constituting the single or double hook. The hook is used by anatomists and surgeons to lay hold of, and raise up, certain parts, the dissection of which is delicate, or which would slip from the fingers.

The Tenaculum is a variety of the hook.

HOOK, BLUNT, Ich'thya, Ich'thyē, Onyx, Unguis ferr'eus. An instrument which is passed over the flexures of the joints to assist in bringing down the fœtus in parturition.

HOOP TREE, Melia azedarach.

HOOPER'S PILLS, Pilulæ Aloes et Myrrhæ.

HOOPING-COUGH, Pertussis — h. Roche's Embrocation for, see Roche.

HÔPITAL, Hospital.

HOPLOCHIRIS'MA, from ὁπλον, 'a weapon,' and χριμα, 'salve.' Unguen'tum arma'rium, Arm'atory Unguent. A salve which was supposed to cure wounds by sympathy,—the instrument with which the wound was inflicted being anointed with it.

HOPLOMOCH'LION, ὁπλομοχλιον, from ὁπλον, 'a weapon,' and μοχλος, 'a lever.' The name of an iron machine or apparatus, which embraced the whole body like armour. A figure of it is given by Fabricius ab Aquapendente.

HOP PILLOW, see Humulus lupulus — h. Plant, Humulus lupulus.

HOQUET, Singultus.

HORA, Hebe.

HORÆA, Menses.

HORÆOTES, Maturity.

HORDEI MALTUM, Malt.

HORDE'OLUM, diminutive of Hordeum, 'barley.' Orde'olum, Pos'thia, Sclerophthal'mia, Crithē, Crithid'ion, Crythē, Stye, Styan, (F.) Orgelet, Orgeolet. A small, inflammatory tumour, of the nature of a boil, which exhibits itself near the free edge of the eyelids, particularly near the inner angle of the eye.

HOR'DEUM, Or'deum, Crithē. The seeds of Hordeum vulga're, or Scotch Barley, are ranked amongst the Cerealia. (F.) Orge. They afford a mucilaginous decoction, which is employed as a diluent and antiphlogistic. The seeds of the Hordeum dis'tichon, H. æsti'vum, Zeoc'riton dis'tichum, and H. hexas'tichon possess similar properties. Barley is freed from its shells in mills, forming the Hor'deum munda'tum seu decortica'tum seu excortica'tum; and, at times, is rubbed into small, round grains, somewhat like pearls, when it is called Hordeum perla'tum, Pearl Barley, (F.) Orge perlé, and forms the Hordeum denutatum seu perlatum, the Hordei sem'ina tu'nicis nuda'ta, of the pharmacopœias, — Hordeum (Ph. U. S.)

HORDEUM CAUSTICUM, Veratrum sabadilla — h. Decorticatum, see Hordeum — h. Denudatum, see Hordeum — h. Excorticatum, see Hordeum — h. Galacticum, Oryza — h. Mundatum, see Hordeum — h. Perlatum, see Hordeum.

HOREHOUND, Marrubium — h. Black, Ballota fœtida — h. Germander-leaved, Eupatorium teucrifolium — h. Stinking, Ballota fœtida — h. Water, Lycopus sinuatus, Lycopus Virginicus — h. Wild, Eupatorium teucrifolium.

HORME, Instinct.

HORMINUM, Salvia horminum — h. Coloratum, Salvia horminum — h. Sativum, Salvia horminum.

HORMON, Enormon.

HORN, Cornu.

HORNSEED, Ergot.

HORNY EXCRES'CENCES, Lepido'sis, Ichthyi'asis cornig''era, Cor'nua cuta'nea, (F.) Cornes de la Peau. Certain excrescences, which occasionally form on some part of the skin, and resemble, in shape, the horns of an animal.

HORNY SUBSTANCE, see Tooth.

HORRENTIA, Horripilation.

HOR'RIDA CUTIS, Goose-skin, Cutis anseri'na, Dermatospasmus. A state of the skin accompanying the rigor of an intermittent.

HORRIPILA'TION, Horripila'tio, Horror, Horren'tia, Phricē, Phricas'mus, Phrici'asis, Phri'cia, from horrere, 'to bristle up,' and pilus, 'hair.' (F.) Horripilation, Frissonnement. General chilliness, preceding fever, and accompanied with bristling of the hairs over the body.

HORROR, Horripilation — h. Ciborum, Disgust for food.

HORSE BALM, Collinsonia Canadensis.

HORSE CANE, Ambrosia trifida.

HORSE CHESTNUT, Æsculus hippocastanum.

HORSE CRUST, Crusta genu equinæ.

HORSEFLY WEED, Sophora tinctoria.

HORSEMINT, Ambrosia trifida, Monarda coccinea and M. punctata — h. Sweet, Cunila mariana.

HORSE RADISH, Cochlearia armoracia.

HORSE'S TAIL, Hippuris vulgaris.

HORSEWEED, Ambrosia trifida, Collinsonia Canadensis.

HORTULUS CUPIDINIS, Vulva.

HORTUS, Vulva — h. Siccus, Herbarium.

HOS'PITAL, primarily from hospes, 'a guest.' Nosocomi'um, Adynatocomi'um, Adynatodochi'um, Xenodoce'um, Xenodoche'um, Infirmi'ary, Infirma'rium, Infirmato'rium, Nosodochi'um, Valetudina'rium, (F.) Hôpital. An establishment for the reception of the sick, in which they are maintained and treated medically. Hospitals were first instituted about the end of the 4th century; a period at which the word νοσοκομειον was employed, for the first time, by St. Jerome. They may be general, receiving all cases; or special, admitting only the subjects of certain diseases.

Hos'PITAL GANGRENE, Phagedæ'na gangræno'sa, Putrid or Malignant Ulcer, Gangræ'na Nosocomio'rum seu Nosocomia'lis, Sphac''clus nosocomia'lis, Hos'pital Sore, Gangræ'na contagio'sa, Putre'do, (F.) Pourriture ou Gangrène d'hôpital. Gangrene, occurring in wounds or ulcers, in hospitals the air of which has been vitiated by the accumulation of patients, or some other circumstance. Hospital gangrene—many different varieties of which are met with, and always accompanied or preceded by fever — commonly commences with suppression of the suppuration of the wound, which becomes covered with a grayish and tenacious sanies. The gangrene then manifests itself. It extends from the centre of the ulcerated surface towards the edges; these become swollen, painful, and everted; and the patient dies with all the signs of typhus. The treatment must be varied according to circumstances. Sometimes, it requires the use of stimulating, acid, caustic, and antiseptic applications; with, occasionally, the actual cautery, aided by the exhibition of tonics, internally: — at others, the antiphlogistic regimen and emollient applications may be necessary.

HOSPITAL, LEPER, Ladrerie.

HOSTIARIUS, Pylorus.

HOT SPRINGS, see Virginia, mineral waters of.

HOUBLON, Humulus lupulus.

HOUGH, Poples.

HOUNDS' TONGUE, Cynoglossum.

HOUPPE NERVEUSE, see Papilla — h. du Menton, Depressor labii inferioris, Levator labii inferioris.

HOURGLASS CONTRACTION OF THE UTERUS, see Chaton.

HOUSELEEK, Sempervivum tectorum — h. Small, Sedum.

HOUSEMAID'S KNEE, see Knee, housemaid's.

HOUSE-PUPIL, see House-Surgeon.

HOUSE-SURGEON, Resident Surgeon. Usually a senior house-pupil or graduate, who attends in an hospital, to every accident and disease, in the absence of the attending physician or surgeon. It answers, in the British hospitals, to the Élève interne or Interne of the French. The Élève externe or Externe is a less advanced pupil; from whom Internes are chosen. In ordinary schools, Élève externe means a day-scholar: whilst Élève interne means a boarder.

HOUX, Ilex aquifolium — h. Petit, Ruscus — h. Apalachine, Ilex vomitoria.

HUACACACHU, Datura sanguinea.

HUACO, Guaco.

HUANU, Guano.

HUCKLEBERRIES, see Gaylussacia, and Vaccinium.

HUCKLEBONE, Ischion.

HUDSON'S PRESERVATIVE FOR THE TEETH AND GUMS, see Tinctura Myrrhæ.

HUILE, Oil — h. d'Absinthe, Artemisia absinthium (oil of) — h. d'Acajou, see Anacardium occidentale.

HUILE ACOUSTIQUE (F.), Oleum acus'ticum, Acoustic oil. An oil for deafness, prepared of olive oil, ℥ij; garlic, ox-gall, and bay leaves, each ℥j; boiled for a quarter of an hour, and strained.

HUILE D'AMANDES, Oleum amygdalarum — h. d'Aneth, see Anethum graveolens — h. Animale, Oleum animale — h. Animale de Dippel, Oleum animale Dippelii — h. Animalisée par infusion, Oleum animalizatum per infusionem — h. d'Anis, see Pimpinella anisum — h. Verte, Balsam, green, of Metz—h. de Vin douce, Oleum æthereum.

HUILES ANIMALES, Olea animalia — h Empyreumatiques, Olea empyreumatica — h. Essentielles, Olea volatilia — h. Fixes ou Grasses Olea fixa — h. Fugaces, Olea fugacia — h. Médicinales, Olea medicinalia — h. Volatiles, Olea volatilia.

HUIT DE CHIFFRE. Figure of 8. A bandage in which the turns are crossed in the form of the figure 8. Such is the bandage used after bleeding from the arm.

HUITO, Genipa oblongifolia.

HUÎTRE, Ostrea.

HUM, VENOUS, Bruit de diable.

HUMBLE, Rectus inferior oculi.

HUMECTAN'TIA. A name formerly given to drinks, which appeared to possess the property of augmenting the fluidity of the blood.

HU'MERAL, Humera'lis. That which belongs to, or is connected with, the arm or humerus.

HU'MERAL AR'TERY, Arte'ria humera'lis, see Brachial artery.

HUMÉRO-CUBITAL, Brachialis anterior — h. Sus-métacarpien, see Radialis — h. Sus-radial, Supinator radii longus.

HU'MERUS, Sca'pula, Omos, Armus, (F.) Épaule. The most elevated part of the arm. The bones, which concur in forming it, are: — the scapula, head of the humerus, and the clavicle, united together by strong ligaments, and covered by numerous muscles.

HU'MERUS, Os hu'meri, Os bra'chii, Os adjuto'rium, Os brachia'lē, Bra'chium, Lacer'tus, is the cylindrical, irregular bone of the arm; the upper extremity of which has a hemispherical head connected with the scapula; and two tuberosities or tubercles, a greater and lesser, for the attachment of muscles, between which is the Bicip'ital groove or Fossa. At the inferior extremity may be remarked — the inner condyle, the outer condyle; the small head, which is articulated with the radius; the trochlea articulated with the ulna, &c. The humerus is developed by seven points of ossification: — one for the body; one for the head; one for the greater tuberosity; one for the trochlea; one for the epitrochlea; one for the epicondyle; and another for the lesser head.

HUMERUS SUMMUS, Acromion.

HUMEUR AQUEUSE, Aqueous humour — h. Crystalline, Crystalline — h. Hyaloïde, Corpus vitreum.

HUMEURS FROIDES, Scrofula.

HUMIDE RADICALE, Humidum radicale.

HUMIDUM NATIVUM, H. radicale—h. Nativum Articulorum, Synovia — h. Primigenium, H. radicale.

HU'MIDUM RADICA'LĒ, Hu'midum primige'nium seu Nati'vum seu Semina'lē, Radical Moisture, (F.) Humide radicale. Names formerly given to the liquid which was conceived to give flexibility and proper consistence to the different organic textures.

HUMIDUM SEMINALE, H. radicale.

HUMILIS, Rectus inferior oculi.

HUMILUS, Humulus lupulus.

HUMOR, Humour — h. Albugineous, Aqueous humour—h. Articularis, Synovia—h. Ceruminous, Cerumen — h. Doridis, Water, sea—h. Genitalis, Sperm—h. Glacialis, Crystalline, Corpus vitreum — h. Hyalinus seu Hyaloides, Corpus vitreum — h. Lacteus, Milk—h. Lachrymalis, Tear—h. Melancholicus, see Mercurialis — h. Mercurialis, see Mercurialis—h. Morgagnianus, Morgagni, humor of — h. Ovatus, Aqueous humour — h. Oviformis, Aqueous humour—h. Pericardii, see Pericardium —h. Purulentus, Pus—h. Seminalis, Sperm—h. Venereus, Sperm — h. Vitreus, Corpus vitreum.

HU'MORAL, Humora'lis, from humere, 'to moisten.' Proceeding from, or connected with, the humours.

HU'MORISM, Hu'moral Pathology, Pathology'ia humera'lis. A medical theory, founded exclusively on the parts which the humours were considered to play in the production of disease. Although traces of this system may be found in the most remote antiquity, the creation, or, at all events, the arrangement of it may be attributed to Galen, who enveloped it in metaphysical subtleties relating to the union between the elements and the four cardinal humours.

HU'MORISTS. The Galenical physicians, who attributed all diseases to the depraved state of the humours, or to vicious juices collected in the body.

HUMOUR, Humor, Hygra'sia, Hygre'don, Hygrum. Every fluid substance of an organized body; — as the blood, chyle, lymph, &c. The Humours, χυμοι, Chymi, Humo'res, differ considerably as to number and quality in the different species of organized beings; and even in the same species, according to the state of health or disease. The ancients reduced them to four; which they called car'dinal humours:—the blood, phlegm, yellow bile, and atrabilis or black bile. A modern classification of the humours is given under Fluid.

HUMP. Perhaps from umbo, 'the boss of a buckler.' Hunch, Gibber, Gibbus, Gibba, Tuber, (F.) Bosse. A prominence, formed by a deviation of the bones of the trunk. Commonly, it is formed by the spine or sternum, and is seated at the posterior or anterior part of the trunk. It may, also, be produced by deviation of the ribs or pelvis. The spine may be curved in three principal directions. 1. Backwards, the most common case; this the ancients called κυφωσις, Cypho'sis, Gibbo'sitas. 2. Forwards, λορδωσις, Lordo'sis, Recurva'tio; and, 3. Laterally, σκολιωσις, Scolio'sis, Obstipa'tio. Most curvatures occur at a very early age, and are caused by scrofula, rickets, &c.; and, not unfrequently, they are accompanied by caries of the vertebræ. See Vertebral disease.

HU'MULUS LU'PULUS, Lu'pulus, L. scandens seu commu'nis seu salicta'rius, Humulus, Convol'vulus peren'nis, the Hop-plant. Nat. Ord. Urticeæ. (F.) Houblon, Vigne du nord. Its cones or strobiles, Hu'muli strob'ili (Ph. L.), Humulus (Ph. U. S.), have a fragrant odour; and a bitter, aromatic taste, depending on a peculiar principle, named Lu'pulin, extractive and essential oil, which may be extracted, equally, by water and spirit, from the dried strobiles. The hop is employed as a tonic and hypnotic, and enters into the composition of ale and beer.

The Hop pillow, Pulvi'nar Hu'muli, has long been used for producing sleep.

HUNCH, Hump.

HUNGARICA FEBRIS, Fever, Hungary.

HUNGER, Anglo-Saxon, hunger, Fames, Limos, Peinē, Peina, Esu'ries, Jeju'nium, Jeju'nitas, Esurit''io, Esuri'go, (F.) Faim. The necessity for taking food. Hunger is an internal sensation, which some authors have attributed to the friction between the sides of the stomach in its empty state; others, to the compression of the nerves, when the organ is contracted; others, to the action of the gastric juice, &c. It is dictated by the wants of the system: — farther we know not. See Appetite.

HUNGER-CURE, Limotherapeia.

HUNGRY, Famel'icus, Li'micus, Limo'des; same etymon. Affected with hunger.

HURA BRASILIEN'SIS, Assacou, Assacù, Ussacù. A Brazilian tree, of the Family Euphorbiaceæ, which, in the form of the extract of the bark, is esteemed a specific in leprosy. It is, also, given in elephantiasis, and as an anthelmintic.

HYACINTH, WILD, Scilla esculenta.

HYACINTHUS MUSCARI, Bulbus vomitorius.

HYÆNAN'CHĒ GLOBO'SA. An arborescent shrub of South Africa, Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ, the fruit of which, pounded, is used to destroy hyænas and other beasts of prey, and seems to contain strychnia.

HYALEUS, Hyaline.

HY'ALINE, Hyali'nus, Hyale'us, Vit'reus, Vit'reous. Glassy. Resembling glass.

HYALINE SUBSTANCE, Cytoblastema.

HYALI'TIS, Inflamma'tio tu'nicæ hyaloïdeæ, from hyaloid, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the hyaloid membrane of the eye.

HY'ALOID, Hyalo'des, Hyaloï'des, from 'υαλος, 'glass,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Vitriform; resembling glass.

HYALOID CANAL, see Hyaloid membrane.

HYALOID FOSSA, Fossa Hyaloïdea, is a cup-like excavation in the vitreous humour, in which the crystalline is imbedded.

HY'ALOID MEMBRANE, Tu'nica Hyaloïdea, Membra'na Arachnoï'dea, T. vit'rea, is the extremely delicate membrane, which forms the exterior covering of the vitreous humour, and transmits within it prolongations, which divide it into cells. Fallopius discovered this membrane, and gave it the name Hyaloid. On a level with the entrance of the optic nerve into the eye, the hyaloid membrane has been described as forming, by reflection, a cylindrical canal, which pierces the vitreous humour from behind to before, as far as the posterior part of the crystalline. See Canal, hyaloid

HYALONIXIS, see Cataract.

HYALONYXIS, see Cataract.

HYALOS, Vitrum.

HYANCHE, Cynanche tonsillaris.

HYBOMA, Gibbositas.

HYBRID, (F.) Hybride, from the Greek, 'ὑβρις, 'ὑβριδος, 'mongrel.' A being born of two different species, — as the mule. The term is applied to plants as well as to animals. The result is termed Hybridity. Hybrid is often, also, used to designate words which are formed from two different languages, — as uter-itis, for inflammation of the uterus, in place of metritis.

HYBRIDITY, see Hybrid.

HYDARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDARTHRUS, Hydrarthrus.

HY'DATID, Hy'datis, Bulla, Aqu'ula, Hydro'a, Hydrocys'tis, Hygrocys'tis, Tænia hydatig''ena, Echinococ'cus huma'nus, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water.' This name was long given to every encysted tumour which contained an aqueous and transparent fluid. Many pathologists, subsequently, applied it to vesicles, softer than the tissue of membranes, more or less transparent, which are developed within organs, but without adhering to their tissue. It is by no means clear that these formations are really entozoa. They have been found in various parts of the body; sometimes in the uterus, occasioning signs nearly similar to those of pregnancy, but being sooner or later expelled. The expulsion is generally attended with more or less hemorrhage. See Acephalocystis.

Hydatis, Aqu'ula, Phlyctæ'nula, Verru'ca Palpebra'rum, Milium, also, meant a small, transparent tumour of the eyelids.—Galen, C. Hoffmann.

HYDATIDES CERVICIS UTERI, Nabothi glandulæ.

HYDATIDOCE'LĒ, Hydatoce'lē, from 'ὑδατις, 'hydatid,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Oscheocele containing hydatids; the Oscheoce'lē hydatido'sa, Hydatidoscheoce'lē of Sauvages.

HYDATIDOÏDES, Hydatoid.

HYDATIDO'MA, from 'ὑδατις, 'hydatid.' A tumour caused by hydatids.

HYDATIDOSCHEOCELE, Hydatidocele.

HYDATINUS, Hydatoid.

HYDATIS FINNA, Cysticercus cellulosæ.

HYDATIS'MUS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water.' The noise caused by the fluctuation of pus contained in an abscess.—Aurelian, Foësius.

HYDATOCELE Hydatidocele, Hydrocele.

HYDATOCH'OLOS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and χολη, 'bile.' Aquoso-bilious. An epithet given to evacuated matters when mixed with water and bile.—Hippocrates, Foësius.

HYDATODES, Aqueous.

HY'DATOID, Hydatoï'des, A'queous, Aquo'sus, Hydato'des, Hydat'inus, Hydatido'des, Hydatidoï'des, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and εἰδος, 'resemblance.' Watery. Resembling water. This name has been given to the membrane of the aqueous humour; and, also, to the aqueous humour itself. Vinum hydato'des; wine and water.

HYDATONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDATOPO'SIA, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ποσις, 'drinking. Water-drinking;—hence

HYDATOP'OTES. A water-drinker.

HYDERICUS, Hydropic.

HYDERODES, Hydropic.

HYDERONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDEROS, Anasarca, Hydrops.

HYDOR, 'ὑδωρ, and Hydas, 'ὑδας, 'genitive,' 'ὑδατος, 'water.' Hence:

HYDRACHNIS, see Varicella.

HYDRADEN, Conglobate gland.

HYDRADENI'TIS, Inflamma'tio glandula'rum lymphatica'rum, from Hydraden, 'a lymphatic gland,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a lymphatic gland.

HYDRÆ'DUS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and αἰδοια, 'genital organs.' Œdema of the female organs.

HYDRÆMIA, Hydroæmia.

HYDRAGOGA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGIA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGICA, Hydragogues.

HY'DRAGOGUES, Hydrago'ga, Hydrago'gia, Hydrago'gica, Hydrop'ica, Hydrot'ica, Aquidu'ca, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and αγω, 'I expel.' Medicines believed to be capable of expelling serum effused into any part of the body. These are generally cathartics or diuretics.

HYDRAGOGUM BOYLEI, Argenti nitras.

HYDRALLANTE, False Waters.

HYDRALMÆ, Waters, mineral (saline).

HYDRAM'NIOS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and 'amnios.' An excessive quantity of the liquor amnii.

HYDRAN'GEA ARBORES'CENS, Wild Hydran'gea, Bissum. An indigenous plant, which flowers in July. The leaves are said to be tonic, sialagogue, cathartic, and diuretic.

HYDRANGEITIS, Angeioleucitis.

HYDRANGIA, Lymphatic vessels.

HYDRANGIOGRAPHIA, Angeiohydrography.

HYDRANGIOTOMIA, Angeiohydrotomy.

HYDRARGYRANATRIP'SIS, Hydrargyrentrip'sis, from 'ὑδραργυρος, 'quicksilver,' and ανατριβις, 'rubbing in.' The rubbing in of a preparation of quicksilver:—Hydrargyrotrip'sis.

HYDRARGYRENTRIPSIS, Hydrargyranatripsis.

(Ferri Ferro-cyanuret. ℥iv; Hydrarg. oxid. rubr. ℥iij, vel q. s.; Aquæ destillat. Oiij. Put the ferro-cyanuret and three ounces of the oxide of mercury, previously powdered and thoroughly mixed together, into a glass vessel, and pour on two pints of the distilled water. Boil the mixture, stirring constantly; and if, at the end of half an hour, the blue color remains, add small portions of the oxide of mercury, continuing the ebullition until the mixture becomes of a yellowish colour; then filter through paper. Wash the residue in a pint of the distilled water, and filter. Mix the solution and evaporate till a pellicle appears, and set the liquor aside, that crystals may form. To purify the crystals, subject it to resolution, evaporation, and crystallization. — Ph. U. S.) This preparation has been strongly recommended as a powerful antisyphilitic, and is admitted into the Parisian codex. Twelve to twenty-four grains may be dissolved in a quart of distilled water, and three or four spoonfuls of the solution be taken daily, in a glass of any appropriate liquid.

Hydrargyri Nitras, Nitras Hydrar'gyri in crystallos concre'tus, Nitrate of Mercury. It is employed in syphilis; and, externally, in fungous, obstinate ulcers.

It is used in the formation of the Soluble Mercury of Hahnemann.

An acid nitrate of mercury, Liquor Hydrar'gyri supernitra'tis, Solution of supernitrate of mercury, Solution of supernitrate of deutoxide of mercury, made by dissolving four parts of mercury in eight of nitric acid, and evaporating the solution to nine parts, has been used as a caustic in malignant ulcerations and cancerous affections.

Ward's White Drops,—a once celebrated anti-scorbutic nostrum,—were prepared by dissolving mercury in nitric acid, and adding a solution of carbonate of ammonia; or, frequently, they consisted of a solution of sublimate with carbonate of ammonia.

This oxide is made in various ways. It may be formed by boiling submuriate of mercury in lime water. The dose of this Pulvis Hydrargyri cinereus is from two to ten grains. There are four other preparations of it in estimation, viz:—Plenck's solution, made by rubbing mercury with mucilage. 2. By rubbing equal parts of sugar and mercury together. 3. A compound of honey or liquorice and purified mercury. 4. The blue pill and ointment. All these possess the usual properties of mercury.

The Hydrargyri Oxidum Nigrum of the Pb. U. S. is made as follows:—Hydrarg. Chlorid. mit., Potassæ, āā ℥iv, Aquæ Oj. Dissolve the potassa in the water, allow the dregs to subside, and pour off the clear solution. To this add the chloride, and stir constantly till the black oxide is formed. Pour off the supernatant liquor, wash the black oxide with distilled water, and dry with a gentle heat.

The Mercurius solu'bilis of Hahnemann is formed from a black oxide of mercury. It is the Mercurius solu'bilis Hahneman'ni seu oxydum hydrargyri nigri median'te ammo'niâ ex protonitra'tē hydrar'gyri præcipita'tum. It is used in the same cases as the Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum.

It is used as an antisyphilitic stimulant in venereal complaints, old cutaneous affections, &c. Gr. iij to Oj of water is a good gargle in venereal sore-throats, or an injection in gonorrhœa. Externally, it is applied in cases of tetter, and to destroy fungus, or stimulate old ulcers. Dose, gr. 1-16 to gr. 1-8, in pill, once in twenty-four hours. White of egg is the best antidote to it, when taken in an overdose.

Boil two pounds of the mercury with the sulphuric acid, until the sulphate of mercury is left dry. Rub this, when cold, with the remainder of the mercury, in an earthenware mortar, until they are thoroughly mixed. Then add the chloride of sodium, and rub it with the other ingredients till all the globules disappear: afterwards sublime. Reduce the sublimed matter to a very fine powder, and wash it frequently with boiling distilled water, till the washings afford no precipitate upon the addition of liquid ammonia; then dry it. Properties. Antisyphilitic and sialagogue: in large doses, purgative. Dose:—one or two grains given at night gradually excite ptyalism. Gr. v to xx, purge. Children bear larger doses than adults.

The BLACK WASH, Lo'tio Hydrar'gyri nigra, is formed of calomel, ℥ij; Lime-water, Oj. Used for syphilitic sores.

Mix the mercury with the sulphur melted over the fire; and as soon as the mass begins to swell remove the vessel from the fire, and cover it with considerable force to prevent combustion. Rub the mass into powder and sublime. (Ph. U. S.)

It is an antisyphilitic, but is chiefly used in fumigation against venereal ulcers of the nose, mouth, and throat;—ʒss being thrown on a red-hot iron. This preparation is the basis of a nostrum, called Boerhaave's Red Pill.

HYDRARGYRI SUPERMURIAS, H. oxymurias.

HYDRARGYRI TARTRAS, H. Proto-tartras, Tartrate of mercury. Antisyphilitic. Dose, one or two grains twice a day.

HYDRARGYRI ET ARSENICI IODIDUM, Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of.

HYDRAR'GYRI ET QUI'NIÆ PROTO-CHLO'RIDUM, Protochloride of Mercury and Quinia. A combination of mild chloride of mercury and quinia, administered in obstinate cutaneous diseases.

HYDRARGYRIA, Eczema mercuriale.

HYDRARGYRI'ASIS, Hydrargyro'sis, Mercurialis'mus, from 'ὑδραργυρος, 'mercury.' A disease induced by the use of mercury; Morbus Mercuria'lis. Poisoning by mercury. Eczema mercuriale.

S. g., when liquid, 13.568 (Cavendish); easily oxydized. Metallic quicksilver does not act on the body, even when taken into the stomach. When oxydized and combined with acids, it acts powerfully. It has been exhibited in cases of constriction of the bowels and in intussusception, from a notion that it must certainly pass through the bowels by its gravity. The water, in which mercury has been boiled, has been recommended as a vermifuge; but it probably enjoys no such property, as chemical tests do not exhibit the presence of the metal. When the crude metal is distilled in an iron retort, it forms the Hydrar'gyrum purifica'tum.

Rub them together till the globules disappear. Ph. U. S.) A protoxide of mercury, formed by trituration with carbonate of lime. It is somewhat uncertain: and consequently not much employed as a mercurial. It possesses the properties of the black oxide of mercury, and may be advantageously exhibited in cases of diarrhœa in children, dependent upon acidity and vitiated secretions. Dose, gr. v to ʒss, twice a day, in any viscid substance.

(F.) Tumeur blanche, T. lymphatique des articulations. The French surgeons apply the term Hydrarthrus to dropsy of the articulations. White swelling is an extremely formidable disease. It may attack any one of the joints; but is most commonly met with in the knee, the haunch, the foot, the elbow, and generally occurs in scrofulous children. It consists, at times, in tumefaction, and softening of the soft parts and ligaments, which surround the joints; at others, in swelling and caries of the articular extremities of bones; or both these states may exist at the same time. The treatment consists in the employment of counter-irritants; the use of iodine internally and externally, &c. Also, Synovia.

HYDRAS'PIS EXPAN'SA, Great freshwater Tortoise. On the sandy banks of rivers in Peru this animal buries its eggs, from which the Indians extract oil. Its flesh supplies well-flavoured food. —Tschudi.

HYDRENCEPHALIUM, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDRENCEPHALOCE'LĒ, Hydrocephalocel'lē, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εγκεφαλος, 'the encephalon,' and κηλη, 'rupture, protrusion.' A monstrosity in which there is a fissure of the cranium, the integument of the head being present, and forming a hernial sac in which the brain lies outside the skull—the sac containing a large quantity of serous fluid. Also, Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDRENCEPHALON, see Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDRO'A, Hidro'a, Aqu'ula, Boa, Planta noctis, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water.' An affection, which consists in an accumulation of water or serous fluid under the epidermis. Some have used hydro'a synonymously with sudamina; others with pemphigus. In the first case, it has generally, however, been written hidro'a, from 'ἱδρως, 'sweat,' and in the latter hydro'a. See Hydatid.

HYDROÆ'MIA, Hydræ'mia; from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Anæmia. The state of the blood in which the watery constituents are in excess.

HYDROAËROPLEURIE, Hydropneumothorax.

HYDROÄ'RION, Hydroöph'oron, Hydroä'rium, Hydroöva'rium, Hy'drops ova'rii, Asci'tes ovarii, A. sacca'tus, (F.) Hydropisie de l'ovaire, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ωαριον, 'ovarium.' Dropsy of the ovarium.

HYDROATA, Sudamina.

HYDROBLEPH'ARON, Hy'drops Pal'pebræ, Blepharœde'ma aquo'sum, Œde'ma palpebra'rum. An œdema or watery swelling of the eyelids; from 'ὑδωρ, 'water," and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid.'

HYDROCARDIA, Hydropericardium, see Pericardium.

HYDROCATARRHOPHE'SIS, Hydrocatarrhoph'ia, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and καταρροφειν, 'to sip up.' Absorption of water from without.

HYDROCE'LĒ, Hydrops Scroti, H. testiculo'rum, Hydroscheoce'lē, Hydatoce'le, Hydros'cheum, Hydror'chis, Hydroschéonie, (Alibert,) from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' A term generally applied to a collection of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the scrotum or in some of the coverings, either of the testicle or spermatic cord. To the first of these varieties the names — External Hydrocele, H. œdemato'des, (F.) H. par infiltration have been given; and to the second, those of Hydroce'lē inter'na, H. tu'nicæ vaginalis tes'tis, Hydrel'ytron, (F.) H. par épanchement. When the collection occurs in the envelope of the testicle, it is called H. of the tunica vaginalis; and the epithet congenital is added, when the interior of the membrane, in which it is situate, still communicates freely with the cavity of the abdomen. When it exists in the spermatic cord, it is called encysted, or diffused Hydrocele of the spermatic cord, as the case may be. The tumour of the distended scrotum is oblong: greater below than above; indolent and semi-transparent. When it becomes inconveniently large, the fluid may be evacuated by puncturing with a trocar, but, as it collects again, this operation can only be considered palliative. The radical cure consists, usually, in injecting, through the canula of the trocar, which has been left in, after puncturing, some irritating liquid, as wine. This is kept in the tunica vaginalis for a few minutes, and then withdrawn. The coat inflames; adhesion takes place, and the cavity is obliterated.

HYDROCELE OF THE NECK. A tumour, filled with a watery fluid, occupying some portion of the neck.

HYDROCELE PERITONÆI, Ascites — h. Spinalis, Hydrorachis.

HYDROCENO'SIS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κενωσις, 'evacuation.' The evacuation of water morbidly accumulated in the body.

HYDROCEPHALE, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCÉPHALE AIGUË, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALITIS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALIUM, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCEPHALOCELE, Hydrencephalocele.

HYDROCÉPHALOËCTASIE, Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDROCEPH'ALUS, Hydroceph'alum, Hydrocra'nia, Hydrocra'nium, Hydrocephal'ium, Hydroceph'alē, Hydrops Cap'itis, H. Cer'ebri, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' Water in the head, Dropsy of the head, Dropsy of the brain. A collection of water within the head. It may be internal or external.

HYDROCEPHALUS ACUTUS, H. internus — h. Acutus senum, Apoplexy, serous—h. Adnatus, see H. chronicus—h. Congenitus, see H. chronicus—h. Externus, H. chronicus — h. Meningeus, H. internus.

HYDROCEPHALUS CHRON'ICUS, Hydrencephaloce'lē, Hydrops Cap'itis, Hydrocephalus externus, (F.) Hydrocéphale, Hydrocéphaloëctasie, of some, may exist at birth. Hydrenceph'alon, Hydrocephalus congen'itus seu adna'tus commonly commences at an early period of existence, and the accumulation of fluid gradually produces distension of the brain, and of the skull, with separation of the sutures. It commonly proves fatal before puberty.

HYDROCEPHALUS EXTERNUS, Œde'ma cap'itis, Cephalœde'ma of some, is a mere infiltration into the subcutaneous cellular tissue of the cranium.

HYDROCEPHALUS INTER'NUS, Hydroceph'alus acu'tus, H. meninge'us, Hydrops cer'ebri, Encephalal'gia hydrop'ica, Encephali'tis exsudato'ria, Encephali'tis seu Meningi'tis Infan'tum, Morbus cerebra'lis Whyt'tii, En'tero-cephalop'yra Infan'tum, Hydrophlogo'sis Ventriculo'rum cer'ebri, Encephaloch'ysis, Phrenic'ula hydrocephal'ica, Hydrenceph'alus, Hydrencephali'tis, Hydrencephal'ium, Hydrocephali'tis, Hydromeningi'tis, Febris Hydrocephal'ica, Apoplex'ia hydrocephal'ica, Carus hydroceph'alus, Water Brain Fever, (F.) Hydrocéphale aiguë, Fièvre cérébrale des Enfans, is generally seated, according to modern observers, in the meninges and surface of the encephalon, and is a tuber'cular meningi'tis, Meningi'tis tuberculo'sa, Encephalostrumo'sis, (F.) Méningite tuberculeuse ou granuleuse. It is observed particularly in childhood. Its march is extremely acute and often very rapid; admitting, generally, however, of division into three stages. The symptoms of the first stage are those of general febrile irritation, with head-ach, intolerance of light and sound, delirium, &c. Those of the second, which generally denote that the inflammation has ended in effusion, are, great slowness of pulse, crying out as if in distress, moaning, dilated pupil, squinting, &c.; and lastly, in the third stage — profound stupor, paralysis, convulsions, involuntary evacuations, quick pulse, and frequently death. The disease is of uncertain duration; sometimes, destroying in two or three days; at others, extending to two or three weeks. The prognosis is unfavourable. The treatment must be active during the stage of excitement,—precisely that which is necessary in phrenitis. In the second stage, the indication is;—to promote the absorption of the effused fluid. This must be done by counter-irritants, and mercury, chiefly. On dissection, water is generally found in the ventricles, or at the base of the brain; or there are evidences of previous vascular excitement, as effusions of coagulable lymph, &c.

HYDROCEPHALUS SPURIUS, Hydrencephaloid, (disease.)

HYDROCHAMAIMELUM, Infusum anthemidis.

HYDROCHEZIA, Diarrhœa serosa.

HYDROCHLORATE D'OR, see Gold.

HYDROCHLORINAS NATRICUS, Soda, muriate of.

HYDROCHOLECYSTIS, Turgescentia vesiculæ felleæ.

HYDROCH'YSES, (G.) Hydrochysen, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and χυσις, 'effusion.' A family of diseases, according to the classification of Fuchs, in which there is a sudden effusion of serous fluid, as in serous apoplexy; hydrocephalus, &c.

HYDROCIRSOCE'LĒ, Hygrocirsoce'lē, Hygroce'lē, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' κιρσος, 'varix,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' A tumour, formed by the varicose distention of the veins of the spermatic cord, and by the accumulation of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the scrotum.

HYDROCŒLIA, Ascites.

HYDROCOT'YLĒ CENTEL'LA. A South African plant, the roots and stalks of which are astringent; and used in diarrhœa and dysentery.

HYDROCOTYLE UMBELLATUM, Acaricoba.

HYDROCRANIA, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCRANIUM, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCRITHE, Decoctum Hordei.

HYDROCYAN'IC ACID, Ac''idum Hydrocyan'icum; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κυανος, 'blue.' Prussic Acid, Ac''idum Prus'sicum, A. Borus'sicum, A. Zoöt'icum, A. Zoötin'icum, Cyanohy'dric Acid, Cyanhy'dric Acid, (F.) Acide Hydrocyanique ou Prussique. This acid exists in a great variety of native combinations in the vegetable kingdom, and imparts to them certain properties, which have been long known and esteemed; as in the bitter almond, Cherry laurel, leaves of the Peach tree, kernels of fruit, pips of apples, &c. When concentrated, it is liquid, colourless, of a strong smell and taste, at first cool, afterwards burning. Its s. g. at 7° centigrade, is 0.7058. It is very volatile, and enters into ebullition at 80° Fahr. It speedily undergoes decomposition, sometimes in less than an hour, and consists of a peculiar gazeous and highly inflammable compound of carbon and azote, to which the name Cyan'ogen has been assigned; and of hydrogen, which acts as the acidifying principle: hence its name Hydrocyanic acid. In the Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1851,) two formulæ for the preparation of the Ac''idum hydrocyan'icum dilu'tum—Ac''idum hydrocyan'icum, Ph. U. S. of 1842—are given; the one from the Ferro-cyanuret of Potassium; the other from the Cyanuret of Silver. According to Magendie, the acid, prepared after Scheele's method—the one in common use—is of irregular medicinal power: he, therefore, recommends Gay Lussac's acid, diluted with 6 times its volume, or 8.5 times its weight of distilled water, for medicinal purposes, and this he calls Medic''inal Prussic Acid. Dr. Ure has proposed, that the specific gravity should indicate that which is proper for medicinal exhibition; and, after comparative experiments of the gravity of the acids, obtained by different processes, he states, that the acid, usually prescribed, is of s. g. 0.996 or 0.997. Great caution is, however, necessary. One drop of pure prussic acid may instantly destroy, and the animal show hardly any traces of irritability, a few moments after death. It has been advised in laryngeal phthisis, in pulmonary phthisis, pulmonary inflammation and irritation, dyspepsia, uterine affections, hectic cough, cancer, chronic rheumatism, and mania, and as a local remedy in impetiginous affections; but, although possessed of powerful sedative properties, it is so unmanageable and the preparation so uncertain, that it is not much used. The Dose of Scheele's Acid, or of the Medicinal Prussic Acid, is from a quarter of a drop to two drops.

HYDROCYS'TIS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κυστις, 'a bladder.' A cyst containing a watery or serous fluid. An hydatid. Also, saccated ascites.

HYDRODERMA, Anasarca.

HYDRODES, Aqueous.

HYDRODIARRHŒA, Diarrhœa, serous.

HYDRŒDEMA, Œdema.

HYDRO-ENCÉPHALORRHÉE, Apoplexy, serous.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPIPLOCE'LĒ, Hydro-epiplo-enteroce'lē; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'intestine,' and επιπλοον, 'omentum.' Entero-epiplocele, the sac of which contains a serous fluid.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPIPLOM'PHALUM, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'an intestine,' επιπλοον, 'the caul,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains intestine, epiploon, and serum.

HYDRO-ENTEROM'PHALUM, Hydrenterom'phalum; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'an intestine,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Hernia umbilicalis, the sac of which contains intestine and serum.

HYDRO-EPIPLOCE'LĒ, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, formed by omentum, the sac of which contains serum.

HYDRO-EPIPLO-ENTEROCELE, Hydro-entero-epiplocele.

HYDRO-EPIPLOMPH'ALUM, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'the omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains epiploon and serum.

HYDROG'ALA, from ὑδορ, 'water,' and γαλα, 'milk.' A mixture of water and milk.

HYDROGASTER, Ascites.

HY'DROGEN, Hydrogen'ium, Inflam'mable air, Phlogis'ton, Princip'ium hydrogenet'icum, P. hydrot'icum, Mephi'tis inflammab'ilis, (F.) Hydrogène, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and γενναω, 'I produce.' This gas, when breathed, proves fatal from containing no oxygen. When diluted with two-thirds of atmospheric air, it occasions some diminution of muscular power and sensibility, and a reduction of the force of the circulation. It has been respired in catarrh, hæmoptysis, and phthisis.

HYDROGEN, CARBURETTED, Inflammable air, Fire damp, of miners—obtained by passing the vapour of water over charcoal, at the temperature of ignition, in an iron tube—has been found possessed of similar properties, when diluted, and has been used in like cases.

HYDROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF, Water.

HYDROGEN, SULPHURETTED, Hydrosulph'uric acid, Hydrothion'ic acid, Hydrothi'on, Gaz hepat'icum, Gaz hydrogen'ium sulphura'tum, Mephi'tis hepat'ica, (F.) Acide hydrosulfurique, may be disengaged from any of the sulphurets by the addition of a strong acid. It is a violent poison, but has been recommended to be inhaled, diluted, to allay the increased irritability which occasionally exists after diseases of the lungs. See Hydro-sulphuretted Water.

HYDROGENATION, see Hydrogénèses.

HYDROGÈNE, Hydrogen.

HYDROGÉNÈSES. Baumes gives this name to diseases which he fancifully considers to depend upon disturbed hydrogenation. In it he includes intermittent and remittent fevers.

HYDROGENO-SULPHURETUM AMMONIACÆ LIQUIDUM, Ammoniæ sulphuretum.

HYDROGLOSSA, Ranula.

HYDROGRAPHY, see Hydrology.

HYDROHÉMIE, Anæmia.

HYDROHYMENI'TIS, Orrhohymeni'tis, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a serous membrane.

HYDROLÆUM, Hydrelæon.

HYDROLAPATHUM, Rumex hydrolapathum.

HYDROLATA, Aquæ destillatæ.

HYDROLATS, Aquæ destillatæ.

HYDROLÉS, see Hydrolica.

HYDROL'ICA, (F.) Hydroliques, from ὑδωρ, 'water.' Watery solutions of the active principles of medicinal agents. Those prepared by solution or admixture are termed, by the French, Hydrolés; those by distillation, Hydrolats.

HYDROLIQUES, Hydrolica.

HYDROL'OGY, Hydrolog''ia, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' A treatise on water. By the term Medical Hydrol'ogy is meant that part of physics, whose object is the study of water, considered as it respects medicine; and, consequently, embracing that of mineral waters. Medical Hydrog'raphy comprises the study of the influence exerted by the sea or by navigation on the health of man.

HYDROLOTIF, Lotion.

HYDROMA'NIA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and μανια, 'mania.' A name given by Strambi to pellagra, in which the patient has a strong propensity to drown himself.

HYDRO-MEDIASTI'NUM, Hydrops mediasti'ni. Effusion of serous fluid into the mediastinum.

HY'DROMEL, Hydrom'eli, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and μελι, 'honey.' Aqua mulsa, Meliti'tis, Mulsum, Melic'ratum, Mellic'ratum, Braggart, Medo. A liquid medicine, prepared with an ounce and a half of honey and a pint of tepid water. It is used as a demulcent and laxative, and is generally known under the names Simple hy'dromel, Vinous hy'dromel, Mead, Hydrom'eli vino'sum. It is a drink made by fermenting honey and water, and is much used in some countries.

HYDROMENINGITIS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROMETER, Areometer.

HYDROME'TRA, Hydrome'tria, Hyster'ites, Hysterœde'ma, Hydrops u'teri, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and μητρα, 'the womb.' Dropsy of the womb. A disease characterized by circumscribed protuberance in the hypogastrium,—with obscure fluctuation, progressively enlarging, without ischury or pregnancy. If it ever occur, it must be a rare disease.

HYDROM'PHALUM, Hydrops umbilica'lis, Exom'phalus aquo'sus, Her'nia umbili'ci aquo'sa, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' A tumour, formed by the accumulation of serum in the sac of umbilical hernia; or simply by distension of the navel in cases of ascites.

HYDROMYRIN'GA, Hydromyrinx, Hydrops tym'pani, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and myringa or myrinx, 'the membrana tympani.' Dropsy of the drum of the ear; giving rise to difficulty of hearing,—Dysecœ'a hydrop'ica.

HYDROMYRINX, Hydromyringa.

HYDRONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDRONEPHRO'SIS, (F.) Hydronéphrose, Hydrorénale distension, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and νεφρος, 'kidney.' An accumulation in the kidney, owing to the obstruction of the tubes of the papillæ.—Rayer.

HYDRONOSUS, Hydrops.

HYDRONUSUS, Hydrops.

HYDROOPHORON, Hydroarion.

HYDROOVARIUM, Hydroarion.

HYDROPATH'IC, Hydropath'icus, Hydriat''ricus, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and παθος, 'disease.' Relating to hydropathy or the water-cure,—as a hydropathic physician, Hydriäter, Hydriätrus.

HYDROPATHY, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDROPEDE'SIS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and πηδαω, 'I break out.' Ephidro'sis. Excessive sweating.

HYDROPEGE, Water, spring.

HYDROPELTIS PURPUREA, Brasenia hydropeltis.

HYDROPERICARDIA, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDITIS, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICAR'DIUM, Hydropericar'dia, Hydropericardi'tis, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and pericardium; Hydrops Pericar'dii, Hydrocar'dia, Dropsy of the pericar'dium, (F.) Hydropisie du Péricarde. This is not a common disease. Palpitations; irregular or intermitting pulse; excessive dyspnœa, amounting often to orthopnœa, and dulness over a large space on percussion, will cause the pericardium to be suspected. The treatment is that of dropsies in general. It is, usually, however, of the active kind.

HYDROPÉRIONE, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' περι, 'around,' and ωον, 'an egg, or ovum.' The sero-albuminous substance; secreted by the lining of the uterus prior to the arrival of the impregnated ovum in that cavity.—Breschet.

HYDROPERITONEUM, Ascites.

HYDROPÉRITONIE, Ascites.

HYDROPHAL'LUS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and φαλλος, 'the male organ.' Œdema of the male organ.

HYDROPHIMOSIS, Phimosis œdematodes.

HYDROPHLEGMASIA TEXTÛS CELLULARIS, Phlegmasia alba.

HYDROPHLOGOSIS VENTRICULORUM CEREBRI, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROPHOB'IA, Paraphob'ia, Parophob'ia, Phobodip'son, Pheugydron, Pheugophob'ia, Cynolys'sa, Cynolys'sum, Morbus hydrophob'icus seu hydroph'obus, Lycan'chē, Lycan'chis, Aërophobia, Phreni'tis lutrans, Lytta, Lyssa, Lyssa cani'na, Pantophob'ia, Rabies cani'na, Erethis'mus hydrophobia, Clonos hydrophobia, Hygrophobia, Aquæ metus, Canine madness, (F.) Rage; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and φοβος, 'dread.'

The term Rabies is more appropriate for the aggregate of symptoms resulting from the bite of rabid animals. Hydrophobia literally signifies a 'dread of water;' and, consequently, ought to be applied to one of the symptoms of rabies, rather than to the disease itself. It is a symptom which appears occasionally in other nervous affections. Rabies is susceptible of spontaneous development in the dog, wolf, cat, and fox, which can thence transmit it to other quadrupeds or to man; but it has not been proved that it can supervene,—without their having been previously bitten,—in animals of other species; or that the latter can, when bitten, communicate it to others. Many facts induce the belief, that the saliva and bronchial mucus are the sole vehicles of the rabid virus; the effects of which upon the economy sometimes appear almost immediately after the bite, and are, at others, apparently dormant for a considerable period. The chief symptoms are — a sense of dryness and constriction of the throat; excessive thirst; difficult deglutition; aversion for, and horror at, the sight of liquids as well as of brilliant objects; red, animated countenance; great nervous irritability; frothy saliva; grinding of the teeth, &c. Death most commonly happens before the fifth day. Hydrophobia has hitherto resisted all therapeutical means. Those which allay irritation are obviously most called for. In the way of prevention, the bitten part should always be excised, where practicable; and cauterized.

In some cases, symptoms like those which follow the bite of a rabid animal are said to have come on spontaneously. This affection has been termed nervous or spontaneous hydrophobia.

HYDROPHOBUS, Lyssodectus.

HYDROPHTHAL'MIA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ὀφθαλμος, 'the eye.' Hydrophthal'mus, Dropsy of the eye, Hydrops Oc'uli, Buphthal'mus, Zoöphthal'mus, Oc'ulus Bovi'nus, Oculus Bu'bulus, Oculus Elephan'tinus, Ophthalmopto'sis, Parop'sis Staphylo'ma simplex, (F.) Hydrophthalmie, Hydropisie de l'œil. This affection is caused, at times, by an increase in the quantity of the aqueous, at others, of the vitreous, humour. In the former case, the iris is concave anteriorly, and pushed backwards: — in the latter, it is convex, and pushed forwards. Most commonly, the disease seems to depend on both humours at the same time. Hydrophthalmia sometimes affects both eyes; at others, only one. Children are more exposed to it than adults or old persons. The treatment must vary according to the cause; its longer or shorter duration; greater or less extent, &c. Hence, according to circumstances, hydragogue medicines, purgatives, general and local blood-letting, blisters, setons, moxa, cupping-glasses, fomentations, collyria, and fumigations of different kinds, have been employed. When all means fail, and the disease continues to make progress, the fluid may be evacuated, by a puncture made with a cataract needle at the lower part of the transparent cornea.

Hydrophthalmia, Conical, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYDROPHTHAL'MION. Same etymon. An œdematous swelling of the conjunctiva in hydropic persons.

HYDROPHTHALMUS, Hydrophthalmia — h. Cruentus, Hæmophthalmia.

HYDROPHYLLUM VERUM, Hydrastis Canadensis.

HYDROPHYSOCE'LĒ, Hydropneumatocele, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' φυσα, 'wind,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, which contains a serous fluid and gas.

HYDROPHYSOME'TRA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' φυσαω, 'I inflate,' and μητρα, 'the womb.' A morbid condition of the womb, in which both fluid and air are contained in it.

HYDROP'IC, Hydrop'icus, Hy'phydros, Hyder'icus, Hydero'des, Drop'sical, (F.) Hydropique. One labouring under dropsy. Relating to dropsy. Also, an antihydropic, and a hydragogue.

HYDROPIPER, Polygonum hydropiper.

HYDROPISIA, Hydrops.

HYDROPISIE, Hydrops — h. du Bas-ventre, Ascites — *h. HYDROPNEUMATOCELE, Hydrophysocele.

HYDROPNEUMON, Hydropneumonia.

HYDROPNEUMO'NIA, Hydropneu'mon, Œde'ma pulmo'num chron'icum, Hydrops pulmonum cellulo'sus, Anasar'ca pulmo'num, Hydrops pulmonum, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and πνευμων, 'the lung.' Dropsical infiltration of the lungs. See Œdema of the lungs.

HYDROPNEUMOSAR'CA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' πνευμα, 'wind, air,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' An abscess, containing water, air, and matters similar to flesh. — M. A. Severinus.

HYDROPNEUMOTHO'RAX, Hydroaëropleurie, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' πνευμων, 'the lung,' and θωραξ, 'the chest.' Pneumothorax with effusion of blood into the chest. See Pneumothorax.

HYDROPOI'DES, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ποιεω, 'I make.' An epithet for watery excretions, such as sometimes take place in hydropics.

HYDROP'OTA, Hydrop'otes, Pota'tor Aquæ, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ποτης, 'a drinker.' A water drinker. One who drinks only water, or drinks it in an extraordinary quantity.

HYDROPS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' Plegma'tia, Hy'deros, Affec'tus hydero'des, Hydrop'isis, Hydropis'ia, Hydropis'mus, Hydrop'sia, Hydrorrhœ'a, Hydrorrhoē, Hydrorrhoïs, Polyhy'dria, Hydron'osus, Hydronu'sus, Dropsy, (F.) Hydropisie. A preternatural collection of a serous fluid in any cavity of the body, or in the areolar texture. When the cellular texture of the whole body is more or less filled with fluid, the disease is called Anasar'ca or Leucoplegma'tia; — and when this variety is local or partial, it is called Œde'ma. The chief dropsies, designated from their seat, are: — Anasarca, Hydrocephalus, Hydrorachitis, Hydrothorax, Hydropericardium, Ascites, Hydrometra, Hydrocele, &c.

Encyst'ed Dropsy, Hydrops sacca'tus, incarcera'tus vel cys'ticus, is that variety in which the fluid is enclosed in a sac or cyst; so that it has no communication with the surrounding parts. Dropsy of the Ovarium, Hydrops Ova'rii, Asci'tes Ova'rii, Asci'tes sacca'tus, is an instance of this variety.

Dropsy may be active or passive. The former consists in an increased action of the exhalants, so that those vessels pour out much more fluid than is absorbed: the latter arises from a state of atony of the absorbent vessels, which allows of an accumulation of fluid. It may also be mechanical, or produced by obstructions to the circulation, as in cases of diseased liver. Active dropsy, occurring accidentally in a sound individual, generally ends favourably. That which supervenes on other diseases, or is symptomatic of some internal affection, is rarely curable.

The treatment consists in the use of all those remedies which act on the various secretions: so that, the demand being increased, the supply will have to be increased accordingly; and in this manner some of the collected fluid may be taken up by the absorbents. To this end bleeding, if the dropsy be very active; purgatives, diuretics, sudorifics, sialogogues, &c., are the remedies chiefly depended upon.

HYDROPSIA, Hydrops.

HYDROPYR'ETOS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and πυρετος, 'fever;' Febris sudato'ria. Fever with sweating. Hidropyretos would be more proper; from 'ἱδρως, 'sweat.' See Sudor Anglicus.

HYDRORA'CHIS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ραχις, 'the spine.' Hydrorrha'chis, Hydrorachi'tis, Hydrorrha'chia, Myeloch'ysis, Hydrops Cavita'tis Columnæ Vertebra'lis, H. Spinæ vertebra'lis, Hydrops medul'læ spina'lis, Hydroce'lē spina'lis, Hydrorachi'tis spino'sa, Hydrops spinæ. An effusion of serum, often owing to inflammation of the spinal membranes—myeli'tis exsudati'va—and forming a soft, frequently transparent, tumour, constituted of the membranes of the spinal marrow, which are distended and projecting backwards from the vertebral canal, the posterior paries of which, when the affection is congenital, is wanting to a certain extent—Spina bif'ida, Atelorachid'ia, Hydrora'chis dehis'eens seu congen'ita, Schistorrha'chis, Spi'nola. The disease is often accompanied with paralysis of the lower extremities. It is congenital, and situate in the lumbar or sacral regions. It is almost always fatal:—the tumour rupturing, and death occurring instantaneously. On dissection, a simple separation or complete absence of the spinous processes of the vertebræ is perceived, with, at times, destruction or absence of spinal marrow. The treatment is the same as in hydrocephalus chronicus; and, as in it, advantage seems occasionally to have been derived by puncturing with a fine needle.

HYDRORACHIS DEHISCENS, see Hydrorachis.

HYDRORACHITIS, Hydrorachis.

HYDRORCHIS, Hydrocele.

HYDRORRHOE, Hydrops.

HYDRORRHŒA, Hydrops.

HYDRORRHOUS, Hydropic.

HYDRORTHOPNŒ'A, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ορθοπνοια, 'difficulty of breathing, except in the erect posture.' Orthopnœa, owing to a collection of water in the chest.

HYDROSAC'CHARUM, Aqua sacchara'ta, (F.) Eau sucrée. Sugared water.

HYDROSAL'PINX, Hydrops tuba'rum Fallo'pii; from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and σαλπιγξ, 'a tube.' Dropsy of the Fallopian tube.

HYDROSAR'CA, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A tumour containing a fluid, as well as portions of flesh. Also, Anasarca.

HYDROSARCOCE'LE, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' σαρξ, 'flesh,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Sarcohydroce'lē. A tumour, formed by a sarcocele, complicated with dropsy of the tunica vaginalis.

HYDROSCHEOCE'LE, Oscheoce'lē aquo'sa, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' οσχεον, 'the scrotum,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' A collection of water in the scrotum. Hydrocele.

HYDROSCHÉONIE, Hydrocele.

HYDROSCHEUM, Hydrocele.

HYDROSIS, Hidrosis.

HYDROSTATIC TEST OF INFANTICIDE, see Docimasia.

HYDROSUDOPATHY, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDROSUDOTHERAPEI'A, Hydrop'athy, Hydropathi'a, Hydrosudop'athy, Hydri'asis, Ars hydriat'rica, Hydriatri'a, Water cure, (G.) Wasserkur, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' sudo, 'I sweat,' and θεραπευω, 'I remedy.' A badly compounded word, formed to express the mode of treating diseases systematically by cold water, sweating, &c.

HYDROSULPHURET'TED WATER, Aqua hydrosulphura'ta simplex, Aqua hepat'ica, (F.) Eau hydrosulphurée simple. (Sulphuret of iron 1000 parts, sulphuric acid 2000 parts, distilled water 4000 parts; add the water to the acid, and put the sulphuret of iron into a retort, to which a Wolff's apparatus of five or six vessels is adapted; the last containing about an ounce of potassa, dissolved in a quart of water. Pour the diluted acid gradually on the sulphuret, and, ultimately, throw away the water in the last vessel. Ph. P.) It is stimulant, diaphoretic, and deobstruent, (?) and is used in rheumatism, diseases of the skin, &c.

It has been, also, called Ac''idum Hydrothion'icum liq'uidum.

HYDROSULPHURETUM AMMONIACUM AQUOSUM, Ammoniæ sulphuretum—h. Ammoniacum, Ammoniæ sulphuretum.

HYDROTHION, Hydrogen, sulphuretted.

HYDROTHO'RAX, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and θωραξ, 'the chest.' Hydrops Thora'cis, Hydrops pec'toris, Hydrops pulmo'nis, H. pleuræ, Stethoch'ysis, Pleurorrhœ'a lymphat'ica, Pl. sero'sa, Dyspnœ'a et Orthopnœ'a hydrothorae''ica, (F.) Hydropisie de Poitrine, H. des Plèvres, Dropsy of the Chest. Idiopathic hydrothorax, termed by Laënnec Hydropisie des plèvres, Dropsy of the Pleuræ,—by Piorry, Hydropleurie,—is a rare disease, and difficult of diagnosis. It generally exists only on one side, which, if the fluid effused be considerable, projects more than the other. Dyspnœa, and fluctuation perceptible to the ear, are characteristic symptoms. When the chest is examined with the stethoscope, respiration is found to be wanting every where, except at the root of the lung. The sound is also dull on percussion.

Effusion into the chest, as a result of inflammation of some thoracic viscus, is as common as the other is rare. It is usually a fatal symptom. It has been called symptomatic hydrothorax.

In hydrothorax, the course of treatment proper in dropsies in general, must be adopted. Diuretics seem, here, to be especially useful; probably on account of the great activity of pulmonary absorption. Paracentesis can rarely be serviceable.

HYDROTHORAX CHYLOSUS, Chylothorax—h. Purulentus, Empyema.

HYDROTICA, Hydragogues.

HYDRO'TIS, from 'ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ους, gen.

ωτος, 'the ear.' Dropsy of the ear. Properly, an accumulation of mucous or muco-purulent matter in the middle ear.

HYDRURESIS, Diabetes.

HYDRURIA, Diabetes, see Urine.

HYÈRES. This small town, agreeably situate on the declivity of a hill, about two miles from the Mediterranean, and twelve from Toulon, is the least exceptionable residence in Provence for the pulmonary invalid. It is in some measure protected from the northerly winds; but not sufficiently so from the mistral to render it a very desirable residence for the phthisical.—Sir James Clark.

HYGEA, Hygiène, Sanitas.

HYGEIA, Sanitas.

HYGEISMUS, Hygiene.

HYGEOLOGY, Hygiene.

HYGIANSIS, Sanitas.

HYGIASIS, Sanitas.

HYGIASMA, Medicament.

HYGIAS'TICA DOCTRI'NA. The doctrine of health. The doctrine of the restoration of health.

HYGIASTICUS, Salutary.

HYGIEA, Sanitas.

HYGIEIA, Hygiene, Sanitas.

HYGIEINUS, Salutary.

HYGIEIOLOGIA, Hygiene.

HYGIÈNE (F.), (generally Anglicised, and pronounced hygeëne) from 'υγιεια, 'health.' Hygiene, Hygeis'mus, Hygiei'nē, Hygie'sis, Hygiei'a; Hygie'a, Hygei'a, Hygiene, Hygien'ica, Conservati'va medicina, Hygeolog''ia, Hygiciolog''ia, Hygeology, Hygiol'ogy; from 'υγιης, 'healthy.' The part of medicine whose object is the preservation of health. It embraces a knowledge of healthy man, both in society and individually, as well as of the objects used and employed by him, with their influence on his constitution and organs. See Regimen.

HYGIEN'IC, (F.) Hygiénique. Same etymon. Relating to Hygiene — as 'hygienic precautions, hygienic rules,' &c. &c.

HYGIENICS, Hygiene.

HYGIÉNIQUE, Hygienic.

HYGIÉ'NIST. One who understands the principles of hygiene.

HYGIERUS, Salutary.

HYGIESIS, Hygiene.

HYGIOLOGY, Hygiene.

HYGRA, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' or 'υγρος, 'humid.' Liquid plasters;—Hygremplas'tra.

HYGRASIA, Humour.

HYGRECHE'MA, from 'υγρος, 'humid,' and εχημα, 'sound;' Son'itus flu'idi. The sound of fluid, heard by auscultation, or otherwise.

HYGREDON, Humour.

HYGREMPLASTRA, Hygra.

HYGROBLEPHAR'ICI, from 'υγρος, 'humid,' and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid;' Hygrophthal'mici. The excretory ducts of the lachrymal gland have been so called.

HYGROCATARAC'TA; from 'υγρος, 'humid,' and καταρακτης, 'cataract;' Catarac'ta liq'uida. Liquid or fluid cataract.

HYGROCELE, Hydrocirsocele.

HYGROCOLLYRIA, see Collyrium.

HYGROCYSTIS, Hydatid.

HYGROL'OGY, Hygrolog''ia, from 'υγρος, 'humid,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The anatomy of the fluids of the body.

HYGRO'MA, from 'υγρος, 'humid.' Tumor cys'ticus sero'sus, Cys'tis sero'sa. Dropsy of the bursæ mucosæ.

HYGROM'ETRY, Hygromet'ria, Hygrosco'pia; from 'υγρος, 'humid,' and μητρον, 'measure. The part of physics which concerns the measurement of the dryness or humidity of the atmosphere. It is probable, that diseases are as frequently caused by the varying moisture of the atmosphere as by changes in its weight or temperature. The hygrometer ought, consequently, to form part of every apparatus for medical meteorological observations.

HYGRON, Liquor.

HYGROPHOBIA, Hydrophobia.

HYGROPHTHAL'MIA, from 'υγρος, 'humid,' and οφθαλμια, 'inflammation of the eye.' Ophthalmia with much lachrymation.

HYGROPHTHALMICI, Hygroblepharici.

HYGROPISSOS, see Pinus sylvestris.

HYGROSCOPIA, Hygrometry.

HYGROTES, Humour, Liquor.

HYGRUM, Humour.

HY'LĒ, 'υλη, Mate'ria, 'Matter.' Wood. Materia Medica; also, the Philosopher's stone.

HYLE IATRICE, Materia Medica.

HYLISIS, Colatio.

HYLISMUS, Colatio.

HYLISTER, Colatorium.

HYLOPH'AGOUS, from 'υλη, 'wood,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' One that feeds upon the young shoots of trees, roots, &c. Hylophagous tribes yet exist in some parts of Africa.

HYMASTATICS, Hæmastatice.

HYMEN, 'υμην, which signifies 'marriage,' 'nuptial song,' 'membrane or pellicle.' Claustrum seu Flos seu Sigil'lum seu Custo'dia seu Colum'na seu Zona virginita'tis, Flos virgina'lis, Virgin'ia, Cir'culus membrano'sus, Bucton, Intersep'tum virgina'lē, Cento virgina'lis, Argumen'tum Integrita'tis, Munimen'tum seu Zona Castita'tis, Pannic'ulus hgmenæ'us seu virgina'lis, Eugion, Val'vula vagi'næ, Membran'ula luna'ta vaginæ, Virginal membrane. The semilunar, parabolic, or circular fold, situate at the outer orifice of the vagina in virgins, especially during youth, and prior to menstruation. This membrane is ordinarily ruptured by the first venereal act, and is effaced by accouchement; some irregular flaps remaining, to which the name Carun'culæ Myrtifor'mes has been given by reason of their resemblance to the leaves of the myrtle. Many circumstances of an innocent character may occasion a rupture or destruction of this membrane. It is often, indeed, found absent in children soon after birth; whilst it may remain entire after copulation. Hence the presence of the hymen does not absolutely prove virginity; nor does its absence prove incontinence; although its presence would be primâ facie evidence of continence.

HYMEN, Membrane—h. Diaphatton, Mediastinum.

HYMENÆA, see Copal—h. Courbaril, see Anime.

HYMEN'ICA AMENORRHŒ'A. Amenorrhœa occasioned by closure of the hymen.

HYMEN'ICUS, Hymeno'des, from 'υμην, 'hymen,' &c. Relating to the hymen. Also, membranous.

HYMENI'TIS, from 'υμην, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Membranous inflammation. Inflammation of an internal membrane.

HYME'NIUM, Membran'ula, diminutive of 'υμην, 'a membrane.' A fine, delicate membrane.

HYMENODES, Hymenicus.

HYMENOGANGLIITIS, Cholera.

HYMENOG'RAPHY, Hymenogra'phia, from 'υμην, 'a membrane,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' That part of anatomy whose object is the description of the different membranes.

HYMENOL'OGY, Hymenolog''ia, from ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the membranes.

HYMENOR'RHAPHY, Hymenorrha'phia; from ὑμην, 'the hymen,' and ραφη, 'a suture.' A form of elytrorrhaphy, in which the operation is performed in the natural situation of the hymen.

HYMENOT'OMY, Hymenotom'ia, from ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and τεμνω, 'I cut,' 'I dissect.' The part of anatomy which treats of the dissection of the membranes. The term has also been applied to the incision of the hymen, practised in certain cases of imperforation of the vagina, in order to give exit to the blood retained and accumulated in the cavity of the uterus.

HYMNIUM, Amnios.

HYO: in composition, an abridgment of Hyoides, os.

HYOBASIOGLOSSUS, Basioglossus.

HYOCHONDROGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYODEOGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYODEOTHYREODES, Thyreohyoideus.

HYODES, Hyoides.

HYO-EPIGLOT'TICUS, Hyodepiglot'ticus. Belonging to the os hyoides and epiglottis. Some anatomists have given the name Hyo-epiglottic ligament to a bundle of condensed areolar tissue, which passes from the posterior part of the body of the hyoid bone to the base of the epiglottic fibro-cartilage.

HYO-GLOSSO-BASI-PHARYNGIEN, Constrictor pharyngis.

HYOGLOS'SUS, Hyodeo-glossus, Hyo-chondro-glossus, Hypsiloglossus, Cer'ato-glossus of Douglass and Cowper: Basio-Cerato-Chondro-glossus. A large, thin, quadrilateral muscle, situate at the anterior and superior part of the neck. Its insertions at three different points of the os hyoides permit it to be divided into three portions:—the first, (Cerato-glossus of Albinus) is attached to the great cornu of the os hyoides: the second, (Basio-glossus of Albinus,) arises from the superior part of the body of the same bone; and the third, (Chondro-glossus of Albinus,) arises from the lesser cornu and the cartilage, situate between the body and the greater cornu. The fibres of these three bundles are inserted into the lateral and inferior parts of the tongue. This muscle depresses the base of the tongue, or raises the os hyoides, when the tongue is fixed.

HYO-THYREOIDEUS, Thyreo-hyoideus.

HYO-THYROID, Thyreo-hyoid.

HYOID BONE, Hyoides, os.

HYOÏ'DES, OS, Os Bicor'nē, Os hypseloï'des, Os Lambdoï'des, Os Gut'turis, Os Linguæ, Os Lingua'lē, Upsiloï'des, Ypsiloïdes. The Hyoid Bone; from the Greek υ, and ειδος, 'shape.' Hyoï'deus, Hyo'des. The hyoid bone is a very movable, osseous arch; of a parabolic shape; convex before, and suspended horizontally in the substance of the soft parts of the neck, between the base of the tongue and the larynx. This bone, separated entirely from the rest of the skeleton, is composed of five distinct portions, susceptible of motion on each other. The first, and most central, is the body of the hyoid, Ossic'ulum me'dium Hyoï'dis, which affords attachment to several muscles; the two others are lateral, and bear the name of branches or greater cornua. The last two are smaller, situate above the other, and are known under the name lesser cornua and styloid cornua, the Ossa pisifor'mia lingua'lia of Sömmering. The os hyoides is ossified from five points.

HYOIDES PRIMUS, Sterneo-hyoideus.

HYOIDEUS, Hyoides.

HYOIDIS QUARTUS MUSCULUS, Omohyoideus.

HYOSCY'AMUS, from ὑς, 'a swine,' and κυαμος, 'a bean.' Faba suil'la, Bengi, Jusquiamus, Hyoscyamus niger seu agres'tis, Apollina'ris, Alter'cum, Ag'onē, Altercan'genon, Henbane, Poison Tobac'co, Stinking nightshade, (F.) Jusquiaume, Fève a Cochon, Hannebane, Potélée. The leaves and seeds are the parts used in medicine. Their odour is narcotic and peculiar; taste insipid and mucilaginous. The virtues are yielded to proof spirit. Hyoscyamus is narcotic, anodyne, antispasmodic, and slightly stimulant. It is used as a substitute for opium, where the latter disagrees; and is applied, externally, as a cataplasm in cancer and glandular swellings. Dose, gr. iij to x of the powder.

HYOSCYAMUS AGRESTIS, Hyoscyamus.

HYOSCYAMUS ALBUS, White Henbane, possesses similar virtues.

HYOSCYAMUS LUTEUS, Nicotiana rustica — h. Niger, Hyoscyamus — h. Peruvianus, Nicotiana tabacum.

HYOSCYAMUS SCOPOLIA, Scopoli'na atropoï'des. The herb and root of this plant, which grows in Illyria, Hungary, Croatia, Gallizia, and Bavaria, are used in the same cases as belladonna. Dose of the powder, half a grain.

HYPACTICUS, Cathartic.

HYPÆ'MIA, from ὑπο, 'beneath,' and αιμα, 'blood;' Oligæ'mia, Oligohæ'mia, Anæ'mia. Deficiency of blood.—Andral. Also, extravasation of blood.

HYPAGOGE, Dejection.

HYPAGOGUS, Laxative.

HYPALEIM'MA, Hypalim'ma, Hypaleīp'tum, Hypalip'tum, from ὑπαλειφω, 'I anoint.' An ointment or liniment to be rubbod or spread on a part.

HYPALEIPTRIS, Hypaleiptrum.

HYPALEIP'TRON, Hypaleip'trum, Hypaleiptris, Hypaliptrum, Speciil'lum, Spatha. A sort of spatula for spreading ointments.—Hipp.

HYPALEIPTRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPALEIPTUM, Hypaleimma.

HYPALIMMA, Hypaleimma.

HYPALIPTRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPAMAURO'SIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and amaurosis; Amauro'sis imperfec'ta. Imperfect amaurosis; Meramauro'sis.

HYPAPOPLEX'IA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and apoplexia. An incomplete attack of apoplexy.

HYPATMISMUS, Fumigation.

HYPATMUS, Fumigation.

HYPAUCHE'NIUM, from ὑπο, 'under,' and αυχην, 'the neck.' A pillow or cushion for the neck.

HYPECCHORESIS, Dejection.

HYPECCHORETICUS, Laxative.

HYPELATUS, Cathartic, Laxative.

HYPENANTIOMA, Allopathy.

HYPENANTIOSIS, Allopathy.

HYPE'NĒ, ὑπηνη. The beard which grows under the chin, according to some. Also, the upper lip.—Vesalius. See Mystax.

HYPER, ὑπερ, 'above,' 'in excess.' Hence:

HYPERACU'SIS, Oxyecoïa, Hyperac'oë, Phthongodyspho'ria, from ὑπερ, 'above,' and ακοη, 'audition.' Excessive sensibility of the organ of hearing.

HYPERADENO'SIS, Hyperadeno'ma, Hypertroph'ia glandula'rum, from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' and αδην, 'a gland.' Hypertrophy of a gland.

HYPERÆ'MIA, Hyperhæ'mia, Hæmorme'sis, (F.) Hyperémie, Angiohémie, from ὑπερ, 'above,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Preternatural accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels, more especially local plethora; congestion.—Andral. Various forms of hyperæmia are admitted by pathologists,—for example, the active or sthenic; as in the phlegmasiæ,—the asthenic or passive, from weakness of vessels; the cadaverie, or that which forms immediately before or after death; and the hypostatic, which occurs in depending parts.

HYPERÆMIA ABDOMINIS, Cœliæmia—h. Activa, Inflammation—h. Capitis, Cephalæmia—h. of the Brain, Stethæmia—h. Cerebri, Cephalæmia—h. Pectoris, Stethæmia—h. Pulmonum, Stethæmia—h. of the Lungs, Stethæmia—h. Hepatic, Hepatohæmia.

HYPERÆ'MIC, Hyperæ'micus, Conges'ted, Bloodshot. Affected with hyperæmia.

HYPERÆSTHESIA, Hyperæsthesis—h. Linguæ, Hypergeustia—h. Olfactoria, Hyperosphresia—h. Plexus cardiaci, Angina pectoris.

HYPERÆSTHE'SIS, Hyperæsthæ'sia, Oxyæsthe'sia, (F.) Hyperesthésie, from 'υπερ, 'above,' and αισθησις, 'the faculty of feeling.' Excessive sensibility, impressibility, or passibility.

HYPERÆSTHET'ICA, same etymon. Agents that are conceived to augment general sensibility—as strychnia, brucia, &c. Pereira.

HYPERANTHERA MORINGA, Guilandina moringa.

HYPERANTHRAXIS, see Cholera.

HYPERAPH'IA, Oxyaphē, Oxyaph'ia, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and 'αφη, 'touch.' Excessive acuteness of touch.

HYPERAPHRODIS'IA, from 'υπερ, 'in excess, and Αφροδιτη, 'Venus.' Excessive venereal desire.

HYPERASTHENI'A, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and ασθενεια, 'weakness.' Excessive debility.

HYPERAUXE'SIS, from 'υπερ, 'over,' 'above,' and αυξησις, 'augmentation.' Hyperepid'osis. Excessive increase or enlargement of a part;—as Hyperauxe'sis Ir'idis, an excessive enlargement of the iris, so as to stop up the pupil.

HYPERBOL'IC (attitude), from 'υπερ, 'above, over,' and βαλλω, 'I throw.' 'Excessive.' Galen, by this term, designates certain extraordinary attitudes, in which the limbs and vertebral column are in a state of complete extension or flexion.

HYPERBO'REAN, from 'υπερ, 'beyond,' and βορεας, 'the north wind.' A race of men found at the extreme north of the two continents, in the vicinity of the polar circle. It includes the Thibetans, Ostiaks, Kamtschadales, Laplanders, Samoiedes, Esquimaux, &c.

HYPERBU'LIA, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and βουλη, 'will.' Ungovernable will or volition.

HYPERCARDIA, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCARDIOTROPHIA, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCATAPINO'SIS, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and καταπινειν, 'to sip up.' Excessive activity of absorption.

HYPERCATHAR'SIS, Hyperine'sis, Hyperinos, Superpurga'tio, Effrenita'tio, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and καθαρσις, 'purgation.' Superpurgation.

HYPERCENO'SIS, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and κενωσις, 'evacuation.' Excessive evacuation, as of blood, bile, &c.

HYPERCERASIS, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYPERCERATOSIS, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYPERCHOLIA, Polycholia.

HYPERCINE'SIA, Hypereine'sis, from 'υπερ, 'above, over,' and κινησις (κινεω, 'I move,') 'motion.' Excessive motion. Under the term hypercinesis, Romberg includes the spasmodic neuroses.

HYPERCINESIA NERVÓSA, see Irritable—h. Uterina, Hysteria.

HYPERCINESIS GASTRICA, Hypochondriasis.

HYPERCONJONCTIVITE, see Ophthalmia.

HYPERCORYPHO'SIS, from 'υπερ, 'above,' and κορυφη, 'the vertex;' the extreme point of anything. The lobes of the liver and lungs.—Hippocrates.

HYPERCRIN'IA, Hyperdiae'risis, Chymoze'mia, from 'υπερ, 'above,' and κρινω, 'I separate.' A morbid increase in the quantity of the secretions.

HYPER'CRISIS, same etymon. Supcrexere'tio, Superevacua'tio. An excessive crisis, or evacuation; a flux.—A very violent, critical effort, or too copious critical evacuations.—Galen.

HYPERCYESIS, Superfœtation.

HYPERDERMATO'SIS, Hyperdermato'ma, Hyperdermo'sis, Hyperdermo'ma, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and δερμα, 'skin.' Hypertrophy of the skin.

HYPERDIACRISIS, Hypercrinia.

HYPERDIURESIS, Diabetes.

HYPERDYNAMIA, Hypersthenia.

HYPERDYNAM'IC, Hyperdynam'icus, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and δυναμις, 'strength.' Appertaining to or having the characters of hyperdynamia, or excessive strength—of the vital powers more especially.

HYPERECHEMA, see Exaggerated.

HYPERECHESIS, see Exaggerated.

HYPEREM'ESIS, Hyperemes'ia; Vom'itus profu'sus, from υπερ, 'in excess,' and εμεω, 'I vomit.' Excessive vomiting after an emetic.

HYPERÉMIE, Hyperæmia—h. du Cerveau, Cephalohæmia—h. Cérébrale, Cephalohæmia—h. du Foie, Hepatohæmia—h. de la Moëlle épinière, Hypermyelohæmia—h. des Poumons, Stethæmia.

HYPERENCÉPHALOTROPHIE; from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' εγκεφαλον, 'the encephalon,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Hypertrophy of the encephalon.—Piorry.

HYPERENCEPH'ALUS, from 'υπερ, 'above,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' A monster whose excessive brain is situate in the skull.

HYPERENDOSMOSE, Inflammation.

HYPERENERGI'A, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and ενεργεια, 'activity.' Excessive activity, as of the nervous system.

HYPEREPHIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPEREPIDOSIS, Hyperauxesis.

HYPERERETHIS'IA, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and ερεθιζω, 'I excite.' Excessive irritability.

HYPERES'IA, 'υπερεσια, 'a ministry.' This word is sometimes applied to the organs;—when it means function.

HYPERESTHÉSIE, Hyperæsthesis.

HYPERETRIA, Midwife.

HYPERGEN'ESIS, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' The excess of formative power, which gives occasion to monstrosities by excess of parts.

HYPERGEUS'TIA, Hypergeu'sis, Hyperæsthe'sia linguæ, Oxygeu'sia, from 'υπερ, 'above,' and γευστις, 'taste.' Excessive sensibility of the organ of taste.

HYPERHÆMATOSIS, Inflammation.

HYPERHÆMIA, Hyperæmia.

HYPERHÉPATOTROPHIE, Hepatauxe.

HYPERHIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPERHO'RA, from 'υπερ, 'in excess,' and

ὥρα, 'time.' Premature development of the body, or of some part.

HYPERI'CUM BACCIF'ERUM, Arbus'cula gummif'era, Brazilien'sis, Caa-opia. A Brazilian tree, whose bark admits a juice, when wounded, which resembles gamboge.

HYPERICUM OFFICINALE, H. perforatum — h. Officinarum, H. perforatum.

HYPERICUM PERFORA'TUM, Hypericum, H. officina'lē seu officina'rum seu vulga'rē seu Virgin'icum, Fuga Dæ'monum, Androsæ'mum, Co'rion, Perforated or Common St. John's Wort, (F.) Millepertuis ordinaire. It is aromatic and astringent, and enters into a number of aromatic preparations; and, amongst others, into the Fall-trancks. The Oil of St. John's Wort, O'leum hyperici, Bal'samum hyperici sim'plex, is made by infusing ℥iv. of the flowers in a quart of olive oil. It is vulnerary.

HYPERICUM VIRGINICUM, H. perforatum — h. Vulgare, H. perforatum.

HYPERIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPERINESIS, Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINOS, Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINO'SIS, Hyperplas'ma, from ὑπερ, 'above,' and ις, ινος, 'flesh.' The condition of the blood in which it contains an increase in the proportion of fibrin, a decrease of the corpuscles in proportion to the excess of fibrin, and an increase of the fat, — as in inflammation. In proportion to the increase of the fibrin and fat, and the decrease of the corpuscles, the whole solid residue will be diminished. Also, morbidly increased muscular activity.—Siebenhaar.

HYPERLYMPH'IA, (F.) Hyperlymphie; from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' and lympha. Excessive formation or accumulation of lymph.

HYPERMÉTROHÉMIE, Metrohæmia.

HYPERMNE'SIA, from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' and μναομαι, 'I recollect.' Excessive memory.

HYPERMYELOHÆ'MIA, (F.) Hyperémie de la Moëlle Épinière, Congestion sanguine rachidienne, from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' μυελος, 'marrow,' and αἱμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia of the spinal marrow.

HYPERNÉPHROTROPHIE, from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' νεφρος, 'kidney,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Hypertrophy of the kidney.

HYPERNEU'RIA, from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Excessive nervous activity.

HYPERNEURO'MA, same etymon. Morbid development of the neurine or nervous masses.

HYPERO-PHARYNGEUS, Palato-pharyngeus.

HYPERO'A, from ὑπερ, 'upon,' and ωον, 'a high place.' The palatine arch,—the base of the cranium.

HYPEROA, Palate.

HYPEROI'TIS, Inflamma'tio pala'ti, Angi'na Palati'na, (F.) Inflammation du Palais; from hyperoa, 'the palate,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the velum palati.

HYPEROÖCHAS'MA, from ὑπερωα, 'the palate, and χασμα, 'an opening;' Lycos'toma, Pala'tum fissum. Fissure of the palate.

HYPEROPSIA, Oxyopia.

HYPEROS, Pilum.

HYPEROSMIA, Hyperosphresia.

HYPEROSPHRE'SIA, Hyperos'mia, Hyperæsthe'sia olfacto'ria, Olfac'tus acu'tus, from ὑπερ, and οσφρησις, 'smell.' Excessive acuteness of smell.

HYPEROSTOSIS, Exostosis.

HYPERPATHI'A, from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' and παθος, 'suffering.' Excessive sensibility in disease.

HYPERPHLEBO'SIS, from ὑπερ, 'in excess,' and φλεψ, 'a vein.' Too great development of the venous system; predominant venosity.

HYPERPHLEGMASIA, Hyperphlogosis.

HYPERPHLOGO'SIS, Epiphlogo'sis, Hyperphlegma'sia, Inflamma'tio peracu'ta, from ὑπερ, 'above,' and φλογωσις, 'inflammation.' A high degree of inflammation.

HYPERPHRÉNIE, Mania.

HYPERPIMELE, see Polysarcia.

HYPERPLASMA, Hyperinosis.

HYPERPLEXIE, Ecstasis.

HYPERPNEUSTIA, Flatulence.

HYPERPRESBYTIA, Presbytia.

HYPERSARCHIDIOS, Physconia.

HYPERSARCO'MA, Hypersarco'sis, Hypersarx'is, from ὑπερ, 'above,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A soft fungous excrescence, especially such as appears upon ulcerated parts. — A fungosity.

HYPERSARCOSIS, Excrescence, Fungosity, —h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERSARXIS, Hypersarcoma.

HYPERSPADIAS, Epispadias.

HYPERSPASMIA, Convulsion.

HYPERSPLÉNOTROPHIE, Splenoncus.

HYPERSPONGIA, Spina ventosa.

HYPERSTHENI'A, Hyperdyna'mia, Hyperzoödyna'mia, Status inflammato'rius verus; from ὑπερ, 'beyond,' and σθενος, 'strength.' Super-excitement. A morbid condition, characterized by over-excitement of all the vital phenomena.

HYPERSTHENIC, Stimulant.

HYPERSTHENICUS, Active, Stimulant.

HYPERTON'IA, ὑπερ, 'beyond,' and τονος, 'tone.' Excess of tone in parts. It is opposed to atony.

HYPERTROPHÆ'MIA, from ὑπερ, 'above,' τροφη, 'nourishment,' and αἱμα, 'blood.' A state in which the plastic powers of the blood are increased.

HYPERTROPHIA CEREBRI, Phrenauxe — h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the — h. Glandularum, Hyperadenosis—h. Hepatis, Hepatauxe —h. Intestinorum, Enterhypertrophia—h. Lienis, Splenoncus — h. Splenis, Splenoncus — h. Uteri, Metrauxe — h. Vesicæ urinariæ, Cystauxe.

HYPERTROPHIE DU CŒUR, Heart, hypertrophy of the — h. du Foie, Hepatauxe—h. de la Rate, Splenoncus — h. du Corps Thyroïde, Bronchocele.

HYPERTROPHIED, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHOUS, see Hypertrophy.

HY'PERTROPHY, Hypertroph'ia, from ὑπερ, 'beyond,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' The state of a part in which the nutrition is performed with greater activity; and which, on that account, at length acquires unusual bulk. The part thus affected is said to be hypertrophied or hypertrophous.

HYPERURESIS, Enuresis — h. Aquosa, Diabetes.

HYPERURORRHEE, Diabetes—h. Saccharine, Diabetes (Mellitus.)

HYPERZOODYNAMIA, Hypersthenia.

HYPEX'ODOS, ὑπεξοδος, from ὑπο, 'beneath,' and εξοδος, 'passing out.' An alvine discharge or flux. — Hippocrates.

HYPEZOCUS, Diaphragm, Pleura.

HYPHA, Texture.

HYPHÆMA, Ecchymoma.

HYPHÆMATO'SIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and αἱματωσις, 'sangnification.' Morbidly diminished hæmatosis. — Sanguifica'tio debil'ior.

HYPHÆMOS, Subcruentus.

HYPHE, Texture.

HYPHYDROS, Hydropic.

HYPINO'SIS, Hypoplas'ma, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ις, ινος, 'flesh.' The condition of the blood in which the quantity of fibrin is frequently less than in health, or if it amounts to the usual quantity, its proportion to the blood corpuscles is less than in health: the quantity of corpuscles is either absolutely increased or their proportion to the fibrin is larger than in healthy blood; the quantity of solid constituents is also frequently larger than in health. Such is the condition of the blood in fevers, hemorrhages, and polyæmia. —Simon.

HYPNÆSTHESIS, Somnolency.

HYPNIA'TER, (F.) Hypniatre, from 'υπνος, 'sleep,' and ιατρος, 'a physician.' A name given to deluded or designing persons who have affirmed that they were able, during their 'magnetic sleep,' to diagnosticate disease and its appropriate treatment.

HYPNIC, Hyp'nicus, from 'υπνος, 'sleep.' An agent that affects sleep. — Pereira.

HYPNOBATASIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATES, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBATESIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATIA, Somnambulism.

HYPNO'DES, 'υπνωδης, from 'υπο, 'under,' and 'υπνος, 'sleep.' One in a state of slumber or somnolency.

HYPNODIA, Somnolency.

HYPNOLOG''ICA, Hypnolog''icē. The part of hygiene which treats of sleep.

HYPNOL'OGY, Hypnolog''ia, from 'υπνος, and λογος, 'a discourse.' Same etymon. A treatise on sleep. The doctrine of sleep.

HYPNONERGIA, Somnambulism.

HYPNOPOEUS, Somniferous.

HYPNOS, Sleep.

HYPNOSIS BIOMAGNETICA, Sleep, magnetic.

HYPNOTIC, Somniferous.

HYPNOTISM, Somnambulism, magnetic; see Magnetism, animal.

HYPNOTIZED, see Mesmerized.

HYPO, 'υπο, 'under,' 'sub.' In composition.

HYPO, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOÆMA, Ecchymoma.

HYPOÆMIA, Ecchymoma.

HYPOBLEPH'ARUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid.' Tumefaction under one or both eyelids. Also, an artificial eye, placed under the eyelids.

HYPOCAPNISMA, Suffimentum.

HYPOCAPNISMUS, Fumigation.

HYPOCARO'DES, Subsopora'tus, from 'υπο, 'under,' and καρος, 'a heavy sleep.' One who is in a state approaching carus. — Hippocrates.

HYPOCATHAR'SIS, from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and καθαρσις, 'purgation.' Too feeble purgation. A word opposed to hypercatharsis.

HYPOCATHARTICUS, Laxative.

HYPOCAUS'TUM, from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and καιω, 'I burn.' A name given to a stove, or any such contrivance, to sweat in. Also, a furnace in any subterraneous place, used for heating baths: — 'υποκαυστον, Balnea'rium, Vapora'rium.

HYPOCEPHALÆ'UM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A pillow for the head.

HYPOCERCHA'LEON, from 'υπο, and κερχαλεος, 'hoarse.' Roughness of the fauces affecting the voice. — Hippocrates.

HYPOCHLORETUM SULPHUROSUM, Sulphur, chloride of.

HYPOCHLOROM'ELAS, sub-pal'lidē ni'gricans, from 'υπο, χλωρος, 'green,' and μελας, 'black.' A term applied to one whose skin is pale, with a blackish hue. — Hippocr., Galen.

HYPOCHOILION, Abdomen.

HY'POCHONDRE, Hypochon'drium, Subcartilagin'eum, Re'gio Hypochondri'aca, Hypochon'driac Region, from 'υπο, 'under,' and χονδρος, 'a cartilage.' Each lateral and superior region of the abdomen is so called, because it is bounded by the cartilaginous margin of the false ribs, which forms the base of the chest. There is a right and a left hypochondrium.

HYPOCHON'DRIAC, Hypochondri'acus, Hypochondri'acal, Va'poury, Va'pourish, (F.) Hypochondriaque. Same etymon. Belonging to hypochondriasis. One labouring under hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIACISMUS, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIALGIA, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIAQUE, Hypochondriac.

HYPOCHONDRI'ASIS. Same etymon. Alu'sia hypochondriasis, Morbus hypochondri'acus, M. Resiccato'rius, M. Ructuo'sus, Malum hypochondri'acum, Hallucina'tio hypochondriasis, Hypochondriacis'mus, Hypochondricis'mus, Dyspep'sia hypochondriasis, Pas'sio hypochondriaca, Affec'tio hypochondriaca, Anathymi'asis, Hypercine'sis gastrica, Splenes, Melancholia nervea, M. flatuo'sa, M. hypochondri'aca, Suffoca'tio hypochondri'aca, Morbus flatuo'sus, M. erudito'rum, Fomes ventric'uli, Hypochondrism, Hypo, Spleen, Vapours, English Malady, Low Spirits, (F.) Hypochondrie, Maladie imaginaire, Maladie Anglaise, Affection vaporeuse, Vapeurs. This disease is probably so called, from the circumstance of some hypochondriacs having felt an uneasy sensation in the hypochondriac regions. The disease seems really to be, as Pinel has classed it, a species of neurosis, and of mental alienation, which is observed in persons who in other respects are of sound judgment, but who reason erroneously on whatever concerns their own health. Hypochondriasis is characterized by disordered digestion, without fever or local lesion; flatulence; borborygmi; extreme increase of sensibility; palpitations; illusions of the senses; a succession of morbid feelings, which appear to simulate the greater part of diseases; panics; exaggerated uneasiness of various kinds; chiefly in what regards the health, &c. Indigestion has usually been considered the cause of hypochondriasis. They are, unquestionably, much connected with each other: but there is every reason to believe, that the seat of the affection is really, though functionally, in the brain. The disease almost always appears at the adult age; most commonly in irritable individuals; and, in those exhausted, or rather in the habit of being exhausted, by mental labour, overwhelmed with domestic or public affairs, &c.

The treatment is almost entirely moral. The condition of the digestive function must, however, be accurately attended to.

HYPOCHONDRICISMUS, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRISM, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHOREMA, Excrement.

HYPOCHORESIS, Dejection, Defecation, Excrement.

HYPOCHORETICUS, Cathartic.

HYPOCHYMA, Cataract.

HYPOCHYROSIS, Baryecoia.

HYPOCHYSIS HÆMATODES, Hæmophthalmia.

HYPOCISTIS, Cytinus.

HYPOCLEP'TICUM, from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and κλεπτω, 'I steal.' A chymical vessel, formerly used for separating oil from water.

HYPOCŒLIS, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCŒLIUM, Abdomen.

HYPOCŒLUM, Hypocoilon, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCOI'LON, Hypocœ'lon, Hypocœ'lum, Hypoc'ylum, from 'υπο, 'under,' and κοιλον, 'a cavity.' A cavity situate under the lower eyelid. The lower eyelid itself.

HYPOCOPHOSIS, Baryecoia, Deafness.

HYPOCRA'NIUM (Apostema), from 'υπο, 'under,' and κρανιον, 'the cranium.' A collection of pus between the cranium and dura mater.

HYPOCYLUM, Hypocoilon, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCYSTEOTOMIA, see Lithotomy.

HYPODERIS, Epideris.

HYPODERMAT'OMY, Hypodermatom'ia, from 'υπο, 'under,' δερμα, 'the skin,' and τομη, 'incision.' The section of subcutaneous parts, as of tendons and muscles.

HYPODERMIS, Clitoris, Epideris.

HYPODERRHIS, Epideris.

HYPODESMA, Bandage.

HYPODYNAMIC, Adynamic.

HYPODYN'IA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Dolor mitis seu lenis. A slight pain.

HYPOGALA, Hypopyon.

HYPOGASTRAL'GIA, from 'υπογαστριον, 'the hypogastrium,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the hypogastrium.

HYPOGAS'TRIC, Hypogas'tricus. Relating or belonging to the hypogastrium.

Hypogastric Artery, A. Ili'aca inter'na, A. Ili'aca poste'rior, A. pelvienne—(Ch.), is the more internal of the two branches into which the primary iliac divides. It descends into the cavity of the pelvis, and gives off a considerable number of branches, which arise, at times, separately; at others, by common trunks. These branches are, 1. The posterior, i. e. the ilio-lumbar arteries, lateral, sacral, and gluteal. 2. The anterior, i. e. the umbilical, vesical, and obturator. 3. The internal, the middle hemorrhoidal arteries, uterine, and vaginal in women. 4. The inferior, i. e. the ischiatic arteries, and internal pudic.

Hypogas'tric Gan'glion. A large nervous ganglion, described by Dr. Robt. Lee as seated on each side of the cervix uteri, immediately behind the ureter; which receives the greater number of the nerves of the hypogastric and sacral plexuses, and distributes branches to the uterus, vagina, bladder, and rectum.

Hypogastric Operation of Lithotomy, (F.) Taille hypogastrique. The high operation, or that practised above the pubes.

Hypogastric Plexus, Plexus sous-mésentérique of Winslow, is situate at the lateral and posterior parts of the rectum and the bas fond of the bladder. It is formed by the sacral nerves and the inferior mesenteric plexus, and gives off numerous filaments, which accompany the arteries that pass to the rectum and genital organs.

Hypogastric Vein furnishes nearly the same branches.

HYPOGASTRION, Abdomen, Hypogastrium.

HYPOGAS'TRIUM, Hypogas'trion, from 'υπο, 'under,' and γαστηρ, 'the stomach or belly;' Etron, ητρον. Venter imus, V. parvus, Aqualic'ulus, Sumen, Rumen. The lower part of the abdomen. The Hypogastric region, Re'gio hypogas'trica seu hypogas'tria, which extends as high as three fingers' breadth beneath the umbilicus, is divided into three secondary regions — one middle or pubic, and two lateral or inguinal.

HYPOGASTROCE'LĒ, from 'υπο, 'under,' γαστηρ, 'the stomach or belly,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia in the hypogastric region, occurring through the separated fibres of the lower part of the linea alba. See Hernia, hypogastric.

HYPOGASTRODID'YMUS, Did'ymus Symphyohypogas'tricus, Ischiopa'ges, from 'υπο, 'under,' γαστηρ, 'the belly,' and διδυμος, 'a twin.' A monstrosity in which twins are united by the hypogastrium.—Gurlt.

HYPOGASTRORIXIS, Eventration.

HYPOGLOSSA, Hypoglottides.

HYPOGLOSSIA, Hypoglottides.

HYPOGLOSSIADENI'TIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' γλωσσα, 'tongue,' αδην, 'a gland,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflamma'tio glandula'rum sublingua'lium. Inflammation of the sublingual gland.

HYPOGLOSSIDIA, Hypoglottides.

HYPOGLOSSIS, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSIUM, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSUM, Ruscus hypoglossum, Ranula.

HYPOGLOS'SUS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' That which is under the tongue.

Hypoglossus, Hypoglossal Nerve, Nerf Hypoglosse ou Grand Hypoglosse, Hypoglossien (Ch.), Lingual N., Gustatory N., Lingua'lis Me'dius, is the ninth pair of nerves of many anatomists. It arises by ten or twelve very fine filaments from the grooves, which separate the corpora pyramidalia from the C. olivaria; issues from the cranium by the foramen condyloideum anterius; and divides, near the angle of the jaw, into two branches; the one, the cervica'lis descendens or descen'dens noni. It forms, with the cervical plexus, a large anastomotic arch, and furnishes branches to several of the muscles of the neck. The other, the lingual branch, is the continuation of the principal trunk, and gives its numerous filaments to the muscles of the tongue and pharynx. The ninth pair communicates motion to the muscles to which it is distributed.

HYPOGLOTTIA, Hypoglottides.

HYPOGLOTT'IDES, (PILULÆ,) Hypoglos'sia, Hypoglot'tia, Hypoglos'sa, Hypoglot'ta, Hypoglossid'ia, Pil'ulæ sublingua'les. Pills placed under the tongue to dissolve there.

HYPOGLOTTIS, Ranula.

HYPOGLU'TIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and γλουτος, 'the nates.' The lower and projecting part of the nates. — Gorræus.

HYPOGNATHADEN, Submaxillary gland.

HYPOGNATHADENI'TIS, Hyposialadeni'tis, from hypognathaden, the submaxillary gland, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the submaxillary gland.

HYPOLEPSIOMANIA, Melancholy.

HYPO'MIA, from 'υπο, 'under, and ωμος, 'the shoulder.' The projecting part of the shoulder.—Castelli, Galen.

Hypomia, Axilla.

HYPOMNESIS, Memory.

HYPONARTHÉCIE, Hyponarthe'cia, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ναρθηξ, 'a splint.' A term used by M. Mayor for his mode of treating fractures by position only, — the limb resting upon a properly cushioned board or splint.

HYPONEU'RIA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Morbidly diminished nervous energy.

HYPON'OMOS, Ulcus subtus depas'cens, from 'υπο, 'under,' and νεμω, 'I feed.' A deep fistula or ulcer.

HYPON'YCHON, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ονυξ, 'the nail.' Ecchymo'ma Hyponychon. Effusion of blood under a nail.

HYPOPATHI'A, Subaffec'tio, from 'υπο, 'under,' and παθος, 'disease.' A disease of a slight character.

HYPOPATUS, Dejectio.

HYPOPE'DIUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and πους, 'the foot.' A cataplasm for the sole of the foot.

HYPOPH'ASIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and φαινω, 'I appear.' The state of the eyes in which the white only is seen through the opening of the eyelids. — Hippocrates.

HYPOPHLEGMASIA, Subinflammatio.

HYPOPH'ORA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and φερω, 'I carry;' Ulcus sinuo'sum seu fistulo'sum. A fistulous ulcer. — Galen. A dejection.

HYPOPHTHALMIA, Hypopyon.

HYPOPHTHAL'MION, from ὑπο, 'under,' and οφθαλμος, 'the eye.' That part under the eye where œdema generally commences in chronic diseases and in cachexia. — Hippocrates.

HYPOPHYSIS, Cataract, Epigone — h. Cerebri, Pituitary gland.

HYPOP'ITYS LANUGINO'SA, American Pine-sap, False Beech-drops, Birds' Nest. Indigenous; flowering from June to August. Order, Ericaceæ. Used as a nervine in the form of the powdered root.

HYPO'PIUM, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ωψ, 'eye.' The part of the face under the eye: — a black eye.

HYPOPIUM Os, Malæ os.

HYPOPLASMA, Hypinosis.

HYPOPLASTÆ'MA, from ὑπο, 'under,' πλαστικος, 'formative,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Diminished plasticity of the blood.

HYPOPLEURIUS, Pleura.

HYPOPO'DIA, Supplanta'lia, Suppeda'nea, from ὑπο, 'under,' and πους, 'the foot.' Remedies, as sinapisms, which are applied under the foot.

HYPOP'YON, Hypop'yum, Hypophthal'mia, Pyophthal'mia, Empye'sis seu Diapye'sis Oc'uli, Oc'ulus purulen'tus, Lunella, Hypog'ala, Hypopyum lac'teum, Pyo'sis, Abscessus Oc'uli, Parop'sis Staphylo'ma purulentum; from ὑπο, 'under,' and πυον, 'pus;' because the pus is under the cornea. This name has been given to small abscesses between the laminæ of the cornea, as well as to different purulent collections in the chambers of the eye; hence, some pathologists have distinguished Hypop'yon of the chambers from Hypop'yon of the Cor'nea. In abscesses of the chambers, the purulent matter is mixed with the aqueous humour, which it renders turbid; and is deposited particularly at the lower part of the eye; forming behind the cornea a kind of whitish crescent, that rises more or less before the pupil, and closes it entirely or in part. It requires the use of local and general antiphlogistics, and sorbefacients. At times, it is necessary to puncture the cornea and evacuate the pus.

HYPOPYUM LACTEUM, Hypopyon.

HYPORIN'ION, Hyporrhin'ium, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ριν, 'the nose.' That part of the beard which grows beneath the nose. The mustaches. Also, the upper lip.

HYPORRHYSIS, Defluxion, Prolapsus.

HYPOSA'PRUS, Subputris, Putres'cens. Growing putrid. Slightly putrid.

HYPOSAR'CA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' Hyposarcid'ius, Anasarca. In Linné's and in Cullen's Nosology, it is synonymous with Physconia.

HYPOSARCIDIUS, Anasarca, Hyposarca.

HYPOSARCO'SIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σαρκωσις, 'a fleshy growth.' A small, fleshy growth: — a wart.

HYPOSIAGONARTHRI'TIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' σιαγων, 'the jawbone,' αρθρον, 'a joint,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation; Inflamma'tio artic'uli maxil'læ inferio'ris. Inflammation of the joint of the lower jaw.

HYPOSIALADENITIS, Hypognathadenitis.

HYPOSPA'DIA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σπαω, 'I draw.' A malformation, in which the canal of the urethra, instead of opening at the apex of the glans, terminates at its base, or beneath the penis, at a greater or less distance from the symphysis pubis. When the orifice of the urethra is very near the root of the penis, the scrotum is divided, as it were, into two great labia; and this malformation has often been taken for a case of hermaphrodism. Hypospadias is ordinarily incurable; and an idea has been entertained that it is the cause of impotence. It is not exactly so; but it renders impregnation less probable.

HYPOSPA'DIAS, Hypospadiæ'us, Hypospad'icus. One affected with hypospadia.

HYPOSPHAG'MA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σφαζω, 'I kill.' The coagulated blood, which is collected when an animal is killed and used for food. Also, an effusion of blood, especially under the conjunctiva.

HYPOSPHAGMA, Hæmophthalmia.

HYPOSTAPHYLE, Staphylœdema.

HYPOSTAPHYLITIS, Staphylœdema.

HYPOS'TASES, from ὑπο, 'under,' and στασις, 'the act of placing.' Morbid depositions in the body.

HYPOSTASIS, Sediment.

HYPOSTAT'IC, Hypostat'icus, from ὑπο, 'under,' and στασις, 'stagnation.' Relating to hypostases, sediments or depositions.

HYPOSTATIC HYPERÆ'MIA. A congestion of blood in the vessels of a part caused by its depending position.

HYPOSTEMA, Sediment.

HYPOSTHENIC, Contrastimulant.

HYPOS'TROPHE, ὑποστροφη, 'change of position,' from ὑπο, and στρεφω, 'I turn.' Act of a patient turning himself. Also, a relapse or return of a disease. — Hippoc., Foësius.

HYPOSYPH'ILIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and Syphilis. A mild form of syphilis.

HYPOTH'ENAR, Sub'vola, from ὑπο, 'under,' and θεναρ, 'the palm of the hand or sole of the foot.' Hypothenar Eminence. The fleshy projection of the palmar surface of the hand, which corresponds with the little finger, and is supported by the fifth metacarpal bone. This eminence is formed of four muscles: the Palmaris brevis, Adductor minimi digiti, Flexor brevis minimi digiti, and Opponens minimi digiti. The name Hypothenar has also been given to different muscles of the hand. The Hypothenar min'imi digiti of Riolan comprehended the Abductor, Flexor brevis and Opponens minimi digiti; and his muscle, Hypothenar pol'licis, corresponded to the Abductor, and a portion of the Flexor brevis pollicis. Winslow called muscle petit hypothénar ou hypothénar du petit doigt, the Adductor minimi digiti.

HYPOTHENAR MINIMI DIGITI, Flexor parvus minimi digiti — h. Minor metacarpeus, Abductor minimi digiti — h. Riolani, Flexor parvus minimi digiti.

HYPOTHETON, Suppository.

HYPOTHYMIAMA, Fumigation.

HYPOTHYMIASIS, Fumigation.

HYPO'TIUM, (Emplastrum;) from ὑπο, 'under,' and ους, 'the ear.' Emplastrum auricula'rē; a plaster applied behind or under the ear.

HYPOTROPE, Relapse.

HYPOTROPH'IA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Scanty nourishment, or nutrition.

HYPOTROPIASMUS, Relapse.

HYPOTRYGUS, Feculent.

HYPOUTRION, Abdomen.

HYPOX'YS EREC'TA, Stargrass; indigenous; Order, Amaryllidaceæ. The root is eaten, and has been used as a vulnerary; and in chronic ulcers and agues.

HYPOZO'MA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ζωννυμι, 'I bind round;' Membrana succin'gens. A membrane or septum, as the mediastinum, diaphragm, &c.

HYPPOCRAS, Claret.

HYPSELOGLOSSUS, Basioglossus.

HYPSILODES, OS, Hyoides, os.

HYPSILOGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYPSOPHO'NUS, from ὑψος, 'high,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a clear loud voice.

HYPSOSIS, Sublimation.

HYPTIASMA, Supination.

HYPTIAS'MOS, from ὑπτιαζω, 'I lie with the face upwards.' Lying in a supine posture. Also, inversion of the stomach, as in nausea, regurgitation, or vomiting.—Hippocr., Galen.

HYPU'LUS, from ὑπο, and ουλη, 'cicatrix.' Imperfectly cicatrized.

Ulcera Hypu'la. Ulcers healed at the top, but not at the bottom.

HYRA'CEUM. A substance found in the Cape Colony, which Thunberg and other travellers mistook for a kind of bitumen; but, according to Dr. Pappe, it is obtained from the urine of the Klipdas or Hyrax Capensis, which, when passed, is thick and of a glutinous nature. The animal is in the habit of evacuating the urine at one spot, where its aqueous parts evaporate in the sun—the more tenacious adhering to the rock and hardening.

In smell, and medical properties, it most resembles castor, which, according to Dr. Pappe, it may replace. It is used by the Cape farmers in nervous and spasmodic affections.

HYRAX CAPENSIS, see Hyraceum.

HYRTOCHEILIDES, Labia pudendi.

HYSSOP, Hyssopus—h. Hedge, Gratiola officinalis.

HYSSOPI'TES. Ancient name of a wine, of which hyssop was the chief ingredient, and which Dioscorides extolled in chronic inflammation of the chest. It was regarded as diuretic and emmenagogue.

HYSSO'PUS, from the Hebr. Azob, Cassi'la, Hyssopus officina'lis, Common hyssop. It has been chiefly used as an aromatic, stimulant, and pectoral, in the form of infusion.

HYSTERA, ὑστερα, ὑστερη, 'the uterus.' Hence:

HYSTERA, Secundines.

HYSTERAL'GIA, Hysterodyn'ia, (F.) Fortraiture, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the uterus. Irritable uterus, (F.) Névralgie de l'uterus. Hippocrates uses the epithet Hysteral'ges, υστεραλγης, for any thing that excites uterine pain; and, especially, for vinegar.

HYSTERALGIA CATARRHALIS, Metrorrheuma—h. Galactica, Phlegmatia alba dolens—h. Lochialis, Dyslochia—h. Rheumatica, Metrorrheuma.

HYSTERATRE'SIA, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and ατρητος, 'imperforate.' Imperforation of the os uteri.

HYSTERELCO'SIS, from ὑστερα, 'uterus,' and ἑλκος, 'an ulcer.' Ul'teri exulcera'tio, Ul'teri ulcus. Ulceration of the uterus.

HYSTERELOSIS, Hysteroloxia.

HYSTEREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

HYSTE'RIA, H. vaga, Hystericis'mus, Hysterismus, Hysterias, Hysteri'asis, Hysteropathi'a, Hypercinc'sia uteri'na, H. hyste'ria, Uteri adscen'sus, Suffoca'tio hyster'ica, S. uteri'na, S. Mulie'rum, Asthma u'teri, Præfoca'tio matri'cis seu uteri'na, Syspa'sia hysteria, Malum hyster'icum, M. hystericohypochondri'acum, Vapo'res uteri'ni, Affec'tio hyster'ica, Passio hysterica, Morbus hyster'icus, Strangula'tio uteri'na, S. Vulvæ, Vapours, Hyster'ics, Hysteric fit, (F.) Hystérie, Mal de Mère, Maladie imaginaire, Passion hystérique, Suffocation utérine, Etranglement, Épilepsie utérine, Vapeurs, Maux de Nerfs, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus.' A species of neurosis, classed amongst the spasmi by Sauvages and Cullen, and in the Névroses de la génération, by Pinel. It received the name of hysteria, because it was reputed to have its seat in the uterus. It generally occurs in paroxysms; the principal characters of which consist in alternate fits of laughing and crying, with a sensation as if a ball set out from the uterus and ascended towards the stomach, chest, and neck, producing a sense of strangulation. If the attack be violent, there is, sometimes, loss of consciousness (although the presence of consciousness generally distinguishes it from epilepsy) and convulsions. The duration of the attacks is very variable. It appears to be dependent upon irregularity of nervous distribution in very impressible persons, and is not confined to the female; for well marked cases of hysteria are occasionally met with in men. During the fit,—dashing cold water on the face; stimulants applied to the nose or exhibited internally, and antispasmodics form the therapeutical agents. Exercise, tranquillity of mind, amusing and agreeable occupations constitute the prophylactics. See Mania, dancing.

HYSTERIA CATALEPTICA, Catalepsy—h. Vaga, Hysteria.

HYSTERIAS, Hysteria.

HYSTERIASIS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICA, see Hysterical.

HYSTERICAL, Hyster'icus, Va'pourish, Va'pouring, (F.) Hyste'rique. Same etymon as hysterical. Relating to, or affected with hysteria.

The word hysterica was used by Martial for a female affected with nymphomania or with strong sexual desires.

HYSTERICISMUS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICS, Hysteria.

HYSTÉRIE, Hysteria.

HYSTERISMUS, Hysteria.

HYSTERITES, Hydrometra.

HYSTERITIS, Metritis, Hydrometra.

HYSTEROCARCINOMA, Metrocarcinoma.

HYSTEROCE'LE, from ὑστερα, 'the womb,' and κηλη, 'hernia.' Hernia uteri, Hernia of the womb. This is a rare disease. The womb may protrude through the inguinal or the crural canal, or through the lower part of the linea alba.

HYSTEROCELE NUDA, Prolapsus uteri.

HYSTEROCOLICA, Colica uterina.

HYSTEROCNES'MUS; from ὑστερα, 'uterus,' and κνησμος, 'itching.' Pruritus of the uterus or genitals.

HYSTEROCYESIS, Pregnancy.

HYSTERO-CYSTIC, Hys'terocys'ticus, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and κυστις, 'the bladder.' Relating to the uterus and bladder. Some authors have called Hystero-cystic Retention of urine, that which is caused by the compression of the bladder by the uterus, during pregnancy.

HYSTERO-CYSTOCE'LE, from ὑστερα, 'the womb,' κυστις, 'the bladder,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia of the uterus complicated with displacement of the bladder.

HYSTERODYNIA, Hysteralgia.

HYSTERŒDEMA, Hydrometra.

HYS'TEROID, Hystero'des, Hysteroi'des, from 'hysteria,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling hysteria;—as a hysteroid disease, symptom, &c.

HYSTEROL'OGY, Hysterolog''ia, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the sound and morbid uterus.

HYSTEROLOX'IA, Hysterelo'sis, Oliq'uitas u'teri, Situs obli'quus uteri, Flexio seu Versio incomple'ta uteri, Inclina'tio uteri, Metrolox'ia, Metrocamps'is, Uterus obli'quus, U. Inclina'tus; from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and λοξος, 'oblique.' An oblique position of the uterus, occurring during pregnancy. Anteversion of the uterus, Hysterolox'ia anterior, Anteversio uteri, Prona'tio uteri, Venter propendens; and Retroversion of the uterus, Hysterolox'ia posterior, Retrover'sio uteri, Reflex'io uteri completa, are varieties.

HYSTEROMALA'CIA, Hysteromalaco'sis, Hysteromalaco'ma, Metromalaco'sis, Metromalaco'ma, Malaco'sis uteri, Emollit''ies uteri morbosa, Putrescen'tia u'teri grav'idi, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and μαλακια, 'softness.' Softness of the uterus during pregnancy, which renders it liable to rupture in labour.

HYSTEROMALACOMA, Hysteromalacia.

HYSTEROMANIA, Nymphomania.

HYSTEROMOCHLIUM, Lever.

HYSTERON'CUS, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and ογκος, 'tumour.' Tumor uteri. A tumour of the uterus.

HYSTERO-PARAL'YSIS, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and παραλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the uterus.

HYSTEROPATHI'A, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and παθος, 'suffering.' Disease or suffering in the uterus. Also, hysteria, and deuteropathia.

HYSTEROPHYSE, Physometra.

HYSTEROPH'YSIS, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and φυση, 'wind.' Distention of the uterus with air; Emphysema uteri.

HYSTEROPLEGIA, Hysteroparalysis.

HYSTEROPOLYPUS, Metropolypus.

HYSTEROPSOPHIA, Physometra.

HYSTEROPTO'SIS, from ὑστερα, 'the womb,' and πτωσις, 'fall;' Prolapsus uteri. Also Inversio uteri, Anas'trophē uteri. In a general sense, a protrusion of any of the genital organs or of excrescences from them into the genital passages; Ædoptosis.

HYSTEROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri—h. Vaginæ prolapsus, Prolapsus vaginæ.

HYSTERORRHAGIA SANGUINEA, Metorrhagia.

HYSTERORRHEXIS, Uterus, rupture of the.

HYSTERORRHŒA, Metrorrhagia—h. Mucosa, Leucorrhœa.

HYSTEROSALPINX, Tube, Fallopian.

HYSTEROSCIRRHUS, Metroscirrhus.

HYS'TEROSCOPE, from ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and σκοπεω, 'I view.' A metallic mirror, used in inspecting the state of the os uteri for throwing the rays of a taper to the bottom of the speculum uteri.—Colombat de l'Isère.

HYSTEROSTOMA, Os uteri.

HYSTEROSTOMAT'OMUS, from ὑστερα, 'the womb,' στομα, 'orifice,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' An instrument invented by Coutouly for dividing the os uteri, when it is important to deliver immediately, as in cases of convulsions.

HYSTEROSTOMIUM, Os uteri.

HYSTEROTOM'IA, Hysterot'omy. Same etymon as Hysterotomus. Cæsarean section. Also, dissection of the uterus.

HYSTEROTOMOTOCIA, Cæsarean section.

HYSTEROT'OMUS, from ὑστερα, 'the womb,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' An instrument for dividing the womb through the vagina. It is a kind of Bistouri caché, and is intended to divide the cervix uteri.

HYSTREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

HYSTRIASIS, Hystriciasis.

HYSTRICI'ASIS, Hystri'asis, Hys'trix, Hystricis'mus, Cerostro'sis, Tricho'sis seto'sa, from ὑστριξ, 'a hedgehog or porcupine.' A disease of the hairs, in which they stand erect like the quills of the porcupine.

HYSTRICISMUS, Hystriciacis.

HYSTRIX, Hystriciasis.

HYVES, Hives.

IATERIUS, Medicinal.

IATRALEIP'TICĒ, Iatraliptice (Ars), Iatraleiptic method; same etymon. The method of treating diseases adopted by the Iatraleiptes,—that is, by friction chiefly.

IATRALEP'TES, Iatraleip'tes, Iatralip'ta, Iatroleip'tes, Med'icus Unguenta'rius; from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and αλειφω, 'I anoint.' One who treats diseases by unguents, frictions, and by external means generally. Prodicus, a disciple of Æsculapius, was the chief of the Iatraleptes.

IATRALIPTES, Iatraleiptes.

IATRALIPTICE, Iatraleiptice.

IATREUSIOLOG''IA, from ιατρευσις, 'the exercise of the art of healing,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of the exercise of the healing art.—Reil.

IATREUSIS. The exercise of the healing art.

IATRIA, Medicine.

IATRICE, Medicina.

IATRI'NĒ, Medicina. Also, a female practitioner of medicine; a midwife.

IATRI'ON, Iatre'on, Iātron. The house or office of a physician or surgeon. Also, the physician's fee or honorarium.

IATROCHEMIA, Chymiatria.

IATROCHYMIA, Chymiatria.

IATROGNOM'ICA, Iatrognom'icē; from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and γινωσκω, 'I know.' A knowledge of medical objects.—Hufeland.

IATROLEIPTES, Iatraleiptes.

IATROLOG''IA, Iatrol'ogy, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on physic and physicians.

IATRO-MATHEMATICAL PHYSICIANS, Iatromathemat'ici. Mechanical physicians.

IATROMECHANICI, Mechanical physicians.

IATRON, Iatrion.

IATROPHYSICS, Physics, medical.

IATROSOPHIS'TA, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and σοφιστης, 'one skilled in an art or science.' A learned, or theoretically educated physician.

IATROTECH'NA, Iatrotech'nes; from ιατρος,

'a physician,' and τεχνη, 'art.' A practical physician or surgeon.

IATROTECHNICE, Medicina, Therapeutics.

IATRUS, Physician; also, a surgeon.

IBERIS, Lepidium iberis.

IBE'RIS AMA'RA, Bitter candytuft, (F.) Passerage. A small herbaceous plant, Ord. Cruciferæ, indigenous in Europe, which was employed, of old, in gout, rheumatism, &c. The seeds have been used, in the dose of one to three grains, in asthma, bronchitis, dropsy, and hypertrophy of the heart. It is said to possess acro-narcotic properties; but it is not much used.

IBERIS BURSA PASTORIS, Thlaspi bursa — i. Campestris, Thlaspi campestre — i. Sophia, Cardamine pratensis.

IBICUIBA, Becuiba, Becuiba nux. A species of nut from Brazil, the emulsive kernel of which is ranked amongst balsamic remedies.

IBIS, ιβις. A bird held sacred by the Egyptians. When sick, it is asserted that it was wont to inject the water of the Nile into its fundament: whence, according to Langius, was learned the use of glysters.

IBISCHA MISMALVA, Althæa.

IBISCUS, Althæa.

IBIXUMA, Saponaria.

ICE, Sax. ir, Gla'cies, Frozen water, (F.) Glace. Iced water is much used internally, as the best refrigerant in fever. It is, also, applied externally, in cases of external inflammation, as well as in phrenitic and hernial affections, &c.

ICE-COLD, Icy cold, (F.) Froid glacial. A very strong morbid sensation of cold, compared by the patient to that which would be produced by the application of pieces of ice.

ICELAND, MINERAL WATERS OF. Hot springs are found in every part of Iceland. The most noted of these is one called Geyser, two days' journey from Hecla, and near Skalholt. The diameter of the basin is 59 feet; and the height to which the water is thrown is often more than 100. The heat of the water is 212°.

ICE-PLANT, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum, Monotropa uniflora.

ICHNUS, ιχνος. The foot. The sole of the foot. The heel.

ICHOR, ιχωρ, Ichos. The serum of the blood, Sanies, Sordes, Virus, Pus malig'num, Tabum. A thin, aqueous, and acrid discharge.

ICHOROIDES, Ichorous.

ICH'OROUS, Ichoro'sus, Ichoroï'des, Sanio'sus, Sa'nious. Belonging to or resembling ichor.

ICHTHYA, Hook, blunt.

ICHTHYOCOL'LA, from ιχθυς, 'a fish,' and κολλα, 'glue.' Colla Pis'cium, Isinglass, Fish-glue, (F.) Ichthyocolle, Colle de Poisson. A name given to the dried fish-bladder of the Acipenser huso, and other species of acipenser, which is almost wholly composed of gelatin, and is employed in medicine in the formation of nutritive jellies. It is, also, occasionally used in anatomical injections. The English Court Plaster is made with it.

ICHTHYOPH'AGISTS, Ichthyoph'agi, from ιχθυς, 'a fish,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' People who feed habitually on fish;—generally the most uncivilized of mankind.

ICHTHYOPHAGOUS, Piscivorous.

ICHTHYOSE, Ichthyosis.

ICHTHYO'SIS, from ιχθυς, 'a fish,' from the resemblance of the scales to those of a fish. Lepido'sis Ichthyi'asis, Lepra Ichthyo'sis, Lepido'sis Ichthyo'sis, Alvaras nigra (Arab.), Impeti'go excorticati'va, (F.) Ichthyose; Fishskin, Porcupine Disease. A permanently harsh, dry, scaly, and, in some cases, almost horny texture of the integuments of the body, unconnected with internal disorder. Willan and Bateman have two varieties, I. simplex and I. cornea. Alibert has three, the I. nacrée or pearly, the I. cornée, and the I. pellagre or Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS PELLAGRA, Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS SEBA'CEA, Seba'ceous Ichthyo'sis. A morbid incrustation of a concrete sebaceous substance upon the surface of the epidermis, confounded, according to Mr. E. Wilson, with ichthyosis, to which it bears a close resemblance. In many cases there is neither redness nor heat, nor is the affection often accompanied by constitutional symptoms.

ICHTHYOTOX'ICUM, from ιχθυς, 'a fish,' and τοξικον, 'a poison.' Fish poison.

I'CICA ARACOUCHI'NI. Aracouchini is a balsam, extracted by incision, from this tree in Guyana. The Galibis use it for healing wounds.

ICICA ICICARIBA, see Amyris elemifera.

ICTÈRE, Icterus — i. Bleu, Cyanopathy — i. des Nouveau-nés, Icterus infantum — i. Noire, Melæna.

ICTERIC FEVER, REMITTING, see Relapse.

ICTERICUS, Antiicteric. Also, relating to, or resembling Icterus,—Ictero'des.

ICTERITIA ALBA, Chlorosis—i. Flava, Icterus—i. Rubea, Erysipelas—i. Rubra, Erysipelas.

ICTERODES, Ictericus.

IC'TERUS, Ic'terus flavus, I. verus, from ικτις, a species of weasel, whose eyes are yellow (?) Morbus arcua'tus vel arqua'tus, Auru'go, Auri'go, Morbus regius, Morbus lute'olus, Cholelith'ia icterus, Cholihæ'mia, Cholæ'mia, Cholopla'nia, Cholo'sis, Dermatocholo'sis, Suffu'sio aurigino'sa seu fellis seu bilis, Icteritia flava, Il'eus flavus, I. Icteroïdes, Cachex'ia icter'ica, Fellis suffu'sio, Fellis obstruc'tio, F. Superfu'sio, Bil'ious Dyscrasy, Jaundice, Yellows, (F.) Ictère, Jaunisse, Bile répandue. A disease, the principal symptom of which is yellowness of the skin and eyes, with white fæces and high-coloured urine. It admits of various causes; in fact, any thing which can directly or indirectly obstruct the course of the bile, so that it is taken into the mass of blood and produces the yellowness of surface; — the bile being separated by the kidneys, causes yellowness of urine, and its being prevented from reaching the intestine occasions the pale-coloured fæces. The prognosis, in ordinary cases, is favourable;—when complicated with hepatic disease, unfavourable. The treatment is simple: — an emetic or purgative, given occasionally so as to elicit the return of the bile to its ordinary channels; light tonics; unirritating diet; cheerful company, &c.

ICTERUS ALBUS, Chlorosis.

ICTERUS INFAN'TUM, I. Neonato'rum, Pædicterus, Auri'go neophyto'rum, Yellow gum, Yellow gown, (F.) Ictère des nouveau-nés, is a common affection and frequently dependent upon obstruction of the choledoch duct by the meconium. It requires time; and castor oil, occasionally.

ICTERUS MELAS, Melæna — i. Neonatorum, I. infantum—i. Niger, Melæna.

ICTERUS SATURNI'NUS, Lead jaundice. The earthy-yellow hue in saturnine cachexy.

ICTODES FŒTIDUS, Dracontium fœtidum.

ICTUS. 'A stroke or blow;' Plegē, Plaga, Ictus solis, a stroke of the sun. See Coup de soleil. Ictus, also, means the pulsation of an artery, and the sting of a bee or other insect.

ICTUS, Blow—i. Cordis et arteriarum, Pulse — i. Sanguinis, Apoplexy—i. Solis, Coup de soleil.

IDE'A, Idea, Ido'lum, Ideach (? Paracelsus) (F.) Idée. The image or representation of an object in the mind; from ειδω, 'I see.'

IDE'A, FIXED or PREDOM'INANT, Idea fixa, Ideopeg'ma. Tension of the mind on one notion; often observed in insanity.

I'DEA MORBI. Knowledge or idea of a disease.
IDEACH, Idea.
IDEAGENOUS, Sentient.
IDE'AL, Idea'lis. Mental, notional, fancied.
Morbi ideales. Ideal diseases. Diseases of the imagination.
IDÉE, Idea.
IDEN'TITY (PERSONAL), Iden'titas, from idem, 'the same.' Sameness. It is sometimes a question in legal medicine to decide upon personal identity: that is, whether an individual be the same he represents himself to be. Physical marks form the great criteria.
IDEOL'OGY, Ideolog''ia, from ειδω, 'I see,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science of ideas. Intellectual philosophy.
IDEOPEGMA, Idea, fixed.
IDÉOSYNCHYSIE, Delirium.
IDIANŒA, Idiotism.
IDIOCRASIS, Idiosyncrasy.
IDIOCTONIA, Suicide.
IDIO-MIASMATA, see Miasm.
IDIOPATHI'A, Idiopathei'a, Protopathi'a, Fro'prius affectus, Morbus idiopath'icus seu proprius seu prima'rius seu protopath'icus seu origina'lis, Malum prima'rium, from ιδιος, 'peculiar, proper,' and παθος, 'an affection.' A primary disease; one not depending on any other.
IDIOPATH'IC, Pro'prio hab'itu seu Constitutio'nē pro'prîâ pendens, Idiopath'icus, Idiop'athes. Primary affections and their symptoms are so denominated.
IDIOPTCY, Achromatopsia.
IDIOPTS, see Achromatopsia.
IDIOSYNCRASIA, Idiosyncrasy—i. Hæmorrhagica, Hæmatophilia—i. Olfactoria, Parosmia.
IDIOSYN'CRASY, Idioc'rasy, Idiosyn'crasis, Idiosyncra'sia, Idiotroph'ia, Idioc'rasis, Idiosyncris'ia, from ιδιος, 'peculiar,' συν, 'with,' and κρασις, 'temperament.' A peculiarity of constitution, in which one person is affected by an agent which, in numerous others, would produce no effect. Thus shell-fish, bitter almonds, produce urticaria in some, by virtue of their idiosyncrasies. Others faint at the sight of blood, &c.
ID'IOT, Idio'ta, 'foolish, stupid, ignorant.' Now used for one who is fatuous, or who does not possess sufficient intellectual faculties for the social condition, and for preserving himself from danger,—Homo fat'uus. In law, one who has been without understanding from his birth, and whom the law presumes to be never likely to attain any.
IDIOTIA, Idiotism.
IDIOTIE, Idiotism.
ID'IOTISM, Idiotis'mus, Idioti'a, Idianœ'a, Imbecil'litas mentis; Mo'ria demens, Anœ'a, Mo'ria, Moro'sis, Meio'sis, Fatu'itas, Amen'tia, Stupid'itas, Vecor'dia, Imbecill'itas Inge'nii, Id'iocy, Id'iotcy, Fatu'ity. (F.) Démence innée, Idiotisme, Idiotie. Same etymon. A species of unsound mind, characterized by more or less complete obliteration of the intellectual and moral faculties. It may supervene on mania and melancholia, when it is termed Demen'tia, but more commonly it depends upon original conformation. It may also, be symptomatic of organic disease of the brain, which has come on after birth. Idiotism exists in various degrees. Some idiots are mere automata, exhibiting scarcely any sensibility to external impressions; others are capable of articulating a few words, and possess certain mental emotions to a limited extent. The physiognomy is usually vacant, step unsteady, and articulation imperfect or broken. The affection is almost always incurable; but it may often be palliated.
IDIOTISME, Idiotism.
IDIOTROPHIA, Idiosyncrasy.
IDOLUM, Hallucination, Idea.
IDROSIS, Ephidrosis.
IF, Taxus baccata.
IFFIDES, Plumbi subcarbonas.
IGDE, Mortar.
IGDIS. Mortar.
IGNA'TIA AMA'RA, Strychnos Igna'tii, Ignatia'na Philippin'ica. The systematic name of the plant which affords St. Ignatius's Bean. Faba Ind'ica, Faba Sancti Igna'tii, Faba febrif''uga, (F.) Ignatie, Fève de Saint Ignace. The seeds are bitter and poisonous, containing Strychnia; which see.
IGNATIE, Ignatia amara.
IGNAVIA, Inertia—i. seu Ignavitas partium genitalium, Impotence.
IGNIS, 'fire.' Hence:
IGNIS ACTUALIS, Cauterium—i. Animalis, Animal heat.
IGNIS CAL'IDUS. 'A hot fire.' A violent inflammation, about to degenerate into gangrene.
IGNIS COLUMELLÆ, Erysipelas.
IGNIS FRIG''IDUS. 'A cold fire.' Sphacelus.
IGNIS NATURALIS, Animal heat.
IGNIS PERSICUS, Anthrax, Herpes zoster—i. Philosophicus, Phosphorus—i. Potentialis, see Cauterium—i. Sacer, Erysipelas, Herpes zoster—i. Sancti Antonii, Erysipelas.
IGNIS SAPIEN'TIUM. The ancient name for the heat of horses' dung.
IGNIS SYLVAT'ICUS, I. sylves'tris, I. volat'icus, I. vola'grius, Stroph'ulus sylves'tris, S. volat'icus, (F.) Feu sauvage, F. volage, Flamboise. Probably, the Porri'go larva'lis or Crusta lactea of infants. Also, a transient redness of the face and neck, sometimes observed in hysterical and chlorotic females.
IGNIS SYLVESTRIS, I. sylvaticus—i. Vitalis, Animal heat—i. Volagrius, I. sylvaticus—i. Volaticus, I. sylvaticus.
IGNIVOROUS, Pyrophagus.
IGNYE, Poples.
IGNYS, Poples.
ILAPHIS, Arctium lappa.
ILEA, Flanks.
ILECH, Y'lech, Ilei'as, Ilias'ter, Ylia'ter, Elias'ter, Ilias'trum, Ilei'ados, Ilei'dos, Ilei'adum, Ili'adus. Terms used by Paracelsus to designate the first matter:—the beginning of every thing.
ILEIADOS, Ilech.
ILEIADUM, Ilech.
ILEIAS, Ilech.
ILEIDOS, Ilech.
ILEĪ'TIS: from ileum, 'the intestine ileum,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ileum.
ILEO-CHOLOSIS, Diarrhœa, bilious.
IL'EO-COLIC, Ileo-col'icus. Relating to the ileum and colon:—as the ileo-colic valve or valve of Bauhin.
ILEO-COLITIS, Enteritis.
ILEO-DICLIDITE, see Typhus.
ILEO-LUMBAR, Ileo-lumba'lis, Ilio-lumba'ris. Belonging to the ilium and lumbar region.
ILEO-LUMBAR ARTERY, Ilio-lumbar artery, Iliaco-mus'cular, (Ch.) is given off by the hypogastric, opposite the base of the sacrum. It ascends behind the psoas muscle, and divides into two branches:—an ascending and a transverse, which give off numerous ramifications to the neighbouring parts.
ILEO-LUMBAR LIGAMENT, Ilio-lumbar Lig'ament, Ilio-lumbo-ver'tebral ligament, Vertebro-iliac ligament, is a broad, membraniform, triangular ligament, extending horizontally from the transverse process of the 5th lumbar vertebræ to the upper and posterior part of the iliac crest. It unites the vertebral column with the pelvis.

IL'EON, Il'eum, Eil'eon, Il'ium, Intesti'num circumvolu'tum, from ειλειν, 'to turn,' 'to twist,' Anatomists have given this name to the longest portion of the small intestine, which extends from the jejunum to the cæcum. It was so called, from its forming a considerable number of convolutions.

ILEOPYRA, see Typhus.

ILEOSIS, Ileus.

ILEO-TYPHUS, see Typhus.

ILES, Flanks.

IL'EUS, Eil'eos, from ειλεω, 'I twist or contract.' Co'lica Ileus, Enterele'sia, Enterelo'sis, Colica spasmod'ica, Ileus spasmod'icus, Chordap'sus, Passio Ili'aca, Iliac Passion, Vol'vulus, Ileo'sis, Misere'rē mei, Convol'vulus, Tormen'tum, Intercep'tio Intestino'rum, Enterosteno'sis volvulus, (F.) Colique de Miséricorde, C. de Miserere. A disease, characterized by deep-seated pain of the abdomen, stercoraceous vomiting, and obstinate constipation. It is occasioned by hernia or other obstruction to the passage of the fæces through a part of the intestinal canal, Enterosto'sis. The term Ileus has been applied to various affections —to simple nervous colic, intussusception, and to strangulation of the small intestine, &c. Various remedies have been employed;—the majority for the purpose of procuring alvine evacuations,—as purgatives, in draught, pill, or glyster; suppositories, tobacco glysters; pure mercury; leaden bullets; antispasmodics and narcotics; blisters to the epigastrium; ice by the mouth, or injected into the rectum. Some of these have, occasionally, succeeded, — especially the tobacco glyster, and ice to the tumour, where the disease has been occasioned by strangulated hernia. It is very dangerous.

ILEUS FLAVUS, Icterus—i. Icteroides, Icterus —i. Inflammatorius, Enteritis.

ILEX AQUIFO'LIUM. The systematic name of the Common Holly, Aquifo'lium, Agrifo'lium, (F.) Houx, H. commun ou Chêne vert. The leaves of this plant have been recommended as tonic, astringent, and antiseptic, and have been prescribed in atonic gout; intermitients; dyspepsia, &c. Il'icine, the active principle, has also been advised. It is obtained by dissolving the alcoholic extract of the leaves of the holly in water, and successively treating it with the subacetate of lead, sulphuric acid, and carbonate of lime. The filtered and evaporated product is then dissolved in alcohol; and the mixture filtered and evaporated in shallow vessels.

ILEX CASSINE, Ilex vomitoria.

ILEX MAJOR. From the berries of this tree, called by the Spaniards Bellotas, a juice may be expressed, which forms a slightly astringent emulsion with water, and has been recommended by some Spanish physicians in humid cough, hæmoptysis, &c.

ILEX MATE, Ilex paraguensis.

ILEX OPA'CA, American Holly, grows throughout the Atlantic portion of the United States. It is said to possess the same properties as the European variety.

ILEX PARAGUEN'SIS, Vibur'num læviga'tum seu Cassinoi'des, Cassi'nē Perag'ua seu Carolinia'na, I. Matē; a native of Paraguay, which affords the celebrated Mattee, or Matē, Folia Apalachines seu Per'aguæ, is drunk in place of the Chinese tea by the people of Paraguay.

ILEX VOMITO'RIA, Ilex Casi'ne, Cassi'na, Dahoon holly, Apalach'inē Gallis, South-Sea Tea, Ev'ergreen Cassi'nē, Cassee'na, Yaupon, Yopon, (F.) Thé des Apalaches, Houx Apalachine, Apalachine, Thé de la Mer du Sud. A tree, indigenous in the southern parts of the United States. The leaves, when dried, are aromatic, stimulant, stomachic, and expectorant, and are used as a tea. When fresh, they are emetic and cathartic.

ILIA, Flanks.

ILIAC, Ili'acus, from Ilia, 'the flanks.' Relating to, or connected with, the flanks.

ILIAC ARTERIES, Arte'riæ Iliacæ. This term has been given to several arteries. The Primary Iliacs, (F.) A. Iliaques primitives,—Pelvicrurales, (Ch.) arise from the bifurcation of the aorta, opposite the body of the 4th lumbar vertebra, and descend, in a divergent manner; until, opposite the sacro-iliac symphysis, they divide into two considerable trunks,—the internal Iliac or hypogastric (which see) and the external Iliac—Portion Iliaque de la crurale, (Ch.) This proceeds from the sacro-iliac juncture as far as the crural arch, when it assumes the name Femoral Artery. Before passing under the arch it gives off two pretty considerable branches, — the Epigastric, and the Circumflexa Ilii. This last, which is called, also, anterior Iliac by some anatomists,— Circonflexe de l'Ilium; (Ch.) leaves the external iliac at the crural arch. It ascends along the outer edge of the iliacus muscle, and divides into two branches—an internal and an external.

The Iliaca Inter'na Minor vel Ilio-lumbal'is is a small artery, which sometimes arises from the hypogastric; at others, from the beginning of the gluteal. It is sent, chiefly, to the psoas and iliacus internus muscles.

ILIAC CREST, Crista Il'ii, is the upper margin of the ilium. (F.) Crête Iliaque. It is very thick, and curved like the Italic S. It affords attachment to the broad muscles of the abdomen.

ILIAC FOSSÆ are two in number; the internal, the depression presented by the ilium on its interior, and at the upper part in which the Iliacus internus is lodged:—and the external, an excavation on the outer surface of the same bone, occupied by the Glutæi musclcs.

ILIAC MUSCLE, INTERNAL, Ili'acus internus Muscle, Iliacus, Iliaco-trochantérien (Ch.); Femur moven'tium sep'timus, Iliac muscle, is situate in the fossa iliaca, and at the anterior and superior part of the thigh. It is broad, radiated, triangular; and is attached, above, to the two upper thirds of the fossa iliaca, and to the internal part of the iliac crest:—below, it terminates by a tendon, which is common to it and the psoas magnus, and is fixed into the lesser trochanter. When this muscle contracts, it bends the pelvis on the thigh, and conversely. It is also a rotator of the thigh outwards, and prevents the trunk from falling backwards.

ILIAC PASSION, Ileus.

ILIAC REGIONS, Regio'nes ili'acæ, Inan'ia, are the sides of the abdomen between the ribs and the hips.

ILIAC SPINES, Spinous Proc''esses of the Ilium, are four in number. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. Of the anterior, one is superior. It bounds the crista ilii anteriorly, and affords origin to the sartorius muscle. The other is inferior, and receives the tendinous origin of the rectus femoris.

The two Posterior Iliac Spines are divided, like the anterior, into superior and inferior. They afford insertion to strong ligaments, which unite the ilium with the sacrum.

ILIACO-TROCHANTÉRIEN, Iliacus internus.

ILIACUS, I. internus—i. Externus, Pyramidalis.

ILIADUS, Ilech.

ILIASTER, Ilech.

ILIASTRUM, Ilech

ILINGOS, Vertigo.

ILIO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Aponévrosi-fémoral, Fascia lata muscle—i. Costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Cresti-tibial, Sartorius—i. Femoral, Coxo-femoral—i. Hypogastricus (nervus), Musculo-cutaneous nerve, superior—i. Inguinal, Musculo-cutaneous nerve, inferior—i. Ischii-trochantérien, Glutæus minimus—i. Lombo-costo-abdominal, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Lumbalis, Ileo-lumbar, see Iliac arteries—i. Lumbi-costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Lumbo-vertebral ligament, Ileo-lumbar ligament.

IL'IO-PECTINEA, belonging to the ilium and to the pecten or pubis.

Ilio-pectineal Eminence is so called from being formed by the junction of the ramus of the ilium with that of the pubis. It affords attachment to the psoas minor.

Ilio-pectinea Linea, Linea innomina'ta, is the projecting line or ridge of the ilium and pubis, which forms part of the brim of the pelvis.

ILIO-PRÉTIBIAL, Sartorius.

Ilio-Psoi'tis, from Ilium, 'the ilion,' ψοας, 'the loins,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ilium and psoas muscle.

ILIO-PUBO-COSTO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus externus abdominis—i. Rotulien, Rectus femoris—i. Sacral, Sacro-iliac—i. Sacral articulation, Sacro-iliac articulation—i. Sacro-femoral, Glutæus major—i. Scrotal nerve, Musculo-cutaneous, superior—i. Trochantérien, Glutæus medius—i. Trochantérien petit, Glutæus minimus.

IL'ION, Il'ium, Il'eum, Haunch bone. The largest of the three bones which constitute the os innominatum in the fœtus and child. It was probably so called from its seeming to support the intestine ilion; or, perhaps, because its crest is curved upon itself, from ειλεω, 'I twist,' 'I roll.' This portion of the os innominatum is usually so called in the adult. The posterior surface is called Dorsum, the internal Venter. The upper semicircular edge is the Crista or Spine, at the anterior part of which is the anterior and superior spinous process; and, below, the anterior and inferior spinous process. At the back part of the spine are two spinous processes, the posterior and superior, and posterior and inferior. See Iliac.

ILITHYI'A, Ειλειθυια, Luci'na, Juno Lucina. The goddess who presided over parturient females, with the Greeks and Romans.

ILIUM, Ileum, Ilion.

ILKESTON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Ilkeston is in Derbyshire, England, about eight miles from Nottingham. The water contains carbonates of lime and soda, chloride of calcium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of soda, carbonic acid, sulphohydric acid, and a little iron.

ILLACHRYMATIO, Epiphora.

ILLECEBRA, Sedum—i. Major, Sedum telephium.

ILLECEBRUM VERMICULARE, Sedum.

ILLEGIT'IMATE, Illegit'imus, from il, in, 'negation or opposition,' and legitimus, 'legitimate;' from lex, legis, 'law.' That which is contrary to law: which has not the conditions required by law,—as an illegitimate birth—one out of wedlock.

Illegitimate or Bastard Fevers are those whose progress is anomalous.

ILLIC''IUM ANISA'TUM, Yellow-flowered Anise, Aniseed Tree, Star Anise, Ani'sum stella'tum, Anisum Sinen'sē, Semen Badian, (F.) Anis de la Chine, A. étoilé, Badiane. Fam. Magnoliaceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia. The seeds are used like the aniseed. The same tree is supposed to furnish the aromatic bark, called Cortex Ani'si Stella'ti, Cortex Lavola.

Illicium Anisatum is said to furnish much of the so called Oil of Anise, used in the United States.

Illicium Florida'num, Florida Anise Tree, Star Anise, Sweet Laurel. An evergreen shrub, the bark, leaves, &c., of which have a spicy odour like anise, and might be used for it.

Illicium Parviflo'rum, a shrub of the hilly regions of Georgia and Carolina, has a flavour closely resembling that of sassafras root.

ILLINITIO, Inunction.

ILLITIO, Inunction.

ILLITUS, Inunction.

ILLOS, Eye, see Strabismus.

ILLO'SIS, Ilo'sis, from ιλλος, 'the eye.' Distortion of the eyes. Strabismus.

IMPETIGINOSITAS, Impetigo.

IMPETI'GO, from impeto, 'I infest.' Impetiginos'itas, Darta, Der'bia, Im'petus, Peti'go, Ecpye'sis impeti'go, Phlysis impeti'go, Lepra squammo'sa, Running Scall or Tetter, Crusted Tetter, Pustular or Humid Tetter, Scall, Cowrap, (F.) Dartre, D. crustacée, D. croûteuse, Lèpre humide, Mélitagre. A word used in various acceptations. With some writers it is synonymous with itch. In others, it means a variety of herpes. Sauvages employs it as a generic term, under which he comprises syphilis, scorbutus, rachitis, elephantiasis, the itch, tinea, scrofula, &c. It forms, also, a genus in the class Cachexiæ of Cullen. In Bateman, it is the first genus of the 5th order, Pustulæ, and is defined — the humid or running tetter; consisting of small pustules, denominated Psydracia. It is unaccompanied by fever; not contagious, or communicable by inoculation. He has five species: — the I. figura'ta, I. sparsa, I. erysipelato'des, I. scab'ida, and I. rodens. See Psoriasis.

Impetigo Excorticativa, Ichthyosis — i. Figurata, Porrigo lupinosa — i. Pellagra, Pellagra — i. Ulcerata, Zerna.

IMPETUM FACIENS, Enormon.

IMPETUS, Impetigo, Paroxysm.

IMPLICATIONES RETICULARES NERVORUM, Plexus nervorum.

IMPLIC''ITI MORBI, Implica'ti seu complica'ti Morbi. Diseases, which exist in an organ; and produce, concurrently, disorders in other organs.

IMPLUVIUM, Embrocation, Bath, shower.

IMPOSTHUME, Abscess.

IM'POTENCE, Acrati'a, Impoten'tia, I. generan'di, Agenne'sia, Agen'nesis, Igna'via seu Ignav'itas partium genita'lium, (F.) Impuissance; from im, 'priv.,' and potens, 'able.' Loss of power over one or more of the members. Commonly, it means want of sexual vigour; incapacity for copulation; and chiefly on the part of the male. Asty'sia, Astyph'ia, Asyno'dia, Adynamia viri'lis. It has, also, been used synonymously with sterility. Impotence may be absolute or relative, constitutional or local, direct or indirect, permanent or temporary.

IMPOTENTIA, Adynamia, Impotence—i. Generandi, Impotence.

IMPOV'ERISHED, Effe'tus, Depaupera'tus, (F.) Appauvri. 'Having become poor;' originally from (L.) pauper, 'poor.' The Humorists applied this epithet to a humour, deprived of a part of its constituents, and particularly to the blood. This fluid was considered to be impoverished when it was pale, without the proper consistence, and abounding in serum. It was, on the contrary, rich, in their opinion, when of a scarlet colour; possessing consistence; when it coagulated promptly, and the quantity of serum, compared with that of the clot, was by no means considerable.

IMPRÆGNATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPREGNATION, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPRESSIBILITY, GREAT, Hyperæsthesis.

IMPRES'SION, Impres'sio (in, and premere, pressum, 'to press'), Pros'bolē, (F.) Empreinte. A more or less deep indentation which certain organs seem to make on others. Inequalities observable on the bones, which appear to be made by the subjacent organs.

Impres'sions Dig''ital, Impressio'nes digita'tæ cra'nii, Fossæ digita'les, are the depressions of various forms, observable at the inner surface of the cranium, which look, at first view, as if they were made with the fingers.

IMPU'BER, Impu'bes, Impu'bis, Ane'bus, Capilla'tus, from in, 'negation,' and pubertas, 'puberty.' (F.) Impubère. One who has not attained the age of puberty.

INCUBA'TION, Incuba'tio, Incubit''io, Incu'bitus, from incubare, (in, and cubare,) 'to lie upon.' This word, which is used in natural history for the sitting of birds upon their eggs, is employed, figuratively, in medicine, for the period that elapses between the introduction of a morbific principle into the animal economy and the invasion of the disease.

INCUBITIO, Incubation.

INCUBITUS, Incubation.

INCUBO, Incubus.

IN'CUBUS. Same etymon. In'cubo, Epial'tes, Ephial'tes nocturnus, Ephial'tes, Epilep'sia nocturna, Asthma noctur'num, Pnigal'ion, Succubus, Oneirodyn'ia gravans, Erethis'mus oneirodyn'ia, Noctur'na oppres'sio, Epibolē, Babuzica'rius, Nightmare, (F.) Cauchemar, Cauchevieille, Cochemar, Oneirodynie gravative. Same etymon. A sensation of a distressing weight at the epigastrium during sleep, and of impossibility of motion, speech or respiration; the patient at length awaking in terror, after extreme anxiety. Nightmare is often the effect of difficult digestion or of an uneasy position of the body. At other times, it occurs in consequence of severe emotions. The sensation of suffocation was formerly ascribed to the person's being possessed, and the male spirits were called incubes—the female succubes. The disease requires no particular treatment. The causes must be avoided.

INCUBUS VIGILAN'TIUM, Ephial'tes vigilan'tium, E. hypochondri'aca, Daymare. This is produced during wakefulness; the sense of pressure being severe and extending over the abdomen; respiration frequent, laborious, and constricted; eyes fixed; sighing, deep and violent; intellect, undisturbed.

INCUNABULA, Swathing clothes.

INCUNEATIO, see Wedged.

INCU'RABLE, Incurab'ilis, Rem'ediless, Irreme'diable, Insanab'ilis, Anal'thes, Anaces'tos, Atherapeu'tus, from in, negative, and cura, cure. Not susceptible of cure;—applied to both patients and diseases.

INCURIA, Acedia.

INCURSUS ARTERIARUM, Pulse.

INCURVATIO, Gryposis.

INCUS, (in, and cudo, 'I hammer,') 'an anvil.' Acmon, Os incu'di sim'ilē, Ossic'ulum Incudi seu mola'ri denti compara'tum, (F.) Enclume. One of the small bones of the ear, so called from its fancied resemblance to a smith's anvil. It is situate in the cavity of the tympanum, between the malleus and orbiculare. Its body is articulated with the malleus; its horizontal ramus, which is the shortest, corresponds with the entrance of the mastoid cells; and its vertical ramus is articulated with the os orbiculare. The incus is composed of a compact tissue, and is developed from a single point of ossification.

INDEX, Dig''itus index seu secun'dus seu salutator'ius, Demonstra'tor, Indica'tor, Indicato'rius, Lich'anos, Deic'ticos, from indicare, 'to point out.' The forefinger, index finger. See Digitus.

INDIAN ARROW WOOD, see Euonymus—i. Paint, Hydrastis Canadensis—i. Physic, Gillenia trifoliata—i. Physic, small-flowered, Gillenia stipulacea.

INDIA'NA, MINERAL WATERS OF. A medicinal spring, near Jeffersonville, is much frequented. Its waters are strongly impregnated with sulphur and iron.

IN'DICANT, In'dicans, Endeic'ticos, (F.) Indicatif. Same etymon as index. Any thing which, in the course of a disease or in what precedes or accompanies it, concurs in pointing out the means to be used for its cure.

INDICATIF, Indicant.

IN'DICATING DAYS, Dies In'dices, D. Indicato'rii seu Indican'tes, D. contemplan'tes, (F.) Jours indicateurs. Hippocrates and others have thus called the middle day of the septenary; because they imagined, that indications were sometimes given then of the crisis which would occur in the last day of the septenary.

INDICA'TION, Indica'tio, Accusa'tio, Dela'tio, Endeix'is, Endex'is, Boëthemat'icum Semei'on. The object proposed in the employment of any means which are had recourse to for the cure of disease. It may also be defined—the manifestation afforded by the disease itself of what is proper to be done for its removal.

INDURA'TION, Indura'tio, Sclerys'ma, Sclerys'mus, Callos'itas, Indurescen'tia, Poro'ma, Poro'sis, (F.) Endurcissement. The hardness which supervenes, occasionally, in an inflamed part. It is one of the terminations of inflammation, and is owing to a change in the nutrition of the part.

INDURATION OF THE CELLULAR TISSUE, Indura'tio seu Oppila'tio telæ cellulo'sæ neonato'rum, Ethmyphotylo'sis, Œde'ma neonato'rum, Compact Œde'ma of Infants, Cat'ochus Infan'tum, Induratio cellulo'sa, Sclere'mia, Sclere'ma, Sclero'ma, Scleroder'ma, Cutis tensa chron'ica, Dermatoperisclero'sis, Dermatoperisclerysmus, Ethmyphotylosis, Halonii''tis, Phlegmasia cellula'ris, Scirrhosar'ca neonato'rum, Scleri'asis neonato'rum, Sclero'sis, Stipa'tio telæ cellulo'sæ Infan'tum, Skin-bound Disease, (F.) Endurcissement du tissu cellulaire; Œdème du tissu cellulaire des nouveau-nés, Asphyxie lente des nouveau-nès, is a disease which attacks infants a few days after birth, and which Chaussier proposed to call Sclérème, from σκληρος, 'hard.'

The Induration of the cellular tissue of the adult, Sclerosteno'sis cuta'nea, has been regarded as the result of inflammation of the corium, Chorioni'tis.

INDURATION OF THE BRAIN, Sclerencephalia—i. Grise, see Hepatization.

INDURESCENTIA, Induration.

INDU'SIUM, Chitonis'cos. Strictly, 'a shirt,' 'a small tunic;' but some have so called the amnion.

INE'BRIANT, Ine'brians, Phantas'ticus; from in and ebrio, 'I intoxicate.' Intoxicating. An agent that intoxicates.

INEBRIATION, Temulentia.

INEDIA, Fasting.

INER'TIA, from in, 'privative,' and ars, artis, 'art.,' (?) Igna'via, Ener'vitas. Sluggishness, inactivity.

INER'TIA OF THE WOMB, (F.) Inertie de la matrice. The diminution and even total cessation of the contractions of the uterus during labour; as well as the species of languor into which it sometimes falls after the expulsion of the fœtus.

INERTIE PAR EPUISEMENT, see Parturition—i. de la Matrice, Inertia of the womb.

INESIS, Cenosis.

INETHMOS, Cenosis.

IN'FANCY, Infun'tia, from in, 'negation,' and fans, from fari, 'to speak.' Early childhood. Childhood; Nepiot'es, Paidi'a, (F.) Enfance. It generally includes the age from birth till the seventh year. See Age.

INFANS, Pai'dion, Ne'pios, (F.) Enfant. An infant; a child; one in infancy. In law, one who has not attained the age of legal capacity; which is, in general, fixed at twenty-one years.

INFANS RECENS NATUS, Nouveau-né.

INFANTIA, Infancy.

INFAN'TICIDE, Infantici'dium, Tecnocton'ia, Child-murder, from infans, 'a child,' and cædere, 'to kill.' The murder of a child newly born, or on the point of being born. It may be perpetrated by the mother, or by some other person, either by commission, that is, in consequence of a direct, voluntary act;—or by omission of those cares which are necessary for the preservation of the new-born.

INFARCTUS, Emphraxis—i. Intestinorum, Enteremphraxis—i. Lactei extremitatum, Phlegmatia dolens—i. Lienis, Splenoncus.

INFARC'TUS MAMMÆ LAC'TEUS, Lactis concretio'nes, Nodi seu Thrombi lactei, Trichi'asis lactea. Knotty tumours of the female mammæ, owing to the accumulation and arrest of milk in the galactophorous ducts.

INFARCTUS UTERI, Metremphraxis.

INFECTION, see Contagion.

INFECUNDITY, Sterility.

INFECUNDUS, Sterile.

INFER'NAL, Infer'nus; 'relating to hell.' A name applied to caustic—Lapis Inferna'lis—on account of its strong burning properties.

INFIBULA'TIO, Fibula'tio, Infibula'tion, Ancterias'mus; from fibula, 'a clasp.' (F.) Bouclement. An operation, formerly practised, which consisted in passing a ring through the prepuce, after having drawn it over the glans;—in order to prevent coition. The ancients employed infibulation with their gladiators, to preserve all their strength by depriving them of venery. In the women, to preserve their chastity, the ring was passed through the labia majora.

INFILTRA'TION, Infiltra'tio, from filtrare, 'to filter.' Effusion. The accumulation of a fluid in the areolæ of any texture, and particularly of the areolar membrane. The fluid effused is ordinarily the Liquor sanguinis, sound or altered,—sometimes blood or pus, fæces, or urine. When infiltration of a serous fluid is general, it constitutes anasarca; when local, œdema.

INFILTRATION PURULENTE, see Hepatization.

INFIRM, Infirm'us, Imbecillis, Deb'ilis, As'thenes, from in, negative, and firmus, 'firm.' Not firm or sound; weak; feeble.

INFIRMARIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMARY, Hospital.

INFIRMATORIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMIER (F.), from infirmus, (in, negative, and firmus.) Infirma'rius, Nosoc'omus, Cura'tor infirmo'rum. One employed in an hospital or infirmary to take care of the sick.

INFIRM'ITY, Infirm'itas, Astheni'a, Arrhos'tia, Invaletu'do. Any disease which has become habitual, either owing to its chronic character, or its numerous relapses.

INFLA'MED, Inflamma'tus, (F.) Enflammé,—Phlogo'sed, according to some. Same etymon as inflammation. Affected with inflammation.

INFLAMMABLE AIR, Hydrogen, carburetted.

INFLAMMATION, Inflamma'tio, from in, 'within,' and flamma, 'flame,' 'fire;' Phleg'monē, Phlogo'sis, Ecphlogo'sis, Epiphleg''ia, Exap'sis, Phlegma'sia, Causo'ma, Empres'ma, Phlo'gia, Hyperendosmose (Dutrochet), Incen'dium, Hyperhæmato'sis, Hyperæ'mia acti'va, Phleboplero'sis ecphrac'tica, (F.) Angii'te, is so called in consequence of the acute or burning pain, felt in a part affected with it. An irritation in a part of the body is occasioned by some stimulus;—owing to which the blood flows into the capillary vessels in greater abundance than natural, and those vessels become over-dilated and enfeebled; whence result pain, redness, heat, tension, and swelling; symptoms which appear in greater or less severity, according to the structure, vital properties, and functions of the part affected, and its connexion with other parts, as well as according to the constitution of the individual. The inflammations of the areolar and serous membranes greatly agree;—and those of the mucus and skin; the former being more active, and constituting the phlegmonous variety;—the latter, the erythematic or erysipelatous. Of this variety is the diffusive inflammation produced by morbid poisons; as during dissection, where solutions of continuity exist on the fingers of the operator. It is seen, too, in workers in bone, and hence has been called bone fever. Preparatory to the turning of bones, it is customary to macerate them in water. The fluid soon becomes putrid, and if the hands be kept in it diffusive inflammation results. Inflammation may end by resolution, suppuration, gangrene, adhesion, effusion, or induration. Each of the inflammations of internal organs has received a name according to the organ affected;—as, gastritis, cephalitis, enteritis, hepatitis, &c. Besides the above inflammations, there is considered to be an instinctive kind established for the union of parts which have been divided, whether the union takes place immediately, or by the aid of an intermediate body. This is the adhesive inflammation. See Adhesion, Callus, Cicatrix. Broussais considered that the term inflammation should include every local exaltation of the organic movements which is sufficiently great to disturb the harmony of the functions, and disorganize the texture in which it is situate. He farther extended the name inflammation to irritations which do not induce disorganization of the textures, and which had been previously, and are still, called fevers.

Examination of the blood drawn always exhibits an increase of the fibrinous element—the average proportion of which, in healthy blood, is about three in the thousand. In inflammation, it at times rises as high as ten. In fevers unaccompanied with inflammation, the proportion is natural, or below the average; but whenever inflammation supervenes, it immediately rises.

External inflammation is easily detected by the characters already mentioned:—internal, by disturbance of function and pain upon pressure; but the last sign is often not available. Both forms require the removal of all irritation, and the reduction of vascular excitement and nervous irritability; hence, blood-letting—local and general—sedatives, refrigerants, and counter-irritants become valuable remedies in almost all cases of inflammation.

INFLEXIO, Campsis.

INFLUENCE, Influenza.

INFLUENTIA, Influenza.

INFLUENZA. The Italian for 'Influence.' Influenza Europæ'a, Influen'tia, Catar'rhus epidem'icus, Febris catarrha'lis epidem'ica, Catarrhus à conta'gio, Rheuma epidem'icum, Morbus Verveci'nus, M. Catarrha'lis, Syn'ochus catarrha'lis, Defluxi'o catarrha'lis, M. Aric'tis, Cephalal'gia contagio'sa (epidemics of the 16th and 17th centuries): (F.) Tac, Ladendo, Quinte, Florion, Coqueluche, Baraquette, Générale, Grippe, Follette, Grenade, Coquette, Cocote, Petite Poste, Petit Courier, Allure, Fièvre catarrhale épidémique; Influence, Epidemic catarrh. A severe form of catarrh occurring epidemically, and generally affecting a number of persons in a community. See Catarrh, epidemic. Gluge, from his investigations, considers that the following is the chronological order of the return of the influenza:—14th century, 1323, 1326—15th century, 1410, 1411, 1414—16th century, 1510, 1557, 1562, 1574, 1580, and 1593—17th century, 1658, 1669, 1675, 1693—18th century, 1708, 1712, 1729, 1732, 1733, 1742, 1743, 1761, 1762, and 1775—19th century, 1800, 1803, 1831, and 1833. To these may be added 1837, and 1843.

Influenza Europæa, Influenza.

INFLUEN'ZOÏD, Influenzoï'des. An expressive but hybridous compound: from influenza, and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling influenza.—Dr. J. Thompson.

INFORMITAS, Deformation.

INFORTUNIUM, Contrafissura.

INFRA-ATLOIDÆUS, Sub-atloidæus.

INFRA-AXOIDÆUS, Sub-axoidæus.

INFRA-COSTALES, see Intercostal muscles.

INFRA-MAXILLARIS, Sub-maxillary.

INFRAMAXILLOSTERNODYMIA, Cephalosomatodymia.

INFRA-ORBITAR, Sub-orbitar.

INFRAPUBIAN LIGAMENT, Triangular ligament.

INFRA-SCAPULARIS, Subscapularis.

INFRA-SPINALIS, Infra-spinatus.

INFRA-SPINA'TUS, Infraspino'lis, from infra, 'beneath,' and spina, 'a spine.' Situate beneath the spine of the scapula;—Infra Spinana'lis.

Infra-Spina'ta Fossa, (F.) Fosse sous-épineuse. A large excavation on the posterior surface of the scapula, beneath its spine. It is filled by the Infra-Spinatus Muscle, Grand Scapulo-trochitérien, Superscapula'ris inferior (Ch.), (F.) Sous-épineux, which is broad, flat, and triangular. It is attached, by its base, to the three inner quarters of the fossa; and is inserted, by a long tendon, into the middle part of the great tuberosity of the os humeri (Trochiter). It turns the arm outwards, and, when the arm is elevated, carries it backwards.

INFRINGENS, Corrigent.

INFUNDIB'ULUM, (in, and fundere, 'to pour out.') A Latin word signifying a Funnel,—Choa'nē, Chonos, (F.) Entonnoir,—of which various kinds are employed in pharmaceutical operations. A name, given to many parts which, more or less, resemble a funnel. It is particularly appropriated to the following organs:—

Infundib'ulum of the Brain, Infundib'ulum seu Pelvis seu Choa'na seu Cy'athus seu Scyphus seu Concha seu Lacu'na seu Em'bolum seu Aquæduc'tus seu Labrum seu Concav'itas conchula'ris seu Processus orbicula'ris Cer'ebri, (F.) Entonnoir du ventricule moyen du cerveau, Tige Pituitaire, Tige sus-sphénoïdale. A depression in the inferior paries of the middle ventricle, above the pituitary gland. It was, anciently, regarded as a canal by which the fluid collected in the ventricles of the brain was evacuated, and poured into the nasal fossæ.

Infundib'ulum Cerebri, I. of the Brain.

Infundibulum of the Cochlea, I. Cochlea, Scyphus Vieussen'ii, S. audito'rius, Cucul'lus, Cana'lis Scala'rum commu'nis. This, with the modiolus, forms the nucleus around which the gyri of the cochlea pass. It is an imperfect funnel, the apex of which is common with that of the modiolus; and the base is covered with the apex of the cochlea, termed Cu'pola.

In Surgery, infundibula are used to direct steam or vapours; to conduct the actual cautery to certain morbid parts, &c.

Infundibulum of the Ethmoid Bone, or of the Nasal Fossæ. One of the anterior cells of that bone, which is broad and expanded above, and narrow below; opening, above, into the frontal sinus; below, into the anterior part of the middle meatus of the nasal fossæ.

Infundibulum of the Heart, Conus arteriosus—i. of the Kidney, see Calix—i. Lachrymale, Lachrymal Sac—i. Tubarum Fallopii, see Tube, Fallopian—i. Ventriculi, Œsophagus.

INFU'SION, Infu'sio, En'chysis, from infundere (in, and fundere), 'to pour in,' 'to introduce.' A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in pouring a hot or cold fluid upon a substance whose medical virtues it is desired to extract. Infusion is, also, used for the product of this operation. In Surgery, infusion—Chirur'gia infuso'ria, Ars clysma'tica nova—is the act of introducing into the veins medicinal substances, by aid of an instrument called Infusor. This mode of introducing medicines was called Ars infuso'ria.

Infusum Pruni Virginia'næ, Infusion of Wild Cherry Bark. (Prun. Virginian. cont. ℥ss; aquæ, Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.)

Infusum Quassiæ, I. Quassiæ excel'sæ, Infusion of Quassia. (Quassiæ lign. conc. ʒij; aq. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, f℥j to f℥iv.

Infusum Rhei, An'ima Rhei, Infusion of Rhubarb. (Rhei, cont. ʒj; aq. ferv. Oss. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, f℥j to f℥iv.

Infusum Rosæ Compos'itum, I. Rosæ Gal'licæ, Infusion of the Rose. (Ros. Gallic. ʒiv; aq. bullient. Oiss; acid. sulph. d. f℥iij; sacch. purif. ℥iss. Add the water, and afterwards the acid;—macerate for half an hour; strain, and add the sugar.) Dose, f℥iss to Oss.

Infusum Sarsaparil'læ, Infusion of Sarsaparilla. (Sarsaparill. contus. ℥j; aquæ bullient. Oj. Digest for two hours in a covered vesse', and strain.—Ph. U. S.) It may also be prepared by displacement. Dose, f℥ij to f℥iv.

Infusum Sassafras, Infusion of Sassafras Pith, Mu'cilage of Sassafras Pith. (Sassafras medull. ʒj; aquæ, Oj. Macerate for three hours, and strain.) An emollient collyrium; and demulcent drink.

Infusum Sennæ, I. S. Compos'itum, I. Cassiæ Sennæ, I. Sennæ simplex, Infusion of Senna. (Sennæ, ʒj; coriandr. cont. ʒj; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.) Dose, f℥j to f℥iv.

The Black Draught, Black Dose, Haustus niger, is usually formed of this infusion. It may be made of infus. sennæ, f℥v; aq. cinnam. fʒj; mannæ, ʒiv; magnes. sulph. ʒvj. Dose, a wineglassful.

Selway's Prepared Essence of Senna is a concentrated infusion of the leaves in combination with an alkali.

Infusum Sennæ Compositum, I. sennæ.

Infusum Serpenta'riæ, Infusion of Virginia Snakeroot. (Serpentar. ℥ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss.

Infusum Simarou'bæ, Infusion of Simarouba. (Simaroub. cort. cont. ℥ss; aq. fervent. Oss. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. L.) Dose, f℥ij.

Infu'sum Spige'liæ, Infusion of Pinkroot. (Spigel. ℥ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iv to Oss.

Infusum Tab'aci, Infusion of Tobacco. (Tabaci fol. ʒj; aq. ferv. Oj. Macerate for an hour and strain.—Ph. U. S.)

Infusum Tarax'aci, Infusion of Dandelion. (Taraxac. contus. ʒij; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss, as a diuretic, &c.

Infusum Ulmi, Infusion of Slip'pery Elm, Slippery Elm Tea. This preparation, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, is made by infusing one ounce of slippery elm bark in a pint of boiling water.

Infusum Valeria'næ, Infusion of Vale'rian. (Rad. valerian. in crass. pulv. ℥ss; aq. bullient. Oj.

Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. D. and U. S.) Dose, ℥iss to ℥ij.

INFUSUM ZINGIB'ERIS, Infusion of Ginger, Ginger Tea. (Zingib. contus. ℥ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss, as a carminative.

INGE'NIUM (Morbi). The genius of a disease. This word is employed, especially by the French, synonymously with nature. They speak, for instance, of Génie inflammatoire, bilieux, &c. Some, also, use génie in the place of type of an intermittent.

INGES'TA, from in, and gerere, gestum, 'to bear or carry into.' Substances, introduced into the body by the digestive passages; as food, condiments, drinks, &c.

INGLU'VIES, Aples'tia, Victûs intemperan'tia:—Gluttony, Insatiableness; also, the Crop or Craw of Birds, (F.) Jabot; and the first stomach or paunch of ruminant animals—Pen'ula, Rumen, Venter magnus. Also, the Pharynx.

INGRAS'SIAS, APOPH'YSES OF. The lesser alæ of the sphenoid bone.

INGRAVIDATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

INGRAVIDATION, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

INGRESSUS SUPERIOR, Cardia.

INGUEN, Bubon, Bubo, 'the groin.' Ædœ'on, αἰδοῖον, He'patis emuncto'ria, (F.) Aine. The oblique fold or depression which separates the abdomen from the thigh. It is only, properly speaking, a line that extends from the anterior and superior spinous process of the ilium to the middle part of the horizontal ramus of the pubis. Also, the genital organs.

IN'GUINAL, Inguina'lis, from inguen, 'the groin.' Belonging or relating to the groin. This epithet has been given to various parts met with in the region of the groin or inguinal region.

INGUINAL ARTERY is that portion of the femoral artery situate immediately beneath the crural arch in the inguinal region.

INGUINAL CANAL is a canal, about two inches in length, proceeding obliquely downwards, inwards and forwards at the lower part of the abdomen; through which passes the spermatic cord, in men, and the round ligament of the uterus in women. This canal is formed, inferiorly and anteriorly, by the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle; posteriorly by the fascia transversalis, which is joined to the preceding aponeurosis, and forms with it a deep channel, into which are received the lesser oblique and transversalis muscles. The inguinal canal has two apertures; the one, the lower and inner, is called the inguinal or abdominal ring. It is bounded by two strong tendinous pillars, which fix it—the innermost to the symphysis, the outermost to the spine of the pubis. The upper and outer aperture is formed by the fascia transversalis. From the edge of this aperture arises a membranous funnel,—a prolongation of the fascia transversalis,—which receives the spermatic vessels; forms their proper sheath, and accompanies them as far as the testicle. On its inside lies the epigastric artery. Above it, is the lower edge of the transversalis muscle: and, below, it is bounded by the channel of the greater oblique. By following the oblique direction of this canal, and passing, consequently, on the outside of the epigastric artery, the viscera are displaced, so as to constitute internal inguinal hernia.

IN'GUINAL RE'GION, Re'gio inguina'lis, Bubo, Inguen. The region of the groin.

INGUINAL RING, Abdom'inal Ring, An'nulus abdom'inis, (F.) Anneau Inguinal, is the inferior aperture of the inguinal canal.

IN'GUINO-CUTA'NEUS. A name given by Professor Chaussier to the middle ramus of the anterior branch of the first lumbar nerve; because it sends its numerous filaments to the groin, scrotum, and to the skin of the superior part of the thigh.

INHÆRENS, Inherent.

INHALATIO, Absorption, Inhalation—i. Cutis, see Absorption.

INHALA'TION, Inhala'tio; from in and halare, 'to breathe.' The act of drawing air or vapour into the lungs—Inhala'tio pulmona'lis. Also, absorption.

INHA'LER. Same etymon. An apparatus for inhalation. Mudge's Inhaler is an apparatus for inhaling the steam of hot water, in affections of the air-passages. It consists of a pewter tankard provided with a lid, into which a flexible tube is inserted. Through this, the vapour is inhaled.

INHE'RENT, Inhærens, (in, and hærens.) That which adheres, or which is joined or united to any thing.

INHERENT CAUTERY, (F.) Cautère inhérent, is the actual cautery, left in contact with a part until it is reduced to the state of a deep eschar.

INHUMA'TION, Inhuma'tio, from inhumo, (in, and humus,) 'I put into the ground.' Inhuma'tio. The sepulture of the dead. This belongs to the subject of medical police.

INIAD, see Inial.

IN'IAL, from ινιον, the ridge of the occiput. An epithet, proposed by Dr. Barclay, for an aspect towards the plane of the ridge of the occiput. Iniad is employed by him adverbially to signify 'towards the inial aspect.'

INIODYMUS, Diprosopus.

INION, ινιον. Some of the Greek physicians give this name to the occiput, or the ridge of the occiput; others to the back part of the neck, and the muscles of the occiput. Blanchard says it is the commencement of the spinal marrow.

INI'TIS, Inohymeni'tis, from ις, gen. ινος, 'a fibre,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Fibrous inflammation.

INITIUM, Arche—i. Asperæ arteriæ, Larynx—i. Extuberans Coli, Cæcum.

INIUM, ινιον. The nucha. Also, the muscles at the back of the neck. See Inion.

INJACULA'TIO. A term employed by Van Helmont to designate an acute pain of the stomach, with rigidity and immobility of the body.

INJECT'ED, Injec'tus, from injicere, (in, and jacere, 'to throw into.' The face and other parts are said to be injected, when the accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels gives them an evident red colour. A subject or part of a subject, is also said to be injected, when its vessels have been filled, by the anatomist, with an appropriate composition.

INJEC'TION, Injec'tio, Eis'bolē: same etymon. The act of introducing, by means of a syringe or other instrument, a liquid into a cavity of the body. The liquid injected is also called an injection. Anatomists use injections—Injectio'nes anatom'icæ—for filling the cavities of vessels, in order that they may be rendered more apparent, and their dissection be facilitated. For this purpose, they employ syringes of different dimensions, and various materials. The most common injections are made of soot, wax, and turpentine, coloured with lamp-black, vermilion, &c. There are three kinds chiefly used by anatomists,—the coarse, the fine, and the minute. The following are formulæ for each.

COARSE INJECTION.

No. 1.

Pure yellow wax, oz. xvj.
Bleached rosin, oz. viij.
Turpentine varnish, by measure, oz. vj.

No. 2.

Yellow rosin, lb. ij.
Yellow wax, lb. j.
Turpentine varnish, a sufficient quantity to make the mixture flexible when cold.

No. 3.

Tallow, lb. ij.
White wax, oz. x.
Common oil, oz. vj.
Venice turpentine, oz. iv.

Mix and liquefy over a slow fire or over boiling water.

To make any of these mixtures.

Red — add vermilion, oz. ij.
Yellow — King's yellow, oz. iiss.
White — best flake white, oz. vss.
Pale-blue { best flake white, oz. iiiss. / fine blue smalt, oz. iiiss.
Dark-blue — blue verditer, oz. xss.
Black — lamp-black, oz. j.
Green { powdered verdigris, oz. ivss. / best flake white, oz. iss. / powdered gamboge, oz. j.

Fine Injection.

Brown spirit varnish, oz. iv.
White spirit varnish, oz. iv.
Turpentine varnish, oz. j.

To make this mixture,

Red — add vermilion, oz. j.
Yellow — King's yellow, oz. j½.
White — best flake white, oz. ij.
Light-blue { fine blue smalt, oz. iss. / best flake white, oz. j⅔
Dark-blue — blue verditer, oz. iv.
Black — lamp-black, oz. ss.

Minute Injection.

Take of transparent size, broken to pieces, or Isinglass, oz. viij.
Water, lb. iss. Dissolve.

To make this mixture,

Red — add vermilion, oz. v.
Yellow — King's yellow, oz. iv.
White — best flake white, oz. v.
Blue — fine blue smalt, oz. viij.
Green { powdered verdigris, oz. iij. / best flake white, dr. ij. / powdered gamboge, dr. j.
Black — lamp-black, oz. j.

Beautiful injections are made with ether as the menstruum.

Cold Injection.

White lead and red lead, each, oz. iv; linseed oil, enough to form a thick paste when they are rubbed well together. Liquefy this paste with turpentine varnish, oz. viij.

The advantage of this mixture is, that the subject need not be heated.

In order to inject the arteries, the injection must be forced from the great trunks towards their ultimate ramifications. To inject the veins, on the contrary, it is indispensable, on account of their valves, to send the injection from the smaller divisions towards the greater. The lymphatics are usually injected with mercury. The practitioner injects, by forcing with a syringe, liquids, such as emollient, narcotic, stimulant, and other decoctions or infusions, into different hollow organs, as the rectum, vagina, nasal fossæ, urethra, tunica vaginalis, auditory canal, &c., to fulfil various therapeutical indications.

The following injection has been strongly recommended by Dr. Horner to preserve the dead body.

Take of Liverpool St. Ubes, or Turk's Island Salt, oz. 36 avoird.
Nitrate of potassa, " 19
Carbonate of soda, " 8
Molasses (Sugar-house,) " 4 by meas.
Water, six pints.

The saline constituents to be dissolved first of all in boiling hot water; the molasses to be afterwards stirred in: the starch to be mixed well with half a pint of cold water, and then to be stirred in with the other articles. As soon as it begins to boil, the whole mass swells up, when it must be removed from the fire. On the proper reduction of temperature it is fit for use.

Injection, Matthews's, see Tinctura cantharidis.

Injectiones Anatomicæ, see Injection.

INK, Atramentum.

IN-KNEED, Entogonyankon.

IN'NATE, from in, and natus, 'born.' Inborn.

Innate Diseases, Morbi conna'ti, M. congen'iti, (F.) Maladies innées. Diseases with which the infant is born. They are not always hereditary, as hereditary diseases are not always innate.

INNERLEITHEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs, situate near the Tweed, and supposed to be the scene of "St. Ronan's Well," contain chlorides of sodium and calcium, and carbonate of magnesia.

INNERVA'TION, Innerva'tio, from in, 'in,' and nervus, 'a nerve.' By this term is meant — the nervous influence, necessary for the maintenance of life and the functions of the various organs; — an influence of whose character and source we are ignorant. It seems to resemble the galvanic or electric agencies. See Nerves.

INNOMINA'TUM, Anon'ymum, from in, priv. and nomen, 'a name.' (F.) Anonyme. Having no name.

Innomina'ta Arte'ria, Brachio-cephal'ic artery, A. brachio-céphalique (Ch.), — Arte'ria anon'yma, Right Subclavian, (F.) Artère innominée, is the trunk common to the right primitive carotid and to the subclavian. It arises from the anterior part of the arch of the aorta, ascends obliquely to the right, along the trachea; and, after a course of about an inch in length, divides into two trunks, which go off at right angles. The one is external — the right subclavian proper; the other superior — the primitive carotid, of the same side.

Innominata Cartilago, Cricoid.

Innominata Cav'itas. A cavity of the outer ear, between the helix and anthelix.

Innominatum Fora'men. A foramen, near the middle of the anterior surface of the pars petrosa of the temporal bone, leading backwards for the passage of the Vidian nerve, reflected from the 2d branch of the 5th to the portio dura of the 7th pair.

Innominata Fossa, see Fossa.

Innominata Linea, see Ilio-pectinea Linea.

Innominati vel Anonymi Nervi. Some anatomists have thus called the nerves of the fifth pair.

Innominatum Os, Os Coxen'dicis, Os Coxæ, Os anon'ymum, Os pelvis latera'lē, (F.) Os innominé, Os Coxal, Os anonyme, &c. A very large, flat bone, which forms the anterior and lateral paries of the pelvis. It is curved upon itself in two opposite directions. In the first periods of life, it is composed of three portions; — the ilium, ischium, and pubis, which join each other in the acetabulum. It is articulated before with its fellow, — behind, with the sacrum; and laterally with the femur.

Innominata Mino'ra Ossa, — Lesser Ossa innominata, Ossic'ula innomina'ta. Some anatomists have given this name to the three cuneiform bones of the tarsus.

INNOMINATA OSSICULA, Innominata minora ossa—i. Tunica Oculi, Sclerotic.

INNOMINATÆ VENÆ OF VIEUSSENS. Vieussens has given this name to two or three veins, which arise on the anterior surface and right margin of the heart, and open into the auricle towards its right margin. The term VENÆ INNOMINATÆ OF MECKEL is given to the brachiocephalic veins, which are generally included in the description of the subclavian vein, and correspond to the arteriæ innominatæ, being formed by the union of the internal jugular vein and the subclavian properly so called, which correspond to the common carotid and subclavian arteries.

INNOMINATUS, Anonymous.

INNUTRITIO OSSIUM, Rachitis.

INOCULA'TION, Inocula'tio, Insit''io, Insit''io variola'rum, from inoculare, (in, and oculus, 'an eye,') 'to ingraft.' Any operation by which small-pox, for example, may be artificially communicated, by introducing the virus of the particular disease into the economy, by means of a puncture or scratch made in the skin. When the word inoculation is used alone, it usually means that for the small-pox,—Variola'tion.

INOCULATION, COWPOX, Vaccination—i. Jennerian, Vaccination.

INOC'ULATOR, Same etymon. In'sitor. One who practises inoculation.

INODULAR TISSUE, see Tissue, inodular.

INODULE, Tissue, inodular.

INOHYLOMA, Tumor, fibrous.

INOHYMENI'TIS: from ἰς, gen. ινος, 'a fibre;' ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflamma'tio telæ fibro'sæ. Inflammation of the fibrous tissue.

INOPOLYPUS, see Polypus.

INORGAN'IC, Inorgan'icus, Unor'ganized, (Fr.) Inorganique; from in, priv. and organum, 'an organ.' A term applied to bodies which have no organs;—such as minerals. At the present day, naturalists admit of but two classes of bodies,—the organized and inorganic. Parts of the body which, like the epidermis, are devoid of blood-vessels and nerves, have been called anorganic.

INOSCLERO'MA, from ἰς, gen. ινος, 'a fibre,' and σκληρωμα, 'induration.' Induration of the fibrous tissue.

INOSCULATIO, Anastomosis.

INQUIES, Inquietude.

INQUIETATIO, Inquietude.

INQUI'ETUDE, Inquietu'do, In'quies, Inquieta'tio, Jactita'tio, from in, priv. and quies, 'rest.' Agitation or trouble, caused by indisposition. Restlessness.

INQUINAMENTUM, Miasm.

INQUISITIO MEDICO-LEGALIS, see Medico-legal.

INSALIVA'TION, Insaliva'tio, from in, and saliva. The mixture of the food with the saliva, and other secretions of the mouth.

INSALU'BRIOUS, Insalu'bris, Nosc'ros, Noso'des. That which is unhealthy,—which injures the health.

INSANABILIS, Incurable.

INSANE, Insa'nus; from in, 'un,' and sanus, 'sound;' Aliena'tus, Crazy, Mad, Non-sane, Demented, Deranged, (F.) Aliéné, Fou, Insensé. One affected with mental aberration, or of unsound mind.

INSANIA, Mania—i. Cadiva, Epilepsy—i. Lupina, Lycanthropia—i. Puerperarum, Mania, puerperal

INSAN'ITY, Insa'nia; from in, privative, and sanus, 'sound;' Mental aliena'tion, Abaliena'tio seu Alienatio Mentis, Arrep'tio, Unsound Mind, Derange'ment, Deranged intellect, Cra'ziness, Aphros'ynē, Ecphro'nia, Ecphros'ynē, Paral'laxē, Parallax'ie, Delir'ia, Vesa'niæ, Delir'ium, (Crichton,) Insipien'tia, (F.) Folie, Égarement d'Esprit, Paraphrénie. This term includes all the varieties of unsound mind,—Mania, Melancholia, Moral Insanity, Dementia, and Idiocy. A slight degree of insanity is sometimes popularly called "a kink in the head;" in Scotland, "a bee in the bonnet."

INSANITY, HOMICIDAL, see Homicidal—i. Incoherent, Dementia—i. Moral, Pathomania—i. Puerperal, Mania, puerperal—i. Senile, Delirium senile—i. Suicidal, see Suicide.

INSANUS, Insane.

INSCRIPTION, see Matriculate.

INSCRIPTIO'NES TENDIN'EÆ MUSCULO'RUM, Intersectio'nes seu Enervatio'nes tendin'eæ musculo'rum, Interme'dia ligamenta'lia seu ner'vea. The tendinous portions which cross several muscles, and especially the straight muscles of the abdomen.

INSENESCENTIA, Agerasia.

INSENSÉ, Insane.

INSENSIBIL'ITY, Anæsthe'sia, Insensibil'itas. Loss or absence of sensibility. It is very common in cerebral affections, and may extend to every part, or be limited to one or more. Some organs are much more sensible than others. The bones, cartilages, ligaments, &c., are insensible in health, but acutely sensible in disease.

INSEN'SIBLE, Sensibilita'tē carens. That which is devoid of sensibility. This word is applied, also, to phenomena which cease to be appreciable to the senses. Thus, we say, the pulse becomes insensible.

INSER'TION, Inser'tio, Symph'ysis, Eno'sis, from inserere, (in, and serere, 'to join or knit,') 'to ingraft.' (F.) Attache. The attachment of one part to another. Insertions occur chiefly on bones, cartilages, and fibrous organs; thus, we speak of the insertion of muscular fibres into a tendon or aponeurosis; the insertion of a tendon, aponeurosis, or ligament, into a cartilage or bone. The word insertion has likewise been used by pathologists, for the act of inoculating or introducing a virus into the body.

INSES'SIO, from insidere, (in, and sedere,) 'to sit in.' This term is, sometimes, applied to a vapour bath, the person being seated in a perforated chair, beneath which a vessel, filled with hot water, or the hot decoction of some plant, is placed. See Semicupium.

INSESSUS, Bath, half.

INSIDEN'TIA, Epis'tasis. Any thing which swims on or in the urine. It is opposed to the Hypos'tasis or subsiden'tia.

INSIPIENTIA, Insanity.

INSISIO CILIORUM, Blepharoplastice.

INSITIO, Inoculation—i. Dentis, Transplantatio Dentis—i. Variolarum, Inoculation.

INSOLA'TION, Insola'tio, from in, and sol, 'the sun;' Aprica'tio, Helio'sis, Heli'asis, Heliono'sis, Siri'asis. Exposure to the sun. Exposure of a patient to the rays of the sun is, sometimes, had recourse to, with the view of rousing the vital forces when languishing, or of producing irritation of the skin. Insolation is occasionally used in the same sense as coup de soleil.

In Pharmacy, insolation means the drying of chemical and pharmaceutical substances.

INSOLAZIONE DE PRIMIVERA, Pellagra.

INSOM'NIA, Insom'nitas, Sahara, Zaara, Pervigil'ium, Pernocta'tio, Aÿp'nia, Agryp'nia, Ahyp'nia, Anyp'nia, Typhoma'nia, Sleep'lessness, Vig''ilance, from in, privative, and somnus, 'sleep,'

'absence of sleep.' This may exist alone, and constitute a true disease; or it may be connected with another affection. It is an unequivocal sign of suffering in some organ; even when the patient experiences no pain.

INSOMNIUM, Somnium.

INSPECTIO MEDICO-LEGALIS, see Medico-legal.

INSPIRATEUR, Inspiratory.

INSPIRA'TION, Inspira'tio, Empneumato'sis, Eisp'noē, Adspira'tio, Aspira'tio, from in, 'in,' and spiro, 'I breathe.' The action by which the air penetrates into the interior of the lungs. A movement opposed to that of expiration. As regards the average quantity of air received into the lungs at each inspiration, there is much discrepancy amongst observers. The following table sufficiently exhibits this:—

| | Cubic inches at each inspiration. |
|---|---|
| Reil | 42 to 100 |
| Menzies, Sauvages, Halcs, Haller, Ellis, Sprengel, Sömmering, Thomson, Bostock, | 40 |
| Jurin | 35 to 38 |
| Fontana | 35 |
| Richerand | 30 to 40 |
| Dalton | 30 |
| Jeffreys | 26 |
| Herbst | 24 to 30 |
| Herholdt | 20 to 29 |
| Jurine and Coathupe | 20 |
| Allen and Pepys | 16½ |
| J. Borelli | 15 to 40 |
| Goodwyn | 14 |
| Sir H. Davy | 13 to 17 |
| Abernethy and Mojon | 12 |
| Keutsch | 6 to 12 |

INSPIRATION OF VENOUS BLOOD. By this is meant the aspiration of blood towards the heart, occasioned by the approach to a vacuum produced by the dilatation of the thorax during inspiration.

IN'SPIRATORY. Same etymon. Inspiratio'ni inser'viens, (F.) Inspirateur. A name given to muscles, which, by their contraction, augment the size of the chest, and thus produce inspiration. The diaphragm and intercostal muscles are the chief agents of inspiration. In cases where deep inspirations are necessary, the action of these muscles is aided by the contraction of the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, subclavius, serratus major anticus, scaleni, serratus posticus superior, &c. Most of these muscles become inspiratory, by taking their fixed point at the part which they ordinarily move, and elevating the ribs.

INSPISSA'TIO, Pyeno'sis, from in, and spissare, 'to thicken.' The act of rendering thick; as in the formation of an extract—Succus Inspissa'tus.

INSTEP, Collum pedis, (F.) Coude-pied, Cou du pied. The projection at the upper part of the foot, near its articulation with the leg—the tarsus.

INSTILLATIO, Instillation.

INSTILLA'TION, Enstalax'is, Instilla'tio, from in, 'into,' and stilla, 'a drop.' The act of pouring a liquid drop by drop.

INSTINCT, (L.) Instinc'tus, (in, and stinguo, 'I sting,') 'inwardly moved.' Bru'tia, Hormē. The action of the living principle, whenever manifestly directing its operations to the health, preservation, or reproduction of a living frame or any part of such frame—Moli'men natu'ræ saluta'rium. The law of instinct is, consequently, the law of the living principle, and instinctive actions are the actions of the living principle. Instinct is natural. Reason is acquired.

INSTINC'TIVE, Instinc'tus. Same etymon. Relating to or caused by instinct; as instinctive actions. See Emotional. Those instinctive actions of animals which are owing to impressions made on the sensory ganglia, exciting respondent motor influences that are propagated to the various muscles of the body, are termed consensual.

INSTITUTES OF MEDICINE, see Theory of medicine.

INSTITUTUM ORTHOPÆDICUM, Orthopedic institution.

IN'STRUMENT, Instrumen'tum, Or'ganum. A tool, an agent.

INSTRUMENTA, Pudibilia.

INSTRUMEN'TUM CHIRUR'GICUM. A surgical tool or instrument.

INSTRUMENTUM DIGESTIONIS. The digestive apparatus.

INSTRUMENTUM INSTRUMENTORUM, Manus.

INSUFFIC''IENCY, from in, and sufficient. Inadequateness to any end or purpose,—as Insufficiency of the valves of the heart; (F.) Insuffisance des valvules du Cœur;—a condition in which they are not adapted, as in health, to properly close the apertures.

INSUFFISANCE DES VALVULES DU CŒUR, Insufficiency of the valves of the heart.

INSUFFLA'TION, Insuffla'tio, from in, sub, and flare, 'to blow.' The act of blowing a gas or vapour into some cavity of the body; as when tobacco smoke is injected into the rectum; or when air is blown into the mouths of new-born children to excite the respiratory functions.

INSULA, Insula cerebri.

IN'SULA CER'EBRI, Island or In'sula of Reil. The intermediate lobe of the brain, Lobus interme'dius cer'ebri. A remarkable group of convolutions within the fissure of Sylvius. It is called, by Cruveilhier, Lobule of the Fissure of Sylvius, Lobule of the corpus striatum. The 'island' of Reil, with the substantia perforata, forms the base of the corpus striatum.

INSULA SANGUINIS, see Blood.

INSULTUS, Attack, Paroxysm.

INSURANCE OF LIFE, see Life Insurance.

INTEGRITAS, Sanitas, Virginity.

INTEG'UMENT, Integumen'tum, Tegumen'tum, Teg'umen, Teg'imen, Tegmen, Involu'crum seu Velamen'tum corp'oris commu'nē; Vela'men seu Velamentum nati'vum, from in and tegere, 'to cover.' (F.) Tégument. Any thing which serves to cover, to envelop. The skin, including the cuticle, rete mucosum, and cutis vera is the common integument or tegument of the body.

INTEGUMEN'TA FŒTÛS. The membranes surrounding the fœtus in utero.

IN'TELLECT, Intellec'tus, Nous, Mens, Gnomē, Noos, Nūs, Noe'sis, Syn'esis, from intelligere, (inter, 'between,' and legere, 'to choose;') 'to understand,' 'conceive,' 'know.' (F.) Entendement, Intelligence. The aggregate of the intellectual faculties—perception, formation of ideas, memory, and judgment.

INTELLECT, DERANGED, Insanity.

INTELLIGENCE, Intellect.

INTEM'PERANCE, Intemperan'tia; Immoderan'tia, Immodera'tio, Acra'sia, Acola'sia, Ples'monē, Amet'ria, Aples'tia, from in, 'negation,' and temperare, 'to temper.' Immoderate use of food and drink, especially the latter;—a fruitful source of disease.

INTEMPER'IES. Same etymon. Dyscra'sia. Derangement in the constitution of the atmosphere and of the seasons; bad constitution; derangement or disorder in the humours of the body.

INTENSIVUS, Entaticos.

INTEN'TION, Inten'tio, from in, and tendere, 'to stretch.' Propos'itum. The object which one proposes. In surgery, a wound is said to heal by the first intention, Reu'nio per primam intentio'nem, when cicatrization occurs without suppuration; union by the second intention, Reu'nio per secun'dam intentio'nem, being that, which does not occur until the surfaces have suppurated. To obtain union by the first intention, the edges of a recent wound must be brought in apposition and kept together by means of adhesive plasters and a proper bandage. Delpech has substituted for those expressions, Réunion primitive, and Réunion secondaire.

INTERANEA, Entrails.

INTERARTIC'ULAR, Interarticula'ris. Parts situate between the articulations are so called; as interarticular cartilages, interarticular ligaments, &c.

INTERCA'DENCE, Intercaden'tia, Intercaden'tia, from inter, 'between,' and cadere, 'to fall.' Disorder of the arterial pulsations, so that, every now and then, a supernumerary pulsation occurs. The pulse, in such case, is said to be intercurrent.

INTER'CALARY, Intercala'ris, Inter'cidens, from intercalare, 'to insert.' Embol'imos, Interpola'tus, Provocato'rius. The days which occur between those that are critical. The term has, also, been applied to the days of apyrexia in intermittent fevers.

INTERCEL'LULAR PAS'SAGES. A term given by Mr. Rainey to irregular passages through the substance of the lung, which form the terminations of the bronchial tubes, are clustered with air-cells, and not lined by mucous membrane.

INTERCELLULAR SUBSTANCE, see Cytoblastema.

INTERCEP'TIO, from inter, 'between,' and capere, 'to take.' A bandage, by the aid of which the ancients proposed to arrest the progress of the material cause of gout and rheumatism; and which consisted in covering the affected limbs with carded wool; surrounding them, afterwards, with broad bandages, applied from the fingers to the axilla, or from the toes to the groin.

INTERCEPTIO INTESTINORUM, Ileus.

INTERCERVICAUX, Interspinales colli.

INTERCIDENS, Intercalary.

INTERCIDENTIA, Intercadence.

INTERCILIUM, Mesophryon.

INTERCLAVIC'ULAR, Interclavicula'ris, from inter, 'between,' and clavicula, 'a clavicle.' That which is placed between the clavicles.

INTERCLAVICULAR LIG'AMENT is a fibrous bundle, placed transversely above the extremity of the sternum, between the heads of the two clavicles. This ligament is flat. Its fibres, which are always longer above than below, are separated by small apertures, which are traversed by vessels. It prevents the separation of the two clavicles in the forced depression of the shoulder.

INTERCOS'TAL, Intercosta'lis, from inter, 'between,' and costa, 'a rib.' Mesopleu'rus, Mesopleu'rius. That which is situate between the ribs. (F.) Sous-costal.

INTERCOSTAL AR'TERIES vary in number. There is constantly, however, a supe'rior, Arte'ria Intercosta'lis supe'rior vel Intercosta'lis subcla'via, which is given off from the posterior part of the subclavian, and which sends branches into the first two or three intercostal spaces; and, generally, eight or nine inferior or aortic intercostals. These arise from the lateral and posterior parts of the pectoral aorta, and ascend obliquely in front of the vertebral column, to gain the intercostal spaces, where they divide into a dorsal branch and an intercostal, properly so called.

INTERCOSTAL MUSCLES are distinguished into internal, — inter-plévrocostaux of Dumas, — and external. The former are inserted into the inner lip, the latter into the outer lip of the edge of the ribs. The fibres of the external intercostals are directed obliquely downwards and forwards; and those of the internal downwards and backwards. Both are inspiratory or expiratory muscles, according as they take their origin on the upper or lower rib. Some small, fleshy fibres, seen occasionally at the inner surface of the thorax, descending obliquely from one rib to another, have been called Infracostales.

INTERCOSTAL NERVE, Trisplanchnic nerve.

INTERCOSTAL NERVES, Branches souscostales (Ch.), Costal or Dorsal nerves, proceed from the anterior branches of the dorsal nerves. They are twelve in number, and are distributed especially to the muscles of the parietes of the chest and abdomen.

INTERCOSTAL SPACE, Interval'lum seu Interstit''ium intercosta'lē, Mesopleu'rum, Mesopleu'rium, is the interval which separates one rib from that immediately above or below it.

INTERCOSTAL VEINS are distinguished like the arteries. The right superior intercostal vein is often wanting. When it exists, it opens into the back part of the subclavian. The same vein of the left side is very large. It communicates with the demi-azygos, receives the left bronchial vein, and opens into the corresponding subclavian. The right inferior intercostal veins open into the vena azygos; and those of the left into the demi-azygos.

INTERCOS'TO-HU'MERAL NERVES. So called from their origin and distribution. They are the cutaneous branches of the second and third intercostal nerves.

INTERCUR'RENT, Intercur'rens, from inter, 'between,' and currere, 'to run.' Diseases are so called which supervene at different seasons of the year, or which cannot be considered as belonging to any particular season. — Sydenham. A disease is likewise so termed which occurs in the course of another disease, as Intercurrent Pneumonia.

INTERCUTANEUS, Subcutaneous.

INTERDEN'TIUM, from inter, 'between,' and dens, 'a tooth.' The interval between teeth of the same order. — Linden.

INTERDIGITAIRE, Interdigital.

INTERDIG''ITAL, Interdigita'lis, (F.) Interdigitaire, same etymon as the next. That which relates to the spaces between the fingers. Interdigital space, (F.) Espace interdigitaire, is used, also, for the commissure between the fingers.

INTERDIGIT''IUM, from inter, 'between,' and digitus, 'a finger.' A corn or wart, which grows between the fingers and toes, especially between the latter. — Pliny.

INTERÉPINEUX CERVICAUX, Interspinales colli.

INTERFINIUM NARIUM, Septum narium.

ENTERFŒMINEUM, Perinæum, Vulva.

INTERFORAMINEUM, Perinæum.

INTERGANGLION'IC, Interganglionicus, from inter, 'between,' and ganglion, 'a knot.' An epithet for nervous cords, placed between ganglia, which they connect together.

INTERITUS, Death.

INTERLOB'ULAR, Interlobula'ris, from inter,

'between,' and lobulus, 'a small lobe.' That which is between lobes, — as of the lungs.

Interlobular Fissure. The interval between the lobules of the liver. See Liver.

Interlobular Plexus of the Biliary Ducts. See Liver.

Interlobular Spaces. The angular interstices formed in the liver by the apposition of several lobules.

Interlob'ular Tissue, Textum interlobula're, Ligamen'ta interlobula'ria pulmo'num. The cellular tissue between the pulmonary lobules.

Interlobular Veins, see Liver.

INTERMAX'ILLARY, Intermaxilla'ris, from inter, 'between,' and maxilla, 'a jaw.' That which is situate between the maxillary bones.

Intermaxillary Bone, Inci'sive, Pal'atine, or Labial bone, is a bony portion, wedged in between the two superior maxillary bones, which supports the upper incisors. This bone is found in the mammalia; and, also, in the human fœtus.

INTERMÈDE, Excipient.

INTERMEDIA LIGAMENTALIA seu NERVEA, Inscriptiones tendineæ musculorum.

INTERMÉDIAIRE DE WRISBERG, Portio Wrisbergii.

INTERMEDIATE VASCULAR SYSTEM, Capillary system.

INTERMENT, PREMATURE, Zoothapsis.

INTERMIS'SION, Intermis'sio, Dialeip'sis, Dialip'sis, Tempus intercala'rē, Interval'lum, from inter, 'between,' and mittere, 'to put or send.' (F.) Intermittence. The interval which occurs between two paroxysms of an intermittent or other disease—during which the patient is almost in his natural state. There is said to be intermission of the pulse, when, in a given number of pulsations, one or more may be wanting.

INTERMITTENCE, Intermission.

INTERMIT'TENT, Intermit'tens. Same etymon. That which has intermissions.

Intermittent Fever, Febris intermit'tens, Dialeip'yra, Intermittens, An'etus, Pyretolypo'sis, Ague, Ague and Fever, Fever and Ague, Palu'dal Fever, Period'ic Fever, (F.) Fièvre intermittente, F. d'Accès, F. des marais, F. Périodique, is a fever consisting of paroxysms, with a complete state of apyrexia in the intervals. The chief types are the Quotidian, Tertian, and Quartan. The symptoms of intermittents are those of a decided and completely marked cold stage: (F.) Stade de froid, attended with paleness; collapse; impaired sensibility; and coldness, more or less diffused, followed by general rigors. After this occurs the hot stage; Stade de la Chaleur, the heat returning partially and irregularly, and at length becoming universal, and much above the standard of health. The pulse is now hard and strong; tongue white; urine high-coloured; thirst considerable. At length, the sweating stage, (F.) Stade de Sueur, makes its appearance; the moisture usually beginning on the forehead, face, and neck, and soon extending universally; the heat abating; thirst ceasing; the urine throwing down a sediment, and the functions being gradually restored to their wonted state. The tertian type is the most common, and the quartan the most severe. The quotidian more readily changes into a remittent and continued fever. The quartan has, generally, the longest cold stage, the tertian the longest hot. The chief exciting cause is marsh miasmata. Ague, also, occurs in districts where there are no marshy emanations. Such districts are, generally, of a volcanic nature; farther we know not. When the disease has once attacked an individual, it is apt to recur. The prognosis is, in general, favourable, as far as regards life; but long protracted intermittents are apt to induce visceral obstructions and engorgements, which may end in dropsy. In some countries, the disease is of a very pernicious character. The indications of treatment are, 1. To abate the violence of the paroxysm; and, 2. To prevent its return. The first indication requires the adoption of the general principles and remedies required in ordinary fever. The second is the most important. The period of apyrexia is that for action. The means for fulfilling this indication are: — the use of emetics, purgatives, cinchona, quinia, &c., arsenic, and forcible impressions made on the mind of the patient.

INTERMUS'CULAR, Intermuscula'ris, from inter, 'between,' and musculus, 'a muscle.' That which is placed between muscles.

Intermus'cular Aponeuro'ses are aponeurotic laminæ or septa, situate between muscles, to which they often give attachment.

INTER'NAL, Inner, Inter'nus. That which is placed on the inside. This epithet is given to parts that look towards an imaginary central plane, which divides the body into two equal and symmetrical portions, as well as to those which correspond with a cavity. Thus, we say—the inner surface of the arm or thigh—the inner surface of the skull, &c.

Internal Diseases, Morbi inter'ni, are those which occupy the inner parts of the body. Their investigation belongs to the physician; external diseases falling under the management of the surgeon.

INTERNAT. The post or office of an interne.

INTERNE, see House-Surgeon.

INTERNODIA DIGITORUM MANUS, Phalanges of the fingers — i. Digitorum pedis, Phalanges of the toes.

INTERNO'DIUM, Mesagon'ium, from inter, 'between,' and nodus, 'a knot.' The part of the fingers between the joints. A phalanx.

INTERNUN'CIAL, Internuncia'lis, from inter, 'between,' and nuncius, 'a messenger.' Relating or belonging to a messenger between parties. A term applied by Mr. Hunter to the function of the nervous system.

INTERNUNTII DIES, Critical days.

INTERNUS AURIS, Tensor tympani—i. Mallei, Tensor tympani.

INTEROS'SEI PEDIS, Métatarso-phalangien-latéral, (Ch.) The number, arrangement, shape, and uses of these are the same as in the case of the preceding muscles. Four are dorsal, and three plantar: six belong to the three middle toes and one to the little toe. The great toe is devoid of them. As in the hand, they are distinguished, in each toe, into abductor and adductor.

INTERROS'SEOUS, Interos'seus. That which is situate between the bones; from inter, 'between,' and os, 'a bone.'

Interosseous Ar'teries of the Forearm and Hand. Of these there are several. 1. The common interosseous artery arises from the posterior part of the ulnar, a little below the bicipital tuberosity of the radius; passes backwards and divides into two branches: the one called anterior interosseous descends vertically, anterior to the interosseous ligament; the other, called posterior interosseous, passes above that ligament, appears at its posterior part and divides into two great branches, — the posterior recurrent radial and the posterior interosseous, properly so called. In the hand, — 1. The dorsal metacarpal interosseous arteries are given off by the dorsalis carpi, a division of the radial artery. 2. The Palmar interrosseous arteries, which arise from the convexity of the deep palmar arch, and give off the middle interosseous arteries. 3. The dorsal interosseous of the index, proceeding directly from the radial artery. In the foot, are distinguished: — 1. The dorsal interosseous arteries, three in number, which arise from the artery of the metatarsus, a branch of the dorsalis tarsi. 2. The plantar interosseous arteries, which are, also, three in number, and arise from the plantar arch.

INTEROSSEOUS LIG'AMENTS. Ligaments seated between certain bones, which they unite; such are the ligaments between the radius and ulna, and between the tibia and fibula.

INTEROSSEOUS MUSCLES. These occupy the spaces between the bones of the metacarpus and metatarsus; and, consequently, belong,—some to the hand, others to the foot.

INTEROSSEOUS NERVE is a branch, given off by the median nerve, which descends before the interosseous ligament, accompanying the artery of the same name.

INTEROSSEOUS VEINS have the same arrangement as the arteries.

INTEROSSEUS MANÛS, (F.) Muscle interosseux de la main.—Métacarpo-phalangien-latéral suspalmaire et métacarpo-phalangien latéral, (Ch.) These muscles are seven in number; two for each of the three middle fingers, and one for the little finger. Four are situate on the back of the hand, and three only in the palm. They are inserted into the metacarpal bones, and send a tendon to the tendon of the extensor communis. According to their office, they are, to each finger, an adductor and an abductor. The index has a dorsal abductor and a palmar one. The middle finger has two dorsal muscles for adductor and abductor; the ring finger has a dorsal adductor and a palmar abductor; and the little finger has only one interosseous abductor, which is palmar. These muscles produce abduction and adduction of the fingers, which they can also extend, owing to their connexion with the extensor tendons.

INTEROSSEUS SECUNDUS, Prior medii digiti — i. Quartus, Prior annularis.

INTEROSSEUX DE LA MAIN, Interosseus manûs.

INTERPARIE'TAL BONE, Os Interparieta'lē. A bone found in the skulls of the children of the Peruvian races. It lies in the situation of the upper angle of the occipital bone, where the parietal bones separate from each other; and is the analogue of the interparietal bone of ruminants and carnivora.—Tschudi.

INTERPELLA'TUS, (Morbus,) from interpello, 'I interrupt.' A term, by which Paracelsus designated those diseases whose progress is unequal, and paroxysms irregular.

INTERPLÉVRO-COSTAUX, Intercostal muscles.

INTERPOLATUS, Intercalary.

INTERRUPTIO MENSTRUATIONIS, Amenorrhœa.

INTERSCAP'ULAR, Interscapula'ris, (inter, and scapula.) That which is between the shoulders; as the interscapular region. The interscapular cavities, Cavita'tes interscapula'res, are the depressions between the scapulæ and the spinous processes of the vertebræ.

INTERSCAPU'LIUM. The spine of the scapula.

INTERSECTIO, Decussation, Intersection.

INTERSEC'TION, Intersec'tio, Diac'opē, from inter, 'between,' and seco, 'I cut.' The point where two lines meet and cut each other. The name aponeurot'ic intersection is given to fibrous bands, which certain muscles present in their length, and by which they seem interrupted. Aponeurotic intersections are found in the recti muscles of the abdomen; in the semi-membranosus, complexus, sterno-thyroideus, &c.

INTERSECTIONES TENDINEÆ MUSCULORUM, Inscriptiones tendineæ musculorum.

INTERSEPIMENTUM THORACIS, Mediastinum.

INTERSEPTA HORIZONTALIA PACCHIONI, Tentorium.

INTERSEP'TUM, from inter, 'between,' and septum, 'a partition.' Cion, κιων. The uvula; also, the septum narium. The diaphragm.

INTERSEPTUM NARIUM, Septum narium—i. Virginale, Hymen.

INTERSPI'NAL, Interspina'lis, from inter, 'between,' and spina, 'the spine.' That which is seated between the spinous processes.

INTERSPI'NAL LIG'AMENT, Membra'na interspina'lis, (F.) Ligament interépineux. These occupy the intervals between the spinous processes in the back and loins. In the neck, they are replaced by the muscles of the same name. They prevent the too great flexion of the spine, and keep the spinous processes in situ.

INTERSPINA'LES COLLI, Spina'les Colli mino'res, Spina'ti, (F.) Interépineux-cervicaux, Intercervicaux, (Ch.) These are twelve in number, and occupy, in two parallel rows, the intervals between the spinous processes of the cervical vertebræ, from that of the atlas and vertebra dentata, to that between the last cervical and first dorsal vertebræ. They are flat, thin, and quadrilateral. These muscles contribute to the extension of the neck and to throwing the head backwards.

INTERSPINALES DORSI ET LUMBO'RUM; portions of the Transversaire-épineux of Boyer, and the sacro-spinal of Chaussier. These muscles are of two kinds. The one (Muscle grand épineux du dos, of Winslow) representing fleshy bundles of different lengths, applied upon the lateral surfaces of the spinous processes, from the third dorsal vertebra to the second lumbar. The other (Muscle petit épineux du dos, Winslow) covered by the preceding. They are situate on each side of the interspinal ligament, in the form of small, short flat bundles, which pass from one spinous process to the second, third or fourth above it. These muscles aid in extending the vertebral column; and incline it a little to one side, when they act on one side only.

INTERSTICE, Interstit''ium, Arœo'ma, from inter, 'between,' and sto, 'I stand.' Diaste'ma, Interval'lum. Anatomists have given this name to the intervals between organs. The iliac crest, crista ilii, for example, has two lips and an interstice between them, which affords attachment to the lesser oblique muscle of the abdomen.

INTERSTICE, Pore.

INTERSTIT''IAL, Interstitia'lis, same etymon. Applied to that which occurs in the interstices of an organ, — as 'interstitial absorption,' 'interstitial pregnancy,' &c.

INTERSTITIUM, Interstice—i. Ciliare, Ciliary ligament—i. Intercostale, Intercostal space—i. Jugulare, Throat.

INTERTINCTUS, Discreet.

INTERTRACHÉLIENS, Intertransversales colli.

INTERTRANSVERSAIRES DES LOMBES, Intertransversales lumborum.

INTERTRANSVERSA'LIS, Intertransversa'rius. That which is placed between the transverse process of the vertebræ.

INTERTRANSVERSALES COLLI, (F.) Intertransversaires cervicaux, Intertrachéliens, (Ch.) These are small, muscular bundles; quadrilateral; thin and flat; situate, in pairs, in the intervals between the transverse processes of the neck, except between the first and second, where there is only one. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. The former are six in number; the latter five. These muscles bring the transverse processes of the neck nearer each other, and contribute to the lateral flexion of the neck.

INTERTRANSVERSALES LUMBO'RUM, Musculi intertransversi lumbo'rum, (F.) Intertransversaires des lombes. These are almost entirely fleshy, and ten in number; five on each side. They are similar to the preceding in general arrangement; except that they are more marked, and not placed in two rows. Each intertransverse space contains only one. They are quadrilateral, and flat. The first occupies the space between the transverse processes of the first lumbar and the last dorsal vertebra; and the last is between that of the fourth and fifth lumbar vertebræ. These muscles incline the lumbar regions laterally; and straighten it when inclined to one side.

INTERTRIGO, Chafing—i. Podicis, Chafing.

INTERVAL, LUCID, see Lucid.

INTERVALLUM, Intermission, Interstice—i. Intercostale, Intercostal space.

INTERVENIUM, Mesophlebium.

INTERVERTEBRAL, Intervertebra'lis, (inter, and vertebra.) That which is situate between the vertebræ.

INTERVERTEBRAL CAR'TILAGES, Intervertebral fibro-cartilages, Intervertebral discs, Ligamen'ta intervertebra'lia. These organs are of a fibro-cartilaginous nature; sections of a cylinder; flexible; whitish; resisting; and situate between the bodies of the vertebræ,—from the space between the second and third as far as that between the last vertebra and sacrum. Their form is accommodated to that of the vertebra with which they are in connexion; so that, in the neck and loins, they are oval, whilst in the dorsal region they are nearly circular.

INTERVERTEBRAL DISCS, Intervertebral cartilages — I. fibro-cartilages, Intervertebral cartilages.

INTESTABILIS, Castratus.

INTESTATUS, Castratus.

INTESTIN, Intestine.

INTES'TINAL, Intestina'lis, from intus, 'within.' That which belongs to the intestines,— as intestinal canal, &c. Bordeu uses the term Pouls intestinal for a pulse, which he conceived to announce an approaching crisis by the intestines.

INTESTINAL JUICE, Succus entericus.

INTESTINAL TUBE or TRACT, Cana'lis seu Tractus intestino'rum. The canal formed by the intestines from the pyloric orifice of the stomach to the anus.

INTES'TINE, Intesti'num, En'teron, Chorda, Gut, Nedyïa (pl.), Pan'tices (pl.), Boel'li (pl.), Bowel, (F.) Intestin, Boyau. A musculo-membranous canal, variously convoluted, which extends from the stomach to the anus, and is situate in the abdominal cavity; the greater part of which it fills. In man, its length is six or eight times that of the body. It is divided into two principal portions, called small intestine and large intestine. The former, Intesti'num ten'uĕ, I. grac'ilĕ, (F.) Intestin grêle, constituting nearly four-fifths of the whole length, begins at the stomach and terminates in the right iliac region. It is divided into duodenum, jejunum and ileum. Some anatomists give the name small intestine to the last two only; which are kept in place by the mesentery, and form a large paquet, occupying the umbilical and hypogastric regions, a part of the flanks, of the iliac regions, and of the cavity of the pelvis. It is composed of, 1. A serous membrane, which is peritoneal. 2. Of a muscular coat, whose fibres are very pale, and are placed, in part, longitudinally; but the greater part transversely. 3. Of a whitish, mucous membrane; villous, and forming folds or valves—valvulæ conniventes—at its inner surface, and furnished with a considerable number of mucous follicles, called glands of Lieberkühn, (Crypts or Follicles of Lieberkühn,) and Brunner, and, with those of Peyer. The arteries of the small intestine proceed from the superior mesenteric; its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves proceed from the superior mesenteric plexus. The large intestine, Intesti'num crassum, Megaloecæ'lia, (F.) Gros intestin, forms a sequence to the small. It is much shorter, and is solidly attached in the regions of the abdomen which it occupies. It begins in the right iliac region; ascends along the right flank, till beneath the liver, when it crosses the upper part of the abdomen, descends into the left iliac fossa, and plunges into the pelvic cavity, to gain the anus. The great intestine is usually divided into three portions,—the cæcum, colon and rectum. It receives its arteries from the superior and inferior mesenterics. Its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves are furnished by the mesenteric plexuses. Its lymphatic vessels, which are much less numerous than those of the small intestine, pass into the ganglions or glands seated between the different reflections of the peritoneum, which fix it to the abdominal parietes. The use of the intestines is,—in the upper part, to effect the chylification of the food and the absorption of the chyle;—in the lower, to serve as a reservoir, where the excrementitious portion of the food collects; and, also, as an excretory duct, which effects its expulsion.

INTESTINORUM LÆVITAS, Lientery.

INTESTINULA CEREBRI, Anfractuosities (cerebral)—i. Meibomii, Meibomius, glands of.

INTESTINULUM, Funiculus umbilicalis.

INTESTINUM CELLULATUM, Colon — i. Circumvolutum, Ileon — i. Crassum, Colon, see Intestine — i. Gracile, see Intestine — i. Grande, Colon — i. Laxum, Colon — i. Majus, Colon — i. Medium, Mesentery—i. Plenum, Colon—i. Rectum, Rectum—i. Tenue, see Intestine.

INTIMUM UNGUIS, Nail, root of the.

INTONATIO INTESTINALIS, Borborygmus.

INTORSIO, Distorsion.

INTOXICATIO, Poisoning—i. Arsenicalis, Arsenicismus—i. Opiaca, Meconismus—i. Saturnina, Saturnismus.

INTOXICATION, Poisoning, Temulentia—i. des Marais, see Miasm.

INTOXICATION SATURNINE. Lead poisoning; saturnine cachexy. The aggregate of symptoms which present themselves prior to an attack of lead colic. — Tanquerel des Planches.

INTRALINGUAL SALIVARY GLANDS, see Salivary glands.

INTRALOB'ULAR. Intralobula'ris; from intra, 'within,' and lobulus, 'a lobule.' Relating to the space within a lobule:—as the "intralobular veins," venæ seu ven'ulæ intralobula'res seu centra'les, of the liver: — veins which communicate with the interlobular veins, and are the radicles of the hepatic veins.

INTRA-PELVIO TROCHANTÉRIEN, Obturator internus.

INTRA-U'TERINE, Intraüteri'nus; from intra, 'within,' and uterus, 'the womb.' That which takes place within the womb — as 'intra-uterine life.'

INTRICATURA, Decussation.

INTRIN'SIC, Intrin'secus; from intra, 'within,' and secus, 'towards.' Applied to the internal muscles of certain organs; as those of the ear, tongue, and larynx. Linnæus gave the name Intrin'seci to internal diseases.

INTROITUS PELVIS, see Pelvis—i. Vaginæ, Rima vulvæ.

INTROMIS'SION, Intromis'sio; from intro, 'within,' and mitto, 'I send.' The act of introducing one body into another, as Intromissio Penis, (F.) Intromission de la Verge.

INTROSUSCEPTIO, Intussusceptio — i. Entropium, Entropion.

INTUBUM, Cichorium endivia—i. Erraticum, Cichorium intybus.

INTUMES'CENCE, Intumescen'tia, Onco'sis, Dionco'sis, from intumescere, (in, and tumescere,) 'to swell.' Augmentation of size in a part or in the whole of the body. Sauvages uses the word Intumescen'tiæ for an order of diseases, in which he comprehends polysarcia, pneumatosis, anasarca, œdema, physeonia, and pregnancy.

INTUMESCENTIA GANGLIFORMIS, Ganglion of Gasser, see Facial nerve—i. Lactea Mammarum, Sparganosis — i. Lienis, Splenoncus — i. Semilunaris, Ganglion of Gasser.

INTUS INVERSUS, Transposition of the viscera.

INTUSSUSCEP'TIO, from intus, 'within,' and suscipio, 'I receive.' Introsuscep'tio. In physiology; — the mode of increase peculiar to organized bodies. In pathology, like Convol'vulus, Vol'vulus intestino'rum, Suscep'tio intestino'rum, Chordap'sus, Enteroparisago'gē, Parisago'gē intestino'rum, Indigita'tio, Tormen'tum, and Invagina'tio, it means the introduction of one part of the intestinal canal into another, which serves it as a sort of vagina or sheath. Generally, it is the upper part of the small intestine, which is received into the lower, when the intussusception is said to be progres'sive. At times, however, it is ret'rograde. As the disease cannot be positively detected by the symptoms, it must be treated upon general principles. At times, the invaginated portion has separated and been voided per anum,—the patient recovering. The disease is, however, of a very dangerous character.

INTYBUM, Cichorium endivia.

INTYBUS HORTENSIS, Cichorium endivia.

INULA, see Inula helenium — i. Britannica, I. dysenterica — i. Common, I. helenium — i. Conyzæa, I. dysenterica.

In'ula Dysenter'ica. The systematic name of the Lesser Inula, I. Britan'nica seu Conyza'a, Aster dysenter'icus seu undula'tus, Pulica'ria dysenter'ica, Cony'za, C. media, Ar'nica Sueden'sis, Ar'nica spu'ria, Cuni'la mas'cula seu me'dia, Cunila'go, (F.) Année antidysentérique, Herbe de Saint Roch. Nat. Ord. Compositæ. This plant was once considered to possess great antidysenteric virtues. The whole plant is acrid and somewhat aromatic.

Inula Helen'ium. The systematic name of the El'ecampane, En'ula, E. campa'na, Elen'ium, Necta'rium, Helinium, Aster helen'ium seu officina'lis, Corvisar'tia helen'ium, Common Inula, (F.) Aunée. The root In'ula (Ph. U. S.) was formerly in high esteem in dyspepsia, cachexia, pulmonary affections, &c. It is now scarcely used.

Inula Lesser, Inula dysenterica — i. Squarrosa, Conyza squarrosa.

INUNCTIO, Inunction, Liniment.

INUNC'TION, Inunc'tio, Perunc'tio, Illit''io, Illi'tus, Illinit''io, Oblinit''io, Chrisis, Catach'risis, Diach'risis, Epich'risis, Unctio. An ointment or a liniment. Also, the act of rubbing in; unction, (F.) Onction.

INUNDATIO, Depuration.

INUSTIO, Cauterization, Cauterium.

INUSTORIUM, Cauterium.

INVAG''INATED, Invagina'tus, from in, and vagina, 'a sheath.' Applied to a part which is received into another, as into a sheath.

The invaginated or slit and tail bandage is one in which strips or tails pass through appropriate slits or button-holes.

INVAGINATIO, Intussusceptio.

INVALETUDO, Infirmity.

INVALID, Valetudinary.

INVALIDUS, Valetudinary.

INVASIO, Arche, Attack, Paroxysm.

INVERMINATION, Helminthiasis.

INVERSIO PALPEBRARUM, Entropion—i. Uteri, Hysteroptosis, Uterus, inversion of the.

INVERSION DE LA MATRICE, Uterus, inversion of the.

INVERTENTIA, Absorbents, Antacids.

INVESTITURA FUNICULI UMBILICALIS, see Funiculis umbilicalis.

INVETERATUS, Chronic.

INVISCANTIA, Incrassantia.

INVISCA'TIO OC'ULI. A morbid adhesion of the eyelids to each other, or to the globe of the eye. Also, gluing together of the eyelids by a viseid secretion.

INVOLU'CRUM, Involumen'tum, from involvere, 'to fold in.' A covering; hence Involu'cra cer'ebri, the membranes of the brain. Involu'cra nervo'rum, the sheaths of the nerves.

Involucrum Cordis, Pericardium—i. Corporis commune, Integument—i. Linguæ, see Tongue—i. Membranaceum, Decidua reflexa—i. Nervorum, Neurilema—i. Reti comparatum, Retina.

INVOLUMENTUM, Involucrum.

INVOLVENTIA, Demulcents.

IODE, Iodine.

IODES, Æruginous.

IODETUM HYDRARGYRICUM, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum.

IODHYDRARGYRITE DE CHLORURE MERCUREUX, Mercury, iodide of chloride of.

IODIC, Iod'icus, (F.) Iodique. Same etymon as Iodine. Containing iodine.

IODIDUM HYDRARGYRI CHLORIDI, Mercury, iodide of chloride of — i. Hydrargyricum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum — i. Hydrargyrosum, Hydrargyri iodidum.

I'ODINE, Io'dina, Io'dinum, Iodin'ium, Io'dum, Io'dium, Io'nium, Io'num, (F.) Iode; from ἰωδης, viola'ceus, 'of a violet colour,' so called from the violet vapour it exhales when volatilized. It is contained in the mother waters of certain fuci, and is obtained by pouring an excess of concentrated sulphuric acid on the water obtained by burning different fuci, lixiviating the ashes and concentrating the liquor. The mixture is placed in a retort to which a receiver is attached, and is boiled. The iodine passes over and is condensed. It is solid, in the form of plates; of a bluish gray colour, of a metallic brightness, and smell similar to that of the chloride of sulphur. Its s. g. is 4.946. When heated, it becomes volatilized, and affords the vapour which characterizes it. With oxygen it forms Iodic acid, and with hydrogen Hydriodic acid. The tincture of iodine and the iodides have been employed with great success in the treatment of goître and of some scrofulous affections. It must be administered in a very small dose and for a long period. It is said to be apt, however, to induce cholera morbus, signs of great nervous irritability, and emaciation of the mammæ. When these symptoms, collectively termed Iodism, Iodo'sis, and Iodin'ia, are urgent, the dose may be diminished, or it may be wholly discontinued, and afterwards resumed.

Various preparations of iron are employed in medicine.

IODOGNO'SIS, (F.) Iodognosie; from iodine, and γνωσις, 'knowledge.' A knowledge of iodine in its various relations.—Dorvault.

IODINIA, see Iodine.

IODINIUM, Iodine.

IODINUM, Iodine.

IODIQUE, Iodic.

IODISM, see Iodine.

IODIUM, Iodine.

I'ODOFORM, Iodofor'mum, (F.) Iodoforme, so called from its analogy to chloroform. It is obtained by the reaction on each other of iodine, bicarbonate of potassa, water, and alcohol. It is in crystalline plates, of a beautiful citrine colour; and may be given in the same cases as the other preparations of iodine. Dose, one grain three times a day. It is the sesqui-oxide of carbon. See Carbonis sesqui-iodidum.

IODOHYDRARGYRATE OF POTASSIUM, see Iodine.

IODOSIS, see Iodine.

IODUM, Iodine.

IODURE PLOMBIQUE, Plumbi iodidum.

IODURETUM AMMONIÆ, see Iodine — i. Amyli, see Iodine — i. Hydrargyrosum, Hydrargyri iodidum—i. Sulphuris, see Iodine.

IODYMUS, Dicephalus.

ION, Viola.

IONIA, Teucrium chamæpitys.

IONID'IUM MARCUCCI, Cinchunchulli — a South American plant. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Violariæ; said to be extremely efficacious in the Mal de San Lazaro of Colombia.

IONIUM, Iodine.

IONTA, see Excretion.

ION'THUS, Varus, Violet Eruption, from ιον, 'the violet,' and ανθος, 'a flower,' or ονθος, 'foulness.' An unsuppurative, tubercular tumour; stationary; chiefly on the face. A genus in the class Hæmatica, order Phlogotica of Good.

IONTHUS CORYMBIFER, Gutta rosea — i. Varus, Acne.

IONUM, Iodine.

IOTACIS'MUS, from the Greek letter Iota. Defective articulation, — the patient not being able to pronounce the palatals j and g soft.

IPECAC, Apocynum androsæmifolium, Euphorbia corollata, Gillenia trifoliata, Ipecacuanha, Triosteum.

IPECACUAN'HA. In common parlance, often abridged to Ipecac. The pharmacopœial name of the Cephaë'lis ipecacuan'ha, Callicoc'ca Ipecacuan'ha, Cagosanga. Nat. Ord. Cinchonaceæ. It is also obtained from the Psycho'tria emet'ica of Peru. The odour of the root, Ipecacuan'ha root, Ipecacacuan'hæ radix, Radix Brazilien'sis, — Ipecacuanha, (Ph. U. S.) — is faint and peculiar; taste bitter, subacrid, and mucilaginous; both water and alcohol extract its virtues, which depend on a peculiar principle, called Emet'ia. It is emetic in large doses; sudorific in smaller. Dose, as an emetic, gr. xx to xxx, — alone, or united with gr. i to ij. of tartarized antimony.

IPECACUANHA, Euphorbia corollata — i. Bastard, Asclepias curassavica, Triosteum perfoliatum—i. Blanc de l'Ile de France, Asclepias asthmatica—i. Blanc de St. Domingue, Asclepias curassavica — i. of the Isle of France, Cynanchum vomitorium.

IPECACUAN'HA, WHITE, is obtained from different species of Richardsonia and Ionidium. Viola ipecacuan'ha seu Solea ipecacuan'ha seu Pomba'lea ipecacuan'ha, also affords it. It is weaker than the gray.

IPO, Upas.

IPOMŒA JALAPA, Convolvulus jalapa — i. Macrorrhiza, Convolvulus Jalapa.

IRA, Rage.

IRACUNDUS, Rectus externus oculi.

IRAL'GIA; Ireal'gia, Iridal'gia, from ιρις, 'the iris,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the iris.

IRASCIBLE, Rectus externus oculi.

IREALGIA, Iralgia.

IREONCION, Iriancistron.

IRIANCIS'TRON, Iridancist'ron, Ireon'cion, from ιρις, and αγκιστρον, 'a hook.' A hooked instrument, used by Schlagintweit in the formation of an artificial pupil.

IRIDÆ'A EDU'LIS. One of the Algæ, eaten in Scotland and the southwest of England.

IRIDALGIA, Iralgia.

IRIDANCISTRON, Iriancistron.

IRIDAUXE'SIS, from Iris, I'ridis, and αυξησις, 'augmentation;' Staphylo'ma I'ridis, Staphylo'ma U'veæ, Iridonco'sis, Lymphon'cus I'ridis. Exudation of fibrin into the tissue of the iris.

IRIDECTOMEDIALYSIS, see Coretomia.

IRIDECTOMIA, Coretomia.

IRIDENCLEISIS, see Coretomia.

IRIDENCLEISMUS, see Coretomia.

IRIDERE'MIA, from ιρις, and ερημος, 'deprived of;' Iridostere'sis. Absence of iris, either apparent or real.

IRIDOCELE, Ptosis iridis.

IRIDOCOLOBOMA, Coloboma iridis.

IRIDODIALYSIS, Coretomia.

IRIDOMALA'CIA, from ιρις, 'the iris,' and μαλακια, 'softness.' Mollescence or softening of the iris.

IRIDOMELANO'MA, Iridomelano'sis, from ιρις, 'the iris,' and μελανειν, 'to colour black.' The deposition of black matter on the tissue of the iris.

IRIDONCO'SIS, Iridon'cus, Hyperonco'sis Iridis, from ιρις, 'the iris,' and ογκος, 'a swelling.' Tumefaction or thickening of the iris. Also, Iridauxesis.

IRIDONCUS, Iridoncosis.

IRIDOPERIPHAKI'TIS; from ιρις, 'the iris,' περι, 'around,' and phacitis, inflammation of the lens. Inflammation of the anterior hemisphere of the capsule of the lens.

IRIDOPTOSIS, Ptosis iridis.

IRIDOR'RHAGAS, Iridorrho'gē, Iridor'rhox, Iridoschis'ma, Fissu'ra I'ridis, from ιρις, 'iris,' and ραγας, 'a fissure.' Fissure of the iris.

IRIDORRHOGE, Iridorrhagas.

IRIDORRHOX, Iridorrhagas.

IRIDOSCHISMA, Iridorrhagas.

IRIDOSTERESIS, Irideremia.

IRIDOTENCLEISIS, Coretomia.

IRIDOTOMIA, Coretomia.

IRIDOTROMUS, Hippus.

IRIS, (gen. I'ridis) Grammē. So called from its resembling the rainbow in a variety of colours. A membrane, stretched vertically at the anterior part of the eye, in the midst of the aqueous humour, in which it forms a kind of circular, flat partition, separating the anterior from the posterior chamber. It is perforated by a circular opening called the pupil, which is constantly varying its dimensions, owing to the varying contractions of the fibres of the iris. Its posterior surface has been called uvea, from the thick, black varnish which covers it. The greater circumference of the iris is adherent to the ciliary processes and circle. It has an external plane of radiated fibres and an internal one of circular fibres, which serve — the one to dilate, the other to contract the aperture of the pupil. The iris receives the irian nerves. Its arteries are furnished by the long ciliary arteries which form two circles by their anastomoses; the one very broad, near the great circumference; the other, smaller, and seated around the circumference of the pupil. The veins of the iris empty themselves into the Vasa vorticosa, and into the long ciliary veins. The use of the iris seems to be, — to regulate by its dilatation or contraction, the quantity of luminous rays necessary for distinct vision. The different colours of the iris occasion the variety in the colours of the human eye.

IRIS, see Herpes Iris — i. Common, I. Germanica — i. Commun, I. Germanica — i. de Florence, I. Florentina.

IRIS FLORENTI'NA, Florentine iris or orris, (F.) Iris de Florence. The rhizoma of this plant is extremely acrid in its recent state; and, when chewed, excites a pungent heat in the mouth, that continues for several hours. When dried, the acrimony is lost, or nearly so, and the smell is very agreeable. It is indebted to its agreeable flavour for its retention in the pharmacopœias, although it is ranked as an expectorant.

IRIS FŒTIDIS'SIMA, I. fœ'tida, Spath'ula fœ'tida, Xyris, Stinking iris, (F.) Iris puant, Glayeul puant. The root has been esteemed antispasmodic and narcotic.

IRIS GERMAN'ICA. The systematic name of the Flower-de-Luce, Iris nostras, Aier'sa, Iris vulga'ris, Common iris or orris, Gladi'olus cæru'leus, (F.) Iris commun, Flambe. The fresh roots have a disagreeable smell and an acrid, nauseous taste. They are powerfully cathartic, and are given in dropsies, where such remedies are indicated.

IRIS LACUS'TRIS, Dwarf-flag, Dwarf lake-iris; has the properties of I. versicolor.

IRIS, LAKE, DWARF, I. lacustris — i. Lutea, I. pseudacorus.

IRIS DES MARAIS, I. pseudacorus — i. Nostras, I. Germanica — i. Palustris, I. pseudacorus.

IRIS PSEUDAC'ORUS. The systematic name of the Yellow water-flag, Iris palus'tris seu lu'tea, Gladi'olus lu'teus, Ac'orus vulga'ris seu adulteri'nus seu palus'tris, Pseudac'orus, Bu'tomon, (F.) Iris des marais, Faux acore, Flambe bâtard, Acore bâtard. The root has an acrid, styptic taste. It is an errhine, sialogogue, and acrid astringent. The expressed juice is diuretic, and said to be a useful application to serpiginous and other cutaneous affections. Rubbed on the gums, or chewed, it is said to cure toothache.

IRIS PUANT, I. fœtidissima — i. Stinking, I. fœtidissima.

IRIS VERSIC'OLOR, Blue flag. The rhizoma of this is an active cathartic, and has been much used, as such, by the American Indians. It is reputed to be diuretic.

IRIS VULGARIS, I. Germanica.

IRISITIS, Iritis.

IRI'TIS, Inflammation of the iris, Inflamma'tio I'ridis, Irisi'tis. The chief symptoms are; — change in the colour of the iris; fibres less movable; tooth-like processes shooting into the pupil; pupil irregularly contracted, with the ordinary signs of inflammation of the eye. If the inflammation do not yield, suppuration takes place; and, although the matter may be absorbed, the iris remains immovable. It is often caused by syphilis. The general principles of treatment are, to deplete largely and exhibit mercury freely; along with attention to other means advisable in ophthalmia. The free use of quinia is sometimes serviceable. When the inflammation is seated in the serous covering of the iris, it is termed Iritis sero'sa IRREDU'CIBLE, (F.) Irréducible. An epithet given to fractures, luxations, herniæ, &c., when they cannot be reduced.

IRRÉDUCIBLE, Irreducible.

IRREG'ULAR, Irregula'ris, Anom'alous; from im, 'privative,' and regula, 'a rule.' A term chiefly applied to the types of a disease; and, also, to the pulse, when its beats are separated by unequal intervals.

IRREG'ULAR PRACTIT''IONER. One who does not practise his profession according to rules sanctioned by law or custom.

IRREMEDIABLE, Incurable.

IRREPTIO, Attack.

IRRIGA'TION, Irriga'tio, Embroca'tio, Irrora'tio: 'the act of watering or moistening.' The methodical application of water to an affected part, to keep it constantly wet.

IRRITABILITAS, Irritability — i. Morbosa, see Subsultus tendinum — i. Vesicæ, Cysterethismus.

IRRITABIL'ITY, Irritabil'itas, from irrito, (in, 'privative,' and ritus, 'the usual manner,') 'I provoke.' Vis irritabilita'tis, Vis Vitæ, Vis in'sita of Haller, Vis vita'lis of Gorter, Oscilla'tio of Boerhaave, Tonic power of Stahl, Vita pro'pria, Inherent power, Contractil'ity, Excitabil'ity, &c. A power, possessed by all living, organized bodies, of being acted upon by certain stimuli, and of moving responsive to stimulation. It is the ultimate vital property.

IR'RITABLE, Irritab'ilis. That which is endowed with irritability. Every living organized tissue is irritable; that is, capable of feeling an appropriate stimulus, and of moving responsive to such stimulus. Irritable is often used in the same sense as impressible, as when we speak of an irritable person, or habit, or temper. This last condition has been variously termed — Debilitas nervo'sa, D. Erethis'ica, Hypercine'sia nervo'sa, Neurastheni'a, Neurostheni'a, Sensibil'itas anom'ala, S. Morbo'sa, S. aucta.

IRRITAMEN, Irritant, Stimulus.

IRRITAMENTUM, Erethism, Irritant, Stimulus — i. Metallicum, Galvanism.

IR'RITANT, Irri'tans, Irrita'men, Irritamen'tum. That which causes irritation or pain, heat and tension; either mechanically, as punctures, acupuncture, or scarification; chemically, as the alkalies and acids; or in a specific manner, as cantharides.

Irritants are of great use in the treatment of disease.

IRRITATING POISON, see Poison.

IRRITATIO, Erethism, Gargale, Irritation.

IRRITA'TION, Irrita'tio, Erethis'mus. The state of a tissue or organ, in which there is excess of vital movement; commonly manifested by increase of the circulation and sensibility. Broussais defines irritation to be; — the condition of an organ, the excitation of which is carried to so high a degree, that the equilibrium resulting from the balance of all the functions is broken. In this signification, he also uses the word surirritation, which he considered as a higher degree, and as the essential cause of fever. Irritation is the percursor of inflammation.

Irrita'tion, Morbid, Constitu'tional irritation, Ir'ritative fever, Pseudo-fever, is that excitement which occurs after injuries done to the body, or to any part thereof; — constituting cases of diseased sympathy.

IRRITATIVE FEVER, Irritation, morbid.

IRRORATIO, Irrigation.

IS, Fibre.

ISA'TIS TINCTO'RIA, Woad, Pastel. A European plant, whose leaves have a fugitive pungent smell, and an acrid durable taste. They are not used, however, in medicine at the present day; but are the source of the dye-stuff, woad.

ISCA, Boletus igniarius.

ISCHÆ'MIA, from ισχω, 'I retain,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Morbid retention or suppression of an habitual flux of blood, as of the hemorrhoidal or menstrual flux or of epistaxis. See Hæmatostatica.

ISCHÆ'MON, Ischæ'mum. Same etymon. A medicine which restrains or stops bleeding.

IS'CHESIS, from ισχειν, 'to retain.' Suppression or retention of a discharge or secretion.

IS'CHIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. In this volcanic isle, five miles from Naples, there are several thermal waters, one of which — that of Gurgitello — raises the thermometer of Fahr. to 167°.

ISCHIACUS, Ischiatic.

ISCHIADICUS MORBUS, Neuralgia femoro-poplitæa — i. Nervus, Sciatic nerve.

ISCHIADOCELE, Ischiocele.

ISCHIAGRA, Is'chias, Ischial'gia, from ισχιον, 'the haunch,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' A name given to ischiatic gout. Femoro-popliteal neuralgia has, also, been so called.

ISCHIALGIA, Ischiagra, Neuralgia femoro-poplitæa.

ISCHIAS, Ischiagra — i. Nervosa Antica, Neuralgia femoro-prætibialis — i. Nervosa Cotunnii, Neuralgia femoro-poplitæa — i. Nervosa digitalis, Neuralgia cubito-digitalis — i. Nervosa postica, Neuralgia femoro-poplitæa — i. à Sparganosi, Phlegmatia dolens.

ISCHIAT'IC, Ischiad'ic, Ischiat'icus, Ischiad'icus, Ischiacus, Sciat'ic, from ισχιον, 'the haunch;' whence the word Sciatic. An epithet given to parts connected with the ischium. The Sciatic Notches, (F.) Échancrures Ischiatiques, are formed by this bone; the Ischiatic Sinus belongs to it, and gives attachment to the small sacrosciatic ligament. The Tuberos'ity of the Ischium, Os scdentu'rium, Tuber Is'chii, (F.) Tubérosité sciatique, is formed by it. It receives the insertions of different muscles of the thigh, and forms the projection on which the body rests when seated.

Ischiatic Artery, Sciat'ic Ar'tery, (F.) Artère Fémoro-Poplitée (Ch.) arises singly from the hypogastric, or with the gluteal; and seems to be really a continuation of the trunk of the hypogastric. It issues from the pelvis, at the lower part of the great sciatic notch; and, afterwards, divides into a considerable number of branches, which are distributed particularly to the posterior and superior region of the thigh.

Ischiatic Region, Sciat'ic region; Regio ischiad'ica. The region of the hip.

Ischiatic Vein presents the same arrangement as the artery.

ISCHIATICUS, Sciatic.

ISCHIATOCELE, Ischiocele.

ISCHIDRO'SIS, Sudo'ris suppres'sio, Oligid'ria, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and 'ιδρως, 'sweat.' Suppression of perspiration.

ISCHIOBLEN'NIA, Ischoblen'nia, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and βλεννα, 'mucus.' The suppression of a morbid but habitual discharge of mucus.

ISCHIO-CAVERNO'SUS. Belonging to the ischium and corpus cavernosum.

Ischio-Cavernosus muscle, Collatera'lis, Direc'tor penis, Erec'tor penis, Sustenta'tor Penis, Ischio-uréthral (Ch.) is a small, long, flat muscle, which surrounds the origin of the corpus cavernosum. It is fixed below to the inner side of the tuberosity of the ischium, and above to the root of the penis, where it is confounded with the fibrous membrane of the corpus cavernosum. It draws the root of the penis downwards and backwards.

Ischio-Cavernosus of the female, Erector-clitor'idis, Sustenta'tor clitor'idis, Superior rotun'dus clitor'idis, (F.) Ischio-clitoridien, Ischio sous-clitorien, (Ch.), is arranged nearly as in the male, but is less bulky. It arises, by aponeurosis, from the tuberosity of the ischium, and terminates by embracing the corpus cavernosum of the clitoris, to the erection of which it appears to contribute.

ISCHIOCE'LĒ, Ischiatoce'lē, Ischiadoce'lē, Hernia ischia'tica; from ισχιον, 'the ischium,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' Ischiatic hernia. One in which the viscera issue by the great sciatic notch. It is a rare disease. The protruded parts must be reduced—the patient being placed in a favourable position, and they must be retained by a bandage.

ISCHIO-CLITORIA'NUS. That which is connected with the ischium and clitoris.

Ischio-Clito'rian Artery of Chaussier is a division of the internal pudic, which furnishes the two arteries of the clitoris — the superficial and deep-seated.

Ischio-Clitorian Nerve, of the same professor, is the superior branch of the pudic nerve, which is distributed to the clitoris.

ISCHIO-CLITORIDIEN, Ischio-cavernous — i. Coccygeus, Coccygeus—i. Crêti-tibial, Semitendinosus, — i. Femoralis, Adductor magnus — i. Fémoro-péronier, Biceps flexor cruris—i. Périneal, Transversus perinæi — i. Popliti-fémoral, Semi-membranosus — i. Popliti-tibial, Semimembranosus — i. Prétibial, Semi-tendinosus — i. Sous-clitorien, Ischio-cavernosus — i. Sous-trochantérien, Quadratus femoris — i. Spino-trochan- térien, Ischio-trochanterianus — i. Uréthral, Ischio-cavernosus.

ISCHIODYMIA, see Somatodymia.

IS'CHION, Ischium, Os ischii, Os coxen'dicis, Hip-bone, Huckle-bone, Seat-bone, (F.) Os de l'assiette. The lowermost of the three portions which compose the os innominatum in the fœtus and young individual. The inferior region of the same bone has, also, been called ischium, in the adult. According to Hesychius, the ancients designated by the word ischion, the capsular ligament of the coxo-femoral articulatien, as well as the articulation itself. Some derive the word from ισχις, the lumbar region; others from the verb ισχω, 'I arrest,' 'I retain;'—because that bone serves as a base or support for the trunk, when we are seated.

Ischion, Haunch,

ISCHIOPA'GES, from Ischion, and παγω, 'I fasten.' A monstrous union of two fœtuses, in which they are attached to each other by the ischia. — Geoffroy St. Hilaire. See Hypogastrodidymus.

ISCHIOPHTHI'SIS, Tabes coxa'ria seu ischiad'ica, Phthisis ischiad'ica, from ισχιον, 'ischium,' and phthisis. Phthisis in consequence of suppuration of the hip joint.

ISCHIO-PROSTAT'ICUS. Winslow, Sanctorini, Albinus, and Sömmering, have given this name to the fibres of the transversus perinæi muscle, which go towards the prostate.

ISCHIO-RECTAL FOSSA, Perineal fossa.

ISCHIOSIS, Neuralgia femoro poplitæa.

ISCHIO-TROCHANTERIA'NUS, Gem'ini, Gemel'li. Part of the Marsupia'lis of Cowper; Car'neum Marsu'pium, Ischio-spini-trochantérien, Seeun'dus et ter'tius quadrigem'inus, (F.) Muscle cannelé, Accessoire à l'obturateur interne. Two small, fleshy bundles, long and flat, which arise, —the superior on the outside of the sciatic spine; the inferior behind the tuberosity of the ischium. Both pass horizontally outwards, and are attached to the tendon of the obturator internus, which they accompany into the fossa of the trochanter. These muscles are rotators of the lower limb outwards. They can, also, turn the pelvis on the femur, in standing on one foot.

ISCHIUM, Ischion.

ISCHL, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs, which are in Upper Austria, contain iodine and bromine.

ISCHNOPHO'NIA, from ισχνος, 'slender,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Slenderness of voice. — Hippocrates, Galen.

ISCHNOTES, Emaciation.

ISCHO, ισχω, 'I keep back,' 'I restrain,' 'I hold firm.' Hence:

ISCHOBLENNIA, Ischioblennia.

ISCHOCENO'SIS, from ισχω, 'I arrest,' and κενωσις, 'evacuation.' Retention or suppression of a natural evacuation — as of the menses.

ISCHOCHOL'IA, from ισχω, 'I arrest,' and χολη, 'bile.' Reten'tio bilis. Retention or suppression of the biliary secretion.

ISCHOCOILIA, Constipation.

ISCHOCOPRIA, Constipation.

ISCHOGALAC'TIA, Reten'tio lactis, from ισχω, and γαλα, 'milk.' Want of milk in the mammæ.

ISCHOLO'CHIA or Ischolochi'a, Lochios'chesis, Suppres'sio lochio'rum, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and λοχεια, 'the lochial discharge.' Reten'tio lochio'rum. Suppression of the lochial discharge.

ISCHOMENIA, Amenorrhœa.

ISCHONEURALGIA, Neuralgia femoro-poplitæa.

ISCHOPHONIA, Balbuties.

ISCHOSPER'MIA, from ισχω, 'I retain,' and σπερμα, 'sperm;' Sem'inis reten'tio. Retention or suppression of the spermatic secretion.

ISCHURET'IC, Ischuret'icum. Same etymon as the next. A medicine for relieving suppression of urine. A diuretic.

ISCHU'RIA, Uri'næ suppres'sio, Stoppage of urine, Suppres'sio lo'tii, Paru'ria retentio'nis; from ισχω, 'I arrest,' 'I retain,' and ουρον, 'urine.' Impossibility of discharging the urine. Generally restricted to suppression of the secretion, or to renal Ischuria or Anu'ria, Anure'sis.

Ischuria Vera is that in which the urine having accumulated in the bladder, the patient is unable to pass it, notwithstanding the inclination which constantly distresses him. In false ischuria, Paru'ria inops, Paru'ria retentio'nis rena'lis, Ischuria notha seu spu'ria, of some, (F.) Suppression d'Urine, owing to some disease of the kidney or uterus, the urine cannot reach the bladder.

Ischuria has likewise received various other names, according to the seat and character of the obstacle which opposes the exit of the urine: hence the expressions — Renal, Ureteric, Vesical, Urethral, and Calculous Ischuria. Vesical Ischuria is synonymous with Retention of urine, which see.

Ischuria Cysto-phlegmatica, Cystirrhœa — i. Phimosica, see Phimosicus—i. Spasmodica, Cystospasmus—i. Spuria, see Ischuria—i. Urethralis à phimosi, see Phimosicus—i. Vera, see Ischuria —i. Vesicalis, Retention of urine.

ISINGLASS, Ichthyocolla.

ISIR, Elixir.

ISIS NOBILIS, see Coral.

ISLAND OF REIL, Insula cerebri.

ISLE OF WIGHT, CLIMATE OF. This beautiful island is a favourable summer retreat for invalids. Undercliff is the situation chosen as a winter residence for phthisical valetudinarians. Cowes, Niton, Sandown, Shanklin, and Ryde, are delightful summer residences.

ISOCH'RONOUS, Isoch'ronus, Isochron'ius, Isod'romus, from ισος, 'equal,' and χρονος, 'time.' That which takes place in the same time, or in equal times. The pulsations of the arteries, in various parts of the body, are nearly isochronous.

ISOCH'RYSON, Auro compar; from ισος, 'equal,' and χρυσος, 'gold.' A collyrium, described by Galen as worth its weight in gold. Libavius has also given this name to an amalgam, made with equal parts of antimony and mercury.

ISOC'RATES, from ισος, 'equal,' and κεραννυμι, 'I mix.' A mixture of equal parts of wine and water. — Hippocrates.

ISODROMUS, Isochronous.

ISOLUSINE, see Polygala senega.

ISOM'ERIC, Isomer'icus, Isom'erus, Isomœ'rus, Isom'orus, from ισος, 'equal,' and μερος, 'part.' An epithet applied to different bodies which agree in composition, but differ in properties. The condition is termed Isom'erism.

ISOMERISM, see Isomeric.

ISOMORPHISM, see Isomorphous.

ISOMOR'PHOUS, Isomor'phus, Isomor'phicus, from ισος, 'equal,' and μορφη, 'form.' An epithet applied to different bodies which have the same crystalline form. The condition is called Isomorphism.

ISONANDRA GUTTA, see Gutta percha.

ISOPATHI'A, Isop'athy, from ισος, 'equal,' and παθος, 'disease.' This term has been used by some of the German writers to signify the cure of diseases by the disease itself, or its products; — under the hypothesis, that every contagious disease contains in its contagious matter the means for its cure; — thus, that variola may be cured by homœopathic doses of variolous matter; syphilis, with venereal matter, &c., &c. Others have given to isopathy another form; — maintaining, that every diseased organ has its remedy in the same organ,—that eating liver, for example, will remove disease of the liver!

Isopathia has been used by an American writer — Dr. J. M. B. Harden, of Georgia — to mean "Parallelism of Diseases;" "the disposition of diseases to 'anastomose with each other,' or to wear each other's livery."

ISSUE, Fonticulus — i. Peas, Aurantia curassaventia, see Fonticulus.

ISTHME DU GOSIER, Isthmus of the fauces.

ISTHMION, Isthmus, Pharynx.

ISTHMI'TIS, Inflamma'tio Fau'cium, I. pala'ti, Angi'na simplex, Cynan'chē simplex, Angi'na mitis, A. faucium, Angor fau'cium, (F.) Angine simple. Inflammation of the fauces. See Cynanche pharyngea, and Angina.

ISTHMOCATAR'RHUS; from ισθμος, 'the fauces,' and καταρροος, 'catarrh.' Catarrh of the fauces.

ISTHMODYN'IA, from ισθμος, 'the fauces,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain in the fauces.

ISTHMOPLE'GIA; from ισθμος, 'the fauces,' and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the fauces.

ISTHMOS, Pharynx.

ISTHMOTYPHUS, Cynanche maligna.

ISTHMUS, Isth'mion. A tongue of land joining a peninsula to a continent, or which separates two seas. Anatomists have given the name Fauces, Isthmus of the Fauces, Isthmus Fau'cium, Claustrum Gut'turis, (F.) Isthme du gosier, to the strait which separates the mouth from the pharynx. It is formed above by the velum palati and uvula; at the sides, by the pillars of the fauces and the tonsils; and below, by the base of the tongue.

Isthmus of the Fossa Ova'lis; Isthmus Vieussen'ii, Striga cartilagino'sa cordis, is the prominent arch formed above the fossa ovalis by the union of the two pillars which bound the cavity.

Isthmus of the Thyroid Gland is a narrow band that unites the two chief lobules composing the thyroid gland.

Isthmus Hepatis, see Lobulus anonymus — i. Urethræ, see Urethra — i. Vieussenii, Isthmus of the fossa ovalis, see Ovalis fossa.

ITALICUS MORBUS, Syphilis.

ITCH, Psora — i. of Animals, Scabies ferina — i. Bakers', see Psoriasis — i. Barbers', Sycosia.

Itch, Cowpox. A cutaneous eruption, observed and described by Gölis, which appeared after the fourteenth day from vaccination, and consisted of isolated vesicles, often filled with a puriform fluid.

Itch, Grocers,' see Psoriasis — i. Insect, see Psora — i. Weed, Veratrum viride.

ITCHING, Parap'sis pruri'tus, Autal'gia prurigino'sa, Pruri'tus, Pruri'go, Cnesmos, Cnesma, (F.) Prurit, Demangeaison. A sensation, more inconvenient than painful, seated especially at the surface of the body, which provokes the patient to scratch the part. It may be either an external or an internal sensation: that is, produced by an external body, or by some modification in the organic actions of the part to which it is referred.

ITEA, Salix.

ITER DENTIS, see Gubernaculum dentis — i. Femineum, Perinæum — i. ad Infundibulum, Vulva — i. a Palato ad Aurem, Eustachian tube — i. ad Quartum ventriculum, Aquæductus Sylvii — i. ad Tertium ventriculum, Vulva — i. Urinæ, Urethra — i. Urinarium, Urethra..

ITHYPHAL'LUS, from ιθυς, 'straight,' and φαλλος, 'penis.' An amulet, in the form of a penis, anciently worn round the neck, to which were attributed alexiterial properties.

ITINERARIUM, Conductor, Director.

ITIS, from ιτης, 'bold,' 'rash.' A suffix denoting inflammation; — as encephal*itis*, inflammation of the encephalon; — Pleur*itis*, inflammation of the pleura.

IVA, Teucrium iva — i. Arthritica, Teucrium chamæpitys — i. Moschata Monspeliensium, Teucrium iva — i. Pecanga, Smilax sarsaparilla.

IVETTE MUSQUÉE, Teucrium iva — i. Petite, Teucrium chamæpitys.

IVOIRE, Ivory.

IVORY, Ebur, El'ephas, (F.) Ivoire. The tusk of the elephant. It is chiefly composed of phosphate of lime, and is used for the fabrication of pessaries, artificial teeth, handles of instruments, &c. Formerly, when calcined to whiteness, it entered into some pharmaceutical preparations. It was regarded as astringent and anthelmintic, and was called Spodium.

The dentine is the ivory of the human tooth. See Tooth.

IVRAIE, Lolium temulentum.

IVRESSE, Temulentia.

IVY, Hedera helix, Kalmia angustifolia — i. American, Ampelopsis quinquefolia — i. Big, Kalmia latifolia — i. Fine-leaved, Ampelopsis quinquefolia — i. Ground, Glecoma hederaceum.

IXIA, Varix, Viscum album.

IXINE, Atractylus gummifera.

IXIR, Elixir.

IXOS, Viscum album.

IXUS, Galium aparine.

IXYOMYELI'TIS, from ιξυς, 'the lumbar region,' μυελος, 'marrow,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the spinal marrow in the lumbar region.

IXYS, Ix'ya, Ix'yē. Used by different authors for the ilia, flanks, and loins; most frequently for the last. — Hippocrates.

J.

JABOT, Ingluvies.

JACA INDICA, Thymus mastichina.

JACEA, Tricolor, Viola Tricolor — j. Ramosissima, Centaurea calcitrapa.

JACENS, Sick.

JACK IN THE HEDGE, Alliaria.

JACKSON'S BATHING SPIRITS, Linimentum saponis compositum.

JACOBÆA, Senecio Jacobæa.

JACOBÉE, Senecio Jacobæa.

JACOB'S LADDER, FALSE, Polemonium reptans.

JACOBSON'S ANASTOMOSIS, see Petrosal ganglion.

JACTA'TION, Jactita'tion, Jacta'tio, Jacta'tus, Rhiptas'mos, Jactita'tio, from jactare, 'to toss about.' Extreme anxiety; excessive restlessness; — a symptom observed in serious diseases.

JACTITATIO, Inquietude.

JADE NÉPHRITE ou ORIENTALE, Nephreticus lapis.

JAGRE, see Tari.

JAMES'S ANALEPTIC PILLS, see Analeptica.

JAMESTOWN WEED, Datura stramonium.

JANAMUNDA, Geum urbanum.

JANIPHA MANIHOT, Jatropha manihot.

JANITOR, Pylorus.

JANITRIX, Porta vena.

JANON-TARENTISME, Tarantismus.

JANUS, Dicephalus.

JACQUIER, Artocarpus.

JARRET, Poples.

JARRETIER, Poplitæus muscle, Hamstring.

JARRETIÈRE (F.), Peris'celis, a garter, from garetum or garretum, in low Latiu, the ham. A kind of furfuraceous herpes, which occupies the part of the leg where the garter is worn.

JASMIN, Jasminum officinale.

JASMINUM ARABICUM, Coffea Arabum.

JASMI'NUM OFFICINA'LĒ, Jasmi'num, Jesemi'num, the Jes'samine, (F.) Jasmin. The flowers of this beautiful plant have a very fragrant smell, and a bitter taste. They afford, by distillation, an essential oil; which is much esteemed in Italy, for rubbing paralytic limbs, and in the cure of rheumatic pains.

JASPER, Jaspis.

JASPIS, Jasper. A precious stone, supposed by the ancients to be capable of arresting hemorrhage when worn as an amulet.

JATAMANSI, Sumbul.

JAT'ROPHA CURCAS, Ric''inus major, Ricinoï'des, Pi'neus purgans, Pinho'nes In'dici, Faba cathar'tica, Avella'na cathar'tica, Nux cathar'tica America'na, Nux Barbaden'sis, Physic Nut, (F.) Pignon d'Inde, Médicinier cathartique, Grand haricot de Pérou, Pignon de Barbarie, Noix cathartique, N. Américaine ou des Barbades. Nat. Order, Euphorbiaceæ. The seeds of this plant afford a quantity of oil, given, in many places, like the castor oil; to which, indeed, it is nearly allied. They contain a peculiar acid, the Jatrophic or Igasuric.

The seeds of JATROPHA MULTIF'IDA are called Purging Nuts, and give out a similar oil.

JATROPHA ELASTICA, see Caoutchouc.

JATROPHA MAN'IHOT, Jan'ipha Man'ihot. The plant affording the Cassa'da or Cassa'va Root, Cuca'vi, Cassa'vē, Cazabi, Pain de Madagascar, Ric''inus Minor, Man'ioc, Magnoc, Maniot, Yucca, Manihar, Aipi, Aipima coxera, Aipipoca, Janipha. The juice of the root is extremely acrid and poisonous. What remains, after expressing it, is made into cakes or meal; of which the cassada or cassava bread is formed. This bread constitutes a principal food of the inhabitants of those parts where it grows.

The fecula of the root forms Tapioca, Cipipa, Fec'ula Tapio'ka, Am'ylum manihot'icum, which is very nutritious. It may be prepared in the same manner as sago.

A factitious Tapioca is met with in the shops, which is in very small, smooth, spherical grains, and is supposed to be prepared from potato starch. It is sold under the name pearl tapioca.

JAUNDICE, Icterus — j. Black, Melæna — j. Lead, Icterus saturninus — j. Red, Phenigmus.

JAUNE, Yellow — j. d'Œuf, see Ovum.

JAUNISSE, Icterus.

JAW BONE, Maxillary Bone.

JAW-DISEASE, PHOSPHORUS, see Phosphorus.

JEAN-DE-GLAINES, ST., MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters are situate two leagues from Billom in Auvergne. They contain chloride of calcium, and carbonate of magnesia; dissolved in an excess of carbonic acid.

JECINUS, Liver.

JECORARIA, Marchantia polymorphia.

JECORARIUS, Hepateros, Hepatic.

JECORIS VOMICA, see Hepatitis.

JECTIGA'TIO. A word used by Van Helmont for a species of epilepsy or convulsion.

JECUR, Liver — j. Uterinum, Placenta.

JEFFERSO'NIA BARTONI, J. Diphyl'la, Common Twinleaf, Yellow Root, Helmet Pod, Ground Squirrel Pea. An indigenous plant, belonging to Nat. Ord. Berberideæ, Sex. Syst. Octandria Monogynia; which possesses medical properties analogous to those of hydrastis.

JEJUNITAS, Hunger.

JEJUNI'TIS; a term of hybrid formation, — from Jejunum, 'the intestine jejunum,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the jejunum.

JEJUNIUM, Hunger, Fasting.

JEJU'NUM, from jejunus, empty;' Nestis, νηστις, Nesti'a. The part of the small intestine comprised between the duodenum and ileum. It has been so called, because it is almost always found empty in the dead body.

JESSAMINE, Jasminum officinale—j. Yellow, Gelseminum nitidum.

JEUNESSE, Adolescence.

JEWEL WEED, Impatiens balsamina.

JEW'S EAR, Peziza auricula — j. Harp, Trillium latifolium.

JIGGER, Chique.

JIMSTON WEED, Datura stramonium.

JOANNESIA PRINCEPS, Anda.

JOANNETTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Several springs are found at Joannette, about five leagues from Angers, in France. The waters are both cold and warm, and contain sulphate of lime; subcarbonate of soda; chloride of sodium; some iron; chloride of calcium, and, sometimes, a kind of saponaceous matter. They are chiefly used as a tonic in chlorosis, leucorrhœa, &c.

JOE PYE, Eupatorium perfoliatum.

JOHNE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Johne is a village near Dol in Franche-Comté, France, where is a mineral spring, which contains subcarbonate of soda, and subcarbonates of magnesia and iron. It is used chiefly as a bath in certain diseases of the skin, and in atonic affections.

JOINT, Articulation — j. Ball and Socket, Enarthrosis — j. Dove-tail, Suture — j. Stiff, Ankylosis.

JONAS, MINERAL WATERS OF. This spring is situate to the south-west of Bourbon-l'Archambault, in France. The waters contain chloride of calcium and sulphate of lime; chloride of sodium, and sulphate of soda; carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid gas. They are tonic and aperient.

JOUAN, ST., MINERAL WATERS OF. St. Jouan is a village, near Saint-Malo, in France. The water is a cold chalybeate.

JOUBARBE ÂCRE, Sedum — j. des Toits, Sempervivum tectorum — j. des Vignes, Sedum telephium.

JOUE, Genu.

JOULOS, Julus.

JOUR, Dies.

JOURS CANICULAIRES, Dog days — j. Critiques, Critical days — j. Indicateurs, Indicating days.

JOVIS FLOS, Crocus — j. Glans, Juglans.

JUCATO CALLELOE, Phytolacca decandra.

JUDÆ'US, Juda'icus (Lapis,) Phœnici'tes Lapis, Tecol'ithos, (F.) Pierre Judaïque. A stone, found in Judæa, Palestine, &c. Called, also, Lapis Syriacus. It was formerly esteemed to be diuretic and lithontriptic.

JUDGMENT, Judic''ium, (F.) Jugement. The faculty of the intellect, by which ideas are compared with each other, and their relative worth appreciated.

JUDICATORII DIES, Critical days.

JUDICIUM, Judgment.

JUGAL, Zygomatic — j. Process, Zygomatic process.

Jugal Region, Re'gio juga'lis. The region of the cheek-bone.

JUGALE OS, Malæ os.

JUGALIS, Zygomatic.

Jugalis Sutu'ra, from ζυγον, 'a yoke.' The suture which unites the Os Malæ or Os Juga'lë with the superior maxillary bone. Also, the sagittal suture.

JUGEMENT, Judgment.

JUGLANS CINER'EA (Jovis glans), Butter Nut, Oil Nut, White Walnut. The inner bark of the root of this tree, Juglans (Ph. U. S.), which is abundant in the United States, is used in medicine, in the form of extract, as an efficacious and mild laxative, in doses of from 10 to 20 grains. It is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

Juglans Re'gia, Juglans, Nux Juglans, Carya basil'ica, καρυα, Carya. The Walnut, (F.) Noyer, the tree; Noix, the nut, καρυον, Car'yon. The unripe fruit, in the state in which it is pickled, was formerly esteemed to be anthelmintic. The putamen or green rind of the walnut has been celebrated as a powerful antisyphilitic, and used as a sort of diet drink. The kernel is an agreeable article of dessert; but, like all nuts, is difficult of digestion. The expressed oil, Huile de Noix, is used in France as an aliment, and, like other fixed oils, is laxative.

Various preparations of the leaves have been recommended in scrofulous affections.

JUG'ULAR, Jugula'ris, from jugulum, 'the throat.' Relating to the throat.

Jugular Fossa, Fossa Jugula'ris, is a cavity in the petro-occipital suture. It is formed by the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and by the occipital bone, and lodges the origin of the internal jugular vein. It is, sometimes, called thimble-like cavity.

Jugular Veins, Venæ Jugula'res, V. sphagit'ides, V. apoplec'ticæ, V. sopora'les. These are situate at the lateral and anterior parts of the neck. They are two on each side; one external, the other internal. 1. The External Jugular Vein, Trachélo-sous-cutanée, (Ch.) is of less size than the internal. It descends, almost vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the cervix of the lower jaw to the subclavian vein, into which it opens, a little above the internal jugular. It is formed by the internal maxillary, superficial temporal, and posterior auricular veins. It is this vein which is commonly opened in bleeding in the neck. 2. The Internal Jugular Vein, V. Céphalique (Ch.), Vena apoplec'tica, is much larger, and more deeply seated than the preceding. It descends, vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the posterior part of the foramen lacerum posterius as far as the subclavian vein. It commences at the sinus of the jugular vein, (F.) Golfe de la veine jugulaire, and receives the blood, which returns by the sinus of the dura mater, and that of the facial, lingual, pharyngeal, superior thyroid, occipital, and diploïc veins.

JUGULUM, Clavicle, Throat — j. Uteri, Collum uteri.

JUGUM PENIS, Presse-urèthre.

JUICE, EXPRESSED, see Succus.

JUJUBE, Jujuba, Ziz'yphum, Baccæ jujubæ, B. Ziz'yphi. The fruit of Rhamnus Ziz'yphus, Ziz'yphus vulga'ris seu jujuba seu sati'va, a native of the south of Europe. It was formerly ranked amongst the pectoral fruits. It has an agreeable sweet taste. The fruits of two other species of Zizyphus—Z. jujuba, Rhamnus jujuba, Mansana arbo'rea, a native of the East Indies, and Z. lotus, Rhamnus lotus, Zizyphus nit'ida seu sati'va seu sylves'tris, growing in North Africa, possess similar properties to Zizyphus vulgaris.

Jujube Paste, Paste of jujubes.

JULAPIUM, Julep — j. Camphoræ, Mistura Camphoræ.

JULEB, Julep.

JULEP, Jula'pium, Jule'pus, Zula'pium, Juleb of the Persians. A sweet drink. A demulcent, acidulous or mucilaginous mixture.

Julep, Camphor, Mistura camphoræ — j. Camphré, Mistura camphoræ — j. Mint, see Mint julep.

JULUS, Julos, Ioulos, ιουλος. The first down that appears upon the chin. — Rufus of Ephesus.

JUMEAU, Gemellus.

JUMEAUX DE LA JAMBE, Gastrocnemii.

JUMELLE, Gemellus.

JUMENTOUS URINE, Urine jumenteuse.

JUNCTURA, Articulation.

JUNCUS ODORA'TUS, Andropo'gon schœnan'thus seu bicor'nis seu citra'tus seu citriodo'rus, Cymbopo'gon schœnan'thus, Fœnum camelo'rum, Juncus aromat'icus, Camel's hay, Sweet rush, Schœnan'thus, Schœnan'thum, Scœnan'thum, Cal'amus odora'tus, Squinan'thus, Gramen arien- ta'lē, (F.) Jonc odorant. The dried plant, which is generally procured from Turkey and Arabia, has an agreeable smell, and a warm, bitterish taste. It was formerly used as a stomachic and deobstruent.

JUNGLE FEVER. A variety of remittent occurring in the jungle districts of India.

JUNIPER TREE, Juniperus communis.

JUNIP'ERUM VINUM. Wine impregnated with juniper berries.

JUNIP'ERUS COMMU'NIS, J. Suecica, Arceu'thos, Ju'niper tree; Akat'alis, Akat'era. Family, Coniferæ. Sex. Syst. Dicœcia Monadelphia. The tops and berries, Junip'erus (Ph. U. S.), are ordered in the pharmacopœias. Their odour is strong, but not unpleasant. Taste warm, pungent. Properties dependent upon essential oil, which they yield to both water and alcohol. Dose, ℈j to ʒss, rubbed with sugar. In Holland, juniper berries are used for flavouring gin. The oil, O'leum junip'eri, possesses the virtues of the plant. It is called, by Ruland, Targar. (F.) Genévrier (the plant), Genièvre (the berry).

JUNIPERUS LYCIA. This plant—Thu'rea, Th. virga, Arbor thurif'era—has been supposed to afford the true frankincense, Cedros Olib'anum, Thus Libano'tos, Libano'tum, Lib'anos, Thus mas'culum, Thus verum, (F.) Encens. By some, however, it is supposed to be the produce of an Am'yris, and by others of Boswel'lia serra'ta. The odour of olibanum is peculiar and aromatic; taste bitterish and slightly pungent; partly soluble in alcohol, and forming a milky emulsion, when triturated with water. It was formerly used in dysentery and hæmoptysis, but is now never employed except as a perfume in a sick room.

JUNIPERUS OXYCE'DRUS, (F.) Cade, Oxicèdre, Oxycèdre, grows in the south of Europe, Siberia, &c. By combustion of the wood, a liquid tar, O'leum ca'dinum, Junip'eri o'leum empyreumat'icum, Huile de Cade ou de Genévrier, is obtained, which is employed externally in various chronic cutaneous and other diseases.

JUNIPERUS SABI'NA, Sabi'na, Savi'na, Sabi'na ster'ilis, Bruta, Cedrus baceif'era, Common or barren savin; Brathu, Brathys, Ba'rathron, Bo'rathron, (F.) Sabine, Savinier. The odour of savin leaves is strong and disagreeable. Taste hot, acrid, and bitter, depending on an essential oil. Their operation is stimulant, emmenagogue, anthelmintic, and abortive; externally, escharotic. Dose, internally, gr. v to x of the powder. As an escharotic, they are applied in powder or formed into a cerate. The essential oil, O'leum Sabi'næ (Ph. U. S.), has the virtues of the savine. Dose, two to five drops.

JUNIPERUS SUECICA, J. communis.

JUNIPERUS VIRGINIA'NA, Red cedar. This tree is known throughout the United States by the name of savine, and is often used for the same purposes.

JUNK, Pad.

JUNO LUCINA, Ilithyia.

JUPITER, Tin.

JURIBALI, Euribali. A tree in the forests of Pomeroon. Fam. Meliaceæ. Class, Octandria. Nat. Order, Monogynia. The bark is febrifuge, and may be given in powder or infusion, (ʒj ad aq. bullient. Oij.)

JURISPRU'DENCE, MED'ICAL, from jus, juris, 'law,' and prudentia, 'knowledge.' Jurispruden'tia Med'ica. This word is often used synonymously with Legal Medicine. It is now, as frequently, perhaps, employed for the embodied laws and regulations that relate to the teaching and practice of medicine.

JURY OF MATRONS. A jury formed of women empanelled under a writ de ventre inspiciendo, to try the question, whether a woman be with child or not.

JUS, Zomos, Zomid'ium, Sorbit''io, Sor'bitum. Soup, broth, Jus'culum or bouillon.

JUS BOVINUM, Beef-tea—j. Coagulatum, Gelly.

JUS D'HERBES, (F.) The juice of certain vegetables administered as depuratives; as that of fumitory, burdock, water trefoil, &c.

JUS JELATUM, Gelly—j. de Réglisse, see Glycyrrhiza—j. de Viande, see Bouillon.

JUSCULUM, see Jus.

JUSQUIAMUS, Hyoscyamus.

JUSQUIAUME, Hyoscyamus.

JUSTICIA BIVALVIS, Adulasso—j. Adhatoda, Adhatoda.

JUSTIC''IA ECBOL'IUM, Carim curini. A Malabar plant, the root of which, and the leaves, in decoction, are considered in the country to be lithontriptic.

JUSTICIA PECTORA'LIS. A West India plant, which is slightly astringent. (F.) Carmantine, C. Pectorale, Herbe aux Charpentiers.

JUVANS, Auxil'ium, Remed'ium. A medicine or substance of any kind, which relieves a disorder. An adjuvant.

JUVENIS, Adolescens.

JUVENTA, Adolescence, Hebe.

JUVENTAS, Adolescence, Hebe.

JUVENTUS, Adolescence, Hebe.

JUXTAPOSIT''ION, Juxtaposit''io, from juxta, 'near to,' and ponere, positum, 'to place.' The mode of increase proper to minerals; which consists in the successive application of new molecules upon those that form the primitive nucleus. It is opposed to intussusception.

K.

N. B.—Most of the terms under K, derived from the Greek, are found under the letter C.

K. This letter was formerly used to designate a compound of gold.

KAATH, Catechu.

KAAWY. Ancient name of an Indian drink, prepared from maize.

KABALA, Cabal.

KÆMPFERIA GALANGA, see Maranta galanga.

KÆMPFE'RIA ROTUN'DA. Called after Kæmpfer, the naturalist; Zedoa'ria, Z. rotun'da, Amo'mum zedoa'ria, Col'chicum Zeylan'icum, Cur'euma aromat'ica, Zed'oary, (F.) Zédoaire ronde. The roots of this Ceylonese plant have a fragrant smell, and warm, bitterish, aromatic taste. They are in wrinkled, gray, ash-coloured, heavy, firm, short pieces; of a brownish-red colour within; and are stimulant and carminative. Dose, ℈j to ʒj of the powder.

According to some, the round zedoary is furnished by Curcuma zerumbet; the long, Zedoa'ria longa, by Cur'cuma zedoa'ria.

KAHINCÆ RADIX, Caincæ radix.

KAIB, Kayl. A word employed by the alchemists for sour and coagulated milk.

KAJEPUT, Cajeput.

KAKOCHYMIA, Cacochymia.

KALMIA ANGUSTIFO'LIA. Called after Kalm, the botanist. Ivy, Narrow-leaved Kalmia or Laurel, Dwarf Laurel, Sheep Laurel. This plant has the same virtues as K. latifolia. So also has Kalmia Glauca, Swamp Laurel.

Kalmia, Broad-Leaved, K. latifolia.

Kalmia Latifo'lia, Broad-leaved Kalmia, Cal'ico bush, Laurel, Mountain Laurel, Rose Laurel, Big Ivy, Spoonwood, Lambkill, Sheep-poison, Broad-leaved Laurel. This plant kills sheep and other animals. The Indians use it as a poison. The powdered leaves have been applied successfully in tinea capitis; and a decoction of it has been used for the itch. The powder, mixed with lard, has been applied in herpes.

Kalmia, Narrow-leaved, K. angustifolia.

KALO, Arum esculentum.

KAMPHUR, Camphor.

KAPHUR, Camphor.

KARABE, Asphaltum.

KARABITUS, Phrenitis.

KARCINOSEN, Carcinoses.

KARENA, Carena.

KASSADER, Convolvulus panduratus.

KASSAUDER, Convolvulus Panduratus.

KATASARCA, Anasarca.

KATASTALTICA, Astringents.

KAVA, Ava.

KAVIAC, Caviare.

KAYL, Kaib.

KEITA, Monsonia ovata.

KELOID, Cancroid.

KELOTOMIA, Celotomia.

KELP, Varec. The impure mineral alkali obtained by burning certain marine plants. See Soda.

KENNELWORT, Scrophularia nodosa.

KENTUCKY, MINERAL WATERS OF. The Olympian Springs in this state are near the sources of Licking River. There are three different kinds, in the space of half a mile. One of them is saline, impregnated with sulphur;—another is chalybeate, and a third a sulphureous spring. In various parts of Kentucky, there are saline waters, which are frequented by invalids. The Salines at Bigbone, formerly employed in the manufacture of salt, are now resorted to. A spring, near Harrodsburg, in Mercer County, is strongly impregnated with sulphate of magnesia.

KERATITIS, Ceratitis.

KERATO-GLOSSUS, Cerato-glossus.

KERATO-IRITIS, Aquo-membranitis.

KERATONYXIS, Ceratonyxis.

KERATO-PHARYNGEUS, Cerato-pharyngeus.

KERATO-STAPHYLINUS, Cerato-staphylinus.

KERATOTOMUS, Ceratotomus, Knife, cataract.

KERMES, Chermes, Alkermes. One of the species of the genus kermes lives on a green oak, and is called Coccus il'icis, Kermes animal, Coccum, Cocci granum, Coccum baph'icum seu infecto'rium, tincto'rum, scarlati'num, &c. The oak, to which allusion has been made, is known by botanists under the name Quercus coccif'era, and grows abundantly in the uncultivated lands of southern France, Spain, and in the islands of the Grecian Archipelago. The kermes inhabiting it has the appearance of a small, spherical, inanimate shell. Its colour is reddish-brown, and it is covered with a slightly ash-coloured dust. This is the kermes of the shops. It is now only used in dyeing; but was formerly reputed to possess aphrodisiac, analeptic, anti-abortive, and other virtues.

Kermes Mineral, see Antimonii sulphuretum præcipitatum.

KERNEL, Tubercle.

KERNELS, WAXING, see Waxing kernels.

KERUA, Ricinus communis.

KETCHUP, Catchup. A pickle prepared from the liquor of the mushroom, walnut, tomato, &c.

KETMIA ÆGYPTIACA, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

KEY, Sax. cæg, Clavis, Cleis, Clavis An'glica, (F.) Clef de Garangeot. An instrument, used for extracting teeth. It consists of a firm handle, with a claw at right angles to it, and moving upon a pivot. This claw embraces the tooth. It has undergone several modifications, and hence various instruments are used under this denomination. The French have the Clef à pompe, Clef à pivot, and Clef à noix.

KEYRI CHEIRI, Cheiranthus cheiri.

KHALA MIMUC, Bit noben.

KIAS'TER, Chiaster, from χιαζειν, 'to cross.' A species of bandage, having the form of the Greek letter χ, which the ancients used for approximating, and maintaining in contact, the fragments of the patella, in cases of fracture of that bone. It was applied in the form of the figure 8.

KIBISTITOME, Cystitome.

KIDNEY. Its etymology is uncertain. Serenius derives it fancifully from Su. Goth. qued, the belly; and nigh, (quasi, quidney.) Ren, Nephros, Protme'sis, (F.) Rein. The kidneys or reins are the secretory organs of the urine. They are two glands, situate deeply,—the one on the right, and the other on the left side,—in the hypochondres: at the sides of the lumbar vertebræ; behind the peritoneum; and in the midst of an abundant, fatty areolar tissue, Tu'nica adipo'sa. The kidney is of a reddish-brown colour; oval form; and flattened on two surfaces. It has, at its internal margin, a deep fissure, by which the renal vessels and nerves enter or quit the organ, and the ureter issues. It resembles, pretty accurately, the haricot or kidney-bean. Two substances are readily distinguishable in it;—the outer, secerning, cortical, glandular or vascular, Substan'tia cortica'lis, S. glandulo'sa, which secretes the urine; and the inner, tubular, medullary, uriniferous, conoidal or radiated, Substan'tia medul la'ris, S. Tubulo'sa, S. Fibro'sa, which appears under the form of small cones or unequal papillæ, each resulting from the union of small capillary tubes, adherent by one of their extremities to the cortical substance; and opening, by the other, at the summit of the cone, into calices, a species of membranous tubes, more or less numerous, which transmit the urine of the papillæ to the pelvis. By the pelvis is meant a small, membranous sac, of an irregularly oval shape, at the base of which are the orifices of the calices, and the other extremity of which is continuous with the ureter. The kidney is surrounded by a fibrous membrane proper to it, Perineph'rus. It has been shown by Mr. Bowman and others that the renal artery is distributed to the corpora Malpighiana, where the watery portion of the urine is separated. The blood then becomes venous, and is distributed by different veins—portal veins of the kidney —to the convoluted tubes through which the proper urine is secreted. Hence the blood passes into the renal vein. The intermediate vessels between the Malpighian bodies and the convoluted tubes, have been termed the Portal System of the Kidney.

KIDNEY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE, Morbus Bright'ii, M. albuminen'sis, Nephri'tis albumino'sa, Neph'ria, Uroze'mia albumino'sa, Cachec'tic nephri'tis, Nephri'tis socia'ta, Asso'ciated nephritis, Inflammation of the Malpig'hian cor'puscles, Disease of Bright, Granu'lar Degenera'tion or Disorganiza'tion of the Kidney, Granular Kidney of Bright, (F.) Maladie de Bright, Néphrite albumineuse, État Granuleux ou Dégenérescence granulée du Rein, Albuminurorrhée. A granular disease of the cortical part of the kidney, which gives occasion to the secretion of urine that contains albumen, and is of less specific gravity than natural, and which destroys by inducing other diseases. It was first described by Dr. Bright of London.

KIDNEY, GRANULAR, OF BRIGHT, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

KI'ESTEINE, Ki'estein, properly Ky'esteine, Ky'estein, Kystein, Cy'esteine or Cy'estein, from κυειν, 'to be pregnant,' and εσθης, 'a garment or pellicle.' A peculiar pellicle, which forms on the urine of a pregnant female when allowed to stand for a few days. It is whitish, opalescent, slightly granular, and may be compared to the fatty substance that swims on the surface of soups, after they have been allowed to cool. When taken in conjunction with other phenomena, it is a valuable aid in the diagnosis of early pregnancy.

KIESTIN'IC, Kiestin'icus; same etymon. Relating or appertaining to kiesteine; as 'kiestinic urine.'

KILBURN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs contain carbonic acid, sulphohydric acid; carbonates of lime, magnesia, and iron; sulphates of soda, lime, and magnesia, and chloride of sodium.

KILOGRAMME, Chiliogram'ma, from χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and γραμμα, 'a gramme.' The weight of a thousand grammes; — two pounds eight ounces, one drachm, and twenty-four grains, Troy.

KILOLITRE, from χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and λιτρα, 'a litre.' A measure containing a thousand litres.

KINA KINA, Cinchona.

KINANCIE, Cynanche.

KINCOUGH, Pertussis.

KINDCOUGH, Pertussis.

KINESIP'ATHY, Kinesitherapi'a, from κινησις, 'motion,' and παθος, 'disease.' A mode of treating disease by gymnastics or appropriate movements.

KINETIC, Motory.

KINGCURE, Pyrola maculata.

KING'S EVIL, Scrofula.

KINICI ACETAS, Quinia, acetate of.

KININUM, Quinina.

KINK IN THE HEAD, see Insanity.

KINKINA, Cinchona.

KINO, Gummi Gambien'sē, Gummi rubrum adstrin'gens Gambien'sē, Af'rican kino, East India kino, Amboy'na kino, Gummi adstrin'gens Fothergil'li. The trees, whence one variety of this resin is obtained, are not botanically ascertained. The London college ascribe it to Pterocar'pus erina'cea; the Edinburgh to Eucalyp'tus resinif'era, Metroside'ros gummif'era; and the Dublin to Butea frondo'sa. The Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1842,) defines it to be "an extract obtained from an uncertain plant;" that of 1851 states it to be the inspissated juice of Pterocarp'us marsu'pium (De Candolle) and of other plants. On wounding the bark, the kino flows drop by drop. A West India variety is said to be derived from Coccoloba uvif'era or Sea-side Grape; and a Botany Bay kino is said to be the concrete juice of Eucalyp'tus resinif'era or brown gum-tree of New Holland. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Monogynia. Nat. Ord. Myrtaceæ. Kino consists chiefly of tannic and gallic acids, oxide of iron, and colouring matter. It is inodorous; the taste a sweetish bitter; and it is sometimes gritty between the teeth. It comes to us in fragments of a dark ruby red colour, and is easily pulverized. Its properties are powerfully astringent. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx in powder.

KIONORRHAPHIA, Staphyloraphy.

KI'OTOME, Kiot'omus, from κιων, 'a pillar,' 'support,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' (F.) Coupebride. An instrument invented by Desault, to cut any accidental brides or filaments in the rectum and bladder; and which he afterwards used for the removal of the tonsils. It is composed of a flat, silver sheath, open at one edge. This sheath is provided with a cutting blade, which can be forced through the opening, and thus all the parts can be divided with which it comes in contact.

KIPPERNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

KIRATE. A weight of four grains, according to Blancard.

KIRKLAND'S NEUTRAL CERATE, see Cerate, Kirkland's Neutral.

KIRRHONOSIS, Cirrhosis.

KIRRHOSIS, Cirrhosis.

KIRSCHWASSER, (G.) 'Cherry water.' An alcoholic liquor, obtained from cherries bruised with their stones, by subjecting them to distillation, after having caused them to ferment. See Spirit.

KISSINGEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These Bavarian springs have been long frequented. There are three, — two chalybeate, and one alkaline and acidulous.

KIST. A weight of 14 grains.—Paracelsus.

KLAPROTHII SULPHAS, Cadmii sulphas.

KLAPROTHIUM SULPHURICUM, see Cadmii sulphas.

KLEPTOMA'NIA, Cleptoma'nia, Klopema'nia, Clopemania; from κλεπτω, 'I steal,' and mania. Insanity, with an irresistible propensity to steal.

KLIPDAS, see Hyrax Capensis.

KLOPEMANIA, Kleptomania.

KNARESBOROUGH, MINERAL WATERS OF, see Harrogate, mineral waters of.

KNEADING, Shampooing.

KNEE, Genu.

KNEE, HOUSEMAID'S. An inflammation of the bursa, which in most individuals is in front of the patella, and is apt to inflame and enlarge from effusion in those in whom it is subjected to much pressure. Hence its name. It is a form of capsular rheumatism.

KNEE-JOINT, Genu.

KNEE-SCAB, Crusta genu equinæ—k. Encircled hoof, Crusta genu equinæ.

KNIFE. Sax. cnif. Swed. Knif. Dan. Kniv. (F.) Canif. Culter, Smilē, Cultell'us, Tomei'on, Tome'us, Machœ'ra, Machœ'rion, Machœ'ris, (F.) Couteau. A cutting instrument, used in surgery to divide the soft parts, and which only differs from the bistouri or scalpel in being usually larger.

The most common knives are the following:

KNIFE, AMPUTA'TION, (F.) Couteau à amputation, C. droit, Culter rectus. This is the largest of the knives used in surgery. Formerly, they were curved; now they are straight, and provided with one or two edges.

KNIFE, CAT'ARACT, Ceratot'omus, Keratot'omus, (F.) Couteau à cataracte. The cataract knives of Richter, Wenzel, Ward, and others, being intended to perform the section of the transparent cornea, are so shaped as to exactly fill the small wound made by them; and thus to prevent the discharge of the aqueous humour, until the section is completed. The blade of the knives of Wenzel and Ward resembles a very narrow lancet, blunt in the posterior five-sixths of one of its edges. The blade of that of Richter is pyramidal, cutting through the whole length of its inferior edge, and also blunt in the five-sixths of the upper.

KNIFE, CHES'ELDEN'S. A knife with a fixed handle; very convex on its edge, concave on the back, which was used by Cheselden in lithotomy.

KNIFE, CROOKED, Culter falca'tus, Culter curvus, (F.) Couteau courbe. A knife, which is crooked and concave on its cutting edge. It was formerly employed in amputation of the limbs.

KNIFE, CROTCHET, Cultel'lus uncus, (F.) Couteau à crochet. A steel instrument, composed of a round staff, furnished with a handle at one extremity, and at the other with a curved knife. It was formerly used to cut to pieces monstrous fœtuses in utero, and to open the head when necessary.

KNIFE, DOUBLE-EDGED, Anceps cultel'lus, Amphis'mela, Amphis'milē, Catling, (F.) Couteau à deux tranchans, Couteau désarticulateur, C. interosseux. A knife, the blade of which is straight and sharp on both sides. It is used for disarticulating bones; and for cutting the soft parts situate between the bones, in amputation of the leg and forearm.

KNIFE EN SERPETTE, (F.) Couteau en serpette. A sort of knife, of the shape of a serpette or pruning-knife, invented by Desault for dividing the bony paries of the maxillary sinus, for the purpose of extracting fungi from it.

KNIFE, LENTIC'ULAR, Culter lenticula'ris, (F.) Couteau lenticulaire. An instrument, used in the operation of trepanning, for removing inequalities in the inner table of the skull, which may have been left by the crown of the trephine around the opening made by it. It is formed of a lenticular button, fixed at the extremity of an iron staff, which is convex on one side, flat on the other; sharp at both edges, and mounted on an ebony handle.

KNIFE, LITHOT'OMY, (F.) Couteau lithotome. A name, given by Foubert to a large knife, the narrow blade of which, four and a half inches in length, was sharp in its whole extent, and made an obtuse angle with the handle. He used it in the lateral operation.

KNIFE, ROOT-CUTTING. In Pharmacy, a knife moving on a joint at its pointed extremity, by which roots and other ligneous matters are divided in pharmaceutical processes.

KNOCK-KNEED, Entogonyaneon.

KNOT, Tubercle.

KNOT, PACKER'S, (F.) Nœud d'emballeur. A compressive bandage, used for arresting hemorrhage from the temporal artery or its branches. The nœud d'emballeur is made with a double-headed roller, five ells long. A graduated compress is placed over the opening in the artery, and the bandage is applied over it; the balls of the roller being carried horizontally round to the opposite temple, where they are crossed obliquely and carried back to the part where the compress is situate. The hands are then changed with the rollers, crossing them so as to form a knot, and taking one above the head; the other beneath the chin. They are then crossed again, so as to form several knots, one above the other. This bandage is called, by some surgeons, Solar or oblique chevestre or capistrum.

KNOT, SURGEON'S, Nodus chirur'gicus, (F.) Nœud du chirurgien. A double knot made by passing the thread twice through the same noose. This knot is used frequently in the ligature of arteries, the umbilical cord, &c.

KNOTBERRIES, Rubus chamæmorus.

KNOTGRASS, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOTROOT, Collinsonia Canadensis.

KNOTWEED, Collinsonia Canadensis, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOWLTON'IA VESICATO'RIA. Nat. Order, Ranunculaceæ. An acrid plant of South Africa, used by the Cape colonists as a blister in rheumatism.

KOINO-MIASMATA, see Miasm.

KOLERUS, a name given by Paracelsus to a dry ulcer.

KOLPORRHAPHY, Elytrorrhaphy.

KOLTO, Plica.

KOOCHLA TREE, Strychnos nux vomica.

KOPYOPIA, see Copyopia.

KORIS, Cimex.

KOSSO, Hagenia Abyssinica.

KOUMIS, Kumyss.

KRAME'RIA, Ratan'hia, Rhatan'ia, Rat'anhy, (F.) Ratanhie. Krameria, Krameria triandra, — Sex. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia, Nat. Ord. Polygaleæ,—is a native of Java. The root has a bitter taste; and is astringent, diuretic, and detergent. Dose, ℈j to ʒj.

KRAME'RIA IXI'NA or Ratanhy of the Antilles has similar virtues.

KREASOTON, Creasote.

KREATIC NAUSEA, see Nausea.

KREATINE, Creatine.

KREATININE, see Creatine.

KREOSOTON, Creasote.

KRETINISMUS, Cretinism.

KRIEBELKRANKHEIT, Convulsio cerealis.

KUA KAHA, Curcuma longa.

KUMYSS, Koumyss, Koumis. A beverage used in families by the people of Yakutz. It resembles sour buttermilk, without being greasy. According to Sir George Simpson, it is prepared in a very simple way from mare's milk, which is merely allowed to stand for some days in a leathern churn till it becomes sour. It is then bottled for use. This drink is rather nutritious than exhilarating; but from the same material the Burats and the Kirghez prepare an intoxicating spirit in which they indulge to excess.

KUSSAUDER, Convolvulus panduratus.

KUTKULEJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTOOKURUNJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTUBUTH. An Arabic name for a species of melancholy in which the patient is never quiet at any one place, but wanders about here and there. Also, the name of an insect, which lives at the surface of stagnant waters, and is in a constant state of agitation. Some lexicographers imagine that it is on account of this last circumstance, that the name of the insect has been given to the disease.

KYANOSIS, Cyanopathy.

KYAPUTTY, Caieput.

KYESTEINE, Kiesteine.

KYESTINIC, Kiestinic.

KYLLO'SIS, from κυλλος, 'crooked,' 'lame.' Cyllo'sis. Professor Chaussier so calls congenital distortion of the feet, Clubfoot, Tal'ipes, (F.) Pied bot. Of this there are many varieties. In one, the foot, instead of resting on the soil, by the whole plantar surface, touches it only with the metatarso-phalangian articulations. It seems as if turned backwards and broken upon the leg, (Pes seu Tal'ipes Equi'nus, Hip'popus, Oxypo'dia.) In other cases the foot is twisted inwards, (Varus, Tal'ipes varus, Blæsop'odes, Blæ'sopus, Cylloepus, Cyllop'oda, Cyllopod'ion, Lo'ripes, (F.) Cagneux,) so that it rests only on the ground on its outer edge; or it may be twisted outwards, (Valgus, Tal'ipes Valgus,) or rest only on its inner edge. In the flatfoot or splayfoot, Duck-foot, Sar'apus, Plat'ypus, Platypod'ia, (F.) Pied plat, the plantar surface of the foot is flattened instead of being concave.

These deformities are rarely accidental. They are almost always congenital, and may be rectified, at an early period, by proper mechanical means to strengthen the foot gradually and restore it to its proper shape and direction; and if these means fail, the tendons and muscles concerned in the deformity may be divided.

KYMOGRAPH'ION; from κυμα, 'wave,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' 'A wave describer or measurer.' An instrument invented by Ludwig, which is self-registering, and exhibits the relation between the waves of the pulse and the undulations produced by respiration. (Müller's Archiv., 1847, s. 242.)

KYNA, Pastinaca opoponax.

KYPHOSIS, see Cyphosis—k. Inflammatoria, Vertebral disease—k. Paralytica, Vertebral disease.

KYST, Cyst, Kystis, Cystis, from κυστις, 'a bladder,' 'pouch.' (F.) Kyste. This term is generally applied to a pouch or sac,—Cysto'ma,—without opening, and commonly of a membranous nature, which is accidentally developed in one of the natural cavities, or in the substance of organs. Many theories have been successively emitted to explain the formation of cysts, but none are entirely satisfactory. Some are formed by a thin, translucent membrane, having scarcely the thickness of the arachnoid; others of a whitish, fibrocellular membrane, more or less thick. Some contain cartilaginous or bony flakes. The greater part have but one cavity; others, on the contrary, have several, separated by complete or imperfect septa, as is frequently seen in those developed in the ovaries. The matter contained in cysts is sometimes limpid, serous, yellowish white, reddish, and, at others, more or less thick, albuminous, adipous, or caseous. The tumour, formed by them, is called Encysted.

KYSTE, Kyst—k. Anévrysmal, Aneurismal sac.

KYSTEIN, Kiesteine.

KYSTHI'TIS, Cysthi'tis, from κυσθος, 'the vagina.' Inflammation of the vulva and of the mucous membrane of the vagina.

KYSTHOPTO'SIS, from κυσθος, the 'vagina,' and πιπτω, 'I fall.' Prolapsus or inversion of the vagina.

KYTTARRHAG''IA, from κυτταριον, 'an alveolus,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Discharge of blood from an alveolus.

L.

LABARIUM, from labi, 'to fall.' Looseness of the teeth.

LABDACISMUS, Lallation.

LABDAMEN, Cistus creticus.

LABDANUM, see Cistus creticus.

LABE, λαμβανω, 'I seize,' 'I take,' 'the act of grasping.' Invasion. Also, employed to denote the first paroxysm of fevers.—Galen, Hippocrates.

LABEO, Chilon.

LABES, Chilon, Macula.

LABIA CUNNI, Lips of the vulva—l. Interna seu Minora, Nymphæ—l. Majora, Lips of the vulva—l. Pudendi, Lips of the vulva—l. Pudendi minora, Nymphæ.

LABIAL, Labia'lis, from labium, 'a lip.'

LABIAL, Orbicularis oris.

LABIAL ARTERY. Haller and Sabatier call thus the facial artery of the majority of anatomists. The labial arteries, properly so called, coronary arteries of the lips, (F.) Coronaires des lèvres, are two in number. The superior arises from the facial, above, and very close to, the commissure of the lips. It is large and tortuous, and is distributed to the upper lip. The lower arises from the facial, at a considerable distance from the commissure, and proceeds, in a serpentine course, into the substance of the lower lip, to which it is distributed LABIAL GLANDS. This name is given to a multitude of muciparous follicles, of some size, round, prominent, and separate from each other, which are found on the inner surface of the lips, below the mucous membrane.

LABIAL VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into superior and inferior. They open into the facial vein;—a division of the internal jugular.

LABIALIS, Orbicularis oris.

LABIDOMETER, Labimeter.

LABIM'ETER, (F.) Labimètre ou Labidomètre, from λαβις, λαβιδος, 'forceps,' and μετρον, 'measure.' A scale adapted to the handles of the forceps, which indicates the distance of the blades from each other, when applied to the head of the child in utero.

LABIS, Forceps.

LABIUM, Lip—l. Leporinum, Harelip—l. Uteri, Amphidesum.

LABLAB, Dolichos lablab.

LABORANS, Sick.

LABORATOIRE, Laboratory.

LABORATORIUM, Laboratory—l. Chymicum seu pharmaceuticum, Pharmacopœia.

LAB'ORATORY, Laborato'rium, Ergaste'rion, (F.) Laboratoire, from laborare, 'to work.' A work-shop. A place for preparing chemical or pharmaceutical products, &c.

LABORIOSUS, Sick.

LABO'RIOUS. Delivery is said to be laborious, Partus laborio'sus, Mogostoc'ia, (F.) Accouchement laborieux, when attended with more difficulty and suffering than usual. With some, laborious labour means one that requires the use of instruments. See Dystocia.

LABOUR, Parturition.

Labour Chair, Obstet'ric chair. A chair, in which a parturient woman is placed during delivery.

Labour, Difficult, Dystocia—l. Dry, Partus siccus—l. Morbid, Dystocia—l. Pains, see Pains—l. Powerless, see Parturition—l. Premature, Parturition, (premature)—l. Preternatural, Metatocia, see Parturition—l. Show, see Parturition.

LABRISULCIUM, Cheilocace, Stomacace.

LABRUM, Lip—l. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain.

LABRUSCA, Bryonia alba.

LAB'YRINTH, Labyrinth'us, Antrum bucci-no'sum. A place, full of turnings, the exit of which is not easily discoverable. Anatomists have given this name to the aggregate of parts, constituting the internal ear, Labyrinth'us auris in'timæ, In'tima pars or'gani audi'tûs, Labyrinth'ic cavity of the ear. The Labyrinth is situate between the tympanum and meatus auditorius internus. It is composed of several cavities, which communicate with each other in the dried bone; as the vestibule, cochlea, semicircular canals, &c. It is lined by periosteum, and also by a pulpy membrane, constituting the membranous labyrinth, on which the auditory nerve is regularly dispersed. This membrane forms two sacs in the vestibule, called sac'culus vestib'uli and sac'culus, respectively, which resemble in shape that of the bony cavities containing them. Each sac contains calcareous matter, constituting the Otolithes and Otoconies. When the sac is laid open, upon the upper and outer part, a partition appears, partaking of the nature of the sac, and called by Meckel, Septum vestib'uli nervo'so-membrana'ceum.

Labyrinth, Membranous, see Labyrinth.

LABYRINTHIC CAVITY OF THE EAR, Labyrinth.

LABYRINTHUS, Labyrinth—l. Auris Intimæ, see Labyrinth.

LAC, Milk, Lacca—l. Ammoniaci, Mistura ammoniaci—l. Amygdalæ, Emulsio amygdalæ—l. Asafœtidæ, Mistura asafœtidæ—l. Avis, Albumen ovi—l. Guaiaci, Mistura Guaiaci—l. Gum, Lacca—l. Lunæ, Marga candida—l. Maris, Sperm—l. Primum Puerperæ, Colostrum—l. Seed, Lacca—l. Shell, Lacca—l. Stick, Lacca—l. Sulphuris, Sulphur præcipitatum—l. Terræ, Magnesiæ carbonas—l. Virginis, Virgin's milk.

LACCA, from lakah, Arab. Gummi laccæ, Stick-lac, Gum-lac, Seed-lac, Shell-lac, (F.) Laque. Lac is a substance formed by an insect, and deposited on different species of trees, chiefly in the East Indies,—for example, on Croton laccif'erum, and two species of Ficus,—Ficus religio'sa, and F. In'dica. The various kinds, distinguished in commerce, are stick-lac, which is the substance in its natural state, investing the small twigs of the tree; and seed-lac, which is the same broken off. When melted, it is called shell-lac.

Lac was, at one time, used in the form of tincture, as a tonic and astringent; and it still forms part of particular dentifrices.

LACERA'TION, Lacera'tio, Rhegē, Rheg'mus, Rhegma, Ruptu'ra, Rupture, from laccrare, 'to tear:'—Dilacera'tio, Sparag'ma, (F.) Arrachement, Déchirement, Dilaceration, Broiement. The act of tearing or rending. The breach made by tearing or rending; as a lacerated wound, Tresis vulnus lacera'tum, Laceratu'ra, Vulnus laceratum.

LACERATURA, see Laceration.

LACERTA, Lizard—l. Aquatica, see Ectozoa.

LACERTI CORDIS, Columnæ carneæ—l. Musculorum, see Muscular fibre.

LACERTULI CORDIS, Columnæ carneæ.

LACERTUS, Brachium, see Muscular fibre.

LAC''ERUM. Same etymon as Laceration. Any thing torn, or appearing as if torn.

Lac''erum Fora'men Ante'rius, (F.) Trou déchiré antérieur, Hiatus spheno-pétreux, (Ch.) is an irregular opening, formed by the sphenoid and petrous portion of the temporal bone. This foramen transmits the third, fourth, and sixth pairs of nerves and the first branch of the fifth pair to the eye and its appendages.

Lacerum Foramen Poste'rius, Foramen jugula'rē, F. lacerum in Basi Cra'nii, (F.) Trou déchiré postérieur, Hiatus occipito-pétreux, (Ch.) is formed by the occipital bone, and the inferior edge of the petrous portion of the temporal bone. Through it, the internal jugular vein, the eighth pair of nerves, and accessory nerve pass out of the cranium.

LACHESIS PICTA, see Arrow-poison.

Lachesis Rhombea'ta, Flammon. A poisonous serpent common in the lower forests of Peru.

LACHRYMA, Tear; see, also, Vitis vinifera.

LACH'RYMAL, Lacryma'lis, from lacryma, 'a tear.' Belonging to the tears. This epithet is given to various parts.

Lachrymal Artery proceeds from the ophthalmic; and distributes its principal branches to the lachrymal gland.

Lachrymal Canal or Duct, Nasal Canal or duct, Cana'lis lacryma'lis, Canalis or'bitæ nasa'lis, Ductus nasa'lis orbitæ, Cana'lis sacci lacryma'lis, Ductus ad Nasum, is formed by the superior maxillary bone, os unguis, and os turbinatum inferius; and is seated in the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. It is lined by a prolongation of the mucous membrane of the lachrymal sac; and its inferior orifice is furnished with a valvular duplicature. This duct transmits the tears, which have been absorbed at the great angle of the eye by the puncta lacrymalia, into the nasal fossæ.

Lach'rymal Caruncle, see Caruncula lacrymalis.

Lachrymal Fossa, Fossa seu Fo'vea lacryma'lis, is a slight depression at the upper part of the orbit, which lodges the lachrymal gland.

Lachrymal Gland, Glan'dula lacryma'lis seu innomina'ta Gale'ni, is seated in a depression of the frontal bone at the upper, anterior, and outer part of that orbit. It is of about the size of an almond; and of an oval shape, flattened above and below:—its great diameter being the antero-posterior. It is composed of several small lobules, united by areolar tissue, and separated by it as well as by vessels and nerves which creep in the intervals. This gland has seven or eight excretory ducts, which open behind the upper eyelid. Its use is to secrete the tears, and pour them on the globe of the eye by the excretory ducts.

Lachrymal Groove, (F.) Gouttière lacrymale, is the bony channel, which lodges the lachrymal sac. It is seated at the anterior and inner part of the orbit, and is formed by the os unguis and the ascending process of the upper jaw bone.

Lachrymal Hernia, Lach'rymal Tumour, Her'nia Sacci Lacryma'lis, is when the tears enter the puncta, but cannot pass to the nose, and accumulate. By Anel, this was called Dropsy of the Lachrymal Sac.

Lachrymal Nerve is the smallest of the three branches formed by the ophthalmic nerve. It is distributed, particularly, to the lachrymal gland and to the upper eyelid. In its course it gives off a spheno-maxillary and a malar filament.

Lachrymal Papilla, see Lachrymal Puncta.

Lachrymal Passages, Viæ lacryma'les, (F.) Voies lacrymales. The organs concerned in the secretion of tears, in spreading them over the eye, and taking them up again to transmit them into the nasal fossæ. The lachrymal passages are composed of the lachrymal gland, caruncle, puncta, ducts, lachrymal sac, and nasal duct.

Lachrymal Puncta, Puncta Lacryma'lia, Spiram'ina Palpebra'rum, (F.) Points lacrymaux, are two small, round, and contractile openings, situate in the centre of a tubercle or papilla, Papilla lacryma'lis, Tuber'culum lacryma'lē, about a line and a half distant from the inner commissure of the eyelids, and continuous with the lachrymal ducts. These ducts, Lacryma'les Canalic'uli, Cana'les seu Ductus lacryma'les, Ductus lacrymales latera'les, D. puncto'rum lacryma'lium, Cor'nua lacryma'lia seu lima'cum, Collic''iæ puncto'rum lacryma'lium, Canalic'uli lima'cum, Cornua Lima'cum, (F.) Conduits lacrymaux, are two in number — a superior and an inferior — which extend from the puncta to the lachrymal sac. They seem formed by a very delicate prolongation of the conjunctiva, which is continuous with the mucous membrane of the lachrymal sac, (F.) Reservoir des larmes : — the Saccus seu Sinus seu Lacus lacryma'lis, Dacryocys'tis, Infundib'ulum lacryma'lē, Saccus lacryma'lis.

Lachrymal Tubercle, see Lachrymal puncta.

Lachrymal Veins accompany the artery of the same name, and open into the ophthalmic and palpebral veins.

LACHRYMA'TIO, Epiphora. Also, a profuse secretion of tears from any cause : — weeping, Fletus, Plora'tio, Plora'tus.

LACINIÆ TUBARUM FALLOPII, see Tube, Fallopian.

LACIS, Plexus.

LACMUS TINCTORIUS, Lichen roccella.

LACONICUM, Vaporarium, see Stove.

LACQ, Laqueus.

LACRIMA, Tear.

LACRUMA, Tear.

LACRYMA, Tear.

LACTANS, Nurse.

LACTA'TION, Lacta'tio, Thela'sis, Thelas'mus, from lacteo, (lac, 'milk,) 'I suckle,' 'I give milk.' Suckling : — the giving of suck, (F.) Allaitement. The French make four varieties of lactation. 1. Allaitement maternel — Maternal Lactation, when the mother suckles the child. 2. A. étranger mercenaire, — when another suckles it. 3. A. artificiel, when the child is brought up by hand. 4. A. animal, when the child is suckled by an animal.

LACTEALS, Chyliferous vessels.

LACTENS, Sucking child.

LACTES, Mesentery, Pancreas.

LACTEUS, Lactic.

LACTIC, Lac'teus, Galac'ticus, Galac'tinus, milky, from lac, 'milk.' Appertaining to milk.

Lactic Acid, Ac''idum Lac'teum, Acid of milk, Acidum Lactis, (F.) Acide Lactique. This has been recommended as a therapeutical agent in atonic dyspepsia, owing to its being presumed to be one of the gastric acids secreted in health. It is given either in the form of lemonade or of lozenges. The acid is obtained either from milk or from the juice of the red beet.

LACTICA, Typhoid.

LACTICANS, Nurse.

LACTICINIA, Parotid.

LACTIFÈRE, Lactiferous.

LACTIF'EROUS, Galactoph'orous, Lac'tifer, (F.) Lactifère, from lac, 'milk,' and fero, 'I carry.' Milk-conveying.

Lactiferous Vessels, Lactiferous Ducts, Tub'uli lactiferi vel Ductus lactiferi seu lac'tea, (F.) Vaisseaux ou conduits lactifères, are the excretory ducts of the mammary gland.

Lactiferous or Lacteal Swelling. A tumefaction of the breast, supposed by Sir Astley Cooper to arise from a large collection of milk in one of the lactiferous tubes, the result of chronic inflammation of the tube near the nipple, with closure of its aperture, and obliteration of the canal for an inch or more. The tube requires to be punctured.

LACTIF'UGA, Lac'tifuge, from lac, 'milk,' and fugo, 'I drive away.' Medicines which dispel milk.

LACTIGO, Porrigo larvalis.

LACTINE, Sugar of milk.

LACTIN'IA, from lac, 'milk.' Food prepared with milk.

LACTIPOTOR, Galactopotes.

LACTIS CONCRETIONES, Infarctus Mammæ lacteus.

LACTIS REDUNDANTIA, Galactia — 1. Retentio, Galactischesis — 1. Sanguinolenti Excretio, Galactohæmia.

LACTISUGIUM, Antlia lactea.

LACTIVORUS, Galactophagous.

LACTOMETER, Galactometer.

LACTU'CA, from lac, 'milk;' so called, from its milky juice. Lactuca Sati'va, Lettuce, Garden Lettuce, Eunu'chium Meco'nis, Thridax, Cherbas, (F.) Laitue ordinaire, is used as a wholesome salad. The seeds possess a quantity of oil, which, when formed into an emulsion, has been advised in ardor urinæ, &c.

The inspissated juice, Lactuca'rium, Thrid'acē, resembles, in odour and appearance, that of opium, and is, like it, narcotic, but uncertain. Dose, gr. j to x and more.

Lactuca Elongata, see L. virosa — 1. Graveolens, L. virosa — 1. Floridana, Mulgedium Floridanum.

Lactuca Scari'ola, L. Sylves'tris, Scariola, (F.) Laitue Scariole, L. Sauvage, possesses a stronger degree of bitterness than L. sativa. It has similar virtues with Z. virosa.

Lactuca Sylvestris, L. scariola — 1. Villosa, Mulgedium acuminatum.

Lactuca Viro'sa, L. graveolens, Strong-scented Lettuce, (F.) Laitue vireuse. The odour of this plant, the leaves of which are used in medicine, is strongly narcotic, and the taste bitter. They are narcotic, diuretic, and aperient; and have been used in dropsies. Lactu'ca elonga'ta, Wild Lettuce of the United States, has been employed for L. virosa.

LACTUCIMEN, Aphthæ.

LACTUCIMINA, Aphthæ.

LACTUMEN, Porrigo larvalis.

LACTUMINA, Aphthæ.

LACU'NA, Canalic'ulus, from lacus, 'a lake or deep ditch. A Fossa or Ditch. A small cavity in a mucous membrane, the parietes of which secrete a viscid humour. It is used synonymously with crypt.

Lacuna, Crypta, Fontanella — 1. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain, Pituitary gland.

Lacuna seu Sulcus seu Sul'culus Labii Superioris, Amab'ilē, Amato'rium, Philtrum, Phile'trum. The hollow of the upper lip under the nose.

Lacuna Magna, see Urethra.

Lacunæ, see Urethra.

Lacunæ of Bone. Certain dark stellate spots with thread-like lines radiating from them, seen under a high magnifying power. These were at first believed to be solid osseous or bone corpuscles, Corpus'cula os'sium — Corpuscles of Purkinje ; but are now regarded as excavations in the bone — Sac'culi chalicoph'ori — with minute tubes or canaliculi proceeding from them, and communicating with the Haversian canals. The lacunæ and canaliculi are fibres concerned in the transit of nutrient fluid through the osseous tissue.

LACUNÆ GRAAFIA'NÆ, L. muco'sæ vulvæ. The mucous follicles of the vagina.

LACUNÆ MUCOSÆ VULVÆ, L. Graafianæ — l. Palpebrarum, Meibomius, glands of.

LACU'NAR, La'quear, 'an arched roof.' The roof of a chamber. Hence,

LACU'NAR OR'BITÆ. The roof of the orbit.

LACUNAR VENTRICULI QUARTI SUPERIOR, Valvula Vieussenii.

LACUNE DE LA LANGUE, Cæcum foramen.

LACUS LACRYMALIS, Lachrymal sac.

LACUS LACRYMA'RUM. A small space in the inner angle of the eye between the lids, towards which the tears flow, and at which the triangular canal formed between the closed lids terminates.

LADA, Piper nigrum.

LADANUM, see Cistus creticus.

LADENDO, Influenza.

LADIES MANTLE, Alchemilla.

LADIES' SLIPPER, SHOWY, Cypripedium spectabile — l. Slipper, stemless, Cypripedium acaule — l. Slipper, yellow, Cypripedium luteum.

LADIES' SMOCK, Cardamine pratensis.

LADRERIE (F.) from ladre, 'a leper.' (F.) Léproserie, Maladrerie. A vulgar name for elephantiasis, or lepra. Also, an hospital for the reception of the leprous, Leprosa'rium, Domus leprosa'ria, Leper hospital.

LADYBIRD, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADYBUG, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADYCOW, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADY CRESPIGNY'S PILLS, see Pilulæ Aloes et Kinæ Kinæ.

LADY HESKETH'S PILLS, see Pilulæ Aloes et Kinæ Kinæ.

LADY WEBSTER'S PILLS, see Pilulæ Aloes et Kinæ Kinæ.

LÆMOPARALYSIS, Œsophagoplegia.

LÆMOS, Pharynx.

LÆMOSCIR'RHUS, Cancer pharyn'gis et œsoph'agi, Læmosteno'sis seu Dyspha'gia scirrho'sa; from λαιμος, 'the pharynx or œsophagus.' Cancer of the pharynx or œsophagus.

LÆMOSTENOSIS, Dysphagia constricta — l. Scirrhosa, Læmoscirrhus.

LÆSIO, Lesion.

LÆTIFICAN'TIA, from lætifico (lætus, and facio), 'I make glad.' Medicines formerly used as cordials, in depression of spirits, &c.

LÆVIGATIO, Levigation.

LÆVITAS INTESTINORUM, Lientery.

LAGENTOMUM, Harelip.

LAGNEA, Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNEIA, Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNESIS, Furor Femininus, Nymphomania — l. Furor masculinus, Satyriasis — l. Salacitas, Satyriasis.

LAGNEUMA, Coition, Sperm.

LAGNIA, Satyriasis.

LAGNOSIS, Satyriasis.

LAGOCHEILUS, Harelip.

LAGONES, Flanks.

LAGONOPONOS, Pleurodynia.

LAGONTOMUM, Harelip.

LAGOPHTHAL'MIA, from λαγος, 'a hare,' and οφθαλμος, 'an eye.' Lagophthal'mus, Hare's Eye; Lepori'nus Oc'ulus, (F.) Œil de Lièvre. A vicious arrangement of the upper eyelid, which is so retracted that it cannot cover the globe of the eye during sleep. It has been asserted that this condition of the eye is natural in the hare when asleep.

LAGOPHTHALMUS, Lagophthalmia, Geum urbanum.

LAGOSTOMA, Harelip.

LAICHE, Sarsaparilla Germanica — l. des Sables, Sarsaparilla Germanica.

LAIT RÉPANDU, (F.) Lait épanché. A popular expression in France, under which is comprehended every kind of disease (and particularly vague pains) occurring after delivery; all being ascribed to diffusion or deposition of milk.

LAIT DE VACHE, Milk of the cow — l. Virginal, Virgin's milk.

LAITERON DOUX, Sonchus oleraceus.

LAITIAT, (F.) Sour whey, in which different wild fruits have been macerated. Said to be much used in the Jura as a refreshing drink.

LAKEWEED, Polygonum hydropiper.

LALIA, Voice, articulated.

LALLA'TION, Lalla'tio, Lambdacis'mus, Labdacis'mus, Lul'laby speech. Sauvages uses this term for a vicious pronunciation, in which the letter L is improperly doubled, or softened, or substituted for R.

LAMAC, Acaciæ gummi.

LAMBDACISMUS, Lallation.

LAMBDOID, Lambdoid'al, Lamdoï'des, Lambdo'des, Lambdoïdeus, from the Greek letter Λ, λαμβδα, and ειδος, 'shape,' 'resemblance.' Anatomists have given the name LAMBDOIDAL SUTURE, Sutu'ra Lambdoïda'lis seu lambdoïdes seu lambdoïdea, S. Prorœ, to the suture, formed by the parietal bones and the occipital, because it resembles the letter Λ, lambda, of the Greeks. It is the Occipito-parietal suture — Suture occipitale, (Ch.) In this suture, the ossa Wormiana are most frequently met with; and the denticulations are most distinctly marked.

LAMBEAU, Flap.

LAMBITIVUM, Eclectos.

LAMBKILL, Kalmia latifolia.

LAME, Lamina — l. Cornée, Tænia semicircularis — l. Ruyschienne, Ruyschiana tunica.

LAMELLA, Lamina.

LAMEL'LAR, Lamello'sus, Lam'inated, (F.) Lamelleux, Lamineux, composed of thin laminæ or leaves — as the Lamellar or laminated tissue; i. e. the areolar tissue.

LAMELLEUX, Lamellar.

LAMENESS, Claudication.

LAM'INA, Lamel'la, (F.) Lame. A thin, flat part of a bone; a plate or table, as the cribriform lamina or plate of the ethmoid bone. Lamina and Lamella are generally used synonymously; although the latter is properly a diminutive of the former.

LAM'INA CINER'EA. A thin layer of gray substance, which forms the anterior part of the inferior boundary of the third ventricle of the brain.

LAM'INA COR'NEA, Tæ'nia Tari'ni. A yellowish band or a thickening of the lining membrane of the ventricle, by which the vena corporis striati is overlaid in the lateral ventricle of the brain.

LAMINA CRIBROSA, Cribriform lamella.

LAMINA CRIBROSA OSSIS ETHMOÏDEI, see Criblé — l. Medullaris triangularis cerebri, Lyra.

LAMINA PERITONÆI EXTERNA. The outer lamina or fold of the peritonæum.

LAMINA PRIMA CUTIS, Epidermis.

LAMINA SPIRA'LIS, Septum scalæ, Septum cochleæ audito'riæ. A partition between the scalæ of the cochlea. The largest part of this next the modiolus is formed of bone. The remainder, or that part next the opposite side of the scalæ, is composed of a cartilaginous membrane, called, by Valsalva, Zona seu Zo'nula Coch'leæ. By some anatomists, the lamina is divided into a Zona os'sea and Z. mollis. By others, it is considered to consist of four laminæ, when examined with a strong glass: a Zona os'sea, next to the modiolus — a Zona corin'cea, on the outer side of this: a Zona vesicula'ris — and a Zona membrana'cea, which is, perhaps, the lining membrane of the cochlea. At the apex of the cochlea, the lamina spiralis terminates by a pointed hook-shaped process, ham'ulus lam'inæ spira'lis.

Lam'inæ Dorsa'les, Dorsal laminæ. Two oval masses on each side of the primitive groove of the embryo, which approach so as to form a groove, in which are lodged the future brain and spinal marrow.

Laminæ Spongiosæ Nasi, Turbinated bones.

Lam'inæ Ventra'les, L. viscera'les. Thickened prolongations of the serous layer of the germinal membrane, which, by their union, form the anterior wall of the trunk of the new being.

LAMINA'RIA DIGITA'TA, Tangle. One of the Algæ eaten in Scotland, and hawked about the streets with the Pepper-dulse.

The leaf of a sea-weed — a species of Laminaria — is employed in the Himalayas under the name of goître leaf, so called because chewed by the inhabitants, where goître prevails.

LAMINATED, Lamellar.

LAMINEUX, Lamellar.

LA'MIUM ALBUM, L. folio'sum, Urti'ca mor'tua, Galeop'sis Archangel'ica, Dead Nettle, White Arch'angel Nettle, (F.) Ortie blanche, Ortie morte. Infusions of this plant have been recommended in uterine hemorrhage, and leucorrhœa. It is not used.

La'mium Amplexicau'lē, Dead Nettle, Henbit; naturalized; flowering from May to October; is regarded as tonic, diaphoretic, and laxative.

Lamium Foliosum, L. album — l. Montanum, Melittis melissophyllum—l. Plinii, Melittis melissophyllum — l. Rubrum, Galeopsis.

LAMOTTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. These thermal springs are in the department of Isère, France. Temperature, 184°.

LAMPOURDE, Xanthium.

LAMPROPHO'NUS, from λαμπρος, 'clear,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a clear voice.

LAMPSANA, Lapsana.

LAMPYRIS, Cicindela.

LANA PHILOSOPHORUM, Zinci oxydum.

LANARIA, Saponaria, Verbascum nigrum.

LANCE DE MAURICEAU, (F.) An instrument invented by Mauriceau for perforating the head of the fœtus. A perforator.

LANCEOLA, Lancet.

LANCET, Lance'ola, Lancet'ta, Schaste'rion, Scalpum chirur'gicum, (F.) Lancette, — diminutive of lancea, 'a lance.' A surgical instrument, used in the operation of phlebotomy. It is composed of two parts, the handle, (F.) Chasse, and the blade, (F.) Lame. The former is made of two small plates of ivory, bone, or shell, moveable on the blade for whose preservation they are intended. The blade is formed of well-polished steel. Lancets are made of different shapes; some being broad-shouldered — others, spear-pointed. The French distinguished three kinds: 1. Lancette à grain d'orge, which, on account of the almost oval shape of its point, makes a large opening. 2. The L. à langue de serpent, which is very narrow towards the point; and, 3. The L. à grain d'avoine, which holds a medium station between the two former, and is generally preferred.

The Abscess Lancet is merely a large lancet for the purpose of opening abscesses.

LANCETTA, Lancet.

LANCETTE, Lancet.

LANCETTIER, (F.) A lancet-case.

LANCINANT, Lancinating.

LAN'CINATING, Lan'cinans, from lancinare (lancea, 'a lance'), 'to strike or thrust through.' (F.) Lancinant, (substantive Élancement.) A species of pain, which consists in lancinations or shootings, similar to those that would be produced by the introduction of a sharp instrument into the suffering part. It is especially in cancer that this kind of pain is felt.

LAND'S END, CLIMATE OF. The climate of the Land's End, in England, resembles that of the south of Devonshire, but is more relaxing. It is considered to be most likely to prove beneficial in consumptive cases, in which the disease is accompanied by an irritated state of the pulmonary mucous membrane, producing a dry cough. Where the system is relaxed, and the secretion from the lungs considerable, the climate, it is conceived, will generally prove injurious. As a brumal retreat, the southern coast of Devonshire would seem to be preferable to it.

LANGEAC, MINERAL WATERS OF. Acidulous, mineral waters at Langeac, in the department of Haute-Loire, France. They are employed as refrigerant, aperient, and diuretic. They contain carbonic acid, carbonates of soda and magnesia, and a little iron.

LAN'GII AQUA EPILEP'TICA, Epilep'tic Water of Langius, formerly employed against epilepsy. It was composed of the flowers of convallaria and lavender, Spanish wine, cinnamon, nutmeg, mistletoe, peony and dittany roots, long pepper, cubebs, and rosemary flowers.

LANGUE, Tongue — l. Abaisseur de la, Glossocatochus — l. de Carpe, see Lever — l. de Cerf, Asplenium scolopendrium — l. de Chien, Cynoglossum — l. de Serpent, Ophioglossum vulgatum.

LANGUEUR, Languor.

LANGUOR, Aph'cesis, Faintness, (F.) Langueur. A species of atony, depression, or debility, which generally comes on slowly.

LANTA'NA, Sage Tree, Blueberry, (F.) Cailleau. The leaves of this indigenous plant form a fine-scented tea, like L. Camara or Bahama Tea, and L. Pseudothe'a or Brazil Tea. The tea is used as a diaphoretic.

LANU'GO, Pili cutis, Pluma, from lana, 'wool.' The soft, fine hair on different parts of the body, especially of the young.

Lanugo Prima, Genetas — l. Pudendorum, Pubes — l. Siliquæ hirsutæ, see Dolichos pruriens.

LANUVIUM, Vulva.

LAONI'CA CURA'TIO seu CURA. A mode of treating the gout, which consisted in the employment of local applications, proper for evacuating the morbific matter.(?)

LAOS, Tin.

LAPACTICUS, Cathartic, Laxative.

LAPARA, Abdomen, Flanks, Lumbi.

LAPAROCE'LĒ, from λαπαρα, 'the lumbar region,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Lumbar Hernia, through a separation of the fibres of the quadratus lumborum, and a protrusion of the aponeurosis of the transverse muscle on the outside of the mass common to the sacro-lumbalis and longissimus dorsi. — Cloquet.

LAPAROCYSTOTOMIA, see Lithotomy.

LAPARO-ELYTROTOMIA, Cæsarean Section.

LAPARO-ENTEROT'OMY, Lap'aro-entero-

tom'ia, from λαπαρα, 'the lumbar region,' the 'abdomen,' εντερον, 'iutestine,' and τομη, 'incision.' The operation of opening the abdomen and intestinal canal, for the removal of disease.

LAPAROSCOPIA, Abdominoscopia.

LAPAROTOMY, see Gastrotomy.

LAPATHOS, Rumex acutus — l. Aquaticum, Rumex hydrolapathum — l. Chinense, Rheum — l. Orientale, Rheum — l. Sanguineum, Rumex sanguineus — l. Unctuosum, Chenopodium bonus Henricus.

LAPE, Mucus.

LAPIDIL'LUM, from lapis, 'a stone.' Blasius has given this name to a kind of scoop, used for extracting stone from the bladder.

LAPILLATIO, Lithia.

LAPILLI GLANDULÆ PINEALIS, see Pineal gland.

LAPIL'LUS, diminutive of lapis, 'a stone.' A small stone; gravel; a grain of sand.

LAPIS, Calculus — l. Accipitrum, Hieracites — l. Acrosus, Calamina — l. Ammoniaci, see Ammoniac gum — l. Animalis, Blood — l. Armenius, Melochites — l. Aureus, Urine — l. Bezoardicus, Bezoar — l. Cæruleus, Cupri sulphas — l. Calaminaris, Calamina — l. Carneolus, Cornelian — l. Causticus, Potassa cum calce, Potassa fusa — l. Collymus, Ætites — l. Contrayervæ, Pulvis contrayervæ compositus — l. Cyanus, L. lazuli.

LAPIS DIVI'NUS, L. Ophthal'micus seu Ophthal'micus Sti. Ivesii. (Cupri sulphat., Alumin., Potass. nitrat. āā ℥j. Melt together, adding at the end Camphor, ℥ss.) Employed to make an eye-water, ℥ij ad aquæ ℥iv.

LAPIS FULMINEUS, Ceraunion — l. Hematites, Hæmatites — l. Heracleus, Magnet — l. Infernalis, Argenti nitras — l. Infernalis alkalinus, Potassa fusa — l. Infernalis sive septicus, Potassa cum calce — l. Judaicus, Judæus (lapis).

LAPIS LAZU'LI, Lapis Cy'anus, Asulei, Laz'ulite, (F.) Pierre d'azur, Outremer. A stone, of a beautiful blue colour; opake; and close-grained; fracture, dull. It is composed of silex; alumine; carbonate and sulphate of lime; oxide of iron, and water. It was formerly looked upon as a purgative and emetic, and given in epilepsy.

LAPIS MALUCENSIS, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine — l. Nauticus, Magnet — l. Ophthalmicus, L. Divinus — l. Ophthalmicus St. Ivesii, L. Divinus — l. Phœnicites, Judæus (lapis) — l. Porcinus, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine — l. Prunellæ, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus — l. Sardius, Cornelian — l. Septicus, Causticum commune, Potassa fusa — l. Specularis, S. lucidum — l. Syderitis, Magnet — l. Syriacus, Judæus (lapis) — l. Vini, Potassæ supertartras impurus.

LAPPA, Arctium lappa, Galium aparine, Lippitudo — l. Minor, Xanthium.

LAPPULA HEPATICA, Agrimony.

LAP'SANA, Lampsa'na, Na'pium, Papilla'ris herba, Dock-cresses, Nipple-Wort, (F.) Lampsane, Herbe aux Mamelles. This plant is a lactescent bitter. It has been chiefly employed, however, as an external application to sore nipples, &c.

LAPSUS PILORUM, Alopecia.

LAQ, Laqueus.

LAQUE, Lacca.

LAQUEAR, Lacunar.

LA'QUEAR VAGI'NÆ, Fundus Vaginæ. The part of the vagina in which the cervix uteri terminates.

LA'QUEUS, Funis. A cord, ligature or bandage, with running knots;—a Noose, a loop. A fillet, Brochos, Pach'etos, (F.) Laq ou Lacq. The term is applied to a bandage or fillet of any kind, attached by means of a loop upon any part, with the view of fixing it; as in certain cases of labour, where a hand or foot presents; or to facilitate extension in luxations and fractures.

Also:—A prominent band in the brain, behind the brachium posterius of the corpora quadrigemina, which marks the course of the superior division of the fasciculus olivaris.

LAQUEUS GUT'TURIS, 'Noose of the throat.' Violent inflammation of the tonsils, in which the patient appears as if suffocated by a noose. According to some, gangrenous cynanche.

LARCH, Pinus larix.

LARD, Adeps.

LARDACÉ, Lardaceous.

LARDA'CEOUS, Larda'ceus, Lar'deus, Lard'iform, Lardifor'mis, (F.) Lardacé; from lardum, 'lard,' the fat of bacon. An epithet given to certain organic alterations in the textures, whose aspect and consistence resemble lard. (F.) Tissus lardacés.

LARDEUS, Lardaceous.

LARDIFORM, Lardaceous.

LARGE, Broad.

LARKSPUR, BRANCHING, Delphinium consolida.

LARME, Tear.

LARMOIEMENT, Epiphora.

LA-ROCHE POSAY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Simple sulphurous waters in the department of Vienne, France.

LARVA, Mask. Also the larve, grub, or vermiform condition of an insect: the first change it experiences after leaving the ovum. Larves of insects are occasionally developed in the intestinal canal from ova swallowed. See Ectozoa.

LARYNGÉ, Laryngeal.

LARYNGE'AL, Laryngæ'us, (F.) Laryngé, Laryngien. Same etymon as LARYNX. That which belongs to the larynx.

LARYNGEAL ARTERIES are given off from the thyroid arteries.

LARYNGEAL NERVES, (F.) Nerfs Laryngés, are two in number; — a superior and an inferior. The superior laryngeal nerve is given off from the trunk of the pneumogastric, at the upper and deep part of the neck. It passes downwards and inwards, behind the internal carotid artery, and divides into two secondary branches; the one, external, which distributes its filaments, on the outside of the larynx, to the sterno-thyroid, hyo-thyroid, constrictor inferior, crico-thyroid muscles, &c. The other, the internal, which crosses the thyro-hyoid membrane, and gives filaments to the epiglottis, the mucous membranes of the pharynx and larynx, to the arytenoid gland, the arytenoid and crico-thyroid muscles, and ultimately anastomoses with the inferior laryngeal nerve. The inferior laryngeal nerves or recur'rents, Nervi reversi'vi, Rameaux Trachéaux (Chaus.,) arise from the trunk of the pneumogastric within the thorax. They ascend in the furrow, which separates the trachea from the œsophagus, to be distributed on the neck, after having been reflected;—the left around the arch of the aorta; the right, around the corresponding subclavian. They send off filaments to the cardiac plexuses; to the parietes of the œsophagus, and trachea; to the thyroid gland: to the inferior constrictor of the pharynx; the posterior and lateral crico-arytenoid and thyro-arytenoid muscles; and to the mucous membrane of the pharynx and larynx.

LARYNGEAL PHTHISIS, Phthisis, laryngeal — l. Sound, Laryngeche.

LARYNGEAL VEINS open into the internal jugular. Winslow gives the name laryngeal to the superior thyroid artery.

LARYNGEAL VOICE, see Voice.

LARYNGE'CHĒ, from λαρυγξ, 'the larynx,' and ηχη or ηχος, 'sound.' The laryngeal sound heard by the stethoscope during breathing and speaking.

LARYNGIEN, Laryngeal.

LARYNGISMUS STRIDULUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGI'TIS, from Larynx, and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation; Inflamma'tio Laryn'gis, Cynanchē laryngeʹa, Angi'na laryngea, (F.) Laryngite, Catarrhe laryngien, Angine laryngé, Inflammation of the Larynx. This disease, in some measure, resembles croup; but is usually devoid of that peculiar sonorous inspiration, which attends the latter. There is, also, pain upon pressing the larynx; and, whilst laryngitis is a disease of more advanced life, croup attacks children. The membraniform exudation is, also, absent; probably, because the inflammation, being seated above the glottis, the coagulable lymph is readily expectorated. It requires the most active treatment.

Simple Laryngitis is called by some mucous Laryngitis, Laryngitis acuʹta, L. muco'sa acuta, (F.) Laryngite muqueuse, to distinguish it from submucous Laryngitis or Œdema of the glottis.

Chronic Laryngitis is generally regarded as synonymous with laryngeal phthisis; but it may exist independently.

LARYNGOCACE, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGO-CATAR'RHUS, Catarrhus Laryngeus et tracheaʹlis. Catarrh affecting the larynx and trachea more especially, as indicated by alteration of the voice — hoarseness — itching and sensation of burning in those parts; short cough and expectoration, &c.

LARYNGO-ET-TRACHEO-PHTHISIS, Phthisis laryngea.

LARYNGOG'RAPHY, Laryngogra'phia; from λαρυγξ, 'the larynx,' and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the larynx.

LARYNGOL'OGY, from λαρυγξ, 'the larynx,' and λογος, 'treatise.' A treatise on the larynx.

LARYNGOPARALYSIS, see Aphonia.

LARYNGOPH'ONY, Tracheoph'ony, Laryngeʹal voice, Tracheal voice; from Larynx, and φωνη, 'voice.' The sound heard in health, when the stethoscope is placed over the larynx or trachea, at the time a person speaks. The voice appears to pass immediately up to the ear of the auscultator. A similar physical sign exists when there is a cavity in the lungs, and the instrument is placed over it whilst the patient speaks. See Pectoriloquy.

LARYNGOPHTHISIS, Phthisis laryngea.

LARYNGOSPASMUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGOSTASIS, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGOSTENO'SIS; from λαρυγξ, 'the larynx,' and στενωσις, 'contraction.' Contraction or narrowness of the larynx.

LARYNGOT'OMY, Laryngotom'ia, from λαρυγξ, 'the larynx,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' A surgical operation, which consists in opening the larynx, either to extract a foreign body, or to remedy an obstruction of the glottis. The operation is, sometimes, erroneously called Bronchotomy, and Tracheotomy.

LARYNGO-TRACHEITIS, Cynanche trachealis — l. Tracheitis with Diphtheritic exudation, Cynanche trachealis.

LAR'YNX, λαρυγξ, ('a whistle.') Caput seu Oper'culum seu Init''ium seu Finis supe'rior seu Ter'minus superior seu Pars prima as'peræ arte'riæ. The apparatus of voice is situate at the superior and anterior part of the neck; and at the top of the trachea, with which it communicates. It is composed of four cartilages, — the thyroid, cricoid, and two arytenoid; is moved by a number of muscles, and lined by a mucous membrane, having certain membranous reflections, constituting the superior ligaments of the glottis, &c.

PARTS COMPOSING THE LARYNX.

The vessels and nerves of the larynx are called Laryngeal.

The larynx is destined to give passage to the air, in the act of respiration, and to impress upon it certain modifications, which constitute voice. Its dimensions vary in different individuals. In men, it is always larger, and situate lower, than in women.

LARYNX, PELLICULAR or PLASTIC INFLAMMATION OF THE, Cynanche trachealis.

LAS'ANUM, Sella familiar'ica, (F.) Chaise percée. A close stool.

LASCIVIA, Satyriasis.

LASCIVITAS, Satyriasis.

LASCIVUS, Libidinous.

LASER, Laserpitium — l. à Larges feuilles, Laserpitium latifolium.

LASERPIT''IUM, Laser, Sil'phium, οπος σιλφιον. A term applied, anciently, both to a plant and its juice, regarding the nature of neither of which we possess any precise information. Bentley, Laureuce, Geoffroi, &c., regard it to have been the same as asafœtida: — Theophrastus, Dioscorides, and the ancient scholiast of Aristophanes, however, by assigning a sweet and agreeable flavour to the laserpitium, discountenance the idea. From whatever plant obtained, it was so rare, and consequently so costly, that the Romans deposited it in the public treasury. It was obtained from Cyrene — Succus Cyrena'icus — and likewise from Persia — the latter being the most valuable. The Laserpitium is called by Avicenna, Altihit.

LASERPITIUM ASPERUM, L. latifolium.

LASERPITIUM LATIFO'LIUM, L. as'perum, Gentia'na alba, White Gentian, Cerva'ria alba; (F.) Laser à larges feuilles. The root of this plant is bitter and tonic.

LASERPITIUM MONTANUM, L. siler.

LASERPITIUM SILER, L. trifolia'tum seu monta'num, Ses'eli, Siler monta'num seu lancifo'lium, Heart-wort, Sermountain. The seeds and roots are possessed of aromatic properties.

LASERPITIUM TRIFOLIATUM, L. siler.

LASSITUDE OCULAIRE, Copyopia.

LASSITUDO, Copos.

LATENS IN ORE, Pterygoideus internus.

LATENT, Latens, from latere, 'to lie hid.' 'Lying hid,' 'concealed.' An epithet applied to certain diseases or states of disease, in which the symptoms are so concealed and obscure, morbi occul'ti, as to escape the observation of the physician. Thus, we say latent inflammation, latent period of small-pox.

LAT'ERAD, from latus, lateris, 'the side.' A term used adverbially by Dr. Barclay to signify 'towards the lateral aspect.'

LATERAL ASPECT, see Mesial.

LATERIT''IOUS, Laterit''ius, Lateric''ius, from later, 'a brick.' An epithet applied to the brick-like sediment, occasionally deposited in the urine of people afflicted with fever; Sedimen'tum uri'næ lateric''ium.

LATESCENTIS CHORDÆ (Musculus), Palmaris longus.

LATEX NIVEUS, Milk.

LATHYRIS, Euphorbia lathyris.

LATIB'ULUM, from lateo, 'I lie hid.' The foyer of a febrile poison; whence it spreads to every part to induce a paroxysm. See Clapier.

LAT'ICA. Same etymon. Amphimer'ina lat'ica of Sauvages. A species of quotidian remittent, whose paroxysms are very long, and which is accompanied with latent heat (?), whence its name.

LATICES LACTEI, Receptaculum chyli.

LATIS'SIMUS COLLI, Platysma myoides.

LATIS'SIMUS DORSI, Aniscalp'tor, Brachium movens quartus, (F.) Lombo-huméral (Ch.), Dorsi-lombo-sacro-huméral, Musele grand dorsal, M. très large du dos. A flat muscle: broad, especially below; thin; quadrilateral; and situate at the posterior, lateral, and inferior region of the trunk. It is attached to the posterior half of the outer lip of the crest of the ilium; to the posterior surface of the sacrum; to the spinous processes of the six or seven last dorsal vertebræ, to all those of the loins, and to the last four false ribs, and is inserted by a strong tendon at the posterior edge of the bicipital groove of the humerus. Its upper fibres are almost horizontal; the middle very long and oblique upwards and outwards; and the anterior almost vertical. This muscle carries the arm backwards, depressing it, and making it turn on its axis. It also draws backwards and downwards the prominence of the shoulder. When, suspended by an arm, we make an effort to raise ourselves, it draws the trunk towards the arm. It can, also, raise the ribs by assuming its fixed point on the humerus, and become an inspiratory muscle.

LATITUDO HUMERI, Scapula.

LATTICE WORK, Cancelli.

LATUS, Broad — l. Ani, Levator ani.

LAU, see Spirit.

LAUCA'NIA, Leuca'nia, Lau'chanē, from λαυω 'I enjoy,' 'I take.' The fauces and œsophagus Also, the chin. — Gorræus.

LAUCHANE, Laucania.

LAUD'ANUM or LAUDA'NUM. Perhaps, from laus, 'praise;' lauda'tum, 'praised.' Every preparation of opium, solid or liquid, but more particularly the extract and tincture, and especially the latter.

LAUDANUM ABBA'TIS ROUSSEAU, Guttæ Abbotis Rousseau, Vinum opia'tum fermentatio'nē para'tum, Abbe Rousseau's Drops. (Mel. Narbonnens., ℥xij; aquæ calidæ, Oiij. Set in a warm place, and, as soon as the mixture ferments, add opium, ℥iv, dissolved in water, f℥xij. Let it ferment for a month, and evaporate to f℥x: strain, and add rectified spirit of wine, ℥ivss.

LAUDANUM, FORD'S, Vinum opii — l. Liquid, Tinctura opii — l. Liquidum Hoffmanni, Vinum opii — l. Liquidum Sydenhami, Vinum opii — l. Opiatum, Extractum opii — l. Simplex, Extractum opii.

LAUGH, Risus — l. Sardonic, Canine laugh.

LAUGHING, Risus.

LAUGHTER, Risus.

LAUREL, Kalmia latifolia, Magnolia macrophylla — l. Broad-leaved, Kalmia latifolia — l. Cherry, Prunus lauro-cerasus — l. Common, Prunus lauro-cerasus — l. Dwarf, Kalmia angustifolia — l. LAURENT, SAINT, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring, five leagues from Joyeuse in France. Temp. 127° Fahr.

LAUREN'TIA PINNATIF'IDA, Pepperdulse. One of the Algæ, eaten in Scotland, and hawked about the streets of Edinburgh along with Lamina'ria digita'ta or Tangle.

LAUREOLA, Daphne laureola.

LAURIER, Laurus — l. Alexandrin, Ruscus hypoglossum — l. Amandier, Prunus lauro-cerasus — l. Cérise, Prunus lauro-cerasus — l. Rose, Nerium oleander.

LAURO-CERASUS, Prunus lauro-cerasus.

LAURUS, Laurus nob'ilis, Daph'nē, Sweet Bay. Nat. Ord. Laurineæ. (F.) Laurier. The leaves and berries have a sweet, fragrant smell, and an aromatic, astringent taste. Sweet bay has been advised as a stomachic and carminative, but is now rarely used. It is, sometimes, employed as a fomentation and in glysters; and the berries are an ingredient in the Emplastrum Cumini.

LAURUS BEN'ZOIN, Benzoin odorif'erum, Laurus Pseudo-benzoin seu æstiva'lis, Spice wood, Spice bush, Allspice bush, Wild allspice, Spice berry, Fever wood, Fever bush. An indigenous shrub, growing in moist, shady places in all parts of the United States; flowering early in spring. All parts of the shrub have a spicy, agreeable flavour, which is strongest in the bark and berries. An infusion or decoction of the small branches is used in popular practice as a vermifuge, and agreeable drink in low fevers. The bark has been used in intermittents; the berries, dried and powdered, for allspice. The oil of the berries is used as an excitant.

Laurus Canella, L. Cassia.

Laurus Cas'sia, L. canel'la, Per'sea cassia. The species of laurus which yields the Cassia lig'nea, Casia, Cassia cinnamo'mea, Cortex Canel'læ Malabar'icæ, Cassia lignea Malabar'ica, Xylo-cassia, Canel'la Malabarica et Javen'sis, Canella Cuba'na, Arbor Juda'ica, Cassia Canel'la, Canellif'era Malabar'ica, Cortex cras'sior, Cinnamo'mum Malabar'icum seu In'dicum seu Sinen'sē, Calihac'ha canel'la, Wild Cinnamon, Malabar Cinnamon, Cassia, (F.) Cannelle de Malabar ou de Java ou de la Chine ou des Indes ou de Coromandel, C. fausse, C. matte, Casse en bois, Casse aromatique. The bark and leaves abound with the flavour of cinnamon, for which they may be substituted; but they are much weaker. The unopened flower-buds are used in the same manner.

Laurus Cinnamo'mum, Per'sea cinnamo'mum, Cinnamo'mum, C. Zeylan'icum, Darse'ni, Darsi'ni, Cinnamon, Xylo-cinnamomum, Cuurdo Canel'la, (F.) Cannelle, Baume de Cannelle, Cannelle officinale. Cinnamon bark, which is obtained, also, from the Cinnamo'mum aromat'icum, is stimulant and carminative, and is employed, chiefly, as a grateful aromatic, to cover the taste of nauseous remedies. Dose, gr. x to ʒj. The Flowers, called Cassiæ Flores in the shops, possess aromatic and astringent virtues, and may be used wherever cinnamon is required. The volatile oil of the bark — O'leum Cinnamo'mi — Oil of Cinnamon, is officinal in the Pharm. U. S.

Laurus Culil'awan, L. Culil'aban seu Caryophyl'lus, Cinnamo'mum Culilawan. The tree that affords the Cortex Culilawan seu Culilaban, Culilawan, Culitlawan, Cortex caryophylloïdes, U. Caryophylloïdes Amboinen'sis. This bark resembles the sassafras in appearance and properties, and is used in Java as a condiment.

Laurus Sas'safras, Per'sea sas'safras, Sassafras, Cornus mas odora'ta, Anhuiba, Ague-free. Indigenous in the United States. Sassafras wood and root, and especially the bark of the root, Sassafras Radi'cis Cortex (Ph. U. S.), have been considered stimulant, sudorific, and diuretic. The virtues depend upon essential oil, Oleum Sassafras, the odour of which is not unlike that of fennel. It has been used in cutaneous diseases, chronic rheumatism, &c.

The pith of the stems, Sassafras medul'la, abounds in gummy matter, which it readily imparts to water, forming a limpid mucilage, which is much employed as a collyrium in ophthalmia, and as a drink in dysentery, catarrh, &c. (one dram of the pith to a pint of boiling water).

LAUTIS'SIMA VINA. (Lautus, 'elegant.') Wines were formerly so called, which were strongly impregnated with myrrh.

LAVAMENTUM, Clyster, Enema.

LAVANDE, Lavendula.

LAVANDULA, Lavendula.

LAVEMENT, Clyster, Enema — l. Antispasmodique, Enema fœtidum.

LAVENDER, COMMON, Lavendula — l. Sea, Statice limonium, Statice Caroliniana.

LAVEN'DULA, from lavo, 'I wash;' so called from being used in baths. Lavan'dula spica seu latifo'lia, Spica, L. vera, Lavan'dula (Ph. U. S.), Common Lavender, (F.) Lavande, Aspic, Spic. The odour of lavender flowers is fragrant and agreeable; taste warm and bitterish — depending upon an essential oil. It has been used as a stimulant; particularly in the form of the oil, — O'leum laven'dulæ. The dried leaves have been employed as an errhine.

The French use the Lavendula Stœchas, Stœchas et Stichas Arab'ica, French Lavender, of which they have a compound syrup, Syru'pus de stœ'chadē compos'itus: given as a pectoral.

Lavendula Latifolia, Lavendula.

LAVER GERMANICUM, Veronica beccabunga — l. Odoratum, Sisymbrium nasturtium.

LAVIPEDIUM, Pediluvium.

LAW MEDICINE, Medicine, legal.

LAWSONIA ALBA, L. Inermis.

Lawso'nia Iner'mis, L. alba, Alcan'a vera, A. Orienta'lis, Cypérus antiquo'rum, Ligus'trum Ægyptiacum, Smooth Lawso'nia, (F.) Henné. An East Indian and African plant, the root of which is slightly astringent.

In India, the root of the Lawso'nia spinosa is employed in lepra and other cutaneous affections.

LAX, Diarrhœa.

LAXANS, Laxative, Relaxant.

LAX'ATIVE, Laxati'vus, Laxans, Le'niens, from laxare, 'to loosen;' Minorati'vus, Soluti'vus, Alvid'ucus, Hypecchoret'icus, Hypago'gus, Hypel'atus, Hypocathar'ticus, Lapac'ticus. A medicine which gently opens the bowels; such as tamarinds, manna, &c.

LAXATIVUS INDICUS, Cambogia.

LAXATOR AURIS INTERNUS, L. tympani.

Laxator Tympani, L. major tym'pani, Exter'nus mallei, Ante'rior mallei, Obli'quus auris, Externus auris vel Laxator inter'nus, Eusta'chii mus'culus, (F.) Antérieur du marteau, Sphéni-salpingo-mallien. A muscle which arises from the spine of the sphenoid bone and from the cartilage of the Eustachian tube, and is inserted, by a tendon, into the apophysis of Rau. It relaxes the membrana tympani.

Laxa'tor Tym'pani Minor. A very small muscle which extends from the upper part of the external auditory canal, and is inserted at the inferior part of the process of the handle of the malleus. Its existence is denied by most anatomists.

LAX'ITY, Lax'itas, Laxness. Condition of a tissue, when loose or relaxed; or of one which wants tone. We say laxity of fibre, laxity of skin, to express, that those parts have lost some of the tenseness proper to them.

LAYER, ANIMAL, see Tache embryonnaire — l. Mucous, see Tache embryonnaire — l. Serous, see Tache embryonnaire — l. Vascular, see Tache embryonnaire — l. Vegetative, see Tache embryonnaire.

LAYERS OF THE BLASTODERMA, see Tache embryonnaire.

LAZARET'TO, Lazaret, Lazar-house, from (I.) lazzero, 'a leper.' A solitary edifice in most seaports of magnitude, intended for the disinfection of men and goods proceeding from places where contagious diseases are prevailing.

LAZULITE, Lapis lazuli.

Lead Rheu'matism, Lead Neural'gia, Arthral'gia of M. Tanquerel. The neuralgic and spasmodic pains caused by the poison of lead.

Lead, Subcarbonate of, Plumbi superacetas — l. Tannate of, see Tannin — l. White, Plumbi subcarbonas.

LEAD-POISONING, Molybdo'sis, Morbus plumbeus, Cacochym'ia plumbea, (F.) Intoxication saturnine. Morbid phenomena induced by lead received into the system.

LEADWORT, Plumbago Europæa.

LEAF, SOUR, Andromeda arborea.

LEAMINGTON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters at Leamington, about two miles east of Warwick, England, which contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, and chlorides of calcium and magnesium.

LEANNESS, Emaciation.

LEAP, Sax. hlæpan, Saltus, Salit''io, Exalsis, (F.) Saut; Bound, Jump, — the act of leaping. Muscular movement or movements, by which the body is detached from the soil by the forcible and sudden extension of the lower limbs, previously flexed upon the pelvis.

LEAPING AGUE. This disease is said by the Scotch writers to be characterized by increased efficiency, but depraved direction, of the will, producing an irresistible propensity to dance, tumble, and move about in a fantastic manner, and often with far more than the natural vigour, activity, and precision! See Mania, dancing.

LEATHER FLOWER, Clematis viorna — l. Wood, Dirca palustris.

LEB'ANON, MINERAL WATERS OF. The spring at Lebanon, 26 miles east of Albany, New York, is an almost pure thermal. Temp. 72° Fahr.

LECHENEION, Torcular Herophili.

LECHO, Puerpera.

LECHOPYRA, Puerperal fever.

LE CRAN, Cochlearia armoracia.

LECONTIA, Peltandra Virginica.

LECTISTER'NIUM, from lectus, 'a bed,' and sternere, 'to spread.' The arrangement of a bed so as to adapt it to a particular disease. Also, a supplication, with the Romans, in times of public danger, when beds or couches were spread for the gods, as if they were about to feast, and their images were taken down from their pedestals and placed upon these couches around the altars. The lectisternium was first introduced in the time of a pestilence. — Livy.

LECTUA'LIS, from lectus, 'a bed.' An epithet applied to a protracted disease.

LÈDE SAUVAGE, Ledum sylvestre.

LECTULUS STRAMINEUS, Fanon.

LEDOYEN'S DISINFECTING LIQUID. A solution of nitrate of lead, (Plumb. nitrat. ℥j ad aquæ f ℥j,) used as an antiseptic and antibromic.

LEDUM LATIFO'LIUM, Labrador' Tea, grows in damp places, in Canada and the United States. The leaves have a pleasant odour and taste, and have been used as tea. They have also been esteemed pectoral and tonic.

Ledum Palus'tre, Rosmari'nus sylves'tris, Anthos sylves'tris, Marsh Tea, (F.) Lède ou Romarin sauvage. Nat. Ord. Ericineæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. This plant has a bitter, subastringent taste, and was formerly used in Switzerland in place of hops: the virtues are equivocal.

LEE, Feculence, Lixivium, Ley, Lye.

LEECH, Hirudo, see Ectozoa.

LEEK, Allium porrum.

LEES, SOAP, Liquor potassæ.

LEG, (Danish,) Crus, Scelos, Cnemē. The portion of the lower extremity, which extends from the knee to the foot. It consists of three bones; Tibia, Fibula, and Patella, and also of a great number of muscles, vessels, and nerves. The projection, formed by the muscles at the back part of the leg, has received the name of Calf of the leg. It is the special attribute of man, and proves that he is destined to be biped.

Leg, Swelled, Phlegmatia dolens — l. Cochin, see Elephantiasis.

LEGIT'IMATE, Legit'imus, from lex, legis, 'law;' Genui'nus, Gne'sios. An epithet applied to things which are according to rule. A legitimate child, (F.) Enfant légitime, is one conceived or born during marriage. Legitimate diseases, (F.) Maladies légitimes, are those which follow a regular march.

LEGNA, from λεγνον, 'a fringed edge.' The orifice of the pudendum muliebre, or of the uterus.

LÉGUME, Legumen.

LEGU'MEN, from lego, 'I gather:' (F.) Légume, Gousse. So called because it is usually gathered by the hand, instead of being reaped. All kinds of pulse, as peas, beans, &c., are thus termed.

LEGUMIN, Casein.

LEICHEN, Lichen.

LEI'OPUS, Li'opus, Plancus, Plautus, Plotus, from λειος, 'smooth,' and πους, 'a foot.' One who is affected with flat-footedness, splay-footedness, Leiopod'ia, Liopod'ia. One, the soles of whose feet are flat, instead of having the concavity which they commonly present.

LEIOSIS, Comminution.

LEIPHÆ'MIA, Liphæ'mia: same etymon as Leiphæmos. Poverty or paucity of blood.

LEIPHÆMOI, Achroi.

LEIPHÆ'MOS, Liphæ'mos, (F.) Leiphème, from λειπω, 'I want,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' A word sometimes used adjectively; at others, substantively, either for a vicious state of the blood — or rather for a sort of anæmia — or for the patient who labours under this condition.

LEIPHÈME, Leiphæmos.

LEIPO, Lipo.

LEIPODERMIA, Aposthia.

LEIPODER'MOS, Lipoder'mos, from λειπω, 'I want,' and δερμα, 'skin.' One who wants a part of his skin. It is especially applied to one who wants the prepuce. See Apella and Aposthia.

LEIPOMERIA, Lipomeria.

LEIPOPSYCHIA, Syncope.

LEIPOTHYMIA, Syncope.

LEIPYR'IAS, from λειπω, 'I want,' and πυρ, 'fire,' or 'heat.' A species of continued fever, referred to by the Greek physicians, in which there is burning heat of the internal parts and coldness of the extremities. Avicenna described, under this name, a kind of hemitritæa.

LEMA, Chassie.

LEME, Lippitudo.

LEMITHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana.

LEMMA, Cortex, Feculence, Furfur, Sedimentum.

LEMNISCUS, Pessary, Tent.

LEMON GROUND, Podophyllum montanum — l. Juice, see Citrus medica — l. Juice, artificial, see Citrus medica — l. Peel, see Citrus medica — l. Tree, Citrus medica — l. Wild, Podophyllum montanum.

LEMONADE', Limona'da, (F.) Limonade. Lemon juice diluted with water and sweetened. See Citrus medica.

Lemonade, Dry, (F.) Limonade sèche. Citric or tartaric acid reduced to powder and mixed with sugar. Lemonade Powders may be made as follows:—Pound ℥ij ‡ citric acid with a few drops of essence of lemon-peel and ℥j or more of lump sugar. Divide into six papers, each of which will make a glass of lemonade. See Citric acid.

Limonade Gazeuse, (F.) is an agreeable drink prepared by adding syrup of lemons, raspberry, &c., to water saturated with carbonic acid.

LEMONADE, MAGNESIAN, Magnesiæ citras.

LEMONADE, NITRIC. Nitric acid considerably diluted with water, and sweetened.

LEMONADE, SULPHURIC, and LEMONADE, TARTARIC, are made with the sulphuric and tartaric acids.

LEMOSITAS, Chassie, Lippitudo.

LENIENS, Laxative, Lenitive.

LENIS, Lenitive.

LEN'ITIVE, Leniti'vus, Lenis, Len'iens, Epia'ma, Mit'igans, from lenio, 'I assuage.' A medicine, which allays irritation or palliates disease; also, a laxative medicine. A lenitive electuary is one that purges gently.

LENOS, Torcular Herophili.

LENS, Ervum lens—l. Crystalline, Crystalline—l. Esculenta, Ervum lens.

LENTIC'ULA. Dim. of lens, 'a lentil.' A freckle. Also, the eruption of lenticular fever. See Ephelides.

LENTICULAR GANGLION, Ophthalmic G.

LENTICULA'RES GLAN'DULÆ, Lentic'ular glands. Mucous follicles, having the shape of a lentil, which are observed especially towards the base of the tongue.

LENTIGO, Ephelides.

LENTIL, Ervum lens.

LENTIS'CINUM VINUM. Wine impregnated with mastich; from Lentiscus, 'the mastich tree.'

LENTISCUS VULGARIS, Pistacia lentiscus.

LENTITIA, Lentor.

LENTITIS, Phacitis.

LENTITUDO, Lentor.

LENTOR, Lentit''ia, Lentitu'do, from lentus, 'clammy.' A viscidity or sliziness of any fluid. See Gluten.

LENUM, Torcular Herophili.

LEONO'TIS LEONU'RUS. A South African plant, which has a peculiar smell and nauseous taste, and is said to produce narcotic effects if incautiously used. It is employed in decoction in chronic cutaneous diseases. The Hottentots smoke it like tobacco, and take a decoction of its leaves as a strong cathartic. It is also given as an emmenagogue. In the eastern districts of the Cape Colony, Leonotis ova'ta is used for the same purpose.

LEONTI'ASIS, Leon'tion, from λεων, 'a lion.' A name given to lepra of the face, from some fancied resemblance between the countenance of those labouring under it and that of the lion. To this kind of lepra the epithets le'onine and le'ontine have been given.

LEON'TICE THALICTROIDES, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes.

LEONTION, Leontiasis.

LEON'TODON TARAX'ACUM, L. officina'lē, seu vulga'rē, Tarax'acum officina'lé, Dens Leo'nis, Hedyp'nois tarax'acum, Urina'ria, Caput Mon'achi, Dandeli'on, Piss-a-bed, Puffball, (F.) Pissenlit, Liondent. Order, Compositæ. The young leaves are sometimes eaten as salad. The roots are, also, roasted and used as a substitute for coffee. The root, Tarax'acum, (Ph. U. S.,) is, moreover, reputed to be aperient and diuretic; hence its vulgar name. Its efficacy is doubtful.

LEONOTIS OVATA, see Leonotis leonurus.

LEONTOPODIUM, Alchemilla.

LEONU'RUS, from λεων, 'a lion,' and ουρα, 'a tail.' Lion's Tail.

LEONURUS CARDI'ACA, Agripal'ma Gallis, Marru'bium, Cardi'aca crispa seu triloba'ta seu vulga'ris, Herba cardiaca, H. Patæ lapi'næ, Motherwort, Throatwort, (F.) Agripaume. Its properties are those of a nauseous bitter; and hence it has been used in hysteria and other nervous affections.

LEONURUS LANATUS, Ballota lanata.

LEOPARD'S BANE, ROMAN, Arnica montana, Doronicum pardalianches.

LEPAS, Lepis, λεπας, gen. λεπαδος; λεπις, gen. λεπιδος, 'a scale.'

LEPER, see Leprous.

LEPER HOSPITAL, Ladrerie.

LEPIA CAMPESTRIS, Thlaspi campestre — l. Sativa, Lepidium Iberis.

LEPID'IUM, from λεπις, 'a scale;' so called from its supposed usefulness in cleansing the skin from scales and impurities. Pepper-wort.

LEPIDIUM CAMPESTRE, Thlaspi campestre.

LEPID'IUM IBE'RIS, Ibe'ris, Cardaman'tica, Sciat'ica cresses. This plant possesses a warm, penetrating, pungent taste, like other cresses, and is recommended as an antiscorbutic, antiseptic, and stomachic.

LEPIDIUM SATI'VUM, Lep'ia sati'va, Thlaspi nastur'tium seu sati'vum, Nastur'tium horten'sē seu sati'vum, Garden cress, Dittander, (F.) Cresson alénois, Cresson des Jardins. This plant possesses warm, stimulating properties, and is used like the last.

LEPIDIUM SQUAMATUM, Cochlearia coronopus.

LEPIDODES, Squamous.

LEPIDOIDES, Squamous.

LEPIDOSARCO'MA, Tumor squamifor'mis carno'sus. A fleshy tumour, covered with scales; from λεπις, 'a scale,' and σαρκωμα, 'a fleshy tumour.' Marcus Aurelius Severinus describes tumours of this kind in the interior of the mouth.

LEPIDOSIS, Scaly diseases.

LIPIDOTIS CLAVATA, Lycopodium clavatum

LEPIRA, Lepra.

LEPIS, Scale.

LEPORINUM LABIUM, Harelip — l. Rostrum, Harelip.

LEPORINUS OCULUS, Lagophthalmia.

LEPRA, Lep'ira, from λεπις, 'a scale.' Lepido'sis Lepri'asis, Lepro'sis, Lepro'sitas, Vitili'go, Lepra Græco'rum, Herpes furfura'ceus circina'tus, Leprosy, (F.) Lèpre, Mal Saint-Main, Dartre furfuracée arrondie. This term has been applied to various affections, very different in character. 1. To the Leprosy of the Jews, Leucē, Lepido'sis, Lepriasis canes'cens, Lepra Mosa'ica seu Hebræo'rum, — a variety of the Alphos or Lepra alphoï'des. The leuce was, generally, not scaly, but consisted of smooth, shining patches, on which the hair turned white and silky, and the skin, with the muscular flesh, lost its sensibility. It was incurable. To the Elephantiasis or Lepra of the Arabs, see Elephantiasis; and 3. To the Lepra of the Greeks, which includes all the varieties met with at the present day. It is characterized by scaly patches of different sizes, but having always nearly a circular form. Bateman and Willan describe three chief varieties of this lepra.

1. Lepra alphoï'des, Lepido'sis Lepri'asis albi'da, Alphos, Morphæ'a alba, Vitili'go alphus, Al'barus alba, Albaræ, Albaros, Lèpre écailleuse of Alibert, White leprosy. An affection, characterized by white patches, surrounded by a rose-coloured areola, which appears here and there on the surface; depressed in the middle.

2. Lepra ni'gricans, Lepra melas, Vitili'go melas, V. Nigra, Morphæ'a nigra, Lepra maculo'sa nigra, Al'baras nigra, Melas, Lepido'sis lepri'asis ni'gricans, Black leprosy; in which the scales are livid; the size of half a dollar; and diffused over the body, but less widely than in the Alphoïdes. The French pathologists usually admit three species of lepra, to which they give the epithets scaly, (squameuse,) crustaceous, (crustacée,) and tubercular, (tuberculeuse,) according as the skin may be covered with scales, crusts, or tubercles.

3. Lepra vulga'ris, Lepido'sis lepri'asis vulga'ris, Dartre furfuracée arrondie, of Alibert, characterized as follows: scales glabrous, whitish, size of a crown piece; preceded by smaller reddish and glossy elevations of the skin, encircled by a dry, red, and slightly elevated border; often confluent; sometimes covering the whole of the body except the face.

Lepra appears to be endemic in Egypt, in Java, and certain parts of Norway and Sweden. Imperfect and faulty nutriment appears to contribute to its development. The means, best adapted for its removal, are:—a mild, unirritating diet, emollient fomentations—sulphureous baths, fumigations, &c.; but, often, all remedial agents will be found ineffectual.

LEPRICUS, Leprous.

LEPROSARIUM, Ladrerie.

LÉPROSERIE, Ladrerie.

LEPROSIS, Lepra.

LEPROSITAS, Lepra.

LEPROSY, Lepra—l. Black, Lepra nigricans—l. Norwegian, see Radzyge—l. White, Lepra alphoides.

LEP'ROUS, Lepro'sus, Leprot'icus, Lep'ricus, Lepro'des. Relating to or resembling or affected with leprosy; a leper.

LEPSIS, Attack.

LEPTAN'DRA VIRGIN'ICA, Veroni'ca Virgin'ica, Calver's physic. An indigenous plant, which grows throughout the United States, and flowers in August. The flowers are white, and terminate the stem in a long spike. A variety with purple flowers has been described, as Leptandra Purpu'rea, Physic root, Black root, Whorlywort, Culvert root, Brinton root, Bowman root. The root is bitter and nauseous, and when fresh is emetic and cathartic. In the dried state it is more uncertain. Dose of the powder, gr. xx to ʒj.

LEPTO, LEPTOS, λεπτος, 'thin,' 'light.' Hence:

LEPTOCHRO'A, Lep'tochros, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and χροα, χροια, 'the colour of the skin: the skin.' Fineness, thinness of skin.

LEPTOCHYM'IA, from λεπτος, 'thin,' and χυμος, 'a juice.' Morbid thinness of the juices.

LEPTOHYME'NIA, from λεπτος, 'thin,' and ὑμην, 'a membrane.' Thinness, delicacy of membrane.

LEPTOMER'IA, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and μερος, 'a part.' Fineness, delicacy of bodily formation.

LEPTONTIQUES, Attenuants.

LEPTOPHONIA, Oxyphonia.

LEPTOSPERMUM LEUCADENDRUM, Melaleuca cajaputi.

LEPTOTHRIX, Leptotrichus.

LEPTOT'RICHUS, Leptothrix, from λεπτος, 'fine,' and θριξ, 'hair.' One who has fine hair.

LEPTOTROPH'IA, Microtroph'ia, Microtrapez'ia, from λεπτος, 'light,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Light nutrition.

LEPTYNSIS, Emaciation.

LEPTYNTICA, Attenuants.

LEPTYSMOS, Emaciation.

LEREMA, see Dementia.

LERESIS, see Dementia.

LERUS, Delirium, see Dementia.

LE'SION, Læ'sio, from lædus, 'hurt,' 'injured.' Derangement, disorder; any morbid change, either in the exercise of functions or in the texture of organs. Organic lesion is synonymous with organic disease.

LESSIVE, Lixivium.

LESSIVE DES SAVONNIERS, Liquor potassæ. Also, a solution of caustic soda in water, containing about 3 parts of soda to 8 of water.

LESSIVE DE TARTRE, Liquor potassæ subcarbonatis.

LETALITAS, Mortality.

LETHALIS, Lethiferous, Mortal.

LETHALITAS, Mortality.

LETHAR'GIC, Lethar'gicus, Veterno'sus, (F.) Léthargique. Relating to lethargy; affected with lethargy.

LÉTHARGIQUE, Lethargic.

LETH'ARGY, Lethar'gia, Lethar'gus, Carus lethargus, Veter'nus, Obliv'io iners, from λησθη, 'oblivion,' and αργια, 'idleness.' A constant state of stupor from which it is almost impossible to arouse the individual; and, if aroused, he speedily relapses into his former condition.

LE'THEON, from λησθη, 'oblivion.' A name given by some to sulphuric ether, when inhaled as an anæsthetic agent.

LETHIF'EROUS, Le'thifer, Letha'lis, Lethif'icus, Mor'tifer, Mortif'erous, from λησθη, 'death,' and φερω, 'I bear.' Death-bearing; deadly.

LÉTHUM, Death.

LETTUCE, Lactuca—l. Blue, Mulgedium acuminatum—l. False, Mulgedium Floridanum—l. Indian, see Calumba—l. Strong-scented, Lactuca virosa—l. White, Nabalus albus—l. Wild, Lactuca elongata.

LETUM, Death.

LEUCADES, see Sclerotic.

LEUCÆ'MIA, Leukæ'mia, from λευκος, 'white, and αιμα, 'blood.' A condition of the blood in which it is deficient in colouring matter.

LEUCÆTHIOPIA, see Albino.

LEUCÆTHIOPS, Albino.

LEUCANIA, Laucania.

LEUCANTHEMUM, Anthemis nobilis, Matricaria chamomilla—l. Vulgare, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

LEUCE, Lepra (of the Jews.)

LEUCELECTRUM, Succinum (album.)

LEUCITIS, Sclerotitis.

LEUCOCYTHÆ'MIA, from λευκος, 'white,' κυτος, 'cell,' and αιμα, 'blood.' A condition of the blood, which consists in a superabundant development of the white corpuscles, a disease which has been observed at times to be accompanied by enlargement of the spleen and liver, and at others by increased size of the lymphatic glands.

LEUCODENDRON, Melaleuca cajaputi.

LEUCŒNUS, see Wine.

LEUCOIUM, Lunaria rediviva—l. Luteum, Cheiranthus cheiri.

LEUCOLEIN, Leukoleinum.

LEUCO'MA, from λευκος, 'white.' Oculo'rum albu'go, Leucom'ma, Leuco'sis, Albu'go, Al'bula, Ceratoleuco'ma, Ephel'otes. Leucoma and Albugo are often used synonymously to denote a white opacity of the cornea. Both are essentially different from nebula of the cornea; nebula being usually the result of chronic ophthalmy and an effusion of a milky serum into the texture of the delicate continuation of the conjunctiva over the cornea;—the others are the result of violent, acute ophthalmia. In this state, a thick, coagulable lymph is extravasated from the arteries, sometimes superficially, at other times deeply into the substance of the cornea. On other occasions, the disease consists of a firm, callous cicatrix on this membrane,—the effect of a wound or ulcer with loss of substance. The affection is more difficult of cure in proportion to its duration and to the age of the individual; the activity of the absorbents being greater in youth. If inflammation still exist, antiphlogistics must be persevered in, and, afterwards, gentle stimulants be used to excite absorption; along with the internal use of mercury or iodine.

Leucoma, Albumen—l. Margaritaceum, see Margaritaceus.

LEUCOMMA, Leucoma.

LEUCOMORIA, Cuttubuth.

LEUCONECRO'SIS, from λευκος, 'white,' and νεκρωσις, 'death. A form of dry gangrene,—the opposite in appearance to anthraconecrosis.

LEUCONYMPHÆA, Nymphæa alba.

LEUCOPATHIA, see Albino, Chlorosis.

LEUCOPHAGIUM, Blanc-manger.

LEUCOPHLEGMASIA, Leucophlegmatia—l. Dolens puerperarum, Phlegmatia dolens.

LEUCOPHLEGMA'TIA, Leucophlegmasia, Hydrops leucophlegma'tias, Tumescen'tia pituito'sa, from λευκος, 'white,' and φλεγμα, 'phlegm.' A dropsical habit. Some writers use the word synonymously with anasarca and œdema; others with emphysema.

Leucophlegmatia Æthiopum, Chthonophagia.

LEUCOPIPER, Piper album.

LEUCOPYRIA, Hectic fever.

LEUCORRHÉE, Leucorrhœa.

LEUCORRHŒ'A, Fluxus vel Fluor mulie'bris, Profu'vium mulie'brē, Cursus matri'cis, Fluxus matri'cis, Elytri'tis, Coleosi'tis, Colpi'tis, Destilla'tio u'teri, Fluxio alba, F. Vul'væ, Ulcus u'teri, Catar'rhus genita'lium, Hysterorrhœ'a muco'sa, Catame'nia alba, Menses albi, Men'strua alba, Menorrhag''ia alba, Fluor mulie'bris non Gal'licus, Blennelyt'ria, Gonorrhœ'a benig'na notha invetera'ta, Purga'tio mulie'bris alba, Alba purgamen'ta, Cachex'ia uteri'na, Rheuma u'teri, U'teri Cory'za, Medorrhœ'a femina'rum insons, Blennorrhœ'a seu Blennorrhag''ia genita'lium, Ædœoblennorrhœ'a seu Medoblennorrhœ'a femina'rum; The whites; (F.) Fleurs ou Flueurs blanches, Pertes blanches, Écoulement blanc, Catarrhe utérin, Perte utérine blanche, from λευκος, 'white,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' A more or less abundant discharge of a white, yellowish, or greenish mucus; resulting from acute or chronic inflammation or from irritation of the membrane lining the genital organs of the female. Vag''inal Leucorrhœa has been termed Blennorrhœa seu Fluor albus vagi'næ, L'ucorrhœ'a, Medorrhœ'a vaginæ, Vagini'tis, Elytroblennorrhœ'a, Colporrhœ'a.—Uterine Leucorrhœa has received the names Fluor albus uteri, Leucorrhœ'a seu Medorrhœ'a uteri, Metroblennorrhœ'a, (F.) Leucorrhée utérine, Catarrhe utérin. It is often attended with pain and a sense of heaviness in the loins, abdomen and thighs; disordered digestive functions, &c., so that, at times, the health suffers largely, although there are few females who are not occasionally subject to moderate leucorrhœa. Attention to the general health, change of air, keeping up a perspirable state of the surface by flannel worn next the skin, the horizontal posture, &c., do more than pharmaceutical agents; which are almost entirely confined to astringent injections. These may be employed, when the discharge is so great as to require them.

Leucorrhœa Analis, see Hæmorrhois—l. Nabothi, see Parturition.

LEUCORRHOIS, see Hæmorrhois.

LEUCO'SES; from λευκος, 'white.' In the nosology of M. Alibert, all the diseases of the lymphatic apparatus. The 7th family in his Nosologie. In that of Fuchs, it is a family of diseases, (G.) Leukosen, which includes the various forms of anæmia.

Leucosis, Leucoma, Paleness.

LEUK or LOCCHE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline, chalybeate waters, about six leagues distant from Sion. They contain chloride of sodium, with a little sulphate of magnesia; sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonic acid, and protoxide of iron.

LEUKÆMIA, Leucæmia.

LEUKOLEIN'UM, Chinolein'um, Leukol, Leu'coleine, Leu'colein, Chi'nolein, Chi'nolin. This substance is the product of the dry distillation of coal; mixed with picolin, anilin and other substances, in mineral tar. It is procured, also, by heating quinia, cinchonia and strychnia, with as concentrated a ley of potassa as can be made. Its specific gravity is 1.081; and it is slightly soluble in water, and miscible in all proportions with alcohol, ether and essential oils.

LEVAIN, Ferment.

LEVA'TOR AN'GULI ORIS, Abdu'cens labio'rum, Eleva'tor labiorum commu'nis, Cani'nus, (F.) Sus maxillo-labial, Petit sus-maxillo-labial (Ch.), Muscle canin. A small, flat, long, quadrilateral muscle, which arises from the fossa canina, and is inserted at the commissure of the lips, where it is confounded with the triangularis. It raises the corner of the mouth, and draws it towards the ear.

Levator Ani, Levator magnus seu internus, Latus ani, Eleva'tor ani, Sedem attol'lens, (F.) Pubio-coccygien annulaire, Sous pubio-coccygien (Ch.), Releveur de l'anus. A muscle, situate at the lower part of the pelvis. It is broad, flat, quadrilateral, and broader above than below. It represents a kind of membranous partition, which closes the outlet of the pelvis, and the upper concavity of which is opposed to that of the diaphragm. It is attached, above, to the posterior surface of the body of the pubis, to the upper part of the obdurator foramen, and to the spine of the ischium; and is inserted into the coccyx, into an aponeurotic line common to it and its fellow, and into the lateral parts of the rectum. This muscle supports the rectum; raises it, and carries it upwards during the evacuation of the excrement. It can, also, compress the bladder and vesiculæ seminales, and thus favour the expulsion of the urine and sperm.

Levator Glan'dulæ Tyroï'deæ. A muscle occasionally found connected with the upper border or isthmus of the thyroid gland; and attached superiorly to the body of the os hyoides, or to the thyroid cartilage.

Levator Menti, Levator labii inferioris—l.

Levator Labii Inferio'ris, Levator menti, Elevator labii inferio'ris, Incisi'vus infe'rior, Elevator labii inferioris pro'prius, Mus'culus penicilla'tus, (F.) Houppe du menton, Releveur de la lèvre inférieur, Releveur du menton. A portion of the mento-labial of Chaussier. A small muscle situate before the symphysis menti. It is thick, conical; and attached by its apex to a fossette at the side of the symphysis in the inferior maxillary bone. Its fibres proceed diverging and vanishing in the manner of a tuft, (F.) Houppe, on the skin of the chin. This muscle raises the chin, and pushes upwards the lower lip.

Levator Labii Superio'ris Alæque Nasi, Incisi'vus latera'lis et pyramida'lis, (F.) Grand sus-maxillo-labial (Ch.,) Élévateur commun de l'aile du nez et de la lèvre supérieure. This muscle is a fleshy, thin, triangular bundle, situate at the sides of the nose. It arises from the ascending process of the superior maxillary bone: thence its fibres descend in a diverging manner, a part being inserted into the ala of the nose, and a part losing themselves in the upper lip. This muscle raises the upper lip and ala nasi, which it draws a little outwards.

Levator Labii Superioris Proprius, Mus'culus incisi'vus, Elevator labii superioris proprius, (F.) Moyen sus-maxillo-labial, (Ch.,) Orbito-maxillo-labial. This thin, flat, quadrilateral muscle is situate at the middle and inner part of the face. It arises from the os malæ and the os maxillare superius, and is inserted into the upper lip, which it raises, at the same time carrying it a little outwards.

Levator Pala'ti, Levator Palati Mollis, Petrosalpin'go-staphyli'nus, Salpin'go-staphyli'nus interi'nus, Salpingo-staphylinus, Pter'ygo-staphylinus externus, Spheno-staphylinus, Spheno-palati'nus, Peristaphylinus internus superior, Pétro-staphylin, (Ch.) This muscle is long, narrow, and almost round above; broader and flatter inferiorly. It arises from the lower surface of the pars petrosa; from the cartilage of the Eustachian tube; and is inserted into the substance of the velum palati. Its use is to raise the velum palati.

Levator Pal'pebræ Superio'ris, Palpebræ superioris primus, Apertor Oc'uli, Ape'riens Palpebra'rum rectus, Reclu'sor palpebra'rum, (F.) Orbito-palpébral (Ch.), Orbito-sus-palpébral, Élévateur de la paupière supérieure. A long, small, thin muscle, situate at the upper part of the orbitar cavity. By its posterior extremity it is inserted into the little ala of the sphenoid bone, immediately in front of the foramen opticum, and, by its anterior extremity, which is expanded, it terminates at the upper margin of the tarsal cartilage of the eyelid. This muscle raises the upper eyelid, draws it backwards, and sinks it into the orbit.

Levator Pros'tatæ, (F.) Releveur de la prostate. Santorini has given this name to the anterior fibres of the levator ani, which embrace the prostate.

Levator Scap'ulæ, Eleva'tor scapulæ, Elevator seu Mus'culus Patien'tiæ, Angula'ris vulgo Levator pro'prius,—(F.) Trachélo-scapulaire (Ch.), Angulaire de l'omoplate, Releveur de l'omoplate. This muscle is so called, because it is attached to the upper and internal angle of the scapula. It is situate at the posterior and lateral part of the neck, and at the upper part of the back. It is long, flat, and broader above than below. In this latter direction, it is inserted into the superior internal angle of the scapula; and, in the former, into the tops of the transverse processes of the first four cervical vertebræ. It depresses the prominence of the shoulder, by raising the posterior angle of the scapula, on which it impresses a kind of rotary motion. It can, also, draw the head to one side.

Levator Ure'thræ, (F.) Releveur de l'Urèthre. Santorini describes under this name a portion of the transversus perinæi muscle.

LEVATORES COSTARUM, Supracostales.

LEVEN, Ferment.

LEVER, from levare, 'to lift up.' Vectis, Mochlus, Porrec'tum. An inflexible rod, turning round a fixed point, and used for moving bodies, bearing burdens, or raising them. The point on which the lever moves is called the Fulcrum, Hypomoch'lion. The force which moves the lever is called the power; and the weight to be moved, the resistance. There are three kinds of levers. A lever of the first kind has the fulcrum between the power and resistance. A lever of the second kind has the resistance between the fulcrum and power; whilst a lever of the third kind has the power between the fulcrum and resistance. In the locomotive system of the human body, we have examples of all the three kinds. The bones represent levers: the muscles of locomotion are powers; the weight of parts to be moved constitutes the resistance. The fulcra are, at times, the joints; at others, the ground, &c. The head moves on the neck, as a lever of the first kind; the first cervical vertebra forming the fulcrum. We rise on tiptoe by a lever of the second kind, the fulcrum being the ground under the toes; and we have examples of a lever of the third kind in the flexion of the fore-arm on the arm, in the elevation of the arm, &c.

Lever, Hystero-moch'lium, Mochlis'cus, Vectis obstetric''ius, Vectis, (F.) Levier, is an instrument curved at the extremity, and having a fenestra. It is used to assist the extraction of the child's head, when instrumental aid is necessary. Levers are, also, used by the dentist for extracting stumps, &c. The Levier de l'Écluse, Langue de Carpe, Trivelin or Punch, is employed for extracting the molar teeth.

LEVI'ATHAN PENIS, Pria'pus Ceti, Bale'nas. The penis of the whale. This singular medicine was, at one time, given, in powder, in cases of dysentery and leucorrhœa.

LEVIER, Lever—l. de l'Écluse, see Lever.

LEVIGA'TION, Læviga'tio, from lævigare, (lævis, 'smooth,') 'to polish.' Porphyriza'tion. An operation, by which bodies are reduced to very fine powder. It is performed by putting substances, already pulverized, into water; the coarser parts are not long in being deposited, whilst the finer molecules remain suspended in the water. The liquor is decanted into another vessel, and suffered to remain at rest, until the fine particles are collected at the bottom. The fluid part is then separated by decantation.

LEVISTICUM, Ligusticum levisticum.

LÈVRE, Lip.

LÈVRES GRANDES, Labia pudendi—l. Petites, Nymphæ—l. de la Vulve, Labia pudendi.

LEVURE, Yest—l. de la Bière, Yest.

LEXIPHARMACUS, Alexipharmic.

LEXIPYRETICUS, Febrifuge.

LEY, Lixivium, Lye—l. Soap, Liquor potassæ.

LEYS'SERA GNAPHALOI'DES. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Compositæ, which is emollient, and highly recommended at the Cape, in catarrh, cough, and even in phthisis.

LÉZARD, Lizard.

LIA'TRIS SPICA'TA, Gayfeather, Button snakeroot. An indigenous plant, growing in meadows and moist grounds in the middle and southern states. Its beautiful purple compound flowers are in a spike. They appear in August. The root has been considered diuretic.

Lia'tris Scario'sa and L. Squarro'sa, Throatwort, Sow-wort, Backache root, Devilsbite, Blazing star, Prairie pines, Rough root, are called, from their reputed powers in bites from the rattlesnake, Rattlesnake's master. The roots, bruised, are applied to the wound, and the decoction, in milk, is given internally.

LIBANOTIS ANNUA, Athamanta cretensis—l. Coronaria, Rosmarinus—l. Cretensis, Athamanta cretensis—l. Hirsuta, Athamanta cretensis.

LIBANOTUS, see Juniperus lycia.

LIBANUS, Juniperus lycia.

LIBER PHARMACEUTICUS, Dispensatorium.

LIBIDINIS SEDES, Clitoris.

LIBIDINOSUS, Libidinous.

LIBID'INOUS, Libidino'sus; Lasci'vus, Veneriv'agus; from libido, 'lust.' Lewd; lustful.

LIBI'DO. Desire, necessity. Authors speak of Libido uri'næ, Libido intesti'ni. Some employ it synonymously with Prurigo; others, with Salac''itas, Lubi'do, Hi'meros.

LIBOS, from λειβω, 'I distil.' A defluxion from the eyes.—Galen.

LIBRA, Pound.

LICHANOS, Index, see Digitus.

LICHEN, λειχην or λιχην, (pronounced li'ken,) Exor'mia Lichen, Leichen, Serpi'go, Volat'ica, Pap'ulæ, P. siccæ, Peti'go, Pustulæ siccæ, Sca'bies sicca, S. a'gria, Licheni'asis adulto'rum, Li'chenous rash, (F.) Gale sèche, Dartre furfuracée volante, Poussée. The cutaneous affection described under this name by the Greek writers, is not clearly defined. Some have believed it to be Impetigo, but this is doubtful. The name is, now, generally applied to a diffuse eruption of red pimples, accompanied by a troublesome sense of tingling or pricking. Drs. Willan and Bateman define it,—"an extensive eruption of papulæ affecting adults, connected with internal disorder, usually terminating in scurf; recurrent, not contagious." One of their varieties, however, the Lichen Tropicus, does not accord well with this definition; for it affects children as well as adults, and is unconnected with internal disorder.

Lichen A'grius, Exor'mia Lichen ferus, Pap'ula a'gria, is distinguished by pimples in clusters or patches, surrounded by a red halo; the cuticle growing gradually harsh, thickened, and chappy, often preceded by general irritation. In addition to antiphlogistics, a cooling ointment may be used, to allay itching.

Lichen Barbatus Plicatus, L. plicatus.

Lichen Circumscrip'tus is characterized by clusters or patches of papulæ, having a well defined margin, and an irregularly circular form: continuing for six or eight weeks. These varieties require but little medical treatment. The antiphlogistic plan is all that is necessary.

Lichen Liv'idus. The papulæ have a dark red or livid hue, without any fever. They are more permanent in this variety. It requires the mineral acids and bark.

Lichen Pila'ris, Exor'mia Lichen pilaris, is merely a modification of the preceding; the papulæ appearing at the roots of the hair.

Lichen Simplex, Exor'mia Lichen simplex, consists of an eruption of red papulæ, appearing first on the face or arms, and afterwards extending over the body; preceded for a few days by slight febrile irritation, which usually ceases when the eruption appears,—with an unpleasant sense of tingling during the night. It generally dies away in ten days or a fortnight.

Lichen Trop'icus, Exormia Lichen tropicus, Eczes'ma, Es'sera (?), Sudam'ina (?), Prickly Heat, Summer Rash. The pimples are bright red, and of the size of a small pin's head; with heat, itching, and pricking, as if by needles. It is local; produced by excessive heat; and disappears when the weather becomes cooler, or the individual is inured to the climate.

Lichen Urtica'tus, Exor'mia Lichen urtico'sus, is another variety. The Nettle Lichen consists of papulæ, accompanied by wheals like those of nettle rash.

Lichen Arborum, Lichen pulmonarius—l. Blanc de Néige, L. caninus—l. Boîtier, L. pyxidatus.

Lichen Caninus, seu spu'rius seu terres'tris seu veno'sus seu ciner'eus terres'tris, Muscus cani'nus, Phys'cia niva'lis, Peltig''era cani'na, Peltid'ea cani'na seu leucorrhi'za seu mala'cea seu amplis'sima seu spu'ria, Ash-coloured Ground Liverwort, (F.) Lichen contre-rage, Lichen blanc de néige. This cryptogamous plant was, for a long time, considered capable of preventing and curing Rabies canina. It has, also, been used in mania and in spasmodic asthma.

Lichen Cinereus Terrestris, L. caninus—l. Carrageen, Fucus crispus—l. Cocciferus, L. pyxidatus—l. contre Rage, L. caninus—l. Entonnoir, L. pyxidatus—l. Eryngifolius, L. islandicus—l. Floridus hirtus, L. plicatus—l. Hirtus, L. plicatus.

Lichen Islan'dicus, L. eryngifo'lius, Lichenoï'des Island'icum, Loba'ria Islan'dica, Muscus Islandicus, M. cathar'ticus, Clado'nia Islan'dica, Phys'cia Islandica, Cetra'ria Islandica; Parme'lia Islan'dica, Iceland Lichen or Liverwort or Moss, (F.) Lichen d'Islande. This plant is inodorous, with a bitter and mucilaginous taste. It is esteemed to be tonic, demulcent, and nutrient. Dose, ʒj to iv ʒ, being first steeped in water holding in solution some carbonate of potassa to extract the bitter, and then boiled in milk. A bitter principle has been extracted from it, termed Cetrarin, Cetrari'num, Cetra'rium, which has been given in intermittents.

Lichen Laciniatus, L. saxatilis.

Lichen Plica'tus seu hirtus seu barba'tus plica'tus seu Floridus hirtus, Parme'lia plica'ta, Us'nea plica'ta seu Flor'ida hirta seu hirta, Muscus arbo'reus seu albus seu quernus, Querci'ni Herba. This plant is applied, by the Laplanders, as an astringent, to bleeding vessels; and to parts which are excoriated after long journeys.

Lichen Pulmona'rius, Lichen ar'borum seu reticula'tus, Parme'lia pulmona'cea, Reticula'ria officina'lis, Muscus pulmonarius querci'nus, Pulmona'ria arbo're, Loba'ria pulmonaria, Sticta pulmona'cea, Oak Lungs, Tree Lungwort, Hazel Crottles, (F.) Lichen pulmonaire. This plant is sub-astringent, and rather acid. It was once in high repute for curing diseases of the lungs.

Lichen Pyxida'tus, Muscus Pyxida'tus, Scyphoph'orus pyxida'tus, Mus'culus pyxoï'des terres'tris, Lichen pyxida'tus major, Lichen coccif'erus, Herba Ignis, Cup Moss, (F.) Lichen entonnoir, Lichen Boîtier, L. Pyxide. This plant is sub-astringent, and has been used in decoction in hooping-cough.

Lichen Reticulatus, L. pulmonarius.

Lichen Roccel'la, Parme'lia roccel'la, Roccella, R. tincto'ria, Seta'ria roccella, Litmus, Lacmus tincto'rius, Orchill, Cana'ry Archell, Chinney Weed, Herb Archell, (F.) Orseille. The chief use of this plant is as a blue dye. It has been employed to allay cough in phthisis, &c.

Lichen Saxat'ilis, L. tincto'rius seu lacinia'tus, Parme'lia saxat'ilis, Imbrica'ria saxat'ilis, Loba'ria saxat'ilis, Muscus Cra'nii huma'ni, Usnea. This moss, when found growing on a human skull, was formerly in high estimation against head affections, &c.

LICHEN SPURIUS, L. caninus — l. Stellatus, Marchantia polymorpha—l. Tinctorius, L. Saxatilis.

LICHENIASIS ADULTORUM, Lichen — l. Strophulus, Strophulus.

LICHENOIDES ISLANDICUM, Lichen Islandicus.

LICORICE, Glycyrrhiza.

LIEBENSTEIN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, situated in the duchy of Saxe-Meiningen, are amongst the strongest acidulous chalybeates in Germany. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, sulphate of lime, chloride of calcium, carbonate of lime, chloride of magnesium, and carbonate of iron.

LIEBERKÜHN'S GLANDS or FOLLICLES, so called from their first describer, are fine, capillary, blind saes, the openings of which are from 1-20th to 1-30th of a line in diameter, so closely placed over the whole of the small intestine as to give the mucous membrane a general sieve-like or perforated appearanee. They secrete the succus entericus.

LIEBERSCHE AUSZEHRUNG'S KRAUTER, see Galeopsis grandiflora — l. Brustkrauter, see Galeopsis grandiflora.

LIEBWERDA, MINERAL WATERS OF. Liebwerda is a Bohemian village, near the Silesian frontier. The springs are much frequented. There are four, all of which are rich in carbonic acid and contain but little saline matter.

LIÉGE, Suber.

LIEN (F.), Vin'culum. A band, strap or garter, used in certain operations; as to tie patients during the operation of lithotomy; to fix the apparatus in fracture, &c. Also, the spleen.

LIEN ACCESSORIUS, Lienculus—l. Ingens, Splenoncus—l. Succenturiatus, Licneulus.

LIEN'CULUS, diminutive of lien, 'spleen.' Lien succenturia'tus seu accesso'rius. A supernumerary spleen.

LIENOSUS, Splenic.

LI'ENTERY, Lienter'ia, from λειος, 'smooth,' and εντερον, 'intestine.' Lœ'vitas seu Lax'itas intestino'rum, Diarrhœ'a lienter'ia, Fluxus Lienter'icus, Chymorrhœ'a seu Lax'itas ingesto'rum, Bromatoëc'crisis, Diarrhœ'a Dyspep'tica, D. cum apepsiâ, D. Ingesto'rum, Slip'periness of the Guts. Frequent liquid evaeuations, the food only half digested. This condition is always symptomatic of great irritation in the intestinal canal, the sensibility of which is so much augmented that it cannot bear the sojourn of the food in it.

LIERRE, Hedera helix—l. Terrestre, Glechoma hederacea.

LIFE, Sax. lif, lyf, Vita, Bios, Bi'otē, Zoē, Pneuma, Spir'itus, (F.) Vie. The state of organized beings, during which, owing to the union of an unknown principle with matter, they are capable of performing functions different from those that regulate other natural bodies; all of which functions, however numerous and diversified, work to one end. Life has only a limited duration; beyond which, — the organic funetions ceasing to be executed,—the body is given up to the agency of chemical affinity. Hence Bichat has defined life to be—the aggregate of the functions which resist death. On account of the difference that exists among the vital functions, he has applied the term Organic Life to the functions servient to composition and decomposition;—as digestion, respiration, circulation, calorification, absorption, secretion, and nutrition; and Animal Life, to the functions which connect man and animals with external bodies; as the understanding, sensations, locomotion and voice.

LIFE, DURATION OF, see Longevity — l. Everlasting, Gnaphalium margaritaceum — l. Everlasting, sweet-scented, Gnaphalium polycephalum — l. Expectation of, see Longevity.

LIFE-INSU'RANCE. A contract entered into, usually by an insurance company, to pay a certain sum of money on a person's death, on the condition of his paying an annual premium during his life. The medical practitioner may be applied to to certify that the life of the insurer is one that is insurable according to the rules of the company.

LIFE, VALUE OF, see Longevity, and Mortality.

LIFE'S BLOOD, Cillo.

LIG'AMENT, Ligamen'tum; from ligare, 'to bind;' Desmos, Syndes'mos, Colliga'men, Cop'ula. A name given to fibrous structures, which serve to unite bones, and to form articulations; hence the division into interosseous and articular ligaments. They are of a white, close texture; are but little extensible, and difficult to break. The name ligament has, also, been given to any membranous fold, which retains an organ in its situation.

TABLE OF THE PRINCIPAL LIGAMENTS.

|---|---|
| 1. Of the Lower Jaw. | Capsular ligament.Suspensory ligament of the stylo-glossus.Lateral ligament. |
| 2. Connecting the Head with the first and second Vertebræ, and these with each other. | Two capsular ligaments between atlas and head.Circular ligament.Two capsular between atlas and axis.Perpendicular ligament.Two lateral or moderator ligaments.Transverse ligament and its appendices. |
| 3. Of the other Vertebræ. | Anterior common.Crucial interverteb al.Ligaments running from the edge of the bony arch and spinous process of one vertebra to that of the next.Interspinous ligament.Ligamentum nuchæ.Intertransverse.Capsular.Posterior or internal common. |
| 4. Of the Ribs, Sternum, &c. | Capsular of the heads of ribs.Capsular of the tubercles.Ligamenta transversaria interna.Ligamenta transversaria externa.Ligamenta cervicis costarum externa.Ligamentous fibres running from the margins of the extremities of the ribs to the corresponding cartilages.Radiated ligaments from cartilage of ribs to the sternum.Capsular ligaments of the cartilages of the ribs.Proper membrane of sternum.L. of cartilago-ensiformis.Tendinous expansions over the intercostales, &c. |
| 5. Of the Pelvis. | Two transverse,—one superior, one inferior.Ilio-sacral.Capsular of the sacro-iliac synchondrosis.Two sacro ischiatic,—posterior and anterior, with the superior and inferior appendices.Longitudinal of os coccygisInguinal ligamentCapsular of symphysis pubisLigament of foramen thyroideum. |

6. Of the Clavicle.
- Radiated ligament
- Capsular.
- Interclavicular.
- Ligamentum rhomboideum.
- Claviculo-acromial.
- Conoid.
- Trapezoid.

7. Of the Scapula.
- Anterior triangular.
- Proper posterior.

8. Of the Shoulder-Joint.
- Capsular.

9. Of the Elbow-Joint.
- Capsular.
- Brachio-ulnar.
- Brachio-radial.
- Coronary of the radius.
- Anterior and posterior accessory.
- Intermuscular of the os humeri.

10. Carpal Extremity of Radius and Ulna, and between those bones.
- Interosseous ligament.
- Oblique or chorda transversalis cubiti.
- Capsular.

11. Between Fore-arm and Wrist.
- Capsular.
- Two lateral.
- Mucous.

12. Of the Carpus.
- Annular.
- Capsular.
- Short ligaments, — oblique, transverse, capsular, and proper.

13. Between Carpal and Metacarpal bones.
- Articular lateral.
- Straight, perpendicular, &c.

14. Between the extremities of the Metacarpal bones.
- Interosseous, at the bases and heads, — dorsal, lateral, palmar.

15. At the base of the Metacarpal bone of the Thumb, and at the first joint of the Fingers.
- Capsular.
- Lateral.

16. Of the first and second joints of the Thumb, and second and third joints of the Fingers.
- Capsular.
- Lateral.

17. Retaining the Tendons of the Muscles of the Hand and Fingers in situ.
- Annular.
- Vaginal or flexor tendons.
- Vaginal or crucial of the phalanges.
- Accessory of the flexor tendons.
- Posterior annular.
- Vaginal of extensors.
- Transverse of extensors.

18. Connecting the Os Femoris with the Os innominatum.
- Capsular and accessory slips.
- Round or teres ligament.
- Cartilaginous ligament.
- Double cartilaginous ligament.
- Ligamenta mucosa.

19. Of the Knee-Joint.
- Lateral, — internal and external.
- External short lateral ligament.
- Posterior ligament.
- Ligament of the patella.
- Capsular.
- Ligamentum alare, — majus et minus.
- Ligamentum mucosum.
- Two crucial, — anterior and posterior.
- Transverse.

20. Connecting Fibula and Tibia.
- Capsular.
- Interosseous.
- Anterior superior.
- Posterior superior.

21. Connecting the Tarsal with the Leg Bones
- Anterior ligament of the fibula.
- Posterior of fibula.
- Deltoides of tibia.
- Capsular.

22. Of the Tarsus.
- Capsular.
- Short ligaments.
- Capsular, broad superior, and lateral ligaments, connecting astragalus and naviculare.
- Superior, lateral, and inferior, fixing os calcis to os cuboides.
- Long, oblique, and rhomboid forming the inferior ligaments.
- Superior superficial, interosseous and inferior transverse ligaments, fixing the os naviculare and os cuboides.
- Superior lateral, and plantar, which fix the os naviculare and cuneiform.
- Superior superficial and plantar, connecting the os cuboides, and os cuneiforme externum.
- Dorsal and plantar, uniting the ossa cuneiformia.
- The proper capsular of each bone.

23. Between Tarsus and Metatarsus.
- Capsular.
- Dorsal, plantar, lateral, straight, oblique, and transverse.

24. Connecting the Metatarsal Bones.
- Dorsal, plantar, and lateral, connecting the metatarsal bones.
- Transverse ligaments

25. Of the Phalanges of the Toes.
- Capsular.
- Lateral.

26. Retaining the Tendons of the Muscles of the Foot and Toes in situ.
- Annular.
- Vaginal of the tendons of the peronei.
- Laciniated.
- Vaginal of the tendon of the flexor longus pollicis.
- Vaginal and crucial of the tendons of the flexors of the toes.
- Accessory of the flexor tendons of the toes.
- Transverse of the extensor tendons.

LIGAMENT, ANTERIOR, OF THE BLADDER. A name given by the older anatomists to a portion of the superior pelvic aponeurosis, which becomes attached to the front of the neck of the bladder.

LIGAMENT ARTÉRIEL, Arterial ligament —l. Camper's, Perineal fascia—l. Cervical supraspinal, see Supraspinosa ligamenta—l. Ciliaire, Ciliary ligament.

LIGAMENT, COR'ONARY, OF THE LIVER, is a reflection formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior margin of the liver, and the lower surface of the diaphragm. See Falx.

LIGAMENT, COSTO-XIPHOID, Xiphoid ligament —l. Dorso-lumbo-supraspinal, see Supra-spinosa ligamenta—l. of Fallopius, Crural arch—l. Gimbernat's, see Gimbernat's ligament—l. Glossepiglottic, see Glossepiglottic—l. Infra-pubian, Triangular ligament—l. Interépineux, Interspinal ligament—l. of the Ovary, see Ovarium—l. Palmar inferior, Metacarpal ligament—l. Poupart's, Crural arch—l. Rond, Ligamentum teres—l. Surépineux cervical, see Supra-spinosa ligamenta—l. Sur-épineux-dorso-lombaire, see Supraspinosa ligamenta.

LIGAMENT, SUSPEN'SORY, OF THE LIVER, Ligamen'tum latum, Suspenso'rium He'patis, is a large triangular reflection, formed by the peritoneum between the superior surface of the liver and the diaphragm. It is constituted of two layers, and is continuous, below, with another reflection, called the Falx of the Umbilical Vein. See Falx.

LIGAMENT, TRIANGULAR, Perineal fascia.

LIGAMENTEUX, Ligamentous.

LIGAMENTOSUS, Ligamentous.

LIGAMEN'TOUS, Ligamento'sus, Desmous, Desmo'sus, (F.) Ligamenteux, Desmeux. Having the character, or relating to, a ligament.

LIGATIO, Fascia, Ligature—l. Linguæ, Aphonia.

LIGATION, see Ligature.

LIGATURA, Ligature, Fascia—l. Glandis, Phimosis.

LIG'ATURE, Ligatu'ra, Liga'tio, Alligatu'ra, Deliga'tio, Vinctu'ra, Fascia, Epid'esis, from ligo, 'I bind.' This word has various acceptations. It means, 1. The thread with which an artery or vein is tied, to prevent or arrest hemorrhage. 2. The cord, or thread, or wire, used for removing tumours, &c. 3. The bandage used for phlebotomy. Ligature is, also, sometimes applied to the act of tying an artery or considerable vessel —Liga'tion. When the artery alone is tied, the ligature is said to be immediate; when any of the surrounding parts are included, it is said to be mediate. The ligature occasions obliteration or adhesion of the arterial parietes, by cutting through the middle and internal coats; the adhesion being favoured by the formation of a coagulum, which acts, in some degree, as a barrier against the impulse of the blood, and subsequently disappears by absorption.

LIGHT, Sax. leohc̄, lihc̄, (G.) Licht—Lux, Lumen, Phos, (F.) Lumière. An extremely rare fluid; diffused over the universe; emanating from the sun and fixed stars; traversing more than four millions of leagues in a minute; passing through transparent bodies, which refract it according to their density and combustibility; and arrested by opake bodies, by which it is reflected at an angle equal to the angle of incidence. It is the cause of colour in all bodies, being entirely reflected by white surfaces and absorbed by black. It is decomposed in passing through a transparent prism into seven rays—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, and violet.

Light acts upon the body as a gentle and salutary stimulus. It urges to exercise, whilst privation of it induces sleep and inactivity, and disposes to obesity. Hence it is, that, in rural economy, animals which are undergoing the process of fattening are kept in obscurity. When vegetables are deprived of light, their nutrition is interfered with, and they become etiolated. To a certain extent this applies to animals, and there is every reason to believe, that want of light prevents the due development of organized bodies. It has been found that, when tadpoles were deprived of light, they did not undergo the perfect metamorphosis into the frog, but that monstrosities from arrest of development were induced.

LIGHTNING, Astrape.

LIGHTS, RISING OF THE, Cynauche trachealis.

LIGNE. Line—l. Âpre, Linea aspera—l. Blanche, Linea alba—l. Courbe, Curved line—l. Médiane de l'abdomen, Linea alba—l. Sous-trochantérienne, Linea aspera.

LIGNIN, from Lignum, 'wood.' Ligneous or woody fibre; the fibrous structure of vegetable substances.

LIGNYODES, Fuliginous.

LIGNYS, Fuligo.

LIG'ULA, Lin'gula. The clavicle; also, the glottis and epiglottis. A measure containing 3 drachms and a scruple, or about half an ounce. Also, a species of bandage or ligature.—Scribonius.

LIGUSTICUM CAPILLACEUM, Æthusa meum—l. Carvi, Carum—l. Fœniculum, Anethum.

Ligus'ticum Levis'ticum, from Λιγυστικος, appertaining to Liguria. Levis'ticum, Laserpitium German'icum, Ligusticum, Angel'ica levis'ticum seu paludapifo'lia, Lovage, (F.) Livèche, Ache des montagnes. The properties of this plant are said to be stimulant, carminative, emmenagogue, &c.

Ligusticum Meum, Æthusa meum—l. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum.

Ligusticum Podagra'ria, Podagra'ria ægopo'dium, Ægopo'dium podagraria, Sison podagra'ria, Pimpinel'la angelicafo'lia, Sium vulga're, Tragoseli'num angel'ica, Ses'eli ægopo'dium, Angel'ica sylvestris, Gout-weed. A British plant, once considered useful in cases of gout.

Ligusticum Silaus, Peucedanum silaus.

LIGUSTRUM ÆGYPTIACUM, Lawsonia inermis.

Ligus'trum Vulga'rē, Privet, Privy, (F.) Troëne. A shrub, which grows wild both in Europe and the United States, usually in hedges. The leaves are astringent and bitter; and the flowers, which are snow-white, and of an agreeable odour, have been employed in decoction in sore throat, and ulcerous stomatitis. The berries are said to be cathartic.

LIGYSMA, Distortion.

LILAC, COMMON, Syringa vulgaris—l. Vulgaris, Syringa vulgaris.

LILI, Lilium Paracelsi.

LILIA'GO. Dim. of Lil'ium, the lily; Spiderwort; Lilias'trum. This plant was formerly said to be alexipharmic and carminative.

LILIASTRUM, Liliago.

LIL'IUM CAN'DIDUM, L. album, Crinon. The white lily. (F.) Lis blanc. The infusion of the flowers of the lily in olive oil is emollient, and often applied externally, under the name of Lily oil, (F.) Huile de lis. The scales of the bulb, roasted, are sometimes employed as maturatives.

Lilium Convallium, Convallaria maialis.

Lilium Paracel'si, Tinctu'ra Metallo'rum, Lili. A medicine employed by Paracelsus. It was prepared by melting in a crucible four ounces of each of the following alloys: Antimony and iron, antimony and tin, antimony and copper, previously mixed with eighteen ounces of nitrate of potassa and as much salt of tartar. The melted mass, when pulverized, was treated with rectified alcohol, which really dissolved only the potassa set at liberty by the decomposition experienced by the nitre and salt of tartar. The Lilium Paracel- was used as a cordial. It entered into the composition of the theriacal elixir, &c.

White, Lilium candidum, Nelumbium luteum.

LIMA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Peru does not appear to be favourable to the generation of consumption; and Lima would seem to be a good residence for the phthisical valetudinarian. Many have been benefited by a residence there; but when they have gone farther south, as to Chili, the effect, according to Dr. M. Burrough, has generally been fatal.

LIMA DENTARIA, Scalprum dentarium.

LIMAÇIEN (F.), from limaçon, the cochlea of the ear. A branch of the acoustic or labyrinthic nerve sent to the cochlea.

LIMAÇON, Cochlea, Limax—l. Rampes du, see Cochlea.

LIMACUM CORNUA, see Lachrymal puncta.

LIMANCHIA, Abstinence.

LIMA'TIO, from lima, 'a file.' Filing: an operation employed by the dentist more especially to prevent immediate contact of the teeth with each other.

LIMATURA FERRI, Ferri Limatura.

LIMAX, Helix, Slug or Snail, (F.) Limaçon, Colimaçon, Escargot. A syrup has been prepared from these animals, which has been given in phthisis, &c. The raw snails have also been taken in consumption. They have been used as food.

LIMB, Membrum.

LIMBUS ALVEOLARIS, Alveolar border—l. Luteus retinæ, see Foramen centrale—l. Posterior corporis striati, Tænia semicircularis.

LIME. A fruit like a small lemon, the juice of which is strongly acid, and much used for making punch. It is, also, used in long voyages as an antiscorbutic, &c. It is a species of lemon, the fruit of Citrus acida.

LIME, Calx—l. Carbonate of, Creta—l. Chloride of, Calcis chloridum—l. Chlorite of, Calcis chloridum—l. Chloruret of, Calcis chloridum—l. Hydrate of, see Calx—l. Hypochlorite of, Calcis chloridum—l. LINDEN TREE, Tilia.

LINE, Lin'ea, Grammē, (F.) Ligne. Extent in length, considered without regard to breadth or thickness. As a measure, it means the 12th part of an inch.

MEDIAN LINE OF THE BODY is an imaginary line supposed to set out from the top of the head and to fall between the feet, so as to divide the body vertically into two equal and symmetrical parts.

LINEA, Line.

LINEA ALBA, L. A. Abdom'inis, (F.) Ligne blanche, Ligne médiane de l'abdomen (Ch.), Candid'ula abdom'inis lin'ea, Lin'ea centra'lis. A tendinous, strong, and highly resisting cord; extending from the ensiform cartilage of the sternum to the symphysis pubis, with the umbilicus near its middle. The linea alba is formed by the decussation of the aponeurosis of the abdominal muscles; and its use is to limit the movement of the chest backwards; to prevent it from separating too far from the pelvis, and to furnish a fixed point for the muscles of the abdomen in their contraction.

LINEA AS'PERA, (F.) Ligne âpre, Ragged ridge, Ligne sous-trochantérienne, (Ch.) A rough projection at the posterior surface of the femur, which gives attachment to muscles.

LINEA CANDIDULA ABDOMINIS, L. alba—l. Centralis, L. alba—l. Innominata, Ilio-pectinea Linea.

LINEÆ SEMILUNA'RES are the lines, which bound the outer margin of the recti muscles of the abdomen. They are formed by the union of the abdominal tendons. The lines which cross these muscles are called Lineæ transver'sæ.

LINEÆ TIB'IÆ, An'guli tib'iæ. Sharp lines on the tibia.

LINEÆ TRANSVERSÆ, see L. semilunares, and Processus teretes.

LINÉAIRE, Linear.

LIN'EAMENT, Lineamen'tum, from linea, 'a line.' A delicate trait observed on the countenance, which constitutes its special character, enables us to preserve its image, and is the cause of resemblance to others. A feature.

Bonnet gave the name Linéament to the first traces of organization in the embryo of man and animals.

LIN'EAR, Linea'ris, Linea'rius. Same etymon. (F.) Linéaire. Pathologists apply the epithet linear to fractures which are very narrow, and in which the fragments are scarcely separated.

LINE'OLA; a diminutive of linea, 'a line.' A small line.

Line'olæ Mamma'rum. The white lines on the breasts.

LIN'GUAL, Lingua'lis, from lingua, 'the tongue.' Relating or belonging to the tongue.

Lingual Ar'tery, Arte'ria lingua'lis, arises from the external carotid; and, after several tortuosities, reaches the base of the tongue, becomes horizontal, and, under the name Ranine, advances to the tip, where it anastomoses with its fellow. In its course, it gives off the Dorsalis linguæ and sublingual.

Lingual Muscle, Lingua'lis, Basio-glossus (Cowper), Glossia'nus, is a small, long, fasciculus of fibres, hidden beneath the sides of the tongue, between the hyoglossus and styloglossus muscles, which are on the outside, and the genioglossus, within. This muscle passes from the base to the tip of the tongue; and, at its sides, is confounded with the muscles just referred to. It shortens the tongue, depresses its point, and can carry it to the right or left side.

Lingual Nerve is a name which has been given to the ninth pair or hypoglossus. It is, also, a term applied to a branch given off from the Inferior maxillary, or third branch of the fifth pair. Near its origin it anastomoses with, or simply runs close to, the chorda tympani. It afterwards gives off a considerable number of filaments, which are distributed to the tongue, and some of which are said to have been even traced as far as the papillæ; — a distribution which has occasioned it to be regarded as the Gustatory nerve, (F.) Nerf gustatif.

Lingual Salivary Glands, see Salivary glands.

Lingual Vein follows nearly the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal jugular.

LINGUALIS, Lingual muscle.

LINGUETTA LAMINOSA, Lingula.

LINGULA, Ligula.

Lin'gula, Linguet'ta lamino'sa. A thin, transversely grooved lobule of gray substance, derived from the anterior border of the cerebellum, which, for a short distance, lies over the velum medullare anterius.

Lingula Fistulæ, Epiglottis.

LINI USITATISSIMI SEMINA, see Linum usitatissimum.

LIN'IMENT, Linimen'tum, Litus, Enchris'ton, Catachris'ton, Perich'risis, Perichris'ton, Aleiph'a, Aleim'ma, Enchris'ta, Frictum, Fricato'rium, Inunc'tio, from linire, 'to anoint gently,' 'to anoint.' An unctuous medicine, containing usually oil or lard, which is used externally in the form of friction.

LINIMENT AMMONIACAL, Linimentum ammoniæ — l. de Carbonate d'Ammoniaque, Linimentum ammoniæ carbonatis.

LINIMENT ANTIHÉMORRHOÏDALE DE SIEUR ANDRY, (F.) This is formed of Narbonne honey, Olive oil, and Turpentine.

LINIMENT ANTIPARALYTIQUE, (F.) Composed of subcarbonate of ammonia, alcoholized oil, black soap, and oil of rosemary.

Liniment, Antiscrof'ulous, of Hufeland. It is composed of fresh ox-gall, White Soap, Unguentum althæ'æ, Volatile oil of petroleum, Carbonate of ammonia, and Camphor.

LINIMENT CALCAIRE, Linimentum aquæ calcis — l. Camphor, Linimentum camphoræ — l. Camphré, Linimentum camphoræ — l. of Cantharides, camphorated, Linimentum e cantharidibus camphoratum — l. Cantharide camphré, Linimentum e cantharidibus camphoratum — l. d'Eau de chaux, Linimentum aquæ calcis — l. of Lime-water, Linimentum aquæ calcis — l. de Mercure, Linimentum hydrargyri — l. Mercurial, Linimentum hydrargyri — l. Oléo-calcaire, Linimentum aquæ calcis.

LINIMENT RÉSOLUTIF DE POTT, composed of oil of turpentine and muriatic acid. Used in rheumatism, swellings, &c.

Liniment, Saint John Long's. A liniment used by a celebrated empiric at the commencement of the second quarter of the 19th century. It is said to have consisted of oil of turpentine and acetic acid, held in suspension by yolk of egg. It was a powerful counter-irritant.

LINIMENT DE SAVON, Linimentum saponis compositum — l. de Savon opiacé, Linimentum saponis et opii.

LINIMENT SAVONNEUX HYDROSULFURE DE JADELOT. Composed of sulphuret of potass, ℥vj; white soap, ℔ij; oil of poppy, ℔iv; oil of thyme, ℥ij. Used in itch.

LINIMENTUM, Liniment.

Linimen'tum Æru'ginis, Ox'ymel Æru'ginis. Unguen'tum Ægyptiacum, Melli'tum de aceta'tē cupri, Liniment of verdigris, (F.) Liniment de Vert-de-gris, Miel d'acétate de cuivre. (Æruginis. cont. ℥j; acet. ℥vij; mellis despum. pond. ℥xiv. Liquefied, strained, and inspissated by boiling. — Ph. L.) It is used as an escharotic and detergent; — diluted, as a gargle in venereal ulcerations and in foul ulcers.

Linimentum Album, Ceratum cetacei, Unguentum cetacei — l. ad Ambustiones, L. aquæ calcis.

Linimentum Ammo'niæ, Sapo ammoniaca'lis, Linimen'tum ammonia'tum seu ammo'nicum seu Anglica'num, Sapo ammo'niæ olea'ceus, Unguen'tum album resol'vens, Oleum ammonia'tum, Linimentum ammo'niæ, Strong liniment of ammonia, (F.) Liniment volatil ou ammoniacal, Savon ammoniacal. (Liq. ammon. f℥j; olei olivæ, f℥ij. Mix. — Ph. U. S.) A stimulating and rubefacient soap.

Linimentum Ammo'niæ Carbona'tis, Liniment of subcarb'onate of ammo'nia, Linimentum ammo'niæ, Linimentum volat'ilē, Hartshorn and oil. (F.) Liniment de carbonate d'ammoniaque. (Solut. subcarb. ammon. f℥j; olei oliv. f℥iij. Shake till they unite.) A stimulating liniment, mostly used to relieve rheumatic pains, bruises, &c.

Linimentum Aquæ Calcis, Linimentum Calcis (Ph. U. S.), Oleum lini cum calcē, Sapo calca'rius, Linimentum ad ambustio'nes, Liniment of lime-water, (F.) Liniment d'eau de chaux, Savon calcaire, Liniment calcaire, Liniment oléo-calcaire.

℥Olei lini, aquæ calcis, āā f℥ij. Misce.) A cooling and emollient application to burns and scalds.

Linimentum Cam'phoræ, Oleum Camphora'tum, Solu'tio camphoræ oleo'sa, Camphor liniment, (F.) Liniment Camphré, (Camphoræ, ℥iv; olei olivæ, f℥ij. Dissolve.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient.

Linimentum Cam'phoræ Compos'itum, Ward's essence for the headach, Compound camphor liniment. (Camphor, ℥ij; liq. ammoniæ, f℥ii; spirit. lavand. Oj.—Ph. L.) It is stimulant and anodyne.

Linimentum Canthar'idis, Liniment of Spanish Flies. (Cantharid. in pulv. ℥j; Ol. Terebinth. Oss. Digest for three hours by means of a water bath, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Used as an excitant liniment in typhus, &c.

Linimentum e Cantharid'ibus Camphora'tum, Camph'orated liniment of canthar'ides, (F.) L. cantharide camphré. (Tinct. cantharid. ℥ss; ol. amygd. dulc. ℥iv; sapon. amygd. ℥j; camphor. ℥ss. Dissolve the camphor in the oil, and add this mixture to the tincture and soap.—Ph. P.) Rubefacient, and discutient.

Linimentum Hydrar'gyri, Mercu'rial liniment, (F.) L. de Mercure. (Ung. Hyd. fort., adip. præp. āā ℥iv; camphoræ, ℥j; sp. rect. gtt. xv; liquor ammon. f℥iv. Rub the camphor with the spirit; add the ointment and lard; and, lastly, gradually add the solution.—Ph. L.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient to venereal swellings, &c.

Linimentum Plumbatum, Unguentum plumbi superacetatis — l. Saponaceum opiatum, L. saponis et opii.

Linimentum Sapona'ceum Hydrosulphura'tum. (Common Soap, 500 p. Liquefy in a water bath in an earthen vessel; and add white poppy oil, 250 p. Mix intimately, and add dry sulphuret of potass, 100 p. Beat together, and add oil of poppy-seed, 750 p.—Ph. P.) In cutaneous affections, as psora, herpes, &c.

Linimentum Saponato-camphoratum, L. Saponis camphoratum.

Linimentum Sapo'nis, Tinctu'ra saponis camphora'ta (Ph. U.S.), Camphorated Tincture of Soap, Soap Liniment. (Saponis concis. ℥iv; camphor. ℥ij; Ol. Rosmarin. f℥ss; alcohol, Oij. Digest the soap and alcohol in a water bath, until the former is dissolved; filter, and add the camphor and oil.—Ph. U. S.) Used in sprains, bruises, and as an embrocation.

Linimentum Sapo'nis Camphora'tum, L. S. compos'itum, L. Sapona'to-camphora'tum, Bal'samum opodel'doc, Tinctura saponis camphora'ta (Ph. U. S.), Opodel'doch, Steer's opodeldoch, (F.) L. de Savon. Compound Soap Liniment. (Sapon. rasur. ℥iv; Camphor. ℥ij; Ol. Rosmarini, f℥ss; Aquæ, f℥iv; Alcohol. Oij. Mix the alcohol and water; digest the soap in the mixture by means of a water bath, until it is dissolved; filter, and add the camphor and oil.—(Ph. U. S.) Stimulant and anodyne: in bruises, local pains, &c.

Freeman's Bathing Spirits consist of lin. sapon comp. coloured with Daffy's elixir.

Jackson's Bathing Spirits differ from Freeman's in the addition of some essential oils.

Linimentum Sapo'nis et Opii, L. sapona'ceum opia'tum, Soap and opium liniment, Bates's anodyne balsam, Balsamum anod'ynum, Tinctura saponis et opii, (F.) L. de Savon opiacé. (Saponis duri. ℥iv; opii, ℥j; camphoræ, ℥ij; olei rorismarin. f℥ss; alcohol, Oij.—Ph. E.) Anodyne; in chronic rheumatism and local pains in general.

Linimentum Simplex, Simple Liniment. (Ol. oliv. 4 p.; ceræ albæ, 1 p. fiat linimentum.—Ph. E.) Emollient; used in chaps, &c.

Linimentum Simplex, Unguentum ceræ.

Linimentum Terebin'thinæ, Turpen'tine liniment. (Cerat. resinæ, ℔j; ol. terebinth. Oss. Melt the cerate and stir in the oil.) A stimulant; applied to burns, &c.

Linimentum Volatile, L. ammoniæ carbonatis.

Linnæ'a, L. Borea'lis. This plant, called after Linnæus, has a bitter, sub-astringent taste; and is used, in some places, in the form of fomentation, in rheumatic pains. An infusion in milk is used in Switzerland for the cure of sciatica.

Linospermum, see Linum usitatissimum.

Linseed, see Linum usitatissimum.

Lint, Carbasus, Linteum.

Linteamen, Linteum, Pledget.

Lin'teum, L. carptum sen rasum, Linte'amen, Oth'onē, Othon'ion, Car'basus, Car'basa, Car'pia, Motos, Motē, Motum, Linamen'tum, Tilma, Xystos, Xysma, Achnē, Lint, (F.) Charpie. A soft, flocculent substance, made by scraping old linen cloth, (F.) Charpie râpée, or by unravelling old linen cut into small pieces—(F.) Charpie brute; and employed in surgery as a dressing to wounds, ulcers, &c., either simply or covered with ointment.

Linteum Carptum, see Linteum — l. Rasum, see Linteum.

Linum, see Linum usitatissimum — l. Arvense, L. usitatissimum.

Linum Cathar'ticum, L. min'imum, Chamæli'num, Purging flax or Mill mountain, (F.) Lin purgatif. This plant is possessed of cathartic properties, and has a bitterish, disagreeable taste. Dose, ℥j, in substance.

Linum Crudum, see Apolinosis — l. Minimum, L. Catharticum.

Linum Usitatis'simum, L. arven'sē, Common flax, (F.) Lin. The seed, Linum (Ph. U. S.), Sem'ina lini usitatis'simi, Linosper'mum, Linseed, Flaxseed, (F.) Grains de lin, are inodorous, and almost tasteless; yielding mucilage to warm water, and oil by expression. They are demulcent and emollient. Linseed, when ground into powder, forms a good emollient poultice. It is only necessary to stir the powder into boiling water. The oil, Oleum lini, Flaxseed oil, (F.) Huile de Lin, is emollient and demulcent.

LIONDENT, Leontodon taraxacum.

Lion'S foot, Nabalus albus, Prenanthes — l. Tail, Leonurus.

Liopodia, Leiopodes.

Liopus, Leiopus.

Lip, Sax. and Germ. Lippe, Chcilos, La'bium, Labrum, (F.) Lèvre. [In Entomology, labium means the lower lip,—labrum, the upper.] The lips are composed of different muscular fasciculi, nerves, and vessels, covered by the skin and mucous membrane of the mouth. They circumscribe the anterior aperture of that cavity; and are inservient to mastication, pronunciation, &c. They are distinguished into upper and lower—Anochei'lon, and Catochei'lon—and are placed in front of each jaw, forming between them the anterior aperture of the mouth. They unite at each side, and form what are called the angles or commissures of the mouth—Chal'ini. Their free edge is covered with a mucous membrane, of a more or less livid red, according to the individual. They receive their arteries from the external carotid. Their veins open into the two jugulars. Their lymphatic vessels descend into the ganglions situate beneath the chin. Their nerves are derived from the infra-orbitar, mental, and facial.

Lips, La'bia, (F.) Lèvres de la vulve, are folds belonging to the genital organs of the female, and distinguished into—1. Labia puden'di seu Cunni seu majo'ra, Episi'a, Alæ puden'di mulie'bris, Hytrochei'lides, Rupes, Alæ majo'res, Crem'noi, (F.) Grandes Lèvres. These are two membranous folds, thicker above than below, which limit the vulva laterally, and extend from the inferior part of the mons veneris to the perinæum. They unite anteriorly and posteriorly, forming commissures; the posterior of which is called Fourchette. Their outer surface is convex; formed of skin and covered with hair. The inner surface is white, and covered by a mucous membrane, continuous with that lining the other parts of the vulva. The space between the skin and mucous membrane is filled with a fatty tissue and fibrous bands, some fibres of the constrictor vaginæ muscle, vessels, and nerves.

We speak, also, of the lips of a wound, ulcer, &c., when alluding to the edges of these solutions of continuity.

LIPA, λιπα, fat; also, Lippitudo.

LI'PARA, from λιπαρος, 'fatty,' and λιπα, 'fat.' Plasters, containing much oil or fat.

LIPARIA, see Polysarca.

LIPAROCE'LE, Lipoce'lē, from λιπαρος, 'fatty,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' Lipo'ma, or fatty tumour of the scrotum. Her'nia pinguedino'sa scroti.

LIPAROLÉ, Pomatum, Pommade.

LIPAROTES, see Polysarcia.

LIPAROTRICH'IA, from λιπαρος, 'fat,' and θριξ, 'hair.' Too great oiliness of the hair.

LIPASMA, see Polysarcia.

LIPEMANIA, Melancholy, see Lypemania.

LIPHÆMIA, Leiphæmia.

LIPHÆMOS, Leiphæmos.

LIPO or LEIPO, λειπω, 'I leave,' 'I forsake.' Hence, Leipopsychia, Leipothymia.

LIPOCELE, Liparoccle.

LIPODERMIA, Aposthia.

LIPODERMOS, Leipodermos.

LIPO'MA, Lypo'ma, from λιπος, 'fat,' 'fatty tumour.' A fatty tumour of an encysted or other character.

LIPOME'RIA, Leipome'ria, from λειπω, 'I leave,' and μερος, a 'part.' Monstrosity from arrest of development, or from defect. Deficiency of one or more of the parts of the body; for example, where a person has only four fingers.

LIPOPSYCHIA, Syncope.

LIPOS, Pinguedo.

LIPOSIS, see Polysarcia.

LIPOTHYMIA, Syncope.

LIPPA, Chassie.

LIPPIA, Adali.

LIPPITU'DO, Ophthal'mia chron'ica of some, Lippitude, Blear-eye, Lappa, Lipa, Xerophthal'mia, Lema, Lemē, Lemos'itas, Glemē, Glama, Gra'mia. A copious secretion of the sebaceous humour of the eyelids, which renders them gummy. It is owing to a state of chronic inflammation of the tarsal margins; the eyelids being generally red, tumefied, and painful.

Lippitudo Neonatorum, see Ophthalmia.

LIPPUS, Chassieux.

LIPSIS ANIMI, Syncope.

LIPSOTRICHIA, Alopecia, Calvities.

LIQUAMU'MIA, Adeps huma'nus. Human fat—Ruland and Johnson.

LIQUARIUM, Syrupus simplex.

LIQUATIO, Liquefaction.

LIQUEFA'CIENT, Liquefa'ciens, from liquidus, 'liquid,' and facere, 'to make.' A medicinal agent, which seems to have the power of liquefying solid depositions. To this class mercury, iodine, &c., have been referred by some.

LIQUEFAC'TION, Liqua'tio, Liquefac'tio; (same etymon.) Transformation of a solid substance into a liquid. It is used particularly in speaking of metals and fatty bodies, see Fusion.

Liquidam'bar Styracif'lua, Liquidam'bra, Sweet gum. The name of the tree which affords the Liquid amber and Storax liquida, Styrax liquida or Liquid storax. Liquid amber is a resinous juice of a yellow colour, inclining to red; at first of about the consistence of turpentine; by age, hardening into a solid, brittle mass. It is not used medicinally.

Styrax Liquida is obtained from this plant by boiling. There are two sorts,—one more pure than the other. It is used, occasionally, as a stomachic, in the form of plaster.

LIQUIDUM NERVEUM, Nervous fluid.

LIQUIRITIA, Glycyrrhiza.

LIQUOR, Liqua'men, Hygron, Hy'grotes, (F.) Liqueur. A name given to many compound liquids, and especially to those the bases of which are water and alcohol.

Liquor Acidus Halleri, Elixir acidum Halleri—l. Ætherеus, Ether—l. Ætherеus sulphuricus, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici.

Liquor Alu'minis Compos'itus, Aqua alu'minis compos'ita, Aqua alumino'sa Batea'na, Compound solu'tion of Alum, (F.) Liqueur d'alumine composée. (Aluminis, zinci sulphat. sing. ℥ss, aquæ fervent. Oij. Dissolve and filter through paper.) Detergent and stimulant. Used as a collyrium, when properly diluted, in ophthalmia; as an injection in gleet, leucorrhœa, &c.

Liquor Ammo'niæ, Liq. ammoniæ puræ, Al'cali ammoni'acum flu'idum, Ammo'nia liq'uida, A. caus'tica liquida, A. pura liquida, Lixiv'ium ammoniaca'lē, Spiritus salis ammoniaci aquo'sus, Aqua ammoniæ, Aqua ammoniæ caus'ticæ, Liquid ammonia, Solution of ammonia, (F.) Ammoniaque liquide. (Directed to be made in the Pharm. U. S. from muriate of Ammonia, in fine powder; and Lime, each a pound; distilled water a pint; water, nine fluidounces. The water is employed to slake the lime; this is mixed with the muriate of ammonia and put into a glass retort in a sand-bath. Heat is applied so as to drive off the ammonia, which is made to pass into a quart bottle containing the distilled water. To every ounce of the product three and a half fluidrachms of distilled water are added, or as much as may be necessary to raise its s. g. to 0.96. This Liquor Ammoniæ may also be made by mixing one part of liquor ammoniæ fortior with two parts of distilled water. (Ph. U. S. 1842.) Its s. g. is 0.960. Liquor Ammoniæ fortior, Stronger solution of ammonia (Ph. U. S.) is an aqueous solution of ammonia of the s. g. 0.882. Liquor ammoniæ is stimulant, antacid, and rubefacient. Dose gtt. to xx, in water or milk.

Liquor Ammoniæ Aceta'tis, Al'cali ammoni'acum aceta'tum, Alcali volat'ilē aceta'tum, Aqua aceta'tis ammo'niæ, Solution of acetate of ammonia, Aqua ammo'niæ aceta'tæ, Ace'tas ammoniæ, Spirit of Mindere'rus, Sal ammoni'acum vegetab'ilē, Spir'itus ophthal'micus Mindere'ri, Sal aceto'sus ammoniaca'lis. (Acid. acetic. dilut. Oij, Ammon. carbonat. in pulv. add the salt to the acid until it is saturated. Ph. U. S. 1851.) A sudorific; externally, cooling. Dose, f℥ij to f℥iss.

Liquor Ammoniæ Subcarbona'tis, Solu'tio subcarbonatis ammoniæ, Aqua carbonatis ammoniæ, Solution of subcarbonate of ammonia. (Ammoniæ carbon. ℥iv, aquæ destillat. Oj. Dissolve and filter through paper.) Use; — the same as that of the carbonate of ammonia.

Liquor Ammonii Hydrothiodis, Ammoniæ sulphuretum — l. ex Ammoniâ et oleo succini, Spiritus ammoniæ succinatus—l. Ammonii vinosus, Spiritus ammoniæ.

Liquor Am'nii, Aqua amnii. The liquor of the amnios. (F.) Eaux de l'amnios. The fluid exhaled by the amnios, and which envelops the fœtus during the whole period of utero-gestation. It is often simply called the waters, (F.) Les Eaux. Its relative quantity diminishes as pregnancy advances, although its absolute quantity continues to increase till the period of delivery. In some women only five or six ounces are met with: in others, it amounts to pints. It is limpid, yellowish, or whitish; exhales a faint smell, and has a slightly saline taste. It contains water in considerable quantity; albumen; chloride of sodium; phosphate of lime; an alkaline substance; and a particular acid. It facilitates the dilatation of the uterus, and aids delivery by acting as a soft wedge enclosed in its membranes, Poche des Eaux, &c. It is probably inservient to useful purposes in the nutrition of the fœtus.

Liquor Amnii, False. The fluid contained between the amnion and chorion in the early periods of fœtal existence.

Liquor, Anodyne, Hoffmann's, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici compositus—l. Anodynus martialis, Alcohol sulphurico-æthereus ferri.

Liquor Anod'ynus Terebinthina'tus. A formula prescribed by Rademacher in cases of gallstone, and of obstructions and indurations of the liver and spleen. It was composed of Hoffmann's anodyne liquor ℥j; rectified oil of turpentine ℈ij. Dose 5 to 10 drops. It resembles the Remède de Durand.

Liquor Arsenica'lis, L. potas'sæ arseni'tis (Ph. U. S.), Solu'tio arsenicalis, S. arsenica'ta, S. arseni'tis kal'icæ, Arsen'ical solution, Min'eral solvent, Ar'senis potas'sæ liq'uidus, Ar'senis potassæ aquo'sus, Fowler's solution of arsenic, Solvens minera'lē, Ital'ian poison, Aqua Tofa'na, Aqua Toffa'nia, Acqua della Toffana, Acqua di Napoli, Acquet'ta (?), Tasteless ague drop, (F.) Liqueur arsénicale. (Acid. Arsenios. in frustulis, potassæ carbonatis pur., sing. gr. lxiv., aquæ destillat. q. s. Boil together the arsenious acid and carbonate of potassa with twelve fluidounces of distilled water, in a glass vessel, until the arsenic is dissolved. When the solution is cold, add Spirit. lavand. c. f℥iv, and as much distilled water as will make the whole one pint. Ph. U. S.) f℥j contains gr. ss of the arsenious acid. Dose, gtt. xx.

Liquor Arsenici et Hydrargyri Iodidi, see Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of—l. Barii chloridi, Baryta, muriate, solution of—l. Bellosti, L. Hydrargyri nitrici — l Calcii chloridi, see Calcis murias.

Liquor Calcis, Solu'tio calcis, Aqua calcis, Aqua benedic'ta, Calca'ria pura liq'uida, Aqua calca'riæ ustæ, Solution of Lime, Lime Water, (F.) Eau de chaux. (Calcis ℥iv. aq. destill. cong. Pour the water on the lime, and stir. Let it stand in a covered vessel three hours; bottle the lime and water in stopped bottles, and use the clear solution.) It is astringent, tonic, and antacid; and is used in diarrhœa, diabetes, heartburn, &c., and as a lotion to foul and cancerous ulcers, &c. Dose, ℥ij to Oss, in milk.

Liquor Calcis Compos'itus, Aqua calcis compos'ita, Compound lime water, Aqua benedic'ta compos'ita, (F.) Eau de chaux composé. (Lign. guaiac. ras. ℔ss, rad. glycyrrh. ℥j, cort. sassafras, ℥ss; semin. coriand. ℥ij, liquor calcis, Ovj. Macerate for two days, and filter.) It is stimulant, diaphoretic, and astringent, and is used in cutaneous affections.

Liquor Calcis Muriatis, see Calcis murias—l. Cereris, Cerevisia — l. Chloreti natri, L. sodæ chlorinatæ—l. Chlorini, see Chlorine—l. Chlorureti natri, L. Sodæ chlorinatæ—l. Chlorureti sodæ, L. sodæ chlorinatæ.

Liquor Cupri Ammonia'ti, Aqua cupri ammonia'ti, Aqua sopphari'na, Blue eyewater, Solution of ammoniated copper; (F.) Liqueur ou Eau de cuivre ammoniacal. (Cupri ammoniat. ℥j. aquæ destill. Oj. Dissolve and filter the solution through paper. Ph. L.) Corrosive and detergent. Used externally to foul ulcers; and diluted with an equal part of distilled water, it is applied by means of a hair pencil to specks and films on the eye.

Liquor Cupri Sulpha'tis Compos'itus, Aqua cupri vitriola'ti composita. (Cupri sulphat., alumin. sulphat. āā ℥iij, aquæ puræ Oij, acid sulph. ℥ij. Boil the salts in the water until they are dissolved; then filter the liquor, and add the acid.) Used as an astringent in epistaxis, &c. It was also called Aqua Styp'tica.

Liquor Cyreniacus, Benjamin — l. Excitans, Spiritus ammoniæ succinatus.

Liquor Ferri Alkali'ni, Solution of Alkaline Iron, (F.) Liqueur de fer alcaline. (Ferri ℥iiss, acid. nitric. ℥ij, aquæ destillat. f℥vj. liq. potass. subcarb. f℥vj. To the acid and water mixed, add the iron; and, after the effervescence, add the clear solution, gradually, to the liq. potassæ subcarb.; shaking it occasionally till it assumes a deep brown-red colour, and the effervescence stops. After six hours' settling, pour off the clear solution. Ph. L.) It is tonic, like other preparations of iron. Dose, f℥ss to f℥iss.

Liquor Ferri Io'didi, Solution of Iodide of Iron, Syru'pus Ferri io'didi, Syrup of Iodide of Iron. (Iodin. ℥ij, Ferri rament. ℥j, Sacchar. pulv. ℥xij, Aquæ destillat. q. s. Mix the iodine with f℥x of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, constantly stirring. Heat the mixture gently until the liquor acquires a light greenish colour; then, having added the sugar, continue the heat a short time, and filter. Lastly, pour distilled water upon the filter, and allow it to pass until the whole of the filtered liquor measures twenty fluidounces. Keep the solution in closely stopped bottles.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 10 to 30 drops.

Liquor Ferri Muriatis, Tinctura ferri muriatis.

Liquor Ferri Nitra'tis, L. F. Sesquinitra'tis seu ternitra'tis, Solu'tio Ferri nitra'tis. Solution of nitrate, ternitrate of sesquioxide, or sesquinitrate of iron, has been recommended in chronic diarrhœa and dysentery. Its virtues exactly resemble those of chloride of iron. It is prepared as follows: — Ferri fili, incis. ℥j, Acid. nitric. f℥iij, Aq. destillat. q. s. Mix the acid and a pint of distilled water, until gas ceases to be given off; filter, and add distilled water to make f℥xxx. —Ph. U. S.) Dose, 10 to 20 drops.

Liquor Fumans Boy'lii, Sulphure'tum Ammo'niæ Hydrogena'tum, Hydrosulphure'tum Ammoniæ, Tinctu'ra Sul'phuris Volat'ilis, Aqua Sulphure't Ammoniæ, Boyle's Fuming liquor, (F.) Liqueur fumante de Boyle. It is possessed of nauseating and emetic properties, and has been given in diabetes and diseases of excitement as a deoxygenizer!

Liquor Hydrar'gyri Nitrici, L. Bellosti, (F.) Eau mercurielle, Eau contre la gangrène, Remède du Duc d'Antin, R. du Capucin, (Hydrarg. 120 p., acid nitr. (33°,) 150 p. Dissolve, and add to the solution, distilled water, 900 p. Ph. P.) Dose, two or three drops in a glass of water. Not much used.

Liquor Hydrar'gyri Oxymuria'tis, Liquor Hydrar'gyri Chlo'ridi corrosi'vi, L. Hydrar'gyri bichloridi, Solu'tion of Oxymuriate of Mercury, Liquor Swietenis, L. Syphilit'icus Turneri, Mu'rias hydrargyri spirituo'sus liq'uidus, Solutio Muria'tis hydrar'gyri oxygenati, Liquor or Solution of Corro'sive Sub'limate or of Van Swieten. (Hyd. oxym. gr. viij, aquæ destill. f℥xv, sp. rect. f℥j. Dissolve in the water and add the spirit. Ph. P.) Dose, f℥ss, or f℥j.

Norton's Drops, Green's Drops, and Solomon's Anti-Impetig''enes—all nostrums—seem to be disguised solutions of Corrosive Sublimate.

Liquor Hydrargyri Supernitratis, see Hydrargyri nitras—l. Hydriodatis Arsenici et Hydrargyri, Arsenic and mercury, iodide of.

Liquor Io'dini Compos'itus, (Ph. U. S. 1842,) Liquor Iodin'ii compos'itus, (Ph. U. S. 1851,) Solu'tio Potas'sii Io'didi Iodure'ta, Compound Solution of Iodine, Lugol's Solution. (Iodin. ℥vj, Potass. iodid. ℥iss, Aquæ destillat. Oj. Dissolve the iodine and iodide of potassium in the water. —Ph. U. S.) Dose, gtt. vj. ad xij, in sugared water.

Liquor Lithargyri Subacetatis, L. plumbi subacetatis—l. Lithargyri subacetatis compositus, Liquor plumbi subacetatis dilutus.

Liquor of Monro, Solution of Monro. A solution, used by Monro for the preservation of anatomical preparations. It was composed of alcohol at 22° or 24°, with a drachm of nitric acid to each pint.

Liquor Morgag'nii. The small quantity of fluid contained within the capsule of the crystalline lens.

Liquor Morphi'næ seu Morphiæ Aceta'tis, Solution of Acetate of Morphia, An'odyne Drops. (Acetate of morphia, gr. xvj, distilled water, f℥vj, dilute acetic acid, f℥ij.) Dose, from six to twenty-four drops.

Liquor Morphi'næ seu Mor'phiæ Sulpha'tis, Solution of Sulphate of Morphia. (Morphiæ sulphat. gr. viij, aquæ destillat. Oss. Dissolve the sulphate of morphia in the water.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij—containing from an eighth to a quarter of a grain.

Liquor Natri Oxymuriatici, L. Sodæ chlorinatæ—l. Nervinus Bangii, Tinctura ætherea camphorata—l. Oleosus Sylvii, Spiritus ammoniæ aromaticus—l. Opii sedativus, (Haden's,) see Tinctura opii.

Liquor Opii Sedati'vus. An empirical preparation by a London druggist of the name of Battley. It is said to be an aqueous solution of opium, evaporated to dryness to get rid of the acid resin, re-dissolved in water, and a small portion of alcohol added to give it permanence.—Redwood. It is devoid of many of the narcotic effects of opium.

Liquor Ovi Albus, Albumen ovi—l. Pancreaticus, see Pancreas—l. Pericardii, see Pericardium—l. Plumbi acetatis, L. P. subacetatis—l. Plumbi diacetatis, Liquor Plumbi subacetatis.

Liquor Plumbi Subaceta'tis, Liquor Subaceta'tis Lithar'gyri, Solution of Subacetate of Lead, Liquor Plumbi Aceta'tis, L. P. Diaceta'tis, Goulard's Extrac'tum Satur'ni, Lithar'gyri Ace'tum, (F.) Liqueur de sous-acétate de Plomb. (Plumb. acet. ℥xvj, Plumb. oxid. semivitr. in pulv. subtil. ℥ixss, aq. destillat. Oiv. Boil together in a glass or porcelain vessel, for half an hour, occasionally adding distilled water, so as to preserve the measure. Filter through paper, and keep the solution in closely stopped bottles.—Ph. U. S.) It is used externally as a cooling astringent, and discutient, when diluted with distilled water.

Liquor Plumbi Subaceta'tis Dilu'tus, Liquor Subaceta'tis Lithar'gyri Compos'itus, Aqua Satur'ni, Ace'tas Plumbi dilu'tum alcohol'icum, Diluted Solu'tion of Subac''etate of Lead, Aqua veg''eto-minera'lis, Tinctu'ra plumbo'sa, Aqua Lithar'gyri Aceta'ti compos'ita, Liquor Plumbi Aceta'tis dilu'tus, Goulard water. (F.) Eau, blanche, Eau de Goulard, Eau végéto-minérale, White Wash, Royal Preventive. (Liq. plumbi subacet. f℥ij, aquæ destillat. Oj. Ph. U. S.) Properties the same as the last, but feebler.

Liquor Potas'sæ, Aqua Potas'sæ, Aqua Kali Caust'ici, Solution of Potash or of Potassa, Lixiv'ium magistra'lē, L. Sapona'rium, Soap Lees, Aqua Kali puri, Soap Ley, Lixiv'ium cau'sticum, Potas'sa liq'uida, (F.) Eau, solution ou liqueur de Potasse, Potasse liquide, Lessive des Savonniers. (Potassæ carb. ℔j, calcis ℔ss, aquæ destill. fervent. congium. Dissolve the alkali in Oij of the water, and add the remainder of the lime. Mix the whole: set aside in a close vessel, and, when cold, filter through calico. Ph. L.) It is antilithic in cases of uric acid calculi, and antacid. Externally, stimulant and escharotic. Dose, gtt. x to xx.

Liquor Potassæ Arsenitis, L. arsenicalis—l. Potassæ Carbonatis, L. P. Subcarbonatis.

Liquor Potassæ Citra'tis, Solution of Citrate of Potassa, Neutral Mixture, Saline Mixture. (Succ. Limon. Oss, Potass. Bicarbonat. q. s.) saturate by the carbonate of potassa, and filter; or, Acid. Citric ℥ss; Ol. Limon. ♏. ij; Aquæ Oss, Potass. Bicarbonat. q. s.; dissolve, saturate by the carbonate of potassa, and filter. Ph. U. S.) Used in fever, but probably of little or no efficacy.

Liquor Potassæ Subcarbona'tis, L. P. Carbonatis (Ph. U. S.), Aqua Subcarbonatis Kali, O'leum Tar'tari per deliq'uium, Aqua Kali, Lixiv'ium Tartari, Aqua Kali præpara'ti, Oil of Tartar, Saline oil of Tartar, Solu'tion of Subcar'bonate of Potass, (F.) Liqueur de sous-carbonate de Potasse, Lessive de Tartre, (Potass. subcarb. ℔j, aquæ destillat. f℥xij. Dissolve and filter.) Dose, gtt. x to xxx.

Liquor Potassii Iodidi seu Potassæ Hydriod'atis, Solution of Iodide of Potassium or of Hydriodate of Potass. (Potassii iodid. gr. 36, aquæ destillat. f℥j.) Dose, gtt. xx, three times a day.

Liquor, Propagatory, Sperm—l. Prostaticus, Prostatic liquor—l. Puris, see Pus.

Liquor Sang'uinis. A term given by Dr. Babington to one of the constituents of the blood, the other being the red particles. He considers, from his experiments that fibrin and serum do not exist as such in circulating blood, but that the Liquor Sanguinis — Plasma, of Schultz, Coagulable or plastic Lymph, the Mucago or Mucilage of Harvey, Hewson and others—when removed from the circulation and no longer subjected to the laws of life, has then, and not before, the property of separating into fibrin and serum. It is the oxyprotein of the liquor sanguinis, after the red particles have subsided, and, according to Mulder, forms the buffy coat of inflammatory blood.

LIQUOR OF SCARPA, Vitrine auditive.

LIQUOR SEM'INIS. The homogeneous, transparent fluid, in which the spermatozoa and seminal granules are suspended.—Wagner. See Sperm.

LIQUOR SODÆ CHLORIDI, L. sodæ chlorinatæ.

LIQUOR SODÆ CHLORINA'TÆ, L. sodæ chlo'ridi, L. sodæ oxymuriat'icæ, L. chlore'ti natri, L. chlorureti natri, L. chloreti sodæ, L. chlorure'ti sodæ, Natrum chlora'tum liq'uidum, L. natri oxymuriat'ici, Aqua natri oxymuriat'ici, Labarraque's Disinfecting Liquid, Solution of Chlorinated Soda. (Calcis Chlorinat. ℔j; Sodæ Carbonat. ℔ij; Aquæ cong. iss. Dissolve the carbonate of soda in three pints of the water, with the aid of heat. To the remainder of the water add, by small portions at a time, the chlorinated lime, previously well triturated, stirring the mixture after each addition. Set the mixture by for several hours, that the dregs may subside; decant the clear liquid, and mix it with the solution of carbonate of soda. Lastly, decant the clear liquor from the precipitated carbonate of lime, pass it through a linen cloth, and keep it in bottles secluded from the light; Ph. U. S.) Used in the same cases as the chloride of lime. Internally, 10 drops to a fluidrachm, for a dose. Diluted with water, it is an excitant and disinfectant in various morbi externi.

LIQUOR SODÆ EFFERVESCENS, Acidulous water, simple — l. Sodæ Oxymuriaticæ, L. sodæ chlorinatæ—l. Stypticus Ruspini, Styptic, Ruspini's—l. Sulphuricus Alcoolisatus, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici — l. Swietenis, L. hydrargyri oxymuriatis — l. Syphiliticus Turneri, L. hydrargyri oxymuriatis—l. Tartari emetici, Vinum antimonii tartarizati — l. of Van Swieten, L. hydrargyri oxymuriatis.

LIQUOR VOLAT'ILIS CORNU CERVI, L. volat'ilis Cornu Cervi'ni, Vol'atile Liquor of Hartshorn, Spir'itus Lumbrico'rum, Spir'itus Millepeda'rum, Spir'itus Cornu Cervi, Liquor volat'ilis os'sium; Hartshorn, Spirit of Hartshorn, Bone Spirit, (F.) Liqueur volatile de Corne de cerf. This is a solution of subcarbonate of ammonia, impregnated with empyreumatic oil. It possesses the same virtues as the subcarbonate of ammonia. It is in common use to smell at, in faintings, &c.

LIQUOR VOLATILIS OSSIUM, L. volatilis cornu cervi.

LIQUOR ZINCI SULPHA'TIS CUM CAMPH'ORÂ, Aqua Zinci vitriola'ti cum Camphorâ, Aqua vitriol'ica camphora'ta, Aqua ophthal'mica, Common Eye Water. (Zinci sulph. ℥ss, camphor, ʒij, aq. bullient. Oij; dissolve and filter.) Used as a lotion for ulcers; or, diluted with water, as a collyrium.

LIQUORITIA, Glycyrrhiza.

LIRIODEN'DRON, Liriodendron tulipif'era, Tulipif'era Lirioden'dron, Old wife's shirt, Tulip Tree, Poplar Tree, Tulip-bearing Poplar, American Poplar, White Wood, Cypress Tree, (New England,) (F.) Tulipier. The bark — Liriodendron (Ph. U. S.)—especially of the root, of this noble forest tree, which is indigenous in the United States, is a strong aromatic bitter, and has been employed advantageously as a tonic. An active principle was separated from it by Professor J. P. Emmet of the University of Virginia, and has been called Lirioden'drin. It is not used in medicine.

LIS BLANC, Lilium candidum—l. Asphodèle, Asphodelus ramosus.

LISERON, GRAND, Convolvulus sepium — l. des Haies, Convolvulus sepium—l. Mechameck, Convolvulus panduratus.

LISTON'S ISINGLASS PLASTER, see Sparadrapum adhæsivum.

LITE, λιτη. A plaster, formerly made of verdigris, wax, and resin.— Galen.

LITHAGO'GUM, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and αγω, 'I expel.' A remedy which was supposed to possess the power of expelling calculi. Also, a lithotomy forceps.

LITHANTHRAX, Carbo fossilis.

LITHANTHROKOKALI, Anthrakokali.

LITHARGE, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum—l. of Gold, see Plumbi oxydum semivitreum—l. of Silver, see Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

LITHARGYRI ACETUM, Liquor plumbi subacetatis.

LITHARGYRUM, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

LITHARGYRUS, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

LITHAS, Urate.

LITHATE, Urate—l. of Soda, Urate of soda.

LITHEC'TASY, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation;' Cystec'tasy. An operation which consists in extracting stone from the bladder by dilating the neck of the organ, after making an incision in the perineum, and opening the membranous portion of the urethra.

LITH'IA, Lithi'asis, Lithogen'ia, Uri'asis, Urolithi'asis, Cachex'ia calculo'sa, Cal'culi Morbus, Lapilla'tio, Genera'tio cal'culi, from λιθος, 'a stone.' The formation of stone, gravel, or concretions in the human body. Also, an affection in which the eyelids are edged with small, hard, and stone-like concretions.

LITH'IA, CAR'BONATE OF, Lith'iæ Car'bonas, (F.) Carbonate de Lithine. A salt found in certain mineral waters, which have been serviceable in lithuria. Hence, it has been suggested in that morbid condition.

LITHIA RENALIS ARENOSA, Gravel—l. Renalis, Nephrolithiasis — l. Vesicalis, Calculi, vesical.

LITHIÆ CARBONAS, Lithia, carbonate of.

LITHIASIS, Lithia — l. Cystica, Calculi, vesical — l. Nephretica, Gravel, Nephrolithiasis.

LITHI'ASIS PULMO'NUM, Pulmo'nes tartariza'ti. The formation of concretions in the lungs, occasioning at times Phthisis calculo'sa, Phthisie calculeuse, of Bayle.

LITHIASIS RENALIS ARENOSA, Gravel — l. Renalis, Nephrolithiasis — l. Vesicalis, Calculi, vesical.

LITHIC, Lith'icus. Same etymon. Belonging to lithic or uric acid, or to stone: hence Lithic Diath'esis. Also, an antilithic.

LITHIC ACID, Uric acid — l. Acid diathesis, Lithuria — l. Diathesis, Lithuria—l. Sediments, see Lithuria.

LITHINE, CARBONATE DE, Lithia, carbonate of.

LITHIURIA, Lithuria.

LITHOCENOSIS, Lithotrity.

LITHOCYSTOTOMY, Lithotomy.

LITHODIALYSIS, Lithotrity.

LITHODRAS'SIC, Lithodras'icus, (F.) Litho-

drassique, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and δρασσειν, 'to seize hold of.' An epithet given to a form of stone forceps—Pince lithodrassique—used in the operation of lithotrity, by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou.

LITHOGENIA, Lithia.

LITHOID, Litho'des, Lithoï'des; from λιθος, 'stone,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Of the nature of stone, or resembling stone: as LITHOIDES OS, see Temporal bone.

LITHOLABE, (F.) Litholabum. An instrument, employed for laying hold of a stone in the bladder, and keeping it fixed, so that lithotritic instruments can act upon it.

LITHOLABON, Forceps, (Lithotomy.)

LITHOL'ABUM, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and λαμβανω, 'I seize.' An instrument concerned in extracting stone from the bladder. It had various shapes. — Fabricius ab Aquapendente, Hildanus. See Litholabe.

LITHOME'TRA, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and μητρα, 'the uterus.' Osseous, or other concretions of the uterus.

LITHONLYTIC, Lithontriptic.

LITHONTHRYPTIC, Lithontriptic.

LITHONTRIP'TIC, Lithontrip'ticus, Lithonthryp'tic, Lithonlyt'ic, Calculif'ragus, Saxif'ragus, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and θρυπτω, 'I break in pieces.' A remedy believed to be capable of dissolving calculi in the urinary passages. There is not much reliance to be placed upon such remedies. By antilithics, exhibited according to the chemical character of the calculus (see Calculi, urinary,) the disease may be prevented from increasing; but most of the vaunted lithontriptics for dissolving the calculus already formed have been found unworthy of the high encomiums which have accompanied their introduction.

LITHOPÆ'DION, Infans lapide'us, Ostcopæ'dion, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and παις, 'a child.' A fœtus, petrified in the body of the mother.

LITHOPRINIE, Lithotrity.

LITHOPRIONE, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and πριων, 'a saw.' An instrument proposed by M. Leroy for preventing the fragments of a calculus, when subjected to lithotrity, from falling into the bladder. It is a variety of litholabe.

LITHORINEUR, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and ρινειν, 'to file.' An instrument, proposed by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou for filing down calculi in the bladder.

LITHOS, Calculus.

LITHOSPER'MUM OFFICINA'LE, Mil'ium Solis, Ægon'ychon, Gromwell, Bastard Al'kanet, (F.) Grémil officinal, Herbe aux Perles. The seeds of this plant were formerly supposed, from their stony hardness, (λιθος, 'a stone,' and σπερμα, 'seed,') to be efficacious in calculous affections. They have, also, been considered diuretic.

LITHOSPERMUM VILLOSUM, Anchusa tinctoria.

LITHOTERE'THRUM, from λιθος, 'stone,' and τερειν, 'to rub.' A lithotritor.

LITHOTHRYPSIS, Lithotrity.

LITHOTHRYPTORS, see Lithotrity.

LITHOTOME, Litho'tomus, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' This name has been given to a number of instruments of different shapes and sizes, which are used in the operation for the stone, to cut the neck or body of the bladder. They ought, with more propriety, to be called Cystotomes.

The Lithotome Caché of Frère Côme is the most known, and is still occasionally used. It is composed of a handle, and a flattened sheath, slightly curved: in this there is a cutting blade, which can be forced out, by pressing upon a bascule or lever, to any extent that may be wished by the operator.

A Double Lithotome was used by Dupuytren in his bilateral operation. See Lithotomy.

LITHOT'OMIST. Same etymon. Litho'tomus. One who devotes himself entirely to operating for the stone. One who practises lithotomy.

LITHOT'OMY, Lithotom'ia, Cystotom'ia, Urolithotom'ia, Sectio vesica'lis, Lithocystot'omy, same etymon. (F.) Taille. The operation by which a stone is extracted from the bladder. The different methods, according to which this operation may be practised, are reducible to five principal; each of which has experienced numerous modifications.

1. The Method of Celsus, Meth'odus Celsia'na, Cystotom'ia cum appara'tu parvo, Appara'tus Minor, Cutting on the Gripe. This consisted in cutting upon the stone, after having made it project at the perinæum by means of the fingers introduced into the rectum. This method was attended with several inconveniences; such as the difficulty of dividing the parts neatly, injury done to the bladder, as well as the impossibility of drawing down the stone in many persons. It is sometimes, also, called Meth'odus Guytonia'na; from Guy de Chauliac having endeavoured to remove from it the discredit into which it had fallen in his time. It was termed Apparatus Minor, (F.) Le petit appareil, from the small number of instruments required in it.

2. Apparatus Major. This method was invented, in 1520, by John de Romani, a surgeon of Cremona, and communicated by him to Mariano-Santo-di-Barletta, whence it was long called Mariano's Method, Sec'tio Maria'na. It was called, also, Apparatus Major, and Cystotom'ia vel Meth'odus cum appara'tu magno, (F.) Le grand appareil, from the number of instruments required in it. An incision was made on the median line; but the neck of the bladder was not comprehended in it. It was merely dilated. The greater apparatus was liable to many inconveniences, such as ecchymoses; contusion; inflammation of the neck of the bladder; abscesses; urinary fistulæ; incontinence of urine; impotence, &c.

3. The High Operation, Apparatus altus, Cystotom'ia cum apparatu alto, C. Hypogas'trica, Epicystotom'ia, Laparocystotom'ia, Sectio seu Meth'odus Franconia'na, S. Hypogas'trica, S. alta, (F.) Haut appareil, Taille Hypogastrique, Taille sus-pubienne, was first practised by Peter Franco, about the middle of the 16th century. It consisted in pushing the stone above the pubis by the fingers introduced into the rectum. Rousset afterwards proposed to make the bladder rise above the pubis by injecting it. The method had fallen into discredit, when Frère Côme revived it. It is used when the calculus is very large. It was practised by opening first the membranous part of the urethra upon the catheter passed into the canal. Through this incision, the Sonde à dard — a species of catheter, having a spear-pointed stilet — was introduced into the bladder. An incision was then made into the linea alba, above the symphysis pubis, of about four or five fingers' breadth, and the peritoneum detached to avoid wounding it. The stilet was pushed through the bladder, and used as a director for the knife, with which the bladder was divided anteriorly, as far as the neck; and the stone extracted. It was performed in England by Douglass, in 1719, and since by others, with various modifications.

4. The Lateral Operation, Hypocystcotom'ia, Cystotom'ia latera'lis, Cystauchenotom'ia, Cysto-

trachelotom'ia, Urethrocystauchenotom'ia, Urethrocysteotrachelotom'ia, Sec'tio latera'lis, Appara'tus latera'lis, (F.) Appareil lateralisé, so named from the prostate gland and neck of the bladder being cut laterally, was probably invented by Peter Franco. It was introduced into France by Frère Jacques de Beaulieu. He performed it with rude instruments, invented by himself, and improved by the suggestions of some of the Parisian surgeons. In England, it received its earliest and most important improvements from the celebrated Cheselden. It is the method practised at the present day, according to different modes of procedure. In this method, the patient is placed upon a table; his legs and thighs are bent and separated; the hands being tied to the feet. The perinæum is then shaved, and a staff is introduced into the bladder; the handle being turned towards the right groin of the patient. An oblique incision is now made from the raphe to the middle of a line drawn from the anus to the tuberosity of the ischium of the left side; and taking the staff for a guide, the integuments, areolar tissue of the perinæum, membranous portion of the urethra, transversus perinæi muscle, bulbo-cavernosus, some fibres of the levator ani, the prostate and neck of the bladder, are successively divided. For this latter part of the operation, the knife, the beaked bistoury, Bistouri ou Lithotome Caché, cutting gorget, &c., is used, according to the particular preference. The forceps are now introduced into the bladder, and the stone extracted. In the operation, care must be taken not to injure the rectum, or the great arterial vessels, distributed to the perinæum.

A variety of the Lateral Apparatus, called by the French Appareil latéral, consisted in cutting into the bas-fond of the bladder, without touching the neck of that organ: but it was soon abandoned, on account of its inconveniences.

The method of Le Cat and of Pajola—Urethrocysteo-aneurysmatotom'ia—consists in dividing the prostate in part only,—the enlargement of the wound being effected by a peculiar dilator.

The Bilateral Operation is founded on that of Celsus. It consists in making an incision posterior to the bulb of the urethra, and anterior to the anus, involving both sides of the perinæum by crossing the raphe at right angles: an incision is then made through the membranous part of the urethra, and the prostate may be cut bilaterally, either with the double lithotome of Dupuytren, or the prostatic bisector of Dr. Stevens, of New York.

5. Lithotomy by the Rectum, Proctocystotom'ia, Sec'tio recto-vesica'lis, (F.) Taille par la Rectum, Taille postérieure, T. Recto-vésicale. This was proposed by Vegetius in the 16th century; but it was never noticed until M. Sanson, in the year 1817, attracted attention to it; since which time it has been successfully performed in many instances. It consists in penetrating the bladder through the paries corresponding with the rectum, by first cutting the sphincter ani and rectum about the root of the penis, and penetrating the bladder by the neck of that organ, dividing the prostate,—or by its bas-fond.

Lithotomy in women, from the shortness of the urethra, is a comparatively insignificant operation.

LITHOTOMY BY THE RECTUM, see Lithotomy—1. by the Vagina, see Lithotomy.

LITHOTRITOR, see Lithotrity.

LITHOT'RITY, Lithotri'tia, Lithotrypsy, Lithotripsy, Lithothrip'sy, Lithothrypsis, Lithotre'sis, Lithotripsis, Lithoceno'sis, Lithodial'ysis, Lithoprinie, from λιθος, 'a stone.' and τριβω, 'I break.' The operation of breaking or bruising the stone in the bladder. It has been performed, of late years, with success, by French, and, after them, by English and American surgeons. The instruments employed for this purpose are called, in the abstract, Lithotrites, Lithotriteurs, Lithot'ritors, Lithotriptors, and Lithothryptors. The most celebrated are those of Civiale, Jacobson, Heurteloup and Weiss. See Brise-Pierre articulé, and Percuteur à Marteau.

LITHOXIDU'RIA, from λιθος, 'a stone,' oxide, and ουρον, 'urine.' The discharge of urine containing lithic or xanthic oxide.

LITHU'RIA, Lithiu'ria, Lithourorrhée (Piorry;) from λιθος, 'a stone,' and ουρον, 'urine.' Lithic Diath'esis, Lithic Acid Diathesis. The condition of the system and of the urine in which deposits of lithic acid and the lithates—Lithic sediments—take place from the urine. See Urine.

LITHUS, Calculus.

LITMUS, Lichen roccella.

LITRA, Pound.

LITRE, Litra. A measure containing a cubed decimètre, which is equal nearly to 2.1135 pints. The ancients gave the name litra, λιτρα, to a measure capable of containing 16 ounces of liquid.

LITSÆA CUBEBA, Piper cubeba—1. Piperita, Piper cubeba.

LITUS, Liniment.

LIVÈCHE, Ligusticum levisticum.

LIVER, Sax. lifer, Hepar, Jecur, Jec'inus, (F.) Foie. The liver is the largest gland in the body. It is an azygous organ; unsymmetrical; very heavy; and of a brownish-red colour; occupying the whole of the right hypochondrium, and a part of the epigastrium. Above, it corresponds to the diaphragm; below, to the stomach, transverse colon, and right kidney; behind, to the vertebral column, aorta, and vena cava; and before, to the base of the chest. Its upper surface is convex; the lower, irregularly convex and concave, so that anatomists have divided the organ into three lobes,—a large or right or colic lobe;—a lesser lobe, lobule, or inferior lobe, the Lobulus Spigelii,—and a middle or left lobe. At its inferior surface, are observed:—1. A Sulcus or Furrow or Fissure, called horizontal or longitudinal, Great fissure, Fossa Umbilica'lis, (F.) Sillon horizontal, longitudinal, S. de la veine ombilicale, Sulcus antero-posterior Jec'oris, S. horizonta'lis Jec'oris, S. longitudina'lis Jecoris, S. sinis'ter Jecoris, S. Umbilica'lis, which lodges, in the fœtus, the umbilical vein and ductus venosus. 2. The Principal Fissure, termed Sulcus Transversus vel Sinus Porta'rum, Fissure of the Vena porta, Portal Fissure, (F.) Sillon transversal ou de la veine porte, which receives the sinus of the vena porta. 3. The Fissure of the Vena Cava infe'rior, Sillon de la veine cave inférieure, situate at the posterior margin of the organ, and lodging the vena cava inferior. 4. The Lobulus Spige'lii, or posterior portal eminence, Auri'ga vel Lobulus anon'ymus. 6. Depressions corresponding to the upper surface of the stomach, gall-bladder, arch of the colon, right kidney, &c. Continued from the fossa umbilicalis is a small fossa, called Fossa Ductûs Veno'si, between the left lobe and Lobulus Spigelii. The posterior margin of the liver is very thick; much more so than the anterior. The liver is surrounded by a serous or peritoneal covering, which forms for it a suspensory or broad ligament and two lateral and triangular ligaments. See Falx. The blood-vessels of the liver are very numerous. The hepatic artery and vena porta furnish it with the blood necessary for its nutrition and the secretion of bile. The hepatic veins convey away the blood, which has served those purposes. The lymphatic vessels are very numerous; some being superficial; others deep-seated. The nerves are, also, numerous, and proceed from the pneumogastric, diaphragmatic, and from the hepatic plexuses.

The intimate structure of the parenchyma of the liver has been well studied. When cut, it presents a porous appearance, owing to the division of a multitude of small vessels. When torn, it seems formed of granulations; — the intimate structure of which has given rise to many hypotheses. In these granulations are contained the radicles of the excretory ducts of the bile; the union of which constitutes the hepatic duct. According to M. Kiernan, the intimate structure consists of a number of lobules composed of intralobular or hepatic veins, which convey the blood back that has been inservient to the secretion of bile. The interlobular plexus of veins is formed by branches of the vena porta, which contain both the blood of the vena porta and of the hepatic artery; both of which, according to Mr. Kiernan, furnish the pabulum of the biliary secretion. The biliary ducts form likewise an interlobular plexus, having an arrangement similar to that of the interlobular veins. Mr. Kiernan's views are embraced by many anatomists; but are denied by some.

The liver is the only orgán, which, independently of the red blood carried to it by the hepatic artery, receives black blood by the vena porta. The general opinion is, that the vena porta is the fluid which furnishes bile, whilst that of the artery affords blood for the nutrition of the liver. It is probable, however, that bile is secreted by the latter vessel.

The liver is liable to a number of diseases. The principal are — Hepati'tis or inflammation, cancer, biliary calculi, encysted and other tumours or tubercles, hydatids, &c.; and it has, at times, been the fashion to refer to it as the cause of symptoms with which it is in no wise connected.

Liver, Hepar. Under this name the ancients designated several substances, having a brownish colour, analogous to that of the liver; and composed of sulphur and some other body. See Potassæ Sulphuretum, Liver of Sulphur.

Liver of Antimony is the semi-vitreous sulphuret, &c.

Liver Disease, Hepatopathia — l. Fatty, Adiposis hepatica — l. Gin, L. nutmeg — l. Gin-drinkers', L. nutmeg — l. Granulated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

Liver-Grown, Tu'mido jec'orē præ'ditus. Having a large liver.

Liver, Hobnail, Cirrhosis of the liver — l. Mammillated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

Liver, Nutmeg, Tu'beriform liver. An appearance of the liver when cut across, resembling that of the section of a nutmeg; supposed by some to be the result of intemperance in the use of alcoholic drinks; but occurring under other causes. The terms whisky liver, gin-drinkers' liver, and gin liver, occasionally applied to it, are, consequently, not distinctive.

LIZARD, Lacer'ta, Lacer'tus, said to be so called in consequence of its limbs resembling the arms (lacerti) of man (?). Saura, Sauros, (F.) Lézard. Lizards were formerly employed in medicine as sudorifics; and were, at one time, extolled in syphilis, cutaneous affections, and in cancer.

LIZARD'S TAIL, Saururus cernuus.

LOADSTONE, Magnet.

LOATHING, Disgust.

LOBARIA ISLANDICA, Lichen Islandicus — l. Pulmonaria, Lichen pulmonarius — l. Saxatilis, Lichen saxatilis.

LOBE, Lobus. A round, projecting part of an organ. The liver, lungs, and brain, for example, have lobes.

Lobe of the Ear, Lob'ule of the Ear, is a soft, rounded prominence, which terminates the circumference of the pavilion inferiorly, and which is pierced in those who wear rings.

The under surface of the brain is divided into two anterior, two lateral, two posterior, and two intermediate lobes or processes. These Chaussier calls lobules of the brain: the cerebral hemispheres he terms lobes.

Lobe, Biven'tral. A wedge-shaped lobe of the cerebellum, situate behind the amygdala.

LOBELIA, BLUE, L. syphilitica.

Lobe'lia Cardina'lis, Lobelia coccin'ea, Trache'lium Ameri'canum, Car'dinal Plant, Car'dinal Flower, Scarlet Lobelia. This species is also indigenous in the United States. It blooms in autumn, having beautiful carmine flowers. The root is a reputed anthelmintic with the Indians.

Lobelia Coccinea, L. Cardinalis.

Lobe'lia Infla'ta, Indian Tobac'co, Wild Tobac'co, Puke Weed, Asthma Weed, Eyebright, Emet'ic Weed, Lobe'lia (Ph. U. S.) The prominent virtues of this American plant are those of an emetic. In smaller doses it is sedative, and has been given as a pectoral in croup, asthma, &c. It is, also, sudorific and cathartic, and is an acronarcotic poison. Twenty grains act as an emetic.

Lobelia Pinifo'lia. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Campanulaceæ, the root of which is excitant and diaphorctic. A decoction of it is sometimes used in the Cape Colony as a domestic remedy in cutaneous affections, chronic rheumatism, and gout.

Lobelia, Scarlet, L. Cardinalis.

Lobelia Syphilit'ica, Lobelia reflex'a, Ranun'culus Virginia'nus, Rapun'tium Syphilit'icum, Blue Lobelia, Blue Car'dinal Flower. The root of this plant, which is indigenous in the United States, is an emetic and drastic cathartic. It has been used in syphilis; hence its name. The mode of preparing it is to boil ℥ss of the dried root in Oxij of water, until the fluid is reduced to Oviij. Dose, Oss.

LOBES, CEREBRAL, see Lobe.

Lobes of the Liver, Pinnæ seu Lobi seu Pin'nulæ He'patis. See Lobule.

Lobes, Optic, Quadrigemina tubercula.

LOBI HEPATIS, Lobes of the liver — l. Pulmonum, see Pulmo.

LOB'ULAR, Lobula'ris. Same etymon as Lobule. Relating to or belonging to a lobule: — as lobular pneumonia, (F.) Pneumonie lobulaire, P. mamelonnée, P. disséminée. Pneumonia anatomically characterized by nuclei of red or gray hepatization disseminated in variable numbers in one or both lungs.

Lobular Biliary Plexus. The plexus formed of lobular hepatic ducts, which are derived chiefly from the interlobular. This plexus forms the principal part of the substance of the lobule.

Lobular Venous Plexus. The plexus interposed between the interlobular portal veins, and the intralobular hepatic vein.

LOB'ULE, Lob'ulus, diminutive of Lobus. A little lobe. Mr. Kiernan uses the term lobule for an acinus of the liver of many anatomists.

Lobule of the Corpus Striatum, Insula cerebri — l. of the Ear, Lobe of the Ear — l. of the Fissure of Sylvius, Insula cerebri — l. Pneumogastric, Flocculus.

LOBULE DU FOIE, Lobulus Spigelii.

LOBULUS ACCESSORIUS ANTERIOR QUADRATUS, L. anonymus.

Lob'ulus seu Lobus Anon'ymus, L. accesso'rius ante'rior quadra'tus, L. quadra'tus, (F.) Éminence porte antérieure. This is situate in the liver between the passage for the round ligament and the gall-bladder, and is less prominent, but broader, than the Lobulus caudatus. From the lobulus anonymus a bridge runs across the passage for the round ligament. It is called Pons vel Isthmus he'patis.

Lobulus seu Lobus Cauda'tus, Proces'sus caudatus. This is merely the root or one of the angles of the lobulus Spigelii, advancing towards the middle of the lower side of the great lobe, and representing a kind of tail. Also, the termination of the helix and anthelix of the ear, which is separated from the concha by an extensive fissure.

Lob'ulus Centra'lis. A small lobule or prominence of the superior vermiform process of the cerebellum, situate in the incisura anterior.

Lobulus seu Lobus Spige'lii, L. poste'rior, L. p sti'cus papilla'tus, (F.) Éminence porte postérieure, Lobule ou Petit lobe du foie, Lobe de Spigel, Lobe duodénal, L. pancréatique, is situate near the spine, upon the left side of the great lobe of the liver, and is of a pyramidal shape, projecting, like a nipple, between the cardia and vena cava, at the small curvature of the stomach.

LOBUS, Lobe, see Lobulus.

LOCAL, Loca'lis, Top'icus, Mer'icus, Partia'lis, Top'ical. (F.) Locale, Topique. An affection is called local — Morbus Loca'lis, — when confined to a part, without implicating the general system; or, at all events, only secondarily. Local is thus opposed to general. A local or topical application is one used externally. See Topical.

LOCH, Looch.

LOCHADES, see Sclerotic.

LOCHI'A or LO'CHIA, Purgamen'ta Puerpe'rii seu U'teri, Purga'tio puerpe'rii, Lyma, from λοχος, 'a woman in childbed;' (F.) Suites de couches, Vidanges. The cleansings. A serous and sanguineous discharge following delivery. During the first two or three days, it is bloody; but afterwards becomes green-coloured, and exhales a disagreeable and peculiar odour. The duration, quantity, and character of the discharge vary according to numerous circumstances. It flows from the part of the uterus which formed a medium of communication between the mother and fœtus, and continues, usually, from 14 to 21 days. See Parturition.

LOCHIOCŒLIITIS, Puerperal fever.

LOCHIODOCHIUM, Lochodochium.

LOCHIOPYRA, Puerperal fever.

LOCHIORRHAG''IA, from λοχεια, and ρηγνυμι, 'I make an irruption.' An immoderate flow of the lochia. Hemorrhage from the uterus in the child-bed state.

LOCHIORRHŒ'A, from λοχεια, 'the lochia,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Discharge of the lochia.

LOCHIORUM RETENTIO, Ischolochia.

LOCHIOSCHESIS, Ischolochia.

LOCHOCH, Looch,

LOCHODOCHI'UM, Lochiodochium, from λοχος, 'a female in childbed,' and δεχομαι, 'I receive.' An institution for the reception of pregnant and childbed females. A Lying-in-hospital.

LOCHOS, Puerpera.

LOCI, Uterus — l. Muliebres, Uterus, Vulva.

LOCKED JAW, Trismus.

LOCOMOTILITY, see Locomotion.

LOCOMO'TION, Locomo'tio, from locus, 'a place, and movere, 'to move.' An action peculiar to animal bodies, by which they transport themselves from place to place. It, as well as muscula'tion, has also been used for the function of animal movements. The faculty is sometimes called Locomotiv'ity and Locomotil'ity.

Locomotion of an Artery, is the movement produced in a vessel with a curvature, by the impulse of the blood sent from the heart, which tends to straighten the artery, and causes the movement in question.

LOCOMOTIVITY, see Locomotion.

LOCUS NIGER, see Peduncles of the Brain.

Locus Perfora'tus Anti'cus. A triangular flat surface of the brain, which corresponds to the posterior extremity of each olfactory process.

LOLIUM ANNUUM, L. temulentum.

LO'LIUM TEMULENT'UM, L. an'nuum, Crepa'lia temulen'ta, Bromus temulen'tus, Darnel (F.) Herbe d'Ivrogne. A species of the genus Lolium, (F.) Ivraie; Fam. Graminеæ; Sex. Syst. Triandria digynia, which has decidedly poisonous properties; occasioning, when mixed in bread or beer, intoxication, vertigo, nausea, and vomiting.

LOMBAIRE, Lumbar.

LOMBRIC, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LOMBRICOÏDE, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LONCHADES, see Sclerotic.

LONCHADITIS, Sclerotitis.

LONCHITIS, Polypodium filix mas.

LONG, Longus, Macros. That which is much greater in length than in breadth; as the long bones. The epithet is, also, applied to several muscles, to distinguish them from others of similar function, when the latter are shorter. We say, for instance, long flexors, and long extensors, in opposition to short flexors, and short extensors.

LONG DU COU, Longus colli — l. du Dos, Longissimus dorsi.

LONGÆVUS, Macrobiotic.

LONGANON, Rectum.

LONGAON, Rectum.

LONGAS, Rectum.

LONGEV'ITY, Longæ'vitas, Macrobio'sis, Macrobi'otes. The prolongation of existence to an advanced age. Haller collected examples of more than one thousand centenarians. He had knowledge of sixty-two persons aged from 110 to 120 years; of twenty-nine, from 120 to 130 years; and of fifteen, who had attained from 130 to 140 years. Beyond this advanced age, examples of longevity are much more rare and less sufficiently attested.

The following list of instances of very advanced ages has been given:

| | Lived. Age. |
|---|---|
| Apollonius of Tyana, A. D... | 99..130 |
| St. Patrick ..... | 491..122 |
| Attila..... | 500..124 |
| Llywarch Hên ..... | 500..150 |
| St. Coemgene ..... | 618..120 |
| Piastus, King of Poland..... | 861..120 |
| Thomas Parr ..... | 1635..152 |
| Henry Jenkins..... | 1670..169 |
| Countess of Desmond..... | 1612..145 |
| Thomas Damme..... | 1648..154 |
| Peter Torten..... | 1724..185 |
| Margaret Patten..... | 1739..137 |
| John Rovin and wife..... | 1741..172 and 164 |
| St. Monagh or Kentigen..... | 1781..185 |

Longevity also means length or duration of life (F.) Durée de la vie. The mean age at death (F.) Vie moyenne, of different classes and professions enables an estimate to be formed of the expectation or value of life in each.

LONGIS'SIMUS DORSI, Semi-spina'tus, (F.) Lombo-dorso-trachélien, Portion costo-trachélienne du sacro-spinal, (Ch.,) Long dorsal, Long du dos, is situate vertically at the posterior part of the trunk, and fills, in a great measure, the vertebral furrows. It is thick and almost square below; thin and pointed above. It is attached to the posterior surface of the sacrum, to the transverse processes of all the lumbar and dorsal vertebræ, and to the inferior margin of the last 7 or 8 ribs. It maintains the vertebral column in a straight position; straightens it when bent forwards, and can even carry it back. It also assists in the rotatory motion of the trunk.

LONGISSIMUS FEMORIS, Sartorius — 1. Oculi, Obliquus superior oculi.

LONG-SIGHTEDNESS, Presbytia.

LONGUS COLLI, (F.) Pré-dorso-cervical, Prédorso-atloïdien, (Ch.,) Long du cou. This muscle is situate at the anterior and superior part of the vertebral column. It is long, flat, and broader at its middle than at its extremities, which are pointed. It is attached to the anterior surface of the bodies of the first three dorsal and last six cervical vertebræ; to the intervertebral ligaments; to the anterior edge of the transverse processes of the last five cervical vertebræ; and to the tubercle on the anterior arch of the first. This muscle bends the cervical vertebræ upon each other and upon the dorsal vertebræ. If the upper portion acts on one side only, it occasions the rotation of the atlas on the vertebra dentata; and, consequently, of the head on the neck.

LONICERA GERMANICA, L. Periclymenum — l. Marilandica, Spigelia Marilandica.

LONICE'RA PERICLYM'ENUM, L. German'ica, Periclym'enum, P. vulga'rē, Caprifo'lium, C. Periclym'enum seu sylvat'icum seu distinct'um, Common Woodbine, (F.) Chèvre-feuille. This common plant is slightly astringent and tonic, and was formerly much used in gargles.

LOOCH, Lohoch, Loch, Lochoch, Look. A linctus. See Eclegma and Eclectos.

LOOCH ABSQUE EMULSIO'NE PARA'TUM, Look préparé sans émulsion; Looch prepared without emulsion. (Pulv. g. trag. gr. xvj — gr. xxx, ol. amygd. dulc. ℥ss., sacchar. ℥j, aquæ ℥iij, aquæ flor. aurant. ℥ij. Mix by rubbing in a marble mortar.) Demulcent.

LOOCH ALBUM, Looch amygdali'num, Linctus albus, L. amygdalinus, L. commu'nis, Eleg'ma album, Eclegma gummo'so-olco'sum, (F.) Looch blanc, L. b. amygdalin, L. b. pectoral. (Amygd. dulc. ℥ss, amygd. amar. No. ij, sacchar. alb. ℥iv. Make an emulsion by gradually adding ℥iv of water. Then take pulv. tragacanth. gr. xvj, ol. amygd. dulc. recent. ℥ss, sacch. ℥ij. Add the almond milk gradually to this, and afterwards ag. flor. aurant. ℥ij, Ph. P.) It is demulcent and pectoral.

album — l. cum Croco et pistaciis, L. viride — l. of Egg, L. ex Ovo.

Looch ex Ovo, Potio seu emul'sio seu mistu'ra len'iens seu oleo'sa, Looch pectora'lē len'iens, Looch of Egg, (F.) Look d'œuf, Looch rouge, Emulsion huileuse, Mixture calmante, Potion pectorale, Lait adoucissant. (Vitell. ovi. recent. ℥ss, ol. amygd. dulc. ℥iss, syrup. althææ, ℥j. Rub in a mortar, and add by degrees, aq. flor. aurant. ℥j, aq. papav. rhœad. ℥ij. Ph. P.) Virtues the same as the preceding.

Looch Vir'idē, Look cum crocē et pista'ciis, (F.) Looch vert. (Syrup. Violar. ℥j, tinct. croci gtt. xx. aquæ ℥iv. Mix, and add pistaciæ semin. sicc. ℥vj. Ph. P.) Virtues like the last.

LOOK, Looch — l. d'Œuf, Looch ex ovo — l. Préparé sans émulsion, Looch absque emulsione paratum.

LOOSE STRIFE, CREEPING, Lysimachia nummularia—l. s. Four-leaved, Lysimachia quadrifolia.

LOOSENESS, Diarrhœa — l. of the Teeth, Odontoscisis.

LOPEZ RADIX, Radix lopezia'na, Radix In'dica lopezia'na. The root of an unknown Indian tree, not possessed of any remarkable smell or taste, or of any appearance of resinous matter. It has been extolled, notwithstanding, in cases of colliquative diarrhœa. Gaubius compares its action to that of simarouba, but thinks it more efficacious.

LOPHADIA, Lophia.

LOPHIA, Lopha'dia. The first vertebra of the back — Ver'tebra dorsi prima. — Gorræus.

LOPIMA, Fagus castanea.

LOQUAC''ITY, Garru'litas; from loquor, 'I speak.' (F.) Babillement. The act of speaking with volubility. It is sometimes a symptom of disease, and is observable in hysteria, &c.

LORDO'SIS, Lordo'ma, from λορδος, 'curved,' 'bent;' Repanda'tio, Repan'ditas. A name given to curvatures of the bones in general; and particularly to that of the vertebral column forwards; Spina dorsi intror'sum flexa, Emprosthocyrto'ma. This gives rise to the projection of the sternum called chicken-breasted or pigeon-breasted.

LORIND MATRI'CIS, Epilep'sia uteri'na, Convulsi'vus u'teri morbus. A barbarous name given to a pretended epilepsy of the womb.

LORIPES, see Kyllosis.

LOT, Urine.

LOTIO, Enema, Lotion — l. Saponacea, see Sapo.

LO'TION, Lo'tio, Lotu'ra, from lavare, lotum, 'to wash.' (F.) Hydrolotif. A fluid external application. Lotions are ordinarily applied by wetting linen in them and keeping it on the part affected.

Lotion, Barlow's, Lotion of Sulph'uret of potassium. (℞. Potassii sulphur. ℥iij, Sapon. ℥iss, Aq. Calcis, f℥viiss, alcohol. dilut. f℥ij. M.) Used in various chronic cutaneous diseases.

Lotion, Gowland's. An empirical preparation. (Bitter almonds, ℥j, sugar, ℥ij, distilled water, ℔ij. Grind together, strain, and add corrosive sublimate, ℈ij, previously ground with sp. vini rect. ℥ij.) Used in obstinate eruptions.

Lotion, Granville's Counter-Irritant, Granville's Lotion, Granville's antid'ynous lotion. Of this lotion, Dr. Granville gives two forms — a milder, and a stronger. The milder is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. f℥j, Sp. Rosmarin. f℥vj, Tinct. camphor, f℥ij, M.

The stronger is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. f℥x, Spir. Rosmar. f℥ss, Tinct. camphor, f℥ij, M.

The stronger lotion vesicates rapidly. A piece of cotton or linen folded six or seven times, or a piece of thick flannel may be imbued with them, and laid for a few minutes on the part to be irritated.

Lotion, Hannay's, Preven'tive wash. This famous nostrum, for the prevention of venereal infection, was nothing more than a solution of caustic potass.

Lotion, Hydrocyan'ic, Lotio Ac''idi Hydrocyan'ici. (Hydrocyanic acid, f℥iv, rectified spirit of wine, f℥j, distilled water, f℥xss.) Used with much success in impetigo, &c.

Lotion, Struve's, for Hooping-Cough. (Antim. et Potass. tart. ℥j, Aquæ, ℥ij. Add tinct. cantharid, ℥j.)

LOTIUM, Urine.

LOTURA, Lotion.

LOTUS SYLVESTRIS, Trifolium melilotus—l. Virginiana, Diospyros Virginiana.

LOUCHEMENT, Strabismus.

LOUCHES, see Strabismus.

LOUPE, Wen.

LOUSE, Pediculus.

LOUSINESS, Phtheiriasis.

LOUSY DISEASE, Phtheiriasis.

LOUTRON, Bath.

LOVAGE, Ligusticum levisticum.

LOVE, Eros, Amor, from Sax. lufian, (G.) lieben, 'to love.' (F.) Amour. A tender and elevated feeling, which attracts one sex to the other. Love is occasionally a cause of disease, especially of insanity.

Love Apple Plant, Solanum lycopersicum—l. Pea, Abrus precatorius.

LOW SPIRITS, Hypochondriasis.

LOWER, TUBERCLE OF, Tuber'culum Loweri. Anatomists have given this name to a small projection, the existence of which is by no means constant, and which is found in the sinus venosus, between the superior and inferior cava.

LOXAR'THRUS, Loxar'thrum, from λοξος, 'oblique,' and αρθρον, 'articulation.' (F.) Perversion de la tête des os et des muscles. A vicious deviation or direction of the joints, without spasm or luxation, — as in clubfoot.

LOXIAS, Torticollis.

LOXOPHTHALMUS, Strabismus.

LOZANGIA, Lozenge.

LUBIDO, Libido — l. Intestini, Voluntas descendi.

LUBRICANTIA, Demulcents, Emollients.

LUBRICUM CAPUT, Penis.

LUCCA, MINERAL WATERS AND CLIMATE OF. The baths and waters, near this ancient Italian city, have been long celebrated.

They are thermal, and resemble, in properties, those of Plombières in France, and of Bath in England. They contain carbonic acid, sulphates of alumina, soda, magnesia, and iron. There are ten different sources, the temperature of which varies from 94° to 130° Fahr.

Lucca is much frequented in summer; partly on account of its mineral waters, but more on account of the coolness of the situation.

LUCID, Lu'cidus. In medicine, the word lucid is particularly applied to the intervals, Interval'la lu'cida, of apparent reason, which occur in mental alienation.

LUCIF'UGUS, from lux, lucis, 'light' and fugere, 'to shun.' Photoph'obus, Photophob'icus. Dreading or avoiding the light.

LUCINA, Ilithyia.

LUCOMANIA, Lycanthropia.

LUCUMA, (S.) A fruit which grows in the southern provinces of the coast of Peru, and the north of Chili. It is round; and the gray-brown husk encloses a fibrous, dry, yellow-coloured fruit with its kernel. — Tschudi.

LUCUMORIA'NUS, probably from lux, 'light,' and morari, 'to tarry.' Continuing for several days: hence, Dormit''io lucumoria'na. A morbid sleep persisting for several days.

LUDUS HELMON'TII, L. Paracel'si, Fel terræ. A calcareous stone, the precise nature not known, which was used by the ancients in calculous affections. The term was also applied to every species of calculous concretion occurring in the animal body.

LUETTE, Uvula — l. Vésicale, see Urinary bladder.

LUGDUS, Erysipelas.

LUJULA, Oxalis acetosella.

LULLABY SPEECH, Lallation.

LUMBA'GO, from lumbi, 'the loins.' Arthro'sia lumbo'rum, Lumbago rheumat'ica. Nephral'gia rheumat'ica, Rachirrheu'ma, Rachiorrheu'ma, Rheumatis'mus dorsa'lis, Osphyrrheu'ma. Rheumatism affecting the lumbar region.

Lumba'go psoad'ica, L. apostemato'sa, L. ab arthroc'acē. Pain in the loins from abscess. See Psoitis.

Lumbago a Nisu, see Effort.

LUMBAR, Lumba'ris vel Lumba'lis, (F.) Lombaire. Belonging or having reference to the loins.

Lumbar Abscess, Psoas abscess, Aposte'ma psoat'icum, Absces'sus lumbo'rum, Morbus psoad'icus. This abscess is so called from the matter being found on the side of the psoas muscle, or betwixt that and the iliacus internus. Between these muscles is a quantity of loose, areolar substance; and, when an abscess takes place there, it can find no outlet except by a distant course. Generally, it descends along the psoas muscle, forming a swelling immediately beneath Poupart's ligament; at times, however, it extends down the thigh under the fascia. Severe hectic follows the bursting of the abscess, and often death. Its causes are, — scrofula, injury to the loins, &c.

When, from the pain of the back continuing for some time, with other symptoms, the disease is suspected, caustics, or the moxa, applied opposite the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebræ, may be recommended; and, when the abscess is ready for opening, it may be emptied by repeated discharges of the matter, through a small opening, made with a lancet, or small, lancet-pointed trocar. The medical treatment consists in supporting the system, under the great restorative efforts required of it.

Lumbar Arteries are four or five in number on each side. They arise from the sides of the abdominal aorta, and pass behind the muscles situate in front of the lumbar portion of the spine, to gain the broad muscles of the abdomen. They give off, 1. Spinal branches. 2. Anterior, posterior, and external muscular branches.

Lumbar Nerves are five in number, and issue from the vertebral column by the spinal foramina of the loins. The first lumbar nerve gives off three branches:—the external or ilio-scrotal; the middle or inguino-cutaneous, and the internal or infra-pubian. Along with the three pairs below it, it forms the lumbar plexus.

Lumbar Plexus, Portion lombaire du plexus crural (Ch.), Plexus Lombo-abdominal. This plexus is formed by the union of the Rami communican'tes of the anterior branches of the first four lumbar nerves. It is situate behind the psoas muscle, and before the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebræ. It furnishes, besides the branches which proceed from the first pair, several filaments, that are distributed to the psoas muscle, to the iliacus, the integuments, and glands of the groin; and three great branches—the crural, obdurator, and lumbo-sacral.

Lumbar Region, Lumbi.

Lumbar Veins have an arrangement analogous to that of the arteries of the same name. They communicate with the vertebral sinuses, azygous veins, &c., and pass into the vena cava inferior.

LUMBARIS EXTERNUS, Quadratus lumborum — l. Internus, Psoas magnus.

LUMBI, The loins, the Lumbar region, Re'gio lumba'lis, Lap'ara, Psoæ, Osphys, Reins. The posterior regions of the abdomen, comprised between the base of the chest and the pelvis. The parts which enter into the formation of the lumbar region are, — the skin; a considerable quantity of areolar texture; broad and strong aponeuroses;—the Latissimus Dorsi, Obliquus externus, and Obliquus internus abdominis, Transversalis abdominis, Quadratus lumborum, and the mass common to the Sacro-lumbalis, Longissimus dorsi, and Multifidus spinæ. These muscles surround the lumbar region of the vertebral column. The vessels, nerves, &c., of the loins, are called lumbar.

LUMBO-SACRAL. Belonging to the lumbar and sacral regions. (F.) Lombo-sacré. Bichat calls thus a very large nerve, given off from the anterior branch of the fifth lumbar pair, which descends into the pelvis before the sacrum to join the sciatic plexus.

LUMBRICA'LIS, Vermicula'ris. Resembling a lumbricus, or 'earthworm.' A name given to small muscles, met with in the palm of the hand and sole of the foot.

Lumbricales Manûs, Fidicina'les, Flexor primi interno'dii digito'rum manûs vel perfora'tus lumbrica'lis, (F.) Annuli-tendino-phalangiens, Palmi-phalangiens. Four small, fleshy, thin, round, long, fusiform fasciculi, situate in the palm of the hand, and distinguished into first, second, third, and fourth, counting from without to within. They arise from the tendons of the flexor communis digitorum, and are inserted at the outer and posterior side of the superior extremity of the first phalanges of the last four fingers. These muscles bend the fingers on the metacarpus, and fix the tendons of the flexor digitorum communis.

Lumbricales Pedis, (F.) Planti-tendino-phalangiens, Planti-sous-phalangiens, (Ch.) They are analogous to those of the hand in form, number, and arrangement. They increase the flexion of the toes, and draw them inwards.

LUMBRICUS, Ascaris lumbricoides — l. Latus, Bothriocephalus latus, Tænia solium — l. Teres hominis, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LUMBUS VENERIS, Achillea millefolium.

LUMEN, Light, Pupil — l. Constans, Phosphorus.

LUMIÈRE, Light.

LUNA, Argentum, Moon — l. Albini, Sciatic notch, lesser — l. Imperfecta, Bismuth — l. Potabilis. Argenti nitras.

LUNAR, Lunatic.

LUNA'RE OS, Os semiluna'rē. The second bone in the upper row of the carpus.

LUNARIA, Menses.

Luna'ria Redivi'va, Leucoïum, Bulbonach, Satin, Honesty. Said, by Ray, to be a warm diuretic.

LUNARIS, Lunatic.

LU'NATIC, Lunat'icus, Luna'ris, Luna'rius, Lunar, from luna, 'the moon.' Relating to the moon. An epithet given to diseases which are supposed to appear at certain phases of the moon, or to those who are affected by them. The term lunatic is restricted to one labouring under lunacy, or mental alienation; — Moonstruck, Selenoble'tus. In law, a lunatic is one who has had an understanding, but by disease, grief, or other accident, has lost the use of his reason.

LUNATICUS, Epileptic, Lunatic, Somnambulist.

LUNATISMUS, Somnambulism.

LUNE, Moon.

LUNELLA, Hypopyon.

LUNES, Menses.

LUNETTES ORDINAIRES, Spectacles.

LUNG, Pulmo — l. Black, of coal miners, Anthracosis — l. Cancer of the, Phthisis, cancerous — l. Fever, Catarrh, Pneumonia.

Lung, Perforating Abscess of the. A purulent collection, which forms exterior to the lung, and afterwards perforates its tissue, so that it is evacuated through the bronchial tubes.

Lung Proof, Docimasia pulmonum — l. Wort, Pulmonaria — l. Wort, cow's, Verbascum nigrum — l. Wort, tree, Lichen pulmonarius.

LUNULA UNGUIUM, see Nail — l. Scapulæ, Notch, scapular.

LUPIA, Encystis, Wen — l. Junctura, Spina ventosa.

LUPI'NUS. Under this term the white lupin, Lupi'nus al'bus seu sati'vus, is meant, in some pharmacopœias. The seeds, which were much eaten in the days of Pliny and of Galen, are now neglected. The meal is, however, occasionally used as an anthelmintic, and as a cataplasm.

LUPULI'NA, Lu'pulin, Lupulin'ic glands. A substance which exists in the humulus lupulus or hop. It is in the form of small, shining, yellowish grains, which cover the base of the scales of the hop; is pulverulent, and of an aromatic odour. When analyzed, it is found to contain resin, volatile oil in small quantity, and a bitter principle. It is aromatic and tonic, and — according to some — narcotic.

LUPULINIC GLANDS, Lupulina.

LUPUS, 'the wolf.' So named from its rapacity. Ulcus Tubercule'sum, Cancer lupus, Noli me tangere, Phymato'sis lupus. Tubercular excrescences, with ragged, spreading ulcerations, chiefly about the alæ nasi, where they destroy the skin, &c., for some depth. Sometimes they appear in the cheek, circularly, or in the shape of a sort of ringworm, destroying the substance, and leaving a deep and deformed cicatrix. The knife or caustic should be used to separate the sound from the morbid parts. Asenic has been given internally with advantage. See, also, Herpes exedens, and Lycoides.

Lupus Cancrosus, Cancer — l. Varicosus, Nævi — l. Vorax, Herpes exedens.

LURCO, Glutton.

LURID, Lu'ridus. Pale, yellow, sallow; — applied to the complexion.

LUROR, Paleness.

LUSCIOSITAS, Luscitas, Myopia.

LUSCIOSUS, Borgne, Myops.

LUS'CITAS, Luscios'itas, Luscit''ies. Strabismus. The term has also been given to all those cases of obliquity in which the eye is fixed in an unnatural position.—Beer.

LUSCITIES, Luscitas.

LUSTRAMENTUM, Cathartic.

LUSCUS, Borgne.

LUT, Lute.

LUTE, Lutum, ('mud,') Cæmen'tum. (F.) Lut. A composition employed either for closing apertures in a pharmaceutical instrument, or for covering the surface of retorts, tubes, &c., which have to support a great degree of heat. Lutes are composed differently, according to the object to be accomplished. Commonly they are made of linseed meal and starch. The fat lute is formed of clay and drying oil. Sometimes, the white of egg and lime are used; and that which is employed for covering vessels, intended to be strongly heated, is made of clay, sifted sand, and water.

LUTEOLA, Reseda luteola.

LUTEUS, Yellow.

LUTRON, λουτρον. A bath. Also, an ophthalmic medicine.—Galen.

LUX, Light.

LUXATIO, Luxation — l. Imperfecta, Sprain.

LUXA'TION, Eluxa'tion, from luxare, 'to put out of place.' Disloca'tion, Olisthe'ma, Apoped''asis, Luxa'tio, Disloca'tio, Ec'clisis, Strem'ma, Luxatu'ra, Ectop'ia, Ecpto'sis, Elap'sus, Lygis'mus, Emo'tio, Ec'stasis, Exarthre'ma, Exarthro'ma, Exarthre'ma luxa'tio, Exarthro'sis, Exo'sis, Exothe'sis, Paratop'ia, Streblo'sis, Deloca'tio, Exarticula'tio, (F.) Luxation, Dislocation, Déboîtement. A displacement of a part from its proper situation. A putting out of joint. A displacement of two or more bones, whose articular surfaces have lost, wholly, or in part, their natural connexion; either owing to external violence, (accidental luxation,) or to disease of some of the parts about the joint (spontaneous luxation.) Luxation is complete when the bones have entirely lost their natural connexion; incomplete, when they partly preserve it; and compound, when a wound communicates with the luxated joint. The general indications of treatment, are;—1. To reduce the protruded bone to its original place. 2. To retain it in situ. 3. To obviate any attendant or consequent symptoms.

To reduce requires extension, counter-extension, and coaptation.

LUXEUIL, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters, at the town of Luxeuil, at the foot of the Vosges, in the department of Haute Saône. Five springs are thermal, and two cold. They seem to contain carbonic acid, carbonates of iron and lime, and chloride of sodium; and are employed as aperient, tonic, and stimulant.

LYCAN'CHE, Lycan'chis, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and αγχω, 'I strangle.' Wolf quinsy, Wolf choak; —as Cynanche means Dog choak. Also, hydrophobia. See Lycoïdes.

LYCANCHIS, Lycanche.

LYCANTHROPE, see Lycanthropia.

LYCANTHRO'PIA, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man:' Lyca'on, Insa'nia lupi'na, Lycoma'nia. A variety of melancholy, in which the person believes himself to be changed into a wolf, and imitates the voice and habits of that animal. One so circumstanced is called a Ly'canthrope, Lycanthro'pus.

LYCANTHROPUS, see Lycanthropia.

LYCAON, Lycanthropia.

LYCHNIDIUM, Biolychnium.

LYCHNIS OFFICINALIS, Saponaria—l. Sylvestris, Saponaria.

LYCHNIUM, Biolychnium.

LYCOÏ'DES, Lyco'des, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and ειδος, 'form.' Lupo sim'ilis. An epithet for a species of cynanche, called, also, Lupus, and Strangula'tor, and absurdly attributed to excessive retention of sperm in its reservoirs and its passage into the blood (?).—Galen.

LYCOPE DE VIRGINIE, Lycopus Virginicus.

LYCOPER'DON, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and περδω, 'I break wind;' L. Bovis'ta seu Arrhi'zon seu Globo'sum, Crep'itus Lupi, Fungus Chirurgo'rum, Puff-ball, Bull Fists, Mol'lipuffs, Bovis'ta, (F.) Vesseloup. The puff-ball dries into a very fine, light brownish dust, which is sometimes used as a mechanical styptic to arrest hemorrhage.

LYCOPER'DON TUBER, L. Guloso'rum, Tuber Agriocas'tanum, Trubs, Tuber ciba'rium seu Guloso'rum seu Nigrum, Tu'bera Terræ, Truffle, (pronounced troofle,) Tuckaho, (F.) Truffe. A fleshy, firm body, unknown in its mode of reproduction, which is found under ground, especially in different parts of France, Italy, &c., and is much esteemed as an aliment. It seems to belong to the champignons, and has a particular perfume. Aphrodisiac virtues have been ascribed to it.

LYCOPERSICUM ESCULENTUM, Solanum lycopersicum—l. Pomum amoris, Solanum lycopersicum—l. Tuberosum, Solanum tuberosum.

LYCOPO'DIUM, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and πους, 'a foot.' L. Clava'tum seu Officina'lē, Lepido'tis clava'ta, Cingula'ria, Muscus clava'tus, Club-moss, Wolf's-claw. This is the largest of the European mosses. The dust, which fills the capsules of its spikes, is very inflammable, and hence has been called Vegetable Sulphur;—and, also, Fari'na seu Pulvis seu Semen seu Sulphur Lycopo'dii. It is used in France to roll pills and boluses in; and in medicine is a desiccative, in the excoriations to which infants are liable. It is collected chiefly in Switzerland and Germany for commerce.

LYCOPO'DIUM COMPLANA'TUM, Common Club-moss, Ground Pine; indigenous; has the same properties as Lycopodium selago.

LYCOPO'DIUM OFFICINALE, L. clavatum—l. Recurvum, L. Selago.

LYCOPODIUM SELA'GO, L. Recur'vum, Planan'thus fastiga'tus seu sela'go, Muscus erec'tus seu Cathar'ticus, Sela'go, Upright Club-moss, Fir Club-moss, Upright Fir-moss. A decoction of this plant acts violently as an emetic and purgative; and was formerly, on this account, used as an abortive. It is also employed to kill vermin.

LY'COPUS, L. Virgin'icus, Bugleweed, Water Bugle, Water Horehound, Gypsy Weed, Paul's Bet'ony, (F.) Lycope de Virginie. This indigenous herb, Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia, Nat. Ord. Labiatæ, grows throughout the greater part of the United States. The whole herb is said to be slightly narcotic. It is given in infusion, (Lycop. ℥j; aq. fervent. Oj.)

LYCOPUS SINUA'TUS, Water Horehound, Gypsy Weed, Paul's Bet'ony, indigenous, has similar properties.

LYCOPUS VIRGINICUS, Lycopus.

LYCOREXIS, Fames lupina.

LYCOSA TARENTULA, see Tarantula.

LYCOSTOMA, Hyperoödchasma.

LYE, Lixivium, Ley—l. Dyspeptic, see Fuligokali—l. Medical, see Fuligokali.

LYGISMUS, Luxation.

LYGMODES, Singultous.

LYGMUS, Singultus.

LYGODES, Singultous.

LYING-IN STATE, Parturient state.

LYMA, Lochia.

LYMPH, Lympha, from νυμφη, 'water,' by changing ν into λ. White blood, Lympha Nutrit''ia. A name given to the fluid contained in the lymphatic vessels and thoracic duct of animals, which have been made to fast for 24 hours. According to Chevreul, the lymph of the dog contains water, fibrin, albumen, common salt, subcarbonate of soda, phosphates of lime and magnesia, and carbonate of lime. The properties and composition of lymph vary somewhat according to the part whence the lymphatic vessels obtain it. Generally, it is under the form of a transparent, slightly alkaline fluid, sometimes of a madder-red or yellowish colour,—of a spermatic odour, and saline taste; soluble in water;—the solution becoming turbid, when mixed with alcohol. When left to itself, it coagulates. The clot or solid portion becomes of a scarlet red, if put in contact with oxygen; and of a purple red, if placed in carbonic acid.

Like the blood, the lymph consists of a fluid in which lymph corpuscles or globules are suspended.

The lymph is probably the product of internal absorption in different parts of the body: it then flows along the lymphatic vessels, unitiug with the chyle, and is poured with it into the veins; thus becoming one of the materials of the blood. According to others, the blood, when it reaches the arterial radicles, is divided into two portions,—the one red, which is carried to the heart,—the other serous or white, which is absorbed by the lymphatic vessels, and constitutes the lymph. By others, again, the lymphatics are considered to be the vessels of return for the white blood sent to certain tissues. White blood, however, has probably no existence.

The word lymph is sometimes used erroneously by the surgeon to signify liquor sanguinis.

LYMPH, COAGULABLE, Fibrin, Liquor sanguinis—l. Corpuscles, see Lymph—l. Globules, see Lymph—l. Hearts, Lymphatic hearts—l. Plastic, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPHADENI'TIS: from lympha, 'lymph, and adeni'tis, 'inflammation of a gland.' Inflamma'tio glandula'rum lymphatica'rum, Adeni'tis lymphat'ica, (F.) Adénite lymphatique. Inflammation of a lymphatic gland or ganglion.

LYMPHÆDUCTUS, Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGEITIS, Angeioleucitis.

LYMPHANGIA, Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIECTASIS, Lympheurys'ma,

from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGITIS, Angeioleucitis.

LYMPHANGIOG'RAPHY, Lymphangiograph'ia; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIOITIS, Angeioleucitis.

LYMPHANGIOL'OGY, from Lymphangion, 'a lymphatic,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the lymphatics.

LYMPHANGIOT'OMY, Lymphangiotom'ia; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and τομη, 'incision.' The anatomy or dissection of the lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGON'CUS, Lymphon'cus; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumefaction of the lymphatics.

LYMPHAT'IC, Lymphat'icus. That which relates to lymph.

Lymphatic Hearts. Lymph Hearts. The frog and several other animals are provided with large receptacles for the lymph immediately underneath the skin, which exhibit distinct and regular pulsations like the sanguiferous heart. Their use appears to be—to propel the lymph.

Lymphatic System is that particular system of organs which is inservient to the formation and circulation of lymph. These organs are:

1. Lymphatic Ganglions or Glands, see Conglobate.

2. Lymphatic Vessels, Lymphæduc'tus, Lymphangi'a, Lymphange'a, Venæ lymphat'icæ, Ductus sero'si, Vasa lymphatica, V. resorben'tia, Vasa hydrago'ga, Hydrangi'a. These are very numerous. Arising at the surface of membranes and in the tissue of the organs, they carry into the veins the lymph from those parts. Lymphatic vessels are found in every part of the body. Wherever they are met with, however, they form two orders,—one superficial, the other deep-seated;—the two orders frequently communicating with each other. Lymphatic vessels are generally smaller than arteries and veins. They are very thin, diaphanous, and cylindrical; but present, here and there, more or less considerable dilatations, caused by valves in their interior. They are slightly tortuous in their course; their anastomoses are very numerous, and they often cross each other, forming successive plexuses. Of the arrangement of the extreme radicles we are ignorant. All the branches, before joining the principal trunks, pass through lymphatic ganglions, in which they are convoluted, or subdivide almost ad infinitum. They are formed of an outer cellular membrane and an internal coat, similar to that of the veins; of the latter, the valves are formed. All the lymphatics of the body ultimately discharge themselves into the subclavian and internal jugular veins. Two of these trunks are considerably larger than the others,—the thoracic duct, and the great trunk of the right side, (F.) La grande veine lymphatique droite. The former receives the lymphatics of the abdomen, of the lower extremities, the left side of the thorax, the left upper extremity, and the corresponding side of the head and neck; the latter receives those of the right upper extremity, and of the right side of the head, neck and thorax.

LYMPHATITIS, Angeioleucitis.

LYMPHE DE COTUGNO, Cotunnius, liquor of.

LYMPHEURYSMA, Lymphangiectasis.

LYMPHITIS, Angeioleucitis.

LYMPHIZA'TION. A term used by Professor Gross to signify effusion of coagulable lymph. It is not a happy word, inasmuch as lymph has another meaning, whilst the term 'coagulable lymph' is now almost abandoned.

LYMPHOCHE'ZIA, from lympha, 'lymph,' and χηζω, 'I go to stool.' Serous diarrhœa.

LYMPHONCUS, Lymphangoncus—l. Iridis, Iridauxesis.

LYMPHOPYRA, Fever, adeno-meningeal.

LYMPHO'SIS. The preparation or elaboration of lymph.

LYMPHOT'OMY, from lympha, 'lymph,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' Dissection of the lymphatics.

LYNCH'S EMBROCA'TION. An emollient nostrum, formed of olive oil impregnated with bergamot and other essences, and coloured with alkanet root.

LYNGODES, Singultous—l. Febris, Fever, singultous.

LYNGYODES, Singultous.

LYNN WAHOO, Ulmus alata.

LYNX, Singultus.

LYPE, Athymia.

LYPEMANIA, Melancholy.

LYPE'RIA CRO'CEA. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Serophulariaceæ, the flowers of which closely resemble saffron in smell and taste, and possess similar medical virtues.

LYPEROPHRÉNIE, Melancholy.

LYPOMA, Lipoma.

LYPOTHYM'IA, from λυπη, 'sadness,' and θυμος, 'heart, courage.' Very great sadness or despondency.

LYRA, λυρα, 'the lyre.' Psalter, Psalte'rium, Corpus Psalloï'des, Lyra Da'vidis, Lam'ina medulla'ris triangula'ris cer'ebri, Spa'tium tri'gonum. The under surface of the posterior part of the body of the fornix is impressed with numerous transverse and oblique lines, which have been so called from some resemblance they bear to the ancient lyre.

LYRINGIUM, Eryngium campestre.

LYSIA, Lysis.

LYSIMA'CHIA NUMMULA'RIA, L. nemo'rum, Nummula'ria, Hirundina'ria, Centimor'bia, Creeping Loose Strife, Money Wort, (F.) Herbe aux écus. This plant was formerly accounted vulnerary. It has been considered to possess antiscorbutic and astringent qualities, and has been used in leucorrhœa.

Lysimachia Purpurea, Lythrum salicaria.

Lysima'chia Quadrifo'lia, Four-Leaved Loose Strife, Crosswort, an indigenous plant, is astringent; and has been used as a stomachic and antiperiodic.

LYSIS, Lysis, from λυω, 'I dissolve.' Solution. A common suffix; also, a name given to solutions or terminations of disease, which are operated insensibly; that is, gradually and without critical symptoms.

LYSSA, Hydrophobia—l. Canina, Hydrophobia.

LYSSAS, Maniodes.

LYSSETER, Maniodes.

LYSSODEC'TUS, from λυσσα, 'canine madness,' and δακνω, 'I bite.' Hydroph'obus; Canis rab'ido morsus. One who has been bitten by a mad dog, or is actually labouring under hydrophobia.

LYSSODEG'MA, Lyssodeg'mus, Lyssodexis, same etymon. The bite of a mad dog.

LYSSODEXIS, Lyssodegma.

LYTE'RIOS, λυτηριος, (from λυω, 'I dissolve,') 'solving.' An epithet given to those signs which announce the solution of a very violent disease.

LYTHRUM SALICA'RIA, Lysima'chia purpu'rea, Salica'ria vulga'ris seu spica'ta;—the Common or Purple Willow Herb. The herb, root, and flowers possess a considerable degree of astringency, and are used, occasionally, in the cure of diarrhœa and dysentery, leucorrhœa, hæmoptysis, &c.

LYTTA VESICATORIA, Cantharis.

LYTTA RU'FIPES. A variety of Lytta, peculiar to Chili, which is more active as a vesicant than the cantharis, or the lytta next described.

LYTTA VITTA'TA, Can'tharis vittata, Pota'to Fly, (F.) Cantharide tachetée. Four species of meloe that blister are found in the United States. The lytta vittata feeds principally upon the potato plant, and, at the proper season of the year, may be collected in immense numbers. The potato fly resembles the cantharides in every property, and is fully equal to them.

M.

M. This letter signifies, in prescriptions, manipulus, 'a handful.' Also, misce, 'mix.' See Abbreviation.

MACAPATLI, Smilax sarsaparilla.

MACARO'NI. An alimentary paste, moulded of a cylindrical shape, and formed of rice or wheaten flour. It is eaten — when boiled — in soup — prepared with cheese, &c.

Also, a name formerly given to a pulverulent compound of sugar and glass of antimony, carried into France by the Italian monks, and employed at the hospital La Charité in the treatment of painters' colic.

MACE, see Myristica moschata — m. Reed, Typha latifolia.

MACEDONISIUM, Smyrnium olusatrum.

MACER, Gracilis.

MACERA'TION, Macera'tio, from macero, 'I soften by water.' An operation which consists in infusing, usually without heat, a solid substance in a liquid, so as to extract its virtues.

MACERONA, Smyrnium olusatrum.

MACES, see Myristica moschata.

MACESCERE, Emaciate.

MACHÆRA, Culter, Knife, Penis.

MACHÆRIDION, Machærion.

MACHÆ'RION, Machæ'ris, Machærid'ion, Glad'iolus. A knife. An amputating knife. Rufus of Ephesus asserts, that the Aruspices gave this name to a part of the liver of animals.

MACHÆRIS, Knife, Novacula.

MACHA'ON, from μαχαω, 'I desire to fight.' The son of Æsculapius, and a celebrated physician.

MACHAÖ'NIA seu MACHAÖN'ICA ARS. Medicine. The Healing Art: — so called after Machaon, the son of Æsculapius.

MACHI'NAL, Mechan'icus. This epithet is added especially by French writers to the word movement, to express that the will takes no part in it.

MACHINE', Mach'ina, Machinamen'tum, Me'chanē, Mechane'ma. A more or less compound instrument, used in physics and chymistry to put a body in motion, or to produce any action whatever. Physiologists sometimes use it for the animal body; — as the machine or animal machine.

MACHLOSYNE, Nymphomania.

MACHOIRE, Maxillary bone — m. Diacranienne, Maxillary bone, lower — m. Syncranienne, Maxillary bone, superior.

MACIES, Atrophy, Emaciation — m. Infantum, Tabes mesenterica.

MACILENTUS, Gracilis.

MACIS, see Myristica moschata.

MACRAU'CHEN, from μακρος, 'long,' and αυχην, 'the neck.' Longo collo præ'ditus. One who has a long neck. — Galen.

MACRE FLOTTANTE, Trapa natans.

MACRITUDO, Emaciation.

MACROBIOSIS, Longevity.

MACROBIOTES, Longevity.

MACROBIOT'IC, Macrobiot'icus, Macrobi'otus, Macro'bius, Longæ'vus, from μακρος, 'great,' 'long,' and βιος, 'life.' That which lives a long time. The macrobiotic art is the art of living a long time.

MACROBIOTUS, Macriobiotic.

MACROBIUS, Macrobiotic.

MACROCEPH'ALUS, from μακρος, 'great,' 'long,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' Qui magnum habet caput. 'One who has a large head.' This epithet is given to children born with heads so large that they seem to be hydrocephalic; but in which the unusual development is owing to a large size of the brain. Such are supposed to be more than ordinarily liable to convulsions. (?) The term has also been applied by Hippocrates to certain Asiatics who had long heads. See Capitones.

MACROCO'LIA, from μακρος, 'great,' and κωλον, 'a limb.' Great length of limbs in general, and of the lower limbs in particular.

MACRODAC'TYLUS, from μακρος, 'great,' and δακτυλος, 'a finger.' Having long fingers.

MACROGASTER PLATYPUS, Acarus folliculorum.

MACROGLOSSA, see Macroglossus.

MACROGLOS'SUS, from μακρος, 'large,' and γλωσσα, 'tongue.' One who has a very large or prolapsed tongue. See Paraglossa.

MACRONOSIÆ, Chronic diseases.

MACROPHAL'LUS, from μακρος, 'large,' and φαλλος, 'the male organ.' A large size of the male organ.

MACROPHO'NUS, from μακρος, 'great,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a strong voice.

MACROPHYSOCEPH'ALUS, from μακρος, 'long,' φυσα, 'air,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A word used by Ambrose Paré to designate an augmentation of the head of the fœtus, produced by a sort of emphysema [?], which retards delivery.

MACROPIPER, Piper longum.

MACROPNŒ'A, from μακρος, 'long,' and πνεω, 'I breathe.' A long and deep respiration.

MACROP'NUS, Macrop'noos. One who breathes slowly: — a word met with in some authors. — Hippocrates.

MACROP'ODUS, Mac'ropus, from μακρος, 'great,' and πους, 'foot.' One who has a large foot.

MACROR, Emaciation.

MACROR'RHIS, from μακρος, 'great,' and ρις or ριν, 'nose.' One who has a long nose.

MACROS, Long.

MACROS'CELES, Crura longa habens; from μακρος, 'long,' and σκελος, 'the leg.' One who has long legs.

MACROSIÆ, Chronic diseases.

MACRO'TES, from μακρος, 'great,' and ους, 'an ear.' One who has long ears.

MACROTRYS RACEMOSA, see Actæa racemosa.

MAC'ULA. A spot. Dyschroe'a, Celis, Labes, (F.) Tache. A permanent discoloration of some portion of the skin, often with a change of its texture. Ephelis, Nævus, Spilus, &c., belong to Maculæ.

Macula, Molecule — m. Corneæ, Caligo — m. Corneæ arcuata, Gerotoxon — m. Corneæ margaritacea, Paralampsis — m. Cribrosa, see Auditory canal, internal — m. Fusca, Ephelides — m. Germinativa, see Molecule — m. Hepatica, Chloasma materna, Nævus — m. Lenticularis, Ephelides — m. Lutea retinæ, see Foramen centrale — m. Matricalis, Nævus — m. Matricis, Nævus — m. Solaris, Ephelides.

MACULÆ ANTE OCULOS VOLITANTES, Metamorphopsia.

MACULOSUS, Sablé.

MAD, Insane.

MADAR, Mudar.

MADARO'SIS, from μαδος, 'bald.' Madaro'ma, Made'sis, Madar'otes, Made'ma, Mad'isis, Depluma'tio, Milphæ, Milpho'sis, Ptilo'sis, Calvi'ties. Loss of the hair, particularly of the eyelashes.

MADAROTES, Madarosis.

MADDER, DYERS', Rubia.

MADEIRA, CLIMATE OF. This island is much frequented by pulmonary invalids, on account of the mildness and equability of its climate. Owing, indeed, to the mildness of the winter, and the coolness of the summer, together with the remarkable equality of the temperature during day and night, as well as throughout the year, it has been considered that the climate of Madeira is the finest in the northern hemisphere. Sir James Clark is of opinion that there is no place on the continent of Europe, with which he is acquainted, where the pulmonary invalid could reside with so much advantage, during the whole year, as in Madeira.

MADELEON, Bdellium.

MADEMA, Madarosis.

MADESIS, Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISIS, Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISTE'RIUM, Madiste'rion, Trichola'bium, Trichol'abis, Volsel'la. Tweezers. An instrument for extracting hairs.

MADNESS, CANINE, Hydrophobia — m. Raving or furious, Mania.

MADOR, Moisture. A cold sweat.

MADREPORA OCULATA, see Coral.

MADWEED, Scutellaria lateriflora.

MAEA, Midwife.

MAEEIA, Obstetrics.

MAEIA, Obstetrics.

MAEUTRIA, Midwife.

MAGDA'LIA, Magda'leon, Magdalis. Crumb of bread. Any medicine, as a pill, formed of crumb of bread. A roll of plaster.

MAGEIRICE, Culinary art.

MAGGOT PIMPLE, see Acne.

MAGIS, μαγις, 'a cake.' A sort of cake, composed of cloves, garlic and cheese, beaten together. — Hippocrates.

MAGISTERIUM, Magistery — m. Bismuthi, Bismuth, subnitrate of — m. Jalapæ, Resin of Jalap — m. Marcasitæ, Bismuth, subnitrate of — m. Plumbi, Plumbi subcarbonas — m. Sulphuris, Sulphur lotum — m. Tartari purgans, Potassæ acetas.

MAG"ISTERY, Magiste'rium, from magister, 'a master.' Certain precipitates from saline solutions were formerly so called; as well as other medicines, the preparation of which was kept secret.

Magistery of Bismuth, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

MAG"ISTRAL, Magistra'lis. Same etymon. Extempora'neous. Medicines are so called which are prepared extemporaneously; officinal medicines being such as have been prepared for some time before they are prescribed.

MAGISTRANTIA. Imperatoria.

MAGMA, μαγμα, (F.) Marc. The thick residuum, obtained after expressing certain substances to extract the fluid parts from them. The grounds which remain after treating a substance with water, alcohol, or any other menstruum. Also, a salve of a certain consistence.

Magma or Marc of Olives is the residuum after the greatest possible quantity of oil has been extracted from olives by making them ferment. It was formerly employed as a stimulant, under the form of a bath — to which the name Bain de Marc was given by the French.

Magma or Marc of Grapes, Bry'tia, was once employed for the same purposes.

MAGMA RÉTICULÉ, 'reticulated magma.' The gelatiniform substance found between the chorion and amnion in the early period of embryonic existence.

MAGNES, Magnet.

Magnes Arsenica'lis. (Sulphur, white arsenic, and common antimony, of each equal parts. Mix by fusion.) It is corrosive. See Magnetic plaster.

Magnes Epilepsiæ, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MAGNE'SIA, Abarnahas, Chambar, Terra ama'ra, Magnesia terra, Talc earth; from magnes, 'the magnet;' because it was supposed to have the power of attracting substances from the air. Its metallic base is magne'sium.

Magnesia, M. usta, M. calcina'ta, Cal'cined Magnesia, Oxide of magne'sium, (F.) Magnésie brulée, Magnésie, M. Caustique. This is obtained by exposing carbonate of magnesia to a strong heat. It is inodorous; taste very slightly bitter; in the form of a white, light, spongy, soft powder. S. g. 2.3; requiring 2000 times its weight of water for its solution. It is antacid, and laxative when it meets with acid in the stomach. Dose, gr. x to ʒj in water or milk.

Magnesia Aerata, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Alba, M. carbonas — m. Calcinata, M. usta — m. Citrate of, Magnesiæ citras — m. Edinburgensis, M. carbonas.

Magnesia, Effervescing, Moxon's. (Magnes. carb.; M. sulphat.; Sodæ bicarbon., Acid tartaric. āā partes æquales; to be pulverized, well dried, mixed, and enclosed in bottles hermetically sealed.) Dose, a teaspoonful in half a tumbler of water, drunk in a state of effervescence.

Magnesia, Fluid. Under this name a preparation is designated, which consists of a solution of carbonate of magnesia in carbonated water. It is also termed carbonated magnesia water, aërated magnesia water, and condensed solution of magnesia, (F.) Eau magnésienne.

Magnesia, Henry's, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Mitis, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Muriate of, Magnesii chloridum — m. Nigra, Manganese, black oxide of.

Magnesia Opali'na. A name given by Lémery to a mixture of equal parts of antimony, nitrate of potass, and chloride of sodium, (decrepitated.) It has emetic properties, but is not used.

Magnesia Salis Amari, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Salis Ebsdamensis, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Saturni, Antimonium — m. Solution of, condensed, M. fluid — m. Subcarbonate of, Magnesiæ carbo-nas — m. Subcarbonate of, Hydrated, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Terra, Magnesia — m. Vitriolata, Magnesiæ sulphas—m. and Soda, sulphate of, see Soda, sulphate of—m. Usta, Magnesia.

Magnesiæ Car'bonas, M. Subcar'bonas, Magnesia, (Dublin,) M. aëra'ta, M. carbon'ica, M. alba, Subcar'bonate of Magnesia, Hy'drated Subcar'bonate of Magnesia, Henry's Magnesia, M. Subcarbon'ica, M. Mitis, M. Edinburgen'sis, M. Salis Ebsdamen'sis, M. Salis ama'ri, Car'bonas magne'sicum, Lac terræ, Hypocar'bonas magne'siæ, T. amara aëra'ta, T. absor'bens minera'lis, T. Talco'sa oxyanthraco'des, (F.) Sous-carbonate ou carbonate de Magnésie, Magnésie aérée, M. blanche, M. crayeuse, M. douce, M. effervescente, M. moyenne, Poudre de Sentinelli, P. de Valentini, P. du Comte de Palme. Prepared from sulphate of magnesia by subcarbonate of potass. It is inodorous; insipid; light; white; spongy; opake; effervescing with acids; insoluble in water. Properties the same as the last; but the carbonic acid, when set free, sometimes causes unpleasant distension.

Magnesiæ Citras, Citrate of Magnesia, (F.) Citrate de Magnésie. A saline preparation, formed by saturating a solution of citric acid with either magnésia or its carbonate. Dose, an ounce. It is devoid of the bitter taste of the magnesian salts.

A solution in water, or in mineral water, sweetened with syrup, and acidulated with citric acid, makes an agreeable purgative. A simple solution in water has been called magnesian lemonade. In the effervescing state, it is the effervescing magnesian lemonade. The Pharmacopœia of the United States (1851) has a form for the Liquor Magnesiæ Citra'tis, Solution of Citrate of Magnesia. Take of Carbonate of magnesia, ℥v; citric acid, ℥viiss; Syrup of citric acid, f℥ij; Water, a sufficient quantity. Dissolve the citric acid in f℥iv of water, and add ℥iv of the carbonate of magnesia, previously rubbed with f℥iij of water. When the reaction has ceased, filter into a strong f℥xij glass bottle, into which the syrup of citric acid has been previously introduced. Rub the remaining carbonate of magnesia with f℥ij of water, and pour the mixture into the bottle, which must be well corked, and secured with twine; and shake the mixture occasionally until it becomes transparent.

Magnesiæ Hypocarbonas, M. carbonas — m. Subcarbonas, M. carbonas—m. Vitriolicum, Magnesiæ sulphas.

Magnesiæ Sulphas, Sulphas Magnesiæ purifica'ta, Magnesia vitriola'ta, Sal cathar'ticus ama'rus, Sal catharticum amarum, Sal ama'rum, S. Anglica'num, Sulphate of Magnesia, Sal Epsomen'sis, Sal catharticus Anglica'nus, Sal Sedlicen'sis, Sal Ebsdamen'sē, S. Seydschutzen'sē, Terra ama'ra sulphu'rica, Vitriol'icum Magne'siæ, Epsom Salt, Bitter purging Salt, (F.) Sulfate de magnésie, Sel admirable de Lémëry, Sel d'égra. Generally obtained from sea-water. Its taste is bitter and disagreeable. It is soluble in an equal quantity of water at 60°. It is purgative and diuretic. Dose, as a cathartic, ℥ss to ℥ij.

MAGNESIAN LEMONADE, Magnesiæ citras.

MAGNÉSIE AÉRÉE, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Blanche, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Brulée, Magnesia usta — m. Carbonate de, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Caustique, Magnesia usta — m. Citrate de, Magnesiæ citras — m. Crayeuse, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Douce, Magnesiæ carbonas — m. Effervescente, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Moyenne, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Souscarbonate de, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Sulfate de, Magnesiæ sulphas.

MAGNE'SII CHLO'RIDUM, Chloride of Magne'sium, Muriate of Magnesia. This bitter deliquescent salt has been given as a mild and effective cholagogue cathartic, in the dose of half an ounce to the adult. Being deliquescent, it may be kept dissolved in its weight of water.

MAGNESIUM, see Magnesia—m. Chloride of, Magnesii chloridum — m. Oxide of, Magnesia usta.

MAGNET, Magnes, Magne'tes, Ferrum magnes attracto'rium, Sideri'tes, Sideri'tis, Lapis hercle'us, L. Syderi'tis, L. nau'ticus, Magni'tis, so called from Magnes, its discoverer, or from Magnesia, whence it was obtained; (F.) Aimant; The magnet or loadstone. An amorphous, oxydulated ore of iron, which exerts an attraction on unmagnetized iron, and has the property of exhibiting poles; that is, of pointing by one of its extremities to the north. This ore, by constant or long rubbing, communicates its properties to iron; and thus artificial magnets are formed. Magnetic ore is found in many countries, and particularly in the island of Elba. The magnet is sometimes used to extract spicula of iron from the eye or from wounds. It has been employed as an antispasmodic; but acts only through the imagination. The powder has been given as a tonic. In Pharmacy, it is used to purify iron filings. It attracts the iron, and the impurities remain behind. It formerly entered, as an ingredient, into several plasters, to draw bullets and heads of arrows from the body—as the Emplastrum divinum Nicolai, the Emplastrum nigrum of Augsburg, the Opodeldoch, and Attractivum of Paracelsus, &c.

MAGNETES, Magnet.

MAGNET'IC, Magnet'icus. Same etymon. That which belongs or relates to magnetism; — mineral or animal.

Magnetic Fluid. A name given to the imponderable fluid to which the magnet owes its virtues. By analogy it is applied to a particular principle, supposed to be the source of organic actions, which affects, it is conceived, the nervous system principally, and is susceptible of being transmitted from one living body to another, by contact or simple approximation, and especially under the influence of fixed volition. See Magnetism, Animal.

Magnetic Plaster. A plaster, at present, not used. It had for its base a mixture, called Magnes arsenica'lis; formed of equal parts of antimony, sulphur and arsenic melted together in a glass cucurbit. The name Magnetic plaster was, likewise, given to such as contained powdered magnet.

MAGNETINUS, Potassæ supertartras impurus.

MAG'NETISM, AN'IMAL, Mes'merism, Path'etism, Neuroga'mia, Bioga'mia, Biomagnetis'mus, Zoömagnetis'mus, Exon'eurism (proposed by Mr. H. Mayo,) Telluris'mus, Anthropomagnetis'mus, Gar'galē, Gargalis'mus, Gar'galus. Properties attributed to the influence of a particular principle, which has been compared to that which characterizes the magnet. It is supposed to be transmitted from one person to another, and to impress peculiar modifications on organic action, especially on that of the nerves. The discussions, to which this strange belief has given rise, are by no means terminated. There is no evidence whatever of the existence of such a fluid. Highly impressible persons can be thrown into a kind of hysteric or 'magnetic' sleep and somnambulism, (designated by Mr. Braid, hyp'notism, neuro-hyp'notism, and nervous sleep); but farther than this, the efforts of the magnetizer cannot reach. It is a mode of action upon the nerves through the medium of the senses.

MAGNETIZATION, Mesmerization.
MAGNETIZED, Mesmerized.
MAGNETIZER, Mesmerizer.
MAGNITIS, Magnet.
MAGNITUDO CORPORIS, Stature.
MAGNOC, Jatropha manihot.
MAGNOLIA FRAGRANS, M. glauca.

Magno'lia Glauca, M. fragrans, Small Magnolia, Magnolia, Swamp Sas'safras, Elk Bark, Indian Bark, White Laurel, Sweet Bay, Beaver Wood, White Bay, Cinchona of Virginia, Castor Bay, Sweet magnolia. The bark is possessed of tonic properties, resembling those of cascarilla, canella, &c. The same may be said of the Magnolia tripet'ala or Umbrel'la tree; the M. acumina'ta or Cu'cumber tree, the M. grandiflo'ra and M. macrophyl'la, Laurel, Elk wood, Silverleaf, Big leaf, White Bay, Beaver Tree, Elk bark, Big bloom.

MAGNUM DEI DONUM, Cinchona.

Magnum Os. The third bone of the lower row of the carpus, reckoning from the thumb. It is the largest bone of the carpus; and is, also, called Os capita'tum; (F.) Grand Os.

MAGRUMS. A popular name in the State of New York for a singular convulsive affection, which resembles chorea. It rarely, however, occurs before the adult age; never ceases spontaneously, and, when fully developed, is devoid of any paroxysmal character.

MAGUEY, Agave Americana.
MAHMOUDY, Convolvulus scammonia.
MAHOGAN FÉBRIFUGE, Swietenia febrifuga.

MAHOGANY, Gynocladus Canadensis — m. Mountain, Betula lenta—m. Tree, Swietenia mahogani.

MAIANTHEUM, Convallaria maialis.

MAIDENHAIR, Adiantum capillus veneris—m. American, Adiantum pedatum — m. Canada, Adiantum pedatum — m. Common, Asplenium trichomanoides — m. Golden, Polytrichum—m. White, Asplenium ruta muraria.

MAIDENHEAD, Virginity.
MAIDENHOOD, Virginity.
MAIEIA, Obstetrics.
MAIEUSIS, Parturition.
MAIEUTA, see Parturition.
MAIEUTER, Accoucheur.
MAIEUTES, Accoucheur.
MAIEUTICA ARS, Obstetrics.
MAIGREUR, Emaciation.
MAILLET, Mallet.
MAILLOT, Swathing clothes.
MAIN, Manus.

MAIRANIA UVA URSI, Arbutus urva ursi.
MAÏS, Zea mays.

MAJOR HEL'ICIS. A narrow band of muscular fibres situate upon the anterior border of the helix of the ear, just above the tragus.

MAJORANA, Origanum majorana — m. Hortensis, Origanum majorana — m. Syriaca, Teucrium marum.

MAL D'AMOUR, Odontalgia.

MAL DES ARDENS. A name given to a species of pestilential erysipelas or Saint Anthony's fire, which reigned epidemically in France, in 1130.

MAL D'AVENTURE, Paronychia — m. di Breno, Scherlievo—m. Caduc, Epilepsy.

MAL DE CRIMÉE (F.), Lèpre des Cossaques, Lepra Tartarica. A variety of lepra in the Crimea.

MAL DE DENT, Odontalgia—m. d'Estomac, Chthonophagia — m. Divin, Epilepsy — m. d'Enfant, Pains (Labour)—m. di Fiume, Scherlievo—m. Français, Syphilis—m. de Gorge, Cynanche—*m. MAL DE SAN LAZARO, Cocobay. A leprous disease, common in Colombia, S. America.

MAL DEL SOLE, Pellagra—m. de Sologne, Ergotism — m. de Terre, Epilepsy — m. à Tête, Cephalalgia—m. del Valle, Proctocace — m. Vat, see Anthrax.

MALA, Gena—m. Aurea, see Citrus aurantium.

MALABATH'RINUM. Ancient name of an ointment and a wine, into which the malabathrum entered.

MALABA'THRUM, Cadeji-Indi. The leaves of a tree of the East Indies. These leaves entered into the theriac, mithridate, and other ancient electuaries. They are believed to be from a species of laurel—Laurus Cassia; but, according to others, from Laurus Malabathrum. The O'leum Malabathri is obtained from it.

MALACCÆ RADIX, Sagittarium alexipharmacum.

MALACHE, Malva rotundifolia.

MALA'CIA, from μαλακια, 'softness.' A depravation of taste, in which an almost universal loathing is combined with an exclusive longing for some particular article of food. If the patient desires substances that are not eatable or noxious, it constitutes Pica, Pisso'sis, Pitto'sis, Heterorex'ia, Heterorrhex'ia, Cissa, Citto'sis, Citta, Limo'sis Pica, Allotriopha'gia, Picacis'mus, Pica'tio, Depra'ved ap'petite, (F.) Envie. These symptoms accompany several nervous affections, — those of females in particular. In pregnancy it is common, and is termed Longing.

Malacia Africanorum, Chthonophagia — m. Cordis, Cardiomalacia.

MALACISMUS, Mollities.

MALACOGASTER, Gastromalaxia.

MALACOPHO'NUS, from μαλακια, 'softness,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a soft voice.

MALACOPŒA, Emollients.

MALACORIUM, see Punica granatum.

MALACOSAR'COS, from μαλακας, 'soft,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' One of a soft constitution: hab'itû cor'poris mollio'ri præ'ditus. — Galen.

MALACOSIS, Mollities—m. Cerebri, Mollities cerebri — m. Cordis, Cardiomalacia — m. Hepatis, Hepatomalacia—m. Uteri, Hysteromalacia.

MALACOSTEON, Mollities ossium.

MALACTICA, Emollients.

MALADY, ENGLISH, Hypochondriasis.

MALÆ, OS, from malum, 'an apple;' so called from its roundness. Os mala'rē, Os Juga'lē, Os Jugamen'tum, Os Genæ, Zygo'ma, Os Zygomat'icum, Os Hypo'pium, Os Subocula'rē, Os Pud'icum, (F.) Os Malaire, Os Zygomatique, Os de la Pommette. The cheek or malar bone. This bone is situate at the lateral and superior part of the face; and constitutes the zygomatic region of the cheek. It is irregularly quadrilateral. Its outer surface is convex, covered by muscles and skin, and pierced with canals, called malar, through which vessels and nerves pass. Its upper surface is concave, and forms part of the orbit. Its posterior surface is concave, and enters into the composition of the temporal fossa. This bone is thick and cellular. It is articulated with the frontal, temporal, sphenoid, and superior maxillary bones, and is developed by a single point of ossification.

The part of the face rendered prominent by it, the French call Pommette.

MALAG'MA, from μαλασσω, 'I soften.' An emollient cataplasm, and, in general, every local application which enjoys the property of softening organic tissues.

MALAISE, Indisposition

MALAKIEN, Mollities.

MALAMBO BARK, Matias.

MALANDRIA. A species of lepra or elephantiasis.—Marcellus Empiricus.

MALANDRIO'SUS, Leprous. Affected with a species of lepra.

MALAR, Mala'ris, from mala, 'the cheek.' Belonging to the cheek,—as the malar bone.

MALAR PROCESS, Zygomatic process.

MALARE OS, Malæ os.

MALARIA, Miasm.

MALA'RIOUS, Mala'rial. Owing to, or connected with Malaria,—as a malarious soil, malarious disease, &c.

MALASSIMILA'TION, Malassimila'tio; from mala, 'bad,' and assimilatio, 'assimilation.' Imperfect or morbid assimilation or nutrition.

MAL'AXATE, Molli''rē, Subig''erē, Malacissa'rē, (F.) Malaxer, from μαλασσω, 'I soften.' To produce softening of drugs, by kneading them. The process is called Malaxa'tion, Malaxa'tio.

MALAXATION, see Malaxate.

MALAXIA VENTRICULI, Gastromalaxia.

MALAXIS, Mollities—m. Cordis, Cardiomalacia.

MALAY, see Homo.

MALAZISSA'TUS, Malacissa'tus, from malacisso, 'I soften.' One in whom the testicles have not descended. It has, also, been used synonymously with emascula'tus and muliera'tus.—Castelli.

MALCE, Chilblain.

MALE, Mas, Mas'culus. Of the sex that begets young. Not female. What belongs to the male sex; as the male organs of generation.

MALE, Axilla—m. Organ, Penis.

MALEFICIUM, Poisoning.

MALFORMA'TION, malforma'tio, malconforma'tio; from mala, 'bad,' and forma, 'form.' A wrong formation; or irregularity in the structure of parts. See Monster.

MALIA, see Equinia.

MALIASMUS, Malis, see Equinia.

MALICHORIUM, see Punica granatum.

MALICORIUM, see Punica granatum.

MALIE, Equinia.

MALIG'NANT, Malig'nus, (F.) Malin. A term applied to any disease whose symptoms are so aggravated as to threaten the destruction of the patient. A disease of a very serious character, although it may be mild in appearance;—Morbus malignus.

MALIN, Malignant.

MALING'ERER; from (F.) malingre, 'sickly.' A simulator of disease, so termed in the British military service.

MALIS, Malias'mos, Cuta'neous vermina'tion, Helminthon'cus. The cuticle or skin infested with animalcules,—Phthiri'asis, Parasitis'mus superfic''iei. In Persia, this affection is produced by the Guinea worm; in South America, by the Chigre; and in Europe, occasionally by the Louse. See Equinia, and Phtheiriasis.

MALIS DRACUNCULUS, Dracunculus—m. Gordii, Dracunculus—m. Pediculi, Phtheiriasis.

MALLE'OLAR, Malleola'ris, from malleolus, 'the ankle.' Belonging or relating to the ankles.

MALLEOLAR ARTERIES are two branches furnished by the anterior tibial about the instep; the one—the internal—passes transversely behind the tendon of the tibialis anticus, to be distributed in the vicinity of the malleolus internus;—the other—the external—glides behind the tendons of the extensor communis digitorum pedis and the peroneus brevis, and sends its branches to the parts which surround the outer ankle, as well as to the outer region of the tarsus.

MALLE'OLUS. Diminutive of malleus, 'a mallet, or hammer;' Rasce'ta, Raste'ta, Rascha, Rasetta, Rase'ta, Sphyra, Talus, Diab'ebos, Tale'olus, Peza, the Ankle, (F.) Malléole, Cheville du Pied. The two projections formed by the bones of the leg at their inferior part. The inner belongs to the tibia; the outer to the fibula. The ankles afford attachment to ligaments; and each has a sort of gutter, in which certain tendons slide. See Malleus.

MALLET, Malle'olus, (F.) Maillet. A kind of hammer, used with a gouge for removing or cutting bones, in certain surgical and anatomical operations.

MAL'LEUS, Malle'olus, Ossic'ulum Malleolo assimila'tum, (F.) Marteau. The longest and outermost of the four small bones of the ear. It is situate at the outer part of the tympanum, and is united to the membrana tympani. It has, 1. An ovoid head, which is articulated behind with the incus, and is supported by a narrow part called the neck: this has, anteriorly, a long apophysis, which is engaged in the glenoid fissure, and is called the Apophysis or Process, Proces'sus grac''ilis, of Rau. It affords attachment to the anterior mallei muscle. 2. A handle, which forms an obtuse angle with the neck, and corresponds to the membrane of the tympanum, which it seems to draw inwards. It is furnished at its upper extremity with a process—the processus brevis, to which the internus mallei is attached. This bone is developed by a single point of ossification.

MALLEUS, Equinia—M. farciminosus, see Equinia—m. Slender Process of the, Grêle apophyse du marteau.

MALLOW, COMMON, Malva—m. Compound decoction of, Decoctum malvæ compositum—m. Yellow, Abutilon cordatum.

MALMEDY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Malmedy is a town in Rhenish Prussia, between Spa and Coblenz. In its immediate vicinity are several acidulous chalybeate springs.

MALO DI SCARLIEVO, Scherlievo.

MALOGRANATUM, Punica granatum.

MALPIGHI, ACINI OF, Corpora Malpighiana.

MALPIG'HIA MOUREL'LA, (F.) Mourcillier, Simarouba faux. The bark of this shrub—a native of Cayenne — is reputed to be febrifuge, and useful in diarrhœa.

MALPIGHIAN BODIES, Corpora Malpighiana—m. b. Inflammation of the, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—m. b. of the Spleen, see Spleen.

MALPRAX'IS, Mala praxis, Malum reg''imen. Bad management or treatment.

MALT, Sax. mealō, Dutch mout, Teut. malt; from μαλαττω, 'I soften;' [?] Bynē, Maltum, Hor'dei maltum, Bra'sium, (F.) Drèche. Barley made to germinate, for the purpose of forming beer. It has been recommended in medicine, as antiscorbutic, antiscrofulous, &c.

MALT SPIRIT. A spirit distilled from malt. It is the basis of most of the spirituous cordials.

MALTA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Malta is pretty equable, the range of temperature in the twenty-four hours being rarely more than 6°. The air is almost always dry and clear. The most disagreeable wind is the sirocco, which is the source of more or less suffering to the pulmonary invalid. The winter climate is favourable. Dr. Liddell thinks that no place which he has seen in the south of Europe can compete with Malta, for a mild, dry, bracing air in November, December, and part of January; and during the other winter and spring months, he thinks it is equal to any of them.

MALTHA, Malthē, from μαλαττω, 'I soften.' Wax, particularly soft wax.

MALTHACTICA, Emollients.

MALTHAXIS, Mollities.

MALUM, Disease, Melum — m. Articulorum, Gout—m. Caducum, Epilepsy—m. Caducum pulmonum, Asthma—m. Canum, see Pyrus cydonia —m. Coense, Averrhoa carambola—m. Cotoneum, see Pyrus cydonia — m. MALUM MOR'TUUM. A species of lepra, in which the affected portions of skin seem to be struck with death.

MALUM PILARE, Trichosis—m. Pottii, Vertebral disease—m. Primarium, Idiopathia—m. Regimen, Malpraxis—m. Spinosum, Datura stramonium—m. Terrestre, Atropa Mandragora—m. Venereum, Syphilis.

MALUS, Pyrus malus — m. Aurantia major, Citrus aurantium—m. Communis, Pyrus malus—m. Dasyphylla, Pyrus malus.

MALUS IN'DICA, Bilumbi biting-bing of Bontius. The juice of this East India tree is cooling, and is drunk as a cure for fevers. The leaves, boiled and made into a cataplasm with rice, are famed in all sorts of tumours. The juice, mixed with arrack, is drunk for the cure of diarrhœa. The ripe fruit is eaten as a delicacy; and the unripe is made into a pickle for the use of the table.

MALUS LIMONIA ACIDA, see Citrus medica—m. Medica, see Citrus medica—m. Sylvestris, Pyrus malus.

MALVA, Malva sylves'tris seu vulga'ris, Common Mallow, (F.) Mauve sauvage. The leaves and flowers are chiefly used in fomentations, cataplasms, and emollient enemata. Its properties are demulcent.

Malva rotundifo'lia, Mal'achē, Mal'ochē, has like virtues; as well as the other varieties.

MALVAVISCUM, Althæa.

MALVERN, WATERS OF. The village of Great Malvern, (pronounced Maw'vern,) in Worcestershire, England, has for many years been celebrated for a spring of remarkable purity, which has acquired the name of the Holy well. It is a carbonated water; containing carbonates of soda and iron, sulphate of soda, and chloride of sodium; and is chiefly used externally, in cutaneous affections.

MAMA-PIAN. An ulcer of a bad aspect, which is the commencement of the pian; and which, after having destroyed the flesh, extends to the bones. It is also called the Mother of Pians;—La mère des pians.

MAMEI, Mamoe, Momin or Toddy tree. From incisions made in the branches of this West Indian tree, a copius discharge of pellucid liquor occurs, which is called momin or Toddy wine. It is very diuretic, and is esteemed to be a good antilithic and lithontriptic.

MAMELLE, Mamma.

MAMELON, Nipple.

MAMELONNÉ, Mammillated.

MAMELONS DU REIN, Papillæ of the kidney.

MAMILLA, see Mamma.

MAMMA, from mamma, one of the earliest cries of the infant, ascribed to a desire for food. Masthos, Mastus, Mazos, Thelē, Titthos, Ruma, Uber, Nutrix, Gemip'oma. The female breast, (Mammil'la, Mamilla being the male breast;) (F.) Mamelle. A glandular organ, proper to a class of animals — the mammalia — and intended for the secretion of milk. The mammæ exist in both sexes, but they acquire a much greater size in the female; especially during pregnancy and lactation. In women, before the age of puberty, the breasts are but little developed. At this period, however, towards the central part of each breast, the skin suddenly changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint. It is of a reddish brown in women who have suckled several children. This circle has a rugous appearance, owing to the presence of sebaceous glands, and is called Are'ola or Aure'ola. These glands—Tubercles of the Areola, of Sir Astley Cooper — furnish an unctuous fluid for defending the nipple from the action of the saliva of the sucking infant. In the midst of the aureola is the nipple, a conoidal eminence, of a rosy tint, susceptible of erection, and at the surface of which the galactophorous ducts open. Besides the skin covering them, the breasts are, also, composed of a layer of fatty areolar tissue, more or less thick; of a large gland; excretory ducts; vessels, nerves, &c. See Mammary.

The breasts are called the bosom, sinus, (F.) Sein. Mamma also means a nurse.

MAMMAL, plural Mamma'lia, Mam'mifer, mammif'erous animal; from mamma, 'a breast.' An animal that suckles its young.

MAM'MARY, Mamma'rius, from mamma, 'the breast.' Relating to the breasts.

MAMMARY ABSCESS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MAMMARY ARTERIES are three in number. They are distinguished into — 1. The Internal Mammary, Arte'ria sterna'lis, A. Sous-sternal (Ch.), Internal thorac''ic. It arises from the subclavian, and descends obliquely inwards, from its origin to the cartilage of the third rib. Below the diaphragm it divides into two branches; the one external, the other internal. From its origin until its bifurcation, it gives branches to the muscles and glands of the neck, to the thymus, mediastinum, pericardium, and œsophagus. In each intercostal space, it gives off internal and external musculo-cutaneous branches, and also, on each side, the superior diaphragmatic. Its two ultimate branches are distributed on the parietes of the abdomen, and anastomose with the external mammary, intercostal, lumbar, circumflexa ilii, and epigastric arteries. 2. The External Mammary Arteries are two in number, and are distinguished into superior and inferior. The superior external mammary, First of the thoracica

(Ch.,) Superior external thoracic, Superior thoracic, is furnished by the axillary artery. It descends obliquely forwards between the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, to which it is distributed by a considerable number of branches. The inferior external mammary, the second of the thoracics (Ch.,) Long or inferior thoracic, arises from the axillary artery, a little below the preceding. It descends vertically over the lateral part of the thorax; curves, afterwards, inwards; becomes subcutaneous and divides into a number of branches, which surround the breast. It gives branches to the pectoralis major, serratus major anticus, the intercostal muscles, the glands of the axilla, and the integuments of the breast.

Mammary Gland is the secretory organ of the milk. It is situate in the substance of the breast, to which it gives shape and size. The tissue of this gland results from the assemblage of lobes of different size, united intimately by a dense areolar tissue. Each of these is composed of several lobules, formed of round granulations, of a rosy white colour, and of the size of a poppy seed. The glandular grains give rise to the radicles of the excretory canals of the mamma, which are called galactophorous or lactiferous. These excretory vessels unite in ramusculi, rami, and in trunks of greater or less size; collect towards the centre of the gland; are tortuous, very extensible and semi-transparent. All terminate in sinuses, situate near the base of the nipple, which are commonly from 15 to 18 in number. These sinuses are very short, conical, and united by areolar tissue. From their summits, a fasciculus of new ducts sets out, which occupy the centre of the nipple and open separately at its surface. The arteries of the mammary gland come from the thoracic, axillary, intercostal, and internal mammary. The veins accompany the arteries; the nerves are furnished by the intercostals, and brachial plexus; the lymphatic vessels are very numerous, and form two layers. They communicate with those of the thorax, and pass into the axillary ganglions.

Mam'mary Sarco'ma, Mastoid sarcoma of Abernethy, Emphy'ma sarcoma mamma'rum. A tumour, of the colour and texture of the mammary gland; dense and whitish; sometimes softer and brownish; often producing, on extirpation, a malignant ulcer with indurated edges. Found in various parts of the body and limbs.

Mammary Veins follow the same course as the arteries, and have received the same denominations. The internal mammary vein, of the right side, opens into the superior cava; that of the left, into the corresponding subclavian vein. The external mammary veins open into the axillary vein.

MAMME'A AMERICA'NA. The systematic name of the tree on which the mammee fruit grows. This fruit has a delightful flavour when ripe; and is much cultivated in Jamaica, where it is generally sold in the markets as one of the best fruits of the island.

MAMMEA'TA, Mammo'sa, from mamma, 'the breast.' One who has large breasts.

MAMMELLA, Nipple.

MAMMIFER, Mammal.

MAMMIFEROUS ANIMAL, Mammal.

MAMMIFORM, Mastoid.

MAMMILLA, Mamma (male,) Nipple.

MAMMILLÆ MEDULLARES, see Mammillary.

MAMMILLARIS, Mastoid.

MAM'MILLARY, Mammilla'ris, from Mammilla, 'a small breast, a nipple.' See Mastoid.

Mammillary Em'inence is a name given, 1. To more or less marked prominences on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, which correspond to the anfractuosities of the cranium. 2. To white, round, medullary tubercles, of the size of a pea, situate at the base of the brain, behind the gray substance from which the Tige pituitaire, of the French anatomists, arises. These Mammillary Tubercles, Cor'pora albican'tia, C. Candican'tia, C. Mammilla'ria, C. Pisifor'mia, Bulbi for'nicis, Mammillæ medulla'res, Prominentiæ albican'tes, Proces'sus mammilla'res cer'ebri, Protensio'nes glandula'res, Eminen'tiæ candican'tes, Prio'rum crurum for'nicis bulbi, Willis's Glands, (F.) Bulbes de la voûte à trois piliers, Tubercles pisiformes (Ch.), are united to each other by a small grayish band, which corresponds with the third ventricle. They receive the anterior prolongations of the fornix. Some ancient anatomists, taking the nervous trunks, to which Willis first gave the name of olfactory nerves, for simple appendages of the brain, called them, on account of their shape, Carun'culæ mammilla'res. Vesalius, Fallopius, Columbus, and several others, termed them Proces'sus mammilla'res cer'ebri ad nares.

MAM'MILLATED, (F.) Mamelonné, from mamma, 'the female breast.' That which has mammiform projections on its surface.

Mammillated Liver, Cirrhosis.

MAMMOSA, Mammeata.

MAMOE, Mamei.

MAN, Aner, Anthropos, Homo.

MAN-IN-THE-GROUND, Convolvulus panduratus.

MANCHE D'HIPPOCRATE, Chausse.

MANCURANA, Origanum.

MANDIBULA, Maxillary bone.

MANDIBULARIS MUSCULUS, Masseter.

MANDO, Glutton.

MANDRAGORA, Atropa mandragora — m. Acaulis, Atropa mandragora — m. Officinalis, Atropa mandragora — m. Vernalis, Atropa mandragora.

MANDRAGORI'TES, from μανδραγορα, the At'ropa mandrag'ora or mandrake. Wine in which the roots of mandrake have been infused.

MANDRAKE, Atropa mandragora, Podophyllum peltatum, P. montanum.

MANDUCATIO, Mastication — m. Difficilis, Bradymasesis.

MAN'DUCATORY, Manducato'rius; from Manducatio, 'mastication.' Appertaining or relating to mastication; — as,

Manducatory Nerve, see Trigemini.

MANGANESE, BLACK OXIDE OF, Mangane'sii ox'idum, M. Binox'idum, Tetrox'ide of manganese, Magne'sia nigra, Mangane'sium vitrario'rum, M. oxyda'tum nati'vum seu nigrum, Mangane'sium ochra'ceum nigrum, M. oxyda'tum nati'vum, Man'ganum oxyda'tum nativum, Molybdœ'num magne'sii, Oxo'des man'gani nati'va, Perox'ydum mangane'sii nigrum nativum, Superox'ydum mangan'icum, (F.) Oxyde noir de manganèse. This oxide is not much used in medicine. It has been advised to dust the affected parts, in tinea capitis, with the powder.

Manganese, Salts of, see Manganese, sulphate of.

MANGANÈSE, OXYDE NOIR DE, Manganese, black oxide of.

Man'ganese, Sulphate of, Mangane'sii Sulphas, M. Protox'idi Sulphas, Sulphate of Protox'ide of Man'ganese. A rose-coloured and very soluble salt, isomorphous with sulphate of magnesia. It is prepared on a large scale for the use of the dyer, by heating, in a close vessel, peroxide of manganese and coal, and dissolving the im pure protoxide thus obtained in sulphuric acid, with the addition of a little chlorohydric acid towards the end of the process. The solution is evaporated to dryness, and again exposed to a red heat, by which the persulphate of iron is decomposed. Water then dissolves the pure sulphate of manganese, leaving the oxide of iron behind.

This salt has been recommended as a cholagogue, in doses of a drachm or two.

The salts of manganese have been recommended in chlorosis and amenorrhœa, and as substitutes for chalybeates generally. The subcarbonate and the oxide have been chiefly employed.

MANGANESE, TETROXIDE OF, M. Black oxide of.

MANGANESII BINOXIDUM, Manganese, black oxide of — m. Oxidum, Manganese, black oxide of—m. Peroxydum nigrum nativum, Manganese, black oxide of — m. Protoxidi sulphas, Manganese, sulphate of—m. Sulphas, Manganese, sulphate of.

MANGANESIUM OCHRACEUM NIGRUM, Manganese, black oxide of — m. Oxydatum nativum seu nigrum, Manganese, black oxide of—m. Vitrariorum, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGANI OXODES NATIVA, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGANICUM SUPEROXIDUM, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGANUM OXYDATUM NATIVUM, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGE, Scabies ferina.

MANGIF'ERA IN'DICA, M. domes'tica. The Mango tree, (F.) Manguier. A tree cultivated over Asia, and in South America. Mangos, when ripe, are juicy, of a good flavour, and so fragrant as to perfume the air to a considerable distance. They are eaten, either raw or preserved with sugar. From the expressed juice a wine is prepared; and the remainder of the kernel can be reduced to an excellent flour for bread.

MANGO TREE, Mangifera Indica.

MANGONISATIO, Falsification.

MANGONIUM, Falsification.

MANGOSTAN, Garcinia mangostana.

MANGOSTANA, Garcinia mangostana — m. Cambogia, Garcinia cambogia—m. Garcinia, Garcinia mangostana.

MANGOUSTAN, Garcinia mangostana.

MANGUIER, Mangifera Indica.

MANHOOD, Adult age.

MANI, Arachis hypogæa.

MA'NIA, Furor, Hemianthro'pia, Furor mania, Insa'nia, Delir'ium mani'acum, Ecphro'nia mania, Delir'ium mania, D. furio'sum, Mania universa'lis, Vesa'nia mania, (F.) Manie, Hyperphrénie, Raving or furious madness; from μαίνομαι, 'I am furious.' With some, it means insanity. Disorder of the intellect, in which there is erroneous judgment or hallucination, which impels to acts of fury. If the raving be not directed to a single object, it is mania properly so called; if to one object, it constitutes monomania, which term is, however, usually given to melancholy. Mania attacks adults chiefly; and women more frequently than men. The prognosis is unfavourable. About one-third never recover; and they who do are apt to relapse. Separation is one of the most effective means of treatment, with attention to the corporeal condition and every thing that can add to the mental comfort of the patient, and turn his thoughts away from the subjects of his delusion. In the violence of the paroxysms, recourse must be had to the strait waistcoat, the shower bath, &c. Separation should be continued for some weeks during convalescence, with the view of preventing a relapse.

MANIA, DANCING. Dancing plague. A form of convulsion, which has appeared, at various times, epidemically under the form of St. Vitus's dance, St. John's dance, Tarantism, Hysteria, Tigretier (in Abyssinia), and diseased sympathy; and which has been fully described by Hecker in his 'Epidemics of the Middle Ages.' See Convulsionnaire.

A form of convulsion, induced by religious phrenzy, has been vulgarly called the Jerks.

MANIA EPILEPTICA, see Epilepsy—m. Erotica, Erotomania — m. Lactea, M. puerperal — m. Melancholica, Melancholy—m. a Pathemate, Empathema—m. a Potû, Delirium tremens.

MANIA, PUER'PERAL, Ma'nia puerpera'rum acu'ta, M. puerpera'lis, M. lac'tea, Insa'nia puerpera'rum, Encephalopathi'a puerpera'lis, Puerperal Insanity. Mania which supervenes in the childbed state.

MANIA PURPERARUM ACUTA, M. puerperal — m. sine Delirio, Pathomania — m. a Temulentiâ, Delirium tremens—m. Pellagria, Pellagra.

MANIACAL, Maniodes.

MANIACUS, Maniodes.

MANICA HIPPOCRATIS, Chausse.

MANIE, Mania—m. sans Délire, Empathema.

MANIGUETTA, Amomum grana paradisi.

MANIIBAR, Jatropha manihot.

MANILU'VIUM, Manulu'vium, from manus, 'the hand,' and 'lavo, 'I wash.' A bath for the hands. It may be rendered stimulating, by means of muriatic acid, mustard, &c.

MANIOC, Jatropha manihot.

MANIO'DES, Mani'acus, Mani'acal. One labouring under mania; Hemianthro'pus, Furio'sus, Furibun'dus, Lyssas, Lysse'ter.

MANIPULA'TION, from manus, 'a hand.' Mode of working in the arts.

MANIP'ULUS, (F.) Poignée. The quantity of a substance capable of filling the hand. A handful. See Fasciculus.

MAN-MIDWIFE, Accoucheur.

MANNA, see Fraxinus ornus — m. Briançon, see Pinus larix—m. Brigantina, see Pinus larix—m. Calabrina, see Fraxinus ornus—m. Croup, Semolina — m. Laricea, see Pinus larix — m. Metallorum, Hydrargyri submurias.

MANNEKIN, Fantom.

MANNIN, see Fraxinus ornus.

MANNITE, see Fraxinus ornus.

MANŒUVRE (F.), pronounced manew'ver; from main, 'the hand,' and œuvre, 'work.' A dexterous movement. Applied in France to the practice of surgical or obstetrical operations on the dead body or phantom; Opera'tio chirur'gica vel obstet'rica.

MANSANA ARBOREA, see Jujube.

MANSFORD'S PLATES, see Galvanism.

MANSORIUS, Buccinator.

MANSTUPRATIO, Masturbation.

MANTELE, Bandage (body).

MANTI'A, Man'tica, Man'ticē, in English, mancy; a common suffix, denoting 'divination;' Divina'tio, Prædivinatio, Præsa'gium.

MANTILE, Bandage (body).

MANTLE, Panniculus carnosus.

MANU'BRIUM, from manus, 'a hand.' The handle of any thing: — as manu'brium mal'lei, petiolus mal'lei, 'the handle of the malleus.'

MANUBRIUM, Chasse—m. Manûs, Radius.

MANUBRIUM STERNI. The uppermost broad part of the sternum.

MANULUVIUM, Bath, hand, Manilnvium.

MANUS, Cheir, Chir, Instrumentum Instrumentorum, Hand, Paw, (F.) Main. The part which terminates the upper extremity in man, and which is inservient to prehension and touch. It extends from the fold of the wrist to the extremity of the fingers. The hand is sustained by a bony skeleton, composed of a number of pieces, movable on each other; of muscles, tendons, cartilages, ligaments, vessels, nerves, &c. It is divided into three parts — the carpus or wrist, the metacarpus, and fingers. Its concave surface is called the palm; the convex surface the back of the hand. The facility of being able to oppose the thumb to the fingers in order to seize objects forms one of the distinctive characters of the human hand.

MANUS CHRISTI PERLA'TA. A name anciently given to troches, prepared of pearls and sugar of roses. They were called Manus Christi simplices, when pearls were not employed.

MANUS DEI. An ancient plaster, prepared of wax, myrrh, frankincense, mastich, gum ammoniac, galbanum, oil, &c. See Opium.

MANUS HEPATIS, Porta vena—m. Jecoris, Porta vena—m. Parva majori adjutrix, see Digitus.

MANUSTUPRATIO, Masturbation.

MANUSTUPRATOR, Masturbator.

MANYPLIES, Omasum.

MAPLE, Acer saccharinum—m. Ground, Heuchera cortusa.

MARAIS, Marsh.

MARANTA ARUNDINACEA, Arrow-root.

MARAN'TA GALAN'GA, Alpi'nia galan'ga, Amo'mum galanga, Galanga. The smaller galan'gal. Two kinds of galangal are mentioned in the pharmacopœias; the greater, obtained from Kæmpferia galanga, and the smaller, from the root of Maranta galanga. The dried root is brought from China, in pieces, from one to two inches in length, but scarcely half as thick; branched; full of knots and joints, with several circular rings, of a reddish brown colour, on the outside, and brownish within. It was formerly much used as a warm stomachic bitter, and generally ordered in bitter infusions.

MARASCHINO, see Spirit.

MARASMOP'YRA, Febris marasmo'des, from μαρασμος, 'marasmus,' and πυρ, 'fever.' Fever of emaciation in general. Hectic fever.

MARASMUS, Atrophy — m. Lactantium, Pædatrophia—m. Phthisis, Phthisis pulmonalis.

MARASMUS SENI'LIS, Tabes senum, Gerontatroph'ia. Progressive atrophy of the aged.

MARASMUS TABES, Tabes — m. Tabes dorsalis, Tabes dorsalis.

MARATHRI'TES, from μαραθρον, 'fennel.' Wine impregnated with fennel.

MARATHROPHYLLUM, Peucedanum.

MARAUGIA, Metamorphopsia.

MARBLE, Marmor.

MARBRE, Marmor.

MARC, Magma.

MARCASITA, Bismuth — m. Alba, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Plumbea, Antimonium.

MARCASITÆ MAGISTERIUM, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

MARCHAN'TIA POLYMOR'PHA, M. stella'ta seu umbella'ta, Hepat'ica fonta'na, Lichen stella'tus, Jecora'ria, Liv'erwort, (F.) Hépatique des fontaines. This plant is mildly pungent and bitter. It is recommended as aperient, resolvent, and antiscorbutic; and is used in diseased liver, &c.

MARCHE LA, Walking.

MARCHIO'NIS PULVIS, Powder of the Marquis. A powder, formerly considered to be antiepileptic; and composed of Male pœony root, Mistletoe, Ivory shavings, Horn of the hoof of the stag, Spodium, Tooth of the monodon, coral, &c.

MARCORES, Atrophy, Emaciation.

MARCORY, Stillingia.

MARÉCAGEUX, Elodes.

MAREO, Puna.

MARE'S TAIL, Hippuris vulgaris.

MARGA CAN'DIDA, Lac lunæ. An ancient name for a variety of spongy, white, friable mari, which was employed as an astringent and refrigerant.

MARGARETIZZA, Scherlievo.

MARGARITA, Pearl.

MARGARITA'CEOUS, Margarita'ceus, Nacreous, (F.) Nacré; from Margarita, 'pearl, mother of pearl.' Resembling, or of the nature of, mother of pearl, — as Leuco'ma Margarita'ceum; Pearl-like leucoma.

MARGARON, Pearl.

MARGELIS, Pearl.

MARGELLIUM, Pearl.

MARGINI-SUS-SCAPULO-TROCHITERIEN, Teres minor.

MARGO, Bord—m. Dentatus, see Retina — m. Orbitalis, see Orbit.

MARGUERITE PETITE, Bellis — m. des Près, grande, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

MARIENBAD, MINERAL WATERS OF. Celebrated springs in Bohemia. The Kreuzbrunn contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid.

MARIGOLD, DIAMOND FIG, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum — m. Garden, Calendula officinalis — m. Single, Calendula officinalis — m. Wild, Calendula arvensis.

MARIOTTE, EXPERIMENT OF. A celebrated experiment of the Abbé Mariotte, which consists in placing two small round spots on a wall at some distance from each other, standing opposite the left-hand object, and looking at it with the right eye, the left being closed. By walking backwards, until the distance from the object is about five times as great as the distance between the two objects, the latter will be found to disappear. Mariotte and, after him, many ophthalmologists, inferred that the optic nerve, on which the ray doubtless falls in this experiment, is insensible; and hence that the choroid may be the seat of vision,—not the retina. The inference is illogical; for it doubtless falls on the part of the optic nerve where the central artery enters, and the central vein leaves the eyeball, and where there is necessarily no neurine.

MARIS, μαρις. Ancient name of a measure, containing 83 pints and 4 ounces.

MARISCA, Ficus, Hæmorrhois.

MARJOLAINE, Origanum majorana.

MARJORAM, COMMON, Origanum majorana—m. Wild, Origanum—m. Sweet, Origanum majorana.

MARJORANA, Origanum majorana—m. Mancurana, Origanum.

MARMALADE, Marmelade.

MARMARYGE, see Metamorphopsia.

MARMARYGO'DES, 'brilliant.' An epithet, joined particularly to the word οφθαλμος, to indicate a brilliant eye, a flashing eye. An eye which transmits the image of imaginary objects. See Metamorphopsia.

MAR'MELADE, Marmela'da, Marmela'ta, Marmalade, Miva. Parts of vegetables, confected with sugar, and reduced to a pultaceous consistence.

MARMELADE OF APRICOTS. A marmelade, prepared with two parts of ripe apricots deprived of their stones, and one part of white sugar.

MARMELADE OF FERNEL, M. of Tronchin.

MARMELADE OF TRONCHIN, or OF FERNEL. A kind of thick looch, of an agreeable taste, prepared with two ounces of oil of sweet almonds, as much syrup of violets, manna in tears, very fresh pulp of cassia, 16 grains of gum tragacanth, and two drachms of orange flower water. It is used as a laxative, demulcent, and pectoral.

MARMELATA, Marmelade.

MARMOR, Marble, Calcis Car'bonas durus, (F.) Marbre. White granular carbonate of lime. Used in pharmacy for the preparation of a pure lime, and the disengagement of carbonic acid.

MARMORATA AURIUM, Cerumen.

MARMORYGE, see Metamorphopsia—m. Hippocratis, Hemiopia.

MAROUTE, Anthemis cotula.

MAR'RIOTT, DRY VOMIT OF. This once celebrated emetic, called dry, from its being exhibited without drink, consisted of equal portions of tartarized antimony and sulphate of copper.

MARRONIER D'INDE, Æsculus Hippocastanum.

MARROW, My'elos, Medul'la, M. ossium, Med'ullary Juice, Axun'gia de Mum'ia, Sax. mepz, (F.) Moëlle, Suc médullaire. The oily, inflammable, whitish or yellowish juice, which fills the medullary canal of the long bones, the cancellated structure at the extremities of those bones, the diploë of flat bones, and the interior of short bones. The marrow is furnished by the exhalation of the medullary membrane. It is fluid during life, and appears under the form of small points or brilliant grains after death. It is enveloped in the medullary membrane.

MARROW, SPINAL, Medulla spinalis — m. Vertebral, Medulla spinalis.

MARRUBE BLANC, Marrubium — m. Noir, Ballota fœtida.

MARRU'BIUM, Marrubium vulga'rē seu album seu German'icum seu apulum, Pra'sium, Phrasum, Horehound, (F.) Marrube blanc. The leaves have a moderately strong, aromatic smell; and a very bitter, penetrating, diffusive, and durable taste. It has often been given in coughs and asthmas, united with sugar. Dose, ʒss to ʒj, in infusion; dose of extract, gr. x to ʒss.

FORD'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND, is made as follows: — horehound, liquorice root, āā ℔iij and ʒviij; water, q. s. to strain ℔vj. Infuse. To the strained liquor add: — proof spirit or brandy, ℔12; camphor, ʒj and ʒij; opium and benjamin, āā ʒj; dried squills, ʒij; oil of aniseed, ʒj; honey, ℔iij and ʒviij.—Gray. It is pectoral.

MARRUBIUM, Leonurus cardiaca — m. Album, Marrubium—m. Apulum, Marrubium — m. Germanicum, Marrubium — m. Nigrum, Ballota fœtida—m. Vulgare, Marrubium.

MARS, Ferrum—m. Solubilis, Ferrum tartarizatum.

MARSEILLES, (CLIMATE OF.) The remarks made upon the climate of Montpelier apply even in greater force to that of Marseilles. It possesses all the objectionable qualities of the climate of southeastern France.

MARSH, Limnē, Helos, Palus, Sax. mepp, (F.) Marais. Marshy districts give off emanations, which are the fruitful source of disease and the cause of great insalubrity in many countries. The chief disease, occasioned by the malaria or miasm, is intermittent fever. Hence it becomes important to drain such regions, if practicable. Some marshy countries are not so liable to phthisis pulmonalis, and it has been found, that where intermittents have been got rid of by draining, consumption has, at times, become frequent. The most unhealthy periods for residence in a marshy district are during the existence of the summer and autumnal heats; at which times the water becomes evaporated, and the marshy bottom is more or less exposed to the sun's rays. This postulatum seems necessary for the production of the miasmata: for whilst the marsh is well covered with water, no miasm is given off.

MARSH POISON, Miasm (marsh) — m. Mallow, Althæa — m. Root, Statice Caroliniana—m. Tea, Ledum palustre.

MARSHALL'S CERATE, see Cerate, Marshall's.

MARSHY, Elodes.

MARSIPIUM, Marsupion.

MARSUM, Mar'sium, Mar'sicum. An ancient wine of Marsia, in Italy, which was used as an astringent in certain diseases of the mouth.

MARSUPIAL, see Marsupion.

MARSUPIALIS, Ischio-trochanterianus, Obturator internus.

MARSUPIATE, see Marsupion.

MARSU'PION, Marsyp'ion, Marsip'pon, Marsu'pium, Marsip'ium, Sac'culus. A sac or bag, with which any part is fomented. Also, the abdominal pouch in the kangaroo, opossum, &c., into which the young, born at a very early stage of development, are received and nourished with milk secreted from glands which open into the pouches. Such animals are termed Marsu'pial, Marsu'piate, Marsupia'lia. See Generation.

MARSUPIUM, Scrotum — m. Musculosum, Dartos.

MARSYPION, Marsupion.

MARTEAU, Malleus.

MARTIAL, Chalybeate.

MARTIALIS, Chalybeate.

MARTIANA POMA, see Citrus aurantium.

MARTIA'TUM UNGUEN'TUM, (F.) Onguent de Soldat, Soldier's ointment. This was composed of bay berries, rue, marjoram, mint, sage, wormwood, basil, olive oil, yellow wax, and Malaga wine. It was invented by Martian; and was employed by soldiers as a preservative against cold.

MARTIS LIMATURA, Ferri limatura.

MARUM CORTUSI, Teucrium marum — m Creticum, Teucrium marum—m. Syriacum, Teucrium marum — m. Verum, Teucrium marum — m. Vulgare, Thymus mastichina.

MAS, Male, Modiolus.

MASCARPIO, Masturbator.

MASCHALE, Axilla.

MASCHALLÆUS, Axillary.

MASCHALIATRI'A, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and ιατρεια, 'healing.' Treatment of disease by applications made to the axilla.

MASCHALIS, Axilla.

MASCHALISTER, Axis.

MASCHALON'CUS, Maschalopa'nus, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumour or bubo or swelling in the axilla.

MASCHALOPANUS, Maschaloncus.

MASCULA, Tribade.

MASCULUS, Male.

MASESIS, Mastication.

MASHUA, (S.) A tuberous root, of a flat, pyramidal shape, which is cultivated and cooked like the potato by the Serranos of Peru. It is watery and insipid, but nevertheless is much eaten by them. The Indians use the mashua as a medicine in dropsy, dyspepsia, and dysentery. The plant is unknown to botanists. — Tschudi.

MASK, Larva, (F.) Masque. A bandage applied over the face, as a sort of mask, in cases of burns, scalds, or erysipelas. It serves to preserve the parts from the contact of air, and to retain topical applications in situ. It is made of a piece of linen, of the size of the face, in which apertures are made corresponding to the eyes, nose, and mouth, and which is fixed by means of strings stitched to the four angles.

MASLACH, Moslich, Am'phion, An'fion. A medicine much used by the Turks, and into the composition of which opium enters. It is excitant.

MASQUE, Mask.

MASS, μαζα, Maza, Massa, from μασσω, 'I mix.' The compound, from which pills have to be formed.

MASSA, Mass — m. Carnea Jacobi Sylvii, see Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans — m. de Dactylis, Paste, date — m. de Extracto glycyrrhizæ, Pasta glycyrrhizæ, &c. — m. de Gummi Arabico, Paste, marshmallow — m. de Zizyphorum fructu, Paste of jujubes.

MASSAGE, Shampooing.

MASSE D'EAU, Typha latifolia.

MASSEMA, Mastication.

MASSEMENT, Shampooing.

MASSES APOPHYSAIRES, see Vertebræ.

MASSESIS, Mastication.

MASSE'TER, from μασαομαι, 'I eat,' 'I chew.' Mus'culus mandibula'ris, (F.) Zygomato-maxillaire. A muscle situate at the posterior part of the cheek, and lying upon the ramus of the lower jaw-bone. It is long, quadrilateral, and is attached, above, to the inferior edge and to the inner surface of the zygomatic arch; below, it terminates at the angle of the jaw, and at the outer surface and inferior margin of the ramus of that bone. It is composed of an intermixture of fleshy and aponeurotic fibres. Its office is to raise the lower jaw, and to act in mastication.

MASSETER INTERNUS, Pterygoideus internus.

MASSETER'IC, Mas'seterine, Masseter'icus, Masseteri'nus. Relating or belonging to the masseter muscle.

MASSETERINE ARTERY arises from the trunk of the internal maxillary or temporalis profunda posterior, and is distributed to the masseter muscle, after having passed, horizontally, through the sigmoid notch of the lower jaw-bone.

MASSETERINE NERVE is given off from the inferior maxillary branch of the fifth pair. It passes through the sigmoid notch, and is distributed on the inner surface of the masseter. In luxation of the lower jaw, this nerve is strongly stretched, and considerable pain, consequently, produced.

MASSETERINE VEIN has the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal maxillary vein.

MASSETERINUS, Masseteric.

MASSETTE, Typha latifolia.

MASSICOT, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

MASSING, Shampooing.

MASSULA, Molecule.

MASTADENITIS, Mastitis.

MASTALGIA, Mastodynia.

MASTAX, Mystax.

MASTEMA, Masticatory.

MASTER OF THE WOODS, Galium circæzans.

MASTERWORT, Angelica atropurpurea, Heracleum lanatum, Imperatoria.

MASTESIS, Mastication.

MASTHELCOSIS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTHOS, Mamma.

MASTICA'TION, Mastica'tio, Mase'sis, Masse'sis, Masse'ma, Maste'sis, Manduca'tio, Commanduca'tio, Manduca'tion, from μαστιχαω, 'I chew.' The action of chewing or bruising food, to prepare it for the digestion it has to undergo in the stomach. This is executed by the joint action of the tongue, cheeks, and lips, which push the alimentary substance between the teeth; and by the motions of the lower jaw it is cut, torn, or bruised.

MAS'TICATORY, Masticato'rium, Maste'ma, Diamaste'ma. Same etymon. Chewing. Relating or appertaining to mastication or chewing. Also, a substance, chewed with the intention of exciting the secretion of saliva.

MASTICATORY NERVE, see Trigemini.

MASTICH, see Pistacia lentiscus — m. Herb, common, Thymus mastichina — m. Herb, Syrian, Teucrium marum — m. Tree, Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHINA GALLORUM, Thymus mastichina.

MASTIGODES HOMINIS, Trichocephalus.

MASTIGO'SIS, Flagella'tio. Flagellation, scourging; employed by the ancients as a remedy in many diseases.

MASTI'TIS, Mastoï'tis, Mazoi'tis, Inflamma'tio Mammæ, Mastadeni'tis, (F.) Inflammation des Mamelles, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the breast. Inflammation of the mammary gland of the pregnant or parturient female is vulgarly called a wccd, and a weed in the breast.

MASTITIS APOSTEMATOSA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTITIS PUERPERA'LIS. Inflammation of the mamma in the childbed woman.

MASTIX, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTODES, Mastoid.

MASTODYN'IA, Mastal'gia, Mazodyn'ia, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain in the breasts; a form of neuralgia. See Neuralgia mammæ.

MASTODYN'IA APOSTEMATO'SA, Phleg'monē Mammæ, Masthelco'sis, Masti'tis apostemato'sa, Galactaposte'ma, Galactomastoparecto'ma, Absces'sus Mammæ, A. lacteus, Phlcg'monē Mastodyn'ia, Abscess of the Breast, Mam'mary Abscess, Milk-abscess. Phlegmonous inflammation of the breasts, running on to suppuration, generally in the childbed female. It is one of the best examples of acute phlegmonous inflammation, and requires the active use of appropriate treatment.

MASTODYNIA POLYGALA, Sparganosis — m. Polygala, Mastospargosis.

MASTOID, Mastoï'des, Masto'des, Mastoïdeus, Mammilla'ris, Papil'li-au-tmammilli-formis, Mammiform'is, Mam'miform, from μαστος, 'a breast,' and ειδος, 'form, resemblance.' Having the form of a nipple. Also, that which relates to the mastoid process, Mastoï'deus.

MASTOID APERTURE:—the opening of communication between the cavity of the tympanum and the mastoid cells.

MASTOID CELLS, Antrum mastoï'deum, Mastoid Sinuses. These are situate in the mastoid process; communicate with each other, and open into the cavity of the tympanum. Their use seems to be to increase the intensity of sound.

MASTOID FORAMEN is situate behind the mastoid process, and gives passage to a small artery of the dura mater, as well as to a vein which opens into the lateral sinus.

MASTOID FOSSA, (F.) Gouttière mastoïdienne, is a depression at the inner surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which forms part of the lateral sinus.

MASTOID OR DIGASTRIC GROOVE, (F.) Rainure mastoïdienne ou digastrique, is a groove, situate at the inner side of the mastoid process, which affords attachment to the posterior belly of the digastric muscle.

MASTOID MUSCLE, POSTERIOR, Splenius.

MASTOID OR MAM'MIFORM OR MAM'MILLARY PROCESS, Pars mastoïdea, is situate at the inferior and posterior part of the temporal bone, and gives attachment to the digastric and mastoid muscles.

MASTOIDEUS, Sterno-cleido-mastoideus — m. Lateralis, Complexus minor.

MASTOÏDO-CONCHINIEN, Retrahens auris—m. Génien, Digastricus—m. Hyogénien, Digastricus—m. Oriculaire, Retrahens auris.

MASTON'CUS, Thelon'cus, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumefaction of the nipple, or of the breast itself.

MASTONCUS POLYGALACTICUS, Mastospargosis.

MASTOPATHI'A, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and παθος, 'disease.' An affection of the breast.

MASTORRHAG''IA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and ρηγνυμι, 'to flow.' An unusual flow of milk.

MASTOS, Mamma.

MASTOSPARGO'SIS, Mastodyn'ia polyg'ala, Maston'cus polygalac'ticus, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and σπαργαω, 'I am full to bursting.' Fulness of the breasts with milk, so that they are ready to burst.

MASTRUPATIO, Masturbation.

MASTURBA'TION, Cinæ'dia, Gar'galē, Gar'galus, Gargalis'mus, Mastupra'tio, Manustupra'tio, Manstupra'tio, from manus, 'the hand,' and stupro, 'I ravish;' Ona'nia, On'anism, Ædœogargaris'mus, Ædœogar'galus, Anaplas'mus, Gau'dia fœda, Duct'io præpu'tii, Vol'untary Pollu'tion, Self Pollution, Self-abuse, (F.) Abus de soi-même, Attouchement. Excitement of the genital organs by the hand.

MASTURBA'TOR, Mastupra'tor, Manustupra'tor, Mascar'pio: same etymon. One given to masturbation.

MASTUS, Mamma.

MAT, (F.) Dull.

MAT SON, (F.) A dull sound. The obscure noise, afforded in certain diseases when any part, as the chest, is percussed. It has been compared to that produced when the thigh is struck. It is opposed to the Son clair, or 'clear sound.'

MATE, see Ilex Paraguensis.

MATER. Uterus—m. Dura, Dura mater—m. Herbarum, Artemisia vulgaris—m. Metallorum, Hydrargyrum—m. Mollis, Pia mater—m. Perlarum, see Pearl—m. Pia, Pia mater—m. Secalis, Ergot—m. Tenuis, Pia mater.

MATERIA, Matter—m. Fibrosa, Fibrin.

MATE'RIA MED'ICA, Pharmacolog''ia, Pharmacol'ogy, Acol'ogy or Akol'ogy or Aceolog''ia, Hylē Iatricē, Iamatolog''ia, Iamatol'ogy, (F.) Matière Médicale. The division of medical science which treats of the knowledge of medicines; their action on the animal economy, and mode of administration. The study of the Materia Medica is one of great importance;—it is a study of the tools with which the practitioner has to work in the cure of disease. Much labour has been spent in contriving classifications of the Materia Medica. Some have arranged the articles according to their natural resemblances; others, according to their real or presumed virtues: others, according to their active constituent principles. The Pharmacopœias place them alphabetically. Perhaps the best classification would be one founded on the agency exerted by the articles on the different tissues; but this arrangement, in the present state of science, is by no means easy; and, moreover, ideas in regard to the action of medicines are so associated with certain terms,—as narcotics, tonics, sedatives, &c., employed to denote certain operations, which they are esteemed capable of producing, that, to abandon them, would be to throw obstacles in the way of the student, without the ultimate advantage accruing to him of possessing a better knowledge of the modus operandi of medicines than when a classification, somewhat resembling those usually embraced, is adopted.

The following is the classification adopted by the Author, in his "General Therapeutics and Materia Medica," 4th edit., Philad., 1850:—

|---|---|
| 1. Agents that affect prominently the alimentary canal or its contents, | Emetics, Cathartics, Anthelmintics. |
| 2. Agents that affect prominently the respiratory organs, | Expectorants. |
| 3. Agents that affect prominently the follicular or glandular organs, | Errhines, Sialogogues, Diuretics, Antilithics, Diaphoretics. |
| 4. Agents that affect prominently the nervous system, | Narcotics, Tetanics, Antispasmodics. |
| 5. Agents that affect prominently the organs of reproduction, | Emmenagogues, Parturifacients. |
| 6. Agents that affect various organs, | Excitants, Tonics, Astringents, Sedatives, Refrigerants, Revellents, Eutrophics. |
| 7. Agents whose action is prominently chemical, | Antacids, Antalkalics, Disinfectants. |
| 8. Agents whose action is prominently mechanical, | Demulcents, Diluents. |

Of old, the Materia Medica consisted of more articles than at present. The tendency, indeed, is, and must be, to diminish it still further; to get rid of those articles which possess no advantages over others equally common, or whose properties are doubtful. In a dictionary, it becomes necessary to insert all that have been reputed to possess virtues; but the majority are unnecessary. The catalogue might be largely reduced, with impunity.

MATERIA MEDICA, DYNAMICAL, Pharmacodynamics.

MATERIA MORBO'SA, M. Peccans, Mate'ries Morbi. Morbid matter. The matter or material which is the cause of disease.

MATERIA OSSEA, Terra Ossea—m. Peccans, M. Morbosa—m. Salina, see Saliva—m. Testacea dentium, see Tooth—m. Urinosa, Urea.

MATERIALISTA, Druggist.

MATÉRIAUX IMMÉDIATS, Principles, immediate.

MATERIES, Matter—m. Morbi, Materia morbosa.

MATHEW'S PILLS, Pilulæ ex helleboro et myrrha.

MA'TIAS. The bark of a South American tree, not yet determined. It is used in its native country in intermittents, and as a tonic generally. Its principal characteristic constituent is a bitter resinous matter. It is probably the same as the Malambo bark.

MATI'CO, (pronounced matee'co,) Yerba del Soldado, or Soldier's weed. A South American herb—Piper angustifolium, Artan'thē elonga'ta—which is possessed of astringent virtues, and is used both internally and externally. It is given in infusion made of one ounce of the leaves to a pint of boiling water, of which the dose is f℥iss, or in tincture, made of ℥iiss of the leaves to a pint of dilute alcohol.

MATIÈRE, Matter—m. Cérébriforme, Encephaloid—m. Extractive du Bouillon, Osmazome—m. Médicale, Materia Medica—m. Perlée de Kerkring, Antimonium diaphoreticum—m. Pulmonaire noire, see Pulmo.

MATLOCK, MINERAL WATERS OF. Matlock is a village in Derbyshire, England, at which there is a mineral spring of the acidulous class. Temperature 66°. It differs but little, except in temperature, from good spring-water. It is generally used as a tepid bath.

MATONIA CARDAMOMUM, Amomum cardamomum.

MATORIUM, Ammoniac, gum.

MATRACIUM, Matrass, Urinal.

MATRASS, Matra'cium. A glass vessel with a long neck; and a round, and sometimes oval, body. It may be furnished with tubulures, or not. It is used in Pharmacy for distillation, digestion, &c.

MATRES CEREBRI, Meninges.

MATRICAIRE, Matricaria.

MATRICA'LIS, Matrica'rius, from matrix, 'the uterus.' Relating to the uterus.

Matricalia are remedies for diseases of the uterus.

MATRICA'RIA, from matrix, 'the womb;' so called from its reputed virtues in affections of that organ. Matrica'ria Parthe'nium, Parthe'nium febrif'ugum, Py'rethrum parthe'nium, Chrysanth'emum parthe'nium, Argyrochœ'ta, Chrysoc'alis, Fever-few, Feather-few, Mother-wort, (F.) Matricaire. Nat. Ord. Compositæ. It resembles, in its properties, chamomile and tansy; and, like them, has been esteemed tonic, stomachic, resolvent, emmenagogue, vermifuge, &c. It is not much used.

MATRICARIA, Anthemis nobilis.

MATRICA'RIA CHAMOMIL'LA, M. Suav'eolens, Au'themis vulga'ris, Chamæme'lum Vulga're, Chamomil'la nostras, Leucan'themum of Dioscorides, Wild Corn, Dog's Cham'omile, German Chamomile, (F.) Camomille vulgaire. It resembles Matricaria in properties.

MATRICA'RIA GLABRA'TA. A South African plant, known at the Cape as Wild Chamomile, has the same properties as the other species of matricaria.

MATRICARIA LEUCANTHEMUM, Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum—m. Suaveolens, M. Chamomilla.

MATRICE, Uterus — m. Col de la, Collum uteri.

MATRIC'ULATE, from matricula, diminutive of matrix, 'a roll,' originally 'an army roll or register.' One who is admitted into a university or college, by enrolling or having his name enrolled on the register of the institution. In France, prendre inscription means 'to matriculate;' and, in the university regulations of that country, it is required, that the inscription shall be made every three months, until the termination of the prescribed period of study; the student having to take his inscription within the first fortnight of each trimestre or of every three months, and to present himself within the last fortnight of the trimestre to establish the fact of his attendance.

In this country, it is only necessary to matriculate at the commencement of each session.

One who has thus enrolled himself in an institution is called a Matriculate.

MATRISYLVA, Asperula odorata.

MATRIX, Cytoblastema, Uterus — m. Unguis, see Nail.

MATRONA, Midwife.

MATRONALIS, Viola.

MATTEE, see Ilex Paraguensis.

MATTER, Mate'ria, Hylē, Mate'ries, (F.) Matière. Any substance which enters into the composition of a body. In Medicine, it is sometimes applied to the substance of evacuations; and is also used synonymously with pus.

MATTING OF PARTS, Hapantismus.

MATULA, Urinal.

MATURA'TION, Matura'tio, from maturare, 'to ripen.' Pepas'mos, Pepan'sis. Progression of an abscess towards maturity. The state of maturity. Coction.

MATURATIF, Maturative.

MAT'URATIVE, Matu'rans, Pepanticos, (F.) Maturatif. A medicine which favours the maturation of an inflammatory tumour.

MATURATUS, Concocted.

MATU'RITY, Matu'ritas, Horæ'otes. The state of fruits and seeds, when comparatively developed. State of an abscess, in which the pus is completely formed.

MATURITY, PRECOCIOUS, Præotia.

MAUDLIN, Achillea ageratum — m. Tansey, Achillea ageratum — m. Wort, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

MAUVE SAUVAGE, Malva.

MAUX DE NERFS, Hysteria.

MAXILLA, Maxillary Bone.

MAX'ILLARY, Maxilla'ris, (F.) Maxillaire, from maxilla, 'a jaw.' Relating or belonging to the jaws; from μασσαω, 'I chew.'

MAXILLARY ARTERIES are three in number. 1. External maxillary. See Facial. 2. Internal maxillary — A. Gutturo-maxillaire, (Ch.) This arises from the external carotid with the temporal. It is remarkable for its complex course, and for the number of branches which it transmits to the deep-seated parts of the face. Immediately after its origin, it buries itself under the neck of the lower jaw, curving inwards and downwards. It then advances directly inwards; proceeding in the space between the two pterygoid muscles towards the maxillary tuberosity. It turns again, becomes vertical, and ascends into the bottom of the zygomatic fossa, until, having arrived at the floor of the orbit, it takes a horizontal and transverse direction; enters the spheno-maxillary fossa, and divides into several branches. See Artery, (table.)

MAXILLARY BONE, Maxil'la, Mandib'ula, Gam'phelē, Gnathus, Mola, Siagon, 'jaw.' (F.) Machoire. A name given to two bones, which support the teeth, and, by means of them, are inservient to the cutting, bruising, and tearing of alimentary substances.

The maxillary bones are two in number.

MAXILLARY BONE, INFERIOR, Lower jaw-bone, Os Maxilla'rē inferius, Machoire diacranienne, Maxil'la inferior, (F.) Os maxillaire, (Ch.,) is a symmetrical, nearly parabolic bone, the middle portion of which is horizontal, and called the body; and the posterior is vertical, the angular portions being termed Rami or branches. These have behind a parotidean edge, which forms — by uniting with the base — the angle of the jaw. The branches terminate above by two processes separated by the sigmoid notch or fossa; the anterior of which is called the coronoid; the posterior, the condyloid process or maxillary condyle, supported by a Cervix, Collum, or Neck. The chief parts observed on the lower jaw are — 1. Externally, — the Sym'physis menti, Apoph'ysis menti, Mental foramen, and the external oblique line. 2. Internally, — the Geniapoph'ysis, the internal or Myloid oblique lines, and the entrance of the dental canal. The lower jaw has, also, an alveolar edge, which contains alveoli for the reception of the teeth. The lower jaw-bone is developed by two points of ossification, which unite at the symphysis of the chin. It is articulated with the temporal bone and with the teeth.

MAXILLARY BONE, SUPERIOR, Upper jaw-bone, Maxil'la superior, Os maxilla'rē supe'rius, Maxil'la syncra'nia, (F.) Os sus-maxillaire, (Ch.,) Machoire syncranienne. The upper jaw-bones are to the face what the sphenoid bone is to the cranium. They are articulated with all the por tions composing it. They determine, almost alone, the shape of the face, and give it solidity. Their size is considerable; form unequal. They occupy the middle and anterior part of the face; and enter into the composition of the nasal fossæ, orbit, and mouth. The chief parts observable in the upper jaw are — 1. Externally, — the Nasal process, (F.) Apophyse montante, the Fora'men infra-orbita'rium, Zygomat'ic process, Canine fossa, Myr'tiform fossa. 2. Internally, — the Pal'atine process, Ante'rior pal'atine canal, and the Antrum of Highmore. Its circumference is very unequal, and it has behind a round, unequal prominence, called the Maxillary tuberosity, which is pierced by the posterior dental canal. Anteriorly, there is a notch, which forms part of the anterior aperture of the nasal fossæ, and beneath, an eminence, called the anterior nasal spine. The lower part of this circumference forms the alveolar margin. Each superior maxillary bone is articulated with the ethmoid, frontal, nasal, lachrymal, palatine, inferior, spongy, vomer, its fellow, the teeth of the upper jaw, and sometimes the sphenoid bone. It is developed by four or five points of ossification.

Maxillary Nerves are two in number, and formed of the second and third branches of the fifth pair. The Superior Maxillary Nerve, Nerf sus-maxillaire (Ch.), arises from the middle of the gangliform enlargement of the fifth pair; passes forwards, and issues from the cranium through the foramen rotundum of the sphenoid bone; enters the spheno-maxillary fossa, which it crosses horizontally; passes into the infra-orbitar canal, which it traverses; and makes its exit to vanish on the cheek. It gives off the following branches, — the orbitar, a branch which goes to the spheno-palatine ganglion; posterior dental branches; the anterior dental, — and terminates in the infra-orbitar nerves, which are divided into superior, inferior, and internal. The inferior maxillary nerve, Nerf maxillaire (Ch.), is the largest of the three branches furnished by the fifth pair. It issues from the cranium by the foramen ovale of the sphenoid. Having reached the zygomatic fossa, it divides into two trunks; the one superior and external, which gives off the temporales profundi, masseterine, buccal, and pterygoids; — the other — inferior and internal — the larger of the two, which furnishes the inferior dental, lingual, and auricular.

Maxillary Veins present the same arrangement as the arteries they accompany.

MAXILLO-ALVÉOLI-NASAL, Depressor alæ nasi — m. Labial, Depressor anguli oris — m. Narinal, Compressor naris — m. Palpébral, Orbicularis palpebrarum — m. Sclérotiçien, Obliquus inferior oculi.

MAY APPLE, Podophyllum peltatum — m. a. Mountain, Podophyllum montanum — m. Flower, Anthemis cotula — m. Weed, Anthemis cotula.

MAYELLA, Curcuma longa.

MAYNARD'S ADHESIVE LIQUID, Collodion.

MAYS, Zea mays — m. Americana, Zea mays — m. Zea, Zea mays.

MAZA, Mass, Placenta.

MA'ZICUS, from maza, 'placenta.' Relating to the placenta.

MAZISCH'ESIS, from maza, 'the placenta,' and σχεσις, 'holding,' 'retention.' Retention of the placenta.

MAZODYNIA, Mastodynia.

MAZOITIS, Mastitis.

MAZOL'YSIS, from maza, 'placenta,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Separation of the placenta.

MAZOPATHI'A, from maza, 'placenta,' and παθος, 'disease.' A disease of the placenta. One originating from the placenta.

MAZOS, Mamma.

MEAD, Hydromeli, Melizomum.

MEADOW BLOOM, Ranunculus acris — m. Fern, Comptonia asplenifolia — m. Pride, see Calumba — m. Rue, Thalictron — m. Saffron, Vinegar of, Acetum colchici — m. Sweet, Gillenia trifoliata, Spiræa ulmaria — m. Sweet, red, Spiræa tomentosa.

MEALY TREE, Viburnum dentatum.

MEASLES, Rubeola — m. Black, see Rubeola — m. False, Roseolæ — m. French, Roseolæ.

MEASLY, Morbillous.

MEASUREMENT, Mensuratien.

MEASURING, MEDICAL, Mensuration.

MEAT BISCUIT, see Biscuit, meat.

MEAT, EXTRACTIVE OF, Osmazome.

MÉAT, Meatus.

MEA'TUS, Ductus, Cana'lis, Porus, (F.) Méat. A passage or canal.

Meatus Auditorius Externus, Auditory canal, external — m. Auditorius internus, Auditory canal, internal — m. Cæcus, Eustachian tube — m. Narium, see Nasal fossæ — m. Seminales uteri, Tubæ Fallopianæ — m. Seminarius, Corpus Highmori — m. Urinarius, Urethra.

MECHAMECK, Convolvulus panduratus — m. Bindweed, Convolvulus panduratus.

MECHANE, Machine.

MECHANEMA, Machine.

MECHAN'ICAL, Mechan'icus, from μηχανη, 'a machine.' An epithet given to irritating bodies, which do not act chymically — as a mechanical irritant.

Mechanical or Iatro-mathematical Physicians, Iätro-mechan'ici seu Iätromathemat'ici, are such as refer every function, healthy or morbid, to mechanical or mathematical principles; — Medici'na mechan'ica.

MECHAN'ICS, AN'IMAL. That part of physiology whose objects are to investigate the laws of equilibrium and motion of the animal body.

MECH'ANISM. The structure of a body; the collection or aggregate of the parts of a machine; the mode in which forces produce any effect, &c.

MÈCHE, Tent. This term is usually applied in French surgery to a collection of threads of charpie, cotton or raw silk united together, which are used for deterging sinuous or fistulous ulcers; or to keep open or enlarge natural or artificial apertures. They are generally applied by means of an instrument called Porte-mèche.

MECHOACANA NIGRA, Convolvulus jalapa — m. Nigricans, Convolvulus jalapa.

MECHOACANÆ RADIX, Convolvulus mechoacan.

MECHOACAN DU CANADA, Phytolacca decandra.

MECOM'ETER, (F.) Mécomètre; from μηκος, 'length,' and μετρον, 'measure.' A kind of graduated compass, — compas de proportion, — used at the Hospice de Maternité of Paris, to measure the length of new-born infants.

MECON, Mecenium, Opium, Papaver.

MECONICUM, Opiate.

MECONIS'MUS, Intoxica'tio opia'ca; from μηκων, 'the poppy.' Poisoning by opium.

MECO'NIUM, same etymon. Poppy juice, Papaver'culum, Purgamen'ta Infantis, Mecon. The excrement passed by the infant a short time after birth, which had accumulated in the intestines during pregnancy. It is of a greenish or deep black colour, and very viscid. It seems formed of the mucous secretions of the intestines mixed with bile. See Opium.

MECONOLOG''IA, Opiolog''ia; from μηκων, 'a poppy,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on opium.

MECONOPSIS DIPHYLLA, Stylophorum diphyllum.

MEDEA, Genital organs.

MÉDECIN, Physician — m. Consultant, Consulting physician.

MÉDECINE, Medicina — m. Expectante, Expectation — m. Légale, Medicine, legal — m. Opératoire, Surgery, operative — m. Perturbatrice, Perturbatrix (Medicina.)

MEDELA, Curation.

MEDEOLA VERTICILLIFOLIA, M. Virginica.

MEDE'OLA VIRGIN'ICA, M. verticillifo'lia, Gyro'mia Virgin'ica, Indian cu'cumber. An indigenous herb, growing in every part of the United States, the root of which resembles a small cucumber. It has been thought to be diuretic.

MEDIAN, Media'nus; from medium, 'the middle.' That which is situate in the middle.

MEDIAN LINE. A vertical line, supposed to divide a body longitudinally into two equal parts; the one right, the other left. Chaussier calls the linea alba the ligne médiane of the abdomen.

MEDIAN NERVE, Médian digital, (Ch.) This nerve arises chiefly from the anterior branches of the last two cervical nerves and first dorsal. The fifth and sixth cervical pairs also send it a branch, which separates from the musculo-cutaneous nerve. The median nerve descends the inner part of the arm along the biceps muscle. Opposite the elbow joint it buries itself behind the aponeurosis of that muscle, and engages itself between the two fasciculi of the pronator teres. Lower down, it is situate between the flexors — sublimis and profundus — and passes, with their tendons, under the anterior annular ligament; it then divides into five branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the thenar eminence, to the lumbricales, the integuments of the thumb, the index, middle finger, and outer part of the ring finger. This nerve gives no branches to the arm. In the forearm, it furnishes filaments to all the pronator and flexor muscles; and one of them accompanies the anterior interosseous artery. It also gives off a filament to the integuments of the palm of the hand.

MEDIAN VEINS. Three of the superficial veins of the forearm are so called. The median basilic — the median cephalic and common median or funis brachii. See Basilic and Cephalic.

MEDIANUM, Mediastinum, Mesentery.

MEDIAS'TINAL, Mediastina'lis. Relating to the Mediastinum.

MEDIASTINAL ARTERIES are very delicate arterial branches, distributed in the areolar texture of the mediastinum. They are distinguished, according to their situation, into anterior and posterior.

MEDIASTINITIS, Mesodmitis.

MEDIASTI'NUM, Mediasti'nus, quasi, in medio stans, as being in the middle; Mesod'mē, Media'num, Mesotœ'chium, Mesotœ'chun, Septum thora'cis, Hymen Diaphrat'ton, Membra'na Diaphratton, Membra'na thora'cem intersep'iens, Intersepimen'tum thora'cis, Diribito'rium, Dissipimen'tum thora'cis. A membranous septum formed by the approximation of the pleuræ, dividing the chest into two parts, the one right, the other left. The mediastinum, formed by a double reflection of the pleura, extends from the spine to the posterior surface of the sternum. Its anterior part, called Anterior mediastinum, Mediastinum pectora'lē, lodges, at its upper part, the thymus gland in the fœtus, and is filled below with fatty, areolar tissue. Its posterior part, parallel to the spine, is occupied by the œsophagus, vena azygos, thoracic duct, the lower part of the windpipe, the origin of the bronchia and a number of lymphatic glands. This part is called the posterior mediastinum — Mediastinum dorsa'lē.

MEDIASTINUM AURIS, see Tympanum — m. Cerebri, Falx cerebri, Septum lucidum — m. Testis, Corpus Highmori.

MEDIASTINUS, Mediastinum.

MEDICABILIS, Curable.

MEDICABLE, Curable.

MED'ICÆ. Sworn midwives, whose duty it was, of old, to inspect women in cases of suspected pregnancy.

MED'ICAL, Medica'lis, Iät'ricus, Pæon'ius, Pæon'icus, Phys'ical, Escula'pian, (F.) Médical. Same etymon as Medicament. Appertaining or relating to medicine or to medicines.

MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE, Medicine, legal.

MEDICALIS, Medical.

MED'ICAMENT, Medicamen'tum, Remed''ium, Ace'sis, Aces'ma, Aces'tium, Aces'tys, Althos, Hygias'ma, Ia'ma, Acos, Medica'men, Phar'macum, Pharmaceu'ma, Alkar, Auxil'ium, Boëthe'ma, Med'icine, Physic, Rem'edy, (F.) Remède; from medicare, 'to cure or heal.' A medicine. Any substance exhibited with the view of curing or allaying morbid action. Medicines are obtained from the three kingdoms of nature, and are divided into internal and external, according as they are administered internally or applied externally.

MEDICAMENTAL, Medicinal.

MEDICAMENTO'SUS LAPIS, Medic''inal stone, (F.) Pierre médicamenteuse. A name formerly given to a mixture of peroxyd of iron, litharge, alum, nitre, sal ammoniac, and vinegar; evaporated and calcined at a red heat for an hour. The product was regarded as eminently astringent.

MEDICAMENTUM, Drug — m. ex Palmulis, Diaphœnicon.

MEDICAS'TER, Medicastra. An ignorant practitioner. A charlatan.

MEDICA'TION, Medica'tio, from mederi, 'to remedy.' The change in the animal economy produced by the operation of remedies. Treatment by medicine.

MEDICI'NA, Ars med'ica, Res medica, Ars Machaö'nia, A. Machaön'ica, Iat'ricē, Iate'ria, Iätri'a, Iatri'nē, Pæos'ynē, Pæon'icē, Iatrotech'nicē, Acesto'ria, Scien'tia med'ica seu medendi, Sote'ria doctri'na, Med'icine, The healing art. Physic, (F.) Médecine. A science, the object of which is the cure of disease and the preservation of health. Occasionally, it is used to comprehend all the branches of the healing art; at others to comprise one great division, in contradistinction to surgery and obstetrics. Medicine, in this sense, includes many branches;—the chief of which are, Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Therapeutics, Hygiene, Materia Medica, and Pharmacy.

MEDICINA CONSERVATIVA, Hygiene — m. Diætetica, Dietetics — m. Eclectica, see Eclectic — m. Efficax, Surgery — m. Equaria, Hippiatria — m. Euectica, Gymnastus — m. Forensis, Medicine, legal — m. MEDICINABLE, Medicinal.

MEDIC"INAL, Medicina'lis, Medicament'al, Medic"inable, Med'ical, Iäter'ius, Reme'dial, Reme'diate. Having a remedial power;—as medicinal plants, &c. Relating to medicine, as MEDICINA'LES DIES, Medic"inal days. Days on which the ancients considered that remedies might be administered; and especially evacuants. Such days were not esteemed critical.

MEDICINE, Medicament, Medicina.

MEDICINE is, also, used in the same sense as Medicament, and for a purging potion.

To MEDICINE was formerly used for "to restore or cure by medicine."

MEDICINE, CLINICAL, see Clinical—m. Eclectic, see Eclectic—m. Empirical, Arcanum—m. Galenic, Galenism.

MEDICINE, LEGAL, Medical jurispru'dence of some, Law med'icine, Foren'sic medicine, Medici'na foren'sis, M. judicia'ria, Diciatri'a, (F.) Médecine légale. The application of medical knowledge to the solution of every question connected with the preservation of the species, and the administration of justice.

MEDITULLIUM, Diploë.

MEDIUM MUSCULI, see Muscle.

ME'DIUS, Middle, Median.

MIDDLE FINGER, (F.) Doigt du Milieu, is between the index and ring finger.

MEDLAR, Mespilus.

MEDO. Hydromeli.

MEDOBLENNORRHŒA, Leucorrhœa.

MEDORRHŒA, Gonorrhœa—m. Feminarum insons, Leucorrhœa—m. Virilis, Gonorrhœa.

MEDULLA, Marrow—m. Cerebri, see Cerebrum—m. Dorsalis, m. Spinalis—m. Dorsualis, M. Spinalis—m. Nervorum, Neurine.

MEDUL'LA OBLONGA'TA, Cer'ebral protu'berance, Nervous system of the senses, (Gall,) Cer'ebrum elonga'tum, (F.) Mésocephale, Moëlle allongée, Mésencéphale, (Ch.) The medullary substance that lies within the cranium upon the basilary process of the occipital bone. The anterior surface which rests in the basilary groove, is impressed by the basilary artery. At the upper extremity, and on its posterior surface are the Tubercula quadrigemina. At the same extremity, the medulla gives rise to two prolongations, the peduncles of the brain, separated from each other by the mammillary eminences, and becoming lost in the optic thalami. The lower extremity is called the tail or Rachid'ian bulb, Bulbus rachid'icus, and is continuous with the medulla spinalis. It is to this part only that some anatomists apply the name Medulla oblongata. From the posterior angles two other prolongations arise, called Peduncles of the cerebellum. The medulla oblongata has several eminences—the Pons varolii, Corpora pyramidalia, C. olivaria, &c.—and it has a longitudinal fissure before, and another behind, called the anterior and posterior medium fissures. The vesicular neurine in the centre of the medulla is the nervous centre of respiration and deglutition: hence it has been called centrum vitale.

MEDULLA OSSIUM, Marrow—m. Spinæ, M. spinalis.

MEDUL'LA SPINA'LIS seu Spinæ seu dorsua'lis seu dorsa'lis, Corda spina'lis, Funis argenteus, Rhache'trum, My'elus, M. rhachi'tes seu notiæ'us seu diauche'nius seu psoï'tes, My'elon, Notomy'elus, Rhachi'tes, Æon, Medul'la vertebra'lis, Proces'sus rachidia'nus, Sacra fis'tula, Spinal prolonga'tion, Ver'tebral marrow, Spinal cord, Nervous system of voluntary motion and tactile impression (Gall), Spinal marrow, (F.) Moëlle épinière, Moëlle vertébrale, called by Ch., Prolongement rachidien of the encephalon, is the continuation of the medulla oblongata. It commences at the foramen magnum of the occipital bone, and descends in the vertebral canal as low as the 2d lumbar vertebra, without filling it; presenting, in its course, several evident enlargements. It is grooved on both its anterior and posterior surfaces by a furrow, which divides it, in its whole length, into two great nervous cords, intimately united with each other. It terminates by an oval tubercle, whence a number of nerves set out called Cauda equi'na, (F.) Queue de cheval, from its resemblance to a horse's tail. The spinal marrow has no analogy, as regards its structure, with the marrow of long bones. It is formed of two substances; one white, the other gray, presenting an inverse arrangement to that which they have in the brain, the white being external, the cineritious at the centre. It is enveloped by a yellowish, fibrous membrane, very resisting, which seems to be continued insensibly from the pia mater, and by two other membranes, which are merely prolongations of the arachnoid and dura mater. See Nerve.

MEDULLA VERTEBRALIS, M. spinalis.

MEDULLÆ, Sperm.

MED'ULLARY, Medulla'ris, from medulla, 'marrow.' Relating to the marrow or analogous to marrow.

MEDULLARY AR'TERIES. The arteries, which enter bones and pass to the marrow.

MEDULLARY CANAL, see Canal, medullary—m. Cells, see Medullary Membrane—m. Juice, Marrow—m. Matter of the brain, see Cerebrum.

MEDULLARY MEMBRANE, Periosteum Inter'num, Endos'teum. A vascular, areolar web of extreme tenuity, which envelops the marrow and lines the inner surface of the medullary canal of the long bones. This membrane has been considered as a species of internal periosteum of those bones. It has numerous vessels, which bury themselves in the thickness of the marrow; and others which nourish the innermost plates of the bone. The cells formed by it are termed Cel'lulæ seu Sac'culi medulla'res.

MEDULLARY NEURINE, see Neurine—m. Sarcoma, Encephaloid, Hæmatodes fungus.

MEDULLARY SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney—m. s. of Schwann, see Nerve-fibre.

MEDULLARY SYSTEM. Bichat gives this name to the marrow and its membranes. He distinguishes two species of medullary systems; the one occupies the cellular tissue at the extremities of the long bones and that of the flat and short bones; the other is found merely in the central canal of long bones.

Medullary Tumour of the Lungs, Phthisis, cancerous.

MEDULLITIS, Myelitis.

MEGALANTHROPOGEN'ESIS, from μεγας, 'great,' ανθρωπος, 'man,' and γενεσις, 'birth.' A term used by a French physician, named Robert, to designate the art of procreating great men; men of mind; men of genius. He considered that they may be perpetuated by always taking care to have talented men united to clever women!

MEGALOCAR'DIA, from μεγας, 'great,' and καρδια, 'heart.' The state of having a very large heart.

MEGALOCŒLIA, Intestine, great, Megalosplanchnia.

MEGALOPHO'NIA, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and φωνη, 'voice.' The condition of having a full, strong voice.

MEGALOPHTHAL'MUS; from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' A congenital deformity, in which the eye is inordinately large.

MEGALOSPLANCH'NUS, from μεγαλας, 'great,' and σπλαγχνον, 'a viscus.' Megalocœ'lia. Hippocrates applies the epithet to those in whom a viscus, or the viscera, are tumid. Some have used the substantive Megalosplanch'nia for the tumour itself.

MEGALOSPLENIA, Splenoncus.

MEGETHOS, Stature.

MEGRIM, Hemicrania.

MEIBO'MIUS, GLANDS OF, Foll'icles of M., Pal'pebral Foll'icles, Cil'iary F., Glandulæ seba'ceæ cilia'res seu Meibomia'næ, Intestin'ula Meibo'mii, Lacu'næ palpebra'rum, (F.) Follicules palpébraux ou ciliaires, Glandes de Meibomius. Small, sebaceous follicles, called after Henry Meibomius, although known long before his description of them. They are situate in special grooves in the tarsal cartilages; and are ranged by the side of each other, in the form of yellowish, parallel, and vertical lines; sometimes straight, at others, tortuous. They may be seen at the inner surface of the eyelids, through the conjunctiva, and secrete a sebaceous humour, called Lippitu'do, Gum, (F.) Chassie.

MEIO'SIS, Meo'sis, Mio'sis, Imminu'tio, Minuthe'sis, Minitho'sis, from μειοω, 'I lessen.' The period of a disease, in which the symptoms begin to diminish; — the decline. Remission. Also, idiotism.

MEIUROS, Decurtatus, Myurus.

MEL, Meli, Nili'acum, Honey, (F.) Miel. A substance of a muco-saccharine nature, prepared by the Apis mellifi'ca, or common bee, which collects it from the nectaries of flowers. Honey is employed as aliment, condiment, and medicine. It is demulcent and aperient; and is prescribed as an adjunct to gargles in cynanche tonsillaris, &c. It is, at times, used as a detergent to foul ulcers. Virgin Honey, Mel vir'ginum seu virgin'eum, (F.) Miel vierge, is that which flows from the wax spontaneously.

Hill's Balsam of Honey is formed of balsam of tolu. ℔j, honey, ℔j, rectified spirit, one gallon. It was long a celebrated empirical pectoral.

Honey Water is a mixture of essences coloured with saffron. A little honey is added to communicate a clamminess; the effect of which is to make it retain the scent the longer. It is used as a scent.

Mel Acetatum, Oxymel — m. Ægyptiacum, Ægyptiacum — m. Aërium, Fraxinus ornus — m. Arundinaceum, Saccharum.

Mel Bora'cis, Mel subbora'cis, Colluto'rium adstrin'gens, Linimen'tum de Bora'tē, L. ad aphthas, Mel Boraxa'tum, Linctus de Bora'cē, L. ad aphthas, Honey of Borax. (Boracis contrit. ℥j, mellis despumati ℥j, Ph. L.) Detergent. Applied to the mouth in aphthous affections.

Mel Cannæ, Saccharum (non purificatum) — m. Coctum, Pelicide.

Mel Despuma'tum, Clar'ified Honey, Anaphrom'eli, (F.) Miel Clarifié. Melt the honey in a water-bath, and remove the scum. Uses the same as honey.

Mel Præpara'tum, Prepared Honey. (Mel. despumat. Oss. Alcohol. dilut. Oj. Cretæ præparat. ℥ss. To the honey and diluted alcohol, mixed, add the prepared chalk, and let the mixture stand for two hours, occasionally stirring. Then heat to ebullition, filter, and by means of a water-bath, evaporate the clear liquor to the specific gravity 1.32. Ph. U. S.)

Mel Rosæ, Mel rosa'tum, Melli'tum de Rosis, Rhodom'eli, Rhodostac'ton, Honey of Roses, (F.) Miel rosat, Mellite de Roses. (Rosæ gallic. ℥ij, aquæ bullient. f℥xij, mellis despum. f℥xx. Macerate the roses in f℥viij of boiling water for four hours; press out as much fluid as possible and set aside. Macerate the residue in f℥iv of boiling water for half an hour, and again express. Reserve f℥iv of the first infusion; mix the remainder with the infusion last obtained; add the honey, and evaporate to a pint. Lastly, add the reserved infusion, and strain. Ph. U. S.) Astringent and detergent. Used chiefly in gargles and washes for aphthæ, &c.

Mel Scillæ, Oxymel scillæ — m. Scillæ compositum, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

Mel Vinosum, Œnomel — m. Virginum, see Mel.

MELÆ'NA, Melanorrhag''ia, Melænorrhag''ia, Ic'terus niger, Melanchlo'rus, Melanic'terus, Melas Ic'terus, Morbus niger Hippoc'ratis, Enterorrha'a, Black Jaundice, Morbus niger, (F.) Maladie noire, Méline, Ictère noire; from μελας, 'black.' A name given to vomiting of black matter, ordinarily succeeded by evacuations of the same character. It seems to be often a variety of hæmatemesis. The Black Vomit in yellow fever is owing to a morbid secretion from the lining membrane of the stomach and small intestine. Melæna also signifies hemorrhage from the intestines; Fluxus sple'nicus, Dysenter'ia sple'nica, Dejectio'nes nigræ, Seces'sus niger, Hem'orrhage from the Intes'tines.

Melæna Fungosa Carcinodes, Hæmatodes fungus.

MELÆNORRHAGIA, Melæna.

MELALEU'CA CAJAPUTI, M. Minor seu Leucoden'dron, Myrtus Leucaden'dron, Leptospermum Leucaden'drum. This plant affords the Cajeput Oil, (see Cajeput.) The leaves are esteemed diuretic, stomachic, and emmenagogue.

Melaleuca Leucodendron, M. Cajaputi — m. Minor, M. Cajaputi.

MELAMPHO'NUS; from μελας, 'obscure,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Having a hoarse or indistinct voice.

MELAMPHYLLUM, Acanthus mollis.

MELAMPODE, Helleborus niger.

MELAMPODIUM, Helleborus niger.

MELANÆMA, Suffocation.

MELANÆMIA, Venosity.

MEL'ANAGOGUE, Melanago'gus, from μελας, 'black,' and αγω, 'I expel.' A medicine which the ancients believed adapted for expelling black bile or melancholy.

MELANCHLO'RUS, from μελας, 'black,' and χλωρος, 'green.' The ancients gave this name to certain dark-coloured topical remedies. See Melæna.

MELANCHOLE, Atrabilis.

MELANCHOLIA, Melancholy — m. Autochirica, Suicide — m. Errabunda, Cuttubuth — m. Flatuosa, Hypochondriasis—m. Hypochondriaca, Hypochondriasis — m. Nervea, Hypochondriasis — m. Pleonectica, see Pleonectica — m. Saltans, Chorea — m. Suicidium, Suicide — m. Uterina, Nymphomania—m. Zoanthropia, Melancholy.

MEL'ANCHOLIC, Melanchol'icus, Melan'cholus, Melancholo'des, from μελας, 'black,' and χολη, 'bile.' One labouring under melancholy. That which belongs or relates to melancholy. In popular language, one of a gloomy disposition.

MELANCHOLINESS, Melancholy.

MELANCHOLODES, Melancholic.

MELANCHOLUS, Melancholy.

MEL'ANCHOLY, Melancho'lia, same etymon. Lypema'nia, Ecphro'nia Melancho'lia, Mania Melancholi'ica, Mania Melancho'lia, Tristema'nia, Baryth'mia, Hypolepsioma'nia, Anoë'sia adstric'ta, Fixa'tio mononcæ'a, Melancholiness; (F.) Mélancholie, Lyperophrénie. A disease supposed, by the ancients, to be caused by black bile. A variety of mental alienation, characterized by excessive gloom, mistrust, and depression, generally, with insanity on one particular subject or train of ideas, Monoma'nia, Monomo'ria. Panophobia, Demonomania, Erotomania, Nostalyia, &c., may be referred to this head.

Melancholy is also used for unusual gloominess of disposition.

MELANCHOLY, EROTIC, Erotomania—m. Love, Erotomania.

MELAN'CHRUS, Melan'ochrus, from μελας, 'black,' and χρως, 'a colour.' One attacked with black jaundice. It is probably an abbreviation of Melanchlorus.

MÉLANCOLIE, Melancholy.

MÉLANGE PECTORAL, Mistura acidi hydrocyanici.

MELAN'IC, Melan'icus, Melanot'ic, Melanot'icus; from μελας, 'black.' Of or belonging to Melanosis;—as Melanic deposit, a black colouring matter deposited from the blood under special circumstances;—see Melanosis.

MELANIC DEPOSIT, Melanosis.

MELANICTERUS, Melæna.

MELANOCHRUS, Melanchrus.

MELANOMA, Melanosis.

MELANOMA PULMONUM, see Melanosis.

MELANOMYCES, Melanospongus.

MELANOPATHI'A, from μελας, 'black,' and παθος, 'affection.' Ni'gritism, Nigrit''ies. A disease of the skin, which consists in augmentation of black pigment; generally in patches.

MELANOPHYMA, Ergot.

MELANOPIPER, Piper nigrum.

MELANOPNEUMON, see Melanosis.

MELANORRHAGIA, Melæna.

MELANORRHIZUM, Helleborus niger.

MÉLANOSE, Melanosis.

MELANO'SIS, Melan'sis, Melano'ma, Nigritu'do, Carcino'ma melanot'icum, Cancer melæ'neus, Fungus melano'des, (F.) Dégénérescence noire, Mélanose, Cancer mélane, Black cancer, Black tubercle, from μελας, 'black.' An organic affection, in which the tissue of the parts is converted, owing to a melan'ic depos'it, into a black, hard, homogeneous substance, near which ulcers or cavities form;—owing to the softening, either of the substance itself, or of some other morbid tissue, — of tubercles especially. This morbific change affects the lungs particularly; when it is called Melano'sis seu Melano'ma seu Anthraco'sis Pulmo'num, Melanopneu'mon, Nigritu'do seu Carcino'ma melanot'icum seu Melan'sis Pulmonum, Pneumonomelano'sis, (F.) Mélanose Pulmonaire. It is, also, met with in the liver and areolar texture. Its causes are very obscure. Melanosis of the lungs constitutes one of the species of phthisis of Bayle; but it is impossible to distinguish it from the other species during life.

In the classification of Fuchs, Melanosen (G.) forms a family of diseases.

MELANOSIS PULMONUM, see Melanosis — m. Universalis, Venosity.

MELANOSMEGMA, see Sapo.

MELANOSPON'GUS, Melanomyces; from μελας, 'black,' and σπογγος, 'sponge.' The tuberiform variety of melanosis of the lungs.

MELANOTIC, Melanic — m. Cancer, Cancer, melanotic.

MEL'ANOTHRIX, Atricapill'us, from μελας, 'black,' and θριξ, 'hair.' Having black hair.

MELANSIS, Melanosis — m. Pulmonum, Melanosis pulmonum.

MELANTHIUM, Nigella, M. Virginicum.

MELAN'THIUM VIRGIN'ICUM, Melanthium, Quofadil; indigenous; Order, Melanthaceæ, flowering in July, is said to be a sure but severe remedy for itch.

MELAS, Lepra nigricans — m. Icterus, Melæna.

MELAS'MA, Ecchymo'ma Melas'ma, Nigror, from μελας, 'black.' A black spot or ecchymosis, occurring on the lower extremities of old people especially. Also a cutaneous affection analogous to chloasma, differing from it only in the dark colour of the morbid pigment. It is also called Pityriasis nigra.

MELAS'SES, Molas'ses, Melus'tum, Theriaca commu'nis, Syru'pus empyreumat'icus seu niger, Treacle. The syrup, which remains after the juice of the sugar-cane has been subjected to all the operations for extracting sugar from it. In the United States, the syrup, made in the process of forming common sugar, is called melasses; that remaining after the refinement of sugar being termed sugar-house melasses or treacle.

MELASSES SPIRIT, Rum.

MELATROPH'IA, from μελος, 'a limb,' and ατροφια, 'wasting.' Wasting of the limbs.

MELCA, μελκα. Food made of acidulated milk.

MELE, Specillum.

MELEA, Pyrus malus.

MELEGUETTA, Amomum grana paradisi.

MELEI'OS, μηλειος, Meli'nus, Melias. A species of alum found in the island of Melos.

MÉLÈZE, Pinus larix.

MELI, Mel.

MELIA, Fraxinus ornus.

ME'LIA AZED'ARACH, Azedara'cha amœ'na, Poison Berry Tree, Azed'arach, Pride of India, Pride of China, Pride tree, Hop tree, Bead tree. Nat. Ord. Meliaceæ; Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. The bark of the root—called in India Neem Bark, Azedarach, (Ph. U. S.), is usually given in decoction, in the proportion of three or four ounces of the bark of the fresh root to a quart of water, boiled down to a pint. The dose is one or two table-spoonfuls, every two or three hours, till purging is induced. It is given in this manner as an anthelmintic. It is sometimes formed into an ointment, and used in tinea capitis. The tree is a native of Syria, Persia, and the north of India, and is abundant in the southern states of the Union.

MELIA TERRA, Creta.

MELIAN'THUS MAJOR, Nat. Ord. Zygophylleæ. A south African plant, a decoction of whose leaves is a good external remedy in tinea capitis, crusta serpiginosa, necrosis and foul ulcers. It is also useful as a gargle and lotion in sore throat and diseases of the gums. The bruised leaves applied to ulcers promote granulation.

MELICERA, Porrigo favosa.

MELICERIA, Hydrarthrus, Porrigo favosa.

MELICE'RIS, Melifa'vium, from μελι, 'honey,' and κηρος, 'wax.' Emphy'ma encys'tis melice'ris. An encysted tumour filled with a substance resembling honey. Also, Porrigo favosa.

MELIC"EROUS, Melicer'itous: same etymon. Having the characters of meliceris,—as a melicerous tumour.

MELICERUM, Porrigo favosa.

MELICHEIUM, from μελι, 'honey,' and χεω, 'I pour out.' A honey-like discharge from an ulcer.

MELICRATUM, Hydromeli.

MELIFAVIUM, Meliceris, Porrigo favosa.

MELIGEI'ON, from μελι, 'honey.' A fetid humour of the consistence of honey, discharged from ulcers, accompanied with caries of a bone.

MÉLILOT, Trifolium melilotus.

MELILOTUS, Trifolium melilotus.

MELIME'LUM, from μελι, 'honey,' and μηλον, 'an apple.' A name given to two compounds:—one of honey and quince, the other of honey and apples.

MÉLINE, Melæna.

MELINI SULPHAS, Cadmii sulphas.

MELI'NUM, μηλινον. The ancient name of an ointment, and of several plasters, described by Dioscorides and Galen: so called from their resembling the μηλον, or quince, in colour.

MELINUM SULPHURICUM, Cadmii sulphas.

MELINUS, Meleios.

MELIPHYLLUM, Melissa.

MELIS'SA, from μελισσα, 'a bee,' because bees gather honey from it. Melissa officina'lis seu Roma'na seu hirsu'ta seu cit'rina seu citra'ta seu horten'sis, Citra'go, Citra'ria, Melitei'a, Melissob'otos, Melitæ'na, Melissobot'anum, Melissophyl'lum, Meliphyl'lum, Mentha citra'ta, Melit'tis, Cedronel'la, Apias'trum, Melissa cit'rina, Ero'tion, Balm, (F.) Mélisse, La Citronelle; Nat. Ord. Labiatæ. The leaves of balm, Melissa (Ph. U. S.), have a pleasant odour; and an austere and aromatic taste. Balm was formerly much used in nervous diseases, but is now only employed when made into a tea, as a diluent, in febrile affections. It is the basis of a celebrated preparation,—the Eau des Carmes.

MELISSA CALAMIN'THA, Calamin'tha, C. vulga'ris seu officina'rum seu grandiflo'ra, Thymus calamin'tha, Cal'amint, (F.) Calament. This plant smells like wild mint, though more agreeably. It is used, popularly, as a tea in dyspepsia; flatulent colic; hysteria; uterine obstructions, &c.

MELISSA CANARIENSIS, Dracocephalum Canariense—m. Citrata, Melissa—m. Citrina, Melissa.

MELISSA GRANDIFLO'RA, Thymus grandiflo'rus, Calamin'tha magno florē, C. monta'na, Mountain Cal'amint. This plant resembles the last in virtues.

MELISSA HIRSUTA, Melissa — m. Hortensis, Melissa — m. Humilis, Melittis melissophyllum.

MELISSA NEP'ETA, Thymus nep'eta seu multiflo'rus, Calamin'tha An'glica seu Pule'gii odo'rē seu nep'eta seu parviflo'ra seu trichot'oma, Nep'eta agres'tis, Field Cal'amint, Spotted Cal'amint. Formerly used as an aromatic.

MELISSA PULEGIOÏDES, Hedeoma—m. Romana, Melissa—m. Tragi, Melittis melissophyllum—m. Turcica, Dracocephalum Canariense.

MÉLISSE DES BOIS, Melittis melissophyllum—m. de Moldavie, Dracocephalum Canariense.

MELISSOBOTANUM, Melissa.

MELISSOBOTOS, Melissa.

MELISSOPHYLLUM, Melissa, Melittis melissophyllum.

MÉLISSOT, Melittis melissophyllum.

MELITÆ'MIA, from μελι, 'honey,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' A condition of the circulating fluid, in which it contains an unusual quantity of saccharine matter.

MELITÆNA, Melissa.

MÉLITAGRE, Impetigo.

MELITEIA, Melissa.

MELITHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana.

MELI'TIS, Inflamma'tio gena'rum; from μηλον, 'the cheek,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the cheek.

MELITITES, Hydromeli.

MELITTA, Bee.

MELITTIS, Melissa.

MELIT'TIS MELISSOPHYL'LUM, La'mium monta'num, Melissa hu'milis seu sylves'tris, Melissa Tragi, La'mium Plin'ii, Melissophyl'lum, Bastard Balm, (F.) Mélisse des Bois, Mélissot. This plant was formerly employed, like the balm, in uterine obstructions.

MELITTIS SYLVESTRIS, M. Melissophyllum.

MELITURIA, Urine, diabetic, see Diabetes.

MELI'TUS, Melli'tus, from mel, 'honey.' Appertaining to honey. Of the nature of honey.

MELIZO'MUM, from μελι, 'honey,' and ζωμος, 'broth;' Mead, Melli'na, Metheg'lin. A drink prepared with honey.

MELLA'GO, from mel, 'honey.' Any medicine having the consistence of honey. A fluid extract.

MELLICRATUM, Hydromeli.

MELLIFAVIUM, Porrigo favosa.

MELLINA, Melizomum.

MELLITE DE ROSES, Mel rosæ.

MELLI'TUM, from mel, 'honey.' A prepared honey:—a medicated honey.

MELLITUM DE ACETATE CUPRI, Linimentum Æruginis.

MELLITUM DE MERCURIA'LI COMPOS'ITUM, (F.) Miel de mercuriale composé, Syrop de longue vie (Succ. purif. mercurialis ℔ij, boraginis, anchusæ officinalis, āā ℔ss, iris pseudacori radicis recent. ℥ij, rad. sicc. gentianæ ℥j, mellis ℔iij, vini albi ℥xiij. Macerate the bruised roots in the wine for 24 hours; strain; mix the juices and honey; boil slightly, and filter: then add the two liquors, and boil to the consistence of syrup. Ph. P.) Cathartic, stomachic, &c.

MELLITUM DE ROSIS, Mel rosæ.

MELLITUM SIMPLEX, Syru'pus de Mellē, Syrup of Honey. (Mellis ℔vj, aquæ ℔iss, carbonat. calcis. præparat. ℥iij. Mix the honey, water, and carbonate of lime in a silver vessel: boil the mixture, stirring, at the same time, for 2 or 3 minutes: then add prepared animal charcoal ℥vj, two whites of eggs, mixed in a pint of water. Mix all, and boil to the consistence of syrup: remove from the fire; let the syrup rest for 15 minutes, and pass through a cloth. Ph. P.) Demulcent.

MELLITUS, Melitus.

MELOÆ'MIA, from μελας, 'black,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' A state of blood, characterized by its incoagulability, black colour, and septic properties.

MELOCHI'TIS, Lapis Arme'nius, Armeni'tes, Arme'nian Stone. A variety of blue carbonate of copper. It is found in Germany, the Tyrol, and especially in Armenia. It was formerly em prized as a cardiac, and as proper for purging away melancholy.

MEL'OĒ NIGER, M. Pennsylvan'icus. A blistering fly, native of the United States. It feeds upon Prunel'la vulga'ris or Self-heal, and Ambro'sia trif'ida or Stick-weed. These flies resemble the Spanish flies in properties.

MELOE PENNSYLVANICUS, M. niger.

MELOE PROSCARABÆ'US, Cantarel'lus, was anciently used as a diuretic and anti-hyhrophobic.

MELOE VESICATORIUS, Cantharis.

MELON, μηλον, 'an apple.' A disorder of the eye, in which it protrudes out of the socket. See Exophthalmia.—Castelli.

MELON, Cucumis melo—m. d'Eau, Cucurbita citrullus—m. Plant, Cucumis melo—m. Water, Cucurbita citrullus.

MEMBRA'NA PUTAM'INIS, (putamen, 'a shell or husk.') The membrane adherent to the inner surface of the eggshell.

MEMBRANA RETIFORMIS CHORII, Decidua reflexa—m. Ruyschiana, Choroid (inner layer.)

MEMBRANA SACCIFORM'IS. A separate synovial membrane for the inferior radio-cubital articulation, which covers the upper surface of the triangular ligament, and the sort of incomplete ring which circumscribes the head of the ulna.

MEMBRANA SEMIPELLUCIDA, Caligo—m. Sinuosa, Decidua—m. Subcostalis, Pleura—m. Succingens, Diaphragm, Pleura.

MEMBRANA TESTÆ, Shell membrane. The membrane that lines the shell of the bird's egg:—a simple membrane.

MEMBRA'NA VERSIC'OLOR. A peculiar membrane—according to Mr. Fielding, of Hull—situate immediately behind the retina, and in connexion with it. It is separable into distinct layers from the choroid, and is supplied with blood-vessels.

MEMBRANA WACHENDORFIANA, Pupillary membrane.

MEMBRANACEOUS, Membranous.

MEMBRANE, *Membra'na, Hymen, Menin*x. Epen'dyma. A name, given to different thin organs, representing a species of supple, more or less elastic, webs; varying in their structure and vital properties, and intended, in general, to absorb or secrete certain fluids; and to separate, envelop, and form other organs. Bichat has divided the membranes into simple and compound.

Simple membranes comprise three orders. 1. A Mucous membrane, Membrana mucosa seu pituito'sa seu pituita'ria, Phleg'mymen, Phlegmat'hymen, Membrane folliculeuse (Ch.), is so called, on account of the mucous fluid by which they are constantly lubricated. They line the canals, cavities, and hollow organs, which communicate externally by different apertures on the skin. Bichat refers the mucous membranes to two great divisions—the gastro-pulmonary, and the genito-urinary. The mucous membranes have a striking analogy with the cutaneous tissue, in organization, functions, and diseases. They are composed of chorion, papillæ, and epidermis; and are furnished with a multitude of follicles, which secrete a viscid humour—mucus. They receive a quantity of arterial vessels, veins, lymphatics, and nerves. 2. The Serous membranes, M. villeuses simples (Ch.), are transparent, thin, and composed of one lamina. One surface adheres to other textures; the other is smooth, polished, and moistened by a serous fluid. They are arranged—in the form of sacs without apertures—as great, intermediate reservoirs for the exhalant and absorbent systems, in which the serous fluid in passing from one system tarries some time before it enters the other. The serous membranes resemble the arcolar membrane in structure and diseases. They facilitate the motion on each other of the organs which they envelop. They may be divided into (a) Serous membranes, properly so called; as the arachnoid, pleura, peritoneum, and tunica vaginalis. (b) Synovial membranes or capsules; which belong to joints, tendons, aponeuroses, &c. These membranes—mucous and serous—are constituted of similar layers—epithelium, basement membrane, condensed areolar tissue; and a looser form of areolar tissue, termed submucous in one case,—subserous in the other. 3. Fibrous membranes, Membranes albugineuses (Ch.) These are almost all continuous, and terminate at the periosteum—their common centre. They have been divided into two sections. 1. Enveloping aponeuroses, Aponeuroses of insertion, Fibrous capsules of the joints, and Fibrous sheaths of tendons. 2. The Periosteum, Dura mater, Sclerotica, Tunica albuginea testis, Fibrous membrane of the spleen, &c. The fibrous membranes are not free or moistened by any particular fluid. They adhere by both surfaces to the neighbouring parts; are firm, resisting, but slightly elastic, and of a white colour; sometimes pearly and glistening. Their vessels are numerous, in some, as in the dura mater and periosteum; in others, scarcely perceptible, as in the aponeuroses. The presence of nerves has never been proved, although several circumstances, regarding their sensibility, render their existence probable. The fibrous membranes serve, in general, to augment the solidity of the organs which they envelop; to retain the muscles in their respective positions; to favour the motion of the limbs, and that of the muscles and skin; to form canals and rings for the passage of different organs, &c.

Bichat admits three species of Compound Membranes. 1. The Sero-fibrous, formed of a serous and fibrous lamina, intimately adherent to each other;—as the pericardium, dura mater, and tunica albuginea. 2. The Sero-mucous, formed of a serous and mucous lamina;—as the gall-bladder at its lower part. 3. The Fibro-mucous, constituted of the union of a fibrous and mucous membrane; as the mucous membrane of the nasal fossæ, gums, &c. Chaussier admits six kinds of membranes. 1. The laminated. See Cellular Tissue. 2. The serous or simple villous. 3. The follicular or complicated villous. 4. The muscular or fleshy. 5. The albugineous. 6. The albuminous.

MEMBRANE, ACCIDENTAL, M. false—m. Accidentelle, M. false—m. Adnée, Conjunctiva—m. Adventitious, M. false—m. Anhistous, Decidua.

MEMBRANE, BASEMENT, Pri'mary membrane, Membra'na pro'pria. A delicate, structureless lamella of membrane found beneath the epidermis or epithelium, on all the free surfaces of the body.

MEMBRANE CADUQUE, Decidua—m. Caduque réfléchie, Decidua reflexa—m. de Demours, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea—m. de Descemet, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea.

MEMBRANE, FALSE, Acciden'tal membrane, Adventit''ious membrane, Pseudo-membrane, Pseud'ymen, Pseudome'ninx, (F.) Fausse membrane, M. accidentelle. Membranous productions, which form on all the free natural surfaces, and on every free accidental surface are so called. They are, in general, produced by the exudation of a fibrinous matter, susceptible of organization, which takes place in consequence of inflammation of the various tissues. These accidental membranes occur on the skin after the application of a blister; on mucous surfaces, as in croup; on the parietes of inflamed veins and arteries, &c. The cicatrices of wounds are formed of them.

MEMBRANE FAUSSE, Membrane false—m. Germinal, see Molecule—m. Granular, Membrana granulosa—m. Granuleuse, Membrana granulosa—m. Primary, Membrane, basement—m. Pseudo, M. false—m. Hyaloid, see Hyaloid membrane—m. Ruyschienne, Choroid (inner layer), Ruyschiana tunica—m. Shell, Membrana testæ—m. du Tympan, see Tympanum—m. Virginal, Hymen—m. Vitellary, Zona pellucida—*m. MEMBRANES ALBUGINEUSES, Membranes, fibrous, see Albuginea—m. Folliculeuses, Membranes, mucous—m. Veloutées, Villous membranes—m. Villeuses simples, Membranes, serous.

MEMBRANES OF THE FŒTUS, Membra'næ fœtum involven'tes, Velamen'ta infan'tis. The membranes which immediately envelop the fœtus in the cavity of the uterns, and the rupture of which gives rise to the discharge of the liquor amnii. These membranes are the decidua, chorion, and amnion.

MEMBRANEUX, Membranous.

MEMBRAN'IFORM, Membraniform'is, from membrana, and forma;—resembling a membrane. A name given to thin and flat parts, which resemble membranes.

MEMBRANIFORM MUSCLES. Very broad and thin muscles, as the platysma myoides, obliquus abdominis, &c.

MEMBRANOSUS, Fascia lata muscle.

MEM'BRANOUS, Membrano'sus, Membrana'ceus, Hymeno'des, (F.) Membraneux. Having the nature of membrane. Formed of membrane.

MEMBRANULA, Hymenium—m. Coronæ ciliaris, see Ciliary—m. Lunata vaginæ, Hymen—m. Nervorum, Neurilema—m. Semilunaris conjunctivæ, Valvula semilunaris.

MEM'BRANULE, Membran'ula, diminutive of membrana, 'a membrane.' A small membrane.

MEMBRE, Membrum—m. Viril, Penis.

MEMBRO'SUS, Membro'sior, Mentula'tus, Mutonia'tus, Nasa'tus, valdè Mentula'tus, Fascino'sus, Psolon, from membrum, 'the male organ.' One whose penis is very large.

MEMBRUM, Artus, Melos, Colon, a limb, a member, (F.) Membre. The limbs or extremities or members of animals are certain parts exterior to the body, which are more or less apparent, long, and moveable. It is by means of their limbs, that animals transport themselves from one place to another; and that they defend themselves, or attack others. The limbs are arranged on each side of the trunk, with which they are articulated. In man, they are four in number:—two upper or thoracic, and two lower, pelvic or abdominal. Also, the male organ.

MEMBRUM GENITALE VIRORUM, Penis—m. Muliebre, Clitoris—m. Seminale, Penis—m. Virile, Penis.

MÉMOIRE, Memory—m. Perte de, Amnesia.

MEMORIA DELETA, Amnesia.

MEM'ORY, Memo'ria, Mnemē, Hypomne'sis, Recorda'tio, Recorda'tus, (F.) Mémoire. The cerebral faculty, by virtue of which past impressions are recalled to the mind.

MEMPHI'TES LAPIS. A sort of stone, found in the environs of Memphis; which was formerly esteemed narcotic.

MENAGOGUES, Emmenagogues.

MENDESION, Ægyptiacum.

MENE, Moon.

MENECRATIS ACCIPITER, Accipiter.

MENES, Menses.

MÉNESPAUSIE, see Menses.

MENFRIGE, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MENINGARTHROC'ACÈ, Inflamma'tio membra'num articulatio'nis, Arthromeningi'tis, from μηνιγξ, 'membrane,' αρθρον, 'a joint,' and κακος, 'disease.' Inflammation of the membranes of a joint.

MÉNINGE, Dura mater.

MENINGÉ, Meningeal.

MENIN'GEAL, Menin'geus, from μηνιγξ, 'a membrane.' (F.) Méningé. Relating to the meninges, or merely to the dura mater.

Meningeal Apoplexy, see Apoplexy.

Meningeal Artery, Middle, Arte'ria menin'gea me'dia, A. Sphæno-spino'sa, A. Duræ Matris me'dia max'ima, A. Sphæno-spina'lis, Spinal Artery, (F.) Artère méningée moyenne, A. Sphéno-épineuse, A. Épineuse, is the largest of the branches given off by the internal maxillary artery. It enters the cranium by the foramen spinale, and distributes its branches chiefly to the dura mater.

Meningeal Vessels, Vasa menin'gea. The vessels of the membranes of the brain.

MENIN'GES, Eilam'ides, Matres seu Involu'cra Cer'ebri, Omen'ta seu Velamen'ta cerebra'lia, from μηνιγξ, 'a membrane.' The three membranes which envelop the brain—Dura mater, Arachnoid, and Pia mater.

MÉNINGETTE, Pia mater.

MENINGI'NA, (F.) Méningine. Same etymon. A name given by Chaussier to the pia mater, united to the cerebral layer of the arachnoid.

Meningina, Inner Lamina of the, Pia mater.

MÉNINGINE, Meningina.

MENINGINI'TIS, from meningina, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the meningina.

MENINGION, Arachnoid membrane.

MENINGIS CUSTOS, Meningophylax.

MÉNINGITE, Meningitis — m. Granuleuse, Hydrocephalus internus — m. Rachidienne, Meningitis, spinal — m. Tuberculeuse, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGI'TIS, Encephali'tis peripher'ica, E. membrano'sa, (F.) Inflammation de la membrane séreuse céphalo-rachidienne, Méningite. Inflammation of the meninges or membranes of the brain. See Phrenitis.

Meningitis Arthritica, Cephalagra — m. Infantum, Hydrocephalus internus — m. Membranosa, M. spinal.

Meningi'tis Mesencephal'ica. Inflammation of the meninges of the medulla oblongata and pons varolii more especially.

Meningitis Peripherica, M. spinal — m. Potatorum, Delirium tremens — m. Rachidian, M. spinal.

Meningitis, Spinal, M. Rachid'ian, M. Spina'lis seu peripher'ica seu membrano'sa, Perimyeli'tis, (F.) Méningite rachidienne. Inflammation of the meninges of the spinal marrow.

Meningitis, Tubercular, see Hydrocephalus internus — m. Tuberculosa, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENIN'GIUM. Diminutive of μηνιγξ, 'a membrane.' A fine, delicate membrane. The tunica arachnoidea of the brain.

MENINGO-CEPHALI'TIS, Meningo-encephali'tis, Ceph'alo-meningi'tis, from μηνιγξ, 'a membrane,' κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the membranes and brain.

MENINGOGASTRITIS, Fever, gastric.

MENINGOMALA'CIA, from μηνιγξ, 'membrane,' and μαλακια, 'softening.' Softening of membranes in general.

MENINGOPH'YLAX, Custos menin'gis, Depresso'rium, (F.) Dépressoire, from μηνιγξ, 'a membrane,' the dura mater; and φυλαξ, 'a preserver.' An instrument for depressing the dura mater, and guarding it from injury, whilst the bone is cut or rasped.

MENINGORRHŒ'A, from μηνιγξ, 'membrane,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Effusion of blood upon or between the membranes of the brain.

MENINGO'SIS. Same etymon. The union of bones by means of membrane; e. g. the articulation of the bones of the cranium in the fœtus. Meningosis is a variety of Syndesmosis.

MENINGOSYM'PHYSIS; from μηνιγξ, 'membrane,' and συμφυσις, 'growing together.' Adhesion of or by membrane. Adhesion of the membranes of the brain to each other, or to the brain.

MENINX, Membrane — m. Choroides, Pia mater — m. Crassa, Dura mater — m. Dura, Dura mater — m. Exterior, Dura mater — m. Interior, Pia mater—m. Media, Arachnoid membrane—m. Pacheia, Dura mater — m. Selera, Dura mater.

MENISCHESIS, see Amenorrhœa.

MENISPERMUM ANGULATUM, M. Canadense.

Menisperm'um Canaden'sē, M. angula'tum, from μηνη, 'the moon,' and σπερμα, 'seed.' A climbing plant, growing in various parts of the United States. Said to be used in Virginia as a substitute for sarsaparilla in scrofula. It is an excitant tonic.

Menisper'mum Coc'culus, M. glaucum, Anamir'ta Coc'culus, A. panicula'ta, Coc'culus subero'sus, so called from the shape of its seed. Family Menispermeæ. Sex. Syst. Dioecia Dodecandria. The systematic name of the plant, the berries of which are well known by the name of Coc'culus In'dicus, Indian Berries, Baccæ Piscato'riæ, Coc'culus subero'sus, Indian Cockles, Coccus In'dicus, Cocculæ officina'rum, Cocci orienta'les, Grana Orien'tis, (F.) Coque du Levant, Coque levant. These berries are remarkable for their inebriating and destructive quality to fish. The deleterious principle appears to reside in the kernel, and in the active principle called Picrotox'ine. Cocculus Indicus has been used in decoction to kill vermin. It has, at times, been added to beer, by fraudulent tradesmen, to render it more inebriating.

Menispermum Glaucum, M. cocculus—m. Palmatum, Calumba.

Menisper'mum Tubercula'tum, M. Verruco'sum, Coc'culus crispus. A Chinese plant, an extract from the root of which is tonic to the stomach and bowels, and possesses some astringency. Dose, 5 to 10 grains.

The same may be said of Menisper'mum cordifo'lium — the Goluncha, of Bengal.

Menispermum Verrucosum, M. tuberculatum.

MENOCRYPHIA, Amenorrhœa.

MENOLIPSIS, see Menses.

MENOPAUSIS, see Menses.

MENOPHANIA, see Menses.

MENOPLANIA, Menstruation, vicarious.

MENORRHAG''IA, from μην, 'a month,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I flow fiercely.' Flow of the menses. Frequently, the word is used synonymously with uterine hemorrhage or metrorrhagia, or for immoderate flow of the menses — profusa menstruation, Parame'nia super'flua, P. profu'sa, Menorrhag''ia rubra, Catamenio'rum fluxus immod'icus, Menstrua immod'ica, M. super'flua, Menorrhœ'a.

Menorrhagia, Menstruation, Metrorrhagia — m. Alba, Leucorrhœa — m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœ — m. Erronea, Menstruation, erroneous — m. Stillatitia, Dysmenorrhœa.

MENORRHŒ'A, from μην, 'month,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Too long continuing, or too often returning, menstruation. Also, menorrhagia.

MENOSCHESIS, see Amenorrhœa.

MENOSTASIA, Amenorrhœa.

MENOS'TASIS, from μην, 'month,' and στασις, 'stasis,' 'stagnation.' This word, according to some, signifies the retention of the menses and their accumulation in the uterus. According to others, it means the acute pain which, in some females, precedes each appearance of the menses: a pain which has been presumed to proceed from the stasis of blood in the capillary vessels of the uterus.

MENOXEN'IA, Menoxeno'sis, from μην, 'a month,' and ξενος, 'foreign.' Irregular menstruation.

MENOXENOSIS, Menoxenia.

MENS, Anima, Intellect.

MENSA, 'a table.' The upper superficial part of the jaw teeth.

MENSES, (Mensis, 'a month;') M. Mulie'bres, Mulie'bria, Menes, Fluxus men'struus, F. luna'ris, Pro'fluvium mulie'brē, P. genita'lē muliebre, Consuetu'do menstrua, Catame'nia, Men'strua, Emme'nia, Tribu'tum luna'rē seu men'struum, Purgatio'nes, P. menstruæ, Gynæcei'a, Aphedri'a, Cursus men'struus, Horæ'a, Luna'ria, Courses, Menstrual flux, Monthly courses, M. periods, Flowers, Turns, Terms, the Reds, Troubles, (F.) Mois, Règles, Lunes, Flueurs, Affaires, Époques, Ordinaires, Purgations, Fleurs, Menstrues. The sanguineous evacuation from the uterus, Sanguis menstruus, the monthly occurrence of which constitutes menstruation. The first appearance of the menses — menopha'nia — is usually preceded by the discharge of a fluid whitish matter from the vagina; by nervous excitement, and by vague pains and heaviness in the loins and thighs; numbness of the limbs, tumefaction and hardness of the breasts, &c. More or less indisposition and irritability also precede each successive recurrence of the menstrual flux. In temperate climates, each period ordinarily continues from three to six days; and the quantity lost varies from four to eight ounces. The menses continue to flow from the period of puberty till the age of 45 or 50. At the term of its natural cessation, Menolip'sis, Ménespausie (Gardanne,) Menopau'sis, the flux becomes irregular; and this irregularity is occasionally accompanied with symptoms of dropsy, glandular tumours, &c, constituting the Parame'nia cessatio'nis of Good, and what is called the critical time or turn of life; yet it does not appear that the mortality is increased by it. With the immediate causes of menstruation we are unacquainted. We express only our ignorance, when we assert it to depend upon periodicity; the discharge comes from the vessels of the uterus and vagina, and differs from ordinary blood by its peculiar odour, and by its not coagulating. It is evidently connected with the condition of the ovaries, and appears to be connected with the periodical discharge of ova from them. It is arrested, as a general principle, during pregnancy and lactation. In warm climates, women usually begin to menstruate early, and cease sooner than in the temperate regions. The quantity lost is also greater. In the colder regions, the reverse of this holds as a general rule.

Menses Albi, Leucorrhœa — m. Anomalæ, Paramenia — m. Devii, Menstruation, vicarious — m. Dolorifici, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Retention of the, see Amenorrhœa — m. Suppression of the, Amenorrhœa.

MENSTRUAL, Catamenial—m. Flux, Menses.

MENSTRUANT, Men'struans, from menstrua, 'the catamenia.' One subject to the catamenia.

MENSTRUATIO ANOMALA, Paramenia — m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Dolorifica, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Impedita, see Amenorrhœa—m. Per insolitas Vias, Menstruation, vicarious.

Menstrua'tio Recidi'va. Menstruation, when protracted beyond the usual age.

Menstruatio Retenta, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia — m. Suppressa, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia.

MENSTRUA'TION, Menstrua'tio, Chronogu'nea, Menorrhag''ia, Fluxus menstrua'lis. The flow of the menses.

MENSTRUATION DIFFICILE, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Difficult, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Laborious, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Profuse, Menorrhagia.

Menstruation, Vica'rious, is that which occurs from other parts than the uterus. It is called Parame'nia erro'ris, Menorrhag''ia erro'nea, Mensium per alie'na loca excre'tio, Menses de'vii, Aberra'tio men'sium seu menstruo'rum, Menstrua'tio per insol'itas vias, Hæmatopla'nia seu Hæmopla'nia menstrua'lis, Menopla'nia, (F.) Deviation des Règles, Règles déviées. At times, the secreted fluid has all the characters of the menstrual secretion; at others, it appears to be mere blood.

MENSTRUEL, Catamenial.

MENSTRUES, Menses.

MENSTRUOUS, Catamenial. Also, one affected with the menses or catamenia.

MEN'STRUUM, (F.) Menstrue. Same etymon; — the menstruum being, of old, usually continued in action for a month. This name was formerly given to every substance which possesses the property of dissolving others slowly and with the aid of heat. At present, it is used synonymously with solvent. Thus — water, alcohol, ether, acids, oils, &c., are menstrua.

Menstruum Auri, Nitro-muriatic acid — m. Ventriculi, Gastric juice.

MENSU'RA MED'ICA. A measure of 48 ounces.

MENSURA'TION, Meta'tio, from mensura, 'measure.' Measurement, Medical meas'uring. One of the means used for exploring the state of the thoracic and other cavities. It consists in a comparative measurement of each side of the chest, by means of a riband extended from the median line of the sternum to the spine. When effusion exists on one side, the measurement is usually greater than on the other. When, on the other hand, a portion of a lung has ceased, for some time, to exert its respiratory functions, the corresponding side of the chest becomes smaller, in consequence of the contraction of the pleura, retraction of the pulmonary tissue, and greater approximation of the ribs.

MENTA, Mentha, Penis.

MENTAGRA, Mentulagra, Sycosis — m. Infantum, Porrigo lupinosa.

MEN'TAGRAPHYTE, Men'tagrophyte, from mentagra, and φυτον, 'a plant.' A name proposed by M. Gruby, of Vienna, for a cryptogamic plant, which he found in the eruption of mentagra.

MENTAL, Menta'lis, from mens, 'mind;' belonging or relating to the mind, as mental phenom'ena, mental diseases (Morbi menta'les,) &c.

In Anatomy, Mental, Menta'lis, (F.) Mentonnier, signifies that which relates to the chin; from mentum, 'the chin.'

Mental Ar'tery, (F.) Artère mentonnière.

This is given off by the inferior dental, and issues at the mental foramen to be distributed on the lower lip.

Mental Fora'men, (F.) Trou mentonnier, Ante'rior maxillary F., is the outer orifice of the inferior dental canal. It is situate on the outer surface of the lower jaw-bone, opposite the second incisor, or the canine tooth, and gives passage to the vessels and nerves.

Mental Fossa, see Fossa, mental.

Mental Nerve, (F.) Nerf mentonnier, is furnished by the inferior dental nerve. It issues by the mental foramen, and is distributed, in numerous filaments, to the muscles of the lower lip.

Mental Region, Re'gio menta'lis. The region of the chin.

MENTHA seu MENTA AQUATICA, Menthas'trum, Sisym'brium menthastrum, Mentha palus'tris seu hirsu'ta seu rotundifo'lia palus'tris, Bal'samus palus'tris, Watermint, (F.) Menthe aquatique, M. rouge. Nat. Ord. Labiatæ. This is less agreeable than the Mentha viridis, and more bitter and pungent. It is used like spearmint.

Mentha Balsamea, M. piperita.

Mentha Capen'sis, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope, possesses the medical properties of the mints.

Mentha Cervi'na, Hart's pennyroyal, Hyssop-leaved mint, Pule'gium cervi'num, (F.) Menthe cervine. Possesses the properties of pennyroyal, but is very unpleasant.

Mentha Citrata, Melissa.

Mentha Crispa, M. hercyn'ica, Colymbif'era minor, Curled Mint, (F.) Menthe frissée, Menthe crêpue, Baume d'eau à feuilles ridées. Possesses the properties of peppermint.

Mentha Gentilis, M. viridis — m. Hercynica, M. crispa — m. Hirsuta, M. Aquatica — m. Lævigata, M. viridis — m. Officinalis, M. piperita — m. Palustris, M. Aquatica.

Mentha Piperi'ta, Mentha Piperi'tis seu officina'lis seu balsame'a, Peppermint, (F.) Menthe poivrée. The odour of this variety is strong and agreeable. Taste, pungent, aromatic, and producing a sensation of coldness in the mouth. Virtues depend upon essential oil and camphor. It is stomachic and carminative. It is chiefly used in the form of essential oil—the oleum menthæ piperitæ.

Essence of Peppermint consists of ol. menthæ pip. ℥ij, sp. vin. rectif., coloured with spinach leaves, Oij. See Tinctura olei menthæ piperitæ.

Mentha Pule'gium, Pulegium, Pulegium rega'lē, Pulegium latifo'lium, Glechon, Pennyroyal, Pudding grass, (F.) Pouliot. The oil — O'leum pule'gii — possesses the virtues of the plant. It resembles the mints in general in properties. Amongst the vulgar, it is esteemed an emmenagogue.

Mentha Romana, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita — m. Rotundifolia palustris, M. aquatica — m. Saracenica, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita — m. Sativa, M. viridis — m. Spicata, M. viridis.

Mentha Vir'idis, M. Sati'va seu vulga'ris seu gentil'is seu spica'ta seu læviga'ta, Spearmint, (F.) Menthe sauvage, Baume des jardins, Menthe verte, Menthe des jardins. Odour strong, aromatic; taste, warm, austere, bitterish. Virtues the same as those of the peppermint. The Oleum menthæ viridis is obtained from it.

Mentha Vulgaris, M. viridis.

MENTHASTRUM, Mentha aquatica.

MENTHE AQUATIQUE, Mentha aquatica — m. Cervine, Mentha cervina — m. Coq, Tanacetum balsamita — m. Crêpue, Mentha crispa — m. Frissée, Mentha crispa — m. des Jardins — Mentha viridis — m. Poivrée, Mentha piperita — m. Rouge, Mentha aquatica—m. Sauvage, Mentha viridis—m. Verte, Mentha viridis.

MENTIGO, Porrigo larvalis, Sycosis.

MENTISME, from mens, mentis, 'mind.' Any irregular movement of the mind, whether from emotion or a vivid imagination. — Baumes.

MENTOBICORNEUS, Geniohyoides.

MENTO-LABIAL, Mento-labia'lis. Under this name Chaussier has united the Levator labii inferioris, and Quadratus muscles. See Depressor labii inferioris.

Mento-labial Furrow: a transverse depression situate between the lower lip and the chin, which is remarkable for the perpendicular direction of the hairs growing upon it.

MENTON, Mentum.

MENTONNIER, Mental—m. Labial, Depressor labii inferioris.

MENTONNIÈRE, see Funda.

MENTULA, Penis — m. Muliebris, Cercosis, Clitoris — m. Parva, Pipinna.

MEN'TULAGRA, Men'tagra. A hybrid word, from mentula, 'the penis,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' A convulsive erection of the mentula or penis; such as is said to be sometimes observed in eunuchs. See Pudendagra.

MENTULATUS, Membrosus.

MENTUM, Genei'on, Geni'um, Anthe'reon, 'the chin.' (F.) Menton. The inferior and middle part of the face, situate below the lower lip. The chin is formed of skin, areolar tissue, muscles, vessels, nerves, and the os maxillare inferius.

MENYAN'THES TRIFOLIA'TA, Minyan'thes, Trifo'lium paludo'sum seu aquat'icum seu palus'trē seu fibri'num, Menyan'thes, Water trefoil, Buckbean, Bogbean. Nat. Ord. Gentianeæ. (F.) Trèfle d'eau. The taste is intensely bitter, and is extracted by water. It is tonic, anthelmintic, diuretic, cathartic, and, in large doses, emetic. In some countries, it is used as a substitute for hops in making beer.

Menyan'thes Verna, American buck bean, Marsh trefoil, Water shamrock, Bitter root, has similar properties.

MEOSIS, Meiosis.

MEPHIT'IC, Mephit'icus; from a Syriac word, signifying 'to blow, to breathe.' Any thing possessed of an unwholesome property; chiefly applied to exhalations.

MEPHITIS, see Mephitism — m. Hepatica, Hydrogen, sulphuretted — m. Inflammabilis, Hydrogen — m. Urinosa, Ammonia.

MEPH'ITISM. Same etymon. Any pernicious exhalation. Mephi'tis and Mophe'ta, (F.) Mofette ou Moufette, are old names for azote; and, in general, for all exhalations and gases that are unfit for respiration.

MERACUS, Merus.

MERAMAUROSIS, Hypamaurosis.

MERANÆSTHE'SIS, Meranæsthe'sia, from μερος, 'a part,' αν, 'privative,' and αισθησις, 'sensation.' Insensibility of a part of the body.

MERATROPH'IA, from μερος, 'a part,' and ατροφια, 'want of nourishment.' Atrophy of some part of the body.

MERCU'RIAL, Mercuria'lis, Hydrargyr'icum, Hydrargyr'ium. That which contains mercury. A preparation of mercury.

MERCURIA'LIS, Mercuria'lis an'nua, French mercury. It has been esteemed cathartic, hypnotic and cosmetic, and has been chiefly used by way of lavement. See Chenopodium Bonus Henricus.

Mercurialis Humor, Humor melancholi'cus. A supposititious humour with the older physicians, out of which they presumed that morbi melancholi'ci seu mercuria'les arose.

Mercurialis Peren'nis, Cynocram'bē, Cani'na bras'sica, M. monta'na, M. Sylves'tris, Dog's mercury. This plant is possessed of acro-narcotic properties.

MERCURIALISMUS, Hydrargyriasis.

MERCU'RIALIST, Mercuriali'sta ; from mercurius, 'mercury.' One inordinately addicted to prescribing mercury.

MERCURIALIZA'TION. Same etymon. The state of being affected by mercury. One under the influence of mercury is said to be mercurialized.

MERDA, Excrement.

MERDIVOMUS, Copremetus.

MERDUS, Excrement.

MÈRE DES PIANS, Pian.

MEREMPHRAX'IS, from μερος, 'a part,' and εμφραξις, 'obstruction.' Obstruction or infarction of an organ.

MERICUS, Local.

MERIDRO'SIS, Sudor partia'lis seu loca'lis ; from μερος, 'a part,' and 'ιδρωσις, 'sweating.' A partial perspiration.

MERIMNA, Cura.

MERIMNE, Cura.

MERISIER, Prunus avium.

MEROBALANEUM, Bath, partial.

MEROBALNEUM, Bath, partial.

MEROCE'LĒ, Miroce'tē, Merorix'is, Merorrhex'is, from μερος, 'the thigh,' and κηλη, 'tumour ;' Hernia cruralis seu femora'lis, Femoral or crural hernia, (F.) Hernie crurale ou fémorale. In this hernia, the viscera issue from the abdomen through the crural canal; or through an opening immediately on the outer side of Gimbernat's ligament, which gives passage to lymphatic vessels. This affection is more frequent in the female than in the male, and especially in those who have had children. The tumour, formed by merocele, is generally small, round, and more or less difficult of reduction. In other respects, it possesses all the characters of hernia. The neck of the sac has, close on the outside, the epigastric artery; above, the spermatic cord and spermatic artery in the male — the round ligament in the female; on the inside, Gimbernat's ligament; and, below the pubes. When the obturator artery arises from the epigastric, it generally passes on the outside of and below the orifice of the sac; sometimes, however, it takes a turn above, and then to the inside of the opening. J. Cloquet asserts, that of 134 cases, in one only did he find the epigastric artery on the inside of the orifice of the sac.

The operation, required in strangulation of this variety, may be practised on the aponeurotic opening, by cutting downwards and inwards, on the side of Gimbernat's ligament.

MEROCOXALGIA, Coxalgia.

MERO'PIA, from μερος, 'a part,' and ωψ, 'the eye.' A partial obscurity of vision.

MERORIXIS, Merocele.

MERORRHEU'MA, Rheumatis'mus partia'lis, Rh. local'is, Rh. Membro'rum singulo'rum; from μερος, 'a part,' and ρευμα, 'defluxion, rheumatism.' Rheumatism affecting a part. Topical or local rheumatism.

MERORRHEXIS, Merocele.

MEROS, Femur, Thigh.

MERRY-ANDREW. An itinerant quack, who exposes his nostrums for sale at fairs and markets. See Charlatan.—So called from Dr. Andrew Boorde, who lived in the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., and Queen Mary, and who was in the habit of frequenting fairs and markets at which he harangued the populace.

MERULIUS AURICULA, Peziza auricula.

MERUS, Mera'cus, A'cratos, 'pure, genuine;' as Vinum merum, unmixed wine.

Merus, Femur, Thigh.

MERVINE MALE, Cypripedium luteum.

MERYCISMUS, Rumination.

MERYCOLOG''IA, from μερυκω, 'I ruminate,' and λογος, 'a description.' Any work on rumination may be so termed.

MESA, Genital organs.

MESARÆUM, Mesentery.

MESARAIC, Mesenteric.

MESEMAR, Mismar.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM COPTICUM, see Soda.

Mesembryan'themum Crystal'linum, M. ficoi'des, Di'amond fig-maryyold, Ice-plant, (F.) Glaciale, Crystalline. Nat. Ord. Ficoideæ: a plant common in the neighbourhood of Cape Town. It has been recommended in dysuria, ischuria, and some other affections of the urinary organs.

Mesembryanthemum Edu'lē; and M. aciniformē, South African plants, are much used as domestic remedies at the Cape. The expressed juice of the leaves acts as an astringent in dysentery, and as a mild diuretic. It is also used as an antiseptic gargle in malignant sore throat, violent salivation and aphthæ, and as a lotion to burns and scalds.

Mesembryan'themum Tortuo'sum, also a South African plant, is said to possess narcotic properties.

MÉSENCÉPHALE, Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii.

MES'ENTERIC, Mesara'ic, Mesenter'icus, Mesara'icus, Mesaræ'icus; from μεσεντριον, or μεσαραιον, 'the mesentery.' That which relates or belongs to the mesentery.

Mesenteric Arteries are two in number, and distinguished into, 1. The Superior mesenteric, which arises from the anterior part of the abdominal aorta, below the cœliac. It immediately descends to the left, forwards, behind the pancreas, and in front of the third portion of the duodenum,—to gain the superior extremity of the mesentery, where it makes a long curvature, the convexity of which is turned forwards and to the left. Towards the termination of the ileum, it ends by anastomosing with a branch of the A. colica dextra inferior. At its concavity, it gives off the three Arteriæ colicæ dextræ, which belong to the great intestine; and, at its convexity, it sends off fifteen or twenty branches, which are distributed to the small intestine, after having formed numerous arches by their anastomoses.

2. The Inferior Mesenteric Artery arises from the anterior part of the abdominal aorta, an inch and a half before its termination. It descends, on the left side, behind the peritoneum; engages itself in the substance of the iliac mesocolon, forming a considerable curvature, whose convexity faces the left side. When it reaches the brim of the pelvis, it passes along the posterior separation of the mesorectum, and attains the neighbourhood of the anus, under the name Superior hemorrhoidal artery. It gives off no branch at its concave part; but, from the convex, the three Arteriæ colicæ sinistræ arise.

Mesenteric Disease, Tabes mesenterica.

Mesenteric Glands are the lymphatic ganglions of the mesentery. Through them, the chyliferous vessels pass to the thoracic duct. Their uses are unknown. When diseased, nutrition is interfered with, and atrophy produced.

Mesenteric Hernia. If one of the layers of the mesentery be torn by a blow, whilst the other remains in its natural state, the intestines may insinuate themselves into the aperture, and form a kind of hernia. It is not known during life.

Mesenteric Plexuses are furnished by the solar plexus, and have been distinguished into superior and inferior; like the mesenteric arteries which they accompany.

Mesenteric or Mesaraic Veins are two in number, and belong to the vena porta. They are distinguished into, 1. The Superior mesenteric or mesaraic or great mesaraic. This trunk receives, from above to below and on the right side, the three venæ colicæ dextræ and the Gastro-epiploica dextra. Into its left side, the veins of the small intestine open. It passes in front of the transverse portion of the duodenum; and, behind the pancreas, unites with the splenic vein to concur in the formation of the vena porta.

The inferior or lesser mesenteric vein corresponds to the artery of the same name, and opens into the splenic, near the union of that vein with the superior mesenteric, and behind the pancreas.

MESENTERIITIS, Mesenteritis.

MESENTERI'TIS, Mesenterii'tis, Empres'ma peritoni'tis mesenter'ica, Enteri'tis mesenter'ica, Inflamma'tion of the mesentery. The pain is here deeper seated and more immediately in the mesenteric region. The external tenderness is less than in some of the other varieties of peritonitis. See Tabes Mesenterica.

MESENTERIUM, Mesentery — m. Crassum, Mesocolon.

MESENTERON, Mesentery.

MES'ENTERY, Mesenter'ium, Mesarai'on, Mesaræ'um, Media'num, Membra'na pinguis intestino'rum, Lactes, Mesen'teron, Mescræ'um, Mesoræ'um, Medium intesti'num, Epichor'dis, from μεσος, 'in the middle,' and εντερον, 'intestine.' (F.) Mésentère. A term in anatomy, applied to several duplicatures of the peritoneum, which maintain the different portions of the intestinal canal in their respective situations; allowing, however, more or less motion. They are formed of two laminæ, between which are contained the corresponding portion of intestine and the vessels that pass to it. One only of these duplicatures has received the name mesentery, properly so called. This belongs to the small intestine, which it suspends and retains in situ. Its posterior margin, which is the smallest, is straight, and descends obliquely from the left side of the body of the second lumbar vertebra to the right iliac fossa. Its anterior margin is curved, undulating, plaited, and corresponds to the whole length of the small intestine. The mesentery contains, between the two laminæ which form it, a number of lymphatic ganglions; the trunks and branches of the mesenteric vessels; the nervous plexuses accompanying them, and many lacteals and lymphatics.

MESERA, Tutia.

MESERÆUM, Mesentery.

MESERAION, Mesentery.

ME'SIAL, from μεσος, 'in the middle.' Relating or appertaining to the middle.

Mesial Plane, an imaginary plane, dividing the head, neck, and trunk into similar halves, towards right and left. Every aspect towards this plane is mesial; and every aspect towards right or left is lateral; every lateral aspect being dextral or sinistral.

MESIAMUM, Aniceton.

MESMER'IC, Mesmer'icus. Relating to mesmerism or animal magnetism:—as the 'mesmeric state,' 'mesmeric sleep,' &c. &c.

MESMERISM, Magnetism, animal.

MES'MERIST. A practiser of, or believer in, mesmerism.

MESMERIZA'TION, Magnetiza'tion. The act of mesmerizing. The state of being mesmerized.

MES'MERIZED, Mesmeriza'tus, Mag'netized. Affected with mesmerism or animal magnetism. When the person is in a state of 'magnetic sleep,' he is said to be hyp'notized.

MES'MERIZER, An'imal Magneti'zer, Magneti'zer. One who practises mesmerism.

MESO, μεσος, 'in the middle.' A prefix to certain words.

MESOBREGMATE, see Cranium.

MESOCÆ'CUM. A name given to a duplicature of the peritoneum, (in some persons only,) at the posterior part of the cæcum.

MÉSOCÉPHALE, Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii.

MESOCHON'DRIAC, Mesochondri'acus; from μεσος, and χονδρος, 'cartilage.' A name given by Boerhaave to fleshy fibres situate between the cartilaginous rings of the trachea.

MESOCOL'IC HERNIA. Hernia is so named by Sir Astley Cooper, when the bowels glide between the layers of the mesocolon.

MESOCO'LON, Mesoco'lum, Mesenter'ium crassum, from μεσος, and κωλον, 'the colon.' A name given to the duplicatures of the peritoneum, which fix the different parts of the colon to the abdominal parietes. It has received different names, according to its situation. The right lumbar mesocolon fixes the ascending colon to the corresponding lumbar region. The transverse mesocolon arises from the concave arch of the colon, and forms a septum between the epigastric and umbilical regions. Its inferior portion is continuous with the mesentery. The left lumbar mesocolon, which contains the ascending colon, is continuous below with the Iliac mesocolon. The last includes between its layers the sigmoid flexure of the colon, and ends in the mesorectum. Under the right kidney, it is narrow and firm, and forms the right lig'ament of the colon: at the under end of the left kidney, it forms the left lig'ament of the colon.

MESOCRANIUM, Sinciput.

MESOCRANUM, Sinciput.

MESODERMUM, Corpus mucosum.

MESODME, Mediastinum.

MESODMI'TIS, from μεσοδμη, 'the mediastinum,' and itis, 'inflammation.' Mesotæchi'tis, Mediastini'tis, Inflamma'tio mediasti'ni. Inflammation of the mediastinum.

MESOGASTRIUM, Umbilical region.

MESOGLOSSUS, Genioglossus.

MESOGLOTTUS, Genioglossus.

MESOGONIUM, Internodium.

MESOLO'BAR. Belonging to the Mésolobe or Corpus callo'sum.

Mesolobar Arteries, Arte'riæ mesolob'icæ, A. cor'poris callo'si cer'ebri, are the arteries of the corpus callosum.

MÉSOLOBE, Corpus callosum.

MESOMER'IA, from μεσος, and μερος, 'the thigh.' The parts of the body situate between the thighs or hips.

MESOMERION, Perinæum.

MESOMPHALUM, Umbilicus.

MESOPHLEB'IUM, from μεσος, 'in the middle,' and φλεψ, 'a vein;' Interve'nium. The space between two veins.

MESOPH'RYON, Glabell'a, Gabel'la, Intercil'ium, Meto'pium, Nasal eminence. The part between the eyebrows; from μεσος, 'the middle,' and οφρυα, 'the eyebrows.'

MESOPLEURIUM, Intercostal space.

MESOPLEURIUS, Intercostal.

MESORÆUM, Mesentery.

MESOR'CHIUM, from μεσος, 'the middle,' and ορχις, 'a testicle.' A duplicature of the peritoneum, which supports the testicle in its passage from the abdomen into the scrotum. — Seiler.

MESOREC'TUM. A hybrid word; from μεσος, and rectum, 'the intestine rectum.' A triangular reflection, formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior surface of the rectum and the anterior surface of the sacrum. Between the two layers of which the mesorectum is composed are found much areolar tissue, and the termination of the inferior mesenteric vessels.

MESOS, Meso.

MESOSCELOCELE, Hernia, perineal.

MESOSCELON, Perinæum.

MESOSCELOPHY'MA, from Mesoscelon, 'perinæum,' and φυμα, 'swelling.' A tumour of the perinæum.

MESOTH'ENAR, from μεσος, and θεναρ, 'the thenar,' 'the palm of the hand.' A muscle, which carries the thumb towards the palm. Winslow applied the term to the adductor pollicis, united to the deep-seated portion of the flexor brevis pollicis.

MESOT'ICA, from μεσος, 'middle.' Diseases affecting the parenchyma. Pravity in the quantity or quality of the intermediate or connecting substance of organs; without inflammation, fever, or other derangement of the general health. The first Order, class Eccritica of Good.

MESOTŒCHITIS, Mesodmitis.

MESOTŒCHIUM, Mediastinum.

MESOTŒCHUM, Mediastinum.

MES'PILUS, Mespilus German'ica seu domes'tica. The medlar, (F.) Néflier. The fruit, (F.) Nèfle, and seeds of the medlar have both been used medicinally:—the immature fruit as an astringent, and the seeds in nephritic diseases. See Cratægus Aria and Sorbus acuparia.

Mespilus Aria, Cratægus aria—m. Domestica, Mespilus, Sorbus domestica—m. Germanica, Mespilus—m. Intermedia, Mespilus oxyacantha—m. Lævigata, Mespilus oxyacantha.

Mespilus Oxyacan'tha, M. Oxyacanthoi'des

seu interme'dia seu lævigata, Oxyacantha, Spina alba, White Hawthorn, (F.) Aubepine. The flowers of this uncommon European plant are sometimes used in infusion as a pectoral.

MESPILUS OXYACANTHOIDES, Mespilus oxyacantha.

META, μετα, Meth', μεθ', 'with,' 'together with,' 'after,' 'change of form and place.' A common prefix to words. Hence:

METAB'ASIS, Tran'situs, Metab'olē, Metabol'ia, Metal'lagē, Metallax'is, from μεταβαινω, 'I digress.' A change of remedy, practice, &c. —Hippocrates.

METABOLE, Metabasis, Transformation.

METABOLEL'OGY, Metabolelog''ia; from μεταβολη, 'change,' and λογος, 'a description.' A description of the changes which supervene in the course of a disease.

METABOLIA, Metabasis.

METABOL'IC, Metabol'icus, from μεταβολη, 'change.' Appertaining to change or transformation.

METABOL'IC FORCE. A term employed by Schwann for the power possessed by living cells of changing the character of the substances brought in contact with them.

METACAR'PAL, Metacarpia'nus, (F.) Métacarpien. Relating or belonging to the metacarpus.

METACARPAL ARTERY, Arte'ria dorsa'lis metacar'pi, arises from the radial, at the moment it engages itself in the upper extremity of the abductor indicis. It descends obliquely upon the back of the hand. Its branches are distributed to the abductor indicis, and the integuments: some communicato with the dorsalis carpi.

METACARPAL ARTICULA'TIONS are those by which the last four metacarpal bones are united together at their upper extremity.

METACARPAL BONES, or bones which compose the metacarpus, are five in number; and distinguished into first, second, third, &c., beginning from the outer or radial side. They are articulated by their superior extremity with the bones of the second range of the carpus; and by the lower with the first phalanges.

METACARPAL LIG'AMENT, Infe'rior palmar Lig'ament, is a fibrous band, stretched transversely before the inferior extremities of the last four metacarpal bones, which it keeps in their respective positions.

METACARPAL PHALAN'GES are the first phalanges of the fingers; so called, because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus.

METACARPAL RANGE or row of the carpal bones, (F.) Rangée métacarpienne du carpe, is the lower row of carpal bones; so called because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus. It is composed of the trapezium, trapezoides, magnum, and unciforme.

METACARPEUS, Abductor metacarpi minimi digiti.

MÉTACARPIEN, Metacarpal — m. du Petit doigt, Opponens minimi digiti—m. du Pouce, Opponens pollicis.

METACARPION, Metacarpus.

METACARPO-PHALANGÆUS POLLICIS, Adductor pollicis manus.

METACAR'PO-PHALAN'GIAN, Metacarpophalangia'nus, Metacarpo-phal'angal, (F.) Métacarpo-phalangien. That which belongs to the metacarpus and phalanges.

METACARPO-PHALANGIAN or METACARPO-PHALANGAL ARTICULATIONS are formed by the bones of the metacarpus and the corresponding phalanges. In these articulations, the bony surfaces are incrusted with cartilage, covered by a synovial membrane, and kept in connexion by means of an anterior and two lateral ligaments.

MÉTACARPO-PHALANGIEN LATÉRAL SUS-PALMAIRE, ET MÉTACARPO-PHALANGIEN LATÉRAL, Interosseus manus.

METACAR'PUS, from μετα, 'after,' and carpus, 'the wrist;' Metacar'pion, Postbra'chia'lē, Postcar'pium, Torus manûs, (F.) Métacarpe. The part of the hand comprised between the carpus and fingers. It is composed of five parallel bones, called metacarpal; forming the back of the hand, externally, and the palm internally.

METACERASMA, Cerasma.

METACHEIRIXIS, Surgery.

METACHIRISIS, Surgery.

METACHIRISMUS, Surgery.

METACHORESIS, Metastasis.

METACINEMA, Metastasis.

METACINESIS, Metastasis.

METACONDYLE, see Phalanx.

METACYE'SIS, from μετα, 'after,' and κυησις, 'pregnancy;' Gravid'itas extra-uteri'na secunda'ria. Extra-uterine pregnancy in which the fœtus is at first in the uterus, but subsequently in some other place.

METADERMATO'SIS, from μετα, 'after,' and δερμα, 'skin.' A morbid development of the epidermis or epithelium.

METAL, Metal'lum. A class of simple, combustible bodies; distinguished from others by considerable specific gravity; a particular splendour; almost total opacity; insolubility in water; and the property they have of ringing when struck. Metals have no effect, except of a mechanical nature, when taken into the stomach; unless they have already undergone, or undergo in the stomach, oxidation or union with an acid; when several most deleterious compounds may be formed. Copper cents; half-pence; quicksilver; lead, have frequently been swallowed in the metallic state with impunity. Tin and mercury are the only metals prescribed for a mechanical effect: the former as an anthelmintic,—the latter, idly enough, in cases of fancied intussusception.

MÉTAL DES CLOCHES, Bell-metal.

METALLAGE, Metabasis.

METALLAXIS, Metallage.

METALLIC VOICE, Tintement métallique.

METALLODYN'IA, from μεταλλον, 'a metal,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain owing to the injurious influence of a metal—as lead, quicksilver, &c.

METALLUM, Metal — m. Hæmatopoieticum, Ferrum.

METAMORPHOP'SIA, Phantasmascop'ia, Phantasmatoscop'ia, from μεταμορφοω, (μετα, and μορφη, 'form,) 'I transform,' and ωψ, 'the eye.' Suffu'sio, Suffu'sio Oculo'rum, Suffu'sio metamorpho'sis, S. Myo'des, Imagination (Maître-Jean); Crupsia, Marmar'ygē, Marmor'ygē, Mac'ulæ ante oc'ulos volitan'tes, Marau'gia, Oc'uli marmaryo'des, False sight, (F.) Berlue. Aberration of the sense of sight, which transmits the image of imaginary objects. This affection sometimes depends on a slight opacity in the transparent parts of the eye; the cornea, crystalline, or vitreous humour, when it is symptomatic and of no consequence. At other times, it appears to be idiopathic; and occurs particularly in those who have been in the habit of constantly fixing their eyes on very brilliant or small bodies. The objects fancied to be seen are various. They are sometimes circular, perpetually moving, or shining or black spots, cobwebs, insects, or pieces of wood—when they are often termed Muscæ volitan'tes, (F.) Mouches volantes, and the condition

Visus musca'rum, Scotom'ata, Suffu'sio Myo'des, Myiodeop'sia, Myodeopsia, Visus musca'rum. These appearances sometimes continue for a few days; being dependent on the state of the nerves of the individual at the time; or they may exist for life, and ultimately impair the sight. Certain of them change their position, and appear to be seated in the humours of the eye, and — it has been supposed — in the vitreous humour more especially: hence the term entohy'aloid muscæ applied to them.

If the affection be symptomatic, it is of but little moment. If idiopathic, and connected with any excitement of the brain, which is not often the case, attention will have to be paid to that organ.

METAMORPHOSIS VENTRICULI GELATINIFORMIS, Gastromalacia.

METANGISMOS, Decantation.

METAPEDIUM, Metatarsus.

METAPHRENON, Dorsum.

METAPHYTEIA, Transplantatio.

METAPODIUM, Metatarsus.

METAPOROPŒ'IA, Metaporopoie'sis, from μετα, 'after,' πορος, 'a pore,' and ποιειν, 'to make.' The change produced in the minute pores, in the capillary extremities of vessels,—when they pass from the morbid to the healthy condition.—Galen.

METAPTO'SIS, Metaschemati'mus, Metaschemat'isis. Mutation, change; from μεταπιπτω, (μετα, and πιπτω, 'I fall,) 'I digress.' Any change in the form or seat of a disease. Transformation.

METARRHŒ'A, Metar'rhysis, from meta, 'change of form or place,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Reflux. The transfer of a disease from without to within, or from one part to another.

METARRHYSIS, Metarrhœa.

METASCHEMATISIS, Metaptosis.

METASCHEMATISMUS, Metaptosis.

METAS'TASIS, Metachore'sis, Metacine'ma, Metacine'sis, from μεθιστημι, (μετα, and στασις, place,') 'I change place.' Displace'ment, Transla'tion. A change in the seat of a disease; attributed, by the Humorists, to the translation of the morbific matter to a part different from that which it had previously occupied: and by the Solidists, to the displacement of the irritation. It has also been used in the same extensive sense as Metaptosis. Disputes have often been indulged, whether a case of metastasis ought not rather to be esteemed one of extension of the disease. The phenomena of gout and acute rheumatism are in favour of metastasis occasionally supervening.

Metastasis Lactis, Galactoplania, Phlegmatia dolens.

METASTAT'IC, Metastat'icus. Belonging or relating to metastasis. A metastatic crisis is one produced by metastatis; — a metastatic affection, one caused by metastasis, &c. See Abscess, metastatic.

METASYN'CRISIS, from συγκρινω, 'I compose,' and μετα, which indicates a change. Recomposi''tion. A word employed by some disciples of Asclepiades. This physician supposed, that all animals are formed by the union or assemblage of atoms. He designated all bodies by the word συγκριματα, which signifies 'assemblage.' Συγκρινεσθαι, 'to be assembled,' was, with him, synonymous with 'to exist;' and διακρινεσθαι, 'to separate,' was, with him, synonymous with 'to dissolve,' 'to cease to exist.' The word Metasyncrisis was invented to express the recomposition of bodies after their momentary dissolution. Some have rendered the word by the Latin Recorpora'tio.

METASYNCRIT'IC, Metasyncrit'icus, Recorporati'vus. Belonging or relating to metasyncrisis. A name formerly given to medicines to which was attributed the virtue of producing the metasyncrisis or regeneration of the body, or some of its parts.

Metasyncritic Cycle meant a determinate series of remedies employed for this purpose.

METATAR'SAL, Metatar'seus, (F.) Métatarsien. Relating or belonging to the metatarsus.

Metatarsal Artery, Artère sus-métatarsienne of Chaussier, arises from the Arteria dorsa'lis Tarsi; passes transversely over the back of the foot; and furnishes, at its convexity, which is anterior, three branches, called A. interos'seæ dorsa'les Pedis. These branches are distributed in the interosseous spaces.

Metatarsal Articula'tions are those resulting from the junction of the metatarsal bones with each other. They are strengthened, behind, by dorsal and plantar ligaments; and before, by a transverse metatarsal ligament, which is plantar, and has the greatest analogy to the inferior transverse metacarpal ligament.

Metatarsal Bones, (F.) Os métatarsiens, are five in number, and distinguished by their number; first, second, third, &c., reckoning from the outer side.

Metatarsal Phalanges, are the first phalanges of the toes; so called because they are united to the metatarsus.

Metatarsal Row—(F.) Rangée métatarsienne — of the bones of the tarsus, is the second row, or that contiguous to the metatarsus; comprehending the cuboides and three cuneiform bones: some add the scaphoides.

METATARSEUS, see Abductor minimi digiti pedis.

MÉTATARSIEN, Metatarsal.

METATARSO-PHALAN'GIAN, Metatarsophalangia'nus, Metatarso-phalangal. Relating to the metatarsus and phalanges.

Metatarso-Phalangian or Metatarso-phalangal Articulations are formed by the bones of the metatarsus and the corresponding phalanges. They bear the greatest analogy to the metacarpo-phalangian articulations.

MÉTATARSO-PHALANGIEN-LATÉRAL, see Interossei pedis — m. Sous-phalangien transversal du premier orteil, Transversus pedis.

METATAR'SUS, Metatar'sium, Metape'dium, Metapo'dium, Præcor'dium seu So'lium pedis, Vestig''ium pedis, from μετα, 'after,' and ταρσος, 'the tarsus.' That part of the foot which is situate between the tarsus and toes, corresponding with the metacarpus. It is composed of five parallel bones; one to each toe. Like the metacarpal bones, they are developed from two points of ossification.

METATH'ESIS, from μεταθημι, (μετα, and τιθημι, 'to place,') 'I change place.' Transposit''io. An operation, by which a morbific agent is removed from one place to another, where it may produce less disturbance in the exercise of the functions:—as, for example, in the operation of depressing cataract, or when calculus in the urethra is pushed back into the bladder. Also, Derivation.

METATIO, Mensuration.

METATOC'IA, from μετα, 'change of form or place,' and τοκος, 'birth.' Parturition in a preternatural manner. Preternatural labour.

METATOPTOSIS, Diadexis.

METENSOMATOSUS, Incorporation.

METEORISMUS, Sublimation, Tympanites.

METEOROL'OGY, Metcorolog''ia, from μετεωρος, 'a meteor,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science, whose object is a knowledge of the origin, formation, appearance, &c. of meteors. The state of the atmosphere has a most important bearing upon the health of animals. The whole range of epidemic affections have their causes seated there. Meteorological affections have, hence, ever been attended to by the physician for the purpose of detecting the precise character of any particular epidemic influence. The barometer, thermometer, and hygrometer are the instruments used with this intent — to detect, as well the varying weight or pressure, and the temperature, as the moisture. Perhaps, of the three conditions, the last exerts more influence in the production of disease than either of the others. Our knowledge, however, of this part of physics is extremely limited and unsatisfactory.

METER, μετρον, 'a measure,' a suffix to words denoting 'a measure,' as in Barometer, Pleximeter, &c.

METHÆMACHYMIA, Transfusion.

METHÆ'MATA; from μεθ', 'change of form,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' The capillary or intermediate system of vessels in which the blood undergoes the change from venous to arterial, and conversely.—Marshall Hall. See Capillary vessels.

METHE, Temulentia.

METHEGLIN, Melizomum.

METHEMERINUS, Quotidian.

METHOD, Meth'odus, from με', 'with,' and 'οδος, 'way.' This word has different acceptations in the sciences. In medicine, curative method, meth'odus meden'di, is the methodical treatment of disease.

Method of Counting, Method, numerical.

Method, Mariano's, see Lithotomy.

Method, Numer'ical, Method of Observation or of Counting, of Louis, (F.) Méthode numérique, consists in observing every case and every symptom of a case numerically, so as to ensure, as far as practicable, accuracy of observation; and to enable us, by the analysis and collation of such facts, to deduce general laws and conclusions. Also, the application of numbers to the study of disease. See Statistics, Medical.

MÉTHODE NUMÉRIQUE, Method, numerical, Statistics, medical—m. Perturbatrice, Perturbatrix (Medicina.)

METHODICS, Methodists.

MÉTHODIQUES, Methodists.

METH'ODISTS, Method'ical sect, Method'ics, (F.) Méthodistes, Méthodiques. A sect of physicians whose doctrine was in vogue after that of the Empirics and Dogmatists, towards the end of the first century. According to the Methodists, of whom Themison was the chief, almost every disease is dependent on contraction or relaxation—strictum or laxum. To these two causes, they added a third—mixed or compound—to include those affections which partook of the two characters. The doctrine, medici'na method'ica, resembled, in some respects, that of Brown.

METHODOL'OGY (MEDICAL), Methodolog'ia Med'ica, from μεθοδος, 'method,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' A word used, by the French more especially, to signify method applied to the study of any science. Medical Methodology, consequently, means method applied to the study of medicine

METHODUS CATALEPTICA, see Cataleptic — m. Celsiana, see Lithotomy — m. Curatoria, Therapeutics.

Methodus Derivato'ria. The derivative or revellent system of treatment.

Methodus Endermat'ica seu Enderm'ica, see Endermic — m. Franconiana, see Lithotomy — m. Guytoniana, see Lithotomy — m. Medendi, Method of cure, Therapeutics.

METHOMA'NIA, from μεθη, 'drunkenness,' and μανια, 'mania.' An irresistible desire for intoxicating substances. Temulentia.

METHYSMUS, Temulentia.

METHYS'TICUS, from μεθη, 'drunkenness.' That which causes, or pertains to, drunkenness.

METHYSTOPHYL'LUM GLAUCUM. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amyridaceæ, an infusion of whose leaves is pleasant to the taste, and is used in bronchitis, asthma, and other thoracic diseases. With the Bushmen and others, it is a favourite beverage, and is called by them Boschjesmansthee, 'Bushman's tea.' It is, also, chewed.

METODONTI'ASIS, from μετα, 'in the sense of change,' and οδοντιασις, 'dentition.' Faulty development of the teeth.

METOPAGES, Symphyocephalus.

METOPANTRA, Frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRAL'GIA, from μετωπον (μετα, and ωψ, 'the eye') 'the forehead,' αντρον, 'a cavity,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRI'TIS, Inflamma'tio si'nuum fronta'lium, from μετωπον, 'the forehead,' αντρον, 'a cavity,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the frontal sinuses.

METOPION, Bubon galbanum.

METOPIUM, Mesophryon.

METOPODYNIA, Neuralgia frontalis.

METOPON, Front, Frontal bone.

METOPOS'COPY, Metoposcop'ia, from μετωπον, 'the forehead,' and σκυπειν, 'to view.' The art of knowing the temperament and character of a person by inspecting the traits of his forehead or face. See Physiognomy.

METRA, Uterus.

METRÆMORRHAGIA, Metrorrhagia.

METRAL'GIA, Metrodyn'ia, from μητρα, 'the womb,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the uterus.

METRANASTROPHE, Uterus, inversion of the.

METRATRE'SIA, Imperfora'tio u'teri, from μητρα 'the womb,' and ατρησια, 'imperforation.' An unnatural closure of the uterus.

METRATROPH'IA, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' a, 'privative,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Atrophy or want of development of the uterus.

METRAUX'E, Hypertroph'ia seu Sarco'sis u'teri, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and αυξη, 'increase.' Hypertrophy of the uterus.

METRELCO'SIS, Metrhelco'sis, from μητρα, 'the womb,' and 'ελκος, 'an ulcer.' Ulceration of the uterus.

METREMPHRAX'IS, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Obstruction of the womb or of the vessels of the womb—Infarc'tus u'teri. A name under which some authors have confounded chronic inflammation of that viscus, and the different degenerations to which it is exposed.

METREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

METREN'CHYTA, Metren'chytes, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and εγχυω, 'I inject.' Injection of the uterus. Substances injected into the uterus are called Metren'chyta.

METREURYS'MA, from μητρα, and ευρυς, 'dilated.' A morbid dilatation of the womb.

METRHELCOSIS, Metreleosis.

METRHYMENITIS, see Metritis.

METRIOPATHI'A, from μετριος, 'tempered,' and παθος, 'affection.' State of an individual whose passions are temperate.

METRI'TIS, from μητρα, 'the womb.' Febris utéri'na, Hysteri'tis, Emprcs'ma Hysteri'tis, Inflamma'tio U'teri, Metrophlogo'sis, Inflammation of the Uterus or Womb, (F.) Inflammation de la matrice. The characteristic symptoms of this affection are:—pain, swelling, and tenderness in the hypogastric region; with heat, pain, and tenderness of the os uteri; vomiting, smallness, and frequency of pulse. It occurs most frequently after delivery, when there is generally suppression of the lochial discharge. The treatment must be vigorous,—bleeding early, so as to make a decided impression; followed by a full dose of opium, fomentations, blisters, &c.

Acute inflammation of the womb, seated in its internal membrane, Endo-metri'tis, Metrhymen'itis, has been called Inflamma'tio catarrha'lis u'teri or Acute catarrh, (F.) Catarrhe aigu, of that viscus. It is known by the discharge of a clear, stringy fluid per vaginam; preceded by pains, which, from the hypogastric region, shoot to the thighs, groins, &c., with more or less fever. It requires the antiphlogistic treatment. Chronic metritis sometimes succeeds the acute. To it must be referred the indurations, observed in the uterus, and many of the leucorrheal discharges to which females are subject.

METRITIS RHEUMATICA, Metrorrheuma — m. Septica, Metrocace — m. Venosa, see Phlebitis.

METROBLENNORRHŒA, Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROC'ACĒ, Metri'tis sep'tica, from μητρα, 'the womb,' and κακος, 'evil.' Putrescency or gangrene of the uterus.

METROCAMPSIS, Hysteroloxia.

METROCARCINO'MA, Hysterocarcino'ma, U'teri carcino'ma, Cancer u'teri, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Cancer of the uterus.

METROCELIDES, Nævus.

METROCHOLO'SIS, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and χολος, 'bile.' Febris puerpera'lis bilio'sa.

METRODYNIA, Metralgia.

METROHÆ'MIA, Hypermetrohémie, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia or congestion of blood in the uterus.

METROHEMORRHAGE, Metrorrhagia.

METROLOXIA, Hysteroloxia.

METROMALACOMA, Hysteromalacia.

METROMALACOSIS, Hysteromalacia.

METROMANIA, Nymphomania.

METROPARAL'YSIS, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and παραλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the uterus.

METROPATHI'A, from μητρα, 'the womb,' and παθος, 'affection.' An affection of the womb.

MÉTRO-PÉRITONITE PUERPÉRALE, see Peritonitis.

METROPERITONI'TIS, from μητρα, 'the uterus.' and 'peritonitis.' Inflamma'tio u'teri et peritonæi. Inflammation of the uterus and peritoneum. Puerperal Fever. See Peritonitis.

METROPHLEBI'TIS, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' φλεψ, 'a vein,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the veins of the uterus.

METROPHLEBITIS PUERPERALIS, see Phlebitis.

METROPHLOGOSIS, Metritis.

METROPHTHI'SIS, Phthi'sis uteri'na, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and φθιω, 'I consume.' Consumption from ulceration of the uterus — Ul'cera seu Helco'sis u'teri.

METROPOL'YPUS, Hys'tero-pol'ypus, Polypus U'teri, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and polypus. Polypus of the uterus.

METROPROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

METROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

METRORRHAG''IA, Metræmorrhag''ia, Hæmorrhagia uteri'na, H. u'teri, Sanguiflux'us uteri'nus, San'guinis stillicid'ium ab U'tero, Fluor uteri'ni san'guinis, Profiu'vium San'guinis ex u'tero, Hysterorrhag''ia sanguin'ea, Hysterorrhœ'a, Hæmorrhœ'a uteri'na (of some), Menorrhag''ia (of some), Uterine Hemorrhage, Hemorrhage from the Womb, Metrohemorrhage, Hæmatome'tra, Hæmatoma'tra, (F.) Hémorrhagie de la Matrice, Pertes, Pertes utérines rouges, P. de sang; from μητρα, 'the womb,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' An effusion of blood from the inner surface of the uterus, either at the menstrual or other periods; but in a greater quantity than proper. Uterine hemorrhage may be caused by those influences which produce hemorrhage in general. It happens, however, more frequently during pregnancy, and during or after delivery, when the vascular system of the uterus is so circumstanced as to favour its occurrence more than at other periods. The termination of metrorrhagia is usually favourable. Should it, however, be very copious, or frequently recur; or should it happen to a great extent after delivery, death may occur very speedily; and, in some cases, without the discharge being perceptible; constituting internal hemorrhage.

Uterine hemorrhage may be active or passive; requiring obviously a different treatment. The general management is similar to that of hemorrhage in general;—the horizontal posture; acid drinks; free admission of cool air; cold applications to the loins, thighs, and abdomen; injection of cold water, even of iced water, into the vagina; plugging the vagina, so as to prevent the discharge per vaginam, and thus induce a coagulum in the mouths of the bleeding vessel. Such will be the special plan adopted where the hemorrhage has occurred in one not recently delivered. In uterine hemorrhage after delivery, the same cooling plan must be followed; but, as the flow of blood is owing to the uterus not contracting so as to constringe its vessels, pressure must be made on the abdomen to aid this; and, if necessary, the hand must be introduced into the uterus to stimulate it to contraction. Should the female be excessively reduced, so as to render the accoucheur apprehensive that she may expire from loss of blood, brandy may be exhibited. The profuse exhibition of opium in such cases, is, at least, a doubtful plan.

Transfusion has, at times, been practised as a last resource.

METRORRHEU'MA, Rheumatis'mus U'teri, Hysteral'gia rheumat'ica seu catarrha'lis, Metri'tis rheumat'ica, (F.) Rheumatisme de l'utérus; from μητρα, 'the womb,' and ρευμα, 'defluxion,' rheumatism.' Rheumatism of the uterus.

METRORRHEXIS, Uterus, rupture of the.

METRORRHŒ'A, from μητρα, 'the uterus, and ρεω, 'I flow.' A protracted discharge of any fluid from the uterus.

METROSCIR'RHUS, Hysteroscir'rhus, Scirrhus seu Carcino'ma u'teri, from μητρα, 'the womb,' and σκιρρος, 'scirrhus.' Scirrhus of the uterus.

MET'ROSCOPE, Metroscop'ium, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and σκοπεω, 'to view.' An instrument, invented by M. Nauche, for listening to the sounds of the heart of the fœtus in utero-gestation, when the sounds and movements are imperceptible through the parietes of the abdomen. The extremity of the instrument — the first notion of which was given to M. Nauche by the stethoscope of Laënnec — is introduced into the vagina and applied against the neck of the uterus.

METROSIDEROS GUMMIFERA, see Kino.

METROSTERE'SIS, from μητρα, 'the uterus,' and στερησις, 'privation.' Extirpation of the uterus. Want of uterus.

METROTOMIA, Cæsarean section.

MEU, Æthusa meum.

MEULIÈRE, Molar.

MEUM, Æthusa meum — m. Anethifolium, Æthusa meum — m. Athamanticum, Æthusa meum.

MEURTRISSURE, Contusion.

MEVIUM, Syphilis.

MEZEA, Genital organs.

MEZEREON, Daphne mezereum.

MIAMMA, Miasma.

MIANSIS, Miasma.

MIARIA, Miasma.

MIAS'MA, Miasm, μιασμα, 'a stain,' from μιαινω, 'I contaminate.' Miam'ma, Mian'sis, Mia'ria, Mias'mus, Inquinamen'tum, Molyn'sis, Conta'gium. The word miasm has, by some, been employed synonymously with contagion. It is now used more definitely for any emanation, either from the bodies of the sick, or from animal and vegetable substances, or from the earth, especially in marshy districts, (Marsh poison, Efflu'vium palus'trē, Gas palus'trē, (F.) Intoxication des Marais,) which may exert a morbid influence on those who are exposed to its action. To these terrestrial emanations — the Koino-mias'mata of Dr. E. Miller, of New York — the Italians give the name aria cattiva, but, more commonly, mala'ria; a word which has been adopted into other languages. The deleterious effluvia, originating from the decomposition of matter derived from the human body, have been called by Dr. Miller, Idiomias'mata; the epithets Koino and Idio being derived respectively from κοινος, 'common,' and ιδιος, 'personal.' Of the miasms which arise either from the animal body or from the most unhealthy situations, we know, chemically, nothing. All that we do know is, that, under such circumstances, emanations take place, capable of causing disease in many of those who are exposed to their action.

MIASMAT'IC, Miasmat'icus. Belonging or relating to miasmata. Sauvages, in his classification of diseases according to their etiology, has a class under the name Morbi miasmat'ici. A fever that arises from marsy miasms, is styled mala'rious, palu'dal, Helop'yra, Helopyr'etus, &c.

MIASMUS, Miasma.

MICÆ PANIS, see Triticum.

MICATIO CORDIS, Systole.

MICHE'LIA CHAM'PACA, Champaca, Michelia Tsjampaca. An Oriental tree, much prized for the odour and beauty of its flowers. The oily infusion of the flowers is employed in the Moluccas in headach.

MICLE'TA: A medicine used by Mesue for arresting hemorrhage; perhaps, according to Siebenhaar, from the Arabic, michnata, "proved by experience."

MICOSIS, Framboesia.

MICRENCEPHALIUM, Cerebellum.

MICRENCEPHALON, Cretinism.

MICRENCEPHALUM, Cerebellum.

MICROCEPH'ALUS, Microcra'nius, from μικρος, 'small,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' One who has a small head. A monster having a small imperfect head, or a small imperfect cranium.

MICROCORIA, Myosis.

MI'CROCOSM, Microcos'mus, from μικρος, 'little,' and κοσμος, 'world.' A little world. Some philosophers have given this appellation to man, whom they consider as the epitome of all that is admirable in the world. The world they call Macrocosm.

MICROCOSMETOR, Vital principle.

MICROCOSM'ICA MACHI'NA. The organism of man.

MICROCOSMICA SCIENTIA, Physiology.

MICROCOSMICUM SAL, With the ancients meant the salts of the urine, — Sal uri'næ.

MICROCOSMOGRAPHIA, Physiology.

MICROCOUST'IC, Microcus'ticus, from μικρος, 'small,' and ακουω, 'I hear.' This word, as well as Microphonous, from μικρος, 'small,' and φωνη, 'voice,' means any thing that contributes to increase the intensity of sound — as the speaking trumpet — by collecting the sonorous rays.

MICROCRANIUS, Microcephalus.

MICROGLOS'SIA, from μικρος, 'small,' and γλωσσα, 'tongue.' Original smallness of tongue.

MICROLEUCONYMPHÆA, Nymphæa alba.

MICROM'ELUS, Hemim'eles, from μικρος, 'small,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A monster having imperfectly developed extremities.

MICROMMATUS, Microphthalmus.

MICROPHONOUS, Microcoustic.

MICROPHTHAL'MUS, Microm'matus, from μικρος, 'little,' and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' One who has small eyes. A monster with too small, or imperfectly developed eyes. A small eye, — Ophthalmid'ium, Ophthal'mium.

MICROPODIA, Micropus.

MICROPROSO'PUS, Aproso'pus, from μικρος, 'small,' and προσωπον, 'face.' A monster in which a part of the face is absent.

MI'CROPUS, from μικρος, 'small,' and πους, 'foot.' One who has small feet. The condition is called Micropo'dia.

MICROR'CHIDES; from μικρος, 'small,' and ορχις, 'a testicle.' They who have very small testicles.

MI'CROSCOPY, Microscop'ium; from μικρος, 'small,' and σκοπη, 'a view.' Observation by the microscope; an important agency in the examination of the healthy and morbid tissues.

MICROSPHYC'TUS, same etymon as the next. One who has a small pulse.

MICROSPHYX'IA, from μικρος, and σφυγμος, 'pulse.' Smallness or weakness of pulse.

MICROS'TOMUS; from μικρος, 'small,' and στομα, 'mouth.' One who has a small mouth.

MICROTE'SIA, Par'tium organica'rum parvitas morbo'sa; from μικροτης, 'smallness.' Morbid smallness of organic parts.

MICROTRAPEZIA, Leptotrophia.

MICROTRICH'IA; from μικρος, 'small,' and θριξ, 'hair.' Fineness or shortness of hair.

MICROTROPHIA, Leptotrophia.

MICTIO, Micturition — m. Cruenta, Hæmaturia — m. Inopportuna, Enuresis — m. Involuntaria, Enuresis — m. Sanguinea, Hæmaturia.

MICTION, Micturition.

MICTURIT''ION, Mic'tio, Mictus, Ure'sis, Uri'asis, Omiche'sis, (F.) Miction, from micturio, 'I make water.' The act of making water. Also, morbid frequency of passing the water.

MICTUS, Micturition — m. Cruentus, Hæmaturia.

MIDRIFF, Diaphragm.

MIDWIFE, from mið, 'with,' and þif, 'wife,' or, from mið, 'meed,' 'recompense,' and þif, 'wife.' Matro'na, Obstet'rix, Hyperce'tria, Mæa, Mæas, Mœu'tria, Aces'toris, Aces'tris, Aces'tria, (F.) Sage femme, Accoucheuse. A female who practises obstetrics.

MIDWIFERY, Obstetrics.

MIEL, Mel—m. d'Acétate de Cuivre, Linimentum æruginis — m. Mercuriale composé, Mellitum de mercuriali compositum.

MIEUTER, Accoucheur.

MIGMA, Mistura.

MIGRAINE, Hemicrania.

MIGRANA, Hemicrania.

MIKANIA GUACO, Guaco.

MILFOIL, Achillea millefolium.

MILIAIRE, Miliary fever.

MILIARIA, Miliary fever — m. Sudans, Miliary fever — m. Sudatoria, Miliary fever.

MILIARIS SUDATORIA, Sudor anglicus, S. picardicus.

MIL'IARY (FEVER,) Emphly'sis milia'ria, Miliaria, M. sudans, Milia'ris, M. sudato'ria, Sudor, S. milia'ris, Pap'ula milia'ris, Febris miliaris, Exanthe'ma miliaria, Syn'ochus miliaria, Aspre'do milia'cea, Febris essero'sa, F. punticula'ris, F. culicula'ris, F. vesicula'ris, F. lenticula'ris, Pur'pura puerpera'rum, P. milia'ris, Febris purpura'tē rubra et alba milia'ris, Pap'ulæ sudo'ris, Millet-seed rash, (F.) Miliaire, Millet, Pourpre blanc, Millet. It is so called from the eruption resembling the seed of the milium or millet. Fever, accompanied by an eruption of small, red, isolated pimples, rarely confluent, but almost always very numerous, slightly raised above the skin, and presenting, at the end of 24 hours, a small vesicle filled with a white transparent fluid; which quickly dries up, and separates in the form of scales. Miliary fever is now rare, in consequence of the cooling practice in fevers and other states of the system. It is almost always brought on by external heat, and hence the prevention is obvious. The treatment is simple. It requires merely the antiphlogistic regimen, in ordinary cases.

MILIARY GRANULATIONS or TUBERCLES, see Granulation.

MILII SEMINA, Panicum Italicum.

MILIOLUM. Diminutive of milium, 'millet.' Cenchrid'ion. A small tumour on the eyelids, resembling, in size, a millet-seed.

MILITARIS HERBA, Achillea millefolium.

MILIUM, Grutum, Panicum miliaceum, see Hydatid—m. Esculentum, Panicum miliaceum—m. Indicum, Panicum Italicum — m. Panicum, Panicum miliaceum — m. Solis, Lithospermum officinale.

MILK, Sax. melc, Lac, Gala, Humor lac'teus, Latex ni'veus, (F.) Lait. A fluid secreted by the mammary glands of the females of the mammalia. The skimmed milk of the cow, (F.) Lait de Vache, contains water, caseous matter, traces of butter, sugar of milk, chloride of sodium, phosphate, and acetate of potass, lactic acid, lactate of iron, and earthy phosphate. The cream is formed of butter, casein, and whey, in which there is sugar of milk and salts. When examined by the microscope, milk is seen to contain a large number of particles, of irregular size and shape, varying from $\frac{1}{12100}$th to $\frac{1}{3040}$th of an inch in diameter. They consist of oily matter, surrounded by a delicate pellicle, and are the milk globules.

Cow's milk is employed for the preparation of cream, butter, cheese, whey, sugar of milk, and frangipane. It is useful in a number of cases of poisoning; either by acting as a demulcent, or by decomposing certain poisons, or by combining with others so as to neutralize them. It is constantly employed as aliment, and may be regarded as an emulsion in which butter and casein are found in suspension. When taken into the stomach, it is coagulated by the gastric fluids, and the coagulum is digested like any other solid. The watery parts are absorbed.

Between milk, flour, and blood, there is great similarity of composition. The following table is given by Dr. Robert Dundas Thomson:

| Milk. | Flour. | Blood. |
|---|---|---|
| Curd or Casein, | Fibrin, Albumen, Casein, Gluten. | Fibrin, Albumen, Casein, Colouring matter |
| Butter..... | Oil. | Fat. |
| Sugar..... | Sugar, Starch, | Sugar. |
| Chloride of potassium, ——— sodium, Phosphate of soda, ——— lime, ——— magnesia, ——— iron, | Do. | Do. |

From a considerable number of experiments, Messrs. Deyeux and Parmentier class the six kinds of milk, which they examined, according to the following table, as regards the relative quantity of materials they contain.

| Casein. | Butter. | Sugar of Milk. | Serum. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Goat | Sheep | Woman | Ass |
| Sheep | Cow | Ass | Woman |
| Cow | Goat | Mare | Mare |
| Ass | Woman | Cow | Cow |
| Woman | Ass | Goat | Goat |
| Mare | Mare | Sheep | Sheep |

MILK ABSCESS, Mastodynia apostematosa — m. Almond, Emulsio amygdalæ.

MILK AND SODA WATER. An agreeable mode of taking milk in cases where it lies heavily on the stomach. Heat, nearly to boiling, a teacupful of milk; dissolve in it a teaspoonful of sugar, put it into a large tumbler, and pour over it two-thirds of a bottle of soda water.

MILK, ASSES', (F.) Lait d'Ânesse, considerably resembles human milk, of which it has the consistence, smell, and taste: but it contains a little less cream, and more soft, caseous matter. It is often used by those labouring under pulmonary affections.

Artificial Asses' Milk may be made by taking gelatin ℥ss; dissolving it, by the aid of heat, in barley water Oij; adding refined sugar ℥j; pouring into the mixture new milk Oj; and beating the whole with a whisk.

It may also be prepared by dissolving sugar of milk ℥ij in tepid skimmed cow's milk Oj.

MILK, EWES', (F.) Lait de Brebis. It affords more cream than cows' milk; but the butter is softer. The caseum, on the contrary, is fatter, and more viscid. It contains less serum than cow's milk. The Roquefort cheeses are made from it.

MILK FEVER, see Fever, milk — m. Glass, Breast glass — m. Globules, see Milk.

MILK, GOATS', (F.) Lait de Chèvre, resembles cows' milk: the butyraceous matter, however, which enters into its composition, is more solid than that of the cow.

Artificial Goats' Milk may be made by taking fresh suet ℥j; cutting it into small pieces; tying it in a muslin bag, large enough to leave the morsels free from compression; and boiling in a quart of cows' milk, sweetened with a quarter of an ounce of white sugar candy.

Used as a diet in scrofulous cases, and also in phthisis.

Milk, Human, (F.) Lait de femme, — contains more sugar, milk, and cream, and less caseum, than cows' milk. Its composition differs according to the distance of time from delivery.

Milk Knot, Galacto-gan'glion; (F.) Ganglion laiteux. The knots often observed in the breast after inflammation of the organ, or for some time after the suppression of the secretion. They generally end by resolution.

Milk Leg, Phlegmatia dolens — m. Males', Sperm.

Milk, Mares', (F.) Lait de Jument,—contains only a small quantity of fluid butyraceous matter; a little caseum, softer than that of cows' milk, and more serum.

Milk Scall, Porrigo larvalis.

Milk Sickness, Sick stomach, Swamp sickness, Tires, Slows, Stiff joints, Puking fever, River sickness. A disease occasionally observed in the states of Alabama, Indiana, and Kentucky, which affects both man and cattle, but chiefly the latter. It is attributed in cattle to something eaten or drunk by them; and in man to the eating of the flesh of animals labouring under the disease. Owing to the tremors that characterize it in animals, it is called the Trembles. It is endemic.

The symptoms of the disease are such as are produced by the acro-narcotic class of poisons — vomiting, purging, extreme nervous agitation, &c.: and the approved indications of treatment appear to be—gentle emetics and laxatives, with quiet, and mucilaginous drinks.

Milk, Snakes', Euphorbia corollata—m. Spots, Strophulus—m. Stone, Morochthus—m. Sugar of, Sugar of milk — m. of Sulphur, Sulphur præcipitatum — m. Sweet, Galium verum—m. Teeth, see Dentition — m. Wort, rattlesnake, Polygala.

MILKY, Lactic.

MILL MOUNTAIN, Linum catharticum.

MILLEFEUILLE, Achillea millefolium.

MILLEFOLIUM, Achillea millefolium.

MILLEMORBIA SCROPHULARIA, Scrophalaria nodosa.

MILLEPEDES, Onisci aselli.

MILLEPERTUIS ORDINAIRE, Hypericum perforatum.

MILLET, Aphthæ, Miliary fever — m. Barbadoes, Panicum Italicum — m. Common, Panicum miliaceum — m. Indian, Panicum Italicum — m. des Oiseaux, Panicum Italicum — m. Ordinaire, Panicum miliaceum.

MILLET-SEED RASH, Miliary fever.

MILLIGRAMME, from mille, 'a thousand,' and γραμμα, 'a gramme.' The thousandth part of a gramme; — about 0.0154 Troy grain.

MILLIGRANA, Herniaria glabra.

MILLIMÈTRE, Millim'eter, from mille, 'a thousand,' and μετρον, 'measure.' The thousandth part of the metre; — equal to 0.03937 English inch, or about two-fifths of a line.

MILLOT, Miliary fever.

MILPHÆ, Madarosis.

MILPHOSIS, Madarosis.

MILT-LIKE TUMOUR, Encephaloid.

MILTUS, Plumbi oxydum rubrum.

MILTWASTE, Asplenium

MIMOSA CATECHU, Catechu — m. Cochliacarpa, see Cortex adstringens Brasiliensis — m. Leucophlea, see Spirit (Arrack) — m. Nilotica, see Acaciæ gummi — m. Scandens, Cachang-parang — m. Senegal, see Senegal, gum — m. Virginalis, see Cortex adstringens Brasiliensis.

MIND, ABSENCE OF, Aphelxia socors — m. Abstraction of, Aphelxia intenta — m. Unsound, Insanity.

MINERALIUM, Antimonium.

MINER'S ELBOW. An enlargement of a bursa over the olecranon, occurring in such as are in the habit of leaning much upon it; and, therefore, often seen in those who work on the side in low-roofed mines.

MINIM'ETER; badly compounded from minimum and μετρον, 'measure.' An instrument for measuring minims, invented by Mr. Alsop. It consists of a glass tube, graduated from the conical point into minims; and having a piston, by the elevation of which, fluid may be drawn into the tube, and by its depression be forced from it.

MIN'IMUM, a minim, 'the least part or portion.' The 60th part of a fluidrachm. This measure has been introduced by the London College of Physicians, in consequence of the uncertainty of the size of the drop, (see Gutta.) The subdivision of the wine pint has, accordingly, been extended to the 60th part of the fluidrachm; and glass measures, called "minim-measures," have been adopted by the London College. The proportion between the minims and the drops of various fluid preparations is exhibited in the following table. The results were obtained by Mr. Durand, a skilful pharmacien of Philadelphia, under circumstances, as regards the different articles, as nearly identical as possible.

MINISTER GYMNASTÆ, Pædotribes.

MINITHOSIS, Meiosis.

MINIUM, Plumbi oxydum rubrum — m. Græcorum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum — m. Purum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MINOR HEL'ICIS. A muscle situate on the posterior border of the helix of the ear, at its commencement in the fossa of the concha.

MINORATIVUS, Laxative.

MINT, COCK, Tanacetum balsamita — m. Curled, Mentha crispa — m. Cat, Nepeta — m. Horse, Monarda coccinea and M. punctata — m.

Horse, hairy, Blephilia hirsuta—m. Horse, Ohio, Blephilia hirsuta — m. Horse, sweet, Cunila Mariana—m. Hyssop-leaved, Mentha cervina.

Mint Julep. A drink, consisting of brandy, sugar, and pounded ice, flavoured by sprigs of mint. It is an agreeable alcoholic excitant.

Mint, Mountain, Monarda coccinea—m. Mountain, common, Pycnanthemum incanum—m. Pepper, Mentha piperita — m. Spear, Mentha viridis —m. Squaw, Hedeoma — m. Stone, Cunila Mariana—m. Water, Mentha aquatica.

MINUTHESIS, Meiosis.

MINYANTHES, Menyanthes.

MIOSIS, Meiosis.

MIROCELE, Merocele.

MISADIR, Ammoniæ murias.

MISANTHRO'PIA, Misan'thropy, Exanthro'pia, Phyganthro'pia, from μισος, 'hatred,' and ανθρωπος, 'man.' Aversion to man and society;—a symptom of melancholy, and hypochondriasis.

MISCARRIAGE, Abortion.

MISERERE MEI, Ileus.

MISHME TEETA, Coptis teeta.

MISMAR, Mesemar. A name given by Avicenna to a kind of nodus, which forms on the toes as the sequel of contusion or inflammation of those parts.

MISOPTO'CHUS, from μισος, 'hatred,' and πτωχος, 'poor.' That which has hatred for the poor. The gout has been so called by some, because it commonly affects the rich.

MISSADAN, Hydrargyrum.

MISSIO SANGUINIS, Bloodletting.

MISTIO, Mistura.

MISTLETOE, Viscum album — m. Yellowish, Viscum flavescens.

MISTU'RA, Migma, Mis'tio, Mix'tio, Mixtu'ra, a mixture; from miscere, mixtum, 'to mix.' A mingled compound, in which different ingredients are contained in the fluid state; suspended or not by means of mucilaginous or saccharine matter. In this sense, it is synonymous with the French Potion. In France, however, the word mixture is more frequently understood to mean a liquid medicine, which contains very active substances, and can only be administered by drops. A mixture, in other words, in the French sense, may be regarded as a potion deprived of watery vehicle.

MISTURA, (S.) A fragrant yellow-coloured water, used as a perfume by the ladies of Peru. It is prepared from gillyflower, jasmine, and flor de mistela (Talinum umbellatum). See Campomanesia lineatifolia.

Mistura Ac''idi Hydrocyan'ici, Mixture of Prussic acid, Mélange pectoral (Magendie). (Medicinal prussic acid, ℥j, distilled water, ℥xiv, pure sugar, ℥iss.) A dessert-spoonful every morning and evening, as a pectoral, &c.

Mistura Ammoni'aci, Lac ammoniaci, Mixture of ammoniac. (Ammoniac. ℥ij, aquæ Oss. Rub the ammoniacum: adding the water gradually until they are perfectly mixed.) Dose, f℥ss to ℥j.

Mistura Amygdalæ, Emulsio amygdalæ.

Mistura Asafœ'tidæ, Lac asafœtidæ, Emulsio antihyster'ica, Mixture of asafetida, (F.) Lait d'asafœtida. (Asafœtidæ ℥ij, aquæ. Oss. Rub together, adding the water by degrees.) Used where pills cannot be swallowed, and as a glyster in irritations during dentition, and in ascarides. Dose, f℥ss to f℥iss.

Mistura Asafœtidæ pro Clysmate, Enema fœtidum.

Mistura Cam'phoræ, Aqua camphoræ (Ph. U. S.), Camphor mixture, Camphor julep, Mistura camphora'ta, Jula'pium e camphorâ seu camphoratum, (F.) Julep camphré. (Camphor, ℥ij, alcohol, ℿxl, magnes. carb. ℥iv, aquæ Oij. Rub the camphor with the alcohol, and afterwards with the magnesia, add the water, and filter. Virtues like those of camphor. See Emulsio camphoræ.

Mistura Cornu Usti, Decoc'tum cornu cervi'ni, Decoc'tum album, Decoction of burnt hartshorn, Mixture of burnt hartshorn. (Cornuum ust. ℥ij, acaciæ gum. cont. ℥j, aquæ Oiij. Boil to Oij, constantly stirring, and strain. Ph. L.)

Mistura Cretæ, Potio carbona'tis calcis, Mistura creta'cea, Mucila'go cretica, Chalk mixture, Creta'ceous mixture, (F.) Mixture de Craie. (Cretæ pp. ℥ss, sacchar., acaciæ gum. in pulv., ää ℥ij, aquæ cinnam., aquæ, ää f℥iv. Mix. Ph. U. S.) Antacid and absorbent. Dose, f℥j to ℥ij.

Mistura Diabol'ica. A mixture under this name is kept in military hospitals for malingerers. It is made of sundry nauseous ingredients, as aloes, asafœtida, castor, &c., and is given so as to keep up a disagreeable impression on the gustatory nerves.

Mistura Emeti'næ Vomito'ria, Emetic mixture of emetine. (Emetine 4 gr., orange flower water ℥ij, syrup ℥ss; M.) A dessert-spoonful every half hour till it acts.

Mistura Ferri Compos'ita, Compound mixture of iron, (F.) Mixture de fer composée, Griffith's mixture. (Myrrh cont. ℥j, potassæ carb. gr. xxv, aquæ rosæ f℥viiss, ferri sulph. in pulv. ℈j, sp. lavand. ℥ss, sacchar. ℥j. Rub together the myrrh, subcarbonate of potassa, and sugar; then add, while triturating, the rose-water, spirit of nutmeg; and, lastly, the sulphate of iron. Pour the mixture directly into a glass bottle, and stop it close. Ph. U. S.) It is tonic and emmenagogue, and is useful wherever iron is indicated.

Mistura Glycyrrhi'zæ Compos'ita, Compound mixture of Liq'uorice, Brown Mixture. (Extract. Glycyrrhiz. pulv., Acaciæ pulv., Sacchar., ää ℥ss; Tinct. opii camphorat. f℥ij; Vin. antimon. f℥j; Spirit. æther. nitric. f℥ss; Aquæ f℥xij. Rub the liquorice, gum arabic, and sugar with the water, gradually poured upon them; add the other ingredients and mix. Ph. U. S.) A popular cough medicine, but not deserving of being made officinal. Dose, a tablespoonful or f℥ss.

Mistura Guai'aci, Mixture of guai'ac, Lac guaiaci, Emul'sio guaiaci'na, Mistura guaiaci gummo'sa, M. gummi gua'iaci Bergeri, Solu'tio guaiaci gummo'sa, S. resi'næ guaiaci aquo'sa, (F.) Mixture de Guyac. (Guaiac. g. resin. ℥iss, sacch. pur. ℥ij, muc. acaciæ gum. ℥ij, aq. cinnam. f℥viij. Rub the guaiacum with the sugar; then with the mucilage. Add, gradually, the cinnamon water. Ph. L.) Dose, f℥ss to f℥ij.

Mistura Gummi Guaiaci Bergeri, Mistura Guaiaci—m. Leniens, Looch ex ovo.

Mistura Moschi, Musk mixture, Mistura moscha'ta. (Moschi, acaciæ gum. contus., sacch. purif., sing. ℥j, aq. rosæ f℥vj. Rub the musk with the sugar; add the gum, and, by degrees, the rose-water. Ph. L.) Dose, f℥ss to f℥ij.

Mistura Strych'niæ, Mixture of strych'nia. (Distilled water, ℥ij, very pure strychnia, 1 gr., white sugar, ℥ij; M.) Dose, a dessert-spoonful.

Mistura Sulphurico-acida, Elixir acidum Halleri — m. Vulneraria acida — Arquebusade, Eau d'.

MITCHEL'LA REPENS, Partridge berry. A pretty little indigenous trailing evergreen, of the Cinchona family—Cinchoneæ,—which flowers from June to July. It has been considered an expectorant, emmenagogue, and diuretic; and has been prescribed in dropsy and gout.

MITELLA, Sling.

MITH'RIDATE, Mithrida'tium, Mithridat'icum medicamen'tum, Antid'otum Mithrida'tium, Diascin'ci antid'otus, Confec'tio Damoc'ratis. A very compound electuary, into which entered — Myrrh of Arabia, Saffron, Agaric, Ginger, Cinnamon, Frankincense, Garlic, Mustard, Birthwort, Galbanum, Castor, Long pepper, Opoponax, Bdellium, Gum Arabic, Opium, Gentian, Orris, Sagapenum, Valerian, Acacia, Hypericum, Canary wine, Honey, &c. It was invented by Mithridates, king of Pontus and Bithynia, and was formerly regarded as alexipharmic. It is little used at the present day, and, from its heterogeneous nature, should be wholly abandoned.

MITHRIDATICUM MEDICAMENTUM, Mithridate.

MITIGANS, Lenitive.

MITRA HIPPOCRATICA, Bonnet d'Hippocrate.

MITRAL, Mitra'lis. Having the form of a mitre; resembling a bishop's mitre.

Mitral Valves, Val'vulæ mitra'les, V. Cordis mitra'les, V. episcopa'les, V. bicuspida'les. Two triangular valves at the opening of communication between the left auricle of the heart and the corresponding ventricle. These valves are formed by the inner membrane of the left cavities of the heart; and are retained on the side of the ventricle by tendinous cords, proceeding from the columnæ carneæ. They form a species of valve, which permit the blood to pass from the auricle into the ventricle and oppose its return.

MITRIUM, Sling.

MITTE (F.), Efflu'vium Latrina'rium. An emanation exhaled from privies, which strongly irritates the eyes. It consists of ammonia, united to the carbonic and hydro-sulphuric acids.

MIUAMARU, see Arrow poison.

MIXIS, Coition.

MIXTIO, Mistura.

MIXTURA, Mistura.

MIXTURE, Mistura — m. of Ammoniac, Mistura ammoniaci — m. of Asafœtida, Mistura asafœtidæ — m. Brown, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita — m. Calmante, Looch ex ovo — m. Camphor, Mistura camphoræ — m. Chalk, Mistura cretæ — m. de Craie, Mistura cretæ — m. Cretaceous, Mistura cretæ — m. of Emetine, emetic, Mistura emetinæ vomitoria — m. de Fer composée, Mistura ferri composita — m. de Gayac, Mistura Guaiaci — m. Griffith's, Mistura ferri composita — m. of Guaiac, Mistura Guaiaci — m. of Hartshorn, burnt, Mistura cornu usti — m. of Iron, compound, Mistura ferri composita.

Mixture, Hope's. A mixture recommended by Mr. Hope, in diarrhœa and dysentery. It is essentially a nitrate of morphia. Although the proposer employed the acidum nitrosum of the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia, nitric acid is generally used. (Acid. nitros. f℥j; Aquæ camphor. f℥viij; Tinct. opii gtt. xl.; M.) Dose, a fourth part every three or four hours.

Mixture of Liquorice, Compound, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita.

Mixture, Musk, Mistura moschi — m. Neutral, Liquor potassæ citratis — m. of Prussic acid, Mistura acidi hydrocyanici.

Mixture, Scudamore's. A mixture recommended by Sir C. Scudamore in gouty and rheumatic affections, and much prescribed in the United States. Magnes. sulph. ℥j — ℥ij; Aquæ menthæ f℥x; Aceti colchic. f℥j — f℥iss; Syrup croci f℥j; Magnes. ℥viij. M. Dose, one, two, or three tablespoonfuls, repeated every two hours in a paroxysm of gout, until from four to six evacuations are produced in the twenty four hours.

Mixture of Strychnia, Mistura strychniæ.

MNEMĒ, Memory.

Mneme Cephal'icum Bal'samum. A very compound medicine, into which entered Balm, Lily, Rosemary, Lavender, Borage, Broom, Roses, Violet, Saffron, Thyme, Storax, Galbanum, &c.

MNEMONEUTICE, Mnemonics.

MNEMON'ICS, Mnemon'icē, Mnemoneu'ticē, from μναομαι, 'I recollect.' The art of aiding the memory by signs; and of forming, in some sort, an artificial memory.

MOANING, from Sax. mænan, 'to grieve.' Respira'tio luctuo'sa, Mychthis'mos. A plaintive respiration, in which the patient utters audible groans — moans, (F.) Gémissemens.

MOBILE, see Saint Augustine.

MOBIL'ITY, Mobil'itas, from mob'ilis, contraction of movibilis, 'that can be moved.' The power of being moved. In physiology, great nervous susceptibility, often joined to a disposition to convulsion. Greatly developed excitability.

MOCCASIN FLOWER, Cypripedium acaule, C. luteum.

MOCH'LIA. Reduction of a luxated bone; from μοχλος, a lever.

MOCHLICUS, Purgative.

MOCHLISCUS, Lever.

MOCHLUS, Lever.

MOCHTHUS, Agony.

MOCK-KNEES, Crusta genu equinæ.

MODELLING PROCESS. A term proposed by Dr. Macartney, of Dublin, to signify the mode in which wounds are healed without inflammation or suppuration, by a deposite of plastic matter from the surface of the wound, by which the gap is more rapidly filled,—portion being laid upon portion, without waste, after the manner of clay in the hands of the sculptor: — hence the term.

MODI'OLUS, 'the nave of a wheel.' Pyr'amis seu Axis coch'leæ. A hollow cone in the cochlea of the ear, forming a nucleus, axis, or central pillar, round which the gyri of the cochlea pass. The modiolus forms the inner and larger portion of the central pillar, and is the cavity seen at the bottom of the meatus auditorius internus. It lodges a branch of the auditory nerve. The central portion of the modiolus contains a number of minute canals, and is called in consequence Tractus spira'lis foraminulo'sus. Into these the nerves of the cochlea enter, and pass out at right angles between the bony plates forming the zona ossea of the lamina spiralis, to be expanded on the membranous portion of the lamina.

Modiolus, Mas, also means the crown of the trepan.

MO'DIUS. A dry measure, the third of an amphora, equal to the bushel.—Varro.

MODUS OPERAN'DI, 'mode of operating.' This term is applied to the general principles upon which remedies act in morbid states of the body;—a subject of much interest, although involved in considerable obscurity.

The following classification will convey some idea of the ways in which different organs may be excited into action.

1. By actual or immediate contact of the remedy, and by absorption or mediate contact.
2. By an impulse conveyed by the nerves, through an impression made on the stomach or elsewhere.
3. By contiguous or continuous sympathy, or by mere proximity or continuity of parts.

MOËLLE, Marrow — m. Allongée, Medulla oblongata — m. Épinière, Medulla spinalis — m. Vertébrale, Medulla spinalis.

MŒNIA DENTIUM, Alveoli dentium.

MŒROR, Athymia.

MOFETTE, see Mephitism.

MOFFAT, MINERAL WATERS OF. Moffat

is a village situate about 56 miles S. W. of Edinburgh. The water is a cold sulphureous; containing, in a wine gallon, 36 grains of chloride of sodium, 5 cubic inches of carbonic gas, 4 of azote, and 10 of sulphohydric acid. It resembles Harrowgate water in its properties.

A strong chalybeate spring was discovered there about the year 1828, which contains sesquisulphate of peroxide of iron, sulphate of alumina, and uncombined sulphuric acid.

MOGIGRAPHIA, Cramp, writers'.

MOGILA'LIA, Parala'lia, from μογις, 'with difficulty,' and λαλειν, 'to speak.' This word is inaccurately written by Paul Zacchias,—Mola'lia, and Molila'lia. Difficult or defective articulation. Impediment of speech. See Balbuties.

MOGOSTOCIA, Dystocia, Laborious labour.

MOGUS, Agony.

MOHAWK TASSEL, Eupatorium purpureum.

MOHRIA THURIF'RAGA. A South African fern, Nat. Ord. Filices, the dry leaves of which, pulverized and made into an ointment with fat, are serviceable in burns and scalds.

MOIGNON, Stump.

MOIS, Menses.

MOISTURE, Mador, (F.) Moiteur, anciently moisteur. Simple humidity of the skin. The skin is said to be moist or in a state of moisture, when there is slight perspiration.

MOĬTEUR, Moisture.

MOLA, Maxillary bone, Molar tooth, Mole, Patella.

MOLAGOCODI, Piper nigrum.

MOLAIRE, Molar.

MOLALIA, Mogilalia.

MOLAR, Mola'ris, My'licus, (F.) Molaire, Meulière. That which bruises or grinds; from molaris, 'a grindstone,' or mola, 'a millstone.'

Molar Glands. Two small bodies formed by a collection of mucous crypts; seated in the substance of the cheeks, between the masseter and buccinator muscles, and whose excretory ducts open into the mouth opposite the last molar tooth.

Molar Teeth, Grinders, Jaw Teeth, Mola'res permanen'tes dentes, Dentes molares seu maxilla'res seu gom'phii seu clava'les, Molæ, Gomphioi, My'laeri, My'lodontes, My'lodi, Momis'ci, (F.) Dents molaires ou mâchelières, occupy the farther part of each alveolar arch. Their coronæ are broader than they are high: unequal, tuberculated; and the roots are more or less subdivided. They are 20 in number, 10 in each jaw. The first two pairs of molar teeth in each jaw have been called lesser molares or bicuspid, Dentes bicuspida'ti. The coronæ have two tubercles; the outer being more prominent and larger than the inner. The root is commonly simple; sometimes bifurcated. The other three pairs have been termed, Great molares—Dents multicuspidées (Ch.) Their coronæ are cubical, rounded, and have, at the upper surface, four or five tubercles, separated by deep furrows. The root is divided into two, three, four, and five fangs, which are more or less curved. The third great molaris appears a long time after the others, and hence has been called Dens sapien'tiæ or Wisdom tooth.

MOLASSES, Melasses.

MOLE, Mola, from moles, 'mass.' Mylē, Zephyr'ius fœtus, Germen falsum, Pseudocye'sis molaris, Gravid'itas molaris, Mooncalf, old French, Fardeau. A fleshy, insensible, at times, soft—at others, hard—mass; of variable and determinate size, which forms in the uterus, and is slightly united by vessels to that organ; from which its feeble vitality is derived. It has been conceived by some to be always owing to imperfect conception; but moles may form in the undoubted virgin. They seem to be owing to a morbid process; and certainly are generally connected with conception. At times, they contain parts of the fœtus; but commonly do not. At very different periods, in different women, the diseased mass is expelled from the uterus, with ordinary symptoms of abortion; and the case requires similar management. See, also, Nævus and Conception, (false.)

MOLE PLANT, Euphorbia lathyris.

MOLEC'ULAR, Molecula'ris. Of or belonging to molecules or minute portions of any thing. Hence molecular death, in contradistinction to somatic death.

MOL'ECULE, Molec'ula, Mass'ula; diminutive of moles, 'a mass.' A minute portion of any body. Also, the cicatric'ula, ma'cula, gallatu'ra, gelat'inous molecule, tread of the cock, or embryo part of the impregnated ovum, observable by the microscope before the ovum has left the ovarium of the hen. It lies under the epidermic coats of the yelk, and upon its proper coat. If the ovum, according to Valentin, be lacerated and its contents minutely examined, the cicatricula is found like a grayish white disk, which in its whole periphery is dense, granulous, and opake; but in the centre presents a clear, nongranulous, and perfectly diaphanous point. Purkinje found, that when he removed the dark granulous mass by suction with a small tube, there remained a perfectly transparent vesicle filled with a pellucid lymph, which had a decidedly spherical form, but, being extremely delicate, was easily lacerated, and then its fluid escaped. As he found this, which later naturalists have named—after its discoverer—the Purkin'jean ves'icle, in the ova of the ovary, but could not see it in ova, which had already entered the oviduct, he gave it the name germinal vesicle, vesic'ula prolif'era seu germinati'va, (F.) Vésicule germinative. Besides a perfectly colourless fluid, this contains one or more dark corpuscles, which appear as a nucleus through the including membrane in the shape of opake spots—the germinal spot, macu'la germinati'va seu ger'minans, nu'cleus germinati'vus, (F.) Tache germinative. The granulous membrane—its thickened portion, the so called 'cicatricula,'—and the germinal vesicle, constitute those parts of the ovum which pass immediately into the original foundation of the embryo, the blastoderma or germinal membrane, vesic'ula blastodermat'ica, blastoder'mic vesicle.

Molecule, Gelatinous, Molecule.

MOLÈNE, Verbascum nigrum.

MOLES GANGLIFORMIS, Ganglion of Gasser.

MOLIBDUS, Plumbum.

MOLILALIA, Mogilalia.

MOLI'MEN, pl. Molimina, from molior, 'to move or stir.' An attempt, a struggle. Hence:

Molimen Crit'icum. An impulsion towards a sudden solution or crisis of a disease.

Molimen Hæmorrhag''icum. The hemorrhagic diathesis or impulsion.

Molimen Hæmorrhoida'lē. The hemorrhoidal diathesis or impulsion. See Hæmorrhois.

Molimen Menstrua'lē. The menstrual diathesis or impulsion.

Molimen Naturæ Salutarium, Instinct.

MOLLESCENCE, Mollities.

MOLLET, Sura.

MOLLIPUFFS, Lycoperdon.

MOLLIS MATER, Pia mater.

MOLLIT''IES, Molles'cence, Malacis'mus, Mollit''ia, Mollitu'do, Emollit''ies, Emollities morbo'sa, Mollitio, Malax'is, Malaco'sis, Malthax'is, (F.) Ramollissement; (G.) Malakien (Fuchs); from mollis, 'soft.' Preternatural softness of an organ or part of an organ.

MOLLITIES CER'EBRI, Malaco'sis Cer'ebri, Encephalomala'cia, Encephalomalax'is, Necrenceph'alus (W. Farr,) Cerebromala'cia, Encephalosep'sis, Molles'cence or softening or a kind of liquefaction of the cerebral substance; the remainder preserving its ordinary consistency. (F.) Ramollissement du cerveau. The neurine often contains small clots of blood, giving rise to what has been termed Apoplexie capillaire, (Cruveilhier.) The symptoms denoting it are equivocal.

MOLLITIES CORDIS, Cardiomalacia.

MOLLITIES MEDUL'LÆ SPINA'LIS, Myelomala'cia, (F.) Ramollissement de la Moëlle Épinière. Softening of the spinal marrow.

MOLLITIES OS'SIUM, Malacosteo'sis, Malacos'teon, Emollit''ies os'sium, Paros'tia flex'ilis, Osteomalaco'sis, Rachi'tis seu Rachi'tis adulto'rum, Spina vento'sa (of some), Osteomala'cia, Softening of the bones, (F.) Ostéo-malacie, Ostéo-malaxie, Ostéo-malakie, Ramollissement des os. A rare affection in which the bones are deprived of their salts, particularly of the phosphate of lime, and consist only, or mainly, of gelatin; hence they acquire a degree of suppleness which renders them unfit for the performance of their functions. The disease generally affects all the bones; but it is especially remarkable during life in the long bones, which assume any curvature that may be wished. Very violent pain is often experienced in them; and the urine frequently contains an enormous proportion of calcareous phosphate. The patient is compelled to remain in the horizontal posture; the bones no longer being fixed points for the muscles to act upon. The disease has, hitherto, always terminated fatally, and dissection has exhibited the gelatinous nature of the bones; which, by desiccation, have become transparent, as if they had been macerated in acid.

Experience has afforded no means of relief in this dreadful affliction. The alkaline salts, earthy phosphates, &c. are of little or no use.

MOLLITIO, Mollities.

MOLLITUDO, Mollities.

MOLLUS'CUM, Athero'ma. A cutaneous affection, so called in consequence of its resemblance to certain molluscous animals. It consists of numerous tumours, varying in size from that of a pea to that of a pigeon's egg, filled with an atheromatous matter, which are developed in the substance of the derma, and are of various shapes, some having a large base,—others adherent by means of a pedicle.

Molluscum contagio'sum, a singular variety, is characterized by the presence of hard, round, tubercles, which are smooth and transparent, and when pressed, pour out from an orifice in their summits a little opake or milky fluid.

The disease is probably seated in the sebaceous follicles.

If internal treatment be adopted at all, it must consist of eutrophics, as arsenic, iodine, &c. The external treatment consists in the employment of measures calculated to excite the tubercles to inflammation, as by touching them with potassa.

MOLOCHE, Malva rotundifolia.

MOLOPES, Vibices.

MOLYBDÆNUM MAGNESII, Manganese, black oxide of.

MOLYBDOS, Plumbum.

MOLYBDOSIS, Lead-poisoning.

MOLYNE, Anus.

MOLYNSIS, Miasma.

MOMIE, Mummy.

MOMIN, Mamei.

MOMISCI, Molar teeth.

MOMOR'DICA, M. Balsami'na, Balsami'na, Necrosper'ma cuspida'ta, Balm-apple, Balsam apple, (F.) Balsamine, Pomme de merveille. The fruit of this oriental tree, Pomum mirab'ile seu hierosolymita'num, was formerly considered vulnerary.

MOMORDICA ASPERA, M. Elaterium.

MOMOR'DICA ELATE'RIUM: M. as'pera, Elate'rium, Ecba'lia Elate'rium, Cu'cumis agres'tis seu asini'nus, C. sylvestris, Elate'rium officina'rum seu cordifo'lium, Charan'tia, Bouba'lios, Guarerba orba, Wild or Squirting cu'cumber, Ecbol'ium elate'rium, (F.) Concombre Sauvage, Momordique. Nat. Order, Cucurbitaceæ. The dried sediment from the juice is the elaterium of the shops. (See Extractum Elaterii.) It is a most powerful cathartic, and, as such, has been used in dropsies. Its active principle is the Elatin, Elaterin or Elaterium. Dose, gr. ¼ to gr. j. until it operates.

MOMORDIQUE, Momordica elaterium.

MONAD, from monas, 'unity.' A simple particle, or atom, or unit. — Leibnitz. The smallest of all visible animalcules. A primary cell or germ.

MONÆ, Nates.

MONAR'DA COCCIN'EA, Scarlet Rose balm, Mountain mint, Oswego Tea, Mountain Balm, Horsemint, Square stalk, Red Balm; a beautiful indigenous plant, having the excitant properties of Monarda punctata.

MONAR'DA FISTULO'SA, Purple monar'da. The leaves have a fragrant smell; and an aromatic, somewhat bitter taste. They are reputed to be nervine, stomachic, and deobstruent.

MONAR'DA PUNCTA'TA, Horsemint. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. Nat. Ord. Labiatæ. Indigenous in the United States. Stimulant and carminative. The Oleum monardæ is officinal in the United States.

MONARDA, PURPLE, M. fistulosa.

MONDER (F.), from mundus, 'cleanly.' To render clean or pure. In Pharmacy, it means to separate any substance from its impure or useless portion. In surgery, monder ou mondifier une plaie, is to clean or deterge a wound.

MONDIFICATIFS, Detergents.

MONDIFIER UNE PLAIE, see Monder.

MONE'MERON, Monoë'meron, Monohe'meron; from μονος, 'one,' and ἡμερα, 'a day.' A name given to several collyria, which were supposed to be capable of curing diseases of the eyes in a day.

MONENTERUM, Colon.

MONE'SIA. A vegetable extract imported into Europe from South America, in hard, thick cakes. It is prepared from the bark of a tree, whose botanical name is uncertain—probably Chrysophyl'lum glycyphlæ'um. It is very friable, and its fracture very much resembles that of a well-torrefied cocoanut. It is wholly soluble in water; and its taste—which is at first sweet like liquorice—sometimes becomes astringent. It is on account of its astringent properties that it has been prescribed in chronic bronchitis, hæmoptysis, diarrhœa, leucorrhœa, uterine hemorrhage, &c. It has been applied locally, in the form of ointment, (Mones. p. 1, Adipis, p. vij.

The dose of Monesia is from 12 to 40 grains a day.

MONEYWORT, Lysimachia nummularia.

MONGO'LIAN. Anthropologists give the name Mongolian race to a variety of the human species, spread over a great part of the north of Asia, in China, India, Thibet, the Moluccas, &c. The individuals composing it have the skin of a brown red, forehead flat, nose broad, cheeks prominent, and lips large. See Homo.

MONISM; Monis'mus; from μονος, 'alone.' The doctrine, which declares matter and mind to be identical.

MONK PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. A class of practitioners of whom Frère Cosme and Jacques Beaulieu in France, and Pravetz in Germany, were the most distinguished.

MONKSHOOD, Aconitum—m. Common, Aconitum napellus—m. Salutary, Aconitum anthora.

MONNI'NA POLYSTA'CHIA. A beautiful South American plant. Nat. Ord. Polygaleæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Octandria. The bark of the root is a powerful astringent, and much used in South America in diseases of the bowels.

MONOBLEP'SIS, from μονος, 'one,' and βλεψις, 'sight.' An affection in which vision is confused, imperfect, and indistinct, when both eyes are employed; but perfect or nearly so, when either eye is used singly.

MONOCAR'PÆ; from μονος, 'alone,' 'single,' and καρπος, 'fruit.' A division of cutaneous affections, of the family of Eczematosen of Fuchs, which includes strophulus, psydracia, and ecthyma.

MONOCEPH'ALUS, from μονος, 'one,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A compound monster having two bodies with a single head.

MONOCOLON, Cæcum, Rectum.

MONOCRA'NUS, from μονος, 'one,' 'single,' and κρανον, κρανιον, 'cranium.' A monster with one cranium, but with the face in part double — Gurlt.

MONOCULUM, Cæcum.

MONOC'ULUS, Mon'ocle, Monophthal'mus, Unioc'ulus, Unoc'ulus, from μονος, 'one,' and oculus, 'an eye.' A bandage employed to maintain topical applications over one of the eyes. This bandage, called by some surgeons Simplex oc'ulus, (F.) Œil simple, is made of a roller three or four ells long, rolled into a single ball. See Cyclops.

MONODIPLO'PIA; from μονος, 'alone,' διπλους, 'double,' and ωψ, 'eye.' Double vision with one eye.

MONOEMERON, Monemeron.

MONOGAS'TRIC, Monogas'tricus; from μονος, 'one,' and γαστηρ, 'stomach.' That which has but one stomach. Man is monogastric; ruminating animals, on the contrary, are polygastric.

MON'OGRAPH, MED'ICAL, Monograph'ia med'ica; from μονος, 'one,' and γραφη, 'description.' An ex professo treatise on a single class of diseases, or on a single disease.

MONOHEMERON, Monemeron.

MONOMACHON, Cæcum.

MONOMACUM, Cæcum.

MONOMANIA, see Melancholy — m. Homicidal, Homicidal insanity—m. Incendiary, Pyromania.

MONOMANIE, Melancholy — m. Homicide, Homicidal insanity.

MONOMMATOS, Cyclops.

MONOMORIA, see Melancholy.

MONOPAGIA, Clavus hystericus, Hemicrania.

MONOP'ATHY, Monopathi'a, from μονος, 'one,' and παθος, 'disorder.' A state in which one organ or function is disordered. Applied to melancholy or monomania; which is said to be a monopathic affection.

MONOPEGIA, Clavus hystericus, Hemicrania.

MONOPHTHALMUS, Cyclops, Monoculus.

MONOPLAS'TIC, Monoplas'ticus: from μονος, 'one,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' That which has one form. A monoplastic element, in histology, is one which retains its primary form. — Gerber.

MONOPODIA, Sympodia.

MONOPS, Cyclops.

MONOPSIA, Cyclopia.

MONOPUS, Symmeles.

MONOR'CHIS, from μονος, 'one,' and ορχις, 'testicle.' One who has only one testicle.

MONOSI'TIA, from μονος, 'one,' and σιτος, 'food,' 'repast.' The habit of taking only one meal in the day.

MONOT'ROPA UNIFLO'RA, Indian pipe, Iceplant, Pipe-plant, Nest root, Fit root. An indigenous plant, whose juice, mixed with water, has been extolled by the Indians in ophthalmia. The dried root in powder has been given in epilepsy and nervous diseases.

MONROIA'NUM FORA'MEN. A foramen at the anterior part of the lateral ventricles of the brain, by which they communicate with each other, is so called from the second Monro.

MONS VEN'ERIS, Montic'ulus Ven'eris, Ephebe'um, (F.) Mont de Vénus, Pénil, Motte, Éminence sus-pubienne. The more or less projecting eminence, situate at the base of the hypogastrium, above the vulva and in front of the os pubis. At the period of puberty it becomes covered with hair, formerly called Tresso'ria.

MONSO'NIA OVA'TA, Keita, of the Hottentots. A plant of the Nat. Ord. Geraniaceæ, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope. The root and herb are very astringent, and are used successfully in dysentery.

MONSTER, Monstrum, Teras, Pelor, Pelo'ria, Pelo'rium, Pelo'rum. Any organized being, having an extraordinary vice of conformation, or a preternatural perversion of every part, or of certain parts only.

The following classification embraces the main varieties of malformations — Vitia primæ conformatio'nis.—1. Those in which certain parts of the normal body are absent or defective—monstra deficientia. 2. These produced by fusion or coalition of organs — coalitio partium, symphysis. 3. Those, in which parts, united in the normal state are separated from each other — clefts, fissures. 4. Those in which normal openings are occluded — atresia. 5. Those by excess, or in which certain parts have a disproportionate size—monstra abundantia. 6. Those, in which one or many parts have an abnormal position—situs mutatus. 7. Those affecting the sexual organs — hermaphroditism; and to these "true malformations" Vogel adds 8. Diseases of the fœtus, and abnormal states of its envelopes.

Amongst the numerous hypotheses entertained on the origin or cause of monsters, or of monstrosity—terato'sis, monstros'itas, (F.) monstruosité, as the state has been called—three only are worth mentioning. They have been attributed, 1. To the influence of the maternal imagination on the fœtus in utero. 2. To accidental changes, experienced by the fœtus at some period of its uterine existence: and 3. To a primitive defect in the germs. The second seems to be the only one that is philosophical.

As a medico-legal question, monsters, if capable of action as individuals, have the same rights as other persons.

MONT DE VÉNUS, Mons Veneris.

MONTBRISON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Montbrison is a town in France, in the department of the Loire, fifteen leagues from Lyons. There are three cold springs here, which are highly acidulous, and used as refrigerants and aperients.

MONT-DE-MARSAN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont-de-Marsan is a small French town, 10 leagues from Dax; where there is a chalybeate spring, somewhat frequented.

MONT-D'OR, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont d'Or is a village seven leagues from Clermont, (Puy-de-Dôme,) at which are several mineral springs, cold and thermal. Those of the Fountain La Madelaine, and of the Great Bath, are thermal, temp. 112° Fahr., and contain carbonic acid, subcarbonate and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, subcarbonate of lime and magnesia, alumine and oxide of iron. Those of St. Margaret are cold, and contain much carbonic acid.

MONTECATI'NI, MINERAL WATERS OF. This town is situate near Borgo-Buggiano, in Tuscany. The springs are thermal; ranging from 78° to 118° Fahrenheit.

MONTPELLIER, CLIMATE OF. This seat of a celebrated medical school in the S. E. of France was at one time renowned for its climate, and especially in regard to its adaptation to consumptive cases. This is now exploded, and it is at present esteemed an unfit residence for them. The climate possesses the general characters of that of south-eastern France—being dry, hot, and irritating; subject to frequent vicissitudes, and especially to blasts of keen, cold, northerly winds. It is, indeed, most injurious in pulmonary diseases.

MOON, Luna, Sele'nē, Menē, Sax. Mona, (G.) Mond, (F.) Lune. The moon has been supposed to exert considerable influence over the human body, in health and disease. Such influence has been grossly exaggerated. Not many years ago, it would have been heretical to doubt the exacerbation of mania at the full of the moon; yet it is now satisfactorily shown, that if the light be excluded at this period, the lunatic is not excited more than ordinarily.

MORE'TUS, More'tum, from morum, 'the mulberry.' Ancient name of a cordial julep, into the composition of which the syrup of mulberries entered.—Schröder.

MORGAGN'I, HUMOUR OF, Humor Morgagnia'nus. A peculiar, transparent, slightly viscid fluid, found between the crystalline and its capsule.

MORGELINE, Alsine media.

MORGUE, (F). A dead-house, wherein persons, found dead, are exposed with the view of being recognized by their friends.

MORIA, Idiotism—m. Demens, Idiotism, Dementia—m. Demens lerema, see Dementia—m. Imbecilis amnesia, Amnesia.

MORIBUND, Psychorages.

MORINGA NUX BEN, Guilandina moringa—m. Oleifera, Guilandina moringa—m. Pterygosperma, Guilandina moringa—m. Zeylanica, Guilandina moringa.

MORION, Genital organ, Penis.

MORIOPLAS'TICĒ, Chirur'gia curto'rum, Ch. Anaplas'tica, Restitu'tio organ'ica seu par'tium deperdita'rum, Transplanta'tio, Autoplas'ticē, Anaplas'tic Surgery, Autoplas'ty or Autoplastic or Plastic Surgery, Chirur'gia plas'tica, from μοριον, 'a part,' and πλαστικος, 'forming.' The restoration of lost parts. The operations for this purpose have various names, according to the part concerned, as Cheiloplastice, Ceratoplastice, Rhinoplastice, &c.

MORO, from morum, 'a mulberry:'—Morum, (F.) Mure. A small abscess resembling a mulberry. A small tumour, of a similar appearance, particularly on the genital organs after impure coition.

MOROCH'THUS, Moroch'tus, Morochi'tes, Merochi'tes, Meroc'tes, Galax'ia, Leucograph'ia, (F.) Pierre au lait, Milk stone. An Egyptian stone, used by the ancients as an application to the intertrigo of children: probably a variety of fuller's earth, inasmuch as it appears to have been used by fullers.

MOROCHITES, Morochthus.

MOROCHTUS, Morochthus.

MOROCOMIUM, Morotrophium.

MORODOCHIUM, Morotrophium.

MOROSIS, Fatuitas, Idiotism.

MOROSITA'TES, from μωρια, 'folly.' A generic name given by Linnæus to an order of Vesaniæ, in which he included pica, bulimia, polydipsia, antipathia, nostalgia, panophobia, satyriasis, nymphomania, tarentismus, and hydrophobia.

MOROTROPH'IUM, Morocomi'um, Morodochi'um, from μωρος, 'fatuous,' and τροφη, 'support.' An insane establishment; a lunatic asylum; a mad-house. Under proper management, a valuable institution; but liable to various abuses.

MORPHÆA, Morphew—m. Alba, Lepra alphoides—m. Nigra, Lepra nigricans.

MORPHÉE, Morphew.

MORPHEW, Morphæ'a, (F.) Morphée. A term vaguely applied to scurfy eruptions on the face. Morphœa was formerly applied to squamous diseases in general.

MORPHIA, Morphina—m. Acetate of, Morphinæ acetas—m. and Zinc, double iodide of, Zinc and Morphia, double iodide of—m. Citrate of, see Morphina—m. Muriate of, see Morphina—m. Sulphate of, Morphinæ sulphas.

MORPHIÆ ACETAS, Morphinæ acetas—m. Sulphas, Morphinæ sulphas.

MOR'PHICA, from μορφη, 'shape.' Monstrosities of birth. The 3d order, class Typhica of Good.

MORPHI'NA, Mor'phia, Mor'phium, Morphi'nē, Morphine, from Morpheus, the 'god of sleep.' A solid, colourless alkali; crystallizable in beautiful pyramids, truncated and transparent; soluble in alcohol, and slightly so in boiling water. It exists, combined with meconic acid, in opium. It may be obtained by decomposing, by means of ammonia or calcined magnesia, an aqueous solution of opium made in the cold.

The following is the process of the Pharm. U. S. Opium, sliced, ℔j; distilled water, alcohol, animal charcoal, each a sufficient quantity; solution of ammonia, f℥vj. Macerate the opium with four pints of distilled water for 24 hours, and having worked it with the hand, digest for 24 hours, and strain. Macerate the residue twice successively with distilled water, and strain. Mix the infusions; evaporate to six pints, and filter; then add first five pints of alcohol, and afterwards three fluidounces of the solution of ammonia, previously mixed with half-a-pint of alcohol. After 24 hours, pour in the remainder of the solution of ammonia, mixed as before with half-a-pint of alcohol; and set the liquor aside for 24 hours, that crystals may form. To purify these, boil them with two pints of alcohol till they are dissolved; filter the solution, while hot, through animal charcoal, and set it aside to crystallize.

Morphia dissolves perfectly in the acids, which it saturates; and with which it forms very crystallizable salts, with the exception of the acetate. All these salts have a bitter taste, and act upon the animal economy in the same manner as opium, but more powerfully. The acetate is the salt commonly employed in medicine. It was, at one time, supposed that Morphia is the purely sedative part of opium, divested of its irritating properties; but experience has not confirmed this. On the contrary, it will generally disagree where opium does. Dose of morphia, ¼ to ¾ of a grain.

MORPHI'NÆ ACE'TAS, Mor'phiæ Acetas, Ac''etate of Morphine, Acetate of Morphia. A salt formed by saturating morphia with acetic acid. (Morphia, in powder, freed from narcotina by boiling with sulphuric ether, ℥j; distilled water, Oss; acetic acid, a sufficient quantity. Mix the morphia with the water; then carefully drop in the acid, constantly stirring until the morphia is saturated and dissolved. Evaporate the solution in a water-bath to the consistence of syrup. Lastly, dry the acetate with a gentle heat and rub it into powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, from ¼ of a grain to a grain.

MORPHI'NÆ SULPHAS, MOR'PHIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphate of Morphia. A salt, formed by saturating morphia with sulphuric acid, evaporating, and crystallizing. Dose, the same as of the acetate.

Muriate and Citrate of Morphia have likewise been used; but they possess no advantages over the other salts. The sulphate and muriate are officinal in the Ph. U. S.

MORPHIUM, Morphina.

MORPHOLOG''ICAL, Morpholog''icus, from μορφη, 'shape,' and λογος, 'a description.' That which has relation to the anatomical conformation of parts. Applied, at times, to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo, in contradistinction to histological, which is applied to the transformation by which the tissues are gradually generated. In comparative anatomy, it is applied to the history of the modifications of forms, which the same organ undergoes in different animals.

MORPHOLOGY, Anatomy.

MORPHOLY'SIS, from μορφη, 'shape,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Destruction of organization. An agent, that occasions such destruction, is called a morpholyt'ic.

MORPHOLYTIC, see Morpholysis.

MORPHON'OMY, Morphonom'ia: from μορφη, 'shape,' and νομος, 'a law.' The laws of organic formation. The department of anatomical science which teaches the laws of organic configuration.

MORPHOTOMY, see Anatomy.

MORPIO, see Pediculus.

MORPION, Crab-louse, see Pediculus.

MORS, Death — m. Apparens, Asphyxia — m. Putativa, Aphyxia — m. Repentina, Demotivus lapsus — m. du Diable, Scabiosa succisa.

MORT, Death—m. Apparente, Asphyxia—m. du Chien, Cholera—m. aux Chiens, Colchicum autumnale—m. aux Panthères, Doronicum pardalianches.

MORTA, Pemphigus.

MORTAL, Morta'lis, from mors, mortis, 'death.' Letha'lis, Leta'lis, Thanato'des, Thanas'imus, (F.) Mortel. That which is subject to death; — that which causes death: — as, man is mortal; a disease is mortal. Of old, it was the custom to have a division of mortal wounds, which gave rise to many errors in medico-legal investigations, as the mortality of wounds depends upon various circumstances; and it is often a matter of extreme difficulty to pronounce whether or not a wound is necessarily mortal.

MORTAL'ITY, Mortal'itas, Lethal'itas, Letal'itas, (F.) Mortalité. This word, taken in an extended sense, expresses the condition of all organized bodies,—of being subject to the cessation of life. In the sense in which it is most frequently employed, it signifies,—the proportional quantity of individuals who, in a certain population, die in a given time. If we assume the population of the earth to be one thousand millions, and a generation to last thirty-three years; in that space of time the one thousand millions must all die, and, consequently, the number of deaths will be, by approximation,

|---|---|
| Each year | 30,000,000 |
| Each day | 82,109 |
| Each hour | 3,421 |
| Each minute | 57 |
| Each second | 1 nearly. |

If, on the other hand, as has been supposed, the number of deaths is to that of the births as TEN to TWELVE: there will be born,

|---|---|
| Each year | 36,000,000 |
| Each day | 98,356 |
| Each hour | 4,098 |
| Each minute | 68 |
| Each second | 1 & 2-15ths. |

It has been estimated that the average mortality of the Pays du Vaud, is 1 in 49; of Sweden and Holland, 1 in 48; of Russia, 1 in 41; of France, 1 in 40; of Austria, 1 in 38; of Prussia and Naples, 1 in 33 to 35; of England, 1 in 45; and of South America, 1 in 30. The same rate of mortality has been given to the United States as to France; but the statistical details on all this matter have been inadequate, and—it is not improbable—inaccurate. The following has been given as the annual mortality of some of the chief cities of this country and Europe: (See the author's Human Health, p. 101: Philadelphia, 1844.) Philadelphia, 1 in 45.68; Glasgow, 1 in 44; Manchester, 1 in 44; Geneva, 1 in 43; Boston, 1 in 41.26; Baltimore, 1 in 41; London, 1 in 40; New York, 1 in 37.83; St. Petersburgh, 1 in 37; Charleston, 1 in 36.50; Leghorn, 1 in 35; Berlin, 1 in 34; Paris, Lyons, Strasburg, and Barcelona, 1 in 32; Nice and Palermo, 1 in 31; Madrid, 1 in 29; Naples, 1 in 28; Brussels, 1 in 26; Rome, 1 in 25; Amsterdam, 1 in 24; and Vienna, 1 in 22½.

In the cities, the mortality under two years of age bears a large ratio. This is exhibited by the following table:

| Ages. | London. | Philad. | Baltimore. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Under 1 year, | 28.52 | 22.7 | 24.11 |
| From 1 to 2, | | 8.6 | 8.55 |
| 2 to 5, | 9.97 | 7.3 | 11.18 |
| 5 to 10, | 4.33 | 4. | 5. |
| 10 to 20, | 4.03 | 5. | 6.3 |
| 20 to 30, | 6.64 | 12. | 9.87 |
| 30 to 40, | 8.08 | 12. | 10.58 |
| 40 to 50, | 8.89 | 10. | 8.88 |
| 50 to 60, | 8.89 | 7.2 | 5.78 |
| 60 to 70, | 9.15 | 5. | 4.5 |
| 70 to 80, | 7.83 | 3.5 | 3. |
| 80 to 90, | 3.18 | 1.9 | 1.67 |
| 90 to 100, | 0.40 | 0.5 | 0.26 |
| 100 to 110, | —— | 0.09 | 0.18 |
| 110 to 120, | —— | 0.013 | |

It would not be proper to regard the value of life in different countries, or in different periods in the same country, to be indicated by the average mortality; inasmuch as in one case a greater mortality may occur amongst children, and in another amongst adults.

Mortality, Bills of, Bills of Necrol'ogy, Mor'tuary Reg''isters, (F.) Tables de Mortalité. Tables, instituted for the purpose of exhibiting the number of deaths, &c. in a given time. Well-kept bills of mortality are of great use to the physician and political economist. Those of London were proverbial for their inaccuracy and insufficiency; especially as regards the complaints of which the persons have died. They were formerly made out by the parish clerks, and the information was conveyed to them by two old women, who were appointed in each parish, and were called Searchers; — their duty being to see that the deceased had died a natural death. This miserable system has, however, been abolished; and the Registrar-General's annual reports of births, deaths, and marriages, exhibit how admirably vital statistics are now conducted in Great Britain.

MORTAR, Morta'rium, Moreta'rium, Morto'rium, Piso, Ac'ónē, Pila, Holmos, Igdē, Igdus, (F.) Mortier. A vessel for reducing to powder different solid substances, and for making certain mixtures. Various substances are employed in the construction of mortars;—iron, marble, glass, wedgewood ware, &c.

MORTARIOLUM, Alveolus.

MORTEL, Mortal.

MORTIER, Mortar.

MORTIFER, Lethiferous.

MORTIFICATIO, Mortification — m. Pulmonum, Necropneumonia.

MORTIFICA'TION, Mortifica'tio, Necro'sis, Sphacela'tion, from mors, 'death,' and fio, 'I become.' The loss of vitality in a part of the body. The incipient stage of mortification, when the case is still recoverable, is called Gangrene; when totally destroyed, Sphacelus. Mortification of a bone is called Necrosis.

Mortification, Cold, Sphacelus — m. Ergot, Ergotism — m. Hot, Gangrene — m. Mildew, Ergotism.

MORTOOTH, Cupri sulphas.

MORTUARY REGISTERS, Mortality, bills of.

MORUM, see Morus nigra — m. Palpebræ internæ, Trachoma caruneulosum.

MORUS NIGRA, M. lacinia'ta, Mul'berry Tree, More'a, Sycami'nos, (F.) Mûrier Noir. The fruit of the mulberry tree, Morum, Sycami'num, (F.) Mûre, is pleasant, sweet, subacid, and abounds with a deep violet-coloured juice. A syrup is directed in the London Pharmacopœia. The bark of the root has been regarded as an anthelmintic.

MORUS RUBRA, Red Mulberry, Wild Mulberry; indigenous. The root has been used to destroy tænia.

MORVE, Mucus, Nasal mucus; see Equinia — m. Farcineuse, see Equinia.

MOS, Habit.

Mos Morbi Benig'nus, seu Malig'nus. The benign, or malignant character of a disease.

MOSCHARDI'NA, Muscer'da, from μοσχος, 'musk.' A lozenge for the mouth, composed of musk, ambergris, and other aromatics.

MOSCHELÆ'ON, Moscolæ'a. A compound aromatic oil, containing musk.

MOSCHUS, Musk — m. Arabum, Hibiscus abelmoschus — m. Factitious, Musk, artificial.

MOSCOLÆA, Moschelæon.

MOSLICH, Maslach.

MOSQUITA, see Mosquito.

MOSQUI'TO (S.) Diminutive of (S.) mosca, 'a fly.' Musquito. A very troublesome insect in warm, moist situations. Curtains, called Mosquito curtains, are used in India, by way of protection. The entrance of mosquitos into the bedchamber may also be prevented, to a certain extent, by keeping the doors and windows closed until the lights are extinguished. The pain and itching from the bites are alleviated by washing them with hartshorn.

Mosquita is a name given, by the Portuguese, to small, red pimples on the skin, resembling the bites of the musquito.

MOSS BERRY, Vaccinium oxycoccos — m. Ceylon, Fucus amylaceus — m. Club, Lycopodium — m. Cup, Lichen pyxidatus — m. Iceland, Lichen Islandicus — m. Irish, Fucus crispus — m. Marine, Fucus amylaceus.

MOTA, Fagus castanea.

MOTAMEN, Motion.

MOTATIO, Motion.

MOTE, Carbasus, Linteum.

MOTEUR, Motory.

MOTHER'S MARKS, Nævus — m. Spots, Nævus.

MOTHERWORT, Leonurus cardiaca, Matricaria.

MOTIL'ITY, Motil'itas, from motus, 'movement.' (F.) Motilité, Motricité. Faculty of moving; moving power; contractility.

MOTION, Motus, Mo'tio, Mota'tio, Mota'men, Commo'tio, Permo'tio, Cine'sis, Movement, (F.) Mouvement. The act of changing place. The various motions may be divided into,—First, the voluntary or those that are executed under the influence of the brain. Secondly, the involuntary, which may be subdivided into, 1, The excited, of the reflex function of Dr. Marshall Hall and others,—as the closure of the larynx on the contact of acrid vapours, of the pharynx on that of the food,—a function of the spinal marrow; and 2. Those that are executed under the organic and other nerves of involuntary function. It is probable, too, that every living tissue is capable of moving responsive to its appropriate irritant. See Irritability.

Motion, Ciliary, see Cilia — m. Involuntary, see Automatic — m. Vibratory, see Ciliary — m. Voluntary, Autocinesis.

MOTIVE, Motory.

MOTOR, Motory.

Motor Oculi Exter'nus, Nervus tim'idus, (F.) Nerf oculo-musculaire externe (Ch.), Nerf moteur oculaire externe, Sixth pair of nerves, arises from the furrow which separates the pons Varolii from the medulla oblongata. It enters the cavernous sinus; anastomoses on the outside of the carotid artery with two filaments furnished by the superior cervical ganglion; enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, and is lost on the rectus externus oculi. This pair is, also, called Abducentes.

Moto'res Oculo'rum, Moto'rii Oculorum, Ocula'res commu'nes, Ophthal'mici exter'ni, Common Oculo-muscular Nerves, (F.) Nerfs moteurs oculaires communs, (Ch.,) The third pair of nerves. This nerve arises from a depression at the inner side of the peduncles of the brain, between the tuber annulare and corpora mammillaria. It enters the outer part of the cavernous sinus, and passes into the orbitar cavity. Behind the sphenoidal fissure, it divides into two branches; the one superior, and the other inferior. The former is lost on the rectus superior oculi and the levator palpebræ superioris; the latter—the larger of the two—divides into three branches, which pass to the rectus internus, rectus inferior, and lesser oblique. The last furnishes a filament, which passes to the ophthalmic ganglion.

MOTORIAL, Motory.

MO'TORY, Motive, Motor, Moto'rial, Motrix, Kinet'ic or Cinet'ic, (F.) Moteur. That which moves or causes movement, as motor nerves, in contradistinction to sensory.

MOTOS, Linteum, Tent.

MOTO'SIS, μοτος, 'charpie.' The application of charpie to a wound.

MOTRICITÉ, Motility.

MOTRIX, Motory.

MOTTE, Mons veneris.

MOTUM, Carbasus, Lintenm.

MOURON DES OISEAUX, Alsine media—m. Rouge, Anagallis.

MOUSE-EAR, Alsine media, Hieracium pilosella.

MOUSE-SIGHT, Myopia.

MOUSSE DE CORSE, Corallina Corsicana—m. d'Island, Fucus crispus—m. Perlée, Fucus crispus.

MOUSSERON, see Agaric.

MOUSSEUX, Frothy.

MOUSTACHE, Mystax.

MOÛT DE LA BIÈRE, Wort.

MOÛTARDE, Sinapis.

MOUTH, Sax. muð, Os, Cavum Oris, Stoma, (F.) Bouche. This word sometimes signifies the cavity situate between the jaws, and containing the tongue, &c.;—at others, the outer orifice of that cavity. The mouth, in the first acceptation, Cav'itas seu Spa'tium Oris, is the cavity; bounded, above, by the palatine arch; below, by the tongue; before, by the lips; and behind, by the velum palati and pharynx. The sides of the mouth and the organs it contains are lined by a mucous membrane. The anterior aperture of the mouth is, sometimes, called facial—the posterior, pharyngeal. In the mouth are the teeth, gums, alveolar margins, tongue; the excretory ducts of the salivary glands, and those of a number of mucous follicles, &c. It is in this cavity that the food is cut, torn, or bruised by the teeth; is impregnated with saliva, and formed into a mass or bolus, which is then subjected to the act of deglutition. The mouth contains the organs of taste; and it serves in respiration, articulation, expectoration, suction, &c.

The condition of the mouth requires to be attended to in Semeiology. The state of the mucous membrane, like that of the tongue, indicates the condition of the membrane of the alimentary canal generally.

MOUTH, Os, Apertura, Orific''ium, Hia'tus, Peristo'mium, is, also, applied to the open extremities of vessels or other canals.

MOUTH ROOT, Coptis — m. Sore, Aphthæ — m. Watering, see Salivation.

MOUVEMENT, Motion.

MOVEMENT, Motion.

MOXA, Moxibu'rium. A word by which the Chinese and Japenese designate a cottony substance, which they prepared by beating the dried leaves of the Artemisia moxa, — a kind of mugwort. With this down they form a cone, which is placed upon the part intended to be cauterized, and is set fire to at the top. The heat and pain gradually increase, in proportion as the combustion proceeds downwards, until ultimately an eschar may be formed. In Europe and this country, the same operation is usually practised with a cylinder of cotton-wool, or with one formed from the pith of the greater sun-flower. This mode of cauterization is employed as a powerful counter-irritant; which it assuredly is. Sloughing may be in some measure prevented, according to Baron Larrey, by the application of liquid ammonia to the burnt part.

The term moxa has been extended to any substance, which by gradual combustion on or near the skin is employed as a counter-irritant.

MOXIBURIUM, Moxa.

MOXIBUS'TION, Moxibus'tio, Encau'sis. Mode of cauterization by means of moxa.

MOXON'S EFFERVESCING MAGNESIA, see Magnesia, effervescing, Moxon's.

MUCAGO, Liquor sanguinis, Mucilage.

MUCARUM, Mucharum.

MUCCINIUM, Mucilage.

MUCEDO, Mucilage.

MUCHA'RUM, Muca'rum. A barbarous term, formerly used for an aqueous infusion of roses, sweetened, and evaporated to the consistence of syrup.

MUCIFIC, Blennogenous.

MU'CIFORM, Muciform'is, Myxo'des, Blenno'des, Blennoï'des, Blennoï'deus, from mucus, and forma, 'form.' Resembling mucus in character or appearance.

MU'CILAGE, Mucila'go, Muca'go, Muce'do, Muccin'ium, from the Lat. mucus,—itself presumed to be from mungere, 'to wipe the nose.' A mixture of gum and a small quantity of matter analogous to mucus, which is found in abundance in linseed, quince-seed, &c. It is obtained by heating with water the parts, or products, of plants which contain it. It is much used in the preparation of emollient cataplasms and the greater part of the demulcent tisanes.

MUCILAGE, see Liquor sanguinis — m. Animal, Mucus — m. of Quince-seeds, Decoctum cydoniæ — m. of Rice, see Oryza — m. of Sassafras Pith, Infusum sassafras medullæ—m. Starch, Mucilago amyli.

MUCILAGINEUX, Mucilaginous.

MUCILAG''INOUS, Mucilagino'sus, Gummo'sus, Gummio'des, Gummido'des, (F.) Mucilagineux. Gummy. Resembling gum. That which possesses the character of mucilage.

MUCILAGO, Mucilage, Synovia.

MUCILAGO ACA'CIÆ, M. Acaciæ Arab'icæ, M. Gummi Arab'icæ, Mucilage of aca'cia, M. of gum Arabic. (Acaciæ gum. contus. ℥iv; aq. bullient. Oss. Rub the gum with the water gradually added.) Demulcent. To allay cough; but, chiefly, to suspend insoluble matters in water, &c.

MUCILAGO AM'YLI, Starch mucilage. (Amyli, ʒiij; aquæ, Oj. Rub the starch with the water gradually added; then boil till it forms a mucilage.—Ph. L.) Demulcent. Generally given per anum.

MUCILAGO ARTICULORUM seu JUNCTURARUM, Synovia.

MUCILAGO ASTRAG'ALI TRAGACAN'THÆ, M. tragacanthæ (Ph. U. S.), M. gummi tragacanthæ, Mucilage of tragacanth. (Gummi tragacanth. ʒj; aquæ bullient. Oj. Macerate for 24 hours; triturate till the gum is dissolved, and press through linen.) For pharmaceutical purposes.

MUCILAGO CRETICA, Misturæ cretæ—m. Gummi Arabici, M. acaciæ—m. Seminis cydonii mali, Decoctum cydoniæ—m. Gummi tragacanthæ, M. astragali tragacanthæ—m. Tragacanthæ, M. astragali tragacanthæ.

MUCIN, Mucus.

MUCIP'AROUS, Mucip'arus, from mucus, and pario, 'I bring forth.' Mucous-producing; as muciparous glands or follicles.

MUCKSWEAT, Desudatio.

MUCOCE'LE, Hernia sacci lacryma'lis, from mucus, and κηλη, 'rupture.' An enlargement or protrusion of the mucous membrane of the lachrymal passages, giving occasion to fistula lacrymalis. Also, dropsy of the lachrymal sac.

MUCO-ENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

MUCO-PU'RULENT, Muco-purulen'tus, Pyoblen'nicus, from mucus, and pus. Having the character or appearance of mucus and pus.

MUCOR, Euros, Mucus — m. Narium, Nasal mucus.

MUCOSITAS, Mucus.

MUCOS'ITY, Mucos'itas. A fluid, which resembles mucus, or contains a certain quantity of it.

MUCOUS, Muco'sus. An epithet for all bodies containing mucilage or mucus. It is, also, sometimes used synonymously with gummy. In pathology, it is occasionally employed to express the seat of a disease, as mucous disease, mucous phlegmasia; that is, having its seat in a mucous membrane.

MUCRO, Apex.

MUCRO seu Cor'yphē seu Fundus seu Vertex Cordis. The apex or point of the heart.

MUCRO HUMERI, Acromion.

MUCRONATA CARTILAGO, Xiphoid cartilage.

MUCRONATUM OS, Xiphoid cartilage.

MU'CULENT, Muculen'tus, from mucus. Slimy, viscid.

MUCUNA, see Dolichos pruriens — m. Pruriens, Dolichos pruriens — m. Prurita, see Dolichos.

MUCUS, Mucor, Muco'sus humor, Mucos'itas, Myxa, Mycus, Lapē, Pitui'ta, Zoömy'cus, Zoomyx'a, Pit'uite, Animal mucus, Blenna, Animal mucilage, (F.) Muqueux animal, Morve, Mucilage animal, presumed to be from mungere, 'to wipe the nose.' A substance, analogous to vegetable mucilage; from which, however, it differs, by affording subcarbonate of ammonia on distillation. Mucus exudes through the skin, in a state of combination with a peculiar oily matter; and, drying, forms the epidermis. It constitutes, in part, the different epidermeous productions, as the hair, nails, wool, and horn of animals, feathers of birds, and scales of fish. It is found at the surface of the mucous membranes, and presents some difference in its composition and properties, according to the particular mucous membrane from which it is obtained. Its chief organic constituent is an albuminous compound, — mucin. Mucus preserves the membranes moist, and in a state best fitted for the performance of their functions. The French give the term glaire to the thick, stringy mucus, secreted by the mucous membranes when in a state of disease.

When mucus is examined with the microscope it is found to contain numerous epithelial scales or flattened cells; together with round, granular bodies, which are commonly termed mucous corpuscles or mucous globules.

MUCUS CARPHODES, see Carphodes — m. Catharticus, Lichen Islandicus—m. Malpighii, Corpus mucosum—m. Narium, Nasal mucus.

MUD-APPLE PLANT, Solanum melongena.

MUDAR, Madar. The Calotropis mudarii seu madarii; or, according to the generality of authorities, the C. gigante'a or Ascle'pias gigante'a. In the Hindoo practice of physic, the bark of the root, as well as the concrete juice of the plant, enters into various compound formulæ for the cure of elephantiasis and many other disorders. Experiments instituted by Dr. Duncan, jr., exhibit its properties to be like those of ipecacuanha.

MUDGE'S INHALER, see Inhaler.

MUGUET, Aphthæ, Convallaria maialis — m. des Bois, Asperula odorata — m. de Mai, Convallaria maialis.

MUGWORT, Artemisia vulgaris.

MULÂTRE, Mulatto.

MULATTO, (F.) Mulâtre, (S.) Mulata. An individual of the human species engendered of a white and black race; from mulus, 'a mule.'

The following table exhibits the proportion of white blood in the various castes,—arising from the hybridous admixture of white and black,—according to the principles sanctioned by usage.

| PARENTS. | OFFSPRING. | DEGREE OF MIXTURE. |
|---|---|---|
| Negro and White, | Mulatto, | 1-2 White, 1-2 Black. |
| White and Mulatto, | Terceron, | 3-4 —— 1-4 —— |
| Negro and Mulatto, | Griffo, Griff, or Zambo, or Black Terceron, | 1-4 —— 3-4 —— |
| White and Terceron, | Quarteron or Quadroon, | 7-8 —— 1-8 —— |
| Negro and Terceron, | Black Quarteron or Quadroon, | 1-8 —— 7-8 —— |
| White and Quarteron, | Quinteron, | 15-16 —— 1-16 —— |
| Negro and Black Quarteron, | Black Quinteron, | 1-16 —— 15-16 —— |

The last two were considered to be respectively white and black, in the British West India Islands; and the former, prior to modern changes, were white by law, and consequently free. See Half-caste.

MULBERRY CALCULUS, see Calculi, urinary — m. Rash, see Typhus — m. Red, Morus rubra — m. Tree, Morus nigra — m. Wild, Morus rubra.

MULES (F.), Mulæ. Chilblains on the heels.

MULGE'DIUM ACUMINA'TUM, Lactu'ca villo'sa, Blue Lettuce; and

MULGE'DIUM FLORIDA'NUM, Lactu'ca Florida'na, Sonchus Florida'nus, False Lettuce; indigenous plants; Order, Compositæ; have the reputation of curing the bites of rattlesnakes.

MULIEBRIA, Menses, Vulva.

MULIEBRITY, Mulieritas.

MULIEBROS'ITAS, Philogyn'ia, from mulier, 'a woman,' muliebra, 'appertaining to women.' Fondness for women. Hence, Muliebro'sus, Muliera'rius, and Muliero'sus; one who is fond of women.

MULIEBROSUS, see Muliebrositas

MULIERARIUS, see Muliebrositas.

MULIE'RITAS, Mulieb'rity, Womanhood, from mulier, 'a woman.' The state of puberty in the female.

MULIEROSUS, see Muliebrositas.

MULIER PLENA, Pregnant.

MULLED WINE, see Wine.

MULLEIN, BLACK, Verbascum nigrum—m. Broad-leaved, great, Verbascum nigrum — m. Yellow, Verbascum nigrum.

MULLER, (F.) Mouleur. A moulder. A stone held in the hand, with which any powder is ground upon a flat horizontal stone. It is sometimes called mullet, (F.) Mollette.

MULLIGRUBS, Tormina, Colic.

MULOMEDICINA, Veterinary art.

MULOMEDICUS, see Hippiater.

MULSA ACIDA, Oxyglycus.

MULSUM, Hydromeli—m. Vinosum, Œnomel.

MULTIFIDUS SPINÆ, Transversalis dorsi.

MULTIFŒTA'TION, Multifœta'tio, from multus, 'many,' and fœtus. Pregnancy with more than two fœtuses.

MULTILOC'ULAR, Multilocula'ris, from multus, 'many,' and loculus, 'a cell.' Having many cells or cavities.

MULTIMAM'MÆ, from multus, 'many,' and mamma. 'a breast.' A variety of hypergenesis, in which there are supernumerary mammæ.

MULTIP'AROUS, (F.) Multipare, from multus, 'many,' and parire, 'to bring forth.' One that brings forth several young at the same time. Such a birth is called plural.

MULTITUDO, Plethora.

MULTIVORANTIA, Polyphagia.

MUMIA, Mummy.

MUMMIFICA'TION, from mummy, and fio, to make.' Sceleteu'sis. The mode of preparing a mummy.

MUMMY, Mumia, Arab. Moumya, from mum, 'wax.' Rebolea, Rebona, (F.) Momie. A dead body simply dried, or dried after having been embalmed. The latter acceptation is the most common. Formerly, the Egyptian mummy was extolled as useful in contusions. It was presumed, also, to have healing, tonic, and resolvent properties. It is now only regarded as an archaical curiosity.

MUMPS, Cynanche parotidea.

MUNC'TIO, Apomex'is, (F.) l'Action de moucher. The act of blowing the nose.

MUNDIFICANTIA, Detergents.

MUNDIFICATIVA, Detergents.

MUND'TIA SPINO'SA. A plant of the Nat. Ord. Polygaleæ, which grows in Southern Africa, and a decoction of whose branches is used in atrophy, phthisis, &c.

MUNGOS RADIX, Ophiorrhiza mungos.

MUNIMENTUM CASTITATIS, Hymen.

MUQUEUX ANIMAL, Mucus.

MUR, Coryza.

MURAL, Mura'lis, from murus, 'a wall.' Vesical calculi are so called when rugous and covered with tubercles or asperities. They are composed of oxalate of lime.

MURE, Moro, see Morus nigra.

MU'RIA, Halmē, Salsila'go, Brine, (F.) Saumure. This was formerly used as a glyster in dysentery, in certain inveterate neuralgiæ, &c.

Muria, Soda, muriate of.

MURIAS AURICO-NATRICUM, see Gold.

MURIATE D'AMMONIAQUE, Ammoniæ murias—m. d'Ammoniaque et de fer, Ferrum ammoniatum—m. d'Or, Gold, muriate of, see Gold.

MURIAT'IC AC''ID, from muria; Ac''idum salis, Spir'itus salis mari'ni, Sp. salis Glaube'ri, Acidum mari'num concentra'tum, Acidum salis culina'ris, Acidum salis marini, Spir'itus salis ac''idus seu fumans, Acidum hydrochlor'icum s. muriaticum, Spirit of salt, (F.) Acide hydrochlorique ou muriatique. An aqueous solution of chlorohydric acid gas of s. g. 1.16. The odour of muriatic acid is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is nearly colourless when pure; but commonly of a pale yellow; volatile; the fumes visible. Muriatic acid is possessed of tonic and antiseptic properties. It is used in typhus; cutaneous eruptions; in gargles for inflammatory and putrid sore throats, (gtt. xxx to f℥vj of water,) &c. When added to a pediluvium, it renders it stimulating.

Acidum Muriat'icum Dilu'tum of the Ph. U. S. contains four ounces, by measure, of muriatic acid to twelve ounces of distilled water.

MURIDE, Bromine.

MURIER NOIR, Morus nigra.

MURIGENE, Chlorine.

MURINA, Bromine.

MURMUR, (F.) Murmure. A word existing both in the Romanic and Teutonic languages, and probably a variety of onomatopœia;—mur mur expressing the kind of sound which the word indicates. A low continued or continuously repeated sound, as that of flame, or of a stream running over a stony bottom.

Murmur Aurium, Tinnitus Aurium—m. Intestinale seu intestinorum seu Ventris, Borborygmus.

Murmur, Res'piratory. The noise heard during inspiration and expiration, especially the former. It is produced by the passage of the air through the bronchial tubes and into the air-cells. It has been also called murmur of the expansion of the lungs; and, when distinctly vesicular, Respiration of the cells or vesicular respiration, (F.) Respiration vésiculaire. Vesicular respiration is of course absent when the cells of the lungs have been obliterated from any cause. We may then have the Respiration nulle, Absence du bruit respiratoire, Silence, and Respiration silencieuse of the French writers.

At times, it is rude during inspiration or expiration, or both — the Respiration rude or R. râpeuse of the French. At others, there is a blowing sound, (F.) Souffle, Respiration soufflante, as if some one were blowing into the auscultator's ear through a tube. This is heard in the healthy state over the larynx, trachea, and about the bifurcation of the bronchia; but when it proceeds from the lungs it denotes disease. It may be tubular or diffused. In the former, the whiffing murmurs appear to occur in a space limited to the immediate neighbourhood of the part examined. In the latter, they are produced with but moderate intensity, and sometimes at a distance from the ear, over a tolerably extended space.

The respiration, perceived over the trachea and bronchia in health, is called tracheal or bronchial or tubal, (F.) Respiration bronchique, Souffle tubaire, according to the situation in which it is heard.

Murmur, Uterine, Bruit placentaire — m. Utero-placental, Bruit placentaire.

Murmur, Whiffing, see Murmur, respiratory.

MURR, Murrain, from A. S. myrnan, 'to destroy,' or from (L.) mori, 'to die.' (F.) Clavcau, Clavelée, Pestilential Fever. An epizootic, perhaps contagious, disease, having some resemblance to small-pox, which affects cattle — especially sheep; and is said to have been transferred to man.

Murrain, Coryza, Murr.

MURREN, Coryza.

MUSA, M. Paradisiaca — m. Cliffortiana, M. Paradisiaca—m. Mensaria, M. Paradisiaca.

Musa Paradisi'aca, Musa, M. Mensa'ria seu

Cliffortia'na, Amusa, Palma hu'milis, Ficus In'dica, Bata, Plat'anus. The Plantain tree. Family, Musaceæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. It grows in many parts of India and South America. The fruit, which is largely eaten for bread, consists of a mealy substance. It is clammy; has a sweetish taste, and will dissolve in the mouth without chewing. The whole spike of fruit often weighs forty or fifty pounds. The leaves of the tree serve the Indians for tablecloths and napkins. Being smooth and soft, they are also employed as dressings for blisters. The water from the soft trunk is astringent, and sometimes used in diarrhœa.

MUSA SAPIEN'TUM. The Bana'na tree, Baco'ba, (F.) Bananier, Bacove. This differs somewhat from the last. The fruit, Bana'na, (S.) Platano, is shorter, straighter, and rounder; the pulp softer and of a more luscious taste. When ripe, it is very agreeable; it is eaten like the plantain, and relished by all ranks of people in the West Indies. Both varieties are natives of Guinea.

MUSC, Musk.

MUSCA HISPANICA, Cantharis.

MUSCÆ ENTO-HYALOID, see Metamorphopsia—m. Volitantes, see Metamorphopsia.

MUSCADE, see Myristica moschata.

MUSCADIER, Myristica moschata.

MUSCERDA, Moschardina.

MUSCLE, Mus'culus, Torus, Mys, Myon, from μυς, 'a rat;' because, say some etymologists, the ancients compared the muscles to flayed rats. According to Diemerbroeck, Douglass, Chaussier, &c., μυων comes rather from μυειν, 'to close,' 'to move,' &c., a function proper to muscles. This etymon is the more probable. Muscles have been divided into those of Animal life or of the life of relation — voluntary muscles — which execute movements under the influence of the will; as the muscles of the limbs, head, trunk, &c., and into those of organic life—involuntary muscles— which contract under the influence of certain special stimuli; as the heart, fleshy fibres of the stomach, &c. Mixed muscles are those which belong partly to each of these divisions;—as the muscles of respiration; the sphincters, &c. Muscles that act in opposition to each other are called antagonists; thus, every extensor has a flexor for an antagonist, and conversely. Muscles that concur in the same action are termed congenerous. The muscles present numerous varieties in form, size, situation, use, &c., and have been divided, by some, into long, broad, and short. Each of these divisions comprises simple and compound muscles. Simple or rectilinear muscles have all their fibres in a similar direction, and only one body—as the Sartorius, Pronator quadratus, &c. Compound muscles are those which have only one belly and several tendons, as the flexors of the fingers and toes; or several bellies and several tendons,—as the biceps flexor cubiti, sacro-lumbalis, &c. To the compound muscles belong, also, the radiated muscles. Their fibres set out from a common centre, and are arranged like the radii of a circle;—such are the diaphragm, iliacus, temporal, &c. Pennated or Penniform Muscles. Their fibres are arranged in two rows, which are united at a median line, at greater or less angles; nearly as the feathers are inserted into a quill. The palmaris longus is one of these. Semi-penniform muscles: their fibres are oblique, as in the last case; but they are inserted only on one side of the tendon. Hollow Muscles are,—the heart, intestines, urinary bladder, &c.

Much difference has existed in the enumeration of muscles. Some authors reckon them at upwards of 400. Chaussier admits only 368. The greater part of them are in pairs. Very few are azygous.

Latissimus dorsi.

Rotated inwards by

Subscapularis,

Assisted occasionally by

Pectoralis major,
Latissimus and teres major.

Outwards by

Supra-spinatus,
Infra-spinatus,
Teres minor.

THE FORE-ARM IS MOVED

Forwards by

Biceps,
Brachialis anticus,
Pronator teres,

Assisted by

Flexor carpi radialis,
" sublimis,
" ulnaris,
Supinator longus.

Backwards by

Triceps,
Anconeus.

Rotated inwards by

Pronator teres,
Flexor carpi radialis,
Palmaris longus,
Flexor sublimis,
Pronator quadratus,

Outwards by

Biceps,
Supinator brevis,
Extensor secundi internodii.

THE CARPUS IS MOVED

Forwards by

Flexor carpi radialis,
Palmaris longus,
Flexor sublimis,
" carpi ulnaris,
" profundus,
" longus pollicis.

Backwards by

Extensor carpi radialis longior,
Extensor carpi radialis brevior,
Extensor secundi internodii,
Indicator,
Extensor communis digitorum,
Extensor proprius pollicis.

Outwards by

Flexor carpi radialis,
Extensor carpi radialis longior,
Extensor carpi radialis brevior,
Extensor ossis metacarpi,
Extensor primi internodii.

Inwards by

Flexor sublimis,
" carpi ulnaris,
" profundus,
Extensor communis digitorum,
Extensor minimi digiti,
Extensor carpi ulnaris.

THE THUMB IS MOVED

Inwards and forwards, across the palm, by

Opponens pollicis,
Flexor brevis,
" longus

Outwards and backwards by

Extensor ossis metacarpi pollicis,
Extensor primi internodii,
Extensor secundi internodii.

Upwards and forwards, away from the other fingers, by

Abductor,

Assisted by part of the

Flexor brevis.

Backwards and inwards, to the other fingers, by

Adductor,
Extensor primi internodii,
Extensor secundi internodii.

Muscles have been variously named. 1. According to their uses, as diaphragm, buccinator, extensors, flexors, adductors, abductors, levators, depressors, &c. 2. According to their position, as interspinales, interossei, subclavius, poplitæus, anconeus, cubitalis, iliacus, temporalis, &c. 3. According to their shape, as trapezius, splenius, lumbricalis, serratus, digastric, deltoid, scalenus, rhomboides, &c. 4. According to their dimensions, as pectoralis major, rectus capitis anticus major, pectoralis minor, glutæus maximus, medius, and minimus. 5. According to their direction, as obliquus abdominis, transversalis abdominis, rectus femoris, rectus abdominis, &c. 6. According to their composition, as semi-membranosus, semi-tendinosus, complexus, &c. 7. According to their attachments, or the different points of the skeleton to which they are connected by means of tendons or aponeuroses; as sterno-cleido-mastoideus, sterno-hyoideus, &c. On this is grounded the nomenclature of M. Dumas, and that of Chaussier.

The end of the muscle, which adheres to the most fixed part, is usually called the origin or head, (F.) Tête; and that which adheres to the more moveable part, the insertion or tail, (F.) Queue; the intervening part or body of the muscle being called the venter or belly, Venter mus'culi, Me'dium mus'culi: hence the names gastrocnemii, digastricus, biceps, and triceps; according as they have two bellies, two or three heads, &c.

Muscles are formed, — 1. Essentially of the muscular or fleshy fibre, (see Muscular Fibre.) 2. Of Areolar tissue, which unites together the fibres. This areolar tissue is not very visible between the fine and loose fibres; but becomes more so, when they unite in more considerable fasciculi. It forms, moreover, to each muscle, an external envelope, which unites it to the neighbouring parts, and admits of its motion. This envelope was formerly called Tu'nica propria musculo'rum. 3. Of Arteries. These proceed from neighbouring trunks, and are, generally, very large. Their size and number are always in proportion to the bulk of the muscle. With the exception of some viscera, as the lungs and the kidneys, there are few organs that receive as much blood as the muscles. 4. Of Veins. They follow the same course in the muscles as the arteries. Bichat asserts that they are generally devoid of valves. 5. Of Lymphatics. Of these we know little, and cannot easily follow them between the fleshy fibres. 6. Of Nerves. These are numerous, and of different sizes. They, almost all, proceed from the encephalon; some, however, issue from ganglions, and accompany the arteries. In general, they penetrate the fleshy tissue along with the vessels, to which they are narrowly united. After they have entered the muscles, they divide and subdivide until they are lost sight of.

MUSCLE CANIN, Levator anguli oris — m. Cannelé, Ischio-trochanterianus.

Muscle of Gavard. The oblique muscular fibres of the stomach.

MUSCLE GRAND FESSIER, Glutæus major—m. of Guthrie, Compressor Urethræ—m. of Horner, Tensor Tarsi—m. of Houston, Compressor venæ dorsalis penis — m. très Large du dos, Latissimus dorsi—m. of Wilson, Compressor urethræ.

MUS'CULAR, Muscula'ris, Musculo'sus, Toro'sus That which belongs or relates to the muscles. Well furnished with muscles.

Muscular Ar'teries. Arteries that are distributed to the muscles. The name, Muscular Arteries of the eye, has been especially given to two branches sent off by the ophthalmic artery: —the one, inferior, which furnishes branches to the rectus inferior oculi, lachrymal sac, &c., and some of the anterior ciliary arteries: the other —the superior, which is sometimes wanting; but, when it exists, gives branches to the rectus superior oculi and levator palpebræ superioris.

Muscular Contrac'tion. The exertion of the power, possessed by muscles, of shortening themselves, or of contracting to produce motion: — muscular motion being the change in the situation and relation of organs, induced by muscular contraction. When a muscle contracts, its fibres assume more the zigzag direction, and the extremities approximate; but the bulk of the whole muscle is not augmented. This contraction takes place, at times, with extreme velocity: a single thrill, in the letter R, can be pronounced in the 1-30,000th part of a minute. The force of contraction, Myody'namis, depends upon the healthy physical condition of the muscle, combined with due energy of the brain. The duration, in voluntary motion, is for a certain time dependent upon the will:—contractions, excited involuntarily, cannot be so long maintained.

Muscular Fibre, Fleshy fibre, Filum muscula'rē, Fibril'la muscula'ris. A name given to the filaments, which, by their union, form the muscles. This fibre is flat, soft, downy, linear, little elastic, more or less red; and arranged in zigzag according to its length, which is variable. It is firmer in adults than in the young or the aged; of the same size in the great and small muscles; and runs its course without bifurcation or ramification. It is but slightly resisting in the dead body, tearing readily; but during life it supports very great efforts without laceration. It is, itself, composed of a considerable number of fibrils, similar to each other, and subdividing almost ad infinitum. The ultimate filaments into which the fibre can be decomposed by mechanical means seem to be hollow or tubular. The fibre exists under two forms, the striated or striped, and the non-striated, smooth or unstriped; the muscles composed of the former ministering, as a general rule, to the animal functions,— the latter always, perhaps, to the organic. The colour of the muscular fibres is red in man, and white in several animals. A greater or less number, — united in fasciculi, Fascic'uli seu Lacer'ti musculo'rum, approximated to each other, and forming a distinct mass, of very variable size and shape, the extremities being attached to bones by means of tendons,—constitutes a muscle. In this are included areolar membrane, vessels and nerves. See Muscle.

Muscular Nerves. The nerves distributed to the muscles are so named. Winslow calls the 4th pair of nerves — Nerf musculaire oblique supérieur.

Muscular System. A term given to the aggregate of the muscles of the body.

Muscular Veins. These bring back the blood, which has been carried to the muscles by the muscular arteries.

MUSCULARIS, Corroborant.

MUSCULA'TION, see Locomotion.

MUSCULI ACCESSORII AD SACRO-LUMBALEM, see Sacro-lumbalis—m. Papillares, Columnæ carneæ—m. Pectinati, Pectinated muscles.

MUS'CULO-CUTA'NEOUS, Mus'culo-cuta'neus, from musculus, 'a muscle,' and cutis, 'skin.' That which appertains to muscles and skin.

Musculo-Cutaneous Nerve. This name is especially given to two nerves; — the one, the External cutaneous nerve, furnished by the brachial plexus (see Cutaneous:—) the other, given off from the poplitæus externus, (F.) Nerf Sciat- ique, Poplité externe, Prétibio digital, (Ch.) It descends on the anterior and outer part of the leg,—at first, hid among the muscles; becomes superficial about the middle of the leg; and divides into two branches, which pass superficially on the back of the foot. Two musculo-cutaneous nerves—superior and inferior—proceed from the first lumbar. The superior musculo-cutaneous — il'io-scrotal, il'io-hypogas'tricus — which divides into two branches,—abdominal and scrotal. The inferior musculo-cutaneous is smaller than the superior, and is distributed as its name, il'io-in'guinal, indicates.

MUSCULO-RACHIDÆ'US. Belonging or relating to muscles and to the spine. A name given to branches, furnished behind by the intercostal, lumbar, and sacral arteries, which are distributed to the spine and to the muscles of the neighbourhood.

MUSCULOSA EXPANSIO, Platysma myoides.

MUSCULO-SPIRAL NERVE, Radial nerve.

MUSCULOSUS, Muscular.

MUSCULUS ACCLIVIS, Obliquus internus abdominis—m. Auxiliarius, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Constrictorius, Sphincter—m. Cutaneus, Platysma myoides — m. Eustachii, Laxator tympani — m. Pulmonarius quercinus, Lichen pulmonarius —m. Pyxidatus, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Villosus, Peristroma.

MUSEAU DE TANCHE, Os uteri.

MUSEUM ANATOM'ICUM, Supel'lex anatom'ica. An anatomical museum.

MUSHROOM, Fungus.

MUSIC, Mu'sica, (F.) Musique, from μουσα, musa, 'a song.' The art of producing harmonious and cadenced sounds; an art, which has, at times, been beneficially used in diseases, particularly in those of the mind; or on which the mind could act in a salutary manner.

MUSICOMA'NIA, Musoma'nia, from music, and mania, A variety of monomania in which the passion for music is carried to such an extent as to derange the intellectual faculties.

MUSING, LISTLESS, Aphelxia otiosa.

MUSIQUE, Music.

MUSK, Moschus, Mosch (Arab.), (F.) Musc. A peculiar concrete animal substance, of a very diffusible odour, bitter taste, and a deep brown colour: solid, and enclosed in a sac found near the anus of the Moschus moschif'erus or Musk Deer. It is possessed of stimulant and antispasmodic properties. Dose, gr. v to ʒj in bolus.

MUSK, ARTIFIC''IAL, Moschus factit''ius, Resi'na Suc'cini. (Ol. succini rectif. 1 part, acid. nitric. 4 parts. Digest;—a black matter will be deposited, which must be well washed with water.)

MUSKGRAPE FLOWER, Bulbus vomitorius.

MUSKMALLOW, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKROOT, Sumbul.

MUSKSEED, see Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKWOOD, Thymiama.

MUSOMANIA, Musicomania.

MUSQUITO, Mosquito.

MUSSÆN'DA FRONDO'SA, Belil'la, Bele'son. A decoction of this plant has been esteemed refrigerant.

MUSSEL, Mytilus edulis.

MUSSITA'TIO, Mussita'tion, from mussitare, itself from mussare, 'to murmur.' A condition, in which the tongue and lips move, as in the act of speaking, but without sounds being produced. This sort of murmuring is an unfavourable sign in disease, as indicating great cerebral debility.

MUSTA'CEUM: from Mustacea, a kind of laurus used in making it. A kind of wedding-cake used by the ancients, which consisted of meal, aniseed, cummin, and several other aromatics; its object—it has been conceived—being to prevent or remove the indigestion occasioned by too great indulgence at the marriage feast.

MUSTACHE, Mystax.

MUSTARD, BLACK, Sinapis — m. Clammy, Polanisia graveolens — m. Essence of, Whitehead's, see Sinapis — m. False, Polanisia graveolens — m. Hedge, Erysimum — m. Mithridate, Thlaspi campestre — m. Stinking hedge, Alliaria —m. Treacle, Thlaspi arvense — m. White, Sinapis alba — m. Wild, Sinapis arvensis.

MUSTELANEUS, Galeancon.

MUSTUM, Wort.

MUTACIS'MUS, Mu'tacism, from μυτακισω, 'I use the letter m too frequently.' A vicious pronunciation; consisting, according to Sauvages, in the frequent repetition of the letters B, P, and M, which are substituted for others.

MUTA'TIO SEXÛS. A change or conversion of sex. A notion prevailed in antiquity that such a conversion was possible.

MUTEO'SIS. Under this name is comprehended every phenomenon of expression, voluntary and involuntary, which impresses the sight or touch.

MUTILA'TION, Mutila'tio, Maiming, from mutilus, 'broken.' The removal or privation of a limb, or of some other external part of the body. In all countries, this crime has been punished with severity.

MUTINUS, Penis.

MUTISME, Mutitas.

MU'TITAS, mutus, 'dumb.' Obtumescen'tia, Ala'lia, Anau'dia, Dumbness, Speech'lessness. (F.) Mutisme, Mutité. Impossibility of articulating sounds; although they can be elicited. Dumbness is often congenital, and united with deafness, of which it is an effect. In some cases it is accidental.

MUTITAS SURDO'RUM, Apho'nia Surdorum, Surdomu'titas, Deaf-dumbness. Speechlessness from deafness; congenital, or produced during infancy. The subjects of this affection are called deaf-dumb, (F.) Sourds-muets.

MUTITÉ, Mutitas.

MUTO. Penis.

MUTONIATUS, Membrosus.

MUTTERKORN, Ergot.

MUTTON TEA. Prepared from a pound of mutton, freed from the fat and cut into thin slices; and a pint and a half of boiling soft water poured over them, as in the case of beef tea; except that it requires to be boiled for half an hour after the maceration, before it is strained through a sieve.

MUTUNNUS, Priapus.

MYACANTHA, Ruscus.

MYALGIA. Cramp.

MYASTHENI'A, from μυς, 'a muscle.' and ασθενεια, 'debility.' Muscular debility.

MYCE, Occlusion.

MYCES, Fungus.

MYCHMUS, Suspirium.

MYCHTHISMUS, Moaning, Suspirium.

MYCODERM'A, My'coderm; from μυκης, 'a mushroom,' and δερμα, 'skin.' A cryptogamous growth, which constitutes the crusts of favus. See Porrigo favosa.

Mycoderma Cerevisiæ, Torula cerevisiæ.

MYCODES, Fungoid.

MYCORTHOPNŒ'A; from μυκος, 'mucus,' and ορθοπνοια, 'difficulty of breathing except when in the erect attitude.' Orthopnœa from excessive secretion of mucus in the air-passages —Orthopnœ'a pituito'sa.

MYCOSIS, Fungus.

MYCTERES, Myxæ, Nares.

MYCTEROPHONIA, Rhinophonia.

MYCTEROXE'ROTES; from μυκτηρες, 'the nares,' and ξηροτης, 'dryness.' Na'rium sic'citas. Dryness of the interior of the nose.

MYCUS, Mucus.

MYDE'SIS, from μυδαω, 'I abound with moisture.' In its most general sense, it means corruption. By some, it is used for a mucous discharge from inflamed eyelids.

MYDON, μυδων. Same etymon. Fungous or putrid flesh in certain fistulous ulcers. — Pollux. Also, flesh putrid from mouldiness.

MYDRI'ASIS, Platycor'ia, Platycori'asis, Amydri'asis. A name given by several writers to morbid dilatation of the pupil; and, by others, to weakness of sight, produced by hydrophthalmia; from μυδος, 'moisture.'

MYDRIAT'ICUS, Mydriat'ic. Relating to or causing dilatation of the pupil. Pereira.

MYELAL'GIA; from μυελος, 'the spinal marrow,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the spinal marrow.

MYELAPOPLEXIA, Apoplexia myelitica.

MYELATELI'A; from μυελος, 'the spinal marrow,' and ατελεια, 'want of end or finish.' Incompleteness of the spinal marrow.

MYELATROPHIA, Tabes dorsalis.

MYÉLITE, Myelitis.

MYELI'TIS, M. parenchymato'sa, M. spina'lis, Inflamma'tio medul'læ spina'lis, Spini'tis, Spinodorsi'tis, Notomyeli'tis, Rachiomyeli'tis, Rachialgi'tis, (of some,) (F.) Myélite, Inflammation de la moëlle épinière ou rachidienne, from μυελος, 'the marrow,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the spinal marrow or its membranes;—indicated by deep-seated burning pain in the spine, with various nervous and vascular irregularities of function. It is not common. Dr. Marshall Hall proposes to call inflammation of the membranes of the brain Meningitis; that of the substance of the brain Myelitis.

Myelitis Spinalis, Myelitis — m. Exsudativa, Hydrorachis — m. Parenchymatosa, Myelitis.

MYELOCHYSIS, Hydrorachis.

MYELOGANGLIITIS, Cholera (sporadic.)

MYELOMA, see Encephaloid.

MYELOMALACIA, Mollities medullæ spinalis.

MYELOMYCES, see Encephaloid.

MYELON, Medulla spinalis.

MYELOPARALYSIS, Paraplegia.

MYELOPHTHISIS, Tabes dorsalis—m. Sicca, Tabes mesenterica.

MYELOPHY'MATA, Tuber'cula medullæ spina'lis, from μυελος, 'marrow,' and φυμα, 'a tubercle.' Tubercles of the spinal marrow.

MYELORRHAGIA, Apoplexia myelitica.

MYELOSPONGUS, see Encephaloid.

MYELUS, Marrow, Medulla spinalis — m. Dianucheuius, Medulla spinalis — m. Dorsites, Medulla spinalis — m. Notiæus, Medulla spinalis — m. Psoites, Medulla spinalis.

MYENERGI'A, from μυς, 'a muscle,' εν, and εργον, 'work.' Muscular strength.

MYGMUS, Suspirium.

MYIOCEPHALUM, Staphyloma.

MYIODEOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYITIS, Myositis, Rheumatism, acute.

MYLACRI, Molar teeth.

MYLACRIS, Patella.

MYLE, Patella, Mole.

MYLICUS, Molar.

MYLODI, Molar teeth.

MYLODONTES, Molar teeth.

MYLO-GLOSSUS, from μυλη, 'the jaw,' and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' Winslow has given this name to muscular fibres, which pass from the posterior part of the myloid line of the lower jaw, and from the sides of the base of the tongue to the parietes of the pharynx. These fibres belong to the constrictor superior pharyngis.

MYLO-HYOID LINE, see Mylo-hyoideus.

Mylo-Hyoid Furrow or Groove. A furrow which passes from the superior orifice of the inferior dental canal of the lower jaw in the same direction as the canal, and lodges the mylo-hyoid nerve, a branch of the inferior-dental.

Mylo-Hyoid Nerve, see Mylo-hyoid furrow.

MYLO-HYOÏDEUS, from μυλη, 'the jaw,' and 'υοειδης, 'the os hyoides.' Myluo'des, (F.) Mylohyoïdien. The Mylo-pharyngeus of Morgagni and Santorini. This muscle is situate at the upper and anterior part of the neck, behind the lower jaw. It is broad, flat, and has the form of a truncated triangle. It arises from the internal oblique. internal maxillary or mylo-hyoid line of the lower jaw bone, and is inserted at the fore part of the body of the os hyoides. Its innermost fibres unite with those of the opposite side to form a raphe on the median line. The mylo-hyoideus raises the os hyoides and carries it forward, or it depresses the lower jaw.

MYLO-PHARYNGEUS, Constrictor pharyngis, Mylo-hyoideus.

MYLUODES, Mylo-hyoideus.

MYOCARDITIS, Carditis.

MYOCEPHALI'TIS, Myi'tis cephal'ica; from μυς, or μυων, 'a muscle,' κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the muscles of the head.

MYOCEPHALON, Staphyloma.

MYOCŒLIAL'GIA, from μυων, 'muscle,' κοιλια, 'abdomen,' and αλγεω, 'I suffer.' Pain in the muscles of the abdomen.

MYOCŒLI'TIS, Myocœlii'tis, Inflamma'tio musculo'rum abdomina'lium, from μυων, 'muscle,' κοιλια, 'lower belly,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the muscles of the abdomen.

MYODEOP'SIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYO'DES, from μυς, 'a muscle,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Like unto muscle. Muscular.

MYODESOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYODYNA'MIA, Vis muscula'ris; from μυς, 'a muscle,' and δυναμις, 'power.' The force or power of a muscle.

MYODYNAMICS, see Muscular contraction.

MYODYNAMIOMETER, Dynamometer.

MYODYNAMOMETER, Dynamometer.

MYODYN'IA, from μυων, 'muscle,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain in the muscles, — rheumatismal or other. Rheumatism.

Myodynia Inflammatoria, Myositis.

MYOG'RAPHY, Myogra'phia, from μυων, 'muscle,' and γραφειν, 'to describe.' An anatomical description of the muscles.

MYOLEM'MA, Myole'ma, from μυων, 'a muscle,' and λεμμα, 'a coat.' The membranous tube of each muscular fibre. It has also the same signification as Sarcolemma.

MY'OLINE, from μυων, 'a muscle.' A name given by Mr. Erasmus Wilson to a transparent substance that fills the cells, which, he conceives, by their juxtaposition form the ultimate muscular fibril.

MYOL'OGY, Myolog''ia, Sarcolog'ia, Mysialog''ia; from μυων, 'a muscle,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' That part of anatomy which treats of the muscles.

MYON, Muscle.

MYONARCO'SIS, from μυων, 'a muscle,' and ναρκη, 'stupor.' Numbness of the muscles.

MYONITIS, Myositis.

MYON'OSUS, Myonu'sos, Myopathi'a, from μυων, 'a muscle,' and νοσος, 'disease.' A disease of the muscles.

MYOPALMUS, Subsultus tendinum.

MYOPATHIA, Myonosus.

MYOPE, Myops.

MYOPHO'NIA, from μυων, 'a muscle,' and φωνη, 'voice.' The sound of muscular contraction, — as that of the ventricles of the heart, during the systole of that organ.

MYO'PIA, Myopi'asis, Luscias'itas, Myo'sis, Parap'sis propin'qua, Amblyo'pia dissito'rum, Dyso'pia dissito'rum, Dyspho'tia, Visus ju'venum, from μυω, 'I close,' or from μυς, 'a mouse,' and ωψ, 'the eye;' My'opy, Short-sightedness, Near-sightedness, Mouse-sight, Purblindness, (F.) Vue courte. Persons who can only see objects very near. The defect is owing to the too great convexity of the eye, or too great density of the humours, and is palliated by wearing concave glasses.

MYOPI'C, Myop'icus; same etymon. Short-sighted, Pareblind, Purblind. Relating or appertaining to myopia.

MYOPODIORTHO'TICON, from μυωψ, 'one that is short-sighted,' and διορθωτικον, 'having power to correct.' An apparatus for the cure of short-sightedness. — A. A. Berthold.

MYOPS, Luscio'sus, Myo'pus, My'ape. Same etymon. One affected with myopia or short-sightedness.

MYOPY, Myopia.

MYORRHEX'IS, from μυς, 'a muscle,' and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Rupture of a muscle.

MYO'SIS, from μυω, 'I close.' Microcar'ia. Smallness of the pupil. Phthi'sis pupilla'ris. Permanent contraction of the pupil. It is usually caused by iritis, and is extremely difficult to cure. When it exists to such an extent as to obliterate the pupil, it is called Synizesis. Also, Myopia.

MYOSITÉ, Myositis.

MYOSIT'IC; Myosit'icus, from Myasis. Causing contraction of the pupil, — as opium. — Pereira.

MYOSI'TIS, Myi'tis, Mysi'tis, Myani'tis, Sarci'tis, Rheumatis'mus phlegmono'des, Myodyn'ia inflammato'ria, Phlegma'sia myoïca, Inflammatio seu Phleg'monē Musculo'rum, (F.) Myosite, Inflammation des muscles, from μυων, 'a muscle.' A name proposed by Sagar for inflammation of the muscles. Also, Rheumatism.

MYOSOTIS, Hieracium pilosella, Rheumatism, Rheumatism, acute.

MYOSPASMUS, Cramp.

MYOTIL'ITY, Myotil'itas, from μυων, 'a muscle.' Muscular contractility. — Chaussier.

MYOT'OMY, Myotom'ia, from μυων, 'a muscle,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' The part of practical anatomy which treats of the dissection of the muscles. Also, the surgical operation of the division of muscles to remove deformity.

MYOTYRBE, Chorea.

MYRAC'OPUM, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' and κοπος, 'fatigue.' An ointment used by the ancients in cases of fatigue.

MYREPSUS, Unguentarius.

MYR'IAGRAMME, from μυρια, '10,000,' and γραμμα, 'gramme.' A weight equal to 10,000 grammes, or to 26 pounds, 9 ounces, and 6 drachms Troy.

MYRIAMÈTRE. A measure of 10,000 metres; equal to 16 miles, 1 furlong, 156 yards, and 14 inches.

MYRICA ASPLENIFOLIA, Comptonia asplenifolia — m. Cerifera, see Cera flava et alba, and Wax, myrtle.

MYRI'CA GALE, Myrtus Braban'tica seu Angli'ca, Myri'ca palus'tris, Myrtifo'lia Bel'gica, Galē, Gagel, Rhus sylves'tris, Ac'aron, Elæag'nus, E. Cardo, Chamælæag'nus, Dodonæ'a, Dutch myrtle, Sweet gale, Sweet willow, Candleberry myrtle, (F.) Piment Royal, Thé de Siman Pauli, Gale odorant. Family, Amentaceæ. Sex. Syst. Dicœcia Tetrandria. The leaves, flowers, and seeds have a strong, fragrant smell, and a bitter taste. They are used for destroying moths and cutaneous insects. The infusion is given internally as a stomachic and vermifuge.

MYRICA PALUSTRIS, M. Gale.

MYRINGA, see Tympanum.

MYRINGI'TIS, Inflamma'tio tym'pani; from Myringa, 'the membrana tympani;' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the membrana tympani; and, also, of the tympanum.

MYRINX, see Tympanum.

MYRIS, Myrothe'cē, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Narthex, from μυρον, 'a perfumed oil or ointment.' A perfumed oil or ointment box or jar.

MYRIS'TICA, M. Mosscha'ta, M. aromat'ica seu officina'lis seu fragrans, Camacan. Nat. Ord. Myristiceæ. The tree which produces the nutmeg and mace. (F.) Muscadier. The Nutmeg, Myristica, (Ph. U. S.) Myris'ticæ nu'cleus, Myris'ticæ moscha'tæ nu'cleus, Nux moscha'ta seu unguenta'ria, Nucis'ta, Nux myris'tica, Chrysobal'anus Gale'ni, Unguenta'ria, As'sala, Nux aromat'ica, (F.) Muscade, is the seed or kernel. It has a fragrant, aromatic odour; an agreeable pungent taste, and is much used for culinary purposes. Alcohol extracts its active matter. It has the properties of aromatics in general; being stimulant and stomachic. The oil — O'leum myris'ticæ — possesses the virtues of the nutmeg. Dose of the nutmeg, gr. v. to ℈j;—of the oil gtt. iij to gtt. vj.

Mace, Macis, Maces, Flores macis seu ma'cidos, (F.) Fleurs de muscade, is the involucrum of the fruit. It is membranous, with the odour and taste of the nutmeg, and is possessed of similar qualities. The O'leum macis is a fragrant, sebaceous substance, expressed in the East Indies. It is only used externally.

MYRISTICÆ NUCLEUS, see Myristica moschata.

MYRMECIA, Formica.

MYRMECIASIS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIASMUS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECISMUS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIZON, Formicant.

MYRMECOSIS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMEX, Formica.

MYROBAL'ANUS, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' and βαλανος, 'a nut;' so called, because formerly used in ointment; Angeloc'acos, Myro'balan, Glans unguenta'ria, Palma unguentario'rum. A dried

Indian fruit, of the plum kind, of different species of Termina'lia. Of this there are several varieties—the M. Bellir'ica or Belliric myrobalan, Bellequ, Bellerigi, Belnileg: — the M. cheb'ula or Chebule myrob'alan; the M. cit'rina or Yellow myrobalan, Ara'ra; the M. Em'blica or emblic myrobalan, and the M. In'dica, As'uar, Indian or Black myrobalan. All the myrobalans have an unpleasant, bitterish, very austere taste; and strike an inky blackness with a solution of steel. They are said to possess laxative as well as astringent properties.

MYRON, Myrum, Unguentum.

MYROPISSOCE'RON. A topical application in alopecia, referred to by Galen; from μυρον, 'ointment,' πισσα, 'pitch,' and κηρος, 'wax.'

MYROPŒUS, Unguentarius.

MYROPOLES, Apothecary, Unguentarius.

MYROSPERMUM FRUTESCENS, Myroxylum Peruiferum—m. Peruiferum, see Myroxylon Peruiferum.

MYROXYLON, see M. Peruiferum.

Myrox'ylon Peruif'erum, Myrosperm'um frutes'cens, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' and ξυλον, 'wood;' Caburei'ba. Nat. Ord. Leguminosæ. The tree which affords the Peru'vian balsam, Bal'samum Peruvia'num, Putzochill, Myrox'yli Peruiferi bal'samum, Myrox'ylon, Balsamum Perua'num, Cabureiciba, Indian, Mexican, or American balsam, (F.) Baume de Pérou. This balsam consists of benzoic acid, resin, and essential oil. Its odour is fragrant and aromatic; taste hot and bitter: it is soluble in alcohol, and miscible in water by the aid of mucilage. It is stimulant and tonic, and considered to be expectorant: as such, it has been employed in paralysis, chronic asthma, chronic bronchitis and rheumatism, gleet, leucorrhœa, &c., and externally, for cleansing and stimulating foul indolent ulcers. Dose gtt. v to gtt. xxx.

White Balsam of Peru, Natural balsam, Bal'samum album, Styrax alba, Balsamelæon, is obtained by incision from Myrosper'mum peruif'erum.

Myroxylon Toluiferum, Toluifera Balsamum.

MYRRHA, Heb. מר; Bola, Stactē, Ergas'ma, Myrrh, Calo'uia, Smyrna, Myrrha rubra, (F.) Myrrhe. The exudation of an unknown plant of Abyssinia or Arabia Felix, said to be the Balsamaden'dron myrrha. This gum-resin has a fragrant, peculiar odour; and bitter aromatic taste. It is in reddish-yellow, light, brittle, irregular tears; partially soluble in distilled water when aided by friction. S. G. 1.360. It is stimulant; and has been used in cachectic affections, humoral asthma, chronic bronchitis, &c. Dose, gr. x to ʒj.

Myrrha Imperfecta, Bdellium.

MYRRHINE, Myrtus.

MYRRHIS ANNUA, Athamanta Cretensis — m. Major, Chærophyllum odoratum—m. Odorata, Chærophyllum odoratum.

MYRSINE, Myrtus.

MYRSINELÆ'ON, from μυρσινη, 'the myrtle,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' Oil of myrtle. — Dioscorides.

MYRSINI'TES, μυρσινιτης. Wine in which branches of myrtle have been macerated.

MYRTACANTHA, Ruscus.

MYRTE COMMUN, Myrtus.

MYRTID'ANON, μυρτιδανον. An excrescence, growing on the trunk of the myrtle, and used as an astringent. Also, a wine — Vinum Myrtid'anum — made from wild myrtle berries.

MYRTIFOLIA BELGICA, Myrica gale.

MYR'TIFORM, Myrtiform'is, Myrto'des, from μυρτος, 'a myrtle,' and forma, 'shape.' Having the shape of a leaf of myrtle. A name given to a muscle (depressor alæ nasi), to the fossa incisiva; and to certain caruncles, &c.

MYRTIFORMIS, Compressor naris, Depressor alæ nasi.

MYRTI'TES. A name given to a medicine prepared with honey and myrtle berries.

MYRTLE, Myrtus—m. Berry, Vaccinium myrtillus — m. Candleberry, Myrica gale — m. Dutch, Myrica gale—m. Wild, Ruscus.

MYRTOCHEILIDES, Nymphæ.

MYRTOCHILA, Nymphæ.

MYRTODES, Myrtiform.

MYRTON, Clitoris.

MYRTUS, Myr'tus commu'nis, M. communis Ital'ica, Myrsi'nē, Myrrhi'nē, The Myrtle, (F.) Myrte Commun. The berries of this plant have been recommended in alvine and uterine fluxes and other disorders of relaxation and debility. They are moderately astringent and somewhat aromatic.

Myrtus Anglica, Myrica gale — m. Brabantica, Myrica gale.

Myrtus Caryophylla'ta, Calyptran'thes caryophylla'ta, Cassia caryophylla'ta, Canel'la caryophyllata, (F.) Capelet, Cannelle giroflée. The tree which is considered to afford the Clove bark; Cortex caryophylla'tus seu caryophyllata. This bark is a warm aromatic; resembling clove with an admixture of cinnamon. It may be used with the same views as cloves or cinnamon.

Myrtus Caryophyllus, Eugenia caryophyllata—m. Leucodendron, Melaleuca cajaputi.

Myrtus Pimen'ta. The tree which bears the Jamaica pepper, Pimen'tæ baccæ, Pimento berries, Pimento, Piper caryophylla'tum, Coc'culi Indi aromat'ici, Piper chia'pæ, Amo'mum pimenta, Fructus pimenti, Carive, Caryophyll'us America'nus seu Pimen'ta, Piper odora'tum Jamaicen'sē, Allspice, Piper Jamaicen'sē, Piper tabas'cum, (F.) Poivre de Jamaique, Toute épice, Assourou. The unripe berries — Pimenta (Ph. U. S.) — have an aromatic odour; resembling a mixture of cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves; the taste is pungent, but mixed, like the odour. Like other peppers, this is stimulant and carminative. The oil — O'leum Pimen'tæ — possesses the virtues of the berries. The powdered fruit has been called Quatre épices or Four spices. Dose gr. v to ʒij.

MYRUM, Myron, μυρον. A perfumed oil or ointment. A liquid perfume. The spontaneously exuding juice of many plants, especially of that from which myrrh is obtained.

MYS, Muscle.

MYSIOLOGIA, Myology.

MYSITIS, Myositis.

MYSTAX, Mastax. The hair growing on each side of the upper lip in men. The mustache or mustachio, (F.) Moustache. Also, the upper lip.

MYSTE'RION, μυστηριον, 'a mystery.' An arcanum, nostrum, or secret preparation in general. Also, an antidote referred to by Galen and others.

MYSTRON, μυστρον. A Greek measure, which held about three drachms.

MYT'ILUS EDU'LIS. The common mussel, (F.) Moule. A bivalve, the flesh of which, when at all in a state of decomposition, is highly poisonous. When fresh, it is an agrecable, but not very digestible article of diet.

MYU'RUS, Meiu'ros. A pulse is so called when it sinks progressively and becomes smaller and smaller like a rat's tail; from μυς, 'rat,' and ουρα, 'tail.' Pulsus myurus recip'rocus, a pulse, which, after having become gradually weaker, resumes, by degrees, its former character.

MYXA, Mucus, Sebestina.
MYXÆ, Mycteres.
MYXEOSIS, Gonorrhœa impura.
MYXODES, Muciform.

MYXOR'RHOOS, μυξορροος, from μυξα, 'mucus,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' One who is subject to mucous discharge. Applied to an infant, that discharges a considerable quantity of mucus and saliva.

MYXOSARCO'MA, from μυξα, 'mucus,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A tumour which is mucocarneous; partly mucous and partly fleshy.

MYXOTER, Nasus.
MYZESIS, Sucking.

N.

N. This letter, in prescriptions, is an abridgment of Numero, 'by number.'

NAB'ALUS ALBUS, Prenan'thes serpenta'ria, White Lettuce, Lion's Foot, Rattlesnake's Master, Rattlesnake root. An indigenous plant, of the order Compositæ, which, with several other species of the genus, is reputed to possess the power of curing the bites of serpents. The root has been used in dysentery.

NABOT, Saccharum candidum.

NABO'THI GLAN'DULÆ, O'vula seu Ova Nabothi seu Nabothia'na, Ova'rium Nabothi, Folli'culi rotun'di et oblon'gi, Vesic'ulæ seu Bullæ rotun'dæ cervi'cis u'teri, Vesic'ulæ semina'les mulie'rum, Cor'pora globo'sa, Corpus'cula globo'sa, Glandulæ seu Hydat'ides cervi'cis uteri. Small, mucous crypts or follicles situate in the interstices of the duplicatures of the lining membrane of the cervix uteri. Naboth, from noticing them in a morbid condition, mistook them for ova; and hence they received the name Ovula Nabothi.

NACRA, Nakra, Nasa. A kind of influenza common in the East Indies.

NACRÉ, Margaritaceous.

NACREOUS, Margaritaceous.

NÆVI, see Nævus.

NÆVUS, Plural Nævi; Nævus mater'nus, N. Sigil'lum, Nota mater'na, Nevus, Mac'ulæ matri'cis, M. Mater'næ seu matrica'les, Notæ infan'tum, Lupus varico'sus, Stig'mata, Metrocel'ides, Congen'itæ notæ, Mother's Marks, Fancy marks, Mother's spots, (F.) Envie, Tache de Naissance. Spots of various kinds on the skin of children when born, which have been attributed to the influence of the maternal imagination on the fœtus in utero. They are of various appearances, some much better supplied with blood than others. Some are merely superficial or stain-like spots: others are prominent; and often have long, irregular hairs growing from them. These have usually been called Moles, Spili, Spilo'ma, Epichro'ses spili, &c.

When nævi are superficial, without any disposition to enlarge or spread, they need not be meddled with: but all those that partake of the character of aneurism by anastomosis had better be removed, where practicable.

NÆVUS SIGILLUM, Nævus.

NAFDA, Naphtha.

NAIL, Sax. nægl, (G.) Nagel, Unguis, Onyx, (F.) Ongle. A whitish transparent substance, similar to horn, which covers the dorsal extremity of the fingers. Three portions are distinguished in it; the extremity, which is free, at the end of the finger;—the body or middle portion adherent by its inner surface; and the root, Radix seu Matrix unguis, In'timum unguis. The last presents two distinct parts; the one, terminated by a thin, serrated edge, is buried in a duplicature of the skin; the other, called Lu'nula seu Semilu'nula seu Sele'nē seu Arcus seu Exor'tus seu Anat'olē seu Albe'do un'guium, is whitish and of a semilunar shape, and is situate above the part where the epidermis terminates. The nails are composed of a horny tissue, of the same nature as that which forms the hoofs, horns, and scales of different animals. When the nail has been torn off, the papillæ of the skin become covered by a soft, whitish lamina, whose consistence gradually augments. New laminæ are then formed underneath, and give the nail the thickness it ought to possess. The corneous substance, being thus constantly produced at the extremity of each of these laminæ, the whole of the nail is pushed forwards, and it would grow indefinitely, were it not cut or worn by friction.

The nails protect and support the extremities of the fingers against the impression of hard bodies. They are, also, useful in laying hold of small bodies; and dividing those that have but little consistence.

NAIN, Nanus.

NAKRA, Nacra.

NANNARI, Hemidesmus Indicus.

NANNYBERRY, Viburnum lentago.

NANOCEPH'ALUS, from νανος, 'a dwarf,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A monstrous state in which the whole head or certain of its parts are too small, whilst the trunk and extremities are normal.

NANOCOR'MUS, from νανος, 'a dwarf,' and κορμος, 'a trunk.' A monstrous condition in which the trunk is too small, whilst the head possesses its normal size.

NANOM'ELUS, from νανος, 'a dwarf,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A monstrous condition in which some part of an extremity is too small, and the whole limb too short.

NANOSO'MUS, from νανος, 'a dwarf,' and σωμα, 'body.' Dwarf'ishness. A state in which the entire body with all its parts is smaller than common.

NANUS, Pumil'io, Pu'milo, Pusil'lus, 'a dwarf.' (Pu'milus, Pumil'lus, 'dwarfish.) (F.) Nain. One who is much below the usual stature. The term is applicable to all organized beings from man to the vegetable. Trees have their dwarfs, as the human species have theirs. Some curious authenticated instances of human dwarfs are on record. Bebe, the dwarf of Stanislaus, king of Poland, was 33 inches (French) long, and well proportioned. The Polish nobleman, Borwlaski, who was well made, clever, and a good linguist, measured 28 Paris inches. He had a brother, 34 inches high, and a sister 21. A Friesland peasant, at 26 years of age, had attained 29 Amsterdam inches. C. H. Stöberin, of Nürnberg, was under three feet high at 20, yet he was well proportioned and possessed of talents. General Tom Thumb, so called, was seen by the Author in 1847. He was said to be 15 years old; measured 28 inches in height, and when weighed at the mint was found to weigh 20 pounds and 2 ounces. See Pygmy.

NAPE OF THE NECK, Nucha.

NAPELLUS VERUS, Aconitum napellus.

NAPHÆ FLORES, see Citrus aurantium.

NAPHTHA, Acetone.

NAPHTHA, Nafda, Napta, Napta'lius, O'leum petræ album; from a Chaldaic and Syriac word signifying bitumen. A bituminous substance, found in Persia, Calabria, Sicily, &c. It is liquid, limpid, of a yellowish white colour, a smell slightly resembling that of oil of turpentine, and lighter than water. It resembles petroleum in its properties, and has been chiefly used as an external application; although, occasionally, as an anthelmintic, and in inhalation in phthisis pulmonalis.

NAPHTHA, COAL TAR, LIGHT, see Anæsthetic.

NAPHTHA VITRIOLI, Æther sulphuricus — n. Vitrioli camphorata, Tinctura ætherea camphorata — n. Vitrioli martialis, Tinctura seu Alcohol sulphurico-æthereus ferri — n. Wood, Acetone.

NAPH'THALINE, Naphthali'na, Naph'thalin. When coal-tar is subjected to distillation, naphthaline passes over after coal naphtha. It is a white, shining, concrete, crystalline substance, fusible at 176° and boiling at 423°. It is soluble in alcohol, ether, naphtha and the oils, but insoluble in water. It has been used as an excitant expectorant, in the dose of 8 to 30 grains, in emulsion or syrup, and repeated. It has also been used as an anthelmintic; and, when made into an ointment, in psoriasis, lepra vulgaris, &c.

NAPIFORM, Bunioid.

NAPIUM, Lapsana, Sinapis.

NAPLES, (CLIMATE OF.) The climate of Naples in its general characters resembles that of Nice, but it is more changeable: the sirocco too, which is little known in Nice, is severely felt at Naples. It is not a good residence for the phthisical invalid: Sir James Clark, indeed, considers it altogether unsuitable.

NAPLES, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the Quarter Santa Lucia, near the coast, is a cold spring, rich in sulphuretted hydrogen and carbonic acid. It is much used as an aperient tonic, and in cutaneous affections.

NAPLES WATER, FACTIT''IOUS, (F.) Eau de Naples, Aqua Neapolita'na, Aqua acid'ula hydrosulphura'ta. (Acidulous water, containing four times its bulk of carbonic acid, ℥xv, and ℥iij; hydrosulphuretted water, ℥ix; carbonate of soda, gr. viij; carbonate of magnesia, gr. x. M. Ph. P.)

NAPTA, Nanus, Nata.

NAPTALIUS, Nanus.

NAPUS, Sinapis — n. Leucosinapis, Sinapis alba — n. Sylvestris, Brassica napus.

NAPY, Sinapis.

NARCAPHTE, Thymiama.

NARCAPH'THON, Nascaph'thon. The bark of an aromatic tree formerly brought from India. By some, supposed to be that of the tree which affords the olibanum. It was used in fumigation, in diseases of the lungs.

NARCE, Narcosis.

NARCEMA, Narcosis.

NARCESIS, Narcosis.

NARCISSE FAUX, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus—n. des Près, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus—n. Sauvage, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus.

NARCIS'SUS PSEUDO-NARCIS'SUS, N. festa'lis seu glaucus seu grandiflo'rus seu hispan'icus seu major seu serra'tus seu sylves'tris, Bulboco'dium, Pseudo-narcissus, Daf'fodil, (F.) Narcisse sauvage, Narcisse des près, Faux narcisse. The root is emetic and cathartic, in the dose of ℥ij. The flowers are antispasmodic. Dose, 24 grains.

NARCODES, Narcotized.

NARCO'SIS, Nar'cotism, Narcē, Narca, Narce'ma, Narce'sis, from ναρκοω, 'I benumb.' Torpe'do, Torpor, Stupor, Stupefac'tio. The aggregate effects produced by narcotic substances. At times, narcotism is confined to a state of more or less profound stupor; and constitutes, in certain cases, a useful remedial condition; at others, it is a true poisoning, characterized by vertigo, nausea, a state of intoxication or apoplexy, constant delirium, convulsive motions, &c. Emetics in strong doses, and not much diluted with water; purgatives and glysters are the first means to be used in this condition. The stupor may afterwards be combated by the use of exciting and stimulating drinks.

NARCOSIS FOLLICULO'RUM. A state of the scalp, which Mr. Erasmus Wilson conceives to be dependent upon torpid action of the hair follicles, and in which the scalp and hair are found covered with a yellowish, dirty-looking powder, composed of an admixture of granular particles and furfuraceous scales.

NARCOSPAS'MUS, from ναρκη, 'stupor,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Stupor combined with spasm.

NARCOTIA, Narcotine.

NARCOTIC POISON, see Poison.

NARCOTICO-ACRID, see Poison.

NARCOT'ICS, Narcot'ica, Carot'ica, Obstupefacien'tia, Stupefacien'tia, Stupefa'cients, (F.) Stupéfactifs, Stupéfiants. Same etymon. Substances, which have the property of stupefying; — as opium, stramonium, hyoscyamus, belladonna, &c. They are used in medicine as soothing agents; exerting their special influence on the brain and tubular matter of the spinal marrow. In small doses, as a general rule, narcotics stimulate; in large, they act as sedatives. The following is a list of the chief narcotics: — Aconitum, Ætherea, Belladonna, Camphora, Cannabis, Conium, Digitalis, Humulus, Hyoscyamus, Lactucarium, Opium and Morphia, Stramonii Folia, Stramonii Semina, Mental Narcotics, (Appropriate Music, Monotonous sounds, or any succession of monotonous impressions.)

NAR'COTINE, Narcoti'na, Narcot'ia, Narcotin, Anarcoti'na, Opia'num; same etymon; (F.) Sel de Dérosne, Opiane, Sel d'opium, Principe crystallizable de Dérosne. A solid, white, inodorous, and insipid substance; by some considered to be alkaloid; by others neuter; crystallizable in straight prisms with a rhomboidal base; fusible like the fats; soluble in boiling alcohol and ether, and scarcely soluble in water. Narcotine produces all the unpleasant effects of opium; but, at the same time, throws the animal into a state of stupor. It is not used in medicine, on account of these objections. The salts, which are very bitter, have been used successfully in India for the cure of intermittents.

NARCOTISM, Narcosis.

NAR'COTIZED, Tor'pidus, Narco'des. Affected with stupor, as from the use of a narcotic.

NARD, CELTIC, Valeriana Celtica — n. Indica, Nardus Indica—n. Indien, Nardus Indica—n. Indique, Nardus Indica—n. Petit, Aralia nudicaulis—n. Sauvage, Asarum.

NARDUM GALLICUM, Valeriana Celtica.

NARDUS AMERICANUS, Aralia nudicaulis —n. Celtica, Valeriana Celtica—n. Montana, Asarum.

NARDUS IN'DICA, Spica nardi, Spica In'dica, Andropo'gon nardus seu citriodo'rus, Indian nard, Spikenard. The root of this plant is one of the ingredients in the mithridate and theriaca. It is moderately warm and pungent, and has a flavour by no means disagreeable. It is used by the Orientals as a spice: — (F.) Nard Indien, N. Indique. An ointment was formerly used, called

Unguen'tum nardi'num. It was prepared of Nard, Malabathrum leaves, Oil of worms, Costus, Amomum, Myrrh, &c., and was used as a detergent.

NARDUS RUSTICA, Asarum.

NARES, Rhines, Cav'itas Na'rium, Cavum seu Ca'vea seu Caver'na na'rium, Nasus inter'nus, Mycte'res, Na'rium ad'itus, Ochetew'mata. The nostrils, (F.) Narines. Two elliptical apertures, situate beneath the nose, and separated from each other by the cartilaginous septum seu colum'na nasi. These apertures are continually open, and give passage to the air we breathe, and to the mucous fluids secreted in the nasal fossæ.

NARES INTERNÆ, Nasal fossæ.

NARES POSTERIOR, Nares postre'mæ, Extre'mæ nares, Os'tia posterio'ra seu Choa'næ na'rium, Na'rium Ex'itus, (F.) Arrières narines, Ouvertures postérieures des fosses nasales, are the posterior apertures of the nasal cavities, which establish a communication between those cavities and the pharynx. They are bounded, above, by the body of the sphenoid bone; below, by the palate bone, and the base of the velum pendulum; and, on the outside, by the internal ala of the pterygoid process. They are separated from each other by a septum, of which the vomer is the bony part.

NARIFUSO'RIA, from nares, 'the nostrils,' and fundere, fusum, 'to pour.' Medicine dropt into the nostrils.

NARINES, Nares.

NARIUM ADITUS, Nares—n. Siccitas, Myceteroxerotes.

NARTHECIA, Formulary, Myris.

NARTHECIUM, Formulary, Myris.

NARTHEX, Formulary, Myris, Splint—n. Asafœtida, see Asafœtida.

NASA, Nacra, Nata.

NASAL, Nasa'lis, from nasus, 'the nose.' That which relates to the nose.

NASAL ARTERY. This is the largest of the two branches in which the ophthalmic artery terminates. It issues from the orbit, above the tendon of the orbicularis palpebrarum, passes above the side of the root of the nose, and anastomoses with the last extremity of the facial. Haller gave the name nasal to the spheno-palatine. He also called the dorsales nasi, furnished by the external maxillary, Nasa'les latera'les.

NASAL BONES, Ossa nasi, Ossa nasa'lia, Ossic'ula nasi, Ossa maxil'læ superio'ris quarta seu quinta seu secun'da, (F.) Os nasaux, Os propres du nez. These bones are situate beneath the nasal notch of the os frontis, and occupy the space between the nasal or angular processes of the superior maxillary bone. Their shape is nearly quadrilateral. They have an external or cutaneous surface, an internal or nasal, and four margins. Each is articulated with its fellow, with the os frontis, ethmoid, and superior maxillary bones. They ossify from a single point.

NASAL CAR'TILAGE, Cartila'go triangula'ris Nasi. A cartilage formed of three portions, which unite at the dorsum nasi, and are distinguished into the cartilage of the septum, and the lateral cartilages. This cartilage is continuous, above, with the ossa nasi, and, inferiorly, with membranous fibro-cartilages, which form the supple and movable part of the nostrils. They are two in number—the one before, the other behind.

NASAL DUCT, Lachrymal duct—n. Eminence, Mesophryon.

NASAL FOSSÆ, Cavi na'rium, Nares inter'næ. Two large, anfractuous cavities, situate between the orbits below the cranium, and lined by the pituitary or Schneiderian membrane. These cavities have no communication with each other; but the various sinuses in the neighbouring bones—the ethmoidal, sphenoidal, superior maxillary, &c.—all communicate with them. The general cavity of each nostril is divided by the ossa spongiosa into three meatus or passages, which run from before backwards. 1. The Meatus narium supe'rior, placed at the upper, inner, and back part of the superior spongy bone. 2. The Meatus me'dius, situate between the superior and inferior spongy bones; and 3. The Meatus infe'rior, situate between the inferior spongy bone and the bottom of the nose. The Schneiderian membrane receives the first pair of nerves, and various branches from the fifth pair. The arteries are furnished by the branches of the internal maxillary, known under the names of spheno-palatine, infra-orbitar, superior alveolar, palatine, pterygo-palatine; by the supra-orbitar, and ethmoidal branches of the ophthalmic artery, by the internal carotid, superior labial, and dorsales nasi. Its veins are little known, and generally follow the course of the arteries. The lymphatics are almost unknown. The nasal fossæ are the seat of smell; they aid, also, in repiration and phonation.

NASAL MEATUS, see Nasal fossæ.

NASAL MUCUS, Mucus na'rium, Phlegma na'rium crassum, Mucor seu Pitui'ta seu Blenna seu Lympha muculen'ta na'rium, Apomyx'ia, vulgarly called Snot, (F.) Morve, is the mucus secreted by the Schneiderian membrane.

NASAL NERVE, Naso-palpébral (Ch.), Naso-ocula'ris (Sömmering), Naso-cilia'ris. One of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve of Willis. It enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, passes along the inner paries of that cavity, and divides, opposite the internal and anterior orbitar foramen, into two branches. 1. The internal and posterior, which passes into the Foramen orbitarium internum anterius, enters the cranium beneath the dura mater, and passes into the nasal fossæ, through an aperture at the side of the Crista galli. It afterwards divides into several filaments: one of them—the Naso-lobar, of Chaussier—is very small, and descends on the posterior surface of the os nasi, and ramifies on the integuments of the ala nasi. A second terminates near the septum; others descend along the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. 2. The other is external and anterior, and is called the external nasal nerve. It is distributed to the outside of the orbit. Before dividing, the nasal nerve communicates with the ophthalmic ganglion, and gives off two or three ciliary nerves: the Posterior Nasal Nerve. Sömmering has given this name to the nerves, which arise from the internal part of the spheno-palatine ganglion.

NASAL NOTCH, (F,) Échancrure nasale. A semicircular notch, situate between the nasal prominence of the frontal bone, and articulated with the nasal bones and the nasal processes of the superior maxillary bones.

NASAL PROCESS, Maxillary bone, superior.

NASAL PROM'INENCE, (F.) Bosse nasale. A prominence, situate on the median line, at the anterior surface of the os frontis, between the two superciliary arches.

NASAL REGION, Re'gio nasa'lis. The region of the nose.

NASAL SPINES. These are three in number. 1. The Supe'rior nasal spine of the os frontis, occupying the middle of its nasal notch, and articulated before with the nasal bones, behind with the ethmoid. 2. The infe'rior and ante'rior nasal spine, situate at the inferior part of the anterior opening of the nasal fossæ. It is formed by the two superior maxillary bones; and 3. The infe'rior and poste'rior nasal spine, Épine gutturale (Ch.), a process, formed on the median line by the two palate bones at the posterior part of the palatine arch.

NASALE, Errhine.

NASALIS, Compressor naris.

Nasa'lis La'bii Superio'ris. A small muscular slip, which runs up from the middle of the orbicularis and the lip to the tip of the nose. It lies exactly in the furrow, and is occasionally a levator of the upper lip, or a depressor of the tip of the nose.

NASAS, Nata.

NASATUS, Membrosus.

NAS'CALE. A kind of pessary, made of wool or cotton, which was formerly introduced into the vagina, after being impregnated with oil, ointment, or some other proper medicament.

NASCAPHTHON, Narcarphthon.

NASDA, Nata.

NASI, see Oryza.

NASITAS, Rhinophonia.

NASITIS, Rhinitis—n. Postica, Angina nasalis.

NASO, Nasu'tus, from nasus, 'the nose.' One who has a long nose.

NASOCILIARIS (Nervus), Nasal nerve.

NASO-LA'BIAL, Naso-labialis; from nasus, 'the nose,' and labium, 'a lip.' Relating to the nose and lip.

Naso-Labial Line. A line or furrow, which separates the lip from the cheek, and commences at the ala nasi.

NASO-LABIA'LIS. A muscular fasciculus described by Albinus, which arises from the anterior extremity of the septum nasi, and terminates in the orbicularis oris.

NASO-PAL'ATINE, Naso-palati'nus. That which belongs to the nose and velum palati.

Naso-Palatine Ganglion is situate in the foramen palatinum anterius. Its greater extremity receives the two naso-palatine branches; whilst the smaller gives off two or three filaments, which reach the palatine vault, where they ramify on the membrane of the same name, anastomosing with filaments of the great palatine nerve.

Naso-Palatine Nerve is furnished by the spheno-palatine, which proceeds from the ganglion of Meckel. It traverses the vault of the nasal fossæ, and proceeds upon the septum between the two layers of the pituitary membrane. It enters the anterior palatine canal, and terminates at the superior angles of the naso-palatine ganglion, without attaining the mouth.

NASO-PALPÉBRAL, Orbicularis palpebrarum.

NASTA, Nata.

NASTURTIUM AMPHIBIUM, see Sisymbrium — n. Aquaticum, Cardamine pratensis, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Bursa pastoris, Thlaspi bursa — n. Hortense, Lepidium sativum—n. Indicum, Tropæolum majus—n. Officinale, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Palustre, see Sisymbrium—n. Peruvianum, Tropæolum majus — n. Pratense, Cardamine pratensis — n. Sativum, Lepidium sativum.

NASUM DILATANS, Pyramidalis nasi.

NASUS, The Nose, Rhin, Rhis, Or'ganon olfactûs seu odora'tûs seu olfacto'rium, Promonto'rium faciei, Myxo'ter, Emuncto'rium cer'ebri, Snout, (F.) Nez. The nose is a pyramidal eminence, situate above the anterior apertures of the nasal fossæ, which it covers; and, consequently, occupying the middle and upper part of the face, between the forehead and upper lip, the orbits and the cheeks. Its lateral surfaces form, by uniting angularly, a more or less prominent line, called Dorsum seu Rhachis seu Spina Nasi, (F.) Dos du nez. This line terminates, anteriorly, by the lobe,—Lob'ulus. The sides are called Alæ Nasi, Pinnæ Naris, (F.) Ailes du nez. The columna is the inferior part of the partition. Its apex or tip has been called Glob'ulus nasi.

The chief varieties of the nose are the aq'uiline, the flat nose, (F.) Nez camarot ou épaté, and the snub nose, (F.) Nez retroussé. The nose is formed, besides its bones, of fibro-cartilage, cartilage, muscles, vessels, and nerves; and its use seems to be to direct odours to the upper part of the nasal fossæ.

Nasus Internus, Nares.

NASUTUS, Naso.

NATA, Natta, Nasa, Nasda, Nasta, Nasas, Napta. A fleshy, indolent excrescence, having the shape of the nates.

NATARON, Natron.

NATA'TION, Nata'tio, from natare, itself from nare, 'to swim.' Swimming. The action of swimming, or of supporting one's self, or moving upon the water. Swimming resembles the horizontal leap in its physiology—the medium being water instead of air. The difference between the specific gravity of the human body and that of water is not great; so that but little exertion is required to keep a part of the body above water. Swimming is a healthy gymnastic exercise, combining the advantages of bathing.

NATES, Ephed'rana, Nat'ulæ, Sca'phia, Clunes, Glutoi, Gluti, Glu'tia, Sedi'lia, Pygē, Monæ, the Bottom, Backside, Poste'riors, Buttocks, &c., (F.) Fesses. Two round projections, at the inferior and posterior part of the trunk, on which we sit. Amongst the mammalia, man alone has the nates prominent and round. They are formed chiefly by the skin, and a thick layer of areolar tissue, which covers the three glutæi muscles.

Nates Cerebri, see Quadrigemina corpora — n. et Testes, Quadrigemina corpora.

NATRIUM, Sodium.

NATROCRENÆ, Natropegæ.

NATRON, Natrum, Nat'aron, Nitrum, Anatrum, Aphronitrum, from Natron, a lake in Judæa. A saline compound, very abundant in Egypt, which is almost wholly formed of subcarbonate of soda.

NATRONIUM, Sodium.

NATROPE'GÆ, Natrocre'næ, from Natron, and πηγη, 'a spring.' Soda springs.

NATRUM, Natron — n. Chloratum liquidum, Liquor sodæ chlorinatæ — n. Muriaticum, Sodæ, muriate of — n. Muriatum, Soda, muriate of — n. Præparatum, Soda, subcarbonate of—n. Tartarizatum, Soda, tartrate of — n. Vitriolatum, Sodæ, sulphate of — n. Nitricum, Soda, nitrate of — n. Oxymuriaticum, Soda, chloride of—n. Oxyphosphorodes, Soda, phosphate of — n. Sulphuricum, Soda, sulphate of.

NATTA, Nata.

NATULÆ, Nates.

NATU'RA, from nasci, 'to be born or arise.' Physis. Nature. Also, genital organs.

Natu'ra Morbi. The essence or condition of a disease.

NATURAL PARTS, Genital organs.

NATURALIA, Genital organs.

NA'TURISM, Nat'uralism. A view which attributes every thing to nature, as a sage, prescient, and sanative entity. — Nysten. See Expectation.

NA'TURIST. A physician who scrupulously investigates, interprets, and follows the indications presented by nature in the treatment of disease.

NAU'CLEA GAMBIR, Uncaria gambir. A plant of the family and tribe Cinchonaceæ, a native of the Malayan Peninsula and Indian Archipelago, which yields large quantities of the kind of Catechu known by the names Terra Ja- pon'ica and Square Catechu, and which, in Indian commerce, is called Gambeer. It is a powerful astringent, much used in tanning, and in medicine, as a substitute for the Catechu of the Acacia.

NAU'SEA, Nau'sia, Nausi'asis, Nausio'sis, Nau'tia, Queasiness, Squeasiness, (F.) Nausée, Envie de vomir; from ναυς, navis, 'a ship;' because those unaccustomed to sailing are so affected. Sickness. Inclination to vomit.

NAUSEA, KREAT'IC, (κρεας, κρεατος, 'flesh.') The sickness and vomiting, excited, in some nervous patients, by the smallest portion of animal food.

NAUSEA MARI'NA, Morbus nau'ticus, Vom'itus navigan'tium seu mari'nus, Sea-sickness, (F.) Mal de mer. The sickness, vomiting, &c., experienced at sea by those unaccustomed to a sea-life; and from which those who are accustomed are not always exempt. It generally ceases when the person becomes habituated to the motion of the vessel, and not till then.

NAU'SEANT, Nau'seans. An agent that excites nausea, which is a state of diminished action. Nauseants are, hence, valuable remedies in diseases of excitement.

NAUSIA, Nausea.

NAUSIASIS, Nausea.

NAUSIO'SIS. This word, besides being synonymous with nausea, has been used to express the state of venous hemorrhage, when blood is discharged by jets.

NAUTIA, Nausea.

NAVEL, Umbilicus—n. String, Funiculus umbilicalis—n. Wort, Cotyledon umbilicus—n. Wort, Venus's, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NAVET, Brassica rapa.

NAVETTE, Brassica rapa.

NAVIC'ULAR, Navicula'ris, Navifor'mis, from navicula, 'a little ship.'

NAVIC'ULAR FOSSA, Fossa Navicula'ris, F. Scaphoï'des, Navic'ula, Scaph'ula. See Scaphoid. This name has been given, 1. To a small depression between the entrance of the vagina and the posterior commissure of the labia major or fourchette. 2. To a perceptible dilatation, presented by the urethra in man, near the base of the glans. 3. To the superficial depression which separates the two roots of the helix. This is also called Scapha.

NAVICULARE OS, Scaphoides os.

NAVIFORMIS, Navicular.

NAVIS, Vulva.

NEAR-SIGHTEDNESS, Myopia.

NEB'ULA, Nubes, Nubec'ula, Nephos, Neph'elē, Nephe'lion, (F.) Nuage, Ombrage. A slight speck on the cornea. A mist or cloud suspended in the urine. See Caligo.

NEBULOUS, Nepheloid.

NEC''ESSARY, Necessa'rius, (ne, and cessare.) The Necessaries of Life, Vitæ necessita'tes, (F.) Besoins de la vie, include every thing requisite for the maintenance of life, and particularly food.

NECK, DERBYSHIRE, Bronchocele — n. Swelled, Bronchocele — n. Stiff, Torticollis — n. Wry, Torticollis.

NECKLACE, AN'ODYNE. These are formed of the roots of hyoscyamus, Job's tears, allspice steeped in brandy, or the seeds of the wild liquorice vine, to suit the fancy of the prescriber. They are employed to facilitate dentition in children, and to procure sleep in fever.(!)

NECKWEED, Veronica beccabunga, V. peregrina.

NECRÆ'MIA, from νεκρος, 'death,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Death of the blood. Death beginning with the blood.

NECRENCEPHALUS, Mollities cerebri.

NECROCEDIA, Embalming.

NECRODES, Cadaverous.

NECROLOGY, BILLS OF, Mortality, bills of.

NEC'ROMANCY, Necromanti'a, Negromanti'a, Necyomanti'a, Nigromanti'a, from νεκρος, 'death,' and μαντεια, 'divination.' Divination by the dead.

NECROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NECRON, Cadaver.

NECRONARCEMA, Rigor mortis.

NECROPHOB'IA, from νεκρος, 'death,' and φοβος, 'fear.' Exaggerated fear of death. This symptom occurs in patients where the disease is not mortal; as in hypochondriasis. In fevers, it is not a good symptom.

NECROPNEUMO'NIA, Pneumo'nia gangræno'sa seu typho'sa, Gangræ'na seu Mortifica'tio seu Anthrax seu Carbun'culus Pulmo'num, Pneumosep'sis, Pneumoc'acē, (F.) Gangrène du Poumon; from νεκρος, 'death,' and pneumonia. Gangrenous inflammation of the lungs. This may be diffused or circumscribed. The only pathognomonic symptom is the extraordinary and repulsive odour of the breath and expectoration. The treatment consists in the use of the chlorides internally, or of chlorine by inhalation; allaying irritation by opium, and supporting the patient by wine-whey, and nourishing diet.

NECROPSIA, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROPSY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSCOPIA, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSCOPY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECRO'SIS, from νεκροω, 'I kill.' Mortification. State of a bone or of a portion of a bone deprived of life. Osteogangræ'na, Osteonecro'sis. Necrosis may take place without the surrounding soft parts being struck with gangrene. It is to the bones what gangrene is to the soft parts. The part of the bone affected with necrosis becomes a foreign body, similar to the gangrenous eschar, and its separation must be accomplished by the efforts of nature, or by art. When necrosis occurs in the centre of long bones, it never extends to their articular extremities. The exterior layers of bone form a canal round the dead portion or sequestrum; between these swollen layers and the sequestrum, suppuration takes place; the matter presses against the bony canal; perforates it, and is discharged by apertures, which become fistulous.

In the treatment, the exit of the sequestrum must be facilitated by proper incisions, by the application of the trepan to the bone, &c.

NECROSIS CEREALIS, Ergotism — n. Dentium, Dental gangrene — n. Ustilaginea, Ergotism.

NECROTOMY, Dissection.

NECTANDRA RODIEI, see Bebeeru.

NECTAR, from νη, 'a particle of negation,' and κταω, 'to kill.' A pleasant liquor, feigned by the poets to have been the drink of the gods, and to have rendered immortal those who partook of it. A name given, by the ancients, to many drinks; and particularly to one made with wine, evaporated, and sweetened with honey.

NECTARIUM, Inula helenium.

NECUSIA, see Wound.

NECYOMANTIA, Necromancy.

NEDYIA, Intestines.

NEDYS, νηδυς. The belly, abdomen, stomach, uterus.

NEEDLE, Sax. neðl, næðl, from Teut. neten, 'to sew.' Acus, Bel'onē, Raphis, Raph'ion, Aces'tra, (F.) Aiguille. A steel instrument, used in many professions. In Surgery, a steel, gold, silver, or platina instrument, that may be round, flat, or triangular, straight, or curved, supported or not by a handle, but having always a point, by means of which it penetrates the textures; and often having, either near the point, or, more commonly, near the other extremity, an aperture or eye for the reception of a thread or tape, which it introduces into the parts. The Aiguille à appareil of the French is the ordinary sewing needle used in the making of bandages, &c.

NEEDLE, ACUPUNCTURE, (F.) Aiguille à Acupuncture, An inflexible gold or silver needle; conical, very delicate, four inches long, furnished with a handle, and, at times, with a canula shorter than it by about half an inch. An ordinary needle, waxed at the head, will answer as a substitute for this. See Acupuncture.

NEEDLE, CATARACT, Acus ophthal'mica, (F.) Aiguille à cataracte. Needles of gold, silver, and steel have been used; the latter, alone, at the present day. The cataract needle is employed to depress or tear the crystalline when opake. This needle is usually made from 15 to 24 lines long; and is attached to a fine handle. The extremity may be, as in Scarpa's and Langenbeck's, pointed, prismatic, triangular, and curved; in Dupuytren's and Walther's, flat, curved, and sharp-edged; in Hey's, flat, with a semicircular and sharp end; or, as in Beer's, Siebold's, Schmidt's, Himly's, Von Gräfe's, &c., straight and spear-pointed. A mark is generally placed upon the handle to inform the operator, — when the instrument is engaged in the eye,—what side corresponds to the crystalline.

NEEDLE FOR A COUNTER-OPENING, Acus invagina'ta, (F.) Aiguille à Contre-ouverture, Aiguille engainée, Aiguille à gaine, — a long, narrow instrument of steel; the point of which is fine and sharp on both sides;—the heel (talon) having an aperture to receive a thread, tape, &c., provided with a flat, silver sheath, shorter than the blade, the point of which it covers when passing through parts that have to be respected.

NEEDLE, DESCHAMP'S, Paupe's needle, (F.) Aiguille de Deschamps, Aiguille à manche, &c., is the last described needle, fixed to a handle. The eye is placed near the point. It is employed in the ligature of deep-seated arteries.

NEEDLE, FIS'TULA, (F.) Aiguille à Fistule. A long, flat, flexible, silver instrument; having an aperture near one extremity; blunt at the other. This was formerly used for passing a seton into fistulous ulcers. On one of its sides was a groove for guiding a bistouri in case of necessity.

Also, a long, steel instrument, terminated by a point like that of a trocar, which Desault employed for penetrating the rectum, when operating for fistula that had no internal aperture.

NEEDLE, HARE-LIP, (F.) Aiguille à Bec de Lièvre. A small, silver canula, to which is attached a spear-point, that can be readily withdrawn. This needle, armed with the point, is introduced at one side of the fissure in the lip, and through the other. The twisted suture is then applied, and the pin withdrawn.

NEEDLE, LIG'ATURE, (F.) Aiguille à ligature. A long, steel instrument, sharp towards one extremity, with an eye near the other, which was formerly used for suspending the circulation of blood prior to amputation, by being passed through the limb, so as to include the principal artery and a part of the muscles and integuments.

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, round towards one of its extremities, which was straight, and furnished with an aperture; curved and flat towards the opposite, which was pointed, and had a slight ridge on its concave side. At the commencement of the last century, this instrument was used to pass ligatures around vessels

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, flat, regularly curved in the form of a semicircle, with a sharp or lance point, and a long eye, used with advantage in place of the last.

NEEDLE, SETON, (F.) Aiguille à Seton. A long, narrow, steel blade; pointed and sharp at one extremity; pierced at the other by an aperture. The Aiguille à contre-ouverture may be used for the same purpose.

NEEDLE, SUTURE, (F.) Aiguille à Suture. For the twisted suture, the hare-lip needle is used; for the others, the straight or curved needle: the straight needle is preferable for stitching up the abdomen, &c., in dissection. In the suture of the tendons, a curved needle has been used; flat on both sides, and cutting only at the concave edge, in order that the instrument may pass between the tendinous fibres without dividing them.

NEEDLE-BEARER, Porte-aiguille.

NEEDLE-CARRIER, Porte-aiguille.

NÈFLE, Mespilus (the fruit.)

NÉFLIER, Mespilus.

NEFREN'DES, properly, 'sucking pigs.'— Varro. Nodoi, Eden'tuli (νη, privative, and οδους, 'a tooth.') Persons devoid of teeth. Young children, for instance, who have not cut them; or aged persons, who have lost them. This state is called Nefrendis, Nodo'sia, Odon'tia eden'tula.

NEGOTIUM PARTURITIONIS, Parturition.

NÈGRE BLANC, Albino.

NEGRETIA PRURIENS, Dolichos pruriens.

NEGRO, Ni'grita. One of the Æthiopian race. See Homo and Mulatto.

NEGROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NEIÆ'RA, Neï'ra, Imus Venter. The lower part of the belly. — Hippocrates.

NEIGE, Snow.

NEIRA, Neiæra.

NELUM'BIUM LU'TEUM, Yellow ne'lumbo, Yellow water lily, Pond lily, Water shield, Water nuts, Water chin'capin, Rattle nut, Sacred bean. A beautiful water plant, common in the United States, and belonging to Nat. Ord. Nymphaceæ; Sex. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia. The leaves are cooling and emollient when applied to the surface. The roots, leaves, and nuts are eaten. The last are called by the Indians and others water chincapins.

NELUMBO, YELLOW, Nelumbium luteum.

NENDO, Angelica lucida.

NENNDORF, MINERAL WATERS OF. Nenndorf is a village three and a half German miles from Hanover. Its cold sulphureous spring is much celebrated.

NENUPHAR, Nymphæa alba — n. Blanc, Nymphæa alba — n. Jaune, Nymphæa lutea — n. Lutea, Nymphæa lutea — n. Odorant, Nymphæa odorata.

NEOÄRTHRO'SIS, from νεος, 'new,' and αρθρον, 'a joint.' A new joint; an artificial joint.

NEOG'ALA, from νεος, 'new,' and γαλα, 'milk.' Milk secreted immediately after the colostrum. Also, the colostrum.

NEOGENES, Nouveau-né.

NEOGILUS, Nouveau-né.

NEOGNUS, Nouveau-né.

NEONATUS, Nouveau-né.

NE'OPLASTY, Neoplas'tice: from νεος, 'new,' and πλασσω, πλαττω, 'I form.' An operative process for the formation of new parts. It includes autoplasty, cicatrization of wounds, and the formation of adhesions. — Burdach.

NEOTTIA, Goodyera pubescens.

NEP, Nepeta.

NEPEN'THA DESTILLATO'RIA, Bandu'ra, A Ceylonese plant, the root of which is astringent.

NEPEN'THES, from νη, negative particle, and πενθος, 'grief.' A remedy much extolled by the ancients against sadness and melancholy.

The women of Thebes, according to Diodorus

Siceliotes, alone possessed the secret of its composition; and, according to Homer, Helen introduced it from Egypt. Some suppose it to have been opium.

NEPENTHES, Bangue—n. Opiatum, Pilulæ opiatæ.

NEP'ETA, N. Cata'ria seu vulga'ris Cata'ria vulga'ris, Herba felis, Nep or Catmint, (F.) Herbe aux Chats,—so called, because cats are fond of it. The leaves, Cuta'ria (Ph. U. S.), have a smell and taste like those of an admixture of spearmint and pennyroyal. It has been recommended in uterine disorders, dyspepsia, flatulency, &c., like pennyroyal; and is much used in domestic medicine, on the American continent, in flatulencies, &c., of children.

NEPETA AGRESTIS, Melissa nepeta—n. Glechoma, Glechoma hederacea—n. Vulgaris, Nepeta.

NEPHALIOTES, Temperance.

NEPHELE, Enæorema, Nehula.

NEPHELION, Nebula.

NEPH'ELOID, Nephelōi'des, Nephelo'des, Neb'ulous, Nubilo'sus. An epithet applied to urine when it is cloudy—Uri'na nephelo'des.

NEPHOS, Nebula.

NEPHRAL'GIA, Dolor Nephret'icus, Neural'gia Renum, (F.) Névralgie des Reins, Dysnéphronervie, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain and neuralgia in the kidney.

NEPHRALGIA ARENOSA, see Gravel—n. Calculosa, see Gravel—n. Rheumatica, Lumbago.

NEPHRAPOS'TASIS, Nephropyo'sis, Absces'sus rena'lis, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and αποστασις, 'abscess.' Renal abscess.

NEPHRATON'IA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ατονια, 'want of tone.' Renum aton'ia seu paral'ysis. Atony of the kidney.

NEPHRELCO'SIS, Nephropyo'sis, Helco'sis rena'lis, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and 'ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of the kidney.

NEPHRELMIN'TIC, Nephrelmin'ticus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and 'ελμινς, 'a worm.' That which is owing to the presence of worms in the kidney.

NEPHREMPHRAX'IS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' A name given by Ploucquet to obstruction of the kidneys.

NEPHRET'IC, Nephrid'ius, Nephrit'ic, Nephrit'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney.' That which relates to the kidney. Applied, especially, to pain, &c., seated in the kidney.

NEPHRET'ICUM, in Materia Medica, means a medicine employed for the cure of diseases of the kidney.

NEPHRETICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRET'ICUS LAPIS, Talcum nephrit'icum, (F.) Pierre néphretique, Jade néphrite ou oriental. A green, fatty kind of stone,—once used as an amulet against epilepsy; an absurd name, as there can be no such remedy.

NEPHRID'ION, Pingue'do rena'lis. The fat which surrounds the kidneys.—Hippocrates.

NEPHRIDIUM, Capsule, renal.

NEPHRIDIUS, Nephretic.

NÉPHRITE, Nephritis—n. Albumineuse, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRITES, Asphaltites.

NEPHRITIC, Nephretic.

NEPHRITICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRITIS, Asphaltites,

NEPHRITIS, Empres'ma Nephritis, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and itis, 'denoting inflammation;' Renum inflamma'tio, Nephro-phleg'monē,—Inflammation of the Kidney, (F.) Néphrite, Inflammation des Reins, is characterized by acute pain; burning heat, and a sensation of weight in the region of one or both kidneys; suppression or diminution of urine; fever; dysuria; ischuria; constipation, more or less obstinate; retraction of the testicle, and numbness of the thigh of the same side. It may be distinguished into simple and calculous nephritis. In the latter, the urine often contains small particles of uric acid or of urate of ammonia. The most common causes of nephritis are,—excess in irritating and alcoholic drinks; abuse of diuretics; blows or falls on the region of the kidneys; the presence of renal calculi, &c. It may be distinguished from lumbago by the pain which attends the latter on the slightest motion, &c. It usually terminates by resolution in from one week to two or three. It may, however, end in suppuration—pyonéphrite; or may become chronic—chrononéphrite, (Piorry.) In the treatment, antiphlogistics, as bleeding, baths, &c., are required to the full extent; with the use of diluents, opiates, &c.

NEPHRITIS ALBUMINENSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Albuminosa, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Associated, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Cachectic, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Sociata, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRODES, Nephroid.

NEPHRODIUM FILIX MAS, Polypodium filix mas.

NEPHROG'RAPHY, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the kidney.

NEPHROHÆ'MIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia or congestion of the kidney.

NEPH'ROID, Nephroï'des, Nephro'des, Reniform'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ειδος, 'form, resemblance.' Reniform. Having a resemblance to a kidney—as 'nephroid cancer,' so called because the morbid growth resembles the kidney in structure.

NEPHROLITHI'ASIS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and λιθος, 'a stone.' The disease of calculus in the kidney; Lith'ia rena'lis, Lithi'asis nephrit'ica, L. Rena'lis. See Gravel.

NEPHROLITH'IC, same etymon. Belonging to calculi in the kidneys. This epithet has been applied to ischuria, occasioned by calculi formed in the kidneys.

NEPHROL'OGY, Nephrolog''ia, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and λογος, 'a treatise.' A treatise on the kidneys. Dissertation on the kidneys and their functions.

NEPHROMALA'CIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney, and μαλακια, softness.' Softening of the kidney.

NEPHROMETRÆ, Psoæ.

NEPHRON'CUS, Tumor rena'lis, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumefaction of the kidney.

NEPHROPHLEGMAT'IC, Nephro-phlegmat'icus, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and φλεγμα, 'phlegm.' A name given, by some authors, to ischuria produced by mucus contained in the urine.

NEPHROPHLEGMONE, Nephritis.

NEPHROPHTHI'SIS, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and φθισις, 'consumption.' Phthisis from suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPLETHOR'IC, Nephro-plethor'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and πληθωρα, 'plethora.' Belonging to plethora of the kidneys. An epithet given to ischuria dependent upon this cause.

NEPHROPY'IC, Nephro-py'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and πυον, 'pus.' Belonging to suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPYOSIS, Nephrapostasis, Nephrelcosis.

NEPHRORRHAG''IA, Hæmatu'ria rena'lis, Hæmorrhag''ia renum, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ραγη, 'rupture;' Profiu'vium san'guinis e re'nibus. Hemorrhage from the kidney.

NEPHROS, Kidney.

NEPHROSCLE'RIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and σκληρια, 'hardness;' Indura'tio renum. Induration of the kidneys.

NEPHROSPAS'TIC, Nephrospas'ticus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and σπαω, 'I draw.' That which depends upon spasm of the kidney. An epithet given to a variety of ischuria.

NEPHROTHROM'BOID, Nephro-thromboi''des, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and θρομβος, 'a clot.' That which depends upon clots of blood, contained in the kidneys or their ducts. An epithet for a species of ischuria.

NEPHROT'OMY, Nephro-lithot'omy, Nephrotom'ia, Nephro-lithotom'ia, Sectio rena'lis, S. renis, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' Dissection of the kidney. Also, an operation proposed with the view of extracting calculi formed in the kidney, by means of an incision into the tissue of that organ.

NEPHRUS, Kidney.

NEPIOS, Infans.

NEPIOTES, Infancy.

NEPTA, Asphaltum.

NERANTIA, see Citrus aurantium.

NÉRIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Néris is on the high road from Moulins to Limoges, eighty leagues from Paris. There are four springs, the water of which is clear, inodorous, tasteless, and has an unctuous feel. It contains carbonic acid gas, carbonate of soda, and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, silex and an animal matter to which its 'oleaginous' property is probably owing. The waters are generally used in the form of thermal baths.

NERIUM, N. oleander.

NE'RIUM ANTIDYSINTER'ICUM, Wright'ia antidysenter'ica. The tree which affords the Codaga'pala Bark, Cones'si cortex, Tillicher'ry cortex, Cortex profiu'vii. Family, Apocyneæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. (F.) Codagapale, Cropale. The bark of this Malabar tree is of a black colour, externally, and is generally covered with a white moss or scurf. It has an austere, bitter taste, and has been recommended as an astringent in diarrhœa, dysentery, &c.

NE'RIUM OLEAN'DER, Ne'rium, Rhododaph'nis, Rosa'go, (F.) Laurier rose. The leaves are reputed to be narcotic. The infusion is employed internally, in herpetic affections, and the powder, incorporated with lard, is used in the itch.

NERONIA'NA (PHLEBOTOM'IA.) An epithet given, for some cause, to phlebotomy, when more than one vein was opened on the same day.

NERPRUN PURGATIF, Rhamnus.

NERVE, Nervus, Neuron, νευρον, 'a string.' (F.) Nerf. Neuron and Nervus meant also, with the ancients, the tendons and ligaments, Partes nervo'sæ; and hence the different acceptations of 'nervous;'—a man of nerve—a strong, nervous man; and a weak, nervous woman. The nerves are tubular cords of the same substance as that which composes the encephalon and spinal marrow. They extend from one or other of the nervous centres to every part of the body, communicating, frequently, with each other; forming plexuses, and, occasionally, ganglions; and being, at length, lost in the parenchyma of organs. There are 42 pairs, and, according to their origin, they are termed Cranial or Encephalic, and Spinal. Each nerve is composed of several filaments or cords placed alongside each other, and is surrounded by a neurilemma. The encephalic nerves, in general, have only one root in the brain, whilst the spinal arise from the marrow by two roots: the one from an anterior fasciculus of filaments, the other from a posterior, separated from each other by the Ligamentum denticulatum; uniting outside this ligament, and presenting, near the intervertebral foramen, a ganglion formed only by the posterior root. The two roots make, afterwards, but one nerve; and, like the encephalic nerves, proceed to their destination, subdividing into rami and ramusculi, until they are finally lost in in the texture of the organs. The trunks first formed are commonly round, and proceed alone, or accompany the great vessels, being placed in the areolar spaces which separate the organs, and are thus protected from injury. Their manner of termination we are not acquainted with; whether the nervous pulp, for instance, be distributed or lost in a membrane, as seems to be the case with the nerves of sight, hearing, and smell,—or are looped. Certain it is, that there is considerable difference in the organs, as respects the quantity of nerves that terminate in them; and the particular arrangement of the nervous extremities. Some organs have numerous nerves; others seem to have none: a circumstance which influences considerably the sensibility of parts.

The Encephalic Nerves arise from the encephalon, or are inserted into it; (according as we consider the brain the origin or termination of the nerves;) and make their exit by foramina at the base of the skull. They are 12 in number. The spinal nerves are 30 in number, 8 cervical, 12 dorsal, 5 lumbar, and 5 or 6 sacral: the four inferior cervical being much larger than the superior, because they furnish the nerves of the upper extremities.

SYNOPTICAL TABLE OF THE NERVES.

I. Cranial or Encephalic Nerves.

1. Olfactory (1st pair.) — Divided into internal, external, and middle branches, which are distributed on the Schneiderian membrane.

2. Optic (2d pair.) — Terminate in the retina.

3. Motores Oculorum. (3d pair.)
- Superior Branch. To the rectus superior oculi and levator palpebræ superioris.
- Inferior Branch. To the rectus internus, rectus inferior and lesser oblique muscles; a filament which goes to the ophthalmic ganglion.

4. Pathetici (4th pair.) — To the greater oblique muscle of the eye.

5. Par Trigeminum. (5th pair.)
- Ophthalmic Branch. Divided into three branches. 1. The lachrymal branch, to the lachrymal gland and upper eye-lid. 2. Frontal branch, to the forehead and upper eyelid. 3. Nasal branch, to the eyelids, nasal fossæ, and nose.
- Superior Maxillary Branch. 1. The orbitar branch, to the orbit. 2. The posterior and superior dental, to the last three molar teeth and gums. 3. The anterior dental, to the incisor, canine, and two lesser molares. 4. Infra-orbitar, to the upper lip, cheek, and nose.
- Inferior Maxillary Branch. 1. Temporal profound branches, to the temporal muscle. 2. Masseterine branch, to the masseter muscle. 3. Buccal, to the inner surface of the cheek. 4. Pterygoid, to the internal pterygoid muscle. 5. Lingual, to the mucous membrane of the tongue. 6. Inferior dental, to the teeth of the lower jaw, and to the lower lip. 7. Auricular branch, to the pavilion of the ear and forehead.

6. Abducentes (6th pair.) — To the rectus externus oculi.

7. Facial (Portio dura of the 7th pair.)
1. At its exit from the cranium, the posterior auricular, stylohyoid, and inframastoid, to the pavilion of the ear, the mastoid process, the digastricus, and the muscles attached to the styloid process.
2. Near the parotid gland, the temporal, malar, buccal, supra-maxillary, and inframaxillary to the whole superficies of the face.

8. Auditory (Portio mollis of the 7th pair.) — To the vestibule, semi-circular canals, and cochlea.

9. Glosso-pharyngeal. (Portion of the 8th pair.) — To the base of the tongue and pharynx.

10. Par Vagum (8th pair.)
1. IN THE NECK,—a pharyngeal branch to the pharynx; superior laryngeal branch to the larynx, and to some muscles of the inferior hyoid region. Cardiac branches to the cardiac plexus.
2. IN THE CHEST,—the inferior laryngeal branch to the larynx: pulmonary branches, which form the plexus of the same name: œsophageal branches to the œsophagus.
3. IN THE ABDOMEN,—gastric branches to the parietes of the stomach: filaments which go to the neighbouring plexuses.

11. Spinal or Accessory of Willis — At its exit from the cranium—the accessory of the pneumogastric nerve anastomosing with this nerve. In the neck—filaments to the trapezius muscles.

12. Hypoglossal (9th pair.) — Cervicalis descendens, to the muscles of the inferior hyoid region, and to the cervical nerves. Filaments to the muscles of the tongue.

II. Spinal or Vertebral Nerves.

I. Cervical Nerves.

1st Cervical Pair — Anterior Branch. Anastomosing par arcade with the second pair.

2d Cervical Pair — Anterior Branch. A branch anastomosing with the first pair: a branch which goes to the cervical plexus.

3d and 4th Cervical Pairs. — Anterior Branch. Concurring in the cervical plexus.

The Posterior Branch of these four pairs ramifies on the occiput and muscles of the superficial and deep-seated cervico-occipital regions.

Cervical Plexus
- Descending Branches.—1. Internal descending, anastomosing with a branch of the hypoglossus. 2. Phrenic branch, to the diaphragm. 3. External descending branches, dividing into supra-clavicular, supra-acromial, infra-clavicular, and cervicales profundi, to the muscles and integuments of the upper part of the chest and shoulder, to the trapezius, levator scapulæ, rhomboideus, &c.
- Ascending Branches.—1. Mastoid, to the posterior and lateral part of the head and the inner surface of the pavilion of the ear. 2. Auricular, to the parotid gland and pavilion of the ear.
- Superficial Cervical Branches. (2.) To the platysma myoides, digastricus, the integuments of the neck, &c.

Cervical Plexus
- Anterior Branches. Assisting in the formation of the brachial plexus.

5th, 6th, and 7th Cervical Pairs. — Posterior Branches To the muscles and integuments of the posterior part of the neck and upper part of the back.

Brachial Plexus
1. Thoracic Branches, (2) to the anterior and lateral parts of the chest. 2. Suprascapulary branch to the muscles of the posterior scapular region. 3. Infra-scapulary branches (3.) to the subscapularis, teres major, teres minor, and latissimus dorsi. 4. The brachial interna cutaneous, to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the ulnar margin. 5. The brachial external cutaneous, principally to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the radial margin. 6. The median nerve, to the forearm, hand, and palmar surface of all the fingers. 7. The cubital nerve, to the last two fingers. 8. The radial, to the first three. 9. The axillary, around the shoulder-joint, and to the neighbouring muscles.

II. Spinal or Vertebral Nerves.—Continued.

2. Dorsal Nerves, (Nervi dorsales.)

- 1st Dorsal Pair. — Anterior Branch. To the brachial plexus.
- 2d and 3d Dorsal Pairs. — Anterior Branches. An intercostal and brachial branch.
- 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th Dorsal Pairs ..... — Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the intercostals, triangularis sterni, pectoralis major, and to the skin. External branches to the integuments of the chest, the obliquus externus abdominis, and the skin of the abdomen.
- 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th Dorsal Pairs. — Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the transversalis, obliquus internus, and rectus muscles, and to the skin of the abdomen. External branches, to the integuments of the chest, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen.
- 12th Dorsal Pair ... — Anterior Branch. To the first lumbar nerve, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen as far as the iliac crest.

The Posterior Branches of the dorsal nerves are distributed to the muscles and integuments of the back and loins.

3. Lumbar Nerves.

- 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Lumbar Pairs .... — Anterior Branches. Concurring to form the lumbar plexus.
- 5th Pair..... — Anterior Branch. Aiding in forming the sciatic plexus.

The Posterior Branches of the lumbar nerves are distributed to the loins, sacrum, and nates.

- Lumbar Plexus ..... — 1. Musculo-cutaneous Branches, to the number of three. One superior, to the muscles of the abdomen, to the fold of the groin, and the scrotum: a middle, to the integuments and muscles of the abdomen: and an inferior, to the skin of the thigh. 2. A genito-crural branch to the integuments of the scrotum, the groin, and the thigh. 3. The crural nerve, to the integuments and muscles of the thigh, skin of the leg, and foot. 4. The obturator nerve, to the muscles at the inner part of the thigh. 5. The lumbo-sacral, to the sciatic plexus. It gives off the gluteal nerve to the glutæi muscles.

Sacral Nerves.

- 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th, Sacral Pairs..... — Anterior Branches. They form by their union the sciatic plexus.
- 5th and 6th Pairs ... — Anterior Branches. To the parts in the vicinity of the coccyx.

The Posterior Branches ramify on the muscles and integuments of the nates.

- Sciatic Plexus..... — 1. Hemorrhoidal nerves, to the rectum. 2. Vesical, to the bladder. 3. Uterine and vaginal, to the vagina and uterus. 4. Inferior gluteal, to the gluteal muscles, perinæum, and integuments of the posterior part of the thigh. 5. Pudic, to the perinæum, penis, or vulva. 6. Sciatic, divided into the external popliteal, which ramifies on the integuments and muscles of the external side of the leg, on the dorsum of the foot, and the dorsal surface of the toes; and into the internal popliteal, distributed on the dorsal surface of the two last toes, to the muscles of the foot, and on the plantar surface of all the toes.

Classifications of the nerves have been recommended according to their uses, in preference to the ordinary anatomical arrangement. It has been remarked that the encephalic nerves have generally one root; the spinal two. Now, experiments and pathological facts have proved, that the anterior fasciculus of the narrow and the anterior roots of the spinal nerves are inservient to volition or voluntary motion: and that the posterior fasciculus and roots are destined for sensibility. Hence the spinal nerves, which have two roots, must be the conductors both of motion and feeling; whilst the encephalic, which, with but few exceptions, have but one, can possess but one of these properties:—they must be either sensitive or motive, according as they arise from the posterior or anterior fasciculus of the medulla: and, consequently, three classes of nerves may be distinguished.

1. Sensory ..... — Arising, by a single root, from the posterior fasciculus of the medulla oblongata or spinal marrow.
2. Motor..... — Arising, by a single root, from the anterior fasciculus of the same parts.
3. Sensory and Motor ..... — Which have two roots: one from the anterior, and one from the posterior fasciculus.

According to Sir Charles Bell, the medulla oblongata is composed of three fasciculi on each side; an anterior, a middle, and a posterior. Whilst the anterior and posterior fasciculi produce the nerves of motion and sensation respectively; the middle, according to Sir Charles, gives rise to a third set of nerves—the respiratory. To this order belong:—

1. The accessory nerve of Willis, or superior respiratory.
2. The par vagum.
3. The glosso-pharyngeal.
4. The facial or respiratory of the face.
5. The phrenic.
6. A nerve which has the same origin as the phrenic;—the external respiratory.

When a horse has been hard-ridden, every one of these nerves is in action.

This division is now, however, generally abandoned, and there does not seem to be a third column, especially destined for respiration.

Sir C. Bell, again, has reduced the system of nerves to two great classes. 1. Those that are regular, primitive, symmetrical, and common to all animals, from the worm to man; which have double roots, and preside over sensibility and motion: and, 2. The irregular or superadded, which are added to the preceding, in proportion as the organization of animals offers new or more complicated organs. To the first class belong all the spinal nerves and one encephalic—the 5th pair;—to the second, the rest of the nervous system.

Dr. Marshall Hall has proposed a division of the nervous system, which is calculated to explain many of the anomalous circumstances we so frequently witness. He proposes to divide all the nerves into, 1. The cerebral or the sentient and voluntary. 2. The true spinal or excito-motory. 3. The ganglionic or cyclo-ganglionic,—the nutrient and secretory. If the sentient and voluntary functions be destroyed by a blow upon the head, the sphincter muscles will still contract when irritated, because the irritation is conveyed to the spine, and the reflex action takes place to the muscle so as to throw it into contraction. But if the spinal marrow be now destroyed, the sphincters remain entirely motionless, because the centre of the system is destroyed. Dr. Hall thinks that a peculiar set of nerves constitutes, with the true spinal marrow as their axis, the second subdivision of the nervous system; and as those of the first subdivision are distinguished into sentient and voluntary, these may be distinguished into the excitor and motory. The first, or the excitor nerves, pursue their course principally from internal surfaces, characterized by peculiar excitabilities, to the true medulla oblongata and medulla spinalis; the second, or the motor nerves, pursue a reflex course from the medulla to the muscles, having peculiar actions concerned principally in ingestion and egestion. The motions connected with the first or cerebral subdivision are sometimes, indeed frequently, spontaneous; those connected with the true spinal are, he believes, always excited. Dr. Hall thinks, too, that there is good reason for viewing the fifth, and posterior spinal nerves as constituting an external ganglionic system for the nutrition of the external organs; and he proposes to divide the ganglionic subdivision of the nervous system into, 1. The internal ganglionic, which includes that usually denominated the sympathetic, and probably filaments of the pneumogastric; and, 2. The external ganglionic, embracing the fifth and posterior spinal nerves. To the cerebral system he assigns all diseases of sensation, perception, judgment, and volition—therefore all painful, mental, and comatose, and some paralytic diseases. To the true spinal, excito-motory, reflex, or diastaltic nervous system, belong all spasmodic and certain paralytic diseases. He properly adds, that these two parts of the nervous system influence each other both in health and disease, as they both influence the ganglionic system.

The main views of Dr. Hall on the excito-motory function have been generally embraced.

The following tabular view of the arrangement and connexions of the nerves and nervous centres is given by Dr. Carpenter.

Tabular View of the Nervous Centres.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Afferent fibres derived from Sensory Ganglia; efferent fibres transmitted to motor centres. | Cerebral Ganglia, the seat of the formation of Ideas, and the instrument of the Reasoning processes and Will; participating also with the Sensory Ganglia in the formation of the Emotions; and thus the original source of Voluntary and Emotional movements. | Afferent fibres derived from Sensory Ganglia; efferent fibres transmitted to motor centres. |
| Afferent fibres derived from posterior column of spinal cord; efferent fibres transmitted into posterior column. | Cerebellic Ganglia, for harmonization of muscular actions; including also the ganglionic centre of the sexual sense (?). | Afferent fibres derived from posterior column of spinal cord; efferent fibres transmitted into motor column. |
| | Cranio-Spinal Axis, or centre of Automatic actions; including— | |
| Radiating fibres to Cerebral Ganglia:—Nerves of Common and Special Sensation; — Motor nerves forming part of general motor system. | Sensory Ganglia, the seat of Sensation, and centre of Consensual (or Instinctive) movements, or of Automatic actions involving sensation. | Radiating fibres to Cerebral Ganglia:—Nerves of Common and Special Sensation; — Motor nerves forming part of general motor system. |
| Afferent and motor nerves of Respiration, Deglutition, &c. — Fibrous strands, connecting the Spinal Cord and Sensory Ganglia. | Respiratory and Stomato-Gastric Ganglia, forming the true centres of the Medulla Oblongata; instruments of Reflex movements or automatic actions independent of sensation. | Fibrous strands, connecting the Spinal Cord and Sensory Ganglia. — Afferent and motor nerves of Respiration, Deglutition, &c. |
| Afferent and motor fibres, forming Trunks of Spinal Nerves. — Fibrous strands, connecting different segments with each other; and with Medulla Oblongata and Sensory Ganglia. | Spinal Ganglion, or True Spinal Cord, consisting of a coalesced series of segmental ganglia, the instruments of Reflex operations, or Automatic actions independent of Sensation. | Fibrous strands, connecting different segments with each other; and with Medulla Oblongata and Sensory Ganglia. — Afferent and motor fibres, forming Trunks of Spinal Nerves. |

The nerves are covered and united to the neighbouring parts by an abundant layer of fatty areolar texture, which sends, inwards, prolongations that separate the nervous cords and filaments from each other. The arterial trunks, which furnish them, transmit branches into their interior. The veins follow the same course as the arteries. Absorbents are not easily traced even on the greatest trunks.

Nervi Molles. 'Soft nerves.' The anterior branches of the superior cervical ganglion of the great sympathetic, which accompany the carotid artery and its branches, around which they form intricate plexuses, and, here and there, small ganglia. They are called molles from their softness, and subrufi, from their reddish hue.

Nervi Odoratorii, Olfactory nerves — n. Reversivi, Laryngeal inferior nerves — n. Subrufi, Nervi molles—n. Vulneratio, Neurotrosis.

NERVINE, Nervi'nus, Neurot'ic, Neurit'ic, Antineurotic, Antineuropath'ic. A medicine which acts on the nervous system.

NERVOUS, Nervo'sus, Neuro'des, Ner'veus, Neu'ricus. Relating or belonging to the nerves. Strong. Also, weak, irritable.

Nervous Attack, (F.) Attaque des nerfs, is an affection accompanied with spasm, pain, and different nervous symptoms, to which impressible individuals are liable.

Nervous Centres, see Centres, nervous.

Nervous Diath'esis is termed Atax'ia spirituum, Anoma'lia nervo'rum, Status nervo'sus, S. erethit'icus, Diath'esis nervo'sa, Constitu'tio nervo'sa, Nervousness. Medically, nervousness means unusual impressibility of the nervous system. Formerly, it signified strength, force, and vigour. Recently, it has been applied to a hypochondriacal condition verging upon insanity, occasionally occurring in those in whom the brain has been unduly tasked;—a condition termed by some cerebrop'athy; by others, brain-fag.

Nervous Diseases, Morbi nervo'si, (F.) Maladies nerveuses. Affections seated in the nervous system. To purely functional disease of the nerves, Dr. Laycock has given the name neuræ'mia, and to the class of diseases he applies the epithet neuræ'mic.

Nervous Fluid, Nervous principle, Flu'idum ner'veum, Liq'uidum nerveum, Succus nerveus, Spir'itus vita'lis. The fluid which is supposed to circulate through the nerves, and which has been regarded as the agent of sensation and motion. Of this fluid we know nothing, except that it resembles, in many respects, the electric or galvanic. It was formerly called Animal spirits, Spir'itus anima'les, (F.) Esprits animaux.

Nervous Pain, Neuralgia.

Nervous Power, Nerve power, Vis nervo'sa seu nervo'rum, Neurodyna'mia, Neurody'namis. The power of the nerves as exhibited in the living organism.

Nervous Principle, N. fluid.

NEURAL; from νευρον, 'a nerve.' Relating to a nerve or to the nervous system.

Neural Arch. The arch formed by the posterior projections connected with the body of the vertebra, which protect the medulla.

Neural Axis. see Encephalon — n. Spines, Spinous processes.

NEURAL'GIA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Rheumatis'mus spu'rius nervo'sus, Neurodyn'ia, (F.) Névralgie, Névrodynie, Nervous pain. A generic name for a certain number of diseases, the chief symptom of which is a very acute pain, exacerbating or intermitting, which follows the course of a nervous branch, extends to its ramifications, and seems, therefore, to be seated in the nerve. The principal neuralgiæ have been distinguished by the names facial (of which the infra-orbitar, maxillary, and frontal are but divisions)—the ilio-scrotal, femoro-popliteal, femoro-pretibial, plantar, and cubito-digital. A division of anomalous neuralgiæ has likewise been admitted.

All varieties of neuralgia are obstinate, and the greatest diversity of means has been made use of:—bleeding, general and local,—emetics, purgatives, rubefacients, vesicants, actual cautery, narcotics, mercurial frictions, electricity; destruction of a portion of the nerve, &c. The most successful remedy, perhaps, is the carbonate of iron, given in doses of some magnitude; as, for instance, ℥ss or ℈ij, twice or thrice a day, in molasses. This plan of treatment, continued for a month or two, will generally relieve, and ultimately remove this much dreaded affection. The mode in which it acts is by no means clear; but it is almost as certain as any other remedy used in disease in producing its salutary effects. The bowels must be kept free; and all inflammatory symptoms removed during its administration.

Neural'gia, Anom'alous. Under this name Chaussier has included different neuroses, some of which are characterized by acute pains circumscribed within a short compass, or extending by irradiations, but not having their seat in the course of a nerve; and others which are occasioned by tumours in the course of a nerve, or which succeed contusions or incomplete divisions of nerves.

Neuralgia Brachialis, Brachialgia—n. Brachio-thoracica, Angina pectoris — n. Cruralis, N. femoro-tibialis.

Neuralgia Cu'bito-digitalis, Is'chias nervo'sa digita'lis. In this variety the pain extends from the part where the nerve passes under the inner condyle to the back of the hand and to its cubital edge.

Neuralgia Dentalis, Odontalgia nervosa.

Neuralgia, Fa'cial, Neuralgia fa'ciei, Trismus maxilla'ris, T. Dolorif'icus, Opsial'gia, Dolor cru'cians faciei, Hemicra'nia idiopath'ica, Autal'gia doloro'sa, Tic douloureux, Dolor faciei, Dolor faciei typ'ico characte'rē, D. F. Fothergilli, Trismus clon'icus, T. dolorif'icus, Rheumatis'mus cancro'sus, Rhematis'mus larva'tus, Prosopal'gia, Prosopodyn'ia, Dolor faciei period'icus, Febris top'ica, Ophthalmodyn'ia period'ica, Tortu'ra Oris, Affectus spasmodico-convulsi'vus Labio'rum, is characterized by acute lancinating pains, returning at intervals; and by twinges in certain parts of the face, producing convulsive twitches in the corresponding muscles. It may be seated in the frontal nerve, in the infra-orbitar, or in the maxillary branch of the fifth pair.

Metopodyn'ia, Brow-ague, Neural'gia fronta'lis, Ophthalmodyn'ia, Tic douloureux, Dolor period'icus, &c., commences at the superciliary foramen and extends along the ramifications of the frontal nerve that are distributed on the forehead, upper eyelid, caruncula lacrymalis, and nasal angle of the eyelids. Sometimes it is felt particularly in the orbit.

Neuralgia infra-orbita'ria, Dolor faciei atrox, Rheumatis'mus cancro'sus, Trismus clon'icus, Prosopal'gia, Febris top'ica, Odontal'gia remit'tens et intermit'tens, Hemicra'nia sæva, Infra-orbitar neuralgia, Tic douloureux, is chiefly felt in the infra-orbitar foramen, whence it passes to the cheek, upper lip, ala nasi, lower eyelid, &c.

In Neuralgia maxilla'ris, Gnathal'gia, Gnathoneural'gia, Tic douloureux, Trismus catarrha'lis maxillaris, the pain usually sets out from the mental foramen and passes to the chin, lips, temple, teeth, and tongue.

Neuralgia, False. A term assigned to pains along a nerve or its ramifications, produced by some body compressing it,—those pains terminating with the removal of the compressing cause.

Neuralgia Fem'oro-poplitæ'a, Sciat'ica, Schias, Malum ischiad'icum, Morbus ischiad'icus, Passio ischiad'ica, Ischiagra, Ischial'gia. Ischio'sis, Coxal'gia, Neural'gia Ischiadica, Dolor Ischiad'icus nervo'sus, Is'chias nervo'sa Cotugnii vel Cotunnii, Neurisch'ias, Ischias nervo'sa posti'ca, Is'chias, Cox'agra, Ischias rheumat'icum, Ischiat'ica, Ischoneural'gia, (F.) Sciatique, Goutte sciatique. This is characterized by pain following the great sciatic nerve from the ischiatic notch to the ham, and along the peroneal surface of the leg to the sole of the foot.

Neuralgia Fem'oro-prætibia'lis, N. crural, Ischias nervo'sa anti'ca, Scelal'gia anti'ca. In this, the pain, setting out from the groin, spreads along the fore part of the thigh, and passes down, chiefly, on the inner side of the leg, to the inner ankle and back of the foot.

Neuralgia of the Heart, Angina pectoris—n. Hepatica, Hepatalgia.

Neuralgia Ilio-Scrotal has been rarely observed. It is characterized by a very acute pain, in the course of the branches of the first lumbar pair; this pain follows the crista ilii and accompanies the spermatic vessels to the testicle, which is often painfully retracted.

Neuralgia, Lead, see Lead rheumatism — n. Lienis, Splenalgia.

Neural'gia Mammæ, Ir'ritable breast. An exceedingly painful affection of the female mamma, unaccompanied by inflammation.

Neuralgia Planta'ris. This is rare; and the pain is confined to the course of the plantar nerves.

NEURALGIA RENUM, Nephralgia — n. Spinalis, Spinal irritation—n. Testis, Orchidalgia.

NEURASTHENI'A, Neuradyna'mia, Debil'itas nervo'sa. Debility or impaired activity of the nerves; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and ασθενεια, 'debility.'—See Irritable.

NEURICUS, Nervous.

NEURILEMM'A, Neurile'ma, Neurily'ma, Neu'rymen, Perineu'rion, Fis'tula seu Tu'bulus seu Cap'sula seu Involu'crum nervo'rum, Membra'na seu Membran'ula seu Tu'nica seu Indumen'tum nervo'rum, Vagi'na nervo'rum; (F.) Névrilemme; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and λεμμα, 'a coat.' The fine transparent, and apparently fibrous membrane that surrounds the nerves—to every filament of which it forms a true canal.

NEURILEMMATITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEURILEMMI'TIS, Neurilemmati'tis, Neurolemmati'tis, Neurili'tis, (F.) Névrilemmite. Same etymon. Inflammation of the neurilemma.

NEURILITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEURILYMA, Neurilemma.

NEURINE, Medull'a nervo'rum, (F.) Névrine. The substance of which the nervous system is composed. It consists chiefly of albumen and a peculiar fatty matter, associated with phosphorus. There are two kinds of neurine—the one vesicular or consisting essentially of nerve vesicles or nerve cells or corpuscles, or, as they are sometimes called, from their prevailing in the ganglia —ganglion corpuscles and ganglion globules; the other, the tubular; formed—as the word imports —of tubules. The former is the cineritious or cortical nervous matter of the older anatomists;—the latter, the white or medullary. The vesicular neurine appears to be concerned in the production and distribution of nerve-power; the tubular, in its conduction.

NEURISCHIAS, Neuralgia femoro-poplitæa.

NEURITIC, Nervine.

NEURI'TIS, Inflamma'tio nervo'rum, Neurophlogo'sis, Neurophleg'monē, (F.) Inflammation des Nerfs, Névrite, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a nerve.

NEUROBLACI'A, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and βλακεια, 'stupor.' Insensibility of the nerves.

NEUROCHONDRO'DES, from νευρον, 'a sinew,' χονδρος, 'a cartilage,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' A hard substance between a sinew and a cartilage.

NEURODES, Nervous.

NEURODYNAMIA, Nervous power.

NEURODYNAMIS, Nervous power.

NEURODYNIA, Neuralgia.

NEUROGAMIA, Magnetism, animal.

NEUROG'RAPHY, Neurograph'ia; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which describes the nerves.

NEURO-HYPNOTISM, see Magnetism, animal.

NEUROLEMMATITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEUROL'OGY, Neurolog''ia, (F.) Névrologie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' That part of anatomy which treats of the nerves.

NEURO'MA, (F.) Névrôme, from νευρον, 'a nerve.' A morbid enlargement of a nerve. Applied to subcutaneous, circumscribed, and highly painful tumours formed on the tissue of the nerves; and likewise to small, hard, grayish tumours of the size of a pea, which are observed in the course of nerves, and appear to be formed from the neurilemma.

NEUROMALA'CIA; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and μαλακια, 'softening.' Softening of nerves.

NEUROMETRES, Psoæ.

NEUROMYELI'TIS, from νευρον, 'a nerve, μυελος, 'marrow,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the medullary matter of the nerves.

NEURON, see Nerve.

NEURON'OSOS, Neuronu'sos, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' A disease of the nerves.

NEURONYG'MĒ, Neuronyg'mus, Neuronyx'is, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and νυγμη, 'puncture;' Punc'tio nervi. Puncture of a nerve.

NEUROPATH'IC, Neuropath'icus, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and παθος, 'a disease.' Belonging to disease of the nerves, to Neuropathi'a or Neuron'osos.

NEUROPHLEGMONE, Neuritis.

NEUROPHLOGOSIS, Neuritis.

NEUROPLAS'TY, Neuroplas'ticē, (F.) Névroplastie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and πλαστικος, 'forming.' M. Serres applies this term to a ganglionary alteration of the peripheral nerves.

NEUROPYRA, Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEUROPYRETUS, Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEURO'SES, (F.) Névroses, from νευρον, 'a nerve.' A generic name for diseases supposed to have their seat in the nervous system, and which are indicated by disordered sensation, volition, or mental manifestation; without any evident lesion in the structure of the parts, and without any material agent producing them. Such is the usual definition. Broussais attributes them to a state of irritation of the brain and spinal marrow.

NEURO-SKELETON, see Skeleton.

NEUROSPASMI, see Spasm.

NEUROSTHENI'A, (F.) Névrosthénie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and σθενεια, 'strength.' Excess of nervous irritation. Nervous irritation.

NEUROTHELIC APPARATUS, Corpus papillare.

NEUROTIC, Nervine.

NEUROT'ICA. Diseases of the nervous function. The 4th class of Good's Nosology.

NEU'ROTOME, Neurot'omus; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and τεμνω, 'I cut,' 'I dissect.' An instrument used by anatomists to dissect the nerves. It is a long and very narrow scalpel, having two edges.

NEUROT'OMY, Neurotom'ia, (F.) Névrotomie. Same etymon. Dissection of the nerves. Also, an incised wound of a nerve.

NEUROTRO'SIS, Neurotros'mus, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and τρωσις, 'wounding.' Nervi vulnera'tio. Wound or wounding of a nerve.

NEUROTROSMUS, Neurotrosis.

NEURYMEN, Neurilemma.

NEUTA, Neutha. A membrane, according to Paracelsus, which covers the eyes and ears of the fœtus in utero.

NEUTRAL, from neuter, 'neither.' Belonging to neither in particular.

NEUTRAL SALTS, Sec'ondary salts, (F.) Sels neutres. Salts, composed of two primitive saline substances, combined together, and not possessing the characters of acid or of base.

NEVIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Thermal springs in the department of Allier, France. Temperature, 136° to 148° Fahrenheit.

NÉVRALGIE, Neuralgia—n. du Foie, Hepatalgia—n. des Reins, Nephralgia—n. de l'Utérus, Hysteralgia.

NÉVRILEMME, Neurilemma.

NÉVRILEMMITE, Neurilemmitis.

NÉVRINE, Neurine.

NÉVRITE, Neuritis.
NÉVRODYNIE, Neuralgia.
NÉVROLOGIE, Neurology.
NÉVROME, Neuroma.
NÉVROSE DU CŒUR, Angina pectoris.
NÉVROSES, Neuroses.
NÉVROSTHÉNIE, Neurosthenia.
NÉVROTOME, Neurotome.
NÉVROTOMIE, Neurotomy.
NEVUS, Nævus.

NEW JERSEY, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the upper part of Morris county and in the county of Hunterdon, near the top of Musconetcong mountain, there are chalybeate springs, which are resorted to. See Schooley's Mountain.

NEW YORK, MINERAL WATERS OF. The chief waters are those of Ballston, Saratoga, and Sharon.

NEXUS STAMINEUS OCULI, Ciliary body.
NEZ, Nasus.
NIANDRIA ANOMALA, Anisodus luridus.
NICARAGUA WOOD, see Cæsalpinia.

NICE, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Nice possesses some advantages over the neighbouring climates of Provence and Italy, being free from the sirocco of the latter, and protected from the mistral of the former. Spring is the most unfavourable season. The climate is very dry. It has been a great winter retreat for the consumptive; but does not deserve the encomiums that have been passed upon it.

NICKAR TREE, Gymnocladus Canadensis.

NICODE'MI O'LEUM, Oil of Nicode'mus. An oil made by digesting, for some time,—in a mixture of white wine and olive oil,—old turpentine, litharge, aloes, saffron, oxyd of zinc, &c.

NICOTIANA, N. tabacum—n. Minor, N. rustica.

NICOTIA'NA RUS'TICA, called after Nicot, who carried it to Europe; N. minor, Priapei'a, Hyoscy'amus lu'teus, English Tobacco. The leaves possess the properties of tobacco, but are milder.

NICOTIANA TAB'ACUM, Nicotia'na, Herba tabaci, Tabacum, Petum, Petun, Hyoscy'amus Peruvia'nus, Tobacco, Virgin'ia tobacco, (F.) Tabac, Nicotiane. Tobacco is a violent acro-narcotic; its properties seeming to depend upon a peculiar principle, Nicotin or Nicotianin. It is narcotic, sedative, diuretic, emetic, cathartic, and errhine. In incarcerated hernia, it is injected, in the form of smoke or infusion, but requires great caution. It is extensively and habitually used as an errhine and sialogogue. The infusion is used to kill vermin, and in some cutaneous eruptions.

NICOTIANE, Nicotiana tabacum.
NICOTIANIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.
NICOTIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.
NICTATIO, Hippus, Nictatio.

NICTA'TION, Nicta'tio, Nictita'tio, from nictare, 'to wink.' Clonus nictita'tio, Blepharism'us, Palpebra'tio, Twinkling of the eye, (F.) Clignotement, Clignement, Cillement, Souris. A rapid and repeated movement of the eyelids, which open and shut alternately. As occasionally performed, it is physiological; if repeatedly, a disease. It seems to be executed chiefly by the motor 7th pair of nerves; but it is necessary that the excitor 5th pair should likewise be in a state of integrity.

NIDAMENTUM, Decidua.
NIDOREUX, Nidorous.

NI'DOROUS, Nidoro'sus, (F.) Nidoreux, from Nidor, Cuissa, 'the smell of any thing burnt,' &c. Having the smell of burnt or corrupt animal matter.

NIDUS, Nidus hirundinis.

NIDUS HIRUN'DINIS, Nidus, Swallows' Nest. A deep fossa in the cerebellum—so called from its fancied resemblance—situate between the velum medullare posterius in front, and the nodulus and uvula behind.

NIEDERBRONN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters in the department of Bas-Rhin, France, which contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, and carbonic acid.

NIELLE, Nigella.
NIGELLA, Coptis.

NIGEL'LA, N. Sati'va, Melan'thium, Cumi'num Nigrum, Fennel flower, Nutmeg flower, Devil in a bush, (F.) Nigelle, Nielle. This small southern European and Syrian plant was formerly used medicinally as an expectorant and deobstruent, errhine, sialogogue, &c.

NIGELLE, Nigella.
NIGHT-BLINDNESS, Hemeralopia.
NIGHT EYES, Crusta genu equinæ—n. Mare, Incubus.

NIGHTSHADE, AMERICAN, Phytolacca decandra—n. Bittersweet, Solanum dulcamara—n. Common, Solanum—n. Deadly, Atropa belladonna—n. Enchanter's, Circæa Lutetiana—n. Garden, Solanum—n. Palestine, Solanum sanctum—n. Stinking, Hyoscyamus niger—n. Vine, Solanum dulcamara—n. Woody, Solanum dulcamara.

NIGREDO À SOLE, Ephelides.
NIGRITA, Negro.

NIGRITIES, Melanopathia—n. Ossium, Caries.

NIGRITISM, Melanopathia.

NIGRITUDO, Melanosis—n. Pulmonum, Melanosis pulmonum.

NIGROMANTIA, Necromancy.
NIGROR, Melasma.
NIGRUM OCULI, Pupil.

NIHIL ALBUM, Zinci oxydum—n. Griseum, Zinci oxydum.

NILIACUM, Mel.
NINDSIN, Sium ninsi.
NINE-DAY FITS, Trismus nascentium.
NINSI, Sium ninsi.
NINSING, Panax quinquefolium.
NINZIN, Sium ninsi.

NIPPLE, Sax. nypele. The Teat, Tit, Dug, Pap, Acromas'tium, Uber, Staph'ylis, Staphyl'ium, Bubona, Mammil'la, Mammel'la, Papil'la, Thelē, Tit'thē, Titthos, Tit'thion, Titthis, (F.) Mamelon. The conical tubercle, situate at the centre of the breast. Towards the central part of each breast the skin changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint in young females, or a reddish brown in those who have suckled several children. The circle is called the Areola or Aureola of the nipple. The nipple is capable of erection on being excited.

NIPPLEWORT, Lapsana.
NIRLES, Herpes exedens.

NISUS, Nixus, Peira, Straining, from Lat. nitor, 'to endeavour.' A voluntary retention of the breath, so as to force down the diaphragm; the abdominal muscles being at the same time contracted forcibly. In this manner the contents of the abdomen are compressed; and the evacuation of the fæces, urine, &c., is effected.

NISUS, Effort—n. Formativus, Plastic force.

NISUS PARTURIENTIUM. The efforts or forcing during parturition.

NITEDULA, Cicindela.

NITON, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs in the Isle of Wight contain iron, and sulphate of alumina and potassa.

NITRAS KALICUM, Potassæ nitras—n. Lixiviæ, Potassæ nitras—n. Natricum, Soda, nitrate of—n. Plumbicus, Plumbi nitras—n. Potassæ cum sulphure fusus, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus — n. Sub-bismuthicum, Bismuth, sub-nitrate of.

NI'TRATE, Nitras. A salt, formed of a base and nitric acid. Several nitrates are employed in medicine.

NITRATE D'AMMONIAQUE, Ammoniæ nitras — n. D'Argent, Argenti nitras.

NITRE, Potassæ nitras — n. Cubic, Soda, nitrate of.

NITRIC ACID, Acidum ni'tricum, A. azo'ticum, A. sep'ticum, A. nitri, Aqua fortis, Nitrous acid, Spir'itus nitri duplex, Sp. nitri fumans, Sp. nitri Glaube'ri, Azot'ic acid, Dephlogisticated nitrous acid, Oxysepton'ic acid, Spir'itus nitri ac''idus, (F.) Acide nitrique. Nitric acid is obtained from nitre—Nitrate of potassa. Its odour is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is corrosive, liquid, colourless, and transparent. S. g. 1.500.

Strong nitric acid is rarely used except as an application to foul, indolent ulcers, or to warts. When given internally, it is in the form of the Acidum ni'tricum dilu'tum, Spir'itus nitri simplex, Sp. nitri vulga'ris—the Diluted nitric acid, which, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, consists of nitric acid, ʒj, water, ʒix, by measure. Diluted largely with water, it is used, as a drink, in fevers of the typhoid kind; in chronic affections of the liver, syphilis, &c.; but, in the latter affections, it is not to be depended upon.

NITROGEN, Azote.

NI'TROGEN, GASEOUS OXIDE OF, Nitrous oxide, Protox'ide of nitrogen or of azote, Paradise gas, Intoxicating gas, Laughing gas, Dephlogisticated nitrous gas, Gas azot'icum oxygena'tum. This gas, when respired, produces singular effects; great mental and corporeal excitement; and, generally, so much exhilaration as to render the appellation, "laughing gas" by no means inappropriate. It has not been much used in medicine, although recommended in paralysis. Its effects are too violent and too transient to render it a valuable remedial agent; and, in the delicate, it has been productive of unpleasant effects, inducing palpitation, fainting, and convulsions.

NITROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITROGÈNE, Azote.

NITROGENIUM, Azote.

NI'TROGENIZED, A'zoted, A'zotized. Containing nitrogen or azote: — as a nitrogenized, azoted, or azotized aliment.

NITRO-MURIAT'IC ACID, Ac''idum nitromuriat'icum, Nitro-hydrochlor'ic acid, Hydrochloro-nitric acid, Aqua regia, Aqua styg''ia, Chrysulca, Aqua regis, Acidum muriaticum nitro'so-oxygena'tum, Mens'truum auri, (F.) Eau régale. A mixture of the nitric and muriatic acids, has been used in diseases of the liver, in the form of a bath for the feet and legs made sharply acidulous. It has, also, been employed, and with more uniform results, in cutaneous affections. Whatever advantage it may possess in internal diseases — and these advantages are doubtful — they are probably dependent upon the chlorine formed by the mixture, or upon the properties possessed by the mineral acids in general. See Chlorine.

The Acidum nitro-muriaticum of the Pharmacopœia of the United States is formed by mixing four fluidounces of nitric acid with eight of muriatic acid.

NITROUS OXIDE, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITRUM, Natron, Potassæ nitras — n. Antiquorum, Soda — n. Cubicum, Soda, nitrate of — ʟ Factitium, Borax — n. Flammans, Ammoniæ nitras — n. Lunare, Argenti nitras — n. Rhomboidale, Soda, nitrate of — n. Saturninum, Plumbi nitras — n. Vitriolatum Schroederi, Potassæ sulphas — n. Tabulatum, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus — n. Vitriolatum, Potassæ sulphas.

NIX, Snow — n. Fumans, Calx viva — n. Zinci Zinci oxydum.

NIXUS, Nisus — n. Parturientium, Nisus parturientium.

NOAH'S ARK, Cypripedium luteum.

NOBLE, Nob'ilis, Prin'cipal, Essen'tial.

NOBLE PARTS, Partes essentia'les. Some anatomists have given this name to parts, without which life cannot exist; such as the heart, liver, lungs, brain, &c. The organs of generation have, likewise, been so called.

NOCAR, νωκαρ, Torpor Soporif'icus. Lethargic torpor.

NOCTAMBULATIO, Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULISMUS, Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULUS, Somnambulist.

NOCTILUCA, Cincindela.

NOCTISURGIUM, Somnambulism.

NOCTUI'NI OC'ULI. Gray or blue eyes. — Castelli.

NOCTURNA BELLA, Coitus.

NOCTUR'NAL, Noctur'nus, Nycter'inus, from nox, 'night.' Relating to night, as Febris noctur'na seu nycter'ina. A fever occurring in the night.

NODDING, Annuitio.

NODDLEPOX, Syphilomania.

NODE, Nodus, Emphy'ma exosto'sis perios'tea, (F.) Nodosité, Nœud; from Hebr. נד, 'a heap.' A hard concretion or incrustation, which forms around joints attacked with rheumatism or gout. Some include, under this name, exostoses, articular calculi, ganglions, and even the chronic swellings of the joints, known under the name of white swellings.

NODES, Edentulus.

NODI DIGITORUM MANUS, Phalanges of the fingers — n. Lactea, Infarctus mammæ lacteus — n. Nervorum, Ganglions, nervous — n. Hæmorrhoidales, see Hæmorrhois.

NODOI, Nefrendes.

NODOSIA, see Nefrendes.

NODOSITÉ, Node.

NOD'ULI ARAN'TII, Noduli Morgagn'ii, Corpora Aran'tii. The small sesamoid bodies situate on the periphery of the semilunar valves of the aorta and pulmonary artery, for the better occlusion of the artery.

NODULI MORGAGNII, Noduli Arantii — n. Nervorum, Ganglions, nervous.

NOD'ULUS, diminutive of nodus, 'a knot.' A small knot. A small prominence or lobule in the portion of the cerebellum, which forms the posterior boundary of the fourth ventricle. The nodulus is on the median line, and before the uvula. See Vermiform process, inferior.

NODUS, Articulation, Edentulus, Encystis, Hamma — n. Cerebri, Pons Varolii — n. Chirurgicus, Knot, surgeon's — n. Encephali, Nœud de l'Encéphale, Pons Varolii — n. Hystericus, Globus hystericus — n. Vitæ, Centrum vitale.

NOESIS, Intellect.

NŒUD, Node — n. du Chirurgien, Knot, surgeon's — n. Emballeur, Knot, packer's.

NŒUD DE L'ENCÉPHALE (F.), Nodus Encephal'ali. M. Cruveilhier, under this name, includes the pons Varolii, pedúncles of the cerebrum and cerebellum, and the tubercula quadrigemina.

NŒUD VITAL, Centrum vitale.

NŒUDS, Calculi, arthritic.

NOISETIER, Corylus avellana.

NOISETTE, Corylus avellana (nut.)

NOIX, Juglans regia (nux)—n. Américaine, Jatropha curcas—n. des Barbades, Jatropha curcas—n. Cathartique, Jatropha curcas—n. d'Eau, Trapa natans—n. de Galle, see Quercus infectoria—n. de Serpent, see Thevetia Ahouai—n. Vomique, see Strychnos nux vomica.

NOLA CULINARIA, Anemone pulsatilla.

NOLI ME TANGERE, Lupus, see Chancreux (Bouton.)

NOMA, Cancer aquaticus—n. Pudendorum, Colpocace infantilis.

NOM'AD, Nom'ade, Nomas, from νομη, 'pasturage.' An epithet given to people who have no fixed habitation, and who travel, with their flocks, from country to country, for pasturage. Such are the Tartars. By analogy, the word Nomad'ic has been applied to spreading ulcer.

NOMBRIL, Umbilicus—n. de Vénus, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NOME, Cancer aquaticus, Phagedenic ulcers.

NO'MENCLATURE, Nomencla'tio, Nomenclatu'ra, Onomatolog''ia, Onomatocle'sis, Termon'ology, Terminol'ogy, Orismol'ogy, from ονομα, 'name,' and καλεω, 'I call.' A collection of terms or words peculiar to a science or art. In all sciences, nomenclature is an object of importance; and each term should convey to the student a definite meaning. The Lavoisierian nomenclature was a valuable gift to chemistry; and anatomy has derived advantage from the labours of Barclay, Dumas, and Chaussier, who have given names to parts indicative of their situation. See Muscle. The nomenclature of pathology has required the greatest attention; and although repeated attempts have been made to improve it, the barbarous terms that disgrace it are still frequently adopted. It consists of Hebrew and Arabic terms; Greek and Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, German, English, and even Indian, African, and Mexican; often barbarously and illegitimately compounded. A want of principle in founding the technical terms of medicine is every where observable. They have been formed:—1. From colour; as Melæna, Melas, Atrabilis, Leuce, Alphos, Chlorosis, Rubeola, Scarlatina, Purpura, &c. 2. From duration; as ephemeral, quotidian, tertian, and quartan, continued, and intermittent, &c. 3. From Birds, Beasts, Fishes, Insects, and Plants; as Rabies canina, Cynanche, Boulimia, Pica, Hippopyon, Elephantiasis, Urticaria, Lichen, Ichthyosis, &c. 4. From Persons or Places; as Morbus Herculeus, Facies Hippocratica, Lepra Arabum, Plica Polonica, Sudor Anglicus, Morbus Gallicus, Ignis Sancti Antonii, Chorea Sancti Viti, &c.

NOMUS, Cancer aquaticus.

NON-NAT'URALS, Non natura'lia. Under this term the ancient physicians comprehended air, meat, and drink, sleep and watching, motion and rest, the retentions and excretions, and the affections of the mind. They were so called, because they affect man without entering into his composition, or constituting his nature; but yet are so necessary that he cannot live without them.

NON-SANE, Insane.

NON-STRIATED MUSCULAR FIBRE, see Muscular fibre.

NONUS HUMERI PLACENTINI, Teres minor—n. Linguæ musculus, Genio-glossus—n. Vesalii, Peronæus tertius.

NOOS, Intellect.

NORMA VERTICALIS, see Normal.

NORMAL, Norma'lis, from norma, 'a perpendicular,' 'a rule.' According to rule; perpendicular.

The normal line, norma vertica'lis, of Blumenbach, is a vertical line let fall from the prominence of the frontal bone and shaving the superior maxillary, so as to mark the projection of the latter bone beyond the arch of the forehead.

NORRIS'S DROPS, see Antimonium tartarizatum.

NORTON'S DROPS, Liquor hydrargyri oxymuriatis.

NOSACERUS, Sickly.

NOSE, Nasus—n. Bleed, Epistaxis—n. Running at the, Coryza.

NOSELI'A, Nosocome'sis, Nosocomia, from νοσος, 'disease.' Care of the sick.

NOSEMA, Disease.

NOSENCEPH'ALUS, from νοσος, 'disease,' and εγκεφαλος, 'brain.' A monster whose skull is open only on the frontal and parietal regions, the posterior fontanelle being distinctly present.

NOSEROS, Insalubrious, Sick.

NOSEUMA, Disease.

NOSOCOMESIS, Noselia.

NOSOCOMIA, Noselia.

NOSOCO'MIAL, Nosocomia'lis, from nosocomium, 'an hospital.' Relating to an hospital,—as 'nosocomial or hospital fever.'

NOSOCOMIUM, Hospital.

NOSOCOMUS, Infirmier.

NOSODES, Insalubrious, Sick, Sickly.

NOSODOCHIUM, Hospital.

NOSOGENESIS, Pathogeny.

NOSOGENIA, Pathogeny.

NOSOGENY, Pathogeny.

NOSOG'RAPHY, Nosograph'ia, from νοσος, 'a disease,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' A description of diseases.

NOSOL'OGY, Nosolog''ia, from νοσος, 'a disease, and λογος, 'a discourse. A name given to that part of medicine whose object is the classification of diseases. The most celebrated nosological systems have been those of Sauvages (1763), Linnæus (1763), Vogel (1764), Sagar (1776), Macbride (1772), Cullen (1772), Darwin (1796), Selle, Crichton (1804), Parr (1809), Swediaur (1812), Pinel (1813), Young (1813), Good (1817), Hosack (1818), &c. Besides these general nosographies, others have been published on Surgery exclusively, none of which are particularly worthy of enumeration amongst nosological systems. Nosological arrangements have, also, been formed of single families or groups of diseases. Plenck, of Baden, is the author of two different treatises of this kind: the one, a methodical arrangement of the diseases of the eyes, and the other, of cutaneous diseases. Dr. Willan published an arrangement of cutaneous diseases, which was completed by Dr. Bateman, and adopted into the Nosology of Dr. Hosack. Mr. Abernethy, also, published a methodical classification of tumours, and many other partial nosological classifications might be enumerated. Also, Pathology.

NOSON'OMY, Nosonom'ia, from νοσος, 'a disease,' and ονομα, 'name.' The nomenclature of diseases.

NOSOPH'YTA, from νοσος, 'disease,' and φυτον, 'a plant.' A disease supposed to be produced by, or to consist in the development of parasitic plants—as porrigo, mentagra, &c.—Gruby.

NOSOPŒ'US, Nosopoët'icus, from νοσος, 'disease,' and ποιεω, 'I make.' That which causes disease.

NOSOS, Disease.

NOSOTAX'Y, Nosotax'ia, from νοσος, 'a disease,' and ταξις, 'arrangement.' The distribution and classification of diseases.

NOSOTHEO'RIA, from νοσος, 'disease,' and θεωρια, 'doctrine.' The doctrine or theory of disease.

NOSTAL'GIA, from νοστος, 'return,' 'a journey home,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Nostoma'nia, Nos-

tras'sia, Apodemial'gia, Pathopatridal'gia, Patopatridal'gia, Philopatridal'gia, Philopatridoma'nia, Ademon'ia, Ademos'ynē, Home-sickness, (F.) Nostalgie, Maladie du pays. An affection produced by the desire of returning to one's country. It is commonly attended by slow wasting, and sometimes by hectic, which may speedily induce death. M. Pinel properly regards it as a variety of melancholy.

NOSTOMANIA, Nostalgia.

NOSTRASSIA, Nostalgia.

NOSTRILS, Nares.

NOSTRUM, Arcanum.

NOSTRUM, CHITTICK'S. An empirical remedy for stone in the bladder, said to be a solution of alkali in veal-broth.

NOTA MATERNA, Nævus — n. Primitiva, Groove, primitive.

NOTÆ INFANTUM, Nævi.

NOTAL, Dorsal.

NOTAL'GIA, Notial'gia, (Nostalgia, improperly, of Köchlin and others,) from νωτος, 'the back,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the back. Spinal irritation.

NOTANENCEPHALIA, see Notencephalus.

NOTCH, Teut. Nocke, Ital. Nocchia, Emargina'tio, Emarginatu'ra, (F.) Échancrure. A depression or indentation of different shape and size, observed on the circumference or edges of certain bones.

NOTCH OF THE CONCHA, Incisura tragica.

NOTCH, ETHMOID'AL, (F.) Échancrure ethmoïdale, is situate on the frontal bone, and joins the ethmoid.

NOTCHES, ISCHIAT'IC, (F.) Échancrures Ischiatiques, are two in number: — the greater and the less. The former is large, situate at the inferior part of the pelvis, and formed by the sacrum and ilium. It gives passage to the sciatic nerve, pyramidalis muscle, and to the superior gluteal vessels and nerves. The latter is much smaller than the other, from which it is separated by the sciatic spine. It gives passage to the tendon of the obturator internus, and to the internal pudic vessels and nerves.

NOTCH, PAROT'ID, (F.) Échancrure parotidienne, is the triangular space comprised between the parotid edge of the inferior maxillary bone and the mastoid process; so called, because it lodges the parotid gland. The notches in soft parts are generally called Fissures.

NOTCH, SCAP'ULAR, Incisu'ra scapula'ris, Lu'nula scap'ulæ, (F.) Échancrure scapulaire. The notch on the superior edge or costa of the scapula, which is converted into a foramen by means of a ligament, and gives passage to the suprascapular nerve.

NOTCH, SEMILUNAR OF THE STERNUM, Fourchette.

NOTENCEPHALIA, see Notencephalus.

NOTENCEPH'ALUS, from νωτος, 'the back,' and εγκεφαλον, 'the head.' A monster whose head, with the brain, is on the back. The condition is termed Notencepha'lia and Notanencepha'lia. — G. St. Hilaire.

NOTHEUSIS, Degeneration.

NOTHIA, Degeneration.

NOTHROTES, Torpor.

NOTHUS, False.

NOTLÆUS, Dorsal — n. Myelus, Medulla spinalis.

NOTIALGIA, Notalgia.

NOTOMYELITIS, Myclitis.

NOTOMYELUS, Medulla spinalis.

NOTON, Dorsum.

NOTOS, Dorsum, Vertebral column.

NOUAGE DE LA CORNÉE, Caligo.

NOUÉ, (Bandage) (F.); 'knotted,' from nodus, 'a knot.' A bandage which has a considerable number of knots placed above each other. It is made with a roller, 6 or 7 ells long, rolled into two balls, and is used to compress the parotid region, after the extirpation of the parotid gland.

Also, an epithet applied to children in whom the disease of rickets has swollen the articulations.

It is, likewise, applied to the gout, when it has caused nodes on the joints.

NOUET (F.), Nod'ulus. A bag filled with medicinal substances, and infused in a liquid to communicate their properties to it.

NOUFFER'S, MADAME, REMEDY, Polypodium filix mas.

NOURRICE, Nurse.

NOURRICIER, Nutritious.

NOURRITURE, Aliment.

NOUS, Intellect.

NOUURE, Rachitis.

NOUVEAU-NÉ (F.), Neona'tus, nuperrimè Natus, Neog'enes, Neog'iles, Neog'ilus, Neog'nus, Infans recens natus. That which has been just born. A new-born infant.

NOVACULA, Razor.

NOYAU, see Cytoblast.

NOYAU CENTRAL DES PÉDONCULES DU CERVELET, Corpus dentatum.

NOYER, Juglans regia — n. de Ceylon, Adhatoda.

NUAGE, Nebula.

NUBECULA, Enæorema, Nebula.

NUBES, Enæorema, Nebula.

NU'BILE, Nu'bilis, 'marriageable,' 'fit to marry.' Generally, the period of puberty is considered to be the age at which both sexes are nubile. They are truly nubile, however, only when they are fitted to procreate healthy and vigorous children, and are competent to discharge their duties as parents.

NUBIL'ITY, Nubil'itas, (F.) Nubilité; same etymon. The state of being nubile or marriageable.

NUBILOSUS, Nepheloid.

NUCES AQUATICÆ, see Trapa natans — n. Querefis, see Quercus alba.

NUCHA, In'ium, (F.) Nuque. The nuke, hinder part, or nape of the neck. The part where the spinal marrow begins.

Ligamen'tum Nuchæ. A strong ligament from the neck, proceeding from one spinous process to another, and inserted into the occipital bone. It is very strong in quadrupeds. It is called in them Paxywaxy, Paxwax, and Packwax.

NUCHAL RE'GION, Re'gio nuchæ seu nucha'lis seu occipita'lis infe'rior. The region of the nucha or nape of the neck.

NUCISTA, see Myristica moschata.

NUCK, CANAL OF. A small prolongation of the peritoneum often sent into the inguinal canal of the female fœtus. So called from Nuck, who first described it.

NU'CLEATED, Nuclea'tus, from nucleus, 'a kernel.' Having a nucleus or central particle. Applied to the elementary cells of organized tissues; the vital properties of which are seated in the nucleus. See Cytoblast.

NUCLEATED CELL, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEI CEMBRÆ, see Pinus Cembra — n. Ossei, Ossification, points of — n. Pineæ, see Pinus pinea.

NUCLEOLE, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEOLULE, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEOLUS, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEUS, see Cytoblast — n. Blastodermatis, Tache embryonnaire — n. Centralis, Corpus dentatum — n. Cicatriculæ, Tache embryonnaire — n.

Dentatus, Corpus dentatum — n. Dentis, Dental pulp — n. Encased, Cytoblast — n. Fimbriatus, Corpus dentatum—n. Furunculi, see Furunculus — n. Germinal, see Molecule — n. Germinativus, see Molecule — n. Olivæ, Corpus dentatum — n. Ossificationis, Ossification, point of — n. Rhomboidalis, see Corpus dentatum.

NUCULA TERRESTRIS, Bunium bulbocastanum.

NUKE, Nucha.

NUMERICAL METHOD, see Method, numerical.

NUM'MULAR, Nummula'ris. Relating to money, from nummus, 'money.' An epithet applied to the sputa in phthisis, when they flatten at the bottom of the vessel, like a piece of money.

NUMMULARIA, Lysimachia nummularia.

NUPHAR LUTEUM, Nymphæa lutea.

NUQUE, Nucha.

NURSE, Sax. nonice, Nutrix, (from nourish, itself from nutrire,) Tithe'nē, Trephou'sa, Lactans, Lac'ticans, Nu'triens, Thelas'tria, Mamma, (I.) Nutrice, (F.) Nourrice. One who suckles her own child or another's. One that has the care of a sick person, (F.) Garde-malade.

NURSE, DRY. One who gives every care to a child, but does not suckle it.

NURSE, WET. A female, who suckles the child of another.

To 'nurse artificially,' is to bring up a child by the hand.

NŪS, Intellect.

NUSUS, Disease.

NUTA'TION, Nuta'tio, from nutare, 'to nod.' Constant oscillation of the head, by which it moves involuntarily in one or more directions.

NUTATOR CAPITIS, Sterno-cleido-mastoideus.

NUTMEG, see Myristica moschata—n. Flower, Nigella—n. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

NUTRICATIO, Nutrition.

NUTRICIER, Nutritious.

NUTRICIUS, Nutritious.

NUTRIENS, Aliment, Nurse.

NUTRIMEN, Aliment.

NUTRIMEN'TAL, Nutrimenta'lis, Aliment'al, Alimenta'lis, from nutrimen, 'aliment.' Having the qualities of food or nutriment.

NUTRIMENTUM, Aliment, Pabulum.

NUTRIT''ION, Nutrit''io, Nutrica'tio, Nutri'tus, Alitu'ra, Threpsis, from nutrire, 'to nourish.' Nutrition is that function by which the nutritive matter already elaborated by the various organic actions, loses its own nature, and assumes that of the different living tissues,—to repair their losses and maintain their strength. Sometimes the word is used in a more extended signification, to express the whole series of actions by which the two constant movements of composition and decomposition are accomplished, in organized bodies. Nutrition, then, would comprehend digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, and assimilation; the latter being nutrition, properly so called, and being operated in the intermediate system over the whole of the body,—the cells of the tissues attracting from the blood the elements necessary for their reparation.

NUTRITION, FORCE OF, Plastic force.

NUTRIT''IOUS, Nutric''ius, Nu'tritive, Alib'ilis, Trophi'mos, Tropho'des, (F.) Nourricier, Nutricier. Having the quality of nourishing: as nutritious food, nutritious lymph, &c.

NUTRITIOUS OR NUTRITIVE ARTERIES, (F.) Artères nutricières. Arterial branches which enter the foramina nutricia of long bones, and penetrate to the medullary membrane.

NU'TRITIVE, Nutritious. Also, relating to nutrition: hence the 'nutritive functions,' or those that are concerned in nutrition.

NUTRITUS, Aliment, Nutrition.

NUTRIX, Mamma, Nurse.

NYCTALOPE, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPEX, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALO'PIA, from νυξ, 'night,' and οπτομαι, 'I see;' Parop'sis Lucif'uga, Nyctalopi'asis, Cœ'citas diur'na, Visus noctur'nus, Oxyo'pia, Hemeralo'pia (moderns,) Amblyo'pia meridia'na, Hemeratyphlo'sis, Photophob'ia, Photophobophthal'mia, Dyso'pia lu'minis, Visus a'cerior, Nyc'talopy, (F.) Vue nocturne, Aveuglement de Jour. The faculty of seeing during the night, with privation of the faculty during the day. It affects both eyes at once when idiopathic. Its duration is uncertain, and treatment very obscure. It is, however, a disease of nervous irritability, and one of excitement of the visual nerve in particular. The indications of cure will consequently be — to allay direct irritation in every way; to excite counter-irritation by blisters; and to gradually accustom the eye to the impression of light.

One labouring under this affection is called a Nyc'talope, Nyc'talops, Nyctalo'pex.

NYCTALOPS, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPY, Nyctalopia.

NYCTERINUS, Nocturnal.

NYCTHEMERON, see Dies.

NYCTHE'MERUM, from νυξ, 'night,' and 'ημερα, 'day.' The space of 24 hours, or of a day and night. Certain complaints continue only so long.

NYCTOBADIA, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBASIS, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATESIS, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATIA, Somnambulism.

NYCTOTYPHLOSIS, Hemeralopia.

NYGMA, Wound, punctured.

NYGMATICUM EMPLASTRUM, Emplastrum resinæ.

NYMPHA, Clitoris.

NYMPHÆ, from νυμφη, 'a water nymph.' Alæ inter'næ mino'res clitor'idis, Carun'culæ cuticula'res, Alæ mino'res, A. mulie'bres mino'res, Cristæ clitor'idis, Collic'uli vagi'næ, Myrtochi'la, Myrtocheil'ides, Labia mino'ra seu inter'na, L. puden'di mino'ra, (F.) Nymphes, Petites lèvres. Two membranous folds, which arise from the lateral parts of the prepuce of the clitoris, and descend on the inner surface of the labia majora: terminating, by becoming gradually thinner, about the middle of the circumference of the orifice of the vagina. They are formed each of two folds of the mucous membrane of the vulva; and contain, in their substance, a thin layer of spongy, erectile tissue. Their use seems to be,—not, as was once supposed, to direct the course of the urine, which notion gave rise to their name, but to favour the elongation and dilatation of the vagina in pregnancy and labour.

The word νυμφη, Nymphē, has also been used synonymously with clitoris by Oribasius, Aëtius, &c.

NYMPHÆ'A ALBA, Leuconymphæ'a, Nenu'phar, Microleuconymphæ'a, Casta'lia specio'sa, White Water Lily, (F.) Nénuphar blanc. Nat. Ord. Ranunculaceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia. Formerly employed as a demulcent, antaphrodisiac, emollient, and slightly anodyne remedy.

NYMPHÆA INDICA, N. nelumbo — n. Major lutea, N. lutea.

NYMPHÆA LU'TEA, N. major lutea, N. umbilica'lis, Nuphar lu'teum, Nenu'phar lutea, Nyphozanthus vulga'ris, Yellow Water Lily, (F.) Nénuphar jaune. Used for the same purposes.

NYMPHÆA NELUM'BO, Faba Ægyptiaca, Cy'amus Ægyptiacus, Nymphæ'a In'dica; Pontic or Ægyptian Bean. The fruit of this is eaten raw in Egypt and some of the neighbouring countries; and is considered to be tonic and astringent.

NYMPHÆ'A ODORA'TA, Sweet-scented Water Lily, Sweet water lily, White pond lily, Toad Lily, Cow Cabbage, Water Cabbage, (F.) Nénuphar odorant. An indigenous plant, growing in most parts of the United States in fresh water ponds, and on the borders of streams, and having large white, beautiful, sweet-scented flowers. The root is very astringent and bitter. It is sometimes made into a poultice and used as a discutient.

NYMPHÆA UMBILICALIS, N. lutea.

NYMPHE, Clitoris.

NYMPHES, Nymphæ.

NYMPHI'TIS; from νυμφη, 'the clitoris,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Epiderrhi'tis, Inflamma'tio Clitor'idis. Inflammation of the clitoris.

NYMPHOCLUIA, Nymphomania.

NYMPHOMA'NIA, from νυμφη, 'a bride,' and μανια, 'fury;' Furor uteri'nus, Uteroma'nia, Lagne'sis furor femini'nus, Metroma'nia, Ædœogar'galus, Ædœogaris'mus, Thelygon'ia, Erotoma'nia, Ædœoma'nia, Aidoioma'nia, Melancho'lia uteri'na, Nymphoclu'ia, Sympto'ma turpitu'dinis, Andromania, Gynœcoma'nia, Machlos'ynē, Entelipathi'a, Tenti'go vene'rea, Hysteroma'nia, Salac''itas vulvæ, Uteri pruri'tus, Brachu'na, Aras'con, Arsa'tum, Œstroma'nia, (F.) Nymphomanie, Fureur utérine. An irresistible and insatiable desire, in females, for the venereal act. It occurs in those particularly, who possess a nervous temperament, and vivid imagination, especially if excited by improper language, masturbation, &c. Its course, as described, is as follows. In the commencement, the sufferer is a prey to perpetual contests between feelings of modesty and impetuous desire. At an after period, she abandons herself to the latter, seeking no longer to restrain them. In the last stage the obscenity is disgusting; and the mental alienation, for such it is, becomes complete. The treatment consists in the use of the same means as are required in the satyriasis of man. When the mental alienation is complete, solitude is indispensable.

NYMPHON'CUS, from νυμφη, 'the nympha,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A morbid tumefaction of the nymphæ.

NYMPHOT'OMY, Nymphotom'ia, Nympha'rum Sec'tio, from νυμφη, 'nympha,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' An operation, known and practised for a long time, which consists in the excision of the nymphæ. The operation is had recourse to, when they are attacked with scirrhus, cancer, fungus, or gangrene; or when they are so large as to interfere with walking or coition. Nymphotomy is the circumcision of the female. It is practised in some countries.

Some authors have used the term Nymphotomy for amputation of the clitoris.

NYPHOZANTHUS VULGARIS, Nymphæa lutea.

NYSTAG'MUS. A partial rotatory movement of the eyeball from side to side. Also, Coma vigil.

NYXIS, Puncture.

OARIOCYESIS, Pregnancy, ovarian.

OARION, Ovary.

OARION'CUS, Oariophy'ma, Ova'rium tu'midum, Tumor Ova'rii, from ωαριον, 'the ovarium,' and ογκος, 'swelling.' Ovarian tumour.

OARIOPAREC'TAMA, Oophoraux'ē, from ωαριον, 'ovarium,' and παρεκτεινειν, 'to extend.' Enlargement of the ovary.

OARIORRHEX'IS, from ωαριον, 'ovarium,' and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Ruptu'ra Ova'rii. Rupture of the ovary.

OÄRIOT'OMY, Oariotom'ia, Ovariotom'ia, Ovariot'omy, from ωαριον, 'the ovarium,' and τομη, 'incision.' The operation for removing the ovary.

OARI'TIS, Oöphori'tis, Oori'tis, Inflamma'tio Ova'rii, Ovari'tis, (F.) Inflammation de l'Ovaire, from ωαριον, 'the ovarium,' and itis, the termination denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ovarium.

OARIUM, Ovary.

OARTHROC'ACĒ, formed by contraction from omo-arthrocace. Said to be used by Rust to designate inflammation of the scapulo-humeral articular surfaces. — Nysten.

OATMEAL, see Avena.

OATS, Avena.

OBAUDITIO, Baryecoia.

OBAUDITUS, Baryecoia.

OBCÆCATIO, Cæcitas.

OBDORMIT''IO, from ob, and dormio, 'to sleep.' The state of the limbs being asleep. Stupor ar'tuum.

OBDUCTIO, Autopsia cadaverica legalis.

OBELÆA RAPHE, Sagittal suture.

OBESITAS, Polysarcia — o. Colli, Struma adiposa — o. Nimia, Pimelosis — o. Viscerum, Physconia adiposa.

OBÉSITÉ, Polysarcia.

OBESITY, Polysarcia.

OBESUS, Corpulent.

OBFUSCATIO, Amaurosis.

OBITUS, Death.

OBJECT'IVE CONE. The cone of light proceeding from an object, the apex of which is on the object, and the base on the cornea.

Objective Sensations, see Sensation.

OBLINITIO, Inunction.

OBLIQUE', Obli'quus. Any thing inclined, or which deviates from the vertical line. Anatomists have given this name to certain muscles, which have an oblique direction as regards the plane that divides the body into two equal and symmetrical halves. These are:—

Oblique Muscles of the Abdomen. They are two in number, and distinguished into: 1 Obliquus Exter'nus, Abdom'inis, O. descen'dens exter'nus, O. descendens, O. major, (F.) Ilio-pubo costo-abdom'inal, Costo-abdom'inal (Ch.), Grand oblique, Oblique externe. One of the broadest muscles of the body. It is situate at the lateral and anterior part of the abdomen; and is flat and quadrilateral. It is attached, above, to the outer surface and lower edge of the 7 or 8 last ribs: below, to the anterior third of the external lip of the crista ilii: before, it terminates at the linea alba by means of a broad and strong aponeurosis, which covers the rectus, and presents towards its inferior part two very solid fibrous fasciculi, which are inserted, — the one at the symphysis, the other at the spine of the pubis, — under the name of Pillars of the Abdominal Ring. These pillars leave between them an opening, which forms the inferior orifice of the inguinal canal. The obliquus externus abdominis depresses the ribs, and carries them backwards during a strong expiration. It impresses on the chest a movement of rotation, and bends the thorax upon the pelvis, and conversely. It contracts, also, the abdominal cavity. 2. Obliquus Inter'nus Abdominis, M. accli'vis, O. ascendens, O. minor, O. internus, O. ascendens internus, (F.) Ilio-lombo-costo-abdominal, Ilio-abdominal (Ch.), Muscle petit oblique ou oblique interne, is broad, especially before; thin, and irregularly quadrilateral, like the preceding, beneath which it is situate. It is attached, above, to the inferior edge of the cartilages of the 5th, 4th, 3d, and 2d false ribs; below, to the anterior two-thirds of the interstice of the crista ilii, to the posterior part of the crural arch, and to the pubis; behind, to the spinous processes of the last two lumbar vertebræ, and to those of the first two portions of the sacrum; before, to the linea alba. Its upper fibres run obliquely upwards and forwards; the middle are horizontal; and the lower pass obliquely downwards and forwards.

These last, in the male, are dragged down through the inguinal ring, when the testicle descends, and form the two fasciculi of the cremaster.

The obliquus internus resembles the O. externus in function.

Oblique Muscles of the Eye, Amato'rii, Circumagen'tes, Rotato'res Oc'uli, are two in number. They are distinguished into: 1. Obliquus Superior Oculi, Amato'rius mus'culus, Trochlea'ris, Trochlea'tor, Obliquus major, Circumductio'nis op'ifex, Longis'simus oc'uli, (F.) Optico-trochlei sclérotici-en, Grand trochléateur (Ch.), Grand oblique de l'œil, O. supérieur de l'œil, Amoureux (Muscle,) is situate at the inner and upper part of the orbit. It is small, round, fusiform, and reflected upon itself in the middle of its course. Behind, it is attached to the inside of the foramen opticum; and when it arrives opposite the internal orbitar process, it becomes a small, round tendon, which slides in a cartilaginous pulley fixed to the os frontis, and is reflected, at an acute angle, to proceed downwards and outwards, and to attach itself to the outer and back part of the globe of the eye. This muscle carries the globe of the eye forwards and inwards; making it experience a movement of rotation, which directs the pupil downwards and inwards. This is conceived to be an involuntary muscle as well as the next. In sleep, according to Sir C. Bell, when the power over the straight or voluntary muscles of the organ is nearly lost, the eye is given up to the oblique muscles, which lodge the transparent cornea under the upper eyelid. At the approach of death, the same thing is observable; hence, the turning up of the eye, at such a time, is not an evidence of agony or suffering, but of insensibility. 2. Obli'quus Infe'rior Oc'uli, O. minor oculi, (F.) Maxillo-sclérotici-en, Petit Trochléateur (Ch.), Petit oblique ou oblique inférieur de l'œil, is situate at the anterior and inferior part of the orbit. It is flat and attached to the inner and anterior part of the orbitar surface of the superior maxillary bone, on the outside of the lachrymal gutter; from thence it passes outwards and backwards, and terminates by an aponeurosis, at the posterior and inner part of the globe of the eye. It carries the globe of the eye inwards and forwards; and directs the pupil upwards and outwards.

Oblique Muscles of the Head. These are two in number. 1. Obliquus Superior Cap'itis, O. minor capitis, (F.) Trachélo-atloïdo-occipital, Atloïdo-sous-mastoïdien (Ch.), Muscle oblique superior ou petit oblique de la tête. This muscle is situate at the sides of, and behind, the articulation of the head: it is flat and attached, on the one hand, to the top of the transverse process of the atlas; and, on the other, terminates at the occipital bone, beneath the inferior curved line, and sometimes, also, at the mastoid region of the temporal bone. It extends the head, — inclining it to one side. 2. Obliquus Inferior Capitis, Obliquus major, (F.) Spini-axoïdo-trachéli-atloïdien, Axoïdo-atloïdien (Ch.), Oblique inférieur ou grand oblique de la tête, is situate at the posterior part of the neck and head. It is round, fusiform; attached to the spinous process of the axis, and proceeds to terminate behind and below the summit of the transverse process of the atlas. It impresses, on the first vertebra and the head, a movement of rotation, which turns the face to one side.

Oblique Processes, see Vertebræ.

OBLIQUE EXTERNE, Obliquus externus abdominis — o. Grand, Obliquus externus abdominis — o. Grand de l'œil, Obliquus superior oculi — o. Grand de la tête, Obliquus inferior capitis — o. Inférieur de l'œil, Obliquus inferior oculi — o. Inférieur de la tête, Obliquus inferior capitis— o. Interne, Obliquus internus abdominis—o. Petit, Obliquus internus abdominis — o. Petit de l'œil, Obliquus inferior oculi — o. Petit de la tête, Obliquus superior oculi — o. Supérieur de l'œil, Obliquus superior oculi—o. Supérieur de la tête, Obliquus superior capitis.

OBLIQUITÉ DE LA MATRICE, Retroversio uteri.

OBLIQUUS ASCENDENS, O. internus abdominis — o. Auris, Laxator tympani — o. Descendens externus, O. externus abdominis—o. Major, O. externus abdominis, O. inferior capitis, O. superior oculi — o. Minor, O. internus abdominis — o. Minor capitis, O. superior capitis — o. Minor oculi, O. inferior oculi.

OBLIT'ERATED, Oblitera'tus; from oblitera're, 'to efface,' (literæ, 'letters.'?) A vessel or duct is said to be obliterated, when its parietes have approximated and contracted such an adhesion to each other that the cavity has completely disappeared.

OBLITERATIO COMPLETA, Hapantismus.

OBLIVIO, Amnesia — o. Iners, Lethargy.

OBLOBIUM, Antilobium.

OB'OLUS, Onolosat. A weight of 9 or 10 grains.

OBSCŒNÆ PARTES, Genital organs.

OBSCURCISSEMENT DE LA VUE, Caligo.

OBSERVA'TION, Observa'tio, (from ob, and servare, 'to keep,' e. g. in sight.) Tere'sis, Symparatere'sis. Act of examining a thing by means of the external senses. This word is employed in several acceptations. It expresses—1. The action of observing — 2. The aggregate of knowledge, afforded by observation. In French—but not in English—it means the case or history of the phenomena presented by a patient in the course of a disease.

OBSERVATION, Case — o. Method of, Numerical method.

OBSTET'RIC, Obstet'ricus; same etymon as obstetrics. Relating or appertaining to obstetrics, — as 'obstetric auscultation,' 'obstetric exploration,' &c.

Obstetric Chair, Labour-chair.

OBSTETRICANS, Accoucheur.

OBSTET'RICS, from Obstetrix, 'a midwife.' Tokol'ogy, Tocol'ogy, Maievi'a, Maeevi'a, Maevi'a, Maeeu'tica ars, Ars obstetric''ia, Obstet'riey, (F.) Obsté'trique. The art of midwifery. Midwifery in general.

OBSTETRICY, Obstetrics.

OBSTÉTRIQUE, Obstetrics.

OBSTETRIX, Midwife.

OBSTIPATIO, Constipation — o. Tenesmus, Tenesmus.

Obstipatio, see Hump.

OBSTIPITAS, Torticollis—o. Capitis seu Colli, Torticollis.

OBSTRUCTIO, Emphraxis, Stegnosis—o. Alvi, Constipation — o. Ductûs Alimentarii, Constipation — o. Ductûs Stenoniani, Stenostenosis — o. Intestinalis, Constipation — o. Recti Spastica, Stricture of the Rectum, spasmodic — o. Pulmonum pituitosa febrilis, Peripneumonia notha.

OBSTRUCTION OF THE INTESTINES. Enteremphraxis.

OB'STRUENS, from obstruo, (ob, and struere, 'to build,') 'I stop up by building against.' Oppilati'vus. A medicine which closes the orifices of ducts or vessels.

OBSTUPEFACIENTIA, Narcotics.

OBTONDANT, Obtundens.

OBTUMESCENTIA, Mutitas.

OBTUN'DENS, (F.) Obtondant, from obtundere (ob and tundere, 'to beat,') 'to beat against,' and therefore to blunt the edge. An epithet applied to remedies that were supposed, according to an erroneous theory, to be possessed of the power of blunting the acrimony of the humours. A demulcent is one of these.

OBTURAMENTUM, Emphragma.

OBTURATEUR DU PALAIS, Palate, artificial.

OBTURATIO, Emphraxis.

OBTURA'TOR, Obturato'rius, (F.) Obturateur, from obturare, 'to close,' 'stop up the entrance.' A name given to several parts.

Obturator Artery, Arteria obturato'ria, A. obturatrix, (F.) Sous-pubio fémorale (Ch.), Artère obturatrice, arises, most commonly, from the hypogastric. It is, however, frequently given off from the epigastric; a matter of importance to be determined in cases of femoral hernia. Of 500 obturator arteries examined by Mr. J. Cloquet, 348 were furnished by the hypogastric, and 152 by the epigastric or crural. When it arises from the hypogastric, it passes forwards and outwards, and then turns horizontally into the cavity of the pelvis, to issue from this cavity by the opening left at the upper part of the obturator membrane. When, on the contrary, the obturator artery arises from the epigastric or the crural, it descends obliquely inwards, behind the os pubis, to the obturator foramen. At its exit from the pelvis, the artery divides into two branches, a posterior and an anterior, which are distributed to the muscles of the anterior and superior part of the thigh.

Obtura'tor Fora'men, Fora'men Obturato'rium, F. infra-pubia'num, Fora'men ovalē, F. thyroïdeum, F. Thyroï'des, F. Amplum Pelvis, (F.) Trou sous-pubien. A large opening, of an oval or triangular form, in the anterior part of the os innominatum, on the outside of the symphysis pubis and beneath the horizontal ramus of the os pubis. This foramen is closed by a membranous ligament.

Obturator Ligament or Membrane, Subpubic membrane, is a fibrous membrane, fixed to the whole circumference of the obturator foramen, except above, where an opening remains for the passage of the vessels and nerves of the same name.

Obturator Muscles, Obturato'res, Rotato'res fem'oris. These are two in number. They are divided into a. Obturator Exter'nus, Extra-pelvio-pubi-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien externe (Ch.) A muscle, situate at the anterior and inner part of the thigh. It is broad, flat, and triangular; and is attached, on the one hand, to the anterior surface of the os pubis, to that of the ischium, and to the anterior surface of the obturator ligament. Its fleshy fibres converge to the tendon, which proceeds to be inserted at the inferior part of the cavity of the great trochanter. This muscle rotates the thigh outwards.

b. Obturator Inter'nus, Marsupia'lis, Bursa'lis, Intra-pelvio-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien interne (Ch.) is seated, almost entirely, in the pelvis. It arises from the inner surface of the obturator ligament, and from the posterior part of the circumference of the obturator foramen, and is inserted, by means of a strong tendon, running between the two portions of the gemini, into the cavity at the root of the great trochanter; after having turned upon the ischium, which forms for it a kind of pulley. This muscle also rotates the thigh outwards.

Obturator Nerve, Sous-pubio-fémoral, (Ch.), proceeds principally from the 2d and 3d lumbar nerves. It descends into the pelvis; gains the obturator foramen; gives branches to the obturator muscles, and divides, behind the adductor primus and pectinalis, into two branches; one anterior, whose branches are distributed to the first two adductors, gracilis, and integuments; the other, posterior, distributing its ramifications to the obturator externus and third adductor.

Obturator Vein has, ordinarily, the same arrangement as the artery. It is common, however, to find it arising from the epigastric; whilst the corresponding artery proceeds from the hypogastric, and conversely.

OBTURATORES, Obturator muscles.

OBVOLVENTIA, Demulcents.

OCA, Oxalis tuberosa.

OCCÆCATIO, Cæcitas.

OCCIP'ITAL, Occipita'lis. That which belongs to the occiput.

Occipital Artery. This arises from the posterior part of the external carotid, beneath the parotid. It proceeds backwards, passes between the mastoid process and the transverse process of the atlas; reaches the occipital bone and divides into two branches, which may be called ascending posterior and anterior, and are distributed to the neighbouring muscles and ligaments.

Occip'ital Bone, Os occip'itis seu occipit'ii seu occipita'lē, Os sphæno basila'rē, Os memo'riæ, Os nervo'sum, Os basila'rē, Os prorœ, Os pyx'idis seu sextum cra'nii seu lambdoi'des seu lambdœ seu laudœ seu puppis seu nervo'sum seu fibro'sum seu pelvicephal'icum, (F.) Os occipital, is situate at the posterior and inferior part of the cranium, which it assists in forming. It is flat, symmetrical, and curved upon itself. It presents, 1. An occipital or posterior surface, which is convex, and has, upon the median line, the basilary surface, the foramen magnum, through which passes the spinal marrow with its membranes and vessels,—the external occipital crest, the external occipital protuberance; and, at the sides, the upper curved line, large rough arched ridge or transverse arch or linea semicircularis, the lower curved line, the posterior condyloid fossæ, the condyles for the articulation of this bone with the atlas; and the anterior condyloid fossæ, pierced by a foramen for the passage of the ninth pair of nerves. 2. A cerebral or anterior surface. On the median line are: the basilary fossæ, the inner orifice of the foramen magnum, the internal occipital crest, the internal occipital protuberance, the cruciform spine; a channel, which lodges the termination of the straight sinus, and on each side, the occipital fossæ distinguished into superior or cerebral, and inferior or cerebellous, and separated by a groove which lodges the lateral sinus. 3. The surfaces of the occipital bone are separated by four ridges and four angles. The two superior edges are articulated with the parietal bones; the two lower join the temporal; and the anterior angle, under the name basilary process, is united to the sphenoid.

The occipital bone is developed from four points of ossification; and sometimes from a greater number.

Occipital Muscle, Occipita'lis. Many anatomists have given this name to the posterior fasciculus of the occipito-frontalis.

Occipital Nerve, Sub-occipital nerve, (F.) Première paire trachélienne (Ch.), Nerf occipital ou sous occipital. It arises from the upper part of the spinal marrow by eight or ten filaments, united in two fasciculi. Thus formed, it passes between the foramen magnum and the posterior arch of the atlas; and, at this place, forms a long ganglion, afterwards dividing into two branches. Of these, the anterior, which is long and small, makes a turn above the transverse process of the atlas, and forms an anastomotic noose with a branch of the second cervical nerve. The posterior branch, larger and shorter, divides into seven or eight branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the upper and back part of the neck.

Occipital Region, Occiput.

Occipital Vein. Its roots follow exactly the course of the branches of the artery, and unite into a single trunk, which opens into the internal jugular vein, and sometimes into the external.

OCCIPITIUM, Occiput.

OCCIP'ITO-AT'LOID, Occipito - atloïdeus, (F.) Occipito-atloïdien. That which has reference to the occiput and atlas.

Occipito-Atloid Articulation is the articulation of the condyles of the occipital bone with the superior articular cavities of the atlas. It is strengthened by two ligaments; the one anterior, the other posterior, called occipito-atloid ligaments: the one extends from the anterior, the other from the posterior, arch of the atlas, to the corresponding portion of the circumference of the foramen magnum.

OCCIP'ITO-AX'OID, Occipito-axoïdeus, (F.) Occipito-axoïdien. That which relates to the occipital bone and the axis or second vertebra.

Occipito-Axoid Articulation is the connexion of the occipital bone with the axis or second vertebra, although these bones are not really articulated, but are merely retained in apposition by three strong ligaments, the posterior of which is called the occipito-axoid, and the two others odontoid.

OCCIPITO-FRONTA'LIS, Digas'tricus cra'nii, Epicra'nius, Fronta'lis et occipitalis. The majority of anatomists call by this name the whole of the fleshy plane, with the epicranial or coronal aponeurosis, (see Calotte,) which covers the head from the occiput to the forehead. It is attached, by its posterior fasciculus, to the two outer thirds of the upper curved line of the occipital bone, and to the outer surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal; and, by its anterior fasciculus, it terminates at the eyebrow, where it becomes confounded with the superciliaris, pyramidalis nasi, and orbicularis palpebrarum.

The occipito-frontalis, by the contraction of its anterior fasciculus, draws forward a part of the integuments of the cranium. It wrinkles the skin of the forehead transversely, and may, also contribute to open the eye by its decussation with the orbicularis palpebrarum. The posterior fasciculus of the muscle draws backwards a part of the skin of the cranium, and assists in stretching the common aponeurosis.

OCCIP'ITO-MENINGE'AL. That which belongs to the occipital bone, and to the meninge or dura mater.

Occipito-meningeal Artery, in Chaussier's nomenclature, is a branch of the vertebral, given off to the dura mater at its entrance into the cranium.

OC'CIPUT, Occipit'ium, Regio occipita'lis, In'ion, from ob, and caput, Opisthocra'nium, Opisthoceph'alon, Prora, Occipi'tium. The back part of the head, formed by the occipital bone.

Occiput, Soft, Craniotabes.

OCCLU'SION, Occlu'sio, Mycē, from occludere, 'to shut up.' Sometimes this word signifies, simply, the transient approximation of the edges of a natural opening—the occlusion of the eyelids, for example; at others it is synonymous with imperforation, as occlusion of the pupil, vagina, &c.

OCCULT DISEASES, see Latent.

OCHEMA, Vehicle.

OCHETEUMATA, Nares.

OCHETOS, Canal.

OCHEUS, Scrotum.

OCHLE'SIS, from ὀχλος, 'a crowd.' A term, applied by Dr. George Gregory to a morbid condition induced by the crowding together of sick persons under one roof.

OCHREA RUBRA, Hæmatites.

OCHRIASIS, Paleness.

OCHROMA, Paleness.

OCHROPYRA, Fever, yellow.

OCHROTES, Paleness.

OCHROTYPHUS, Fever, yellow.

OCHTHODES, Callous.

OCIMUM ADSCENDENS, O. Basilicum.

Oci'mum Basil'icum, O. adscen'dens seu pilo sum seu racemo'sum, Basil'icum, Beren'daros, Basil'icum majus, B. citra'tum, Oci'mum citra'tum, Common or Citron basil, (F.) Basilic commun. Nat. Ord. Labiatæ. Sex. Syst. Didynamia Gymnospermia. This herb has a fragrant odour and aromatic taste. It is used as a condiment, and has been supposed to possess nervine properties.

Ocimum Caryophylla'tum, O. min'imum, Small or Bush basil. Possesses properties similar to the former. It is sometimes used as snuff.

Ocimum Citratum, O. Basilicum—o. Pilosum, O. Basilicum—o. Racemosum, O. Basilicum.

OCOTEA PICHURIN, see Pichurim beans.

OCREA, Hippocampus minor, Shin.

OCTA'NA, Hebdomada'ria, Febris hebdomada'ria, from octo, 'eight.' A fever whose paroxysms recur every week. A supposititious case.

OCTA'RIUS. The eighth part of a wine-gallon. It contains sixteen fluidounces, (Ph. U. S.) to 20 fluidounces imperial measure.

OCTOPUS, Synapheocephalus, Hemipages.

OCTUNX. A weight of eight ounces.

OC'ULAR, Ocula'ris; from oculus, 'an eye.' Of or belonging to the eye.

Ocular Cone. The cone formed within the eye by a pencil of rays proceeding from an object; the base of the cone being on the cornea, —the apex on the retina.

OCULARES COMMUNES, Motores oculorum —o. Dentes, Canine teeth.

OCULARIA, Euphrasia officinalis.

OCULI MARMARYGODES, Metamorphopsia — o. Palpebrarum scabies pruriginosa, Ophthalmia tarsi.

OC'ULIST, Oculis'ta, Ophthalmia'ter, Med'icus ocula'rius. One who occupies himself, chiefly, with the management of diseases of the eye.

OCULISTIQUE, Ophthalmology.

OCULO-MUSCULAR NERVES, COMMON, Motores oculorum.

OCULUM MOVENS PRIMUS, Rectus internus oculi — o. Movens quartus, Rectus inferior oculi—o. Movens secundus, Rectus externus oculi —o. Movens tertius, Rectus superior oculi.

OCULUS, Eye—o. Bovinus, Hydrophthalmia —o. Bovis, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum — o. Bubulus, Hydrophthalmia—o. Cæsius, Glaucoma — o. Duplex, Binoculus — o. Elephantinus, Hydrophthalmia — o. Genu, Patella — o. Lacrymans, Epiphora — o. Purulentus, Hypopyon — o. Simplex, see Monoculus—o. Typhonis, Scilla.

OCYMUM, see Ocimum — o. Sylvestre, Clinopodium vulgare.

OCYODYNIC, Ocytocic.

OCYPH'ONUS, from ωκυς, 'quick,' and φονος, 'murder.' An agent that kills speedily.

OCYTOCEUS, Ocytocic.

OCYTOC'IC, Oxytocic, Ocytoc'eus, Ocytoc'ius, Ocyt'ocus, Ocyody'nic, Odinago'gus, from οξυς, 'quick,' and τοκος, 'labour.' Any thing that expedites parturition.

OCYTOCIUS, Ocytocic.

OCYTOCUS, Ocytocic.

ODAXIS'MUS, Odaxes'mus, Odontocne'sis, Odontocnesmus, from οδους, 'a tooth.' The painful itching of the gums which precedes the appearance of the teeth. Dentition.

ODES. A suffix, see Eidos.

ODEUR, Odour.

ODIN, Pains, (labour.)

ODINAGOGUS, Ocytocic.

ODINOL'YSIS, from οδιν, 'labour pains,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Mitigation of labour pains.

ODINOPŒ'A, from οδιν, 'labour pains,' and ποιεω, 'I make.' Agents that encourage labour pains.

ODIS, Pains, labour.

ODME, Odour.

ODONTAGOGON, Dentagra.

ODON'TAGRA, from οδους, 'a tooth,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' A rheumatic or gouty pain in the teeth. Dentagra.

ODONTAL'GIA, from οδους, 'a tooth,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Odon'tia, Den'tium dolor, Toothach, Odon'tia doloro'sa, Gomphi'asis, Gomphias'mus, Odontodyn'ia, (F.) Douleur des dents, Fluxion sur les dents, Mal de dent, Mal d'amour. A disease dependent upon a variety of causes affecting the cavity of the tooth; but generally owing to caries, which exposes the cavity to the action of the air, and to extraneous matters in general. Hence, the treatment consists in plugging the tooth, or destroying the sensibility of the nerve, by powerful stimulants; and, if these means fail, in extracting the tooth.

Odontalgia Cariosa, Dental gangrene — o. Dentitionis, Dentition — o. Hæmodia, Hæmodia.

Odontalgia Nervosa, Neural'gia Denta'lis. Neuralgia of the teeth. Characterized by periodical pain, shooting with the utmost violence along the branches of the fifth pair distributed to the affected jaw.

Odontalgia Remittens et Intermittens, Neuralgia infra-orbitaria.

ODONTALGIC, Anti-odontalgic.

ODONTAMBLYOGMUS, Hæmodia.

ODONTHÆMODIA, Hæmodia.

ODONTHARPAGA, Dentagra.

ODONTHYPERÆSTHESIS, Hæmodia.

ODONTIA, Odontalgia.

Odontia Defor'mis. Deformity of the teeth from error or shape, position, or number.—Good.

Odontia Dentitionis Lactantium, see Dentition (first)—o. Dentitionis puerilis, see Dentition (second) — o. Edentula, see Nefrendes — o. Excrescens, Epulis — o. Incrustans, Odontolithos — o. Stuporis, Hæmodia.

ODONTIASIS, Dentition.

ODONTIATER, Dentist.

ODONTIATRIA, Dentistry.

ODONTIC, Anti-odontalgic.

ODONTI'TIS, Odontophleg'monē, from οδους, 'a tooth,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the teeth.

ODONTOBOTHRI'TIS, Odontophatni'tis, Inflamma'tio alveolo'rum, from odontobothrium, 'alveolus,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the alveoli.

ODONTOBOTHRIUM, Alveolus.

ODONTOCLA'SIS, from οδους, 'a tooth,' and κλασις, 'fracture;' Fractu'ra den'tis. Fracture of a tooth.

ODONTOCNESIS, Odaxismus.

ODONTOCNESMUS, Odaxismus.

ODONTODES, Odontoid.

ODONTODYNIA, Odontalgia.

ODONTOG''ENY, Odontogen'ia; from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' Generation or mode of development of the teeth.

ODONTOGLYPHON, Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOGLYPHUM, Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOG'RAPHY, Odontograph'ia, from οδους, 'a tooth,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the teeth.

ODON'TOID, Odontoï'des, Odonto'des, Dentiform'is, Denta'lis, Dentoideus, Pyrenoï'des, from οδους, 'a tooth,' and ειδος, 'shape,' 'resemblance.' This epithet is given to the Processus dentatus of the second vertebra or axis.

Odontoid Lig'aments, (F.) Ligaments odontoïdiens, are two strong and short conical fasciculi, whose truncated summits embrace the sides of the odontoid process, and whose bases are fixed in the fossæ at the inner side of the condyles of the occipital bone. Their direction is obliquely outwards and slightly upwards. They enter into the composition of the occipito-axoid articulation; strengthen the junction of the head with the vertebral column, and limit the movement of rotation of the atlas on the axis.

ODONTOL'ITHOS, from οδους, 'a tooth,' and λιθος, 'a stone.' A sort of incrustation, of a yellowish colour, which forms at the base of the teeth, and is called Tartar, Tar'tarus Dentium,

Odon'tia inerus'tans, Cal'culus denta'lis, (F.) Tartre des Dents. It consists of seventy-nine parts of phosphate of lime: twelve and a half of mucus; one of a particular salivary matter, and seven and a half of animal substance, soluble in chlorohydric acid. Infusoria have been found in it.

ODONTOL'OGY, Odontolog''ia, from ὀδους, 'a tooth,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' An anatomical treatise of the teeth.

ODONTONECROSIS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOPARALLAX'IS, from ὀδους, 'a tooth,' and παραλλαξις, 'deviation.' Irregularity and obliquity of the teeth.

ODONTOPHATNĒ, Alveolns.

ODONTOPHATNITIS, Odontobothritis.

ODONTOPHYIA, Dentition.

ODONTOPRISIS, Brygmus, Stridor dentium.

ODONTOSEI'SIS, Odontoseis'mus, Den'tium vacillan'tia. Looseness of the teeth.

ODONTOSEISMUS, Odontoseisis.

ODONTOSMEGMA, Deutifrice.

ODONTOSPHACELISIS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSPHACELISMUS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSTERE'SIS, from ὀδους, 'a tooth,' and στερησις, 'privation.' Loss of the teeth.

ODONTOSYNERISMUS, from ὀδους, 'a tooth,' and συνεριζειν, 'to strike together.' (F.) Claquement. Chattering of the teeth.

ODONTOTECHNY, Dentistry.

ODONTOTHERAPIA, Deutistry.

ODONTOTRIMMA, Dentifrice.

ODORAMENTUM, Odoriferum.

ODORAT, Olfaction.

ODORATIO, Olfaction.

ODORATUS, Olfaction—o. Deperditus, Anosmia.

ODORIF'ERUM, from odor, 'odour,' and fero, 'I carry;' Odoramen'tum. A medicine that gives odour or flavour. A scent. A perfume.

ODOS, Way.

O'DOUR, Odor, Odmē, Osmē, (F.) Odeur. A smell. Odours are subtle particles, constantly escaping from the surface of certain bodies. They act, in some manner, by actual contact with the nerves of the Schneiderian membrane, and give occasion to the sense of smell or olfaction.

ODOUS, Teeth.

OD'YNĒ, ὀδυνη, 'pain,' Dolor, Odyne'ma. A very common suffix to words; as in Pleurodyne.

ODYNEMA, Odyne.

ŒCONOMIA, Economy—œ. Animalis, Physiology.

ŒDALICUS, Œdematous.

ŒDALIUS, Œdematous.

ŒDE'MA, from οιδεω, 'I am swollen.' Hydron'cus, Œdemat'ia, Hyderon'cus, Hydaton'cus, Hydrocœde'ma, Hydrede'ma, Hydrops cellula'ris ar'tuum, Phlegma'tia, Leucophlegma'tia, Ephy'ma œdemat'icum, (F.) Œdème, Œdématie, Enflure. Swelling produced by the accumulation of a serous fluid in the interstices of the areolar texture. This swelling is soft; yields under the finger; preserves the impression for some time, and is pale and without pain. It presents the same characters as anasarca, which is general œdema. Its etiology and treatment are also the same. See Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ACUTUM, see Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ARSENICA'LIS. The swelling of the eyelids and face, induced by continued use of the preparations of arsenic.

ŒDEMA CALIDUM, see Anasarca—œ. Capitis, Hydrocephalus externus.

ŒDE'MA CER'EBRI, (F.) Œdème du cerveau. Œdema of the brain. A condition of the cerebral pulp, in which there is an infiltration of serous fluid into it, so that it appears more moist or watery than common; and, when sliced or pressed, small drops of water are seen to ooze out.

ŒDEMA, COMPACT, Induration of the cellular tissue—œ. Cruentum, Suggillation—œ. Febrile, see Anasarca—œ. Fugax, Anathymiasis—œ. Hystericum, Anathymiasis.

ŒDEMA OF THE GLOTTIS, Œdem'atous Laryngi'tis, L. submuco'sa seu œdemato'sa seu seropurulen'ta, Œde'ma glot'tidis, Hydrops glot'tidis, Angi'na aquo'sa, A. laryngœ'a œdemato'sa, Submu'cous Laryngi'tis, Œdem'atous angi'na, (F.) Laryngite œdémateuse, L. œdémateuse et séro-purulente, L. susglottique, L. sous-muqueuse, Angine laryngée œdémateuse, Œdème de la glotte. A disease consisting of serous or sero-purulent infiltration into the submucous tissue of the glottis. The symptoms resemble those of croup: but the disease attacks the adult rather than the child. The age is, indeed, a principal means of diagnosis between the two affections.

The disease is almost always fatal. The treatment has to vary according to the accompanying general symptoms.

ŒDEMA LACTEUM, Phlegmatia dolens.

ŒDEMA OF THE LUNGS, Œde'ma pulmo'num, Pneumoch'ysis, Pneumonœde'ma, Hydrops Pulmo'num, Hydropneumo'nia, Anasar'ca Pulmo'num, (F.) Œdème du poumon. Laënnec has so called the infiltration of serum into the tissue of the lung, carried to such an extent as to diminish its permeability to air. It is not an uncommon sequela of pneumonia, and the major exanthemata. The respiration is laborious; the respiratory murmur scarcely perceptible, although the thorax is largely expanded, and there is a slight râle crepitant, particularly at the base and inferior part of the lung. The sound on percussion is clear, and on both sides equally so. The cough is attended with aqueous expectoration. In some cases the respiration becomes puerile in a small portion of the summit of the lung.

ŒDEMA NEONATORUM, Induration of the cellular tissue—œ. Palpebrarum, Hydroblepharon—œ. Puerperarum, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. Pulmonum, Œdema of the lungs—œ. Pulmonum chronicum, Hydropneumonia—œ. ŒDEMATIA, Œdema.

ŒDÉMATIE, Œdema.

ŒDEMATOSARCA. Œdemosarca.

ŒDEMATOSCHEOCE'LĒ, Œdemoscheoce'lē, Oscheoce'lē œdemat'ica. Oscheocele with œdema of the scrotum.

ŒDEM'ATOUS, Œdemato'sus, Œdemat'icus, Œdemato'des, Œdal'ius, Œdal'icus, Edem'atous. Affected with œdema.

ŒDÈME, Œdema—œ. du Cerveau, Œdema cerebri—œ. Douloureux des femmes en couche, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. actif des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. de la Glotte, Œdema of the glottis—œ. de la Glotte, Angina œdematosa—œ. du Tissu cellulaire des nouveaunés, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ŒDEMOSAR'CA, Œdematosar'ca. A species of tumour mentioned by M. A. Severinus, which holds a middle place between œdema and sarcoma.

ŒDEMOSCHEOCELE, Œdematoscheocele.

ŒIL, Eye—œ. de Bœuf, Anthemis tinctoria—œ. Double, Binoculus—œ. de Lièvre, Lagophthalmus—œ. Simple, see Monoculus.

ŒILLET GIROFLÉE, Dianthus caryophyllus.

ŒILLIÈRE, Scaphium oculare.

ŒNAN'THĒ, Œ. croca'ta, Œ. chærophyl'lifo'liis, Hemlock dropwort, Hemlock water-dropwort. Nat. Ord. Umbelliferæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. A violent poison of the acronarcotic class. Its juice has been recommended in certain cutaneous diseases; but it is scarcely ever used. It is employed in fomentations.

ŒNANTHE AQUATICA, Phellandrium aquaticum—œ. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum—œ. Striata rigida, Seseli tortuosum.

ŒNELÆ'ON, from οινος, 'wine,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' A mixture of oil and wine.—Galen. Also, rectified spirit or alcohol.

ŒNOG'ALA, οινογαλα, from οινος, 'wine,' and γαλα, 'milk,'—'a mixture of wine and milk.' According to some, wine as warm as new milk.

ŒNOG'ARON, Garum vino mistum. Wine mixed with garum.—Aëtius.

ŒNOIDES, Vineus.

ŒNOMA'NIA, Oinoma'nia, from οινος, 'wine,' and mania. Delirium tremens. Properly, winemania. An insatiable desire for intoxicating liquors.

Œ'NOMEL, Œnom'eli, from οινος, 'wine,' and μελι, 'honey.' Mel vino'sum, Mulsum Vino'sum. Honey wine. Wine mead.

ŒNOPHLYGIA, Temulentia.

ŒNOPHLYXIS, Temulentia.

ŒNOS, Wine.

ŒNOSTAGMA, Spiritus vini rectificatus.

ŒNOTHE'RA BIEN'NIS, Œ. Mollis'sima seu murica'ta seu gauroï'des, On'agra, Evening Primrose, Tree Primrose, Primrose tree, Cure-all, Scabish. An indigenous plant, common on the borders of fields, and in natural hedges. Sex. Syst. Octandria Monogynia. Its properties are mucilaginous and slightly acrid. A decoction has been used in cases of infantilè and other eruptions.

ŒNOTHERA GAUROIDES, O. biennis—œ. Muricata, O. biennis.

ŒSOPHAGE'AL, Œsophagæ'us, (F.) Œsophagien. Relating or belonging to the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGEAL AP'ERTURE OF THE DI'APHRAGM, (F.) Ouverture œsophagienne du diaphragme. An opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGEAL APERTURE OF THE STOMACH. A name given to the superior or cardiac orifice of the stomach, to distinguish it from the inferior or pyloric.

ŒSOPHAGEAL MUSCLE, Œsophagæ'us. Some anatomists have given this name to the transverse muscular fibres which surround the œsophagus at its upper extremity.

ŒSOPHAGEAL TUBE, see Tube, œsophageal.

ŒSOPHAGEURYS'MA, Œsoph'agus succenturia'tus, from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and ευρυσμα, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGIALGIA, Œsophagismus.

ŒSOPHAGIARCTIA, Dysphagia constricta.

ŒSOPHAGIEN, (muscle,) Constrictor œsophagi.

ŒSOPHAGIS'MUS, Œsophagis'mum. A name given by Vogel to spasm of the œsophagus, Dysphag'ia spasmod'ica, D. Spas'tica, Œsophagospasm'us, D. Nervo'sa, Strictu'ra œsoph'agi spasmod'ica, Œsophagial'gia, Tenes'mus Gulæ, (F.) Ténesme de l'œsophage. By some used synonymously with œsophagitis, dysphagia, and contraction of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGI'TIS, Angi'na œsophagæ'a, Cynan'chē œsophagæ'a, Dysphag'ia inflammato'ria, Inflamma'tio œsoph'agi, I. Gulæ, (F.) Angine œsophagienne. Inflammation of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGODYN'IA, from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain in the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOPATHI'A, Morbus Œsoph'agi, from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and παθος, 'disease.' A morbid condition of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOPLE'GIA, Dysphag'ia paralyt'ica, Læmoparaly'sis, from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGORRHAG''IA, from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and ραγη, 'a rupture.' Hemorrhage from the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGORRHŒ'A from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Discharge of blood or mucus from the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOSPASM'US, from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Spasm of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOT'OMY, Œsophagotom'ia, from οισοφαγος, 'the œsophagus,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' An incision made into the œsophagus for the purpose of extracting foreign bodies from it.

ŒSOPH'AGUS, from οιω, 'I carry,' and φαγω, 'I eat;' Gula, Fis'tula ciba'lis, Via stom'achi et ventris, Fis'tula vel Infundib'ulum Ventric'uli, Gluttus. The Gullet. A musculo-membranous canal, cylindrical, and depressed from before to behind, which extends from the inferior extremity of the pharynx to the upper orifice of the stomach. At its origin, it is situate in the median line; but, beneath the larynx, it deviates to the left, and in the chest experiences different inflections. In its cervical portion, it corresponds, behind, with the spine; before, with the larynx and trachea; and, at the sides, it is close to the primitive carotids, internal jugular veins, par vagum, recurrent nerves, &c. In its inferior or thoracic portion, the œsophagus is entirely contained in the posterior mediastinum; and enters the abdomen through the œsophageal aperture of the diaphragm. The œsophagus is composed of a very strong muscular layer, sometimes called Tunica vagina'lis gulæ; formed, itself, of two sets of fibres, the external being general longitudinal, the internal transverse or annular. 2. Of a mucous membrane which is soft, fine, thin, and white, especially at its lower part. It is continuous, above, with the mucous membrane of the pharynx. The mucous follicles, found beneath it, are not numerous, and have been called Œsophageal glands. The arteries of the œsophagus proceed, in the neck, from the thyroid; in the chest, from the bronchial arteries and directly from the aorta;—in the abdomen, from the inferior phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its veins empty themselves into the inferior thyroid, the vena cava superior, the internal mammary, azygos, bronchial, phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its lymphatics pass into the ganglia surrounding it. Its nerves are afforded by the pharyngeal and pulmonary plexuses; by the cardiac nerves; the thoracic ganglia, and, especially, by the pneumogastrics and their recurrent branches.

ŒSOPHAGUS SUCCENTURIATUS, Pharyngocele.

ŒSTROMANIA, Nymphomania.

ŒSTRUATION, Orgasm, see Heat.

ŒSTRUM, Clitoris.

ŒSTRUM VEN'ERIS, Œstrum vene'reum, Œstrus vene'reus; from οιστρος, œstrus, 'a violent impulse or desire.' A vehement desire for sexual intercourse. With some, œstrum signifies Clitoris.

ŒSTRUS, Clitoris—œ. Venereus, Œstrum venereum.

Œ'SYPUS, from οις, 'a sheep,' and ρυπος, 'dirt' [?]. The greasy matter of unwashed wool; formerly employed in friction in diseased joints.

ŒUFS, Ova.

OFFICE, PHYSICIAN'S or SURGEON'S, Iatrion.

OFFICINA, Pharmacopolium.

OFFIC"INAL, Officina'lis, from officina, 'a shop.' An epithet for medicines found in the shop of the apothecary, ready prepared — usua'lia; in opposition to magistral or extemporaneous, — those prepared after the prescription of the physician.

OFFIUM, Affion, Opium.

OFFSPRING, Epigone.

OFFUSCATIO, Amaurosis.

OGLA, Oogala.

OGNON, a Corn — o. Marin, Scilla.

OHI'O, MINERAL WATERS OF. Yellow Spring is a chalybeate, situate in Greene county, 64 miles from Cincinnati. It is somewhat frequented.

OIDIUM ABORTIFACIENS, see Ergot.

OIE, Sorbus domestica.

OIGNON, Allium cepa.

OIL, O'leum, Elæ'on, (F.) Huile; from ελαια, 'the olive.' A collective name, under which two classes of fluids are included, very different from each other: those belonging to the one class, are viscid, mawkish or almost insipid; those of the other are nearly devoid of viscidity, and are caustic and very volatile. The former are called fat or fixed oils; the latter volatile or essential oils, or essences.

Oil, Fusel, Al'cohol amyl'icum, (Ph. D.) Fousel oil, Pota'to oil. An acrid volatile oil, formed in the manufacture of potato brandy, and which is not easily separable from it. Its chemical constitution is analogous to that of alcohol. It exhales a powerful and peculiarly suffocating odour. S. g. .818. In small doses it is highly stimulating, — acting like narcotics in general. In large doses it destroys the mucous membranes of the stomach.

Oil, Haerlem. An empirical preparation supposed to consist chiefly of petroleum, turpentine, and balsam of sulphur. Used internally in renal and rheumatic affections.

OIOCALYM'MA, Oioealyp'trum; from ωιον, 'egg,' and καλυπτειν, 'to cover;' Membra'na O'vuli cortica'lis. The membrane of the egg-shell.

OLD AGE, Senectus.

OLD MAN, Artemisia abrotanum.

OLD WIFE'S SHIRT, Liriodendron.

OLEA ANIMA'LIA, Animal oils, (F.) Huiles animales. A name given to fixed oils holding in solution the mucilaginous and gelatinous principles of certain animals, as the Oil of frogs, Oil of scorpions, Oil of spiders, &c. Sometimes, also, the term animal oils is given to empyreumatic oils, produced during the decomposition of animal substances by heat.

OLEA DESTILLATA, O. volatilia.

OLEA EMPYREUMAT'ICA, Empyreumat'ic oils, (F.) Huiles empyreumatiques. Oils which have an empyreumatic or burnt smell. They are obtained by treating vegetable or animal matters by heat, in close vessels. They do not exist in organized bodies, but are formed during their decomposition by fire. The animal oil of Dippel is an empyreumatic oil.

OLEA EUROPÆ'A, O. sati'va seu lanceifo'lia seu polymor'pha seu Gall'ica, Oli'va, Olive tree, ἐλαια, Ela'a, (F.) Olivier, (Fruit) Olive. Nat. Ord. Jasmineæ. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. The leaves of the olive are bitter, and an extract prepared from them, and a substance called olivi'na, the bitter principle of the leaves, have been given in Italy as antiperiodics. The fruit, when pickled, is extremely grateful to some stomachs. Olives, as met with in the shops, are prepared from the green, unripe fruit, repeatedly steeped in water. To this, some quicklime or alkaline salt is added, and, afterwards, they are washed and preserved in a pickle of common salt and water. From this fruit is prepared the Olive oil or Salad oil of the Pharmacopœias, which is obtained by grinding and pressing the olives, when thoroughly ripe. The finer and purer oil issues first by gentle pressure, and the inferior sort on heating what is left, and pressing it more strongly. See Oleum Olivæ. In Calabria, an odorous resin exudes from its trunk, which is employed as a perfume by the Neapolitans.

A gum flows from certain wild olives, in warm countries, which consists, according to Pelletier, of a resin, a little benzoic acid, and a peculiar substance, called Olivile. It is in yellow masses, of a slightly acrid taste, and of a vanilla smell. It is called Oleæ gummi, O. resi'na, and O. bals'amum, (F.) Gomme olivier, and is esteemed astringent and detersive.

OLEA FIXA VEL PIN'GUIA, Expressed oils, Fixed oils, Fatty oils, (F.) Huiles fixes ou grasses. All the oils obtained from the seeds or pericarps of vegetables, without distillation, and which are viscid, but slightly odorous and sapid; lighter than water, and insoluble in alcohol. The rancidity of oils depends on the absorption of oxygen, and therefore they should be kept in bulk as much as possible; and in narrow-necked bottles, so that a very small surface only can be exposed to the air. All the fixed oils are emollient, and, in a certain dose, they act as purgatives and emetics. They are prepared by expressing the fruit or seed containing them.

OLEA FUGA'CIA, Fuga'cious oils, (F.) Huiles fugaces. A name given to oils which are so volatile that, in order to obtain them, recourse must be had to a different process from that employed for other essential oils. Such are the oils of jessamine, lily, violet, &c.

OLEA GALLICA, O. Europæa—o. Lancifolia, O. Europæa.

OLEA MEDICINA'LIA, Medic''inal oils, (F.) Huiles Medicinales. A name given to oils prepared by macerating, infusing, or boiling medicinal substances in olive or any other fixed oils. These oils may then be regarded as oily solutions of certain medicinal substances; whence they can never be simple. They have, however, been divided into simple and compound medicinal oils. To the former belong the Oils of St. John's wort, of the Solanum nigrum, &c.; to the other—which have often been called Oily balsams, (F.) Baumes huileux—the Balsams of Fioraventi, Metz, &c. Medicinal oils are, almost always, employed externally.

OLEA POLYMORPHA, O. Europæa—o. Sativa, O. Europæa.

OLEA VOLATIL'IA, Olea destilla'ta, Vol'atile oils, Æthero'lea, Ethe'real oils, Essential oils, Distil'led oils, Es'sences, (F.) Huiles volatiles, H. essentielles. Oils found in aromatic vegetables, and in every part of them, except in the interior of the seeds. The majority are obtained by distillation; but some by expression. They possess unctuosity, inflammability, and viscidity, like the fixed oils; but they are generally odoriferous, pungent, and acrid. The greater part are lighter than water; but some are heavier, and congeal at a moderate temperature. They dissolve, in small quantity, in distilled water, by simple agitation. Almost all are soluble in alcohol. The odour and taste are the usual tests of their goodness. To preserve them, they should be kept in a cool place, in small bottles, quite full and well corked. Volatile oils are possessed of the aromatic properties of the plants whence they are obtained. They are all, when applied externally, stimulant and rubefacient.

OLEAG''INOUS, Oleagino'sus, Oleo'sus. Oily; containing oil,—as 'an oleaginous or oily mixture.'

OLEA'MEN, Oleamen'tum. Any soft ointment prepared of oil.—Scribonius.

OLEANDER, Rhododendron chrysanthemum.

OLECRANARTHRI'TIS, from ωλεκρανον, 'the olecranon,' αρθρον, 'joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the elbow joint.

OLECRANOID CAVITY, see Ulna.

OLEC'RANON, Oleera'non, Olec'ranum, Olec'ranon mob'ilē; from ωλενη, 'the elbow,' and κρανον, 'the head.' Acrolc'nion, Additamen'tum neca'tum, Ancon, Proces'sus aneoncus, Glans seu Coro'na seu Coro'na posterior seu Additamen'tum unca'tum Ulnæ, Vertex Cu'biti, Patel'la fixa, Rostrum exter'num seu poste'rius, Top of the cubit. Head or projection of the elbow. A large process at the upper extremity of the ulna, on which we lean. When this process is fractured, it is apt to be drawn up by the triceps, and much care is required to keep the parts in apposition.

OLECRANARTHROC'ACĒ, from ὠλενη, 'the elbow,' κρανον, 'the head,' and arthrocace. A name given by Rust to inflammation of the articular surfaces of the elbow.

OLEFIANT GAS, CHLORIDE OF, see Anæsthetic.

OLENE, Ulna.

OLEO-CERATUM AQUÂ SUBACTUM, Ceratum Galeni.

OLEO-SACCHARUM, Elæo-saccharum.

OLEOSUS, Oleaginous.

OLETTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. At Olette, in the department Pyrénées Orientales, is a thermal spring, which raises the thermometer to 190° Fahr. It is the hottest in France.

OLEUM, Oil — o. Abietis, see Pinus picea — o. Absinthii, Artemisia absinthium, (oil of) — o. Acusticum, Huile acoustique.

Oleum Æthe'reum, Æthereal oil (formed in the distillation of ether), Oleum vini, Oil of wine, (F.) Huile douce de vin. A peculiar oleaginous matter, obtained by continuing the distillation, after the whole of the sulphuric ether has passed over in the process for the preparation of the latter. It is used only as an ingredient in the compound spirit of ether. It is officinal in the Ph. U. S.

Oleum Ammoniatum, Linimentum ammoniæ fortius.

Oleum Amygdala'rum, Oleum amygdalæ, Oil of Almonds, (F.) Huile d'amandes. (Expressed from both sweet and bitter almonds.—Amygdalus communis. ℥xvj of almonds yield ℥v of oil.) It is inodorous, insipid, and of a pale straw colour, and is employed as a demulcent and emollient.

Oleum Anacardii, see Anacardium occidentale.

Oleum Anima'lē, Animal oil, (F.) Huile animale. An oil obtained by the decomposition of the immediate principles of animals, subjected to the action of heat. It is fetid, and always contains a certain quantity of subcarbonate of ammonia. See Olea Empyreumatica. The name animal oil is sometimes also given to the fat contained in the fatty vesicles. The composition of this fat does not, indeed, differ from that of the fixed oil.

Oleum Anima'lē Dippe'lii, Animal oil of Dippel, Oleum cornu cervi, O. C. C. rectifica'tum, Animal oil, Dippel's oil, Oleum pyro-anima'lē depura'tum, O. anima'lē æthe'reum, Pyro'leum os'sium rectifica'tum, (F.) Huile animale de Dippel, Huile de corne de cerf, is obtained by distilling animal matters, especially hartshorn, on the naked fire. The subcarbonate of ammonia, which it contains, renders it partly soluble in water, and communicates to it the stimulant properties for which it is used in medicine. It is employed as an antispasmodic.

Oleum Anima'lē Empyreumat'icum Chaber'ti, O. Empyreumat'icum seu anthelmin'ticum seu contra tæ'niam Chaber'ti, Empyreumat'ic oil of Chabert, Oil of Chabert, is made by adding one part of animal oil to three parts of oil of turpentine, leaving them to combine for four days, and then distilling three parts. An effective anthelmintic. Dose, a tea-spoonful three times a day.

Oleum Animaliza'tum per Infusio'nem, (F.) Huile animalisée par infusion, Huile aromatique, H. de petits chiens. A preparation, formerly esteemed tonic and cephalic. It was obtained by boiling new-born puppies in oil, first depriving them of their blood, skin, and intestines. When the decoction was cold, origanum, thyme, pennyroyal, St. John's-wort, and marjoram were added.

Oleum Anisi, see Pimpinella anisum — o. Anthelminticum Chaberti, Oleum animale empyreumaticum Chaberti — o. Aurantii, see Citrus aurantium — o. Balaninum, Guilandina moringa (oleum) — o. Balsami, see Amyris opobalsamum.

Oleum Benzo'ini, Oil of Benzoin or Benjamin. An oil obtained by heating, in a sand-bath, the matter which remains after benzoic acid has been separated from benzoin by the aid of heat. It has been regarded as balsamic and sudorific.

Oleum Bergamii, see Bergamote.

Oleum Bu'bulum, Neat's-foot oil. The oil prepared from the bones of Bos Domesticus. It is obtained by boiling in water for a long time the feet of the ox, previously deprived of the hoof. It is introduced into the officinal list of the Ph. U. S. as an ingredient of the ointment of nitrate of mercury.

Oleum Cacao Spissatum, Butter of Cacao — o. Cadinum, see Juniperus oxycedrus — o. Cajuputi, Caieput (oil) — o. Camphoratum, Linimentum camphoræ — o. Cari seu Carui, Carum (oleum) — o. Caryophylli, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

Oleum Ced'rinum, Essentia de cedro, (F.) Huile de cédrat. The oil of the peel of citrons, obtained in Italy in a particular manner, without distillation.

Oleum Chaberti, O. animale empyreumaticum Chaberti — o. Chenopodii, see Chenopodium anthelminticum — o. Cicinum, see Ricinus communis — o. Cinnamomi, see Laurus cinnamomum — o. Contra Tæniam Chaberti, Oleum animale empyreumaticum Chaberti.

Oleum Copa'ibæ, Oil of Copa'iba. (Copaïb. ībij; Aquæ, cong. iv. Distil three gallons; separate the oil; return the water to the copaiba, and again distil three gallons. Separate the oil, and add it to the other. Ph. U. S.) Dose gtt. x to xxx.

Oleum Cornu Cervi, O. animale Dippelii — o. Cubebæ, see Piper cubebæ — o. Euphorbiæ lathyridis, see Euphorbia lathyris — o. Fixum nucum cocos butyraceæ, see Cocos butyracea — o. Fœniculi, see Anethum — o. Gabianum, Petrolæum — o. Gallinæ, Alkale — o. Gaultheriæ, see Gaultheria — o. Hedeomæ, see Hedeoma pulegioides — o. Hyperici, see Hypericum perforatum — o. infernale, O. Ricini.

Oleum Jec'oris Aselli, O. Mor'rhuæ, O. Jecino'ris Aselli, Axun'gia Ga'di, A. Pisci'na mari'na, Codliver oil, Cod oil, (F.) Huile de morue, Huile de Foie de morue. The animal oil, which appears under this name in commerce, is obtained from several of the species belonging to the genus Gadus. The clearest sorts are generally used. It appears to have no sensible effect upon the economy; but has been given in strumous affections, rheumatism, chronic cutaneous diseases, and tumours of the mammæ. The dose for an adult is from f℥ij to f℥iss.

Rayliver oil, O'leum raiæ, is used in the same cases and doses.

Oleum Juniperi, see Juniperis communis — o. Juniperi empyreumaticum, see Juniperus oxycedrus — o. de Kervâ, see Ricinus communis — o. Kervinum, see Ricinus communis.

Oleum Lauri'num, Oleum lauri, Oil of bays An oil obtained from bayberries, and sometimes used in sprains and bruises, unattended with inflammation.

Oleum Laurinum, Daphnelæon, Unguentum L. — o. Lavendulæ, see Lavendula — o. Lentiscinum, Schinelæon — o. Limonis, see Citrus medica — o. Lini, see Linum usitatissimum — o. Lini cum calce, Linimentum aquæ calcis.

Oleum Lu'cii Piscis, Oil of Pike. From the liver of the Esox lucius an oil is spontaneously separated, which is used in some countries to destroy specks on the cornea.

Oleum Malabathri, see Malabathrum — o.

Mariæ, see Fagara octandra — o. Melaleucæ leucodendri, Caieput (oil)—o. Menthæ piperitæ, see Mentha piperita — o. Menthæ viridis, Mentha viridis — o. Monardæ, Monarda punctata — o. Morrhuæ, O. jecoris aselli.

Oleum e Mucilagin'ibus, Oil of Mu'cilages. (Rad. althææ rec. ℔ss; sem. lini, sem. fœnugræci, āā ℥iij; aquæ, Oij. Boil for half an hour; add ol. oliv. Oiv; continue the boiling till the water is nearly consumed, and pour off the oil.) Emollient.

Oleum Myristicæ, see Myristica moschata — o. Neroli, see Citrus aurantium.

Oleum Oli'væ, O. oliva'rum, Olive oil, Salad oil. An inodorous, insipid, and transparent oil; obtained by expression from the olive, when ripe. It is demulcent and emollient, — possessing the qualities of the fixed oils in general.

An inferior kind, obtained by boiling olives in water, and skimming the oil from the surface, is also used in Pharmacy. See Olea Europæa.

Oleum Omphacinum, Omotribes — o. Origani, see Origanum — o. Oxydi cupri viride, Balsam, green, of Metz — o. de Palmâ Christi, see Ricinus communis — o. Palmæ, see Cocos butyracea — o. Rosæ, see Rosa centifolia — o. Rosarum, Rhodelæon — o. Rutaceum, Peganelæon — o. Rosmarini, see Rosmarinus — o. Rutæ, see Ruta — o. Sabinæ, see Juniperus Sabina — o. Sassafras, see Laurus Sassafras — o. Sesami, see Sesamum orientale — o. Sinapis, see Sinapis — o. Spicæ vulgaris, O. terebinthinæ — o. Succini, see Succinum — o. Succini rectificatum, see Succinum.

Oleum Sulphura'tum, Bal'samum sulph'uris simplex, Sulph'urated oil. (Sulphur. lot. ℥ij; olivæ olei, ℔j. Heat the oil in a large iron pot, and throw in the sulphur by degrees; stirring the mixture after each addition till they unite.) It is stimulating, and was formerly much used in coughs, asthma, &c., and, externally, to foul ulcers.

Oleum Tab'aci, Oil of Tobacco. An empyreumatic oil, obtained from coarsely powdered tobacco by heating the retort to dull redness.— Ph. U. S.

Oleum Tartari per Deliquium, Liquor potassæ subcarbonatis — o. Templinum, see Pinus mughos.

Oleum Terebin'thinæ, Oil of Turpentine. The volatile oil of the juice of pinus palustris, and other species of pinus.

Oleum Terebin'thinæ Rectifica'tum, Oleum pini puris'simum, Rectified oil of turpentine, Oleum terebin'thinæ æthe'reum, Sp. of turpentine. Common oil of turpentine is also called Common oil of Spike, Oleum spicæ vulga'rē. (Olei terebinth. Oj; aquæ, Oiv. Distil over the oil.) It is stimulant, diuretic, anthelmintic, and rubefacient. Dose, ℥ss to ℥j.

Guestonian Embrocation for rheumatism consists of ol. terebinth., ol. oliv. āā ℥iss; acid. sulph. dil. ℥iij.

Oleum Theobromæ Cacao Expressum, Butter of cacao — o. Tiglii, Croton tiglium.

Oleum Valeria'næ, Oil of Vale'rian. The distilled oil of the root of Valeriana officinalis.— Ph. U. S.

Oleum Vini, O. æthereum — o. Vitrioli, Sulphuric acid.

OLFAC'TION, Olfac'tus, from olfacere for odefacere (odor, and facere), Osphre'sis, Osphra'sia, Osphre'sia, Osme'sis, Odora'tio, Odora'tus, Sensus osmomet'ricus, Sense of smell, Smelling, (F.) Odorat. The sense by which we perceive the impressions made on the olfactory nerves by the odorous particles suspended in the atmosphere. The olfactory nerve or first pair has usually been considered the great nerve of smell; and it is probably the nerve of special sensibility, general sensibility being communicated by the branches of the fifth pair, distributed on the pituitary membrane of the nose and sinuses.

OLFAC'TORY, Olfacti'vus, Olfacto'rius, Osphran'ticus, Osphrante'rius, Osphre'ticus, from olfactus, 'the smell.' That which belongs or relates to the sense of smell.

Olfactory Bulb, see Olfactory nerves.

Olfac'tory Foram'ina, (F.) Trous olfactifs, are the holes in the cribriform plate of the ethmoid bone, through which the olfactory nerve passes.

Olfactory Lobe, see Olfactory nerves.

Olfac'tory Nerves, Ethmoid'al nerves, Par primum Nervo'rum cer'ebri, Nervi odorato'rii, Proces'sus mamilla'res seu Papilla'rum, Processus mamillares cer'ebri ad nares, P. papilla'res, Carun'culæ mamilla'res,—the first pair of encephal'ic nerves. This nerve, which probably arises from the medulla oblongata, is observed to leave the brain, opposite the inner part of the fissure of Sylvius, by three roots; which, by their union, form a triangular knot or expansion. When it reaches the ethmoid fossa it expands and forms a triangular ganglion, or grayish, soft bulb,— Bulbus olfacto'rius — Olfactory bulb, tubercle, or lobe, — which furnishes, from its inferior surface, the branches that have to be distributed to the nasal fossæ. These filaments are very numerous; they pass through the foramina in the cribriform plate and enter the nasal fossæ. They are distinguished into the internal, external, and middle. The former are distributed over the mucous membrane, covering the outer paries of the nasal fossæ; the second descend upon the septum, and the third are lost, almost immediately, on the portion of the pituitary membrane that lines the vault of the fossæ.

Olfactory Tubercle, see Olfactory nerves.

OLFACTUS, Olfaction — o. Acutus, Hyperosphresia — o. Amissio, Anosmia — o. Deficiens, Anosmia — o. Depravatus, Parosmia.

OLIBANUM, see Juniperus lycia — o. Sylvestre, see Pinus abies — o. Vulgare, see Pinus abies.

OLIGÆMIA, Anæmia, Hæmaporia, Hypæmia.

OLIGIDRIA, Ischidrosis.

OLIGOBLEN'NIA, from ὀλιγος, 'few,' and βλεννα, 'mucus.' A deficiency of mucus.

OLIGOCHOL'IA, from ὀλιγος, 'few,' and χολη, 'bile.' Paucity of bile.

OLIGOCH'YLUS, from ὀλιγος, 'little,' and χυλος, 'juice,' 'chyle.' An epithet for food which is but little nutritive; which furnishes little chyle.

OLIGOCOP'RIA, from ὀλιγος, 'few,' and κοπρος, 'excrement.' Scantiness of alvine evacuations.

OLIGODAC'RYA, from ὀλιγος, 'little,' and δακρυ, 'a tear.' Paucity of lachrymal secretion.

OLIGOGALACTIA, Agalactia.

OLIGOGALIA, Agalaxis.

OLIGOHÆMIA, Anæmia, Hæmaporia, Hypæmia.

OLIGOPO'SIA. from ὀλιγος, 'little,' and ποσις, 'drink.' Diminution in the quantity of drinks.

OLIGOSIA'LIA, from ὀλιγος, 'little,' and σιαλον, 'saliva.' Paucity of saliva.

OLIGOSPER'MIA, from ολιγος, 'little,' and σπερμα, 'sperm.' Paucity of spermatic secretion.

OLIGOSPOND'YLUS, from ολιγος, 'few,' 'small,' and σπονδυλος, 'a vertebra.' A monster with defective vertebræ. — Gurlt.

OLIGOTRICH'IA, from ολιγος, 'little,' and θριξ, 'hair.' Want of hair. Paucity of hair.

OLIGOTROPH'IA, Par'cior nutrit''io, from ολιγος, 'little,' and τρεφω, 'I nourish.' Deficient nourishment.

OLIGURE'SIA, Oligure'sis, Oligoure'sis, Oligoure'sia, from ολιγος, 'little,' and ουρεω, 'I pass urine.' Morbidly diminished urinary secretion.

OLISTHEMA, Luxation.

OLIVA, Olea Europæa.

OLIVÆ, Corpora olivaria.

OLIVAIRE CAUTÈRE, of the French surgeons, is a cautery whose extremity is terminated by a button having the shape of an olive.

OLIVARIS, Olive-shaped.

OLIVARY, Olive-shaped — o. Bodies, Corpora olivaria.

OL'IVARY PROC''ESS, Proces'sus Oliva'ris, is a small ridge, running transversely between, and a little behind, the roots of the anterior clinoid processes of the sphenoid bone, and by some considered as the fourth clinoid process.

OLIVE, see Olea Europæa — o. Tree, Olea Europæa.

OLIVE-SHAPED, Oliva'ris, Olivifor'mis, Ol'ivary, from oliva, 'an olive.' Resembling an olive. See Corpora olivaria.

OLIVES, PICKLED, Colymbades.

OLIVIER. Olea Europæa.

OLIVIFORMIS, Olive-shaped.

OLIVINA, see Olea Europæa.

OLLA CAPITIS, Cranium.

OLMITELLO, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring in the isle of Ischia. Temperature, 100° Fahrenheit.

OLOPHLYCTIDE, Herpes.

OLOPHO'NIA, from ολλω, ολλυω, 'I lose,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Congenital misconstruction of the vocal organs. — Good.

OLOPHONIA LABII LOBATA, Harelip — o. Linguæ frænata, see Ankyloglossum.

OM'AGRA, Hom'agra, from ωμος, 'the shoulder,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' Gout in the shoulder.

OMAL'GIA, from ωμος, 'the shoulder,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the shoulder.

OMARTHRI'TIS, from ωμος, 'the shoulder,' αρθρον, 'a joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the shoulder-joint.

OMARTHROC'ACĒ, from ωμος, 'shoulder,' αρθρον, 'a joint,' and κακος, 'bad.' Arthrocace of the shoulder-joint. Caries or suppuration of the shoulder-joint.

OMA'SUM, Omasus, Manyplies. The third stomach of ruminant animals.

OMBILIC, Umbilicus.

OMBILICALE, Umbilical.

OMBRAGE, Nebula.

OMENTA, Meninges.

OMENTESIS, Epiploitis.

OMENTITIS, Epiploitis.

OMENTULA, Appendiculæ pinguedinosæ.

OMENTUM, Epiploon — o. Colicum, Epiploon, colic — o. Gastro-colicum, Epiploon, gastro-colic — o. Gastro-splenic, Epiploon, gastro-splenic — o. Great, Epiploon, gastro-colic — o. Hepato-gastricum, Epiploon, gastro-hepatic — o. Lesser, Epiploon, gastro-hepatic — o. Majus, Epiploon, gastro-colic — o. Minus, Epiploon, gastro-hepatic — o. Ossium, Periosteum — o. Third, Epiploon, colic.

OMICHESIS, Micturition.

OMICHMA, Urine.

OMI'TIS, from ωμος, 'the shoulder,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation in or about the shoulder-joint.

OMMA, Eye, Vision.

OMNIPHAGUS, Omnivorous.

OMNIVORE, Omnivorous.

OMNIV'OROUS, Omnivorus, Omniph'agus, Pantoph'agus, (F.) Omnivore, from omnis, 'all,' and voro, 'I eat.' An epithet for animals — Pantophagists—which eat every kind of food, animal or vegetable.

OMO. In composition, an abridgment of omos or omus, the humerus.

OMO-CLAVICULAR, see Coraco-clavicular.

OMOCOTYLE, see Glene.

OMO-HYOÏDEUS, Cor'aco-hyoïdeus, Scapulo-hyoïdien, Omo-hyoïdien, Omoplat-hyoïdien, Hyoïdis Quartus Mus'culus. This muscle is situate obliquely at the sides and front of the neck. It is slender, long, and flat. It arises from the superior costa of the scapula, near the semi-lunar notch, and from the ligament that runs across it, and is inserted at the sides of the inferior margin of the body of the os hyoides. It consists of two fasciculi, united by a common tendon, and is a true digastric muscle. It depresses the os hyoides, carrying it a little backwards, and to one side, except when it acts with its fellow, when the bone is depressed, and drawn obliquely backwards.

OMOPHAG''IA, Omosit'ia, from ωμος, 'raw,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' Fondness for raw food. Eating of raw food.

OMOPLATE, Scapula — o. Col de l', Collum scapulæ.

OMOPLAT-HYOÏDIEN, Omo-hyoideus.

OMOS, Crude, Humerus.

OMOSITIA, Omophagia.

OMOTAR'ICHOS, from ωμος, 'the shoulder,' and ταριχος, 'pickled.' Salsamen'tum crudum; Salted Tunny Fish, in particular. Properly, the neck or shoulder-piece of a salted animal. Once much recommended against the bites of vipers, and in hydrophobia.

OMOTES, Crudity.

OMOTOCIA, Abortion.

OMOT'RIBES, Omphac''inum O'leum, from ωμος, 'crude,' and τριβω, 'I bruise.' Oil expressed from unripe olives.

OMPHA'CION, ομφακιον, from ομφακος, 'an unripe grape;—Succus uvæ acer'bæ, Ompha'cium. The juice of unripe grapes. Also, Verjuice.

OMPHACI'TES (VINUM). A name given to wine prepared from the unripe grape. Omphaci'tis is also the name of a small gall. — Dioscorides.

OMPHACIUM, Verjuice.

OMPHACOM'ELI, from ομφακος, 'an unripe grape, and μελι, 'honey.' A sort of oxymel, made of the juice of unripe grapes and honey.

OMPHALELCO'SIS, from ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and 'ελκος, 'an ulcer.' Ulceration of the navel.

OMPHALEX'OCHĒ, Exomphalus.

OMPHALOCARPUS, Galium aparine.

OMPHALOCELE, Exomphalos.

OMPHALOMANTI'A, from ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and μαντεια, 'prophecy.' A species of divination, practised by credulous matrons, who pretend to be able to know the number of children a female will have, by the number of knots in the navel-string of the child.

OM'PHALO-MESENTER'IC, Omphalo-mesenter'icus, Om'phalo-mesara'icus; from ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and mesenterium, 'the mesentery.'

OMPHALO-MESENTERIC VESSELS, Vasel'lo-me-

senter'ic, Vit'elline vessels. Haller gave this name to two very fine vessels, which spread their ramifications on the parietes of the umbilical vesicle. There is an omphalo-mesenteric artery and vein. The omphalo-mesenteric artery is a branch of the superior mesenteric;—the vein empties itself into the trunk, or into one of the branches of the superior mesenteric. Velpeau affirms, that they inosculate with a branch of the second or third order of those great vessels, with those in particular that are distributed to the cæcum, and he regards them to be the vessels of nutrition of the umbilical vesicle. They are occasionally met with in the fœtus, at the full period, under the form of whitish filaments, which extend from the mesenteric vessels to the umbilicus.

OMPHALO-MESERAIC, Omphalo-mesenteric.

OMPHALONCUS, Omphalophyma.

OMPHALONEURORRHEXIS, Omphalorrhexis.

OMPHALOPHY'MA, Omphaloncus, from ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and φυμα, 'tumour.' A tumefaction of the navel.

OMPHALOPROPTOSIS, Exomphalus.

OMPHALORRHAG''IA, Omphalor'rhagē, from ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break out.' Hemorrhage from the umbilicus, in the new-born in particular.

OMPHALORRHEX'IS; from ομφαλος, 'navel,' and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Omphaloneurorrhexis. Rupture of the navel string.

OMPHALOS, Umbilicus.

OMPH'ALOSITE, from ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and σιτος, 'nourishment.' A monster that possesses an imperfect kind of life, which ceases when the umbilical cord is divided.

OMPHALOT'OMY, Omphalotom'ia, from ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' The division of the navel string.

OMPHALUS, Umbilicus.

OMUS, Crude, Humerus.

ONAGRA, Œnothera biennis.

ONANIA, Masturbation.

ONANISM, Masturbation.

ONCOS, Tumour.

ONCO'SES, from ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumours, as diseases.

ONCOSIS, Intumescence.

ONCOT'OMY, Oncotom'ia, Onkotomy, from ογκος, 'a tumour,' and τομη, 'incision.' The opening of an abscess with a cutting instrument, or the excision of a tumour.

ONCTION, Inunction.

ONCUS, Swelling, Tumour.

ONDULATION, Fluctuation.

ONEBERRY, Paris.

ONEIROCRIT'ICUS, Oneiroc'rites, from ονειρος, 'a dream,' and κρισις, 'judgment.' One who judges according to dreams.

ONEIRODYN'IA, from ονειρος, 'a dream,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Painful dreams. Incubus and Somnambulism are oneirodyniæ.

ONEIRODYNIA ACTIVA, Paroniria, Somnambulism—o. Gravans, Incubus.

ONEIRODYNIE GRAVATIVE, Incubus.

ONEIROG'MUS, Oneirog'ynē, Oneiropol'esis, from ονειρος, 'a dream.' A lascivious dream; pollution; nocturnal pollution.

ONEIROGONORRHŒA, Pollution, nocturnal.

ONEIROGONOS, Pollution.

ONEIROL'OGY, Oneirolog''ia, from ονειρος, 'a dream,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of dreams.

ONEIROMANTI'A, from ονειρος, 'a dream,' and μαντεια, 'divination.' The art of divining by dreams; or of interpreting dreams.

ONEIRON'OSUS; from ονειρος, 'a dream,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' Somnia'tio morbo'sa. Morbid, uneasy dreaming.

ONEIROPOLESIS, Oneirogmus.

ONERA ALVI, Excrement.

ONGLADE, Paronychia.

ONGLE, Nail.

ONGLÉE, (F.) Digito'rum stupor à gélu. Painful numbness at the extremities of the fingers, caused by cold.

ONGLET, Pterygion.

ONGUENT, Unguentum — o. d'Althéa, Unguentum de Althæâ—o. de Blanc de baleine, Unguentum cetacei — o. Blanc de Rhazes, Unguentum plumbi subcarbonatis — o. de Cerusse, Unguentum plumbi subcarbonatis—o. Citrin contre la gale, Unguentum hydrargyri nitras—o. Digestif simple, Unguentum digestivum simplex — o. Gris, Unguentum oxidi hydrargyri cinereum—o. de Guimauve, Unguentum de althæâ—o. de Laurier, Unguentum laurinum — o. Mercuriel, Unguentum hydrargyri—o. Napolitain, Unguentum hydrargyri—o. de Nitrate de mercure, Unguentum hydrargyri nitratis — o. de Poix et de cire, Basilicon—o. de Soldat, Martiatum unguentum—o. de Sureau, Unguentum sambuci—o. de Tornamira, Unguentum plumbi subcarbonatis.

ONION, COMMON, Allium cepa — o. Sea, Scilla.

ONIS'CUS, Asel'lus, Cu'tio, Porcel'lio, Porcel'lus, Por'culus, Diminutive of ονος, 'a small ass.' A genus of insects very common in cellars and dark and moist places.

ONISCI ASELLI, Millep'edes, Aselli, Millep'edæ, Fabæ, Wood-lice, Slaters, Hog-lice, (F.) Cloportes ordinaires, had, at one time, a place in the pharmacopœias. They were considered stimulant and diuretic, and useful in jaundice.

ONITIS, Origanum dictamnus.

ONKOTOMY, Oncotomy.

ONOLOSAT, Obolus.

ONOMATOCLESIS, Nomenclature.

ONOMATOLOGIA, Nomenclature.

ONONIS ANTIQUORUM, O. spinosa.

ONO'NIS ARVEN'SIS, (F.) Bugrane des champs, has properties like the next.

ONONIS SPINO'SA, Ano'nis, Resta bovis, Arres'ta bovis, Rem'ora Ara'tri, Ononis antiquo'rum, Rest harrow, (F.) Arrête-bœuf, Bugrande épineuse, Bugrane. Nat. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The root of this plant was once used as a diuretic.

ONOPORDON ACAN'THIUM, Onopor'dum acan'thium, Car'duus tomento'sus, Acan'thium, Ac'anos, A. spina, Spina alba, Cotton Thistle, (F.) Chardon aux Ânes. Family, Cinarocephaleæ. Sex. Syst. Syngenesia Polygamia æqualis. The expressed juice has been recommended as a cure for cancer applied externally.

ONOPORDUM ACANTHIUM, Onopordon acanthium.

ONTHUS, Fimus.

ONYCHAUXĒ, from ονυξ, ονυχος, 'a nail,' and αυξη, 'increase.' Unusual increase of the size and thickness of the nails.

ONYCHEXALLAX'IS; from ονυξ, 'a nail,' and εξαλλαξις, 'change.' A morbid condition of the nails.

ONYCHIA, Paronychia.

ONYCHI'TIS; from ονυξ, 'nail,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a nail.

ONYCHOC'LASIS; from ονυξ, 'a nail,' and κλασις, 'fracture.' Fracture of a nail.'

ONYCHOCRYPTOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

ONYCHOGRYPHO'SIS, Onychogrypo'sis,

Onychogrypto'sis, Onychocrypto'sis, Gripho'sis, Grypho'sis, Onyx'is, from ονυξ, 'the nail,' and γρυποσις, 'crookedness.' Curvature of the nails; such as occurs in hectic individuals. Also, growing in of the nails; Incarna'tio seu Aduncа'tio seu Arctu'ra un'guium.

ONYCHON'OSI, Onychonu'si, from ονυξ, 'a nail,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' Disease of the nails.

ONYCHOPH'THORA, Onychophtho'ria, Onycoph'thora, Onycophtho'ria, from ονυξ, 'the nail,' and φθορα, 'degeneration.' A degenerate condition or destruction of the nails.

ONYCHOPHY'MA, from ονυξ, 'the nail,' and φυμα, 'a tumour.' A painful degeneration of the nails, which become thick, rough, and crooked. It occurs as a symptom of syphilis and of lepra.

ONYCHOPTO'SIS, Piptonyc'hia, Diæ'resis Un'gulæ, from ονυξ, 'a nail,' and πτωσις, 'falling.' The falling off of the nails.

ONYCOPHTHORA, Onychophthora.

ONYX, Hook, blunt, Nail, Pterygion. Also, a collection of purulent matter between the laminæ of the cornea, having the shape of a nail.

ONYXIS, Onychogryphosis.

ONYXITIS, see Paronychia.

OOCYESIS, Pregnancy, ovarian.

OODEOCELE, see Hernia (foraminis ovalis.)

OODES, Aqueous humour, Oval.

OÖG'ALA, Öög'la, Ogla, Puls ex Ovis et Lactē. Milk of eggs. A preparation of eggs and milk.

OOGLA, Oogala.

OOIDES, Aqueous humour, Oval.

OOLEMMA PELLUCIDUM, Zona pellucida.

OÖLOG''IA, Ovolog''ia, Ovol'ogy, from ωον, 'an ovum or egg,' and λογος, 'a discourse,' 'a description.' A description of the ovum.

OON, Ovum.

OONINE, Albumen.

OOPHORAUXE, Oarioparectama.

OOPHORITIS, Ooritis.

OOPHORON, Ovary.

OORITIS, Oaritis.

OPAC''ITY, Opac''itas, Opa'cousness; from opacare, 'to obscure.' Quality of that which is opake. The property possessed by some bodies of not allowing the light to traverse them. It is opposed to transparency. Opacity of the cornea constitutes albugo or leucoma; — opacity of the crystalline causes cataract.

OPAKE', Opa'cus, Opa'cous. An epithet given to bodies, which do not permit the passage of rays of light. The opake cornea is the sclerotica, in contradistinction to the transparent cornea or true cornea.

OP'ALINE. That which resembles the opal. A fluid is said to be opaline, when milky, and when it presents an appearance more or less like that of the opal.

OPERATIO, Action, Operation — o. Chirurgica, see Operation — o. Chymica seu pharmaceutica, Operation, chymical, &c. — o. Simplex, Haplotomia.

OPERA'TION, Opera'tio, from opus, operis, 'work.' The application of instruments to the human body with the view of curing disease. The object of an operation, opera'tio chirur'gica, is generally to divide or reunite parts, to extract extraneous or noxious bodies, and to replace organs that are wanting, by different instruments or artificial means. The principal operatory methods have been called Synthesis, Diæresis, Exæresis, and Prothesis. Frequently, the most difficult subject connected with an operation is to decide when it is absolutely called for or advisable, and when improper.

OPÉRATION À LAMBEAU, see Flap.

OPERATION, BILATERAL, see Lithotomy — o. Césarienne, Cæsarean section.

OPERATION, CHYM'ICAL or PHARMACEU'TICAL, Opera'tio chym'ica seu pharmaceu'tica, is any process whose object is the preparation of medicines; their combinations with each other, analysis, and decomposition; — such are, solution, distillation, sublimation, evaporation, digestion, maceration, infusion, decoction, calcination, &c. Some of these operations are mechanical; others, really chymical.

OPERATION, HIGH, see Lithotomy — o. Lateral, see Lithotomy — o. Sigaultian, Symphyseotomy.

OP'ERATOR. A surgeon who is in the habit of practising the greater operations. One who performs any operation. To be a good operator, the surgeon must be well acquainted with anatomy, and be possessed of strong nerve. See Surgeon.

OPER'CULUM, Operto'rium, Operimen'tum, from operire, 'to cover.' A cover or lid. In fishes, the gill cover.

OPERCULUM ASPERÆ ARTERIÆ, Larynx — o. Cutis, Epidermis — o. Ilei, Bauhin, valve of — o. Laryngis, Epiglottis — o. Oculi, Palpebra.

OPERCULUM PAPILLA'RUM. A shield for the nipple.

OPERIMENTUM, Operculum — o. Intestinorum, Epiploon — o. Prætensum abdominis, Peritonæum.

OPERTORIUM, Operculum.

OPHELIA CHIRATA, Gentiana chirayta.

OPHIASIS, Calvities, Porrigo decalvans.

OPHIOGLOS'SUM VULGA'TUM, O. ova'tum seu echinoglos'sum, Lingua serpenta'ria, Adder's Tongue, (F.) Langue de Serpent. Family, Filicoideæ. Sex. Syst. Cryptogamia. This plant was formerly considered to be vulnerary.

OPHIOPH'AGUS, from οφις, 'a serpent,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' An epithet for animals which feed on serpents. Pliny has called certain African tribes by this name.

OPHIORRHI'ZA, O. mungos, from οφις, 'a serpent,' and ριζα, 'root.' Family, Gentianeæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. The name of the plant whose root has been called Radix Serpen'tum, Mungos Radix. The bitter root is much esteemed in Java, Sumatra, &c., for preventing the effects that usually follow the bite of the naja, a venomous serpent; with which view it is eaten by the natives. It is, also, a reputed anthelmintic.

OPHIOXYLON, Ophioxylum.

OPHIOX'YLUM, from οφις, 'a serpent,' and ξυλον, 'wood.' Ophioxylum seu Ophioxylon serpenti'num seu trifolia'tum, Acawe'ria, Lignum serpentum, has been recommended in the bites of serpents, and in intermittents. It is said to be very bitter.

OPHIS, Serpent.

OPHI'TES, from οφις, 'a serpent.' Serpenti''nus, Ser'pentine or Black Por'phyry. This rock was formerly worn as an amulet, to cure diseases of the head.

OPHROSTAPHYLON, Bryonia alba.

OPHRYS, Supercilium.

OPHTHALMAL'GIA, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the eye. Neuralgia of the eye.

OPHTHALMEMPASMA, Collyrium siccum.

OPHTHAL'MIA, Ophthalmi'tis, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye.' Oculo'rum inflamma'tio, Cauma ophthalmi'tis, Ophthalmopo'nia, Inflamma'tion of the Eye, Ophthalmy, (F.) Ophthalmie, Ophthalmite, Inflammation de l'œil, Catarrhe oculaire. Three great varieties of ophthalmia, independently of the acute and chronic (which conditions occur in all inflammations,) may be reckoned:—the Ophthalmia membranarum, O. purulenta, and O. tarsi. The first is characterized by the general symptoms of ophthalmia;—pain and redness of the eye or its appendages; with intolerance of light, and unusual flow of tears; the inflammation being seated chiefly in the coats of the eyeball. It is the Hymenophthal'mia, Ophthalmia tarax'is, Conjunctivi'tis, Inflamma'tio conjuncti'væ, Symphymeni'tis, Syndesmi'tis, Catarr'hal ophthalmia, Ophthalmo-conjunctivi'tis, O. hu'mida, O. vera, Epiph'ora (Galen), Conjunctival Ophthal'mia, Tarax'is (Paulus of Ægina), Chemo'sis (Aëtius,) O. Chemosis, Lach'rymose Ophthalmia, (F.) Conjonctivite, Inflammation de la conjonctive. In the second,—Ophthalmia purulen'ta, O. puriform'is, Blennophthalmia, Blepharoblennorrhœ'a, Ophthalmoblennorrhœa, Blennorrhœa oc'uli—the internal surface of the palpebræ associates in the inflammation of the eye-ball; and there is a copious secretion of a purulent fluid. An epidemic and contagious(?) variety of this is the Ægyptian Ophthalmia, Ophthalmia epidem'ica, O. purulen'ta epidem'ica, O. contagio'sa, O. Catarrha'lis bell'lica, Lœmophthal'mia, O. bel'lica, O. Asiat'ica, Blennorrhœ'a Oculi Ægyptiaca, Conjunctivi'tis puro-muco'sa contagio'sa vel Ægyptiaca, Blepharo'tis glandula'ris contagio'sa, Adeni'tis palpebra'rum contagiosa, O. purulenta contagio'sa, Conjunctivi'tis puro-muco'sa contagio'sa, Sup'purative ophthalmia, Epidemic contagious ophthal'mia—called Egyptian, from its prevalence in Egypt during the British Expedition under Sir Ralph Abercrombie. The inflammation is rapid and destructive; granulations shoot from the tunica conjunctiva, and occasionally there is intolerable pain, often succeeded by delirium. In newborn children, a species of purulent ophthalmia, O. purulen'ta infan'tum, O. Neonato'rum, Blepharophthalmia neonato'rum, Lippitu'do neonato'rum, Blennorrhœ'a Oc'uli neonato'rum, Ophthal'moblennorrhœ'a neonato'rum, Blepharo-blennorrhœ'a neonato'rum, Blepharo-pyorrhœa neonato'rum, Pyophthalmia neonato'rum, Psorophthalmia neonato'rum, (F.) Ophthalmie puriforme des nouveaunés, in which the palpebræ are florid and peculiarly tumid, is by no means uncommon. It seems to be caused by acrid discharges from the mother, applied to the eye of the infant during its exit; or to the stimulus of the light, when the child first opens its eyes. A severe form of purulent ophthalmia—Hyperconjonctivite (Piorry)—is produced by the application of gonorrhœal matter to the eye. It is the Ophthalmia gonorrho'ica, Blennorrhœ'a oculi gonorrho'ica, Conjunctivi'tis blennorrhag''ica, O. gonorrho'ica, Gonorrhœ'al Ophthal'mia, (F.) Ophthalmie blennorrhagique, Conjonctivite blennorrhagique.

Ophthalmia is likewise modified by the condition of the constitution, and hence we have strumous, variolous, and other inflammations of the conjunctiva.

The third variety—the Ophthalmia Tarsi, O. glutino'sa, Blepharophthal'mia, Blepharotis, Blepharoti'tis, Blephari'tis, Blepharadeni'tis, Psorophthal'mia, Oc'uli palpebra'rum sca'bies pruriginо'sa, Adenophthalmia—is seated chiefly in the tarsus; the sebaceous crypts secreting a viscid and acrid fluid, that glues and ulcerates its edges, and irritates the eye.

The different forms of inflammation of the conjunctiva are thus classed by M. Desmarres:

- Conjunctivitis....
  - 1. Pure or phlegmonous.
  - 2. Pustular.
  - 3. Granular or catarrhal.
    - Contagious.
    - Non-contagious.
    - Miasmatic.
    - Exanthematic.....
      - Erysipelatous.
      - Variolous.
      - Morbillous.
      - Scarlatinous.
  - 4. Purulent.....
    - Of new-born infants.
    - Gonorrhœal.
    - Egyptian.

Conjunctivitis, when slight, requires little treatment: the antiphlogistic regimen—and, particularly, avoiding exposure to light,—being all that is necessary. When more severe, along with this, general and local blood-letting, especially by leeches to the side of the septum narium, must be employed so as to make a decided impression on the system; with nauseating doses of antimony, purgatives, blisters (at some distance from the organ), refrigerants; and astringents, cold or warm, according to circumstances, to the eye. In Purulent Ophthalmy, those measures must be still more actively employed, otherwise disorganization will speedily follow:—the granulations, which form on the adnata of the eyelids may be removed with the scissors, and the sore be touched with a solution of alum. Ophthalmia Tarsi must be treated on general principles, when severe. It usually, however, requires merely the antiphlogistic regimen, with the occasional use, especially at night, of a slightly stimulating ointment, such as the unguentum hydrargyri nitrico-oxydi, considerably reduced with lard. The ointment prevents the eyelids from being glued together during the night, and thus obviates the irritation caused by attempts at separating them.

OPHTHALMIATER, Oculist.

OPHTHALMIATRI'A, Ophthalmiatrotech'nica, Ophthalmotherapi'a; from ὀφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and ιατρος, 'a physician.' The art of the oculist. Treatment of diseases of the eye.

OPHTHALMIATROTECHNICA, Ophthalmiatria.

OPHTHAL'MIC, Ophthal'micus, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye.' That which relates or belongs to the eye.

OPHTHALMIC ARTERY, A. orbitaire, (Ch.) arises from the internal carotid, and issues from the cranium by the foramen opticum. At first, it is situate at the outer and lower side of the optic nerve, but ascends above this nerve, and passes towards the inner angle of the orbit. It furnishes, in its course, the lachrymal, centralis retinæ, infra-orbitars, ciliaries, anterior ciliaries, inferior and superior musculars, anterior and posterior ethmoidals, and superior and inferior palpebrals. After having given off these, it divides into two branches — the frontal and nasal, which furnish a number of ramifications, — some superficial, others deep-seated.

OPHTHAL'MIC GANG'LION, Lentic'ular G., Cil'iary ganglion, G. orbitaire (Ch.), is one of the smallest ganglions of the body, and formed by the 5th and 3d pairs of encephalic nerves. It is situate at the outer side of the optic nerve near the bottom of the orbit; is irregularly quadrilateral and flat: its colour of a reddish gray. Behind, it communicates by its posterior angles—by means of nervous filaments—with the nasal nerve of the ophthalmic and the motor oculi. Each of its anterior angles furnishes a fasciculus of small nerves. These are the ciliary nerves.

OPHTHALMIC NERVE, Ophthalmic Nerve of Willis, Or'bito-frontal, (Ch.) is the smallest and first of the three branches given off by the 5th pair. It proceeds along the external paries of the cavernous sinus, and enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure. It divides into three branches: one, external—the lachrymal nerve; another, superior — frontal nerve; and the last, internal — the nasal nerve. See Lachrymal, Frontal, Nasal.

OPHTHALMIC or OPTIC REMEDY, Ophthal'micum seu Op'ticum, (F.) Topique ophthalmique, is a medicine employed in ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMIC SINUS, see Cavernous Sinus.

OPHTHALMIC VEIN has the same arrangement as the artery, which it accompanies in all its divisions. It issues from the orbit at the inner part of the sphenoidal fissure, and discharges its blood into the cavernous sinus.

The name Facial Ophthalmic has been given to the branch by which the facial vein communicates with the ophthalmic.

OPHTHALMICA, Euphrasia officinalis.

OPHTHALMICI EXTERNI, Motores oculorum.

OPHTHALMICUM, Ophthalmic remedy.

OPHTHALMIDIUM, Microphthalmus.

OPHTHALMIE PURIFORME DES NOUVEAU-NÉS, see Ophthalmia — o. Blennorrhagique, see Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMITE, Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMI'TIS, Ophthalmia. This term is occasionally restricted to inflammation of the globe of the eye, in which, both the external and internal structures are involved.

OPHTHALMIUM, Microphthalmus.

OPHTHALMO-BLENNORRHŒA, Ophthalmia (purulent)—o. Neonatorum, see Ophthalmia (purulenta infantum.)

OPHTHALMO-CARCINO'MA, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Cancer of the eye.

OPHTHALMOCELE, Exophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOCHOLO'SIS, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and χολη, 'bile;' Ophthal'mia bilio'sa. Ophthalmia from biliary excitement.

OPHTHALMOCHROÏTES, see Choroidea tunica.

OPHTHALMO-CONJUNCTIVITIS, see Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMODULI'A, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and δουλεια, 'servitude.' Eye-service. The title of a book by Bartisch on diseases of the eye.

OPHTHALMODYN'IA, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and οδυνη, 'pain,' especially rheumatic pain of the eye. Plenck has given this name to neuralgia of the frontal nerve, in which the pain radiates particularly towards the bottom of the orbit. See Neuralgia, Frontal.

OPHTHALMODYNIA PERIODICA, Neuralgia, facial.

OPHTHALMŒDE'MA; from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and οιδημα, 'œdema.' Œdema of the conjunctiva.

OPHTHALMOG'RAPHY, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which gives a description of the eye. An anatomical description of the eye.

OPHTHALMOL'OGY, Ophthalmolog''ia, Ophthalmotol'ogy, (F.) Oculistique, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the eye. An anatomical treatise on the eye. A description of the eye in health and disease.

OPHTHALMOM'ETER, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and μετρον, 'measure.' An instrument of the nature of compasses, invented by F. Petit, for measuring the capacity of the anterior and posterior chambers of the eye in anatomical experiments.

OPHTHALMOMYÏ'TIS, Ophthalmomyosi'tis, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' μυς, 'a muscle,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the muscles of the eye.

OPHTHALMOPARALYSIS, Ophthalmoplegia.

OPHTHALMOPHLEBOTOM'IA, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' φλεψ, 'a vein,' and τομη, 'incision.' Bleeding from the vessels of the conjunctiva.

OPHTHALMOPHTHAR'SIS, Ophthalmophthi'sis, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and φθαρσις, 'corruption.' Destruction of the eyeball.

OPHTHALMOPHTHISIS, Ophthalmophthar-sis.

OPHTHALMOPLE'GIA, Ophthalmoparal'ysis, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and πλησσω, 'I strike.' Paralysis of one or more of the muscles of the eye.

OPHTHALMOPONIA, Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOPTO'SIS, from οφθαλμος, 'an eye,' and πτωσις, 'a prolapse.' A word employed by some authors in the sense of exophthalmia, by others, in that of hydrophthalmia.

OPHTHALMORRHAG''IA, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Hemorrhage from the tunica conjunctiva. It is rare.

OPHTHALMOS, Eye.

OPHTHALMOSCOP'IA, Ophthalmoscopy, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and σκοπεω, 'I regard attentively.' The art of judging of the temper, &c. of a person by examining his eyes. The art of judging of health or disease by inspection of the eyes. Exploration of the eyes in order to a diagnosis. .

OPHTHALMOSTA'TUM, (F.) Ophthal'mostat, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and στασις, 'station;' Spec'ulum Oc'uli. An instrument for fixing the eye.

OPHTHALMOTHERAPIA, Ophthalmiatria.

OPHTHALMOTOLOGY, Ophthalmology.

OPHTHALMOT'OMY, Ophthalmotom'ia, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' The para of anatomy which treats of the dissection of the eye. It has, also, been applied to extirpation of the eye.

OPTHALMOXEROSIS, Xerophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOX'YSIS, from οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and ξυω, 'I scrape.' A name given to the scarification sometimes practised on the conjunctiva, in cases of ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOXYS'TRUM, Ophthalmoxys'ter, Ophthalmoxyste'rium, Xystrum ophthal'micum. An instrument for scraping the eye. Name given to a small brush, with barbs like an ear of barley or rye, intended to scarify the eyelids in certain cases of ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMUS, Eye.

OPHTHALMYMENI'TIS, Ophthalmohymeni'tis, from οφθαλμος, 'eye,' 'υμην, 'membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of one or more of the membranes of the eye.

OPIACÉ, Opiate.

OPIACUM, Opiatum.

OPIANE, Narcotine.

OPIANUM, Narcotine.

OPIAT, Opiate — o. Dentifrice, Dentifrice.

O'PIATE, Opia'tum, Opia'cum, Papavera'ceum, Meco'nicum, (F.) Opiat, Opiacée, from οπιον, (οπος, 'juice,') 'opium.' A medicine containing opium. A medicine that procures sleep. An electuary; — formerly, an electuary, which contained opium.

O'PIATED, Opia'tus. Impregnated with opium. Affected by opium.

OPIATUM FEBRIF'UGUM, Electua'rium de Kinâ Kinâ; Elec'tuary of Cincho'na. (Pulv. cinch. ʒxviij, ammon. muriat. ʒj, mellis, syrup. absinth, āā ʒij. Make into an electuary. Ph. P.) Given, when cinchona is indicated.

OPIATUM MESENTER'ICUM, Electua'rium de A'loë, Muria'tē Hydrar'gyri, et Ferro. (Gum. ammon. ʒss, sennæ ʒvj, hydrargyri submuriat., rad. ari., aloës socotrin. āā ʒij, pulv. scammon. comp. (vulg. de tribus.) rhej. rad. āā ʒiij, ferri limatur. porphyrisat. ʒss. Bruise and mix together, add of compound syrup of apples double the weight of the other matters, and make into an electuary. Ph. P.) Dose, ʒss to ʒij, in obstructions of the liver, mesentery, &c.

OPIATUS, Opiated.

OPION, Opium.

OPISMA, Succus.

OPIS'THENAR, Dorsum manûs, from οπισθε, 'backwards,' and θεναρ, 'the flat of the hand.' The back of the hand.

OPISTHOCEPHALON, Occiput.

OPISTHOCRANIUM, Occiput.

OPISTHOCYPHOSIS, Cyphoma.

OPISTHOLOB'IUM, Opisthot'ium, from οπισθε, 'behind,' and λοβιον, 'the lobe of the ear.' Any agent applied behind the ear.

OPISTHOTIUM, Opistholobium.

OPISTHOT'ONOS, Raptus posterga'neus, Tet'anus dorsa'lis, T. posti'cus, T. posterga'neus, from οπισθε, 'backwards,' and τεινω, 'I stretch.' A species of tetanus, in which the body is bent backwards.

OPIUM, see Papaver — o. Colatum, Extractum opii — o. Depuratum, Extractum opii — o. Eaters, Theriaki.

OPOBALSAMUM, see Amyris opobalsamum.

OPOCARPASON, Carpasium (juice.)

OPODELDOC, Opodeldoch.

OPODEL'DOCH, Opodel'toch, Opodeldoc. An unmeaning term, frequently used by Paracelsus. Formerly, it signified a plaster for all external injuries: now, it is applied to the Linimentum Saponis Compositum.

OPODELDOCH, STEER'S. A liniment, called after the inventor. There are many formulæ for its preparation. The following is one. Sap. alb. lbj, camphor ʒij, ol. rorismarini fʒiv, spiritus vini rectificati Oij. See Linimentum Saponis Compositum.

OPODYMUS, Diprosopus.

OPOPIOS, Optic.

OPOPONACUM, Pastinaca opoponax.

OPOPONAX, see Pastinaca opoponax.

OPOPONAXWORT, Pastinaca opoponax.

OPO'RICE, from οπωρα, 'autumnal fruits.' A medicine, composed of several autumnal fruits, particularly of quinces, pomegranates, &c. and wine. It was formerly administered in dysentery, diseases of the stomach, &c.

OPOS, Succus expressus — o. Silphion, Laserpitinm.

OPPIDULUM, Vulva.

OPPILATIO, Emphraxis — o. Telæ Cellulosæ, Induration of the cellular tissue.

OPPILATIVUS, Obstruens.

OPPO'NENS, (F.) Opposant, from ob, and ponere, 'to place.' That which faces or is put in opposition to something. The name has been given to two muscles of the hand.

OPPONENS MIN'IMI DIG''ITI, Carpo-métacarpien du petit doigt (Ch.), Métacarpien du petit doigt, (F.) Opposant du petit doigt. This muscle has the same shape and arrangement as the preceding, but is of less size. It is situate in the hypothenar eminence. Its fibres are inserted into the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and terminate on the whole length of the inner edge of the 5th metacarpal bone. This muscle carries the 5th metacarpal bone forwards and outwards, and thus augments the concavity of the palm of the hand.

OPPONENS POL'LICIS, Flexor ossis metacar'pi pollicis, Opponens pollicis manûs, Flexor primi interno'dii (Douglass,) Antith'enar sive semi-interosseus pollicis, (F.) Carpo-métacarpien du pouce (Ch.) Métacarpien du pouce, Opposant du Pouce. A small, flat, triangular muscle, situate in the substance of the thenar eminence. It is attached, on the one hand, to the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and to the trapezium; and, on the other, to the whole of the outer margin of the first metacarpal bone. This muscle impresses on the first bone of the metacarpus a movement of rotation, which opposes the thumb to the other fingers.

OPPOSANT, Opponens — o. du Petit doigt, Opponens minimi digiti — o. du Pouce, Opponens pollicis.

OPPRESSIO, Catalepsy, Oppression — o. Nocturna, Incubus.

OPPRESSION, Oppres'sio, Thlipsis, Catathlips'is, from opprimere (ob, and premere, pressum,) 'to press against.' A state, in which the patient experiences a sensation of weight in the part affected. When employed abstractedly, it means, particularly, Oppression of the chest — Oppressio Pec'toris, (F.) O. de Poitrine.

OPPRESSION, Oppres'sio vir'ium, (F.) Oppression des forces, is, also, used for that condition, at the commencement of fevers, &c., in which the system is oppressed rather than debilitated, and where the vascular action rises, as the obstruction to free circulation is relieved by bleeding, purging, &c.

OPS, Eye.

OPSEONUSI, Opsionusi.

OPSIALGIA, Neuralgia, facial.

OPSIONU'SI, Opseonu'si, from ωψις, 'vision,' and νοσος, 'a disease;' Morbi visûs. Diseases of vision.

OPSIOTOC'IA, from οψε, 'too late,' and τοκος, 'birth;' Partus sero'tinus. Parturition after the usual period. See Pregnancy.

OPSIS, Pupil, Vision.

OPSOMA'NIAC, Opsom'anes, (F.) Opsomane, from οψον, 'aliment,' and μανια. One who loves some particular aliment to madness.

OPTESIS, Assatio.

OPTIC, Op'ticus, Opo'pios, from οπτομαι, 'I see.' That which relates to vision.

OPTIC CENTRE, Centrum op'ticum. The optic centre of the crystalline is the point at which the various rays proceeding from an object cross in their way to the retina.

OPTIC COMMISSURE, see Chiasmus.

OPTIC FORAMEN, Fora'men op'ticum, (F.) Trou optique. A round opening in the sphenoid bone, near the base of its lesser ala, through which the optic nerve passes.

OPTIC GANGLIA, Quadrigemina tubercula.

OPTIC GROOVE. A transverse groove on the superior surface of the sphenoid bone, on which the commissure of the optic nerve rests, and which is continuous on each side with the optic foramen.

OPTIC LOBES, Quadrigemina tubercula.

OPTIC NERVE, Nervus op'ticus, Par secun'dum seu op'ticum seu viso'rium, Nerve of the 2d pair, Nervus visi'vus seu viso'rius, Ocular nerve of Chaussier. The optic nerves are remarkable for their size; for their running a longer course within than without, the cranium; and for their furnishing no branch from their origin to their termination. They do not seem to arise, as was long supposed, from the optic thalami, but from the tubercula quadrigemina. Immediately after their origin the optic tracts, Tractus op'ticus, proceed forwards; are, at first, broad and flat; but afterwards become narrower and round. In front of the fossa pituitaria, they unite and decussate, each nerve proceeding through the optic foramen with the ophthalmic artery. The nerve passes to the back part of the globe of the eye, becomes narrower, and enters that organ to give rise to the nervous expansion called the retina. Besides its neurilemma, the optic nerve is surrounded by a sheath, furnished by the dura mater. This accompanies it as far as the eye.

The optic nerve is the nerve of special sensibility of the eye.

OPTIC REMEDY, see Ophthalmic remedy.

OPTIC THALAMI, Thalami nervorum opticorum —o. Tracts, see Optic nerve.

OPTICO-TROCHLÉI-SCLÉROTICIEN, Oblique, superior of the eye.

OPTICUM, Ophthalmic remedy.

OPTILOS, Eye.

OPTOM'ETER, from οπτομαι, 'I see,' and μετρον, 'a measure.' An instrument for measuring the distance of distinct vision.

OPUNTIA, Cactus opuntia.

ORA SERRATA, see Ciliary (Body.)

ORACH, STINKING, Chenopodium vulvaria.

ORAL, (F.) Oral, Vocal, from os, oris, 'a mouth.' Relating to the mouth or to speech.

ORANGE, FLOWERS OF THE, see Citrus aurantium — o. Root, Hydrastis Canadensis — o. Tree, Citrus aurantium.

ORANGEADE. A drink, made with orange juice diluted with water. It is antiphlogistic, and often recommended in acute diseases.

ORANGES, see Citrus aurantium — o. Curassoa, Aurantia curassaventia.

ORBES CARTILAGINOSI TRACHEÆ, see Trachea.

OBICULAIRE DES LÈVRES, Orbicularis oris—o. des Paupières, Orbicularis palpebrarum.

ORBIC'ULAR, Orbicula'ris, from orbis, 'a circle.' Spherical, circular.

ORBICULAR BONE, Os orbicula'rē seu lenticula'rē seu Sylvii seu orbicula'rē Syl'vii, Glob'ulus stap'edis ossis, Epiph'ysis cruris longio'ris in'cudis, Ossic'ulum orbicula'rē seu squamo'sum seu cochlearē seu quartum, is the smallest of the four bones of the ear. It is scarcely perceptible, round, convex on two surfaces, and situate between the long ramus of the incus and the head of the stapes.

ORBICULAR MUSCLES are muscles with circular fibres surrounding some natural opening of the body. 1. Orbicula'ris Oris, Sphincter Labio'rum, Semi vel Demi-orbicula'ris, Supra-semi-orbicula'ris, Constric'tor Oris, Labia'lis, Osculato'rius, Basia'tor, (F.) Labial, Orbiculaire des lèvres. A muscle situate in the substance of the lips, and extending from one commissure to the other. It is formed of two very distinct portions, of a semi-oval shape; one belonging to the upper lip, the other to the lower. Their extremities cross at the commissures, and are confounded with the other muscles of the parts. The use of this fleshy muscle is to bring the lips together, and to close the aperture of the mouth, by making it represent a sort of bourrelet with radiated wrinkles. It is an antagonist to every other muscle of the lips. 2. Orbicularis Palpebra'rum, Orbicularis oc'uli, Orbicularis palpebra'rum cilia'ris, Palpebra'rum duo mus'culi, Maxil'lo-palpébral, Palpebra'lis, Constrict'or palpebra'rum, Sphincter Palpebra'rum seu Oculi, (F.) Naso-palpébral (Ch.), Palpébral, Orbiculaire des paupières. A muscle common to both the eyelids, and seated in their substance. It is broad, thin, transversely oval, and cleft in its great diameter. It is attached to the nasal process of the superior maxillary bone; to the internal angular process of the frontal bone, and to the orbitar process of the superior maxillary bone. From these origins the muscle passes outwards, under the skin of the eyelids, surrounding the orbit in a circular manner, extending somewhat beyond it, and covering the upper part of the cheek. It is inserted into the skin of the eyelids, its upper and inner edge being intimately connected with the frontal and corrugator muscles. Its use is to close the eye, by bringing the eyelids together. The part of the orbicularis which covers the cartilages of the eyelids, and which is remarkably thin, is the Musculus Ciliaris of some authors.

ORBICULARIS OCULI, Orbicularis palpebrarum, see Orbicular muscles — o. Oris, see Orbicular muscles — o. Palpebrarum, see Orbicular muscles — o. Palpebrarum ciliaris, see Orbicular muscles — o. Recti, Sphincter ani externus.

ORBICULUS CILIARIS, Ciliary ligament, Ciliary zone.

ORBIS GENU, Patella.

ORBIT, Or'bita, O. oc'uli, Troch'ia, Conchus seu Cav'itas seu Fo'vea seu Pelvic'ula oc'uli, from orbis, 'a circle.' The circular cavities are so called, which lodge the organs of sight. The orbits or orbitar fossæ or cavities, conchi, κογχοι, are situate at the upper part of the face, and are composed of seven bones, viz.: — the frontal, above; the palate and superior maxillary, below; the sphenoid and malar, externally; and the ethmoid and lachrymal, internally. The orbit is filled by the globe of the eye, with its different accessary parts — muscles, nerves, vessels, the lachrymal gland, &c. Its margin is termed margo orbita'lis.

ORBITA, Orbit — o. Oculi, Orbit.

ORBITAL FISSURE, INFERIOR, Sphenoidal fissure — o. Fissure, superior, Maxillary fissure.

OR'BITAR, Orbita'rius, Orbita'lis, Or'bital. Same etymon. Relating or belonging to the orbit.

ORBITAR APOPH'YSES or PROC''ESSES terminate the two extremities of the orbitar arch. The external is much more prominent, and is articulated with the cheek-bone; the internal is thinner, and joins the os unguis.

ORBITAR ARCH, (F.) Arcade orbitaire, is the projecting, round margin, which separates the frontal and orbitar surfaces of the os frontis, and forms a part of the circumference of the orbit.

OR'BITAR FISSURES, (F.) Fentes orbitaires. These are situate in the orbit. They are two in number: one superior, the Sphenoidal; the other inferior, the Spheno-maxillary.

ORBITAR FORAM'INA. Of these there are several:—1. The Foramen orbitarium supe'rius, (F.) Trou orbitaire supérieur, which is situate at the junction of the inner third of the orbitar arch with its two outer thirds, and gives passage to the frontal nerve. 2. The Foram'ina orbita'ria interio'ra vel inter'na, Foram'ina Ethmoïdca. These are situate at the upper part of the internal paries of the orbit, are formed by the union of two notches of the os frontis with two similar ones of the ethmoid; and are distinguished into anterior and posterior. The former gives passage to the ethmoidal filament of the nasal nerve and to a small artery.

ORBITAR NERVE, Nervus orbita'lis seu orbita'rius seu subcuta'neus malæ, is a branch given off from the superior maxillary. It enters the orbit by the spheno-maxillary fissure, and divides into two filaments; the one — malar — which passes over the cheek-bone, is distributed to the orbicularis palpebrarum, and anastomoses with the facial nerve; the other — temporal — which passes to the temporal fossæ, and anastomoses with the inferior maxillary and facial, to become afterwards subcutaneous.

ORBITO-EXTUS-SCLÉROTICIEN, Rectus externus oculi — o. Intus-Scléroticien, Rectus internus oculi — o. Maxillo-labial, Levator labii superioris proprius — o. Palpébral, Levator palpebræ superioris—o. Sus-palpébral, Levator palpebræ superioris.

ORCANETTE, Anchusa officinalis.

ORCHALGIA, Orchidalgia.

ORCHAS, Scrotum.

ORCHEI'TIS, Oschei'tis, Oschei'tis, Inflamma'tio scroti, from ορχας, 'the scrotum,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the scrotum.

ORCHEITIS, Hernia humoralis.

ORCHEOCATABASIS, Orchidocatabasis.

ORCHEOCELE, Orchiocele.

ORCHEOTOMY, Castration.

ORCHESTROMANIA, Chorea.

ORCHIDAL'GIA, Orchal'gia, Orchidodyn'ia, from ορχις, 'a testicle,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain of the testicle. Neuralgia of the testicle. Irritable testicle. A form of neuralgia.

ORCHIDATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia testic'uli, from ορχις, ορχιδος, 'a testicle,' and atrophia, 'atrophy.' Atrophy or wasting of the testicles.

ORCHIDITIS, Hernia humoralis.

ORCHIDOCATAB'ASIS, Orcheocatab'asis, Descen'sus testiculo'rum, from ορχις, 'the testis,' and καταβασις, 'descent.' The descent of the testes into the scrotum.

ORCHIDOCELE, Hernia humoralis.

ORCHIDODYNIA, Orchidalgia.

ORCHIDONCUS, Hernia humoralis.

ORCHIDOTOMY, Castration.

ORCHILL, Lichen roccella.

ORCHIOCE'LĒ, Orcheoce'lē, from ορχις, 'the testicle,' and κηλη, 'a rupture.' A tumour of the testicle. Scrotal hernia. Hernia humoralis. A name given to several diseases of the testicle and its envelopes, essentially differing from each other.

ORCHIOCE'LĒ SCIRRHO'SA, Scirrhoce'lē. A malignant tumour of the testis.

ORCHIS, Testicle—o. Butterfly, Orchis bifolia.

ORCHIS MAS'CULA, Satyr'ion, Male Orchis, Testic'ulus cani'nus, Cynosor'chis, Dogs' stones, Male Fools' stones, Twinroot. This root has had a place in some pharmacopœias, on account of the glutinous, slimy juice it contains. The root of the Orchis bifolia or Butterfly orchis, has likewise been collected. It has been used as a demulcent. Its fancied aphrodisiac virtues seem to be owing to its resemblance to ορχις, 'a testicle,' whence its name.

Salep is obtained from this variety of the orchis; — and from the Orchis morio, &c. See Salep.

ORCHIS, ROUND-LEAVED, LARGE, Platanthera orbiculata.

ORCHITE, Hernia humoralis.

ORCHITIS, Hernia humoralis.

ORCHOI, see Tarsus.

ORCHOTOMIA, Castration. Also, removal of the tarsi.

ORDEOLUM, Hordeolum.

ORDEUM, Hordeum.

ORDINAIRES, Menses.

ORDONNANCE, Formula, Prescription.

OREILLE D'HOMME, Asarum—o. de Souris, Hieracium pilosella.

OREILLETTE, Asarum, Auricle of the heart.

OREILLONS, Parotis, Cynanche parotidæa.

ORELIA GRANDIFLORA, Allamanda.

ORELLANA, see Terra Orleana.

OREOSELINUM, Athamanta aureoselinum—o. Africanum, Bubon galbanum — o. Legitimum, Athamanta aureoselinum—o. Nigrum, Athamanta aureoselinum.

OREXIS, Appetite, Pyrosis—o. Cynodes, Boulimia.

ORGAN, Or'ganum, Or'ganon. 'An instrument.' Part of an organized being, destined to exercise some particular function. Thus — the eyes are organs of sight; the muscles are organs of motion, &c. The collection of organs, which concur in any function, is called apparatus.

ORGANA GENERATIONI INSERVIENTIA, Genital organs — o. Sudoripara, see Perspiration.

ORGANES GÉNITAUX, Genital organs.

ORGAN'IC, Organ'icus. Relating to an organ or organs, and to beings possessed of organs. Hence, ORGANIC FUNCTIONS are those possessed by both animals and vegetables. It is also used synonymously with vital, in contradistinction to physical.

ORGANIC CHEMISTRY, see Chymistry.

ORGANIC DISEASES or LESIONS are such as concern the organ itself, in contradistinction to functional, rat''ional, or dynam'ic, which merely concern the function. Of course, organic diseases of a part are always more serious than functional.

ORGANIC NERVOUS SYSTEM, see Trisplanchnic nerve.

ORGANICISM, Organicism'us, from οργανον, 'an organ.' The doctrine of the localization of disease. A modern term, but not much used.

ORGANISATIO, Organization.

ORGANISATUS, Organized.

OR'GANISM. Same etymon. The living economy. Many physiologists have used this word synonymously with organization; but more especially to designate the aggregate of vital actions in organized beings, animals as well as vegetables. The collection of parts composing an organized body, and the laws which govern it.

ORGANIZABIL'ITY, from organisatio, and habilis, 'suitable.' Capability of organization or of being formed into living tissue. Substances possessed of such capability—as fibrin—are said to be organizable.

ORGANIZABLE, see Organizability.

ORGANIZA'TION, Organisa'tio, from οργανον, 'an organ.' The manner of structure proper to different beings. It is also employed in the sense of the structure of a part; as, the organization of the heart, &c.

Organization, Compounds of, Principles, immediate.

OR'GANIZED, Or'ganis instruc'tus, Organisa'tus. That which is composed of organs.

Organized Bodies, (F.) Corps organisés, are those endowed with life; i. e. animals and vegetables: in contradistinction to inorganic bodies, which comprise the mineral kingdom. See Corpus.

ORGANOCHEMIA, Chymistry, organic.

ORGANOG''ENY, Organogen'ia, from οργανον, 'an organ,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' The doctrine of the formation of different organs.

ORGANOGNO'SIA, from οργανον, 'organ,' and γνωσις, 'knowledge.' The knowledge and discrimination of organized bodies.

ORGANOG'RAPHY, Organograph'ia, from οργανον, 'an organ,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the organs of a living body.

ORGANOLOGY, Anatomy, Craniology.

ORGANON OLFACTŪS, Nasus.

ORGANONOM'IA, from οργανον, 'an organ,' and νομος, 'a law.' The doctrine of the laws of organic life.

ORGANOZOONOMIA, Zoonomia.

ORGANUM, Instrument.

ORGASM, Orgas'mus, Orgo'sis, from οργαω, 'I desire ardently,' 'I am excited.' Œstrua'tion. A strong impulse or desire for something. State of excitement and turgescence of any organ whatever. Erethism. Applied particularly to the height of venereal excitement in sexual intercourse.

ORGASMUS, Turgescence.

ORGAS'TICA. Same etymon. The second order of the class Genetica of Good. Defined: diseases affecting the orgasm; organic or constitutional infirmity disordering the power or the desire of procreating.

ORGE, Rage.

ORGE, Hordeum — o. Perlé, see Hordeum.

ORGEAT, Syrupus amygdalæ.

ORGELET, Hordeolum.

ORGEOLET, Hordeolum.

ORGOSIS, Orgasm.

ORICHALCUM, Brass.

ORICULAR, Auricular.

ORICULE, Auricle, Pavilion of the ear.

ORIFICIUM, Mouth—o. Dextrum Ventriculi, Pylorus—o. Uteri, Os uteri—o. Ventriculi Sinistrum, Cardia.

ORIG'ANUM, Origanum vulga're, Cuni'la bubula, Marjora'na mancura'na, O. heracleot'icum, Zazarhen'di herba, Wild mar'joram, Common marjoram, Mancura'na, (F.) Pied de lit. Family. Labiatæ. Sex. Syst. Didynamia Gymnospermia. This plant resembles marjoram in smell; and has a pungent taste, much like thyme. It is aromatic and stimulant; and its oil possesses the properties of the essential oils in general. The oil, oleum origani (Ph. U. S.), is very pungent, and is rarely given internally. It is used in toothach.

Origanum Aquaticum, Eupatorium cannabinum—o. Creticum, O. dictamnus.

Origanum Dictam'nus, Dictamnus Cret'icus, O. Creticum, Amar'acus tomento'sus, Oni'tis, Dittany of Crete, (F.) Dictamne de Crète. The leaves of this plant were once recommended as emmenagogue and alexipharmic.

Origanum Heracleoticum, Origanum.

Origanum Majora'na, Marjora'na, O. majoranoï'des, Majorana, M. horten'sis, Sweet marjoram, Samp'sucus, Agriorig'anum, Amar'acus, (F.) Marjolaine. Its odour is strong and fragrant; taste aromatic and bitterish. Its properties are those of a stomachic and errhine. It is chiefly used, however, for culinary purposes, and as a snuff in headach.

Origanum Syriacum, Teucrium marum.

ORIGINAIRE (F.), from origo, 'origin.' This term has been used, by French writers, in the same sense as congenital. It is particularly applied to affections depending upon faulty conformation, or to faulty conformation itself.

ORIGO, Arche.

ORISMOLOGY, Terminology.

ORLEANA, see Terra Orleana.

ORME, Appetite.

ORME, Ulmus.

ORMSKIRK MEDICINE. A celebrated antilyssic remedy, supposed to consist of Pulv. Cretæ, ℥ss; Bol. Armen. ℥iij; Alumin. gr. x; Pulv. Inulæ, ℥j; Ol. Anisi, gtt. vj.

This is taken for a dose every morning for six times, in a glass of water, with a small proportion of fresh milk.

ORNAMENTUM FOLIACEUM, see Tube, Fallopian.

ORNITHOG'ALUM ALTIS'SIMUM. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Asphodeleæ, the fleshy bulb of which is diuretic. An oxymel is prepared of it, which is given in catarrh, asthma, phthisis, and hydrothorax. It resembles squill in its medical properties.

Ornithogalum Maritimum, Scilla—o. Squilla, Scilla.

ORNITHOGLOSSÆ, see Fraxinus excelsior.

ORNUS EUROPÆA, see Fraxinus ornus—o. Mannifera, Fraxinus ornus — o. Rotundifolia, Fraxinus ornus — o. Sylvestris, Fraxinus excelsior.

OROBAN'CHĒ VIRGINIA'NA, Epifa'gus America'nus, E. Virginia'nus, Virgin'ia broomrape, Beech-drops, Cancer-root. Family, Orobanchoideæ. This parasitic plant is astringent, and a peculiar and extremely nauseous bitter. It is most powerful when fresh. It has been used in dysentery; and, externally, to obstinate ulcers.

Orobanchē America'na, and O. Uniflo'ra, have the same properties, and are, likewise, called Cancer-root, Earth-club, and Clapwort.

OROBE, Ervum ervilia.

OROBION, see Ervum ervilia.

OROBOĪ'DES, from ορομβος, 'the orobus,' and ειδος, 'form.' Orobo'des. Having the shape of the orobus. A name given to urine, Urina orobo'des seu oroboï'des, when depositing a substance of a fawn colour, like the meal of the orobus.

OROBUS, Ervum ervilia—o. Faba, Vicia faba.

ORONGE, see Agaric.

OROPHALL'US, from ορος, or ορρος, 'the rump,' and φαλλος, 'the male organ.' A monster having a second male organ originating from the rump.—Gurlt.

OROS, Croupion, Serum.

OR'PIMENT, Auripigmen'tum, Orpin, Risigal'lum, Rissigallum, Cloaux, Elomē, Sira, Lempuiaz, Spec'ulum cit'rinum, Yrides, Yride. The native yellow sulphuret of arsenic. It is poisonous, but less so than the oxide. It is, also, called Adarigo, Adarnech, Ahusal, Alīnanacha, Azarnet. The Turks prepare a depilatory with it, which they call Rusma.

ORPIN, Orpiment — o. Brûlant, Sedum — o. Grand, Sedum telephium — o. Reprise, Sedum telephium.

ORPINE, Sedum telephium.

ORRHOCHEZIA, Diarrhœa, serous.

ORRHOCYST'IS, from ορρος, 'serum,' and κυστις, 'a bladder.' An encysted tumour containing a serous fluid.

ORRHOHYMENITIS, Hydrohymenitis.

ORRHOPYG'ION. The inferior extremity of the vertebral column; from ορος, 'extremity,' and πυγη, 'the nates.' The os coccygis. Also, the raphe, extending from the penis to the anus, and separating the scrotum into two parts.

ORRHORRHŒ'A, from ορρος, 'serum,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' A morbidly increased secretion of a serous fluid.

ORRHOS, Croupion, Serum.

ORRIS, Iris Florentina — o. Common, Iris Germanica.

ORSEILLE, Lichen roccella.

ORTEIL, Digitus pedis.

ORTHOCO'LUM, from ορθος, 'straight,' and κωλον, 'limb.' Stiffness of the limb, so that it is kept quite straight.

ORTHODO'RON. A measure with the Greeks, equal to eleven finger-breadths.

ORTHOG'NATHOUS, from ορθος, 'right, straight,' and γναθος, 'jaw.' Having a vertical jaw. A term applied to the form of head in which the facial angle approaches the right angle.

ORTHOMORPHIA, Orthopædia.

ORTHOMORPHOSIS, Orthopædia.

ORTHONTROPIA, Orthopædia.

ORTHOPÆDI'A, Orthopæ'dicē, Orthomor'phia, Orthomorpho'sis, Orthontrop'ia, Orthoped'ics, from ορθος, 'right,' and παις, 'a child.' The part of medicine whose object is to prevent and correct deformity in the bodies of children. Often used, however, with a more extensive signification, to embrace the correctiou or prevention of deformities at all ages. Orthosomat'ics, Orthosomat'icē, from ορθος, 'right,' and σωμα, 'body,' has been proposed as a preferable term.

ORTHOPE'DIC, Orthopæ'dicus; same etymon. Relating to orthopædia, — as Orthopedic Institution, Institu'tum orthopæ'dicum seu orthopæ'dium: an institution for the correction or prevention of deformities in children.

ORTHOPEDICS, Orthopædia.

ORTHOPE'DIST, Ortho'ter, Orthopæ'dicus, same etymon. One who practises orthopædia.

ORTHOPHREN'IC, Orthophren'icus, from ορθος, 'right,' and φρην, 'mind.' Relating to sound mind.

ORTHOPNŒ'A, Suffoca'tio, Strangula'tio, Præfoca'tio, Pnix, Pnigmus, Euthypnoē, Euthypnœ'a, Angor, Apnœ'a, from ορθος, 'right,' 'straight,' and πνεω, 'I respire.' Impracticability of breathing in the horizontal posture. Necessity of being in the erect posture, in order to respire.

ORTHOPNŒA CARDIACA, Angina Pectoris — o. Convulsiva, Asthma — o. Cynanchica, Cynanche trachealis — o. Hydrothoracica, Hydrothorax — o. Hysterica, Angone — o. Pituitosa, Mycorthopnœa — o. Tussiculosa, Pertussis.

ORTHOSOMATICE. Orthopædia.

ORTHOSOMATIQUE, Orthopædia.

ORTHOTER, Orthopedist.

ORTHYSTEROPTOMA, Prolapsus uteri.

ORTHYSTEROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

ORTIE, Urtica — o. Blanche, Lamium album — o. Brûlante, Urtica urens — o. Morte, Lamium album — o. Morte des Bois, Galeopsis — o. Romaine, Urtica pilulifera.

ORTYX, Tetrao coturnix.

ORUS, Croupion, Serum.

ORVALE, Salvia sclarea.

ORVIETA'NUM. From the Italian Orvietano. An electuary regarded as an invaluable antidote, and composed of Old theriac, Dried vipers, Scorzonera, Carlina, Imperatorium, Angelica, Bistort, Rosemary, Juniper, Cinnamon, Cloves, Mace, Honey, and a crowd of other substances. Its medical properties resembled, in some respects, those of the theriac. It was so called, according to some, because invented by Orvietano, a celebrated charlatan; or, according to others, from Orvieto, a town in Italy.

ORY'ZA, from Orez, (Arab.,) Ory'za sati'va, Rice, (F.) Riz. Family, Gramineæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. A plant, almost aquatic, and indigenous in China, one of the richest productions of Egypt, and which prospers in the warmer regions of the four quarters of the globe. The grain inclosed in the husk is called by the Malays Paddy, Padi, or Paddie; when deprived of the husk, Bras, and when boiled Nasi. Its amylaceous seeds, Ory'za, Ory'zum, Hordeum galac'ticum, nourish more men than those of wheat and rye together. Besides being alimentary, they are demulcent and emollient. Gardiner's alimentary preparation is very finely ground rice-meal.

Mucilage of Rice, Rice water, may be formed by taking one ounce of rice, and, having washed it, macerating it for three hours in a quart of tepid soft water, in a pan placed upon a stove; then boiling the whole slowly for another hour, and straining through a sieve.

It may be sweetened and acidulated, or be prepared with milk, like arrow-root, and be used as a demulcent.

Rice Jelly is made by macerating a sufficient quantity of clean rice in as much water as will cover it; boiling slowly, adding water as it evaporates, until the rice is reduced to a pap, sweetening and flavouring with lemon-juice or vanilla, and passing through a fine sieve into a form or mould. It may be eaten alone or with milk; and is a good diatetic preparation for those of weak digestive powers.

Ground rice. Take a tablespoonful of ground rice; a pint and a half of milk, and half an ounce of candied lemon-peel. Rub the rice smooth with the milk: then add the lemon-peel cut into small pieces; boil for half an hour, and strain whilst the milk is hot. It is used in the same cases as rice jelly.

OSCEDO, Yawning.

OSCHÆMATŒDE'MA, Oschæmœde'ma, Œde'ma scroti cruen'tum; from οσχεον, 'scrotum,' αιμα, 'blood,' and οιδημα, 'œdema.' Effusion of blood into the scrotum.

OSCHÆMŒDEMA, Oschæmatœdema.

OSCHE. Scrotum.

OSCHEITIS, Orcheitis, Oschitis.

OSCHEOCARCINOMA, Cancer, chimney-sweepers'.

OSCHEOCE'LE, Oschoce'lē, from οσχεον, 'the scrotum,' and κηλη, 'tumour;' Scrotal hernia, see Bubonocele. Sauvages uses it in the sense of Dropsy of the scrotum, see Hydrocele.

Oscheocele Aquosa, Hydroscheocele—o. Flatulenta, Physocele—o. Hydatidosa, Hydatidocele —o. Œdematica, Œdematoscheocele—o. Seminalis, Spermatocele—o. Urinalis, Urocele—o. Varicosa, Varicocele.

OSCHEON, Scrotum, Os uteri.

OSCHEON'CUS, Oschon'cus, Oscheophy'ma, Oschophy'ma, from οσχεον, 'scrotum,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A preternatural swelling of the scrotum.

OSCHEOPHYMA, Oscheoncus.

OSCHEOPLAS'TIC, Oscheoplas'ticus, from οσχεον, 'the scrotum,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' An epithet given to the operation for restoring the scrotum when lost.

OSCHEOPYŒDE'MA, Oschopyœde'ma, Œde'ma scroti purulen'tum. Purulent tumefaction of the scrotum.

OSCHEUS, Scrotum.

OS'CHION. The raised margin of the os uteri. According to some, an excrescence from the os uteri.

OSCHI'TIS, Orchei'tis, Oschei'tis, Inflamma'tio scroti, from οσχεον, 'the scrotum,' and itis, 'inflammation.' Inflammation of the scrotum.

OSCHOCARCINOMA, Cancer, chimney-sweepers'.

OSCHOCELE, Oscheocele.

OSCHONCUS, Oscheoncus.

OSCHOPHYMA, Oscheoncus.

OSCHOPYŒDEMA, Oscheopyœdema.

OSCHURŒDE'MA; from οσχεον, 'scrotum,' ουρον, 'urine,' and οιδημα, 'œdema.' Œdema from effusion of urine into the scrotum.

OSCHUS, Scrotum.

OSCHYDRŒDE'MA, from οσχεον, 'scrotum,' ὑδωρ, 'water,' and οιδημα, 'œdema.' Œdema scroti aquo'sum. Watery œdema of the scrotum.

OSCILLA'TIO, Irritability, Oscillation.

OSCILLA'TION, Oscilla'tio; from oscillum, 'an image perhaps of Bacchus, hung on ropes, and swung up and down in the air.' Vibration, Vibra'men, Vibra'tio, Vibra'tus. Also, a partial rotatory movement of the eyeball to and from its antero-posterior axis.

OS'CITANT (FEVER), Febris os'citans, (E.) Fièvre oscitante, from oscitare, 'to yawn.' A fever, in which the patient is continually yawning.

OSCITATIO, Yawning.

OSCULATORIUS, Orbicularis oris.

OSCULUM UTERI, Os uteri.

OSCUS, Scrotum.

OSEILLE, Rumex acetosa — o. Boucher, Rumex scutatus — o. Petite, Rumex scutatus — o. Ronde, Rumex scutatus — o. Rouge, Rumex sanguineus.

OS'MAZOME, Os'mozome, Osmazo'ma, Osmozo'ma, Zomod'mum, (F.) Matière extractive du Bouillon; Extrac'tive of meat, Saponaceous extract of meat; from οσμη, 'smell,' and ζωρος, 'soup.' M. Thénard gave this name to an extractive matter, contained in muscular flesh and in the blood of animals, which he considers of a peculiar nature. It has an agreeable smell and taste, and is found in Bouillons of meat, in the proportion of one part to seven of gelatin. Vauquelin discovered in it some fungi. It is the substance which gives the flavour of meat to soups, and hence its name. It has been prescribed in the dose of ℥ss to ℥j, in broth or in powder, with aromatics, as a stimulant to the digestive actions and a restorer of appetite in convalescence. An Osmazome chocolate, Chocola'ta cum osmazo'ma, has been introduced as an analeptic article of diet. It consists of chocolate ℔j to osmazome ℥j.

OSME, Odour.

OSMESIS, Olfaction.

OSMIDRO'SIS, from οσμη, 'odour,' and ἱδρως, 'sweat.' Perspiration of an unusual odour.

OSMITOPS'IS ASTERISCOÏ'DES, Bellis. A plant, of the Cape of Good Hope, which, from its smell and taste, seems to contain camphor; hence its antispasmodic virtues. In infusion, it is often beneficially employed in cough, hoarseness, and diseases of the chest generally, and is said to be serviceable in flatulent colic. Infused in spirit, spir'itus bellidis, it has been used successfully as an external remedy in paralysis.

OSMOMETRICUS SENSUS, Olfaction.

OSMON'OSI, Osmonw'si, Morbi olfac'tûs, from οσμη, 'odour,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' Diseases of olfaction.

OSMONOSOLOG''IA, from οσμη, 'odour,' νοσος, 'disease,' and λογος, 'description.' The doctrine of, or a treatise on, the diseases of the sense of smell.

OSMORRHI'ZA LONGIS'TYLIS, Sweet Cic''ely. An indigenous plant, Order Umbelliferæ, which flowers in May and June. It is an agreeable aromatic, having much of the flavour of anise.

OSMOZOME, Osmazome.

OSMUND, ROYAL, Osmunda regalis.

OSMUN'DA CINNAMO'MEA, Cinnamon Fern Indigenous; Order, Filices; is regarded to be demulcent, subastringent, and tonic. Boiled in milk, it yields a fine mucilage, which is useful in diarrhœa.

OSMUN'DA REGA'LIS, Filix Flor'ida, Osmund-royal. This plant was once thought to possess astringent and emmenagogue virtues.

OSORON, Opium.

OSPHRANTERICUS, Olfactory.

OSPHRANTICOS, Olfactory.

OSPHRASIA, Olfaction.

OSPHRESIOL'OGY, Osphresiolog''ia, from οσφρησις, 'odour,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' A treatise on olfaction and odours.

OSPHRESIS, Olfaction.

OSPHRETICUS, Olfactory.

OSPHRIS'TICÊ, from οσφρησις, 'olfaction. The doctrine of the phenomena of odours.

OSPHYALGEMA, Coxalgia.

OSPHYALGIA, Coxalgia.

OSPHYARTHRITIS, Osphyitis.

OSPHYARTHROCACE, Coxarum morbus.

OSPHYI'TIS, Osphy'tis, Osphyarthri'tis, Inflamma'tio coxæ, from οσφυς, 'the hip,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the parts about the hip.

OSPHYRRHEUMA, Lumbago.

OSPHYS, Haunch, Lumbi.

OSPHYTIS, Osphyitis.

OSSA BREGMATIS, Parietal bones—o. Convoluta inferiora, Turbinated bones, inferior — o. Digitorum manûs, Phalanges of the fingers — o. Digitorum pedis, Phalanges of the toes—o. Epactalia, Wormiana ossa — o. Maxillæ superioris quarta seu quinta seu secunda, Nasal bones — o. Nasalia, Nasal bones — o. Nasi, Nasal bones — o. Nervalia, Parietal bones—o. OSSELETS DE L'OREILLE, Ossicula auditûs.

OSSEOUS, Os'seus, Osto'des, Ostoï'des, (F.) Osseux; from os, 'a bone.' Bony. Resembling bone.

OSSICLE, Ossiculum.

OSSICULA, see Ossiculum.

OSSIC'ULA AUDI'TUS, Ossic'ula Auris, (F.) Osselets de l'oreille, O. de l'ouie. The small bones situate in the cavity of the tympanum, and forming an uninterrupted chain from the membrane of the tympanum to that of the fenestra ovalis. They are four in number; and their series, from without to within, is as follows: Malleus, Incus, Os orbiculare, Stapes.

OSSICULA BERTINI, Sphenoidalia cornua — o. Innominata, Innominata minora ossa — o. Nasi, Nasal bones — o. Sesamoidea, Sesamoid bones.

OSSIC'ULUM, (plural Ossic'ula,) Osta'rion, Os'sicle. Diminutive of os, 'a bone.' A small bone. See Os.

OSSICULUM COCHLEARE, Orbicular bone — o. Incudi Comparatum, Incus — o. Mulleolo assimilatum, Malleus — o. Molari denti comparatum, Incus — o. Orbiculare, Orbicular bone — o. Quartum, Orbicular bone — o. Squamosum, Orbicular bone.

OSSIFICA'TION, Ossifica'tio, from os, 'a bone,' and facere, 'to make.' Osteogen'ia, Osteogen'esis, Osteo'sis, Osto'sis. Formation of bone. Development, or increase of the osseous system. Ossification takes place in the same manner as the nutrition of other organs. The bones are, at first, mucous, and afterwards cartilaginous; the cartilage, at length, receives the phosphate of lime, and is, at the same time, replaced by a gelatinous parenchyma, when the bone has acquired the whole of its development.

Ossification, Points of, Puncta seu Nu'clei ossificatio'nis, Nu'clei ossei, are the points where the ossification of a bone commences, whence it extends to other parts. Almost all the bones present a greater or less number of points of ossification. Besides the natural ossification, which we observe in the fœtus and in the first periods of life, there are also acciden'tal ossifications, such as those frequently remarked after the inflammation of serous membranes, in the parietes of arteries, and to which the terms Osthex'ia, Incrusta'tion and Petrifac'tion have, sometimes, been applied.

OSSIFRAGA, Osteocolla.

OSSIS SACRI ACUMEN, Coccyx.

OSSISANA, Osteocolla.

OSSIV'OROUS, from os, 'a bone,' and voro, 'I devour.' A species of tumour, mentioned by Ruysch, which destroys bone.

OS'TAGRA, Os'teagra, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and αγρα, 'seizure.' A forceps to cut or remove portions of bone.

OSTALGIA, Osteocopus.

OSTALGI'TIS, Osti'tis, Oste'itis, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and itis. Inflamma'tio Ossis. Inflammation of bone; characterized by violent shooting and lancinating pains in the bone.

OSTARIUM, Ossiculum.

OSTARTHRITIS, Arthrophlogosis.

OSTARTHROCACE, Spina ventosa.

OSTEAGRA, Ostagra.

OSTEALGIA, Osteocopus.

OSTEITES, Osteocolla.

OSTEITIS, Ostalgitis.

OSTEMPYE'SIS. Osteëmpye'sis, Ostempyo'sis, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and εμπυησις, 'effusion of pus.' An abscess in the interior of a bone.

OSTEMPYOSIS, Ostempyesis.

OSTEOCE'LĒ, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' A hernia in which the sac is cartilaginous and bony:—a rare case. Also, osseous induration of one or both testicles.

OSTEOCLASIS, Fracture.

OSTEOCOL'LA, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and κολλα, 'glue.' Glue-bone, Stone or Bone binder, Ossif'raga, Holos'teus, Ossisa'na, Ostri'tes, Ostei'tes, Amos'teus, Osteol'ithos, Stelochi'tes. A name given to petrified carbonate of lime, found in some parts of Germany and other portions of the globe; so called, because it has been supposed to possess the power of favouring the formation of callus in fractures. It is the Chaux carbonatée concretionnée incrustante of Haüy. Not used.

OSTEOC'OPUS, Ostcal'gia, Ostal'gia, Osteodyn'ia, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and κοπος, 'fatigue.' Boneach. Pain in the bones.

OSTEODENTINE, see Tooth.

OSTEODYNIA, Osteocopus.

OSTEOGANGRÆNA, Necrosis.

OSTEOGENIA, Ossification.

OSTEOG'RAPHY, Osteogra'phia, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and γραφειν, 'to describe.' Description of the bones. The part of anatomy which describes the bones.

OSTEOLITHOS, Osteocolla.

OSTEOL'OGY, Osteolog''ia, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of bones.

OSTEOMA, Exostosis.

OSTEOMALACIA, Mollities ossium — o. Infantum, Rachitis.

OSTEOMALACOSIS, Mollities ossium.

OSTEON, Bone — o. Hieron, Sacrum.

OSTEONABRO'SIS, from οστεον, 'a bone,' α, priv., and βρωσις, 'nutriment.' Atrophy of the osseous texture marked by diminution of volume.

OSTEON'CUS, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A bony tumour.

OSTEONECROSIS, Necrosis.

OSTEON'OSI, Osteonu'si, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' Mor'bi os'sium. Diseases of the bones.

OSTEOPÆDION, Lithopædion.

OSTEOPALIN'CLASIS, from οστεον, 'a bone,' παλιν, 'again,' and κλασις, 'fracture.' The breaking again of a bone which has united unfavourably.

OSTEOPHYMA, Osteoncus.

OSTEOPH'YTA, Os'teophyte, Exosto'sis. Under this name, Rokitausky, of Vienna, describes a deposition of bony matter, found by him on the inner surface of the parietes of the skull of pregnant women.

OSTEOPLEU'RA, Pleurosto'sis, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and πλευρον, 'a rib.' Ossification of the cartilages of the ribs.

OSTEOPORO'SIS, Osteoscleros'sis, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and πωρωσις, 'induration.' Induration of a bone, from the deposition of too much bony matter.

OSTEOPSATHYROSIS, Fragilitas ossium.

OSTEO-SARCO'MA, Osteo-sarco'sis, Sarcosto'sis, Hœmatexosto'sis, from οστεον, 'bone,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' Disease of the bony tissue, which consists in softening of its laminæ, and their transformation into a fleshy substance, analogous to that of cancer; accompanied with general symptoms of cancerous affection. The word has often, also, been used synonymously with spina ventosa.

OSTEOSARCOSIS, Osteosarcoma.

OSTEOSCLEROSIS, Osteoporosis.

OSTEOSIS, Ossification.

OSTEO-STEATO'MA, Exosto'sis steatomato'des, from οστεον 'a bone,' and στεαρ, 'suet or fat.' A name given to bony tumours or degenerations, which sometimes belong to osteo-sarcoma; at others, to spina ventosa, exostosis, &c.

OSTEOT'OMIST, Osteotomis'ta. Same etymon as the next. An instrument, invented by Dr. D. Davis, for cutting the bones of the fœtal cranium, where it becomes necessary to greatly reduce the size of the head in parturition.

OSTEOT'OMY, Osteotom'ia, from οστεον, 'a bone,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' The part of practical anatomy whose object is the dissection of bones.

OSTEOTOPHUS, Tophus.

OSTEOTYLUS, Callus.

OSTEULCUM, Bone-nippers.

OSTEUM, Bone.

OSTHEXIA, see Ossification.

OSTIA ATRIO-VENTRICULARIA, see Ostium.

OSTIARIUS, Pylorus.

OSTIOLUM, from οστεον, 'a mouth or opening.' A small door or gate.

Ostiola Cordis, Val'vulæ cordis, Pellic'ulæ cordis. The valves of the heart.

OSTITIS, Ostalgitis.

OS'TIUM, Orific''ium, a door or gate,—of the heart, for example. The opening—Os'tia atrioventricula'ria—between the auricle and ventricle of each side; Os'tium veno'sum, that of the right side; Os'tium arterio'sum, that of the left.

Ostium Abdominale, see Tube, Fallopian — o Internum, see Ostium uteri.

Ostium U'teri. The vulva; the vagina. The term Os'tium inter'num has been applied to the inferior opening of the uterus, which establishes a free communication between the cavities of the body and neck, and which is often obliterated in old women.—Cruveilheir. The neck of the uterus; the mouth of the uterus.

OSTIUM UTERINUM, see Tube, Fallopian — o. Ventriculi Duodenale seu Pyloricum seu Dextrum seu Inferius, Pylorus.

OSTODES, Bony.

OSTOIDEA SUBSTANTIA, see Tooth.

OSTOIDES, Bony.

OSTOMA, Exostosis.

OSTOSIS, Ossification.

OS'TREA, Os'treum, (F.) Huître. The oyster. The oyster is a wholesome article of diet, often advised as analeptic and easy of digestion.

The shells, Testæ Os'treæ, Testa (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Écailles d'huîtres, have been received into the Pharmacopœias, and used medicinally. Their virtues are similar to those of the carbonate of lime. See Creta.

OSTREUM, Ostrea.

OSTRITES, Osteocolla.

OSTRUTHIUM, Imperatoria.

OSYRIS, Antirhinum linaria.

OTACOUS'TIC, Otacous'ticus; from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and ακουω, 'I listen.' Any instrument is so called which improves the sense of hearing,—as the different species of trumpets.

OTAGRA, Otalgia.

OTAL'GIA, Ot'agra, Otod'ynē, Otal'gy, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the ear; Dolor au'rium, Spas'mus au'rium, Ear-ache. See Otitis.

OTAL'GIC, Otal'gicus. An epithet for remedies used in otalgia.

OTECHUS, Tinnitus aurium.

OTEMPLAS'TRUM, Otoplas'ta, Otoplas'trum, from ους, 'the ear,' and εμπλαστρον, 'a plaster.' A plaster put behind the ears.

OTEN'CHYTES, Otenchyta, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' εν, 'into,' and χυω, 'I pour.' Sipho auricula'ris. A species of syringe, used for injecting the ear.

OTHELCO'SIS, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration or suppuration of the ear.

OTHONE, Linteum.

OTHONION, Linteum.

OTHYGROTES, Otirrhœa.

OTIATER, Aurist.

OTIATRI'A, Otiat'rice, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and ιατρεια, 'medicine.' The business of the aurist. The management of diseases of the ear. Aural Medicine and Surgery, Ear Surgery.

OTIATRICE, Otiatria.

OTIATRUS, Aurist.

O'TIC, O'ticus, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear.' Belonging or relating to the ear. A medicine employed in diseases of the ear.

OTIC GANGLION, Otogan'glium, Gang'lion auricula'rē, Ganglion o'ticum, Auric'ular ganglion, Ganglion of Arnold, (F.) Ganglion maxillo-tympanique. This is a small ganglion, although more than double the size of the ophthalmic, ash-coloured and pulpy like the ganglions of the sympathetic. It is situate in advance of the ganglion of Gasser, on the lower surface of the inferior maxillary nerve, at the inner margin of the foramen ovale of the sphenoid bone. See Petrous ganglion.

OTIRRHŒ'A, Otorrhœ'a, Othy'grotes, Blennotorrhœ'a, (F.) Catarrhe de l'Oreille, from ους, 'the ear,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Discharge of a purulent or puriform liquid, from the meatus auditorius externus, Pyorrhœ'a au'rium, Otopyorrhœ'a, Pya-otorrhœ'a, Otorrhœ'a purulen'ta. It is a symptom of chronic otitis. Some authors have, indeed, used the term synonymously with chronic otitis. When it extends to the brain, it is termed cer'ebral otorrhœ'a; and when from the middle or internal ear, it is termed internal otorrhœa, Otorrhœ'a inter'na, and Entotorrhœ'a.

OTIRRHŒA, CEREBRAL, see Otirrhœa.

OTITES, see Digitus.

OTI'TIS, Otophleg'monē, Empres'ma otitis, Inflamma'tio auris, Inflammation of the ear, (F.) Inflammation de l'oreille. Inflammation of the mucous membrane of the ear, characterized by excruciating pain; intolerable humming in the ear, with a discharge of mucus generally from the meatus externus or from the Eustachian tube. When the inflammation is restricted to the lining membrane of the meatus, it is termed otitis catarrha'lis. Otitis is divided into external and internal, according as it affects the meatus auditorius, or the cavity of the tympanum or internal ear. It may be acute or chronic. Acute otitis commonly terminates in a few days in a favourable manner, with the aid of antiphlogistics. Chronic otitis, otirrhœ'a, is almost always accompanied by a purulent discharge from the meatus auditorius. It is often incurable, and may ultimately give occasion to disease of the internal ear, and even of the brain.

OTITIS CATARRHALIS, see Otitis.

O'TIUM, Ota'rium, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear.' A small ear. The auricle or pavilion of the ear.

OTOCEPH'ALUS, Mono'tia, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A monster, whose ears are in contact, or united into one.

OTOCONIES, see Otolithi.

OTODYNE, Otalgia.

OTOGLYPHIS, Earpick.

OTOGLYPHUM, Earpick.

OTOG'RAPHY, Otogra'phia, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which describes the ear.

OT'OLITHS, Otol'ithi, (F.) Otolithes, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear, and λιθος, 'a stone.' White calcareous substances contained in the membranous vestibule, and seeming to be suspended in the fluid of the vestibule by means of a number of nervous filaments proceeding from the auditory nerve. Their universal presence in the ear of the mammalia would seem to show that they are inservient to audition. When of a looser consistence, they are called Otocon'ia, (F.) Otoconies, from ους, 'the ear,' and κονια, 'dust.'

OTOL'OGY, Otolog''ia, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the ear. An anatomical treatise on the ear.

OTOPATHEMA, Otopathy.

OTOP'ATHY, Otopathi'a, Otopathe'ma, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and παθος, 'a disease.' A diseased condition of the ear.

OTOPHLEGMONE, Otitis.

OTOPLASTA, Otemplastrum.

OTOPLAS'TICE, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and πλαστικος, 'forming.' The operation for restoring a lost ear.

OTOPLASTRUM, Otemplastrum.

OTOPYORRHŒA, Otirrhœa.

OTORRHAG''IA; from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and ραγη, 'rupture.' Bleeding from the ear or ears.

OTORRHEUMATIS'MUS, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear, and ρευματισμος, 'rheumatism;' Otal'gia rheumat'ica. Rheumatic ear-ache.

OTORRHŒA, Otirrhœa—o. Cerebral, see Otirrhœa—o. Interna, see Otirrhœa—o. Purulenta, Otirrhœa.

OTOSCOP'IUM, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and σκοπη, 'examination.' An instrument for examining the condition of the external ear.

OTOT'OMY, Ototom'ia, from ους, ωτος, 'the ear,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' The part of practical anatomy which teaches the mode of dissecting and preparing the ear.

OULA, Gingivæ.

OULE, Cicatrix.

OUNCE, Un'cia. A weight equal to the 16th part of a pound avoirdupois, the 12th of a pound troy. It is composed of 8 drachms. See Weights and Measures.

OURAQUE, Urachus.

OURARY, Curare.

OUREMA, Urine.

OURLES, Parotis, Cynanche parotidæa.

OURON, Urine.

OUS, Ear.

OUTRE MER, Lapis lazuli.

OUVERTURE CADAVÉRIQUE, Autopsia cadaverica.

OVA GRAAFIANA, Folliculi Graafiani — o. Nabothi, Nabothi glandulæ.

OVAL, Ova'lis, Oö'des, Oöi'des, Ova'tus, from ovum, 'an egg.' Egg-shaped; elliptic. That which is round and oblong like an egg.

OVALE FORA'MEN, Foramen oö'des, (F.) Trou ovale. The foramen obturatorium; also, the foramen in the inner paries of the middle ear, which opens into the vestibule; the foramen in the sphenoid bone, through which the third branch of the fifth pair issues from the cranium; and the aperture, in the fœtus, between the auricles of the heart. See Botal Foramen.

OVALIS FOSSA, Val'vula seu Vestig''ium Foram'inis ovalis, is a depression observed in the right auricle of the heart, on the septum, which separates it from the left auricle. It has thick and strong edges, at its upper and fore part, called Colum'næ foram'inis ova'lis, Isthmus seu An'nulus Vieusse'nii seu An'nulus fossæ ovalis: in the fœtus called An'nulus foram'inis vel fossæ ova'lis. The fossa ovalis, in the adult, replaces the inter-auricular aperture in the septum auriculorum of the fœtus.

OVA'RIAN, Ova'rial, Ovaria'nus, from ovarium, ωαριον, 'the ovary.' Relating to the ovary —as Ovarian pregnancy.

OVARIAN ARTERY, Spermatic artery—o. Nerves, Spermatic plexus of nerves — o. Pregnancy, see Pregnancy, ovarian—o. Veins, Spermatic veins—o. Vesicles, Folliculi Graafiani.

OVARIOTOMY, Oariotomy.

O'VARISTS, Ovists. Same etymon as Ovarian. Those physiologists who think that the phenomena of generation, in the human species and in every species of animal, result from the development of the ova or ovula of the female, merely incited by the male. Not many of the physiologists of the present day can be classed among the ovarists.

OVARITIS, Oaritis.

OVA'RIUM. Same etymon. The O'vary, Testis mulie'bris, T. femineus, Oa'rion, Ooph'oron, Gynoa'rium, Vesica'rium, (F.) Ovaire. The ovaries are the organs in which the ova are formed in oviparous animals. By analogy, the name has been given to the organs which the ancients called the testicles of the female. They are two ovoid bodies, almost as large as the testicles in men, placed on each side of the uterus, between the Fallopian tube and round ligament, and in the substance of the broad ligament. Their outer extremity gives attachment to one of the projections of the fimbriated extremity of the Fallopian tube; and the internal is fixed to the uterus by a small ligamentous cord, called Ligamen'tum rotun'dum ova'rii, Lig'ament of the O'vary. The ovaries are composed of a very close, spongy texture—stroma,—and of small vesicles—Follic'uli Graafiani,—filled with a clear fluid: these vesicles contain ovules, which detach themselves from the ovarium before and after fecundation, and are carried into the cavity of the uterus by the Fallopian tube.

OVARIUM TUMIDUM, Oarioncus — o. Nabothi, Nabothi glandulæ.

OVATUS, Oval.

OVER-EATING, COLIC FROM, Colica crapulosa.

OVERO BUTUA, Pareira brava.

OVICAPSULE, see Folliculi Graafiani.

OVIDUCTUS MULIEBRIS, Tuba Fallopiana.

OVIG''EROUS, O'viger, Ovig''erus; from ovum, 'an egg,' and gero, 'I bear.' Containing or producing ova or eggs.

OVIPARITÉ, see Oviparous.

OVIP'AROUS, Ovip'arus; from ovum, 'an egg,' and pario, 'I bring forth.' An epithet applied to animals which are hatched from eggs outside of the body. The condition may be termed Ovip'arousness, (F.) Oviparité. See Generation.

OVIPAROUSNESS, see Oviparous.

OVISAC, see Folliculi Graafiani—o. Tunic of the, see Folliculi Graafiani.

OVISTS, Ovarists.

OVOLOGY, Oologia.

OVO-VIVIP'AROUS, from ovum, 'an egg,' vivus, 'living,' and pario, 'I bring forth.' Oviparous animals, whose ova are hatched within the mother,—vipers, for example. See Generation.

OVULA GRAAFIANA, Folliculi Graafiani—o. Nabothi, Nabothi glandulæ.

OVULA'TION; from ovulum, diminutive of ovum, 'an egg.' The formation of ova in the ovary, and the discharge of the same.

SPONTANEOUS OVULATION, (F.) Ovulation spontanée, is the spontaneous formation and discharge of ova which takes place in the female of the mammalia. See Heat.

OVULINE, Decidua reflexa.

O'VULUM, O'vule; diminutive of ovum, 'an egg.' A small egg. That which has the appearance of a small egg. See Ovum.

OVUM, ωον, Oön, an egg. The eggs of poultry are chiefly used as food. The different parts are, likewise, employed in medicine. The shell, Aran'eum, Auran'tum, (F.) Coque d'œuf, Coquille d'œuf, calcined, is esteemed an absorbent. The Oil of the egg is emollient, and is used, externally, to burns and chaps. The Yolk or Yelk of the egg—Vitel'lum seu Vitel'lus ovi—renders oils, &c., miscible with water. Eggs, when light boiled, are easy of digestion; but, when very hard-boiled or fried, they are more rebellious.

Egg brandy is made by taking of Brandy f℥iv; Cinnamon water, f℥iv; the yolks of two eggs; Sugar, ℥ss; and Oil of cinnamon, gtt. ij. Mix the yolks of the eggs first with the water, the oil and the sugar, stirring constantly. Then add the brandy little and little, until a smooth fluid is formed. It is an agreeable mode of giving brandy in adynamic states.

In Pharmacy, white of egg, which consists chiefly of albumen, is used for clarifying syrups, &c. Yolk of egg, (F.) Jaune d'œuf, beaten up with warm water and sugar, and aromatized with orange-flower water, forms an emulsion, which is emollient, and known under the name Lait de poule or chicken's milk.

Anatomists give the name Ova, O'vula, O'vules, (F.) Œufs, to round vesicles, containing a humour similar to the yolk of egg, which are situate in the ovaries of the female, and, when fecundated, constitute the rudiments of the fœtus. During gestation, the embryo and its enveloping membranes retain the name Ovum, (F.) Œuf. The changes induced in the mammalia after impregnation greatly resemble those in the bird.

Ovum, Testicle—o. Hystericum, see Clavus hystericus.

OXALAS SUBPOTASSICUS, Potass, oxalate of.

OXALAT'IC, Oxalat'icus. Relating to oxalates: hence Oxalat'ic or Oxalic acid Diath'esis is the habit of body which favours the formation and deposition of oxalates from the urine.

OXAL'IC ACID, Acidum oxali'num, A. sacchari'num, A. hydro-carbon'icum, A. acetosel'læ, A. oxal'icum, Acidum sac'chari, Acid of sugar, Acid of sorrel, Car'bonous acid, from οξαλις, 'sorrel.' An acid found in sorrel. It crystallizes in long, colourless, quadrangular prisms, and is generally found, in nature, united with lime or potassa. It has been proposed, in a diluted state, as a refrigerant, but it is unnecessary; and, besides, in quantity, it is a virulently acrid poison. It is largely employed for cleaning boot-tops; and, as it strongly resembles the sulphate of magnesia, has often been taken for it. Several fatal cases are, indeed, on record. For its antidotes, &c., see Poison.

OXALIC ACID DIATHESIS, see Oxalatic.

OXALIDE, Oxalis acetosella.

OXALIS ACETOSA, Rumex acetosa.

Ox'alis Acetosel'la. O. America'na, Oxys alba. The systematic name of the Woodsorrel, Cuckowbread, Sour Tref'oil, White sorrel, Mountain Sorrel, Trifo'lium aceto'sum, Oxitriphyl'lum, Lujula, Allelu'ja, Acetosel'la, Oxyphyl'lon, Oxytriphyl'lon, Panis cu'culi, (F.) Surelle, Oxalide, Pain a Coucou, Alleluia. Family, Geraniæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Decagynia. This plant has a gratefully acid taste, and is used in salads. It has been esteemed refrigerant, antiscorbutic, and diuretic.

Oxalis Americana, O. acetosella.

Oxalis Tubero'sa, Oca. A tuberous plant, whose oval-shaped root is used as food by the Peruvians. It is watery, has a sweetish taste, and is much liked.

OXALIUM, Potass, oxalate of.

OXAL'MĒ, from οξυς, 'acid,' and 'αλς, 'salt.' A mixture of vinegar and salt.

OXALU'RIA, Urine, oxalic.

OXELÆ'ON, from οξυς, 'acid,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' A mixture of vinegar and oil, used as a condiment.

OX EYE, Helenium autumnale—o. Gall, Bile of the ox.

OXICÈDRE, Juniperus oxycedrus.

OXID, Oxyd.

OXIDATION, Oxydation.

OXIDE, Oxyd.

OXIDUM, Oxyd, see Oxydum.

OXI'NES, οξινης, (οινος,) from οξυς, 'acid.' Wine already sour, but not yet vinegar.

OXITRIPHYLLUM, Oxalis acetosella.

OXODES, Acidulous.

OXOIDES, Acidulous.

OXOS, Aceticum acidum.

OXYA, Fagus sylvatica.

OXYÆSTHESIA, Hyperæsthesis.

OXYAPHE, Hyperaphia.

OXYAPHIA, Hyperaphia.

OXYBAPHION, see Acetabulum.

OXYBOL'IA, from οξυς, 'quick,' and βολη, ejection.' Too rapid emission of sperm.

OXYCANTHA, Mespilus oxyacantha.

Oxycan'tha Gale'ni, Ber'beris, Ber'beris vulga'ris, Spina ac''ida, Crespi'nus, (F.) Épine vinette, Vinettier. Family, Berberideæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. The Barberry. The fruit of the berries, Barberries, Pipperidges, is gratefully acid, and moderately astringent. By preparing an alcoholic extract of the root and adding water to it, a pulverulent brown substance is thrown down, which, when dissolved in alcohol and evaporated, yields the bitter principle, Berberin, which is an excellent stomachic in the dose of 2, 5, or 10 grains.

The American Barberry, Bar'beris Canaden'sis, Pipperidge Bush, Sowberry, differs slightly from the European. It flourishes on mountains and hilly districts from Canada to Virginia.

OXYCÈDRE, Juniperus oxycedrus.

OXYCOCCOS, Vaccinium oxycoccos—o. Palustris, Vaccinium oxycoccos.

OX'YCRATE, Oxycra'tum, from οξυς, 'acid,' and κραω, 'I mix;' Posca, Phusca. A mixture of vinegar and water; frequently used in medicine as a refrigerant and antiseptic.

OXYCRO'CEUM EMPLASTRUM, from οξυς, 'acid,' and κροκος, 'saffron.' A plaster, composed of saffron, pitch, colophony, yellow wax, turpentine, galbanum, gum ammoniac, myrrh, olibanum, and mastic. It was employed as a strengthening plaster.

OXYCUM, Oxygen.

OXYD, Oxid, Oxide, Oxyde, Ox'ydum, Ox'idum, from οξυς, 'acid.' A combination, not acid, of a simple body with oxygen.

OXYDA'TION, Oxyda'tio, Oxida'tion, Oxygena'tion. The action of oxydizing a body; that is, of combining it with oxygen; a combination from which results an oxyd.

OXYDE,-Oxyd.

Oxyde, Cystic. A species of urinary calculus, having the shape of confused, yellowish, semi-transparent, insipid, very hard crystals. When distilled, it furnishes subcarbonate of ammonia, like all nitrogenized matters. It dissolves in the nitric, sulphuric, phosphoric, and oxalic acids.

OXYDE D'ANTIMOINE SULFURÉ, Oxydum stibii sulphuratum.

OXYDER'CIA, Oxydor'cia, Visus a'cies, from οξυς, 'quick,' and δερκεσθαι, 'to see.' Sharpness of vision.

OXYDER'CICUS, Oxyder'ces, from οξυς, 'sharp,' and δερκω, 'I see.' A medicine which sharpens the sight.

OXYDORCIA, Oxydercia.

OXYDUM, Oxid—o. Antimonii cum phosphate calcis, Antimonial powder.

Oxydum Ferri Nigrum, Ferri ox'idum nigrum, Black oxyd of iron. The scales, which fall from iron, when heated, consist of iron, combined with oxygen. They have been used like the chalybeates in general.

Oxydum Ferricum Crystallizatum Nativum, Hæmatites—o. Hydrargyri completum, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—o. Hydrargyricum, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—o. Hydrargyricum præparatum, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum—o. Hydrargyrosum, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum.

Oxydum Stibii Sulphura'tum, Hepar antimo'nii, Cro'cus metallo'rum, Crocus antimo'nii, (F.) Oxyde d'antimoine sulfuré, Foie d'Antimoine. This was formerly exhibited in the cure of fevers, but it is now rarely employed.

OXYDUM URICUM, Uric oxide.

OXYECOIA, Hyperacusis.

OXYG'ALA, from οξυς, 'sour,' and γαλα, 'milk.' Sour milk. The Oxygala equi'num, Caracos'mos, is reckoned amongst the delicacies of the Tartars.

OXYG'ARON, from οξυς, 'acid,' and γαρον, 'garum.' A composition of garum and vinegar.

OX'YGEN, Oxygen ium, Empy'real air, Pure

air, Vital air, Dephlogis'ticated air, Oxyg''enes, Ox'ygum, Princip'ium oxyg''enans seu oxygenet'icum seu acid'ifcans seu ac''idum, Elemen'tum acidif'icum, (F.) Oxygène, Air du feu; from οξυς, 'acid,' and γεινομαι, 'I engender,' that is, generator of acids; and such it was believed to be, exclusively, at the period when the name was given to it. This is now known not to be the case. Oxygen is largely distributed in nature. It exists in the air, in water, in several acids, in all the oxyds, and in vegetable and animal substances, &c. It is obtained by decomposing the peroxyd of manganese or the chlorate of potassa by heat in close vessels. Although oxygen, in the state of admixture in which it is found in the atmosphere, is of vital importance, it cannot be respired in a pure state with impunity. Animals die in it long before the whole of the oxygen is consumed. The properties of oxygen seem to be stimulant. It increases the force and velocity of the pulse, and has, accordingly, been used in cases of chronic debility, chlorosis, asthma, scrofula, dropsy, paralysis, &c. It requires to be diluted with from 10 to 20 parts of atmospheric air; one to two quarts being given during the day.

OXYGENATION, Oxydation.

OXYGÈNE, Oxygen.

OXYGÉNÉSES. A name given by Baumes to diseases which he attributed to disordered oxygenation.

OXYGEUSIA, Hypergeustia.

OXYG'LICUS, Oxyg'licus, from οξυς, 'acid,' and γλυκυς, 'sweet;' Mulsa acida, Ace'tum mulsum dulcē. Prepared by macerating and boiling honey-comb (from which the greater part of the honey has been taken) in water, and adding vinegar. An Oxymel.

OXYLAPATHUM, Rumex acutus.

OX'YMEL, Apom'eli, Mel aceta'tum, from οξυς, 'acid,' and μελι, 'honey.' Honey and vinegar boiled to a syrupy consistence.

OXYMEL ÆRUGINIS, Linimentum Ærugínis.

OXYMEL COL'CHICI, Oxymel of meadow saffron, (F.) Oxymel colchiqué. (Rad. colch. recent. in laminas tenues sectæ ℥j, aceti destillati ℔j, mellis despumat. pond. ℔ij. Macerate in a gentle heat for 48 hours. Press and boil the liquor with the honey to the thickness of a syrup; stirring with a wooden spoon. Ph. D.) It is expectorant and diuretic. Dose, f℥j, in gruel.

OXYMEL COLCHIQUÉ, O. colchici — o. of Meadow saffron, O. colchici.

OXYMEL SCILLÆ, Oxymel of squills, Mel scillæ, Oxymel scillit'icum. (Mellis. despumat. Oiss, aceti scillæ Oij. Boil in a glass vessel over a gentle fire to a proper consistence.) It is reputed to be expectorant and diuretic. Dose, ℥j.

OXYMEL, SIMPLE, Oxymel simplex, is prepared as follows: (Mellis despumati ℔ij, acidi acetici ℔j. Boil in a glass vessel, over a slow fire, to a proper thickness. Ph. L.) It is cooling; — externally detergent.

OXYMEL OF SQUILL, O. scillæ.

OXYMYRRHINE, Ruscus.

OXYMYRSINE, Ruscus.

OXYNGIUM, Adeps suillus.

OXYNI'TRON, from οξυς, 'acid,' and νιτρον, 'nitre.' Name of a plaster, composed chiefly of vinegar and nitre, and recommended by Aëtius.

OXYNOSEMA, Acute disease.

OXYNOSOS, Acute disease.

OXYNUSOS, Acute disease.

OXYO'PIA, Galero'pia, Hyperop'sia, Suffu'sio excla'rans, Acies visûs, from οξυς, 'quick,' and ωψ, 'sight.' Excessive acuteness of the sense of sight. Instances have occurred where persons could see the stars in the day time. The cause is seated in great sensibility of the retina. The term has been used synonymously with nyctalopia.

OXYOSPHRE'SIA, Oxyosphra'sia, from οξυς, 'acute,' and οσφρησις, 'smell. Excessive acuteness of the sense of smell.

OXYPHLEGMA'SIA, οξυφλεγμασια, Acu'ta et ve'hemens inflamma'tio. A violent inflammation.

OXYPHŒNICON, Tamarindus.

OXYPHO'NIA, Vox acu'ta; from οξυς, 'sharp,' and φωνη, 'voice;' Paropho'nia clangens, P. ulcero'sa, Clangor, Vox clango'sa, Leptopho'nia. A shrill and squalling voice; — frequently, a symptom of morbid affection of the larynx.

OXYPHYLLON, Oxalis acetosella.

OXYPODIA, see Kyllosis.

OXYPROTEIN, see Corium phlogisticum.

OXYREG'MIA, Ructus ac''idus, from οξυς, 'sour,' and ερευγω, 'I belch.' Acid eructation.

OXYR'IA RENIFORM'IS, Rumex dig''ynus, Boreal sourdock, Mountain Sorrel, Welsh sorrel. A plant, Sex. Syst. Diandria digynia, which grows in the northern parts of America and Europe; blossoming in the spring. It possesses the same properties as oxalis acetosella.

OXYRRHOD'INON, Ace'tum rosa'tum, from οξυς, 'acid,' and ροδον, 'a rose.' A composition of vinegar and roses. (Ol. rosat. ℥ij, acet. rosat. ℥j.) Used as a liniment in herpes and erysipelas.

OXYS, Acetum, Acid, Acute — o. Alba, Oxalis acetosella.

OXYSAC'CHARUM, from οξυς, 'acid,' and σακχαρον, 'sugar.' A mixture of sugar and vinegar. It was called Oxysac'charum vomiti'vum, when it held in solution the glass of antimony; and Oxysac'charum scillit'icum, when it contained squills.

OXYSAL DIAPHORET'ICUM AN'GELI SALÆ. A preparation of Angelo Sala. Acetate of potass exposed to the atmosphere; and consequently fallen into a state of deliquium. — Orfila.

OXYTARTARUS, Potassæ acetas.

OXYTES, Acidities.

OXYTOC'IA. Same etymon as the next. Rapidity of parturition. Too great rapidity of birth.

OXYTOC'IC, Oxyt'ocus, from οξυς, 'quick,' and τικτω, 'I bring forth.' A medicine which promotes delivery.

OXYTRIPHYLLON, Oxalis acetosella.

OXYURE VERMICULAIRE, Ascaris vermicularis.

OYSTER ROOT, Tragopogon — o. Shells, Ostreæ testæ — o. Prepared, Testa præparata.

OZÆ'NA, Coryza enton'ica, C. purulen'ta, Pyorrhœa nasa'lis, Entozæ'na, C. ozæno'sa, C. ulcero'sa, Coryza virulen'ta, C. malig'na, Rhini'tis ulcero'sa, Ulcus na'rium fœtens, from οζω, 'I smell of something.' (F.) Ozène, Punaisie. An affection of the pituitary membrane, which gives occasion to a disagreeable odour, similar to that of a crushed bed-bug; hence the name Punais, by which the French designate one labouring under ozæna. It is, sometimes, owing to caries of the bones; but is, perhaps, most frequently dependent upon syphilitic ulceration of the pituitary membrane, with or without caries of the bones of the nose.

OZÆNA BENIGNA, Coryza, chronic.

OZE, Breath, offensive.

OZEMAN, Albumen.

OZÈNE, Ozæna.

OZONE: same etymon as Ozæna. The powerfully odorous matter produced when a current of ordinary electricity passes from pointed bodies into the air. — Schönbein.

P.

P. A contraction of Pugillus.
P. Æ. A contraction of Partes æquales.
P. P. A contraction of Pulvis patrum.

PAB'ULUM, Trophē, Phorbē, Alimen'tum, Nutrimen'tum. Food, aliment. The animal heat and animal spirits—unmeaning terms—were formerly considered the Pabulum vitæ.

PACAY, Prosopis dulcis.

PACCHIO'NI, GLANDS OF, Glan'dulæ Duræ Matris, G. duræ Menin'gis, Tuber'cula parva duræ matris, Cor'pora glandifor'mia duræ matris, (F.) Granulations cérébrales. Small, whitish, or yellowish bodies, sometimes separate, at others united like a bunch of grapes, which are observed in several parts of the dura and pia mater. They receive vessels, but apparently no nerves. Their texture and uses are unknown. A considerable number is observed in the longitudinal sinus, covered by the internal membrane.

PACHÆ'MIA, Pachyæ'mia, Pachæ'ma, Pachyæ'ma, from παχυς, 'thick,' and 'αιμα, 'blood. Too great thickness of the blood.

PACHEABLEPHARO'SIS, Pacheablepha'ra, Pachyblepha'ron, Pachyblepharo'sis, Pach'ytes, from παχυς, 'thick,' and βλεφαρον, 'an eyelid.' A name given, by some authors, to a thickening of the eyelids, produced by tubercles or excrescences formed on their margins. It is the same affection as that which Sauvages designates Cali'go à Pacheablepharo'si.

PACHETOS, see Laqueus.

PACHULOSIS, Pachylosis.

PACHYÆMIA, Pachæmia.

PACHYBLEPHARON, Pacheablepharosis.

PACHYCHOL'IA, from παχυς, 'thick,' and χολη, 'bile.' Morbid thickness of the bile.

PACHYLO'SIS, Pachulo'sis, from παχυς, 'thick.' An inordinate production of the epidermis dependent upon hypertrophy of the papillæ of the skin.—E. Wilson.

PACHYNSIS, Polysarcia adiposa.

PACHYNTICA, Incrassantia.

PACHYSMUS, Polysarcia adiposa.

PACHYTES, Pacheablepharosis.

PACINIAN CORPUSCLES, see Corpuscles.

PACKING, OF THE HYDROPATHISTS; Émaillotage.

PACKWAX, see Micha.

PAD, (S.) Pajado, from paja, 'straw.' Plumace'olus, Pulvil'lus, Pulvin'ulus, Parvum pulvi'nar;—a cushion, a little cushion; a junk; (F.) Coussinet. A small bag, filled with feathers, wool, hair, bran, chaff, &c. It is used to compress or support parts. In the treatment of certain fractures, soft pads or cushions, called by the French Remplissages, are placed between the splints and the fractured limb, in order that the prominent parts may not be chafed by the splints.

PADDIE, see Oryza.

PADDY, see Oryza.

PADNOON, Bit noben.

PAD'UA, MINERAL WATERS OF. Near Padua, in Italy, there are several thermal, sulphureous springs; the hottest of which is 188° Fahr. The chief establishments are Abano, Battaglia, and Montegrotto.

PADUS, Prunus padus—p. Avium, Prunus padus—p. Lauro cerasus, Prunus lauro-cerasus.

PÆDAN'CHONĒ, from παις, παιδος, 'a child,' and αγχω, 'I strangle;' Angi'na Sicca. Name of a fatal species of cynanche, mentioned by M. A. Severinus; probably the Cynanche Trachealis, or Cynanche Maligna.

PÆDARTHROCACE, Spina ventosa.

PÆDATROPH'IA, Atrophia infan'tilis, Marasmus lactan'tium, from παις, παιδος, 'a child,' a, privative, and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Atrophy of children. Tabes mesenterica.

PÆDATROPHIA GLANDULOSA, Scrofula.

PÆDERAS'TIA, Pædogo'gium, Pædica'tio, Cinæ'dia, from παις, 'a boy,' and ερως, 'love.' The love of boys. A disgraceful passion, common in ancient times, but now unknown. These terms are likewise applied to the crime of sodomy.

PÆDI'A, παιδεια, 'learning.' Educa'tio infan'tum. The bringing up or education—physical as well as moral—of children.

PÆDIATRI'A, Pædiat'rica, from παις, 'a child,' and ιατρεια, 'medical management.' Treatment of the diseases of children.

PÆDICATIO, Pæderastia.

PÆDICTERUS, Icterus infantum.

PÆDOBAROMACROMETER, Baromacrometer.

PÆDOGOGIUM, Pæderastia.

PÆDOMETER, Baromacrometer.

PÆDON'OSUS, from παις, παιδος, 'a child,' and νοσος, 'disease.' A disease of childhood.

PÆDOPHLEBOTOM'IA, from παις, 'a child,' φλεψ, 'a vein,' and τομη, 'incision.' Venæsec'tio puero'rum. Bleeding performed on children.

PÆDOT'RIBES, Min'ister Gymnas'tæ, from παις, 'a child,' and τριβω, 'I train.' In ancient gymnastics, the officer acquainted with all the prescribed exercises, and who carried them into effect, according to the directions of the superior.

PÆO'NIA, P. officina'lis seu mas'cula seu nemora'lis seu fem'ina seu loba'ta, Glycis'idē, Hæmago'gum, Pe'ony, or Pi'ony, male and female. (F.) Pivoine, Pione. The root, flowers, and seeds were long esteemed powerful medicines. They are feebly astringent, and have been considered to be narcotic and antispasmodic. They have been given, particularly, in intermittents and epilepsy, but are not now used. The flowers are called Rosæ benedic'tæ, R. rc'giæ.

PÆONICE, Medicine.

PÆONICUS, Medical.

PÆONIUS, Medical.

PÆOSYNE, Medicine.

PAGAPOPLEX'IA, from παγειν, 'to nail fast,' and αποπληξια, 'apoplexy.' Apoplexy from cold.

PAIDIA, Infancy.

PAIDION, Infans.

PAIGIL, Primula veris.

PAIN, (old F.) paiuer, 'to torment;' Sax. pinan, 'to torture.' Dolor, Algos, Algc'ma, Alge'do, Alge'sis, Od'ynē, (F.) Douleur. A disagreeable sensation, which scarcely admits of definition. It is generally symptomatic, and is called acute, (F.) aiguë, when very violent; pungent, (F.) pongitive, when it resembles that which would be produced by a sharp instrument run into the part: heavy, (F.) gravative, when attended with a sensation of weight; tensive, when the part seems distended: lan'cinating, when occurring in shoots: lac'erating or tearing, when the part seems to be tearing: burning, (F.) brûlante, when resembling that produced by a burn, &c.

Pain, Sun, Hemicrania.

PAIN, see Triticum—p. à Coucou, Oxalis acetosella—p. de Madagascar, Jatropha manihot—p. de Pourceau, Cyclamen.

PAINS, AFTER, see P. labour.

Pains, Gnawing, Dolo'res roden'tes. Pains resembling what might be produced by the gnawing of an animal.

Pains, Labour pains, Throes, Throws, Parturien'tis dolo'res, Odin, Odis, Dolo'res ad partum, Torm'ina parturientium, (F.) Mal d'Enfant, Douleurs. The uneasy sensations that accompany labour, and are owing to uterine contraction. The pains that precede actual delivery, and are simply employed in dilating the os uteri, are called grinding; those which extrude the child, forcing. Those which take place in the first days after delivery, and are employed in forcing away coagula, &c., are termed After pains, Dolo'res seu Tormina post partum, D. puerpera'rum, (F.) Tranchées utérines.

"To take a pain," — "To try a pain," — is to make an examination per vaginam, during labour, to discover its progress, character, &c.

The French term the pains, which precede and announce labour, mouches; those which accompany it, douleurs; and those which occur immediately afterwards, tranchées ou coliques.

PAINT, from pingere, pinctum, 'to paint,' (I.) pinto, (F.) peint; Pigmen'tum, Fucus, (F.) Fard. A name given to different substances, employed for embellishing the complexion or rendering the skin softer. The substances most commonly used for this purpose are:—the Subnitrate of Bismuth, (F.) Blanc de fard. A spirituous solution of benzoin, precipitated by water, and forming Virgin's milk, (F.) Lait virginal; the red or rouge of the carthamus; Spanish white; the oxides of lead, tin, and mercury, vermilion, red saunders, &c. All paints may be said to be noxious. They injure the skin; obstruct perspiration; and, thus, frequently lay the foundation for cutaneous affections. See Cosmetic.

Paint, Indian, Hydrastis Canadensis, Sanguinaria Canadensis — p. Yellow, Hydrastis Canadensis.

PALÆSTRA, Gymnasium.

PALAIS, Palate.

PALATAL, Palatine.

PALATE, Pala'tum, Hypero'a, Hyperö'um, Uranis'cos, Roof of the mouth, Fossa Palati'na, Palatum stab'ilē, Hard Palate, (F.) Palais. The upper part of the cavity of the mouth; a kind of parabolic vault, formed by the two superior maxillary bones, and the two palate bones covered with a thick and dense mucous membrane: bounded, before and at the sides, by the superior dental arch; and, behind, by the velum palati. A whitish line runs along the middle, from before to behind; at the anterior extremity of which is a tubercle corresponding to the inferior orifice of the anterior palatine canal. The arteries of the palate and corresponding gums proceed from the palatine, alveolar, infra-orbitar, labial, and buccal branches. The veins follow a similar course. The nerves are given off from the palatine, facial, infra-orbitar, superior dental, and from the naso-palatine ganglion.

Palate, Artific'ial, (F.) Obturateur du Palais. A plate of tortoise-shell, silver, &c., used to close a deficiency of the palate.

Palate Bone, Os Pala'ti, Os basila're, (F.) Os Palatin, Os du Palais, is a small bone, of an irregular shape, situate at the posterior part of the nasal fossæ and palate. It seems formed by the union of two bony plates joined at right angles to each other; so that one is inferior and horizontal; — the other, superior and vertical. The horizontal or palatine portion, Arch of the palate, is quadrilateral. Its upper surface forms part of the nasal fossæ; the lower forms part of the palatine arch, and contains the inferior orifice of the posterior palatine canal. Its anterior edge is articulated with the palatine process of the superior maxillary bone; the posterior is free and sharp. It gives attachment to the velum palati, and presents an eminence, which, when joined with one on the opposite side, forms the posterior nasal spine. Its inner edge is articulated with the corresponding bone; its outer is confounded with the vertical portion. The vertical or ascending portion has the form of a long square. The inner surface forms part of the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. Its outer surface is unequal, and is articulated with the superior maxillary bone; behind, it presents a vertical groove, which forms part of the posterior palatine canal; and, above, a small free surface, which looks into the zygomatic fossa. Its anterior edge is united with the superior maxillary bone; the posterior is unequal, and rests on the internal ala of the pterygoid process. The angle, which it forms by uniting with the posterior edge of the horizontal portion, presents a very prominent pyramidal eminence, called the tubcrosity of the palate bone. Its upper margin is surmounted by two eminences;—the one, anterior, called the orbitar process; — the other posterior, the sphenoid process. These two processes are separated by an almost circular notch, which the sphenoid bone forms into a foramen, called the sphenopalatine.

This bone appears to be developed from a single point of ossification. It is articulated, with the sphenoid, ethmoid, the cornua sphenoidalia, superior maxillary bone, the inferior spongy bone, the vomer, and its fellow.

Palate, Cleft, see Harelip—p. Falling down of the, Uvulitis — p. Fissured, see Harelip — p. Hard, Palate — p. Soft, Velum pendulum palati.

PAL'ATINE, Pal'atal, Palati'nus, Pal'atic, from palatum, 'the palate.' Relating or belonging to the palate.

Palatine or Palatal Arteries are two in number. They are distinguished into, 1. The superior palatal or palatine, Palati'na descen'dens or Pal'ato-max'illary, which leaves the internal maxillary behind the top of the orbit; descends into the pterygo-maxillary fissure, and enters the posterior maxillary canal. Its branches are distributed to the velum palati and the nasal fossæ. 2. The inferior or ascending palatine or palatal, which is very small, and separates from the facial near its origin. It passes along the lateral and superior part of the pharynx, between the pillars of the velum palati, and divides into a number of ramusculi, which are distributed to the pharynx, the corresponding tonsil, the Eustachian tube, and the velum palati.

Palatine Canals or Ducts. These are two in number. The anterior, Ductus incisi'vus vel Nasa'lo-palati'nus, Inci'sive canal, is situate at the anterior part of the palatine arch, and is formed by the two superior maxillary bones. It is single beneath, but opens above by two apertures, one into each nasal fossa. The foramen is called Fora'men incisi'vum vel F. Palatinum ante'rius, F. Alveola'rē ante'rius, and F. cæcum ossis maxilla'ris superio'ris. The posterior palatine canal is situate at the posterior part of the palate. It is formed by the palate and superior maxillary bones, ascends between these two bones; and, in its course, gives rise to two or three small accessary palatine canals, which open above the tuberosity of the palate bone. It transmits the nerves and vessels which bear its name. The foramen is called, F. Palati'num poste'rius, F. Palato-maxilla'rē, F. alveola'rē poste'rius.

Palatine Membrane is the fibro-mucous membrane that lines the palate or roof of the mouth.

Palatine or Palatal Nerves, Gutturo-palatius, (Ch.) are three in number; and arise from the inferior part of the spheno-palatine ganglion. 1. The great palatine, Palatin inférieur, (Ch.) is situate anteriorly to the two others, and descends into the posterior palatine canal; gives a nasal filament and a staphyline filament, and is distributed on the palate. 2. The middle palatine, Guttural, (Ch.,) which arises behind the preceding; enters one of the accessary palatine canals, and is distributed to the tonsils and velum palati. 3. The little palatine nerve, situate still more backward than the last, which loses itself by several filaments in the uvula, tonsils, and follicles of the palatine membrane.

PALATITE, Isthmitis.

PALATITIS, Uranisconitis.

PALATO-GLOSSUS, Glossostaphylinus.

PALATO-PHARYNGEUS, Pharyn'go-staphyli'nus, Staphyli'no-pharyngeus, Thyro-pharyn'go-staphyli'nus, part of the Hypero-pharyngeus, (F.) Palato-pharyngien, Stylo-pharyngien (Ch.) A membranous muscle, broader at its middle than at its extremities, and situate vertically in the lateral paries of the pharynx and velum palati. It includes the perystaphylo-pharyngeus, pharyngo-staphylinus, and thyro-staphylinus of Winslow. When the two palato-pharyngei contract together, they depress the velum. They elevate and shorten the pharynx, and act principally in deglutition.

PALE, Pollen.

PALENESS, Pallor, Och'rates, Ochro'ma, Ochri'asis, Leuco'sis, Dealba'tio, Luror, (F.) Pâleur. Whiteness of complexion. It appears to be owing to a diminution or alteration of the blood circulating in the capillary vessels, and is often a sign of disease.

PÂLES COULEURS, Chlorosis.

PALETTE, (F.) Pal'mula, Fer'ula. An instrument of percussion. It has the shape of a spatula with a long handle; is made of very light, white wood, and has been proposed, by Mr. Percy, for what is called the Massage, a kind of pressure or kneading, exerted by the hand on the body and limbs to excite the tone of the skin and subjacent tissues.

Palette also means a cup for bleeding, and the xiphoid cartilage (?).

PALETTE À PANSEMENT. A small splint of thin, scooped wood, having the shape of the hand, and used to support the hand in certain cases—when burnt, for example—in order to prevent the fingers from being deformed by the cicatrices.

PALETTE DE CABANIS. An instrument, invented by Cabanis of Geneva to draw out the extremity of the stylet when passed into the nose, in the operation for fistula lachrymalis. It is composed of two plates of silver, pierced with several holes, and movable on each other. To use it, the instrument must be carried into the nose, so that the holes of the two plates correspond. When the end of the stylet is received into one of these holes, it is pinched by sliding one of the plates on the other, and is easily withdrawn.

PÂLEUR, Paleness.

PALI PLAGUE, see Plague.

PALILLO, Campomanesia lineatifolia.

PALIMPISSA, see Pinus sylvestris.

PALINCOTESIS, Recrudescentia.

PALINDROME, Palindromia.

PALINDROM'IA, Palin'dromē, from παλιν, 'again,' and δρομος, 'a course.' This word signifies, with some, a reflux of fluids from the exterior towards the interior; and, according to others, the relapse of an affection — the recurrence — Recur'sio, Repetit''io — of a paroxysm or disease, — Morbus recidi'vus, Morbi recur'sus.

PALINGENESIS, Regeneration.

PALLIA'TION, Pallia'tio, from palliare, 'to cover, mask;' from pallium, 'a mantle.' The act of palliating — that is, of causing the symptoms of a disease to mitigate, without curing it. The medical art can frequently only moderate the symptoms of a disease, prevent it from making progress, prolong the days of the patient, and diminish his sufferings. This is a palliative treatment.

PAL'LIATIVE, Palliati'vus, Antipath'ic, Enantiopath'ic. A remedy or mode of treatment, which only relieves a disease, without curing it. The palliative treatment — Cura palliati'va, is placed in antithesis to the radical, Cara radica'lis; see Radical.

PALLIDULUS, Blafard.

PALLIDUS MORBUS, Chlorosis.

PALLOR, Paleness — p. Virginum, Chlorosis.

PALM, Palma, Vola, V. manūs, Plate'a, Thenar, Ages, Agos'tus, Poc'ulum, Pat'era, Supellex seu Supellec'tilē Diog''enis, (F.) Paume ou Creux de la main. The hollow or inside of the hand. It is limited, without, by the thenar eminence, which answers to the thumb; within, by the hypothenar eminence, which answers to the little finger; above, by the wrist-joint; and, below, by the four fingers.

PALMÆ U'TERI PLICA'TÆ, Arbor vitæ uteri'nus, A. u'teri viv'ificans. The arborescent striæ in the interior of the cervix uteri.

PALMAIRE CUTANÉ, Palmaris brevis — p. Grand, Palmaris magnus — p. Grêle, Palmaris longus — p. Long, Palmaris longus.

PALMAR, Palma'ris, from palma, 'the palm of the hand.' That which concerns the palm of the hand. The palm has, sometimes, been divided into three regions, called palmar. 1. The external palmar region corresponds to the thenar eminence. 2. The internal palmar region is formed by the hypothenar eminence: and, 3. The middle palmar region is the hollow of the hand, (F.) Creux de la main.

Palmar Aponeuro'sis, Palmar fas'cia. A strong triangular aponeurosis, which arises from the inferior tendon of the palmaris brevis, and the anterior annular ligament of the carpus. It covers the whole palm of the hand, and adheres, somewhat strongly, to the skin of the part. The palmar ligaments are small, very numerous, fibrous fasciæ, which unite the different bones of the carpus and metacarpus.

Palmar Arches, (F.) Arcades ou Crosses palmaires. The curved extremities of the radial and cubital arteries in the palm of the hand. There are two palmar arches: — the one cubital or superficial, — grande Arcade palmaire of Chaussier, furnishes, at its convexity towards the fingers, the collateral arteries of the fingers, and the internal collateral of the thumb; the other, the radial, profound, or deep-seated, — petite Arcade palmaire of Chaussier, is deep in the palm of the hand beneath the tendons of the flexor muscles of the fingers. It gives some small branches only to the surrounding parts. The palmar veins accompany the corresponding arteries.

PALMAR ARTERIES, see Palmar arches — p. Fascia, P. aponeurosis.

PALMAR MUSCLES. These are three in number. 1. Palma'ris Magnus, Flexor carpi radia'lis, Radia'lis inter'nus, (F.) Épitrochlo-métacarpien (Ch.), Palmaire grand, Radial antérieur. A long fusiform muscle, which passes obliquely from the inner tuberosity of the humerus to the upper extremity of the second metacarpal bone. It bends the hand. 2. Palmaris longus, Latescen'tis chordæ, Ulna'ris grac''ilis, (F.) Épitrochlo-carpi-palmaire (Ch.), Palmaire long, P. grêle. This muscle is situate on the inner side of the last. It is very slender, and passes from the inner tuberosity of the humerus to the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and to the palmar aponeurosis, which it seems to form by the vanishing of its fibres. It stretches the palmar aponeurosis, and bends the hand. 3. Palmaris Brevis, Caro quadra'ta, Carpiæ'us, (F.) Palmaire cutané. A small, thin, quadrilateral muscle; situate before the thenar eminence. It passes from the annular ligament of the carpus to the integuments of the palm of the hand, which it wrinkles by its contractions.

PALMUS, Palpitation — p. Cordis, Palpitation — p. Plumbarius, Colic, metallic — p. Vomitus, Vomiting.

PALO DE CALENTURAS, Calenturas.

PALOS DE CALENTURA, Cinchona.

PALPA'TION, from (F.) palper, to feel. The sense of touch. It is also used for the mode of exploring disease by feeling or pressing upon the diseased organ.

PAL'PEBRA, supposed to be from palpitare, 'to palpitate,' owing to its frequent motion (?) Bleph'aron, Oper'culum seu Coöper'culum oc'uli, Eyelid, (F.) Paupière. The eyelids are two movable vela, situate in front of the eye; which by their separation permit the organ to receive the impression of light, or by their greater or less occlusion protect it from the influence of too great light, or from the action of extraneous bodies. They are separated, above, from the forehead, by the eyebrows; and, below, are confounded with the cheeks. They are distinguished into upper, Palpebra major seu superior, Epicyl'ium, — and lower, Palpebra minor seu inferior, Hypocœ'lis, Hypocœ'lum, Hypoc'ylum. The former is much broader and more movable than the latter. They are separated by a transverse cleft; and their edges are thick, and furnished with the cilia or eyelashes. Supported by the tarsal cartilages, they unite at the extremities of the transverse diameter of the orbit, forming two angles, the innermost being called the greater angle of the eye, or inner or greater canthus; the other, the lesser or external angle or canthus. They are formed, 1. Of a thin dermoid texture: 2. Of a muscular membrane, — a portion of the orbicularis: 3. Of a particular fibrous membrane: 4. Of the tarsi: 5. Of a mucous membrane, — a part of the tunica conjunctiva.

Their vessels and nerves are called Palpebral.

PALPEBRA INFERIOR EXTRORSUM FLEXA, Ectropion — p. Tertia, Valvula semilunaris.

PALPEBRÆ SUPERIORIS PRIMUS, Levator palpebræ superioris.

PAL'PEBRAL, Palpebra'lis, from palpebra, 'the eyelid.' That which belongs or relates to the eyelid.

PALPEBRAL ARTERIES are those distributed to the eyelids. They are two in number; an upper and a lower. The former arises from the ophthalmic, a little beyond the cartilaginous pulley of the greater oblique muscle, and descends towards the upper eyelid, over which it is distributed. The latter arises at the side of, and a little behind, the preceding, and sends its ramifications to the lower eyelid and the neighbouring parts. The palpebral veins have a similar arrangement; except that some of them open into the temporal and labial veins.

PALPEBRAL FLUX, PURIFORM. A puriform discharge, furnished by the glands of Meibomius, when inflamed; and to which Scarpa attributes fistula lachrymalis, in many cases.

PALPEBRAL LIGAMENTS are distinguished into superior and inferior. Some anatomists, with Winslow, have described, under this name, the fibrous layer which is attached, — on the one hand, to the outer part of the circumference of the orbit; on the other, to the tarsal cartilages.

PALPEBRAL NERVES, Nerves of the eyelids, arise, particularly, from the frontal and lachrymal branches; from the ophthalmic nerve of Willis; and from the facial, nasal, and infra-orbitar branch of the superior maxillary nerve.

PALPITA'TION, Palpita'tio, Palmus, P. Cordis, Palpita'tio seu Pulsa'tio Cordis, Tremor Cordis, Vibra'tio Cardi'aca seu Cordis, Cardiog'mus, Cardiopal'mus, Subsul'tio, Clonus Palpita'tio, (F.) Palpitation, P. du Cœur. A name given to the pulsations of the heart, when they become stronger, more extensive, or more sensible to the individual, than ordinarily. Palpitations occur in a number of affections. They are, sometimes, owing to organic diseases of the heart, hypertrophy, inflammation, &c.; at others, to a disease in some other viscus; whilst, frequently, they are merely nervous.

PALPITATION is sometimes felt in the arteries, constituting Palpitatio Arterio'sa.

PALPITATION DU CŒUR, Palpitation.

PANAX QUINQUEFO'LIUM, Aurelia'na Canaden'sis, Ara'lia Canaden'sis, Ginseng, Ninsing, Gensang, Redberry, Five-fingers. Family, Araliaceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Monœcia. This plant grows in Tartary and North America. The root is about the thickness of the little finger; an inch or two in length, often dividing into two branches; of a whitish-yellow colour; wriukled on the surface, and of a compact, almost horny, texture. It has no smell, but a very sweet taste, combined with a slight degree of aromatic bitterness. It is much esteemed by the Chinese, who pay a high price for it. It is a gentle and agreeable stimulant.

PANBIO'MA, Pambio'ma, from παν, 'all,' and βιος, 'life.' The original animating principle. The general principle of life.

PANCHRESTOS, Panacea.

PANCHYMAGO'GUM, Pantago'gon, from παν, 'all,' χυμος, 'juice,' and αγω, 'I drive away.' A medicine which the ancients believed capable of purging away all sorts of humours.

PANCHYMAGOGUM MINERALE, Hydrargyri submurias.

PANCŒNOSUS, Pandemic.

PANCŒNUS (MORBUS), Pandemic.

PANCRATIUM, Pancreas.

PAN'CREAS, from παν, 'all,' and κρεας, 'flesh;' i. e. 'quite fleshy.' Callic'reas, Pancra'tium, Pan'creum, Lactes, Pulvi'nar ventri'culi, Totum carno'sum, Gland'ula saliva'lis abdom'inis, Pancrc'nē. A gland, deeply seated in the abdomen, and lying transversely on the vertebral column, between the three curvatures of the duodenum, behind the stomach, and to the right of the spleen. Its left extremity is called the tail of the pancreas: it is smaller than the right, which is called the head. At its right portion, it has, almost always, a greater or less prolongation; called, by Winslow, and some others, the lesser pancreas, (F.) Petit pancréas, Pancreas of Aselli, Pancreas minus. The pancreas resembles the salivary glands in structure, and has been called the Abdominal Salivary Gland. It is composed of lobes and granulated lobules, distinct, and united by areolar tissue. From each of the granulations of these lobes arise the radicles of its excretory duct, which are very delicate, and united like veins. The duct itself, Ductus Pancreat'icus, Canal or Duct of Wirsung or Wirsungs, (F.) Canal pancréatique, proceeds in a serpentine course through the substance of the organ; and when it has reached behind the second portion of the duodenum, it becomes free, and is of the size of a crow's quill. It opens at an acute angle into the choledoch duct, or proceeds close to it, opening separately into the duodenum. The Pancreatic arteries are very numerous and small. They proceed from the cœliac, splenic, superior mesenteric, right gastro-epiploic, coronaria ventriculi, and left capsular. Its veins open into the radicles of the vena porta; and, particularly, into the splenic and lesser mesenteric. Its nerves emanate from the solar plexus, and its lymphatics pass into ganglions, to which it gives its name. The pancreas secretes the Pancreatic juice, Succus seu Liquor Pancreat'icus, Lympha Pancrea'tis, which resembles the saliva.

PANCREAS OF ASELLI, see Pancreas—p. Minus, see Pancreas—p. Petit, see Pancreas—p. Second, Brunner's glands.

PANCREATAL'GIA, from παγκρεας, 'the pancreas,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain or disease of the pancreas.

PANCREATEMPHRAX'IS, from παγκρεας, 'the pancreas,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Obstruction of the pancreas.

PANCREAT'IC, Pancreat'icus. Same etymon as Pancreas. Relating to or affecting the pancreas.

PANCREAT'IC SARCO'MA OF AB'ERNETHY, Emphy'ma sarco'ma pancreat'icum. A tumour, in irregular masses, connected by loose fibrous substance, like the irregular masses of the pancreas. Found in the areolar substance; but, more usually, in lymphatic glands, chiefly in the female breast.

PANCREATI'TIS, Inflamma'tio pancrea'tis, (F.) Inflammation du Pancréas. Inflammation of the pancreas;—an affection, tho phenomena of which are not well known.

PAN'CREATOID, from παγκρεας, 'the pancreas,' and ειδος, 'appearance.' Pancreatoï'des. A tumour resembling the pancreas in structure.

PANCREATON'CUS, from παγκρεας, 'the pancreas,' and ογκος, 'a swelling.' Tumour of the pancreas.

PANCRENE, Pancreas.

PANCREUM, Pancreas.

PANDA'LEA, Panda'leum. A kind of lozenge used by the Arabian physicians.

PANDALEUM, Pandalea.

PANDALITIUM, Paronychia.

PANDEMIA, Pandemic.

PANDEM'IC, Pan'demy, Pande'mia, Morbus Pande'mius seu Pande'mus seu Pancœ'nus, Pancœno'sus, (F.) Pandémie; from παν, 'all,' and δημος, 'people.' An epidemic which attacks the whole population.

PANDÉMIE, Pandemic.

PANDEMY, Pandemic.

PANDICULA'TION, Pandicula'tio, Scordine'ma, Scordinis'mus, Clonus Pandicula'tio, from pandere, 'to stretch out.' Stretching, Hal'ices, (pl.) An action, which consists in elevating the upper limbs, and throwing the head and trunk backwards, at the same time that the lower limbs are extended. This series of motions of the extensor muscles is in some measure independent of the will, and is accompanied with yawning, which is equally involuntary. In the state of health, stretching occurs before and after sleep; especially when we are fatigued. It is also observed at the onset of certain paroxysms of fever, hysteria, &c.

PANDOCE'UM, Pandochi'um, Pandoc'ium, from παν, 'all,' and δεχεσθαι, 'to receive.' An inn that receives all classes. A general hospital, or one that admits all cases.

PANDOCHIUM, Pandoceum.

PANDOCIUM, Paudoceum.

PANHIDRO'SIS, from παν, 'all,' and 'ιδρωσις, 'sweating.' Sudor universa'lis. Sweating over the whole body.

PANHYPERÆMIA, Plethora.

PANICAUT, Eryngium campestre—p. Maritime, Eryngium maritimum.

PANIC GRASS, ITALIAN, Panicum Italicum.

PAN'ICUM ITAL'ICUM, Ital'ian Panic Grass, Indian Millet, Guinea Corn, Barbadoes Millet, Mil'ium In'dicum, Sorghum, Holcus Sorghum, (F.) Millet des oiseaux. Nat. Ord. Gramineæ. The seed—Mil'ii Sem'ina—are much esteemed in Italy, being a constant ingredient in soups, and made into a variety of forms for the table.

PANICUM MILIA'CEUM, P. mil'ium, Common Millet, Milium, M. Pan'icum seu Esculentum, Cenchron, Cenchrus, (F.) Millot ordinaire. Millet-seed are esteemed a nutritious article of diet, and are often made into puddings.

PANIV'OROUS, Paniv'orus, from panis, 'bread,' and voro, 'I devour.' Subsisting on bread.

PANNI. Swathing clothes.

PANNICULE CHARNU, Panniculus carnosus.

PANNIC'ULUS, diminutive of pannus, cloth. A piece of fine cloth. Pterygion.

PANNICULUS ADIPOSUS, Cellular membrane.

PANNICULUS CARNO'SUS, Tu'nica carnosa, Muscular Web, Mantle, (F.) Pannicule charnue, is a general covering found in the quadruped, and formed by a thin, subcutaneous muscle, which serves to move the skin. It exists only in certain parts of the human body,—as in the forehead, where it is formed by the occipito-frontalis; in the neck, by the platysma myoides; and, in the scrotum, by the cremaster muscle.

PANNICULUS CORDIS, Pericardium—p. Hymenæus, Hymen—p. Virginalis, Hymen.

PANNUS. A piece of cloth. This word has several other meanings, many of which are equivocal. It means a tent for a wound, and, also, an irregular nævus or mark on the skin.—Castelli. Modern ophthalmologists apply it to an opake and vascular condition of the anterior membrane of the cornea, almost invariably produced by the continuance of purulent or strumous ophthalmia, or by chronic inflammation of the cornea. This part becomes nebulous, covered with red vessels, and opake. At times, the sclerotic conjunctiva undergoes a similar change to that which occurs in the corneal portion.

PANNUS HEPATICUS, Chloasma—p. Lenticularis, Ephelides.

PANOCHIA, Bubo.

PANOPHO'BIA, Pantopho'bia, Panpho'bia, Pavopho'bia, Athym'ia, Pavor, (F.) Frayeur nocturne, Souci, from Παν, 'the god Pan,' and φοβος, 'fear.' A panic or fear inspired by the god Pan, according to the opinion of the ancients. Some derive it from παν, 'all,' and φοβος, 'fear.' This is sometimes morbid, and is a symptom of melancholy.

PANOPHTHALMI'TIS, from παν, 'all,' and ophthalmitis, 'inflammation of the eye.' Inflammation of the whole eye.

PANPHOBIA, Panophobia.

PANPLEGIA, Pamplegia.

PANSCLERO'SIS, from παν, 'all,' and σκληρωσις, 'hardness.' Complete induration of a part.

PANSEMENT, Dressing.

PANSIES, Viola tricolor.

PANSPER'MIA, from παν, 'all,' and σπερμα, 'sperm.' The theory of Dissemination of Germs, according to which, ova or germs are disseminated over all space, undergoing development under favourable circumstances.

PANTAGOGON, Panchymagogum.

PANTANENCEPHA'LIA, from παν, παντος, 'all,' and anencepha'lia, absence of brain. Entire absence of brain—the same as anencephalia.—G. St. Hilaire.

PANTATROPH'IA, from παν, 'all,' and ατροφια, 'atrophy.' Universal atrophy.

PANTHOD'IC, Panthod'icus, from πας, παντος, 'all,' and 'οδος, 'a way.' An epithet applied by Dr. Marshall Hall, to a course of nervous action proceeding from one point in all directions to every other.

PANTICES, Intestine.

PANTING, Anhelatio.

PANTOGANGLIITIS, Cholera.

PANTOPHAGISTS, see Omnivorous.

PANTOPHAGUS, Omnivorous.

PANTOPHOBIA, Hydrophobia, Panophobia.

PANUS, Phygethlon—p. Faucium, Stomatopanus—p. Inguinalis, Bubo.

PANZOÖT'IA, Pantozoötia; from παν, 'all,' and ζωον, 'animal.' An endemic or epidemic disease affecting animals generally.

PAP, Nipple. Also, a soft food made of bread boiled or softened with water.

PAP, OF THE THROAT, Uvula.

PAPAS AMERICANUS, Solanum tuberosum.

PAPA'VER, P. somnif'erum, Mecon. The White Poppy, Papaver sativ'um, (F.) Pavot des Jardins. Family Papaveraceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia. The CAPSULE OF THE WHITE POPPY, Co'dia, κωδια or κωδεια, Sca'phion, Papav'eris Caput vel Cap'sula, Mecon, Poppy-head, is used in fomentation as an anodyne and relaxant, to inflamed or ulcerated parts. The expressed oil of the seeds is called by the French Huile d'Œillette. It is from the poppy that OPIUM—called, also, Opium Theba'icum, Meco'nium, Opion, Manus Dei, Affion, Amphiam, Afium, Osoron, Lau'danum, Mecon, Sopio—is procured. It is the milky juice obtained after the flowering of the plant, by making longitudinal incisions in the capsules and stalks. It is commonly obtained from the Levant or India, where the poppy grows abundantly. Opium is a compound of morphia, narcotina, meconic acid, codeia, narcein, meconin, caoutchouc, fecula, resin, oil, and several other substances. Turkey Opium is of a heavy and slightly fetid odour. Its taste is nauseous, bitter, acrid, and warm: it is in flat pieces; solid and tenacious; of a dark brown colour, and yellowish when powdered; making a light brown, interrupted streak on paper. In East India Opium, the odour is the same, and empyreumatic; the taste is less bitter, but more nauseous, and the colour darker. The varieties of opium known in commerce are the Smyrna, the Constantinople, the Egyptian, the Persian, and the Indian. Opium is stimulant in small doses; sedative, in large; narcotic and anodyne; operating through the nervous system. It is a most valuable remedy in all painful affections, and inflammations, when given so as to produce its full, sedative effects, especially in peritonitis. In diarrhœa and dysentery, it acts as an astringent; in intermittents, it will often prevent the paroxysm. In typhus, in small doses, it acts as a cordial; in larger, it allays irritation and produces sleep. When applied externally, its narcotic effects are developed: and, hence, it is a useful application to irritable sores, painful tumours, &c. Dose, gr. ¼ to ½ as a stimulant; gr. j to iv as a sedative.

Papaver Nigrum. This is merely a variety of the white poppy, producing black seeds.

Papaver Rhœas. The systematic and pharmacopœial name of the Red corn-poppy, Corn rose, Papaver errat'icum, P. cerea'lē, P. rubrum, Rhœas, (F.) Coquelicot. The heads of this species, also, contain a milky juice of a narcotic quality. A syrup of its flowers has been directed, which has been esteemed diaphoretic and slightly soothing; but is more admired for its colour than for any other property.

PAPAVERACEUM, Opiate.

PAPAVERCULUM, Meconium.

PAPAVERINUM, Codeine.

PAPAW TREE, Carica papaya.

PAPAYER, Carica papaya.

PAPIL'LA, P. Mammæ, Thelē, U'beris apex: — diminutive, perhaps, from papa, one of the earliest cries of the infant, ascribed to a craving for food. The end of the breast, the nipple. An eminence similar to a nipple. A name given to small eminences more or less prominent, at the surface of several parts, particularly of the skin and mucous membranes, in which latter situation they are also called villi. See Villous. They appear formed by the ultimate expansion of the vessels and nerves, and are susceptible, in some cases, of a kind of erection. They are also called Papillæ nervo'sæ seu Ner'veæ, P. Pyramida'les, Nervous papillæ, (F.) Papilles ou Papilles nerveuses, Houppes nerveuses.

Papillæ of the Kidney, (F.) Mamelons du rein, are the projections into the pelvis of the kidney of the apices of the cones—Pyramids of Malpighi, Pyram'ides Malpighia'næ — of the tubular substance of the organ. They are also called Proces'sus mamilla'res, Carun'culæ papilla'res, and Papill'æ renum.

Papillæ, Lenticular, see Papillæ of the tongue — p. Maximæ, see Papillæ of the tongue — p. Mediæ, see Papillæ of the tongue—p. Minimæ, see Papillæ of the tongue—p. Renum, see Papillæ of the kidney—p. Semilenticulares, see Papillæ of the tongue.

Papillæ of the Tongue are very numerous and marked. They are observed, particularly, at the upper surface of the organ, and are distinguished into—1. The Lentic'ular papillæ, Papillæ muco'sæ, P. max'imæ, P. capita'tæ, P. valla'tæ, P. circumvalla'tæ, P. trunca'tæ, P. calyciform'mes. They are arranged at the base of the tongue in two oblique lines having the shape of the letter V; and united angularly at the foramen cæcum. They have, in general, an ovoid or spherical shape, and have seemed to be mucous follicles similar to those of the palate, lips, &c. 2. The Fun'giform or Fungoid papillæ, Papillæ me'diæ, P. Semilenticula'res, are of indeterminate number, but always more numerous than the preceding. They are irregularly disseminated near the edges and the point of the tongue; have a rounded and flattened head, supported by a short and narrow footstalk. Their tint is whitish. Of their real nature we are ignorant. 3. The Con'ical, Conoid'al or Pyram'idal papillæ, P. min'imæ, P. villo'sæ, are the most numerous of all. Their arrangement is more regular in the forepart of the tongue than behind. They resemble small cones; the base being towards the tongue and the apex free. The anterior are very small, and have been called Fil'iform papil'læ. They appear to be produced by the terminations of the filaments of the lingual nerve, and are surrounded by an evident vascular network.

Papillæ Truncatæ, see Papillæ of the tongue —p. Vallatæ, see Papillæ of the tongue—p. Villosæ, see Papillæ of the tongue.

PAP'ILLARY, Papilla'ris, Pap'illous, from papilla. Of or belonging to the nipple or to the papillæ.

PAPILLOUS, Papillary.

PAPOOSE ROOT, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes.

PAPPEA CAPEN'SIS. A small tree of the Nat. Ord. Sapindaceæ, common in Cafferland, the fruit of which is called Wild Plums. It furnishes a vinous beverage, and excellent vinegar. Its kernel contains an oil, which, although eatable, is somewhat cathartic, and is recommended as an external application in tinea capitis, alopecia, &c.

PAPPUS AMERICANUS, Solanum tuberosum.

PAP'ULA. A pimple, Exor'mia, (F.) Bouton, Bourgeon. A small, acuminated elevation of the cuticle, with an inflamed base; very seldom containing a fluid, or suppurating, and commonly terminating in scurf or desquamation.

Papulæ form the first order of Willan and Bateman's arrangement of cutaneous diseases.

Papula Agria, Lichen agrius — p. Fera, Herpes exedens—p. Miliaris, Miliary fever.

Papulæ, Lichen—p. Siccæ, Lichen—p. Sudoris, Miliary fever—p. Sudorales, Sudamina.

PAP'ULOSE, Papulo'sus, Pap'ulous, Papula'tus, Pimpled, from papula. Of or belonging to, resembling, or covered with, papulæ or pimples.

PAQUERETTE VIVACE, Bellis.

PAR NERVO'RUM, Syz'ygi nervo'rum. A pair of nerves.

Par Opticum Nervorum, Optic nerve—p. Primum nervorum cerebri, Olfactory nerves — p. Quintum nervorum cerebralium, Trigemini — p.

Secundum nervorum, Optic nerve — p. Septimum sive faciale, Facial nerve — p. Trigeminum, Trigemini — p. Trium funiculorum, Trigemini — p. Vagus, Pneumogastric—p. Visorius, Optic nerve.

PARA, παρα, a common prefix, 'by, near, contrary to, through,' (per;) 'above and beyond,' (ultra:) 'besides,' (præter.) In certain terms, as in Paracusis, Parapsis, Parabysma, &c., used by Dr. Good, para means a defective or morbid condition.

PARABAL'ANUS, from παραβαλλειν, (παρα, and βαλλειν, 'to cast,') 'to expose one-self.' A name given, by the ancients, to a person who devoted himself to the service of the sick in hospitals; and particularly during epidemics and the plague.

PARABYS'MA, from παρα, and βυειν, 'to stuff.' Infarction or engorgement of an organ—as Parabysma Lie'nis, Engorgement of the spleen.

Parabysma Mesentericum, Tabes mesenterica.

PARABYS'TIA, same etymon. Engorgement or infarction of an organ with blood.

PARACELSIS'TA, Paracel'sist, Paracel'sian; from Paracelsus. A follower of Paracelsus.

PARACELSISTICA MEDICINA, see Spagyrists.

PARACENTE'RIUM. Same etymon as the next. Woolhouse has given this appellation to a small trocar, employed by Nuck for puncturing the eye in cases of dropsy of that organ.

PARACENTE'SIS, Perfora'tio, Punc'tio, Punctu'ra, Cenembate'sis, Cente'sis, Compunc'tio: from παρακεντεω, (παρα, and κεντεω, 'I pierce,') 'I pierce through.' Puncture. The operation of tapping to evacuate the collected fluid in ascites, ovarial dropsy, &c.

Paracentesis, Puncturing—p. Thoracis, Thoracocentesis.

PARACENTETERION, Trocar.

PARACENTICION, Trocar.

PARACHRŒ'A, from παρα, and χροα, 'colour.' Morbid change of colour of the surface, especially of the face.

PARACHROMA, Achromatopsia.

PARACHROSIS, Decoloration.

PARACINE'SES, (G.) Parakinesien, from παρα, 'defective,' and κινησις, 'motion.' Diseases of the motor nerves; morbid movements of voluntary muscles.

PARACMASIS, Decline.

PARACMAS'TIC, Paracmas'ticus, from παρακμαζω, 'I decrease.' Decreasing. An epithet for a distemper, which gradually decreases. Also, according to Galen, the period of life when a person is said to grow old, which he places at from 35 to 49, after which he is said to be old — a definition that would not suit us at the present day.— Gorræus, and Castelli.

PARACMASTICOS, see Acmasticos.

PARACME, Decline.

PARACOE, see Cophosis, Paraeusis.

PARAC'OPĒ, Paraph'ora, Paracru'sis, from παρακοπτω, 'I strike falsely.' Delirium. In Hippocrates, it means the slight delirium which sometimes occurs in febrile diseases.

PARACOUSIA, see Cophosia.

PARAC'RISES, (G.) Parakrisien: from παρα, 'defective, morbid,' and κρισις, 'secretion.' Diseases of the secretory function.—Fuchs.

PARACRUSIS, Paracope.

PARACUSIS, Cophosis. Also, perverted audition.

Paracu'sis Acris, Audi'tus a'crior, Paracu'sis axycoi'a, from παρα, 'defective,' and ακουσις, 'the act of hearing.' The hearing painfully acute, and intolerant of the lowest sounds; a symptom in otalgia, epilepsy, cephalitis, and febrile affections.

Paracusis Duplicata, Double hearing — p. Imaginaria, Tinnitus aurium — p. Imperfecta, Double hearing, P. perversa—p. Obtusa, Baryecoia—p. Oxycoia, P. acris.

Paracusis Perver'sa, P. Willisia'na, P. imperfec'ta, Perverse hearing. The ear only sensible to articulate sounds, when excited by other and louder sounds intermixed with them.— Good.

Paracusis Surditas, see Cophosis—p. Willisiana, Paracusis perversa.

PARACYCLE'SES, (G.) Parakyklesen, from παρα, 'defective, morbid,' and κυκλησις, 'circulation.' Diseases of the blood as regards its distribution and motion.— Fuchs.

PARACYESIS, Pregnancy, morbid, Pregnancy, preternatural—p. Abortus, Abortion—p. Tubaria, Salpingo-cyesis.

PARACYNAN'CHĒ, (para and cynanche.) Inflammation of the external muscles of the larynx. According to others, a slight cynanche.

PARÆSTHESIA, Paresthesis — p. Olfactoria, Parosmia.

PARÆSTHESIS, Paresthesis — p. Auditûs flacca, Proptoma auricularum.

PARÆTHENAR, Parathenar.

PARAGEUSIS, Ageustia. Also, perversion of taste, Parageu'sia, Parageust'ia, Allotriogeus'tia, Gustus deprava'tus.

PARAGEUSTIA, Parageusis.

PARAGLOSSA, Paraglos'sē, from παρα, and γλωσσα, 'the tongue;' Swelling of the tongue; Dysphag'ia Linguo'sa, Glassomegis'tus, Macroglos'sa, Prolap'sus linguæ. Sauvages, under the term Paraglossa deglutito'ria, means a pretended doubling of the tongue into the pharynx, (F.) Renversement de la langue. See Glossocele.

PARAGOGE, Abduction, Coaptation.

PARAGOMPHO'SIS, Paragomphosis cap'itis, from παρα, 'by,' 'near,' and γομφωσις, 'a nailing. Incomplete wedging of the head of the child in the pelvis during labour.

PARAKINESIEN, Paracineses.

PARAKRISIEN, Paracrises.

PARAKYKLESEN, Paracycleses.

PARALALIA, Mogilalia — p. Nasalis, Rhinophonia.

PARALAMP'SIS, παραλαμψις, from παραλαμπω, (παρα and λαμπω, 'I shine,') 'I shine at the side of;' Mac'ula corneæ margarita'cea, Perla. A cicatrix on the transparent part of the eye.— Hippocrates.

PARARELEMA, Delirium.

PARALLAGE, Insanity.

PARALLAGMA, Chevauchement.

PARALLAXIS, Chevauchement, Insanity.

PARALLE'LA. A kind of scurfy, cutaneous eruption, affecting the palms of the hands, in parallel lines, and symptomatic of the venereal disease.—Forestus.

PARALLELISM OF DISEASES, Isopathia.

PARALOGIA, Delirium.

PARALOPH'IA, from παρα, 'near,' and λοφια, 'the first vertebra of the back.' The lower and lateral part of the neck, near the vertebræ.—Keil.

PARALYSÉ, Paralytic.

PARALYSIE, Paralysis—p. Saturnine, Palsy, lead.

PARAL'YSIS, Par'esis, Resolu'tio membro'rum, R. nervo'rum, Carus paralysis, Catal'ysis, (F.) Paralysie, Résolution des membres; Palsy, from παραλυω, (παρα and λυω, 'I loosen,') 'I relax.' Abolition or great diminution of the voluntary motions, and sometimes of sensation, in one or more parts of the body.

Palsy is said to be local, when it affects only a few muscles. When it extends to half the body, vertically or horizontally, it is called Hemiple'-

gia or Paraple'gia. It is commonly symptomatic of disease of the brain or of the nerves themselves, and is a frequent accompaniment, precursor, or successor of apoplexy,—Phrenoparal'ysis. The immediate cause is, generally, pressure, either by blood effused, or by serum, or by vascular turgescence. At its onset, therefore, bloodletting may be advisable; but, afterwards, the disease becomes one of nervous debility, and requires stimulants — to the paralyzed parts, or to the mucous membranes, — frictions, sinapisms, blisters, the moxa, baths, electricity, galvanism, purgatives, and the nux vomica, which last has the property of exciting movements where the will has no longer power. The disease generally admits only of palliation, and is extremely apt to recur.

PARALYSIS, Primula veris.

PARAL'YSIS AG''ITANS, P. trem'ula, Syn'clonus ballis'mus, Scelotyr'bē festi'nans, Tremor, Tromos, Shaking Palsy, Trembling Palsy. A variety of tremor, in which the muscles are in a perpetual alternation of contraction and relaxation.

PARALYSIS, BELL'S, Bell's Palsy, Paral'ysis facia'lis, Prosoparal'ysis, Trismus dias'trophē Sauvage'sii, Dias'trophē Gale'ni, Hemiple'gia facia'lis, Oris tortu'ra paralyt'ica Linnæ'i, Hemiprosople'gia. The paralysis of the face induced by a lesion of the portio dura, has been called Bell's Palsy, owing to Sir Charles Bell having been one of the first to investigate it minutely.

PARALYSIS BERIBERIA, Beriberi — p. Extremitatum, Acro-paralysis — p. Facialis, Paralysis, Bell's—p. Hemiplegia, Hemiplegia — p. Intestini recti, Proctoparalysis — p. Intestinorum, Enteroparalysis — p. Linguæ, Glossolysis — p. Medullaris, Paraplegia — p. Metallica, Palsy, lead — p. Nervi hypoglossi, Glossoplegia — p. Nervi vagi in parte thoracicâ, Asthma — p. Nervorum thoracis, &c., Stethoparalysis — p. from Poisons, p. Venenata — p. Rachialgia, Colic, metallic — p. Saturnine, Palsy, lead—p. Scorbutica, Pellagra—p. Spinalis, Paraplegia — p. Tremula, Paralysis agitans, PARAL'YSIS VENENA'TA, Paralysis e vene'nis, Paralysis from poisons. Paralysis, the result of poisonous substances—as of lead, mercury, arsenic, ergot, &c.

PARALYSIS E VENENIS, P. Venenata — p. Ventriculi, Gastroparalysis.

PARALYT'IC, Paralyt'icus, Paraly'zed, Pal'sied, (F.) Paralysé. Same etymon as Paralysis. Affected with or causing paralysis.

PARALYTIC STROKE, see Stroke, paralytic.

PARALYZED, Paralytic.

PARAME'NIA, from παρα, 'badly,' and μην, 'a month;' Menstrua'tio anom'ala, Menses anom'alæ, Mismenstruation. Difficult menstruation. Disordered menstruation.

PARAMENIA DIFFICILIS, Dysmenorrhœa — p. Erroris, Menstruation, vicarious — p. Obstructionis, see Amenorrhœa — p. Profusa, Menorrhagia — p. Superflua, Menorrhagia.

PARAME'RIA, παραμηρια, from παρα, 'about,' and μηρος, 'the thigh.' The internal parts of the thigh.

PARAMESOS, Annular finger, see Digitus.

PARANEPHRI'TIS, from παρα, and νεφριτις, 'inflammation of the kidney.' Inflammation of the renal capsules, Inflamma'tio renum succenturiato'rum.

PARANŒA, Delirium, Dementia.

PARANYMPH'US, from παρα, 'near,' and νυμφη, 'a young spouse,' 'a bride.' A name given by the ancients to him who led the bride to the house of her husband. The term was adopted into the ancient schools of medicine, to designate the usual discourse pronounced at the end of the prescribed period of study for licentiate, in which the qualifications and merits of the candidate were described.

PARAPATHIA, Pathomania.

PARAPECHYON, Radius.

PARAPHIA, Parapsis.

PARAPHIMO'SIS, Periphimo'sis, Circumligatu'ra, Phimo'sis circumliga'ta, Penis lipoderm'us, from παρα, 'about,' and φιμοω, 'I bridle.' Strangulation of the glans penis, owing to the opening of the prepuce being too narrow. It frequently happens in persons affected with phimosis, when the prepuce has been pushed violently behind the base of the glans, during copulation, &c. In paraphimosis, the narrow and resisting aperture of the prepuce forms, behind the corona glandis, a kind of ligature, which strangulates the part, causes it to swell and inflame, and even to become gangrenous. Attempts must be made to bring back the prepuce. These excite considerable pain, yet they must be persevered in for some time; and should they not succeed, the rings, formed by the tumefied prepuce, must be cut transversely, and the antiphlogistic treatment be adopted.

PARAPHOBIA, Hydrophobia.

PARAPHO'NIA, from παρα, and φωνη, 'the voice.' Affection of the voice, when its character or timbre is less agreeable.

PARAPHONIA CLANGENS, Oxyphonia — p. Gutturalis, Asaphia — p. Nasalis, Rhinophonia — p. Puberum, Hirquitalitas—p. Rauca, Raucedo—p. Ulcerosa, Oxyphonia.

PARAPHORA, Delirium, Paracope.

PARAPHRENESIS, Paraphrenitis — p. Diaphragmatica, Diaphragmitis.

PARAPHRÉNIE, Insanity.

PARAPHRENI'TIS, from παρα, 'near,' and φρενες, 'the diaphragm;' Paraphrene'sis. A name given to inflammation of the diaphragm, (see Diaphragmitis,) which was supposed always to produce delirium: — as well as to the delirium itself accompanying that affection. See Phrenitis.

PARAPHROSYNE, Delirium.

PARAPHROTES, Delirium.

PARAPLAS'TIC: Paraplast'icus, from παρα, and πλαστικος, 'formative.' Possessed of depraved formative powers,—as Carcinoma, Encephaloma, Melanosis, &c.

PARAPLE'GIA, Paraplex'ia, Rachioparal'ysis, Rhachiople'gia, Rhachioparal'ysis, Myeloparal'ysis, Paral'ysis spina'lis, P. Medulla'ris, Carus paralysis paraple'gia, from παρα, dim. particle, and πλησσω, 'I strike.' Palsy of the lower half of the body, including the bladder and rectum. It is, generally, owing to disease of some part of the cerebro-spinal axis; especially of the spinal portion. The ancients sometimes used the term for incomplete apoplexy. Some authors have, also, made a distinction between paraplegia and paraplexia,—using the former for partial apoplexy—the latter for general or complete apoplexy.

PARAPLEURITIS, Pleurodynia.

PARAPLEXIA, Paraplegia.

PARAP'OPLEXY, Parapoplex'ia, from παρα, dim., and αποπληξια, 'apoplexy.' False apoplexy; a soporous state, resembling apoplexy; and especially that which occurs in the paroxysms of pernicious intermittents.

PARAP'SIS, Paraph'ia, from παρα, 'defectively,' and απτομαι, 'I touch.' Sense of touch or general feeling vitiated or lost. — Good.

PARAPSIS ACRIS TENERITUDO, Soreness — p. Expers, Torpor, Anæsthesia — p. Illusoria, Pseudæsthesia—p. Pruritus, Itching.

PARARMA, Fimbria.

PARARRHYTHMICUS, Pararrhythmus.

PARARRHYTH'MUS, Pararrhyth'micus, from παρα, 'dim.,' and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' An epithet for the pulse, when it has not the rhythm proper to the age and constitution of the individual.

PARARTHRE'MA, Pararthro'ma, Pararthre'sis, Pararthro'sis, Paree'tasis, Parastrep'sis, from παρα, and αρθρον, 'a joint.' Incomplete luxation; subluxation.

PARACEPAS'TRA, from παρα, and σκεπεζω, 'I cover.' A cap or bandage, which covers the whole head.—Galen.

PARASCEUE, Apparatus.

PARAS'CHIDES, from παρα, and σκιζω, 'I cleave.' Fragments or splinters of a broken bone.

PAR'ASITE, Parasi'tus, from παρα, 'near,' and σιτος, 'corn,' 'food.' Parasites are plants which attach themselves to other plants; and animals which live in or on the bodies of other animals,—so as to subsist at their expense. The mistletoe is a parasitic plant;—the louse a parasitic animal. The chief parasitic animals are the Pedic'ulus huma'nus corp'oris, P. cap'itis, P. pubis, Pulex irri'tans, P. pen'etrans, and the Ac'arus Sca'biei.

PARASIT'IC, Parasit'icus, Par'asitoid, Parasitoï'des. Same etymon. Having the nature of, or resembling a parasite, as 'parasitic growths,' tubercles, cancer, &c.

PARASITICIDE, Antiparasitic.

PARASITISMUS INTESTINALIS, Helminthiasis—p. Superficiei, Malis.

PARASITOID, Parasitic.

PARASPA'DIA, from παρα, and σπαω, 'I draw.' A preternatural opening of the urethra at the side of the penis. One whose urethra opens in this manner is called Paraspadiæ'us and Paraspadias.

PARASPADIÆUS, see Paraspadia.

PARAS'PHAGIS, from παρα, 'near,' and σφαγη, 'the throat.' The part of the neck contiguous to the clavicles.

PARAS'TATA, Paras'tates, from παριστημι, (παρα, and ιστημι,) 'I stand near.' The prostate. In Hippocrates, it means the epididymis. The epididymes were called by Herophilus and Galen Varico'sæ parastatæ to distinguish them from glandulo'sæ parastatæ or prostatæ. Rufus of Ephesus called the Tubæ Fallopianæ Parastatæ varico'sæ.

PARASTATA ADENOIDES, Prostate—p. Glandula, Prostate—p. Glandulosa, Prostate.

PARASTATES, Parastata.

PARASTATI'TIS, Epididymi'tis; from parastata, 'epididymis,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the epididymis.

PARASTREM'MA, Paras'trophē, from παραστρεφω, (παρα, and στρεφω, 'I turn,') 'I distort or pervert.' Convulsive distortion, especially of the face, the soft parts being drawn laterally.

PARASTREPSIS, Pararthrema.

PARASTROPHE, Parastremma.

PARASYNANCHE, Cynanche parotidæa.

PARASYSTOLE, Acinesia.

PARATH'ENAR, Parath'enar, from παρα, 'near,' and θεναρ, 'the sole of the foot.' Winslow called grand parathénar, parathenar major, a portion of the abductor of the little toe, musculus scandula'rius; and petit parathénar, parathenar minor, the short flexor of that toe.

PARATHENAR MAJOR, Abductor minimi digiti pedis—p. Minor, Flexor brevis minimi digiti pedis.

PARATHROMA, Elongatio.

PARATONIA, see Spasm.

PARATOPIA, Luxation.

PARATOP'IÆ; from παρα, in the sense of change, and τοπος, 'place.' Diseases in which organs are removed from their proper position. See Ectopia.

PARATRIMMA, Chafing.

PARATROPE, Apotrope.

PARAT'ROPHY, Parat'rophē, Paratroph'ia, from παρα, 'dim,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Misnutrition.

PARDALIANCHES, Aconitum.

PARDALIANCHUM, Aconitum.

PAREC'TAMA, Paree'tasis, from παρα, 'beyond,' εκ, 'out of,' and τεινω, 'I stretch.' Immoderate extension or dilatation of a part—as of the heart.

PARECTASIS, Pararthrema, Parectama.

PAREGOR'IC, Paregor'icus, So'piens, from παρηγορεω (παρα, and αγορευω), 'I soothe, I calm.' That which soothes or assuages—as paregoric elixir. An anodyne.

PAREIA, Gena.

PAREIRA, see P. brava.

PAREI'RA BRAVA, Cissam'pelos Pareira, Pareyra, Butua, Pariera brava, Abu'ta, Albu'tua, Botou, Caa-peba, Overo butua, Wild vine, Velvet leaf. Family, Menispermeæ. Sex. Syst. Dicœcia Monadelphia. The root of this plant—Pareira (Ph. U. S.)—a native of South America and the West Indies, has a sweet taste with considerable bitterness and slight roughness. It has been recommended in nephritic and calculous affections; but it is not much used.

PARELLE, Rumex hydrolapathum.

PARENCEPHALIS, Cerebellum.

PARENCEPHALITIS, Cerebellitis.

PARENCEPHALOCE'LE, from παρεγκεφαλις, (παρα, and εγκεφαλος, 'the brain,') 'the cerebellum,' and κηλη, 'a rupture.' Hernia of the cerebel'lum; a very rare disease. It occurs under the form of a soft, indolent, or slightly painful tumour, without change in the colour of the skin, and is situate in the occipital region. It is constituted of the cerebellum, which escapes through an aperture in the occipital bone. Great attention must be paid not to mistake it for an ordinary tumour, as its extirpation would be attended with fatal consequences.

PARENCEPHALUS, Cerebellum.

PAREN'CHYMA, Caro parenchymat'ica seu vis'cerum seu viscera'lis seu viscero'sa, Substan'tia parenchymato'sa, Procheu'ma. The texture of glandular and other organs, composed of agglomerated globules united by areolar tissue, and tearing with more or less facility. Such is the texture of the liver, kidneys, &c. Παρεγχυμα signifies in Greek, effusion, (παρα, εν, and χυω, 'I pour,') and it was believed, that this tissue consisted of effused blood or other fluid.

PARENCHYMA TESTIS, Pulpa testis.

PAREN'CHYMAL, Parenchym'atous, Paren'chymous, Parenchyma'lis, Parenchymat'icus; same etymon. Belonging or relating to the parenchyma of an organ.

PARENCHYMATI'TIS; from παρεγχυμα, 'parenchyma,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflamma'tio parenchymat'ica. Inflammation of the substance of an organ.

PARENCHYMATOUS, Parenchymal.

PAR'ESIS, from παριημι, 'I relax.' Paralysis. According to some, a slight, incomplete paralysis, affecting motion, not sensation.

PARESTHE'SIS, Paræsthe'sis, or Paresthe'sia, Sensus imperfec'tus, from παρα, 'defective,' and αισθησις, 'sensation.' Congenital misconstruction of the external organs of sense. A genns in the nosology of Good. Also, perversion of sensibility.

PARET'ICA EXARTHRO'SIS. Luxation from relaxation of the ligaments of a joint.

PARETICUS, Relaxant.

PARFUM, Suffimentum.

PARIERA BRAVA, Pareira brava.

PARIES, Table.

PARI'ETAL, Parieta'lis, from paries, parietis, 'a wall.'

Parietal Artery, see P. Bones.

Parietal Bones, Ossa parieta'lia, Ossa vertica'lia, Ossa ver'ticis, Ossa sincip'itis, Ossa breg'matis, Ossa nerva'lia, Ossa tetrag'ona, are two fellow-bones, occupying the lateral and upper parts of the cranium, in the formation of which they assist. They have a quadrilateral shape: their external surface is convex, and presents, at its middle part, an eminence called the Parietal protuberance, (F.) Bosse pariétale. Their inner or cerebral surface, which is concave, has a depression that corresponds with the preceding eminence, and which is called the Parietal fossa, Fossa parieta'lis. Above and behind, near the superior edge of these bones, is a foramen, which does not always exist, called the Parietal foramen, Fora'men parieta'lē, through which passes a vein—parietal vein—that opens into the superior longitudinal sinus of the dura mater, and an artery—parietal artery—a branch of the occipital, which ramifies on the same sinus. Each parietal bone is articulated above, with its fellow; below, with the temporal bone; before, with the frontal; behind, with the occipital, and by the anterior and inferior angle with the great ala of the sphenoid. Each parietal bone is developed from a single point of ossification.

Parietal Foramen, see P. Bones—p. Fossa, see P. Bones—p. Protuberance, see P. Bones—p. Veins, see P. Bones.

PARIETA'RIA, P. officina'lis, Helx'inē, Vitra'ria, Wall pel'litory, (F.) Pariétaire commune. Family Urticeæ. Sex. Syst. Polygamia Monœcia. This plant grows on old walls, and contains much nitrate of potassa. It is diuretic, but is not much used.

Parieta'ria Pennsylvan'ica, Amer'ican Pel'litory, a small weed, flowering from June to August, has been used in juice or decoction as a diuretic, deobstruent (?) and emmenagogue.

PARI'ETES, Plural of Paries, 'a wall,' (F.) Parois. A name given to parts which form the enclosures—the limits of different cavities of the body, as the Parietes of the cranium, chest, &c.

PARIS, P. quadrifo'lia, Sola'num quadrifo'lium, Uva inver'sa seu lupi'na seu vulpi'na, Oneberry, Truelove, (F.) Parisette, Raisin de Renard. It possesses narcotic properties, and was formerly considered a powerful love philter. It is emetic, and is sometimes used externally as a resolvent and anodyne.

PARISAGOGE INTESTINORUM, Intussusceptio.

PARISETTE, Paris.

PARISTH'MIA, παρα, and ισθμος, 'the throat.' A word employed to designate the tonsils, and, likewise, inflammation of the tonsils. Cynanche tonsillaris. and Cynanche in general.

PARISTHMIOT'OMUS, from παριαθμια, 'the tonsils,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' An instrument with which the tonsils were formerly scarified.

PARISTHMITIS. Cynanche, C. tonsillaris.

PARISTHMIUM, Tonsil.

PARISWORT, Trillium latifolium.

PARMACITY, Cetaceum.

PARMELIA ISLANDICA, Lichen Islandicus · p. Plicata, Lichen plicatus—p. Pulmonacea, Lichen pulmonarius—p. Roccella, Lichen roccella—p. Saxatilis, Lichen saxatilis.

PAROCHETEUSIS, Derivation.

PARODON'TIDES, from παρα, 'near,' and οδους, 'a tooth.' Tumours on the gums; parulis. &c.

PARODYNIA, Dystocia—p. Perversa, Presentation, preternatural.

PAROIS, Parietes.

PAROLE, Voice, articulated.

PAROMPHALOCE'LĒ, from παρα, 'near, ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Hernia near the navel.

PARONIR'IA, from παρα, and ονειρον, 'a dream.' Depraved, disturbed, or morbid dreaming; Oneirodyn'ia acti'va, Erethis'mus oneirodyn'ia. The voluntary organs connected with the passing train of ideas, overpowered by the force of the imagination during dreaming, and involuntarily excited to their natural or accustomed actions, while the other organs remain asleep.—Good.

Paroniria Ambulans, Somnambulism—p. Salax, Pollution.

PARONY'CHIA, Paron'ychis, Paronychi'tis, Pan'aris, Redu'via, Redi'via, Relu'via, Vermis dig''iti, Panarit''ium, Pterygʹium dig''iti, Digitium, Pandalit''ium, Passa, Dactyli'tis, Pana'rium, Onych'ia, (F.) Onglade, from παρα, 'near,' and ονυξ, 'the nail.' The ancients gave this name to an inflammatory tumour,—Onyxi'tis (Gross),—seated near the nail, and involving the pulp or matrix. Some of the moderns have extended it to inflammation of the hand, and even of the forearm. It usually means every phlegmonous tumour of the fingers or toes, and especially of the first phalanx. Four kinds of paronychia are commonly pointed out: 1. That seated between the epidermis and skin, called in France Tourniole. 2. That seated in the subcutaneous areolar tissue. 3. That occupying the sheath of a tendon; and 4. That considered to be seated between the periosteum and bone. The last three are only different degrees of the same disease, constituting Whitlow, (F.) Mal d'aventure:—the worst kinds, in English, are called Felon. The inflammation generally commences in the subcutaneous areolar tissue, and spreads to other parts, occasioning excessive, lancinating pain, owing to the parts being put upon the stretch; hence, the necessity of dividing them freely,—even down to the bone, when there is reason to believe that the affection belongs to the fourth division,—making use of emollient applications, the antiphlogistic treatment, and opiates to relieve pain.

Paronychia, Asplenium ruta muraria—p. Digitium, Digitium.

PARONYCHIS, Paronychia.

PARONYCHITIS, Paronychia.

PAROPTE'SIS, from παρα, dim., and οπταω, 'I roast.' Forcing a sweat by placing a patient before the fire or putting him in a dry bath.

PARORA'SIS, from παρα, dim., and οραω, 'I see.' Perversion of sight, which prevents the person from judging accurately of the colour of objects. Achromatop'sia. Hallucination.—Galen.

PARORCHID'IUM, from παρα, dim., 'something wrong,' and ορχις, 'testicle.' Any position of one or both testicles, different from that which they ought to occupy in the scrotum; — whether they may not have descended through the abdominal ring, or are drawn up to the groins by the cremaster muscle.

PARAR'CHIDO-ENTEROCE'LĒ, Hernia paror'chido-enter'ica. Intestinal hernia complicated with displacement of the testicle. — Sauvages.

PAROSMIA, Anosmia. Also, perversion of smell; Parœsthe'sia olfacto'ria, Olfac'tus deprava'tus, Idiosyncra'sia olfacto'ria.

PAROS'TIA, from παρα, 'defectively,' and οστεον, 'a bone.' Bones untempered in their substance, and incapable of affording proper support. — Good.

Parostia Flexilis, Mollities ossium—p. Fragilis, Fragilitas ossium.

PAROTIA, Cynanche parotidæa.

PAROT'ID, Gland'ula parotidea, G. ad Aures, Paro'tis, Animel'læ, Alimel'læ, Lacticin'ia; from παρα, 'about,' and ους, 'the ear.' The largest of the salivary glands, seated under the ear, and near the angle of the lower jaw. It is composed of many separate lobes, giving rise to excretory ducts, which unite to form one canal, called the Parotid duct, Steno's canal—the Ductus superior or Superior salivary canal of some. This duct, after having advanced horizontally into the substance of the cheek, proceeds through an opening in the buccinator muscle, and terminates in the mouth opposite the second upper molaris. About the middle of its course, it sometimes receives the excretory duct of a glandular body, situate in its vicinity, and called the Ac'cessory Gland of the Parotid, So'cia Paroti'dis, Gland'ula so'cia paroti'dis. In the substance of the parotid are found—a number of branches of the facial nerve, of the transverse arteries of the face, and the posterior auricular. It receives, also, some filaments from the inferior maxillary nerve, and from the ascending branches of the superficial cervical plexus. Its lymphatic vessels are somewhat numerous, and pass into ganglions situate at its surface or behind the angle of the jaw. The parotid secretes saliva, and pours it copiously into the mouth.

Parotid, Accessory Gland of the, see Parotid.

Parotid Aponeuro'sis. A sheath of great thickness, continuous, below, with the cervical fascia. It forms a frame-work to the parotid by means of fibrous prolongations from its deep surface. Its density accounts for the pain of parotitis, and for the difficulty with which pus makes its way to the surface.

Parotid Arteries, see Parotid — p. Duct, see Parotid — p. Veins, see Parotid.

PAROTIDE, Parotis.

PAROTIDON'CUS, Tumor paro'tidis, T. glan'dulæ parotideæ, from παρωτις, 'the parotid,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Swelling of the parotid.

PARO'TIS, Phleg'monē parotidea, Inflamma'tio paro'tidum, Cynan'chē parotidæ'a, Paroti'tis, Dioscu'ri, (F.) Parotide, is the name of a tumour seated under the ear; which is reddish, hard, and attended with obtuse pain; the progress to suppuration being slow and difficult. Sometimes it is of a malignant character, sloughing, and long protracted. Some French pathologists restrict the term parotide to symptomatic parotitis — as to that which occurs in plague; whilst they apply the terms Oreillons or Ourles to Cynanche parotidæa or Mumps.

PAROVA'RIUM: from παρα, 'near;' and ωαριον, 'the ovary.' A body closely analogous in structure to the epididymis, which is seated between the Fallopian tube and the ovary in the broad ligament. The Corpus Wolffianum concurs in its formation. — Kobelt.

PAR'OXYSM, Paroxys'mus, from παροξυνω, (παρα, and οξυνειν, 'to render sharp.') 'I irritate;' Im'petus, Insul'tus, Inva'sio, Exacerba'tio, Acces'sio, Acces'sus, (F.) Exacerbation, Redoublement, Accès. The augmentation which supervenes at equal or unequal intervals in the symptoms of acute diseases. Also, a periodical exacerbation or fit of a disease.

PAROXYS'MAL, Paroxysma'lis; same etymon. (F.) Paroxystique. Of or belonging to a paroxysm; — as a paroxysmal day, (F.) Jour paroxystique; a day on which a paroxysm of disease occurs.

PAROXYSMUS FEBRILIS, Pyrexia.

PAROXYSTIQUE, Paroxysmal.

PARTU'RIENT, Partu'riens, from parturire, itself from parere, 'to bring forth.' Bringing forth, or about to bring forth, or having recently brought forth. — Young.

The Parturient, Puer'perous, Childbed, or Lying-in-state, Puerpe'rium, requires careful management, and is subject to various diseases.

A Partu'rient or Parturifa'cient is a medicine which induces or promotes labour; as ergot, and, perhaps, borate of soda, see Abortive.

PARTURIFACIENT, Parturient.

PARTURIGO, Parturition.

PARTURIT''ION, Puerpe'rium, Partus, Partio, Parturit''io, Parturi'go, Partu'ra, Tocos, To'cetos, Texis, Lochi'a, Apocye'sis, Maceu'sis, Maieu'sis, Nego'tium seu Actus parturitio'nis, Enix'us seu Enix'io fœtûs, Expul'sio fœtûs, Apol''ysis, Labour, Child-bearing, Child-birth, Trav'ail, (F.) Accouchement, Couche, Travail d'Enfant. The delivery of the fœtus and its appendages. Labour is the necessary consequence of conception, pregnancy, and the completion of gestation. It does not take place, at the full time, until after nine months of utero-gestation,—the causes producing it being the contraction of the uterus and abdominal muscles. By different authors, the stages of labour have been variously divided. We may, perhaps, admit of four. The first stage comprises the precursory signs. One, two, or three days before labour, a mucous discharge, streaked with blood, takes place from the vagina, which is called the Signum, Leucorrhœ'a Nabo'thi, Hæmorrhag''ia Nabothi, Labour-show, or Show; and, along with this, trifling grinding pains, called by the French Mouches, are felt in the loins and abdomen. Second stage:—Peculiar pains, which extend from the lumbar region towards the uterus; tension and dilatation of the neck and orifice of that organ; protrusion into the vagina of the envelopes of the fœtus, forming the bag of waters, (F.) Poche des eaux; and rupture or breaking of the waters. Third stage: — Contractions of the uterus and abdominal muscles; forcing pains; the head of the fœtus becomes engaged in the pelvis; the occiput being commonly situate above the left acetabulum, passes beneath the arch of the pubis. Fourth stage: —the head now presents at the vulva, the perineum being considerably distended; at length it clears the external parts, and the rest of the body is easily disengaged. The child still continues attached to the mother by the umbilical cord, which has to be divided. In the course of fifteen or twenty minutes, trifling pains occur, and the secundines are expelled. This completes delivery. In by far the majority of cases, the head is the presenting part, the occiput directed anteriorly, and the face posteriorly. Of 12,633 children, born at the Hospital La Maternité, in Paris, from the 10th of December, 1797, to the 31st of July, 1806, the following were the presentations:

Labour has received different names, according to the period of pregnancy at which it occurs, and the mode in which it takes place. It is called miscarriage or abortion, prior to the seventh month; premature labour, Omotoc'ia, Partus præcox seu præmatu'rus, between this and eight months and a half; and labour at the full period, (F.) Accouchement à terme, when it happens at the end of nine months. Labours have likewise been variously divided by different authors. Perhaps the one into Natural, Preternatural, and Laborious, is as common as any; — natural Labour meaning that which would occur without manual assistance; preternatural, requiring the assistance of art, but by the hand solely: and laborious, requiring instrumental assistance; which M. Capuron calls Accouchement Méchanique, Powerless labour, the Inertia par épuisement of Madame La Chapelle, is that in which the muscular powers from exhaustion are unable to accomplish delivery.

The French use the term Part, Partus, at times, synonymously with delivery; at others, with fœtus, Maieu'ma, Maeeu'ma. Suppression de part means concealment of delivery; Part légitime, a fœtus which comes into the world with the condition necessary for its enjoying advantages granted by law; and Part illégitime, one that does not fall under those conditions.

TABLE OF THE COURSE AND MANAGEMENT OF DIFFERENT KINDS OF LABOURS.

Natural Labours,

Or those in which Delivery can be effected without Assistance.

Head Presenting. (Four Positions.)

1. Occiput towards the Left Acetabulum. — The head with the chin bent upon the breast clears the brim of the pelvis. Motion of rotation produced by the inclined planes of the pelvis; the occipital protuberance is carried behind the symphysis pubis, and the face towards the hollow of the sacrum.
2. Occiput towards the Right Acetabulum. — The head attains the outlet: clears it; the occiput being first disengaged, and the face afterwards, which passes successively along the whole of the hollow of the sacrum. The shoulders enter the brim diagonally; and execute the movement of rotation. The one behind first clears the outlet. The same thing occurs with the nates.
3. Occiput towards the Right Sacro-iliac Symphysis. — The same course is here followed: except that after the rotary movement, the face passes behind the symphysis pubis, and the occiput into the hollow of the sacrum. The occiput is first extruded;—the face next.
4. Occiput towards the Left Sacro-iliac Symphysis. — When the chin presents and is turned forwards, the face is first expelled; the head is thrown backwards. This presentation is uncommon. If the chin present and be thrown backwards, natural delivery cannot be effected.

Lower Extremity Presenting. (Four Positions of the Feet, Knees, and Breech)

1. Heel, Tibia, or Sacrum towards the Left Acetabulum. — The nates enter the brim diagonally; movement of rotation: the one passes behind the symphysis pubis; the other towards the hollow of the sacrum. The one behind is first extruded.
2. Heel, Tibia, or Sacrum towards the Right Acetabulum. — The same thing happens to the shoulders. The chin is bent upon the chest to clear the brim: movement of rotation: the occiput passes behind the symphysis pubis, and the face towards the hollow of the sacrum. The face clears the outlet first; the occiput last.
3. Heel, Tibia, or Sacrum towards the Right Sacro-iliac Symphysis.
4. Heel, Tibia, or Sacrum towards the Left Sacro-iliac Symphysis. — The same progress, except that after the movement of rotation, the face is towards the pubis, and the occiput towards the sacrum. The face is here again delivered first.

II. Preternatural Labours,

Or those which require Manual Assistance only.

I. Presentation of the Head, Upper Extremities, Back, Abdomen, &c.

1. When the labour is without any serious complication, and the head is not in a good position at the brim of the pelvis, endeavours are to be made to place it in its natural position: the hand to be introduced with the fingers united, and the long diameter of the head to be placed diagonally in the brim, if possible. Or the lever may be fixed over the occiput, and, by drawing it down, a closer approximation of the chin and chest may be effected; the position of the head to the pelvis being at the same time attended to.
2. If complicated with syncope, convulsions, hemorrhage, want of uterine action, &c., the feet must be laid hold of, and the child turned. For this purpose, empty the rectum and bladder; and turn, if possible, prior to the escape of the liquor amnii. The female may be placed on her back or left side, with the breech over the edge of the bed. Use the right or left hand, according as the feet of the child are to the right or left side of the pelvis; always so introducing the hand, that the child shall be in its palm, and the back of the hand opposed to the inner surface of the uterus. The hand and arm to be introduced during an interval of pain; and they must be flattened and tranquil whilst the uterus is contracting forcibly. If both feet cannot be readily brought down, seize one, and tie a fillet around it.
3. If the toes point to the vertebral column, or to the abdomen of the mother, the head, in its descent, will not enter the pelvis: the chin and occiput will be hitched on the pubis and promontory of the sacrum. In such case, grasp the nates as soon as they have passed the os externum; and, during a pain, endeavour to direct the toes towards either sacro-iliac synchondrosis. When the fingers can be passed along the body of the child, and over the shoulders to the bend of the elbows, draw down the arms successively. When the body is expelled, and the head filling up the brim, the termination of labour must be accelerated by passing two fingers over the shoulder of the child; using moderate and steady extracting power, whilst one finger of the other hand, passed into the mouth, depresses the chin on the sternum. In this way, the head may be extracted.

III. Instrumental Labours,

Or those requiring the Assistance of appropriate Instruments.

General Observations.

If the pains become feeble, or inadequate from any cause;—or if the presenting part be firmly wedged in the pelvis; or the woman be becoming exhausted, instrumental assistance may be required. In all such cases, place the female on the back or left side, empty the bladder and rectum; wait till the os uteri is in a fit state; afford assistance during the pains; introduce the instrument during the intervals between the pains; have the patient on her left side (generally); and extract according to the axes of brim and outlet, as the case may be.

|---|---|
| 1. Short Forceps. | Apply these to the sides of the head of the child, so that the ears and parietal protuberances may be within the fenestræ. Introduce the left-hand blade first; the index and middle fingers of the right hand guiding it to the ear. With the right hand pass the other in an opposite line, corresponding with the course of the first blade, guided by the fore and middle fingers of the left hand; the third and little fingers being employed to retain the left-hand blade in place; humour the instrument so as to allow the blades to lock. The handles may now be tied gently together. The force used must be from blade to blade, with a gentle, tractile effort. |
| 2. Long Forceps. | Applicable where the head does not enter the brim. The long forceps must be applied, in most cases, over the occiput and face of the child, so that the convex edges of the blades may be towards the hollow of the sacrum. When used, the power may be exerted from side to side, with moderate traction. |
| 3. Lever or Vectis. | The lever is applicable to the same cases as the forceps. It must not be used strictly as a lever, but as a hook with which to draw downwards. It may be applied to any part of the head, but is generally hitched on the occiput. |
| 4. Fillet and Blunt Hook. | In certain cases of breech and knee presentation, where the hand is insufficient, it may be necessary to pass over the joint a fillet, or the blunt hook, with which to exert some force of traction. The operation is very simple. |
| Embryulcia. | Disproportionate size of head, or distorted or deformed pelvis, may require the child to be destroyed, and its bulk lessened; or the Cæsarean section or symphysotomy, or the induction of premature labour may be called for.The instruments required here, are the Perforator, Crotchet, and Craniotomy Forceps. Make a steady pressure on the abdomen; pass two fingers of the left hand up to the head: feel for a suture or fontanelle; introduce the perforator and bore through, until the progress of the instrument is arrested by its shoulders. Open the handles, and turn the instrument in different directions, so that the opening may be large enough to admit the perforator, with which the brain must be broken down.If, after this, delivery cannot be accomplished without further aid, pass up the craniotomy forceps; open the handles slightly, and introduce the blade without teeth within the cranium. On closing the forceps, a hold is obtained; and a tractile force can now be exerted during the pains, and the extrusion of the child be effected.Should great difficulty exist at the brim, the bones at the top of the head may have to be removed, until the base alone remains. The chin must then be brought through first.The crotchet is often used instead of the craniotomy forceps, being passed into the opening made by the perforator, and hooked upon some bony projection in the interior of the skull; but it is not a good instrument. In presentations of the face demanding perforation of the cranium, the perforator should be introduced just above the nose, in the sagittal suture.When it is necessary to open the head after the lower extremities have been expelled, the perforation must be made behind the ear. |
| Symphysotomy and Cæsarean Section. | In cases of great narrowness of the pelvis, the operation of Symphysotomy has been adopted by French practitioners.—rarely by British or American; and, in extreme cases, recourse has been had to the Cæsarean Section. |
| Separation of the Head of the Fœtus from the Body. | If the body of the fœtus has been forcibly separated, and the head left in the uterus, it must be laid hold of with one hand, and the forceps be applied; or the head be opened and delivered, as under embryulcia. Should the head have been brought away, and the body left behind, the feet must be brought down. |
| Induction of Premature Labour. | In cases of narrowness of the pelvis, where the fœtus, at the full term, cannot be born alive, delivery may be brought about at an earlier period, or as soon as the child is capable of carrying on its functions independently of the mother.The most advisable plan for accomplishing this object is merely to pass the finger round and round within the os and cervix uteri, so as to detach the decidua;—the membranes being thus left entire, and the life of the child not so much endangered, as where the membranes are punctured, and the waters evacuated. Parturition usually follows within forty-eight hours. |

The laying of eggs by animals is termed in French ponte. The term has been applied to the periodical discharge—ponte périodique—of ova, (F.) Chute des Œufs, which is supposed to take place from the ovaries at each menstrual period.

PARTURITION, DRY, Partus Siccus.

PASSION, Pas'sio, An'imi Pathe'ma, Affec'tus, Emo'tio, from patior, passus, 'to suffer.' An active affection or emotion of the mind; as rage, terror, love, hatred, &c.

Passion Flower, Bay-leaved, Passiflora laurifolia—p. Hystérique, Hysteria—p. Iliac, Ileus.

PASSIONES ANIMI, Affections of the mind.

PASSIVE, Passi'vus. Same etymon as Passion. An epithet for diseases which seem owing to a greater or less diminution of the strength, or which are without apparent reaction. Thus, passive hemorrhages are such as supervene in debilitated individuals, or under conditions in which increased action of the arteries can scarcely be presumed. The term passive has, also, been given to aneurisms of the heart with extenuation of the parietes; in opposition to active aneurisms, with thickness of the parietes — hypertrophy.

PASSULÆ MAJORES, see Vitis vinifera — p. Minores, see Vitis Corinthiaca.

PASSULA'TUM, Uvæ passæ, 'raisins, dried grapes.' A medicine in which the pulp of raisins is a chief ingredient.

PASSY, MINERAL WATERS OF. This village is in the vicinity of Paris. There are several springs, containing sulphates of lime, iron, and magnesia, alum, common salt, carbonate of iron, carbonic acid, &c. They are employed as a tonic and astringent.

PASTA DE ALTHÆÂ, Paste, marshmallow — p. Amygdalina, Confection (almond) — p. de Dactylis, Paste, date — p. Emulsiva, Confection (almond) — p. de Jujubis, Paste of jujubes — p. Regia, Confection (almond).

Pasta Glycyrrhi'zæ Gumma'ta et Anisa'ta seu Massa de extracto glycyrrhi'zæ. A compound of extract of liquorice, gum Senegal, sugar, Florence orris-root, and volatile oil of aniseed. Demulcent.

PASTE, Pasta, (F.) Pâte. A compound medicine, like the pastil, but less consistent, flexible, less saccharine, and more mucilaginous.

Paste, Date, Massa seu Pasta de dac'tylis. Composed of dates, sugar, gum Arabic, water, and orange-flower water. — Ph. P. Demulcent.

Paste of Ju'jubes, Pasta de ju'jubis, Massa de zizypho'rum fructû. Composed of jujubes, gum Senegal, sugar, water, and tincture of lemon-peel. Demulcent.

Paste, Marshmal'low, Massa de gummi Arab'ico, Pasta de althæ'â. A compound of gum Arabic, sugar, white of egg, and orange-flower water. — Ph. P. It is demulcent.

Paste, Tooth, Dentifricium — p. Vienna, see Powder, Vienna — p. Ward's, Confectio piperis nigri.

PASTEL, Pastil'lus, Diocres, Avic'ula Cip'ria, Cande'la fuma'lis, Phthois, Phthois'cus. A compound of aromatic substances in various shapes; used as a fumigating material when set fire to. See Fumigation.

The French use the term Pastille, (L.) Pastillus, for a solid, dry, round, oblong, square, or triangular compound, whose base is essential oil, and sugar the excipient. These pastilles are in fact small lozenges, and only differ from the tablette in their smaller size.

Pastel, Isatis tinctoria.

PASTÈQUE, Cucurbita citrullus.

PASTILLE, see Pastel.

PASTILLES DIGESTIVES D'HAUTERIVE-VICHY, see Trochisci Sodæ bicarbonatis — p. Fumigating, see Fumigation — p. de Vichy, see Trochisci Sodæ bicarbonatis.

PASTILLI DIGESTIVI DARCETII, see Trochisci Sodæ bicarbonatis — p. Emetinæ Pectorales, Trochisci emetinæ pectorales.

Pastil'li de Menthâ Piperi'tâ, Peppermint drops. (Sacch. alb., aquæ menthæ pip., aq. destillat. āā ℥ij. Boil to the consistence of an electuary. Take of fine white sugar in powder, ℥iv; volatile oil of peppermint, ℥ss. Mix, and add the electuary whilst warm. Drop it then on marble, and dry the drops. — Ph. P.)

PASTILLUS, Pastel.

PASTINACA ALTISSIMA, P. opoponax—p. Anethum, Anethum graveolens — p. Graveolens, Anethum graveolens—p. Opaca, P. sativa.

Pastina'ca Opop'anax. The name of the plant which furnishes the Opopanax. The plant, whence the gum resin is obtained, has, also, been called Fer'ula opop'onax, Pastina'ca altiss'ima, Laserpit'ium chiro'nium, Seli'num opop'onax, Opopana'cum, Panax heracle'um, Panax costi'num, Pastina'cea, Kyna, Hercules-all-heal, Opop'anaxwort.

Opopanax, Opopana'cis gummi-resi'na, Gezir, Pop'anax, Gummi Pana'cis, exudes from the roots when wounded. Its odour is strong and peculiar; taste, bitter and acrid. It is met with in the shops, in lumps of a reddish-yellow colour, without; white within. It has been recommended as an antispasmodic and emmenagogue; but is seldom used. Dose, gr. x. to ℈j in powder.

Pastinaca Pratensis, P. sativa.

Pastina'ca Sati'va, Elaphobos'cum, Pastinaca sylves'tris seu opa'ca seu praten'sis, Ane'thum pastina'ca, Seli'num pastina'ca, Ban'ica, Garden parsnep. The root is sweet and nutritious, and is in esteem as an article of food. It has been used as a diuretic and demulcent in calculous affections, &c.

Pastinaca Sylvestris, P. sativa—p. Sylvestris tenuifolia officinarum, Daucus carota.

PÂTE, Paste—p. Arsénicale, Arsenical paste.

PATELLA, Rot'ula, R. genu, Epigon'atis, Epigon'tis, Acromy'lē, Epigou'nis seu Epigu'nis seu Epig'onis, Mola seu Concha seu Oc'ulus seu Orbis seu Scutum genu, Os scutifor'mē seu disciformē seu thyreoï'des, Supergenua'lis, Cancaloï'des, My'lacris, Mylē, Gamba, Olec'ranon mob'ilē, (F.) Rotule. Diminutive of patina, 'a dish,' so called from its shape. A sort of sesamoid, flat, short, thick, rounded bone, situate in front of the knee, and enveloped in the substance of the tendon common to the extensor muscles of the leg. The posterior surface of the patella is divided into two facettes, united angularly, which are encrusted with cartilage, and each of which is articulated with one of the condyles of the femur. The pa-tella is developed by a single point of ossification. When the patella is fractured, it is difficult to produce bony union. This can only be accomplished by keeping the fractured extremities closely in apposition.

PATELLA, Cup—p. Fixa, Olecranon.

PATENT MED'ICINE, Médecine brevetée ou patentée, Remède breveté ou patenté. A medicinal compound, for the sale of which the proposer obtains from government an exclusive privilege. A specification of his invention must be registered in the Patent Office, and, hence, it differs from a secret medicine.

PATER OMNIUM VIVENTIUM, Penis.

PATERA DIOGENIS, Palm.

PATHEMA, Affection, Disease.

PATHEMATOLOGY, Pathology.

PATHET'IC, Pathet'icus, from παθειν, 'to feel.' That which moves the passions. A name given to the superior oblique muscle of the eye, and, also, to a nerve.

PATHETIC MUSCLE, Oblique superior of the eye.

PATHETIC NERVE, Nervus Pathet'icus, N. trochlea'ris seu trochleato'rius seu trochlea'tor, the 4th pair of nerves, (F.) Oculo-musculaire interne (Ch.,) Nerf pathétique, is the smallest encephalic nerve. It arises behind the inferior part of the tubercula quadrigemina (testes) at the lateral parts of the valvula Vieussenii. Its roots unite into one thin round cord, which makes a turn upon the peduncles of the brain, and passes into a canal of the dura mater near the posterior clinoid process. It enters the orbit by the broadest part of the sphenoidal fissure, and terminates in the superior oblique muscle of the eye, by dividing into several filaments.

PATHETISM, Magnetism, animal.

PATHIC, Morbid.

PATHICAL, Morbid.

PATHICUS, Morbid.

PATHNE, Alveolus.

PATHOGENET'IC, Pathogenet'icus, Pathogen'icus. Same etymon as the next. Relating to pathogeny.

PATHOGENETIC PHYSIOLOGY, Physiolog''ia pathogenet'ica. That part of physiology which relates to the origin of disease.

PATHOGENICUS, Pathogenetic.

PATHOG''ENY, Pathogen'ia, Nosogen'esis, Nosogen'ia, from παθος, 'a disease,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' The branch of pathology which relates to the generation, production and development of disease.

PATHOGNOMON'IC, Pathognomon'icus, Signum conjunc'tum seu characteris'ticum seu morbi essentia'lē; from παθος, 'an affection,' and γινωσκω, 'I know.' A characteristic symptom of a disease.

PATHOG'RAPHY, Pathograph'ia, from παθος, 'disease,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' A description of disease.

PATHOLOGIA, Pathology — p. Humoralis, Humorism—p. Solidaris, Solidism.

PATHOLOG''ICAL, Patholog''icus, Pathol'ogus; same etymon as pathology. Relating to pathology. Often used in the sense of pathical.

PATHOLOGICAL ANATOMY, see Anatomy.

PATHOL'OGIST, Pathol'ogus. Same etymon. One versed in pathology.

PATHOL'OGY, Pathematol'ogy, Pathology''ia, Pathematolog''ia, Pathology''icē, from παθος, 'a disease,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The branch of medicine whose object is the knowledge of disease. It has been defined diseased physiology, and physiology of disease. It is divided into general and special. The first considers diseases in common; — the second, the particular history of each. It is subdivided into internal and external, or medical and surgical.

PATHOLOGY, HUMORAL, Humorism.

PATHOMA'NIA, Parapathi'a, Moral Insanity, from παθος, 'a disease,' and mania. Ma'nia sine Delir'io. A morbid perversion of the natural feelings, affections, inclinations, temper, habits, moral disposition, and natural impulses, without any remarkable disorder or defect of the intellect or knowing and reasoning faculties, and particularly without any insanity or hallucination.

PATHOMYOTOM'IA; from παθος, 'affection,' μυς or μυων, 'muscle,' and τομη, 'incision.' The title of a work by Dr. John Bulwer (1649), being "a dissection of the significative muscles of the affections of the mind,"

PATHOPATRIDALGIA, Nostalgia.

PATHOS, Affection, Disease.

PATIENCE, Rumex patientia — p. d'Eau, Rumex hydrolopathum—p. Garden, Rumex patientia—p. Rouge, Rumex sanguineus — p. Sauvage, Rumex acutus.

PATIENT, see Sick.

PATIENTIA, Rumex patientia.

PATIENTIÆ MUSCULUS, Levator scapulæ.

PATNE, Alveolus.

PATOPATRIDALGIA, Nostalgia.

PATOR NA'RIUM. The cavity or the opening of the nostrils.

PATRATIO, Ejaculation, (of sperm.)

PATTE D'OIE (F.), 'Goose's foot.' An aponeurotic expansion, which covers the internal surface of the tibia at its upper part, and consists of the expansion formed by the tendons of the sartorius, gracilis, and semi-tendinosus muscles.

PATURSA, Syphilis.

PAU, (CLIMATE OF.) Pau is the capital of the department of the Lower Pyrenees, and is about 150 miles from Bordeaux, and 50 from Bayonne. The climate corresponds with that of the south-west of France generally; its great quality is the comparative mildness of its spring, and exemption from cold winds. It is regarded as a favourable winter residence for invalids labouring under chronic affections of the mucous membranes. It is too changeable for the consumptive; and to be avoided by the rheumatic.

PAULLIN'IA. This is an extract from a plant of the same name in Brazil. It is prepared by the Indians, and appears to possess excitant powers. In Brazil, and the neighbouring countries, it is given in the form of tisane—the powder being mixed with cocoa — in diarrhœa and dysentery. It has been employed also as a tonic. An extract is prepared in Brazil from Paullinia sor'bilis, known there under the name of Guarana, which is administered in similar pathological cases.

PAUME DE LA MAIN, Palm.

PAUNCH, Ingluvies.

PAUONTA, Sedatives.

PAUPIÈRE. Palpebra.

PAUSIME'NIA, from παυσις, 'cessation,' and μηνες, 'menses.' Cessation of the menses.

PAVANA WOOD, Croton tiglium.

PAVIL'ION. The French give the name pavillon, to the expanded extremity of a canal or cavity,—for example, of a catheter, sound, &c.

PAVILION OF THE EAR, Auric'ula, Pinna, O'tium, Ala, (F.) Auricule ou Oricule, Pavillon de l'oreille, is seated behind the cheeks, beneath the temple, and anterior to the mastoid process. Its size varies in individuals. It is free above, behind, and below. Anteriorly and within, it is continuous with the neighbouring parts. Its outer surface has several prominences, the Helix,

Antheliæ, Tragus, Antitragus, and Lobe; and several cavities—the groove of the Helix, the fossa navicularis seu scaphoides, and the Concha. The skin which covers the pavilion is very fine, and studded with a number of sebaceous follicles. The auricle is fixed to the head by three fibro-areolar ligaments;—a superior, anterior, and posterior.

PAVILLON DE L'OREILLE, Pavilion of the ear—p. de la Trompe, see Tuba Fallopiana.

PAVIMENTUM CEREBRI, Base of the brain.

PAVINA, Æsculus hippocastanum.

PAVITA'TIO, Tremor; from pavor, 'dread.' Trembling for fright.

PAVOPHOBIA, Panophobia.

PAVOR, (L.), Dread. Great fright. Panophobia.

PAVO'RES NOCTUR'NI SEU DORMIEN'TIUM. Fear during sleep.

PAVOT, Papaver.

PAW, Manus.

PAXWAX, see Nucha.

PAXYWAXY, see Nucha.

PAZAHAR, Bezoar.

PEA, Pisum—p. Garden, Pisum—p. Ground Squirrel, Jeffersoniana Bartoni—p. Hoary, Galega Virginiana—p. Love, Abrus precatorius—p. Nut, Arachis hypogea—p. Partridge, Cassia chamæcrista—p. Pisum—p. Turkey, Galega Virginiana.

PEACH BRANDY, Amygdalus Persica—p. Tree, Amygdalus Persica—p. Wood, see Cæsalpinia.

PEAGLE, Primula veris.

PEAR, see Pyrus malus.

PEARL, Perla, Mar'garon, Margari'ta, Margel'lium, Marge'lis, U'nio, (F.) Perle. A roundish concretion of a silvery white colour, and brilliant polish, found in several shells, and especially in the Avic'ula margaritif'era, which has, hence, been called Mater perlarum, Margari'ta, and Mother of pearl, and is much used in the fabrication of handles for surgical instruments, &c. Pearls were formerly given in powder as astringents and antacids. They consist of lime and an animal matter.

PEARL ASH, Potash of commerce—p. Mother of, see Pearl—p. White, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

PEAU, Cutis.

PEAUCIER, Platysma myoides.

PECAN or PECCAN NUT, see Hickory.

PECCANT, Peccans, from peccare, 'to sin.' Morbid, not healthy. An epithet given by the humourists to the humours when erring in quality or quantity. See Materia Morbosa.

PECHEDEON, Perinæum.

PECHER, Amygdalus Persica.

PECHIAGRA, Pechyagra.

PECHU'RIM seu PICHU'RIM CORTEX. A highly aromatic bark, the produce of a species of laurus. It is extremely fragrant, like that of cinnamon, which it greatly resembles in its properties. In Portugal it is used in the cure of dysentery, &c. See Pichurim beans.

PECH'YAGRA, Pech'iagra, Ancon'agra, Pectihagra, from πηχυς, 'the elbow,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' Gout affecting the elbow.

PECHYS, Elbow.

PECHYTYRBE, Porphyra nautica.

PECTE, Cheese.

PECTEN, Pubes. Also, a comb.

PECTEN DENTIUM, Sepes dentium—p. Veneris, Scandix cerefolium.

PECTIHAGRA, Pechyagra.

PECTIN, from πεκτις, 'a coagulum.' A name given by Braconnot to a principle which forms the basis of vegetable jelly. It is extensively diffused in the juices of pulpy fruits and roots, especially when they are mature; and occasions these juices to coagulate when they are mixed with alcohol or boiled with sugar.

It is the basis of one of the classes of elementary principles of Dr. Pereira—the pectinaceous.

PECTINACEOUS, Pectinous.

PECTINA'LIS, from pecten, 'the pubes;' Pectinæ'us, Mus'culus liv'idus, Pectina'tus, (F.) Pubio-fémoral, Suspubio-fémoral (Ch.), Pectiné. This muscle is situate at the inner and upper part of the thigh. It is long, flat, and triangular; is attached, above, to the space which separates the ileo-pectineal eminence from the spine of the os pubis; and, below, by a flat tendon, to the oblique line which descends from the lesser trochanter to the linea aspera. The pectinalis bends the thigh on the pelvis, and carries it outwards in adduction and rotation. It may also bend the pelvis on the thigh.

PEC'TINATED, Pectina'tus, Pectin'iform, Pectinate, (F.) Pectiné, from pecten, 'a comb.' Having the shape of the teeth of a comb.

PECTINATED MUSCLES, Pectina'ti mus'culi. The fascicular texture observed in the right auricle of the heart:—Mus'culi Auric'ulæ Pectina'ti. Their main use probably is—to prevent the over dilatation of the auricles.

PECTINATUS, Pectinalis.

PECTINÉ, Pectinalis, Pectinated.

PECTINEUS, Pectinalis.

PECTINIFORM, Pectinated.

PEC'TINOUS, Pectina'ceus, Pectino'sus, Pectina'ceous, from pectin. Of or belonging to pectin or vegetable jelly,—as a pectinous or pectinaceous vegetable principle.

PEC'TORAL, from pectus, 'the breast.' Relating to the breast. See Pectorals.

PECTORAL; GRAND, Pectoralis major.

PECTORALE, Corset.

PECTORALIS INTERNUS, Triangularis sterni.

PECTORA'LIS MAJOR, from pectus, 'the breast.' Pectora'lis, Sterno-cleido-brachia'lis, (F.) Sterno-costo-clavio-huméral, Sterno-huméral (Ch.), Grand Pectoral. A large, flat, triangular muscle, situate at the anterior part of the chest, before the axilla. It is attached, on the one hand, by means of aponeurotic fibres, to the inner half of the anterior edge of the clavicle; to the anterior surface of the sternum, and to the cartilages of the first six true ribs;—on the other, by a strong tendon, which is inserted at the anterior edge of the bicipital groove of the humerus. The use of this muscle is, to move the arm in various directions. If it be hanging by the side of the body, it carries it inwards and a little forwards. When the arm is raised, it depresses it and carries it inwards. It can, also, move it in rotation inwards. If the humerus be raised and fixed, the pectoralis major draws the trunk towards the upper extremity.

PECTORA'LIS MINOR, Serra'tus anti'cus minor, (F.) Costo-coracoïdien (Ch.), Petit Pectoral, Petit dentélé antérieur. This muscle is situate beneath the preceding, at the anterior and upper part of the chest. It is flat and triangular; is attached by its base, which appears digitated, to the upper edge and outer surface of the 3d, 4th, and 5th true ribs, and is inserted at the anterior part of the coracoid process. The pectoralis minor draws the scapula forwards and downwards, and makes it execute a rotatory motion, by virtue of which its inferior angle is carried backwards, and the anterior depressed. When the shoulder is fixed, it elevates the ribs to which it is attached, and aids in the dilatation of the chest.

PEC'TORALS, Pectora'lia, Thorac''ica. Medicines considered proper for relieving or removing affections of the chest.

PECTORAL DROPS, BATEMAN'S, consist chiefly of tincture of castor, with some camphor and opium, flavoured by aniseed. Gray gives the following formula: Castor, ℥j; ol. anisi, ℥j; camph. ℥v; cocci, ʒiss; opii, ℥vj; proof spirit, a gallon. A form, advised by a committee of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, is the following:—Alcohol. dil. cong. iv; Santal. rubr. ras. ℥j; digere per horas xxiv; cola, et adde Pulv. opii, Pulv. catechu, Camphoræ, āā ℥ij; Ol. anisi, ʒiv. Digest for ten days.

PECTORILOQUE, from pectus, 'the chest,' and loqui, 'to speak.' Laënnec calls thus one who presents the phenomenon of Pectoriloquism. Also, a stethoscope.

PECTORILOQUIE, Pectoriloquy—p. Chévrotante, Egophony.

PEC'TORILOQUY, Pectoril'oquism, Cav'ernous voice, Pectorilo'quia, (F.) Pectoriloquie, Voix caverneuse, V. articulée. Same etymon. Speech or voice coming from the chest. Laënnec has designated, by this name, the phenomenon often presented by consumptive individuals, when their chests are examined with the stethoscope. The voice seems to issue directly from the chest, and to pass through the central canal of the cylinder, —a phenomenon owing to the voice resounding in the anfractuous cavities, produced in the lungs by the suppuration or breaking down of tubercles, which constitute abscesses or ulcers of the lungs.

PECTUS, Sternum, Thorax—p. Carinatum, see Carina.

PECULIUM, Penis.

PEDAGRA, Potassæ supertartras impurus.

PEDAL, Peda'lis, from pes, pedis, 'the foot.' Relating to the foot:—as PEDAL APONEURO'SIS, (F.) Aponévrose pédieuse. A thin, aponeurotic layer, which invests the extensor brevis digitorum pedis, and separates the tendons of the foot from each other.

PEDES, Genital Organs.

PEDESIS, Pulsation.

PEDETHMOS, Pulsation.

PEDIAL'GIA, Pedional'gia, Pedioneural'gia, from πεδιον, 'the sole of the foot,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the sole of the foot. Neuralgia of the foot in general.

PEDICLE, VITELLINE, see Vesicula umbilicalis.

PEDICULARIA, Delphinium staphisagria.

PEDICULATIO, Phtheiriasis.

PEDIC'ULUS, Phtheir, the Louse, (F.) Pou. A genus of parasitic insects. The human body is infested with three kinds: the Body-louse, or Clothes-louse, Pedic'ulus vestimen'ti, (F.) Pou de corps; the Head-louse, Pedic'ulus cap'itis, (F.) Pou de la tête, which lives in the hair; the Crab-louse, Mor'pio, Fera'lis pedic'ulus, Plat'ula, Phthi'rius inguina'lis, Pedic'ulus Pubis, (F.) Morpion, which infests the hair of the pubes. Infusion of tobacco, or mercurial ointment, or ointment of white precipitate of mercury, or the white or red precipitate of mercury, readily destroys them. The louse occurring in phtheiriasis, pedic'ulus tabescen'tium, differs from the common louse. —Vogel

PEDICULUS CAPITIS, see Pediculus—p. Pubis, Crab-louse—p. Tabescentium, see Pediculus—p. Vestimenti, see Pediculus.

PÉDICURE, Chiropodist.

PEDICUS, Extensor brevis digitorum pedis.

PÉDIEUX (muscle), Extensor brevis digitorum pedis.

PEDIGAMBRA, Ysambra.

PEDILU'VIUM, from pedes, 'the feet,' and lavo, 'I wash.' Lavipe'dium, (F.) Bain de pied. A bath for the feet. See Bath.

PEDION, Sole.

PEDIONALGIA, Pedialgia.

PEDIONEURALGIA, Pedialgia.

PEDIUM, Tarsus.

PÉDONCULES DU CERVELET, Corpora restiformia.

PEDORA. The sordes of the eyes, ears, and feet.

PED'UNCLE, Pedun'culus. This term has been applied to different prolongations or appendices of the encephalon, from pes, pedis, 'a foot.' Thus, the Pedicles of the brain are the Crura cerebri; the Peduncles of the cerebel'lum, the Crura cerebelli.

PEDUNCLES OF THE BRAIN, Pedun'culi cer'ebri, called, also, Crura anterio'ra medul'læ oblonga'tæ, are two white cords, about ⅔ths of an inch in diameter, on the outside of the corpora albicantia. They arise from the medullary substance of the brain, and gradually approach, till they join the tuber annulare. They are formed, internally, of a mixture of cineritious and medullary matter; the former of which, being of a darker colour at one part than in any other part of the brain, has been called Locus niger crurum cerebri.

PEDUNCLES OF THE CEREBELLUM, Pedun'culi cerebel'li, called, also, Crura posterio'ra, are six in number, three on each side—a superior, a middle, and an inferior. The superior peduncles are generally known as the Processus cerebelli ad testes, Crura cerebel'li ad cor'pora quadrigem'ina, Bra'chia copulati'va; the inferior are the Processus cerebelli ad medullam oblongatam; and the middle are called, also, Cerebel'lar ped'uncles—Proces'sus seu Crura cerebel'li ad pontem, Bra'chia pontis.

PEDUNCLES, INFERIOR OF THE CEREBELLUM, Corpora restiformia—p. of the Medulla Oblongata, Corpora restiformia.

PEDUNCLES OF THE PINEAL GLAND are two medullary bands or strips, which seem to issue from the pineal gland, and proceed on each side upon the upper and inner region of the optic thalami.

PEDUNCULI CEREBELLI, Peduncles of the Cerebellum—p. Cerebri, Peduncles of the Brain—p. Medullæ Oblongatæ, Corpora restiformia.

PEDUNCULUS, Peduncle.

PEGA, Canthus (lesser).

PEGANELÆON, Oleum ruta'ceum, O'leum rutæ, from πηγανον, 'rue.' Oil of Rue.

PEGANUM, Ruta.

PEINE, Hunger.

PEINOTHERAPIA, Limotherapeia.

PEIRA, Effort, Experience, Nisus.

PELADA. A word of uncertain origin, applied to alopecia, especially to that resulting from syphilis.

PELA'GIA. A kind of scaly erysipelas of the hands—sometimes of the legs, at others, of the face. Pellagra.(?)

PELAGRA, Pellagra.

PELARGO'NIUM ANCEPS, Peris'tera anceps. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Geraniaceæ; the decoction of which is used by the Malays in amenorrhœa, and to promote parturition and abortion.

PELARGONIUM ANTIDYSENTER'ICUM, Jenkinso'nia antidysenter'ica. This South African plant is used by the natives in dysentery. It is boiled in milk.

PELARGO'NIUM CUCULLA'TUM. Common along the side of the Table Mountain. It has been recommended in decoction as an enema in colic, nephritis, and suppression of urine. It is an excellent emollient, and was formerly exported to Holland under the name Herba Althææ.

PELARGO'NIUM TRISTĒ, Polyac'tium tristē. The root of this plant, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope, is somewhat astringent, and is used there in diarrhœa and dysentery, and as an anthelmintic.

PEL'ICAN, Pelica'nus, Peleca'nus, Pel'ecan, Pel'ecas. An instrument, curved at the end like the beak of a pelican. Its use is to extract teeth.

PELICIDĒ, Pelu'dē, Mel coctum. Boiled honey.—Ruland and Johnson.

PELICOMETER, Pelvimeter.

PELIDNOMA, Ecchymoma, Pelioma.

PELIO'MA, Pelidno'ma, from πελος, 'black.' A livid ecchymosis.—Forestus. See Ecchymoma.

PÉLIOSE, Purpura.

PELIOSIS, Purpura hæmorrhagica—p. Rheumatica, see Purpura simplex.

PELLA, Cutis, Prepuce.

PEL'LAGRA, Pel'agra, Ichthyo'sis Pellagra, Elephanti'asis Ital'ica, Tuber Pellagra, Lepra Mediolanen'sis, L. Lombard'ica, Scorbu'tus alpi'nus, Ma'nia pella'gria, Erythe'ma endem'icum seu pel'lagrum, Insolazione de Primavera, Mal del Sole, Dermat'agra, Erysip'elas period'ica nervo'sa chron'ica, Mal de misère, Paral'ysis scorbu'tica, Seurvy of the Alps, Impeti'go Pellagra, (F.) Scorbut des Alpes; from πελλα,(?) 'skin,' and αγρα, 'seizure.' A disease, particularly noticed among the Milanese, which consists in the skin becoming covered with wrinkles, and assuming a scaly appearance, especially in the parts exposed to the air. The strength diminishes, the intellectual faculties and sensations become obscure, and cramps, convulsions, and other lesions of muscular contractility supervene. It is a singular endemic affection, and has been supposed to follow every where the introduction of Indian corn: hence the name Rapha'nia maïz'tica, given to it by some of the Italian physicians.

PELLENS, from pellere, 'to drive.' Driving; impelling.

PELLEN'TIA MEDICAMEN'TA are medicines that promote the occurrence of the menstrual or hæmorrhoidal flux.

PELLICULA SUMMA, Epidermis—p. Superior, Epidermis.

PELLICULÆ CORDIS, Ostiola cordis.

PELLIS, Cutis—p. Summa, Epidermis.

PELLITORY, Xanthoxylum fraxineum—p. American, Parietaria Pennsylvanica—p. Bastard, Achillea ptarmica—p. of Spain, Anthemis pyrethrum—p. Wall, Parietaria.

PELMA, Sole.

PELOR, Monster.

PELORIA, Monster.

PELORIUM, Monster.

PELORUM, Monster.

PELOTE DE MER, Pila marina.

PELTALIS seu PELTATUS CARTILAGO, Thyroid cartilage, Xiphoid cartilage.

PELTAN'DRA VIRGIN'ICA, Arum Virgin'icum, Lecon'tia, Rensselæ'ria, Arrow Arum, Tarahо, Wampee; indigenous; of the Order Araceæ. The fresh roots and seeds are acrid stimulants, like Arum.

PELTIDEA AMPLISSIMA, Lichen caninus—p. Canina, Lichen caninus—p. Leucorrhiza, Lichen caninus—p. Malacea, Lichen caninus—p. Spuria, Lichen caninus.

PELTIGERA CANINA, Lichen caninus.

PELUDE, Pelicide.

PELVIC, Pel'vicus, Pelvi'nus. Belonging or relating to the pelvis.

PELVIC APONEUROSIS, (F.) Aponévrose pelvienne. A tendinous lamina, given off from the sides of the pelvis, and from the entire circumference of the brim, which passes into and lines the pelvis, and is soon divided into two distinct layers;—one external, the lateral pelvic or obturator fascia, which continues to line the sides of the pelvis, and covers the obturator internus muscle; the other, internal or superior, which passes inwards upon the side of the prostate, bladder, and rectum in the male, and of the bladder, vagina, and rectum in the female, in order to form the floor of the pelvis.

PELVIC CAVITY, (F.) Cavité pelvienne. The cavity of the pelvis.

PELVIC MEMBERS. The lower extremities.

PELVIC SURFACE OF THE IL'IUM. That which faces the pelvic cavity.

PELVICULA OCULI, Orbit.

PELVI-TROCHANTE'RIAN, Pelvi-trochanteria'nus. That which relates to the pelvis and great trochanter. The Pelvi-trochante'rian region is formed by the muscles—pyramidalis, two obturators, gemini, and quadratus femoris, which pass from the pelvis to the digital cavity of the great trochanter.

PELVIM'ETER, Pelycom'eter, Pelyom'eter, Pelicom'eter, Pyelom'eter, from pelvis, and μετρον, 'a measure.' A barbarous hybrid. This name has been given to different instruments, invented for measuring the diameters of the pelvis, and particularly the antero-posterior or fore-and-aft diameter of the brim. Two have been chiefly employed, especially by French practitioners:—the Compas d'épaisseur, and the Pelvimeter of Coutouly. 1. The Compas d'épaisseur or Callipers of Baudelocque, is formed like a pair of compasses—with blunt extremities—the branches of which can be moved at will. One of these is applied to the symphysis pubis, and the other on the sacrum. About three inches must be deducted from this measurement for the thickness of the mons veneris, pubis, and the base of the sacrum. 2. The Pelvimeter of Coutouly resembles the instruments used by shoemakers for measuring the length of the foot. The two branches are introduced, in a state of approximation, into the vagina; and then separated, so that one touches the promontory of the sacrum, the other comes behind the os pubis. It is a barbarous contrivance, and its introduction ought never to be attempted on the living subject. It does not, indeed, seem possible to introduce it without mischief.

The finger is, decidedly, the best pelvimeter, and by it we can judge whether the base of the sacrum be unusually prominent. Measurement of the pelvis by the hand has been called Pelycochirometre'sis; from πελυξ, 'the pelvis,' χειρ, 'the hand,' and μετρον, 'measure.'

PELVIS, Cho'ana, Py'elos, (F.) Bassin; so called, because fancied to be shaped like an ancient basin. The part of the trunk which bounds the abdomen below. It is a large, bony, irregular, canoidal cavity,—open above and below,—which supports and contains a part of the intestines, and the urinary and genital organs; and serves, at the same time, as a fixed point for the articulation of the lower limbs, the attachment of their muscles, and the execution of their movements. The pelvis supports, behind, the vertebral column, and is sustained, before, by the ossa femorum. It is situate, in the adult, near the middle part of the body, and is composed of four broad, flat, unequally thick bones, differing much in their shape, size, and arrangement, which touch, are articulated at some part of their surface, and intimately united by means of a number of ligamentous fasciæ. Of these bones, two are behind, on the median line,—the sacrum and the coccyx; the two others are before and at the sides, — the ilia. They are fellows, and unite, before, with each other. The most important parts of the pelvis, in an obstetrical point of view, are the brim and the outlet. The Brim, Angus'tia abdomina'lis, Introi'tus, Apertu'ra pelvis supe'rior, Upper Opening or strait of the Cavity of the Pelvis, (F.) Détroit supérieur, D. abdominal, is the narrow part which separates the greater pelvis from the less—the false from the true, Pelvis vera seu minor. In the well-formed woman it is elliptical, and slightly inclined forwards. Its antero-posterior or sacro-pubie diameter, in a standard pelvis, measures 4½ inches, but with the soft parts, 3⅝ inches; its transverse or iliae or lateral, 5¼ inches, but with the soft parts 4 inches; and its oblique with the soft parts, 4⅝ inches. The Outlet, Ex'itus, Inferior opening or strait, Angus'tia perinæa'lis, (F.) Détroit inférieur, D. périnéal, forms the lower aperture of the pelvis. The antero-posterior diameter is here, on account of the mobility of the coccyx, 5 inches: the lateral, 4 inches. The Axis of the Pelvis is important to be known in obstetrics. The Axis of the Brim is indicated by a straight line drawn from the umbilicus to the apex of the coccyx;—the Axis of the Outlet by a line drawn from the first bone of the sacrum to the entrance of the vagina. An imaginary curved line which indicates the direction of the canal of the pelvis, has occasionally been termed the curve of Carus, in consequence of its having been pointedly described by the German obstetrician.

Pelvis Aurium, Coehlea—p. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain.

Pelvis of the Kidney, Pelvis rena'lis seu renum, Sinus, Venter seu Alvus Renum, (F.) Bassinet. This is a small, membranous pouch, occupying the posterior part of the fissure of the kidney. It is placed behind the rĕnal artery and vein; is elongated from above to below; flattened from before to behind; irregularly oval in figure; and, below, contracts considerably, to be continuous with the ureter. It receives the orifices of the infundibula, which pour the urine secreted in the kidney into its cavity.

Pelvis Minor, Pelvis—p. Ocularis, Scaphium oculare — p. Renalis, Pelvis of the kidney — p. Renum, Pelvis of the kidney—p. Vera, Pelvis.

PELYCOMETER, Pelvimeter.

PELYOMETER, Pelvimeter.

PEMMICAN. Meat cured, pounded, and mixed with fat. It has been much used as nutriment on long overland journeys.

PEM'PHIGUS, Emphly'sis Pem'phigus, Pom'pholyx, from πεμφιξ, 'a blister;' Febris bullo'sa, vesicula'ris, ampullo'sa seu pemphigo'des seu pemphingo'des, Exanthe'ma serosum, Morta, Pem'phigus morta, Pemphigus Helvetieus, Pemphigus major, Pemphigus minor, Morbus bullosus seu vesicula'ris seu ampulla'ceus, Pem'phinx, Pemphix, Pemphyx, Typhus vesicula'ris, Vesie'ular Fever, Bladdery Fever, (F.) Fièvre bulleuse, F. Vésiculaire. A disease, defined to consist of vesieles, scattered over the body; transparent, filbert-sized, with a red, inflamed edge, but without surrounding blush or tumefaction; on breaking, disposed to ulcerate; fluid, pellueid or slightly coloured; fever, typhous. It is doubtful whether any such idiopathie fever have ever existed: the probability is, that the fever and vesications have been an accidental complieation. Cullen thinks the Pemphigus Helveticus must have been malignant sore throat. If, however, such a distinct disease did exist, it was probably only as an endemico-epidemic.

Pemphigus Hungaricus, see Anthrax — p. Major, Pemphigus — p. Minor, Pemphigus — p. Morta, Pemphigus — p. Variolodes, see Varicella.

PEMPHINX, Pemphigus.

PEMPHIX, Pemphigus.

PEMPHYX, Pemphigus.

PEMPTÆA FEBRIS, Quintan.

PENÆA MUCRONATA, see Sarcocolla — p. Sarcocolla, Sareocolla.

PENCIL-LIKE PROCESSES, Styloid processes.

PENDULOUS ABDOMEN, Physconia.

PENDULUM PALATI, Velum pendulum palati.

PEN'ETRATING, Pen'etrans, from penetrare, (penitus intrare,) 'to go into.' A wound is so called which penetrates one of the great splanchnic cavities — Vulnŭs penetrans.

A medicine is, also, so called, which is supposed to pass through the pores, and stimulate.

PENICILLUM, Compress, Penicillus.

PENICIL'LUS, Penieill'um, 'a painter's brush;' diminutive of penis, 'a tail.' A tent or pledget. The secreting glandiform extremities of the venæ portæ, (Ae"ini bilio'si) have been so termed, as well as the villous textures.

Penicillus, Tent.

PENICULUM, Compress.

PENICULUS, Tent.

PENIDES, Saccharum hordeatum.

PENID'IUM, Penidium saccharatum. A kind of elarified sugar, made up into rolls. Barley sugar. It is demulcent; see Saccharum hordeatum.

PĔNIL, Mons veneris.

PENIS, 'a tail,' from pendere, 'to hang down;' Caulis, Coles, Caules, Caulos, Men'tula, Menta, Phall'us, Posthē, Pros'thium, Crithē, Cor'ynē, Vomer, Pater om'nium viven'tium, Pria'pus, Virga, V. viri'lis, V. genita'lis, Vere'trum, Sathē, Membrum viri'lē, Membrum, Verbus, Viri'lē, Pars Viri'lis, Membrum seminalē seu genitalē viro'rum, Morion, Cyon, Sie'ula, Tentum, Hasta, H. nuptia'lis, H. viri'lis, Vas, Vas'culum, Pecu'lium, Vir'gula, Vir, Thyrsus, Tenens, Clavus, Cauda salax, Cauda, Fas'cinum, F. viri'lē, Muto, Nervus, N. fistulo'sus seu fistula'ris seu juveni'lis, Per'tica per se, Scapus, Leco, Circu'lio, Vena, Contus, Telum, Gurgu'lio, Seeptrum, Arma, Gla'dius, Lu'brieum Caput, Muti'nus, Palus, Pes'sulus, Radix, Ramus, Rutab'ulum, Arma Ventris, Columna adstans inguin'ibus, Columna, Pyr'amis, Trabs, Spina, Catapulta viri'lis, Verpa, Machæ'ra, Taurus; the Yard, Male organ, &c. (F.) Verge, Membre viril. This organ, the use of which is to carry the seminal fluid into the female organs of generation, is cylindroid, long, and erectile, and situate before and beneath the symphysis pubis. In the ordinary state, it is soft and pendent in front of the serotum. During erection, it becomes elongated, upright, and assumes a triangular shape. Its upper surface is called the Dorsum penis, (F.) Dos de la verge; and, at its anterior surface, there is a longitudinal projection formed by the canal of the urethra. The two sides of the penis are round, and its posterior extremity or root is attached to the pelvis. Its anterior extremity is free, and presents the glans, prepuce, and orifice of the urethra. The penis is formed of the corpora cavernosa, the principal seat of erection; the corpus spongiosum of the urethra for the conveyance of the urine and sperm, and of the glans, which terminates the canal. The Arteries of the penis are branches of the internal pudic. The Veins correspond with the arteries. The Nerves are from the internal pudic.

PENNATUS, Penniform.

PEN'NIFORM, Pennifor'mis, Penna'tus, from penna, 'a pen,' and forma, 'form.' An epithet for muscles whose fleshy fibres are inserted on each side of a middle tendon, like the feathers of a pen on their common stalk.

PENNYCRESS, Thlaspi.

PENNYROYAL, Mentha pulegium, Hedeoma pulegioides—p. Hart's, Mentha cervina.

PENSACOLA, see Saint Augustine.

PENSÉE, Viola tricolor—p. Sauvage, Viola tricolor.

PENSILIA, Pudibilia.

PENTAMY'RON, Pentamæ'ron, from πεντε, 'five,' and μυρον, 'ointment.' An ancient ointment, consisting of five ingredients. These are said to have been—storax, mastich, wax, opobalsam, and unguentum nardinum.—Paulus, and Aëtius.

PENTAPHAR'MACON, from πεντε, 'five,' and φαρμακον, 'remedy.' Any medicine consisting of five ingredients.

PENTAPHYLLUM, Potentilla reptans.

PEN'TATEUCH, (SURGICAL,) Pentateu'chus, from πεντε, 'five,' and τευχος, 'a book,' which signifies the five books of Moses—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. By analogy, some surgeons have given the name Surgical Pentateuch to the division of external diseases into five classes:—wounds, ulcers, tumours, luxations, and fractures.

PENTATH'ETUM, from πεντε, 'five,' and τιθεναι, 'to place.' An ancient plaster consisting of five ingredients.

PENULA, Ingluvies.

PENZANCE, CLIMATE OF. This is the chief residence of invalids in Cornwall, England, during the winter. It is situated on Mount's Bay, about ten miles from the Land's End. It is 5½° warmer in winter than London; 2° colder in summer; scarcely 1° warmer in the spring, and only about 2½° warmer in the autumn. It is a very favourable winter residence for the phthisical invalid.

PEONY, Pæonia.

PEPANSIS, Coction, Maturation.

PEPANTICOS, Maturative.

PEPASMOS, Coction, Maturation.

PEPAS'TIC, Pepas'ticus, from πεπαινω, 'I concoct.' A medicine supposed to have the power of favouring the concoction of diseases. Maturative.

PEPEIRUS, Concocted.

PEPINO, (S.) A cucurbitacea, which is cultivated in great abundance in the fields of Peru. The pulp or edible part is solid, juicy, and well flavoured; but is apt to disagree.

PEPO, Cucurbita pepo—p. Lagenarius, Cucurbita lagenaria—p. Vulgaris, Cucurbita pepo.

PEPPERWORT, Lepidium.

PEPSIN, Peps'inum, Chy'mosin, Gas'terase, Diges'tive Prin'ciple, from πεψις, 'coction.' A peculiar organic matter, which in combination with the gastric acids, is considered to form the proper digestive solvent. Its chemical constitution is unknown. It would appear that its presence is necessary to induce changes in the elements of the food, which may enable the gastric acids to act upon them so as to form chyme.

PEPSINUM, Pepsin.

PEPSIS, Coction, Digestion.

PEPTIC, Pep'ticus, from πεπτω, 'I ripen.' An agent that promotes digestion, or is digestive. Also, applied adjectively to an article of food that is easy of digestion.

PEPTIC PERSUADER, see Pilulæ aloes et Kinæ Kinæ.

PERACUTUS, Catoxys.

PERARTICULATIO, Diarthrosis.

PERATODYNIA, Cardialgia.

PERCE-CRANE, Perforator.

PERCE-FEUILLE, Bupleurum rotundifolium.

PERCE-MOUSSE, Polytrichum.

PERCE-PIERRE, Crithmum maritimum.

PERCEP'TA, from percipere, 'to perceive,' 'receive.' A word used by some writers on hygiene to indicate, in a general manner, the effects of the nervous action on the animal economy; in other words, the sensations, the functions of the mind, and their deterioration or privation.

PERCEP'TION, Percep'tio. The appreciation which the brain has of an impression made upon an organ of sense.

PERCEPTIV'ITY. Same etymon. The power of perception.

PERCOLATIO, Filtration, Percolation.

PERCOLA'TION, Percola'tio, from percolare, (per and colare,) 'to strain through.' The terms percolation and displacement are applied in pharmacy to an operation which consists in placing any substance, the virtues of which have to be extracted by a menstruum, in a funnel-shaped instrument, having a septum perforated with holes, or its tube stuffed with cotton or tow, and pouring fresh portions of the menstruum upon it until all its virtues have been extracted. The operation is used in the formation of certain infusions, extracts, tinctures, &c.

An instrument used for this purpose is called a displacer or per'colator.

PERCOLATOR, see Percolation.

PERCUSS. Percu'terē, (F.) Percuter, Frapper. Same etymon as the next. To strike upon with the view of appreciating the resulting sound. To practise percussion.

PERCUS'SION, Epierou'sis, Percus'sio, from percutere, (per, and quatere,) 'to strike.' When immediate or direct percussion is made on the chest or abdomen, the more or less perfect resonance is an index of the state of the contained organs; and the physician is thus aided in his diagnosis. For this purpose the chest may be struck with the fingers, gathered into a bundle, and their tips placed upon a level. It is better, however, to employ mediate percussion, which consists in interposing, between the point of the fingers and the chest, the finger of the other hand, or a Plexim'eter, and striking this instead of the naked chest.

PERCUSSION, AUSCULTATORY, see Acouophonia.

PERCUTER, Percuss.

PERCUTEUR COURBE À MARTEAU, (F.) An instrument used by Baron Heurteloup in the operation of lithotomy, in which a hammer is employed instead of a screw, to force together the blades of the instrument on the foreign body.

PERDO'NIUM. A medicated wine of herbs.—Paracelsus.

PERETERIUM, Trepan.

PERETORIUM, Trepan.

PER'FORANS, from perforare, (per, and forare,) 'to bore through.' A name given to different muscles, whose tendons pass through intervals between the fibres or tendons of other muscles; thence called perforated. See Flexor

Longus Digitorum, &c. Under the name Perforating Arteries, are included, 1. In the hand—arterial branches, given off by the profound palmar arch, which traverse the muscles and interosseous spaces. 2. In the thigh—three or four arteries, furnished by the profunda, which pass through the openings of the adductor magnus. 3. In the foot—the anterior and superior branches of the plantar arch.

PERFORANS CASSERII, see Cutaneous — p. Manûs, Flexor profundus perforans — p. Profundus, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PERFORATED SPOT, Locus perforatus.

PERFORATING ARTERIES, see Perforans.

PERFORATIO, Perforation — p. Cranii, see Perforator — p. Intestinorum, Enterobrosis — p. Ventriculi, Gastrobrosis.

PERFORA'TION, Perfora'tio, Anatre'sis, Diatre'sis, from perforare, 'to pierce.' An accidental opening in the continuity of organs, either from an external or internal cause.

PERFORATION, Paracentesis — p. de l'Estomac, Gastrobrosis — p. des Intestins, Enterobrosis — p. Uteri, Uterus, rupture of the.

PER'FORATOR, Perforato'rium, (F.) Percecrane. An instrument for opening the head of the fœtus in utero, when it is necessary to diminish its size. The operation is called Cephalotom'ia, Perfora'tio cra'nii.

PERFORATORIUM, Perforator.

PERFORA'TUS. That which is pierced. Anatomists have given this name to muscles whose fibres or tendons separate to suffer other parts to pass through them. Such are the Flexor brevis digitorum pedis, F. sublimis perforatus, and Coraco-brachialis. Also, to parts that are perforated for any purpose — as the substan'tia perfora'ta of the brain.

PERFORATUS CASSERII, Coraco-brachialis.

PERFRIC'TIO, Perfrige'rium, Catapsyx'is, Peripsyx'is, from perfrigere, (per, and frigere,) 'to shiver with cold.' Considerable refrigeration. Great sense of cold: — shivering.

PERFRIGERATIO, see Rigor.

PERFRIGERIUM, Perfrictio.

PERFUSIO, Fomentation — p. Frigida, see Affusion.

PERI, περι, 'about, on all sides, round about.' An augmentative prefix. Hence:

PERIÆRE'SIS, from περι, 'about,' and αιρεω, 'I take away.' A sort of circular incision, which the ancients made in the neighbourhood of large abscesses. The periæresis is now only practised in some cases of tumours.

PERIAL'GIA, from περι, 'on all sides,' and αλγος, 'pain.' A very violent pain.

PERIAMMA, Amuletum.

PERIAPTON, Amuletum.

PERIBLEMA, Catablema.

PERIBLEP'SIS, from περι, 'around,' and βλεπω, 'I look.' The wild look that accompanies delirium. — Foësius.

PERIB'OLÉ, from περιβαλλω, 'I surround.' The dress of a person. The pericardium. Also, the translation of morbific matters towards the surface of the body.

PERIBRO'SIS, Perica'sis, from περιβρωσκω, (περι, and βρωσκω, 'I eat,') 'I eat around.' Ulceration or erosion at the corners of the eyelids.

PERICAR'DIAC. Pericar'dial, Pericardi'acus; same etymon as the next. Relating to the pericardium,—as 'pericardial murmur,' 'pericardial effusion,' 'pericardial arteries, veins,' &c., &c.

PERICARDIAL, Pericardiac.

PERICARDI'TIS, from περικαρδιον, 'the pericardium,' and itis, denoting inflammation; Inflamma'tio Pericar'dii, Pleuri'tis pericar'dii, Cardi'tis exter'na seu sero'sa seu membrano'sa, Exocardi'tis, Inflamma'tion of the pericardium, (F.) Péricardite, Inflammation du Péricarde. This is, probably, the proper appellation for most of those cases which have received the names of Carditis, Cardipericardi'tis, and Cardiopericardi'tis. Along with signs of pyrexia, the local symptoms resemble those of pneumonia. Those which point out that the pericardium is the seat of disease, are the following: — pain, referred to the region of the heart, or scrobiculus cordis, — sometimes pungent, at others, dull and heavy: palpitation, accompanied with spasmodic twitchings in the neighbourhood of the heart, shooting up to the left shoulder; pulsation, and sometimes soreness of the carotids, with tinnitus aurium and vertigo; the breathing is by catches; dyspnœa considerable; pulse jarring, jerking, peculiar; the tongue white, covered with a mucous coat, and the skin often bathed in sweat, as in acute rheumatism. The physical signs during the first period are as follows. The action of the heart is generally evident to the eye, and may be felt by the hand. There is soreness to the touch over the intercostal spaces, and over a small surface in the epigastric region, when the pressure is directed upwards towards the pericardium. Percussion is usually natural, but at times there is dulness. On auscultation, the cardiac movements are found to be frequent, abrupt, jerking, and tumultuous; often irregular and intermittent. The pulse presents corresponding characters. When effusion of lymph has occurred, percussion may be negative, or be but slightly affected. On auscultation, in addition to the preceding signs, there may be one or more of the rubbing or friction bruits resembling the rustling of parchment, or of a sawing or rasping character. In some cases, the sound is like the creaking of new leather. This has been supposed to be pathognomonic of effused lymph. The most important point in the pathology of pericarditis is its connexion with acute rheumatism; and it forms one of the most dangerous occurrences in the latter disease. It may be acute or chronic: in either case, it is, of course, formidable. The most active depletion must be used; with large doses of opium, counter-irritants, and all the means required in the most violent internal inflammations.

PERICARDITIS EXSUDATORIA SANGUINOLENTA, Hæmopericardium.

PERICAR'DIUM, Pericar'dion, Perib'olē, Membra'na Cor circumplexa, Involu'crum seu Ar'cula seu Capsa seu Cap'sula seu Cam'era seu Indumen'tum seu Pannic'ulus seu Membra'na seu Theca seu Saccus seu Sac'culus seu Scrotum seu Vagi'na seu Vesi'ca seu Arca seu Thal'amus rega'lis seu Amphico'ma seu Bursa Cordis, Sac or Capsule of the Heart, (F.) Péricarde; from περι, 'around,' and καρδια, 'the heart.' The pericardium is a membranous sac, which envelopes the heart, and the arterial and venous trunks that pass from or into it. It is seated in the separation of the mediastinum, above the central aponeurosis of the diaphragm, to which it strongly adheres. Its shape is triangular, like that of the heart; to which it is fitted. The pericardium is composed of two membranes:—the one—external—fibrous; the other—internal—serous. The latter, having lined the inner surface of the external layer, is reflected over the heart, and covers it entirely; without, however, having the heart within it; in which arrangement it resembles other serous membranes. The pericardium envelops the heart; retains it in position, and facilitates its movements by means of the serous fluid, Liquor seu Aqua seu Humor seu Lympha seu Uri'na Pericar'dii, Hydrocar'dia, which it contains in greater or less quantity.

The arteries of the pericardium are small, and derived from the superior phrenic, anterior mediastinal and bronchial. The veins accompany them, and open into the brachio-cephalic. No nerves have been traced to it. The lymphatics enter the lymphatic glands that surround the vena cava superior.

PERICARPIUM, Epicarpium.

PERICHOLIA, Polycholia.

PERICHONDRI'TIS, Inflamma'tio perichon'drii, from perichondrium, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the perichondrium: hence Perichondri'tis laryn'gea;—Inflammation of the perichondrium covering the larynx.

PERICHON'DRIUM, from περι, 'around,' and χονδρος, 'a cartilage.' A membrane of a fibrous nature, which covers cartilages that are non-articular, and bears considerable analogy to the periosteum in organization and uses.

PERICHRISIS, Circumlitio, Liniment.

PERICHRISTON, Circumlitio, Liniment.

PERICLA'SIS, from περι, 'about,' and κλαω, 'I break.' A comminuted fracture, with denudation of the bone.—Galen, Foësius.

PERICLYMENUM, Lonicera periclymenum—p. Vulgare, Lonicera periclymenum.

PERICNE'MIA, from περι, 'about,' and κνημη, 'the leg.' The parts surrounding the tibia;—the tibia itself.

PERICRANIŒDE'MA, from pericranium, and οιδημα, 'a swelling.' Œdema of the head, owing to fluid effused under the pericranium.

PERICRA'NIUM, Perica'nion, Perica'nia, from περι, 'around,' and κρανιον, 'the cranium.' The periosteum, which covers the cranium externally.

PERICRASIS, Peribrosis.

PERIDER'IA, from περι, 'around,' and δερη, 'the neck.' Twisting of the cord round the neck of the child.

PERIDES'MIC, Perides'micus; from περι, 'around,' and δεσμος, 'a ligament.' Some nosologists have given this name to ischuria caused by a ligature round the penis or by stricture of the urethra.

PERIDES'MIUM; from περι, 'around,' and δεσμος, 'ligament.' The delicate areolar tissue covering a ligament.

PERIDIASTOLE, see Diastole.

PERID'ROMUS, from περι, 'about,' and δρομος, 'a course.' The extreme circumference of the hairs of the head.—Gorræus.

PERIESTICOS, Salutary.

PERIGLOTTIS, Epiglottic gland: see Tongue.

PERIG'RAPHÉ, from περιγραφω, (περι, and γραφω, 'I write,') 'I circumscribe.' The aponeurotic intersections of the rectus abdominis are so called.—Vesalius.

PERILYMPH, Cotunnius, liquor of.

PERIMYELITIS, Meningitis, spinal.

PERIMYS'IUM, Fas'cia, from περι, 'around,' and μυς, 'a muscle.' The areolar membrane or sheath—vagi'na muscula'ris—that surrounds a muscle, or its fasciculi. The sheath of the whole muscle is termed Perimysium externum; of the fasciculi, Perimysium internum.

PERIN, Peris, from περα, 'a sac or pouch.' With some, this means the scrotum; with others, the testicle; with others, the vagina; with others, the peritonæum; and with others, the anus.

PERINÆOCELĒ, Hernia, perineal.

PERINÆ'UM, Interfemin'eum, Interfœmin'eum, Interfœmin'ium, Interfœ'mina, Iter femin'eum, Peris, Perin, Perineum, Gressu'ra, Plechas, Am'phiplex, Peche'deon, Mesos'celon, Mesos'celus, Perine'on, Perinæ'os, Perine'os, Tramis, Tauros, Interforamine'um, Cocho'nē, Plichos, Mesome'rion, Fœmen, Re'gio Perinæ'i, (F.) Périnée. The space at the inferior region of the trunk, between the ischiatic tuberosities, anus, and genital organs. It is smaller in the female than in the male; has a triangular shape, and is divided into two equal parts by a median line, called Raphē. It is occasionally ruptured in labour. At times, it has been made to extend posteriorly as far as the os coccygis. The part between the pudendum and anus is sometimes called ante'rior perinæ'um, to distinguish it from that which extends from the anus to the coccyx, called poste'rior perinæ'um.

PERINÆUS, Perineal.

PERINE'AL, Perinæ'us, Perinæa'lis, Perinea'lis. That which relates or belongs to the perinæum; as Perineal artery, P. hernia, &c.

PERINEAL APONEUROSIS, P. Fascia.

PERINEAL ARTERY, Arte'ria perinæa'lis, Superficial artery of the Perinæ'um. A branch of the internal pudic distributed to the perinæum.

PERINEAL CUTANEOUS NERVE, see Sciatic nerve, lesser.

PERINEAL FAS'CIA, F. Perinæ'i, Perine'al aponeuro'sis. The fasciæ,—superficial and deep-seated—Perine'al ligament—Camper's ligament, Trian'gular ligament,—which belong to the perinæum.

PERINE'AL FOSSA, Fossa perinæ'i, Ischio-rectal fossa. A conical fossa, the base of which corresponds with the skin; is formed anteriorly by the transversus perinæi muscle; behind, by the inferior border of the glutæus maximus; internally, by the levator ani; and externally, by the tuber ischii. It is filled up with fat and fibrous striæ.

PERINEAL ISCHURIA, Ischu'ria Perinea'lis. A name given by Sauvages to retention of urine, caused by a tumour seated in the perinæum.

PERINEAL LIGAMENT, see P. fascia.

PERINEAL NERVE. A branch of the internal pudic; which is mainly distributed to the perinæum and scrotum of the male; and to the vulva and perinæum of the female.

PERINEAL REGION, Perinæum.

PÉRINÉE, Perinæum.

PERINEPHRI'TIS, (F.) Phlegmon périnéphrétique, from περι, 'around,' νεφρος, 'kidney,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the external areolar and fibrous membranes of the kidney, or of their investing adipose areolar tissue.

PERINEPHRUS, see Kidney.

PERINEURION, Neurilemma.

PERINYC'TIDES, περι, and νυξ, 'night.' An eruption appearing at night and disappearing by day.—Erotian.

PE'RIOD, Periodus, Periodei'a, Periodeu'sis, Sta'dium, Circu'itus, from περι, 'about,' and 'οδος, 'way;' Circuit. Periods are the different phases or revolutions of a disease,—the epochs which are distinguishable in the course of a disease. Three periods are commonly enumerated. 1. The augmentation, increase, or progress, (Incremen'tum;) 2. The acme or height, (F.) État (Status;) and, 3. The decline (Decrementum.) Some authors reckon only the invasion and termination.

Period is sometimes used in describing an intermittent, for the time between the commencement of a paroxysm and that of the next, including the fit as well as interval.

PERIODS, MONTHLY, Menses.

PERIODEIA, Period.

PERIODEUSIS, Period.

PERIODEUTES, Charlatan.

PERIODIC''ITY, Periodic''itas, Rhythm; same etymon. The aptitude of certain physiological and pathological phenomena, in health or disease, to recur at particular periods, after longer or shorter intervals, during which they cease completely. Diseases, thus recurring, are called Periodical or rhyth'mical — Typo'ses.

PERIODOL'OGY, Periodolog''ia; from περιοδος, 'a course or circuit,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of periodicity in health and disease.

PERIODONTI'TIS, (F.) Périodontite, Inflammation de la Membrane alvéolo-dentaire, from περι, 'about,' and οδους, 'a tooth. Inflammation of the membrane that lines the socket of a tooth.

Periodontitis Gingivarum, Ulitis.

PERIOD'OSCOPE; from περιοδος, 'a period,' and σκοπεω, 'I view.' An instrument, proposed by Dr. Tyler Smith, for the ready calculation of the periodical functions of the sex. It consists of a movable circular dial, upon which the months and days are engraved, fixed on a pivot in the centre of a large plate on which are numbered the different conditions of the reproductive system, as conception, abortion, premature labour, hemorrhage, labour, &c. By a knowledge of the date of conception, say November 14th, and fixing the movable plate opposite the point on the fixed plate which indicates conception, the observer is enabled, at once, to see, that, allowing 280 days for gestation, labour may be expected about the 20th of August. The dial is made of card-board, and is affixed to a small volume, in which its uses and applications are explained.

PERIODUS MORBI, Type — p. Sanguinis, Circulation.

PERIODYN'IA, from περι, and οδυνη, 'pain.' A violent and extensive pain.

PÉRIONE, Decidua.

PERIOR'BITA, Perios'teum or'bitæ, from περι, 'around,' and orbita, 'the orbit.' An appellation used, by some, for the periosteum lining the orbit, which is a continuation of the dura mater. The inflammation of this periosteum is termed Periorbi'tis or Periorbiti'tis, and Inflamma'tio perios'tei or'bitæ.

PERIORBITIS, see Periorbita.

PERIORBITITIS, see Periorbita.

PERIOSTEITIS, see Periostitis.

PERIOS'TEUM, Perios'teon, Periosteos, Perios'tium, Circumossa'lē, Membra'na ossis, Omen'tum os'sium, Circumossa'lis Membra'na, from περι, 'around,' and οστεον, 'a bone.' The periosteum is a fibrous, white, resisting medium which surrounds the bones every where, except the teeth at their coronæ, and the parts of other bones that are covered with cartilage. The external surface is united, in a more or less intimate manner, to the neighbouring parts by areolar tissue. Its inner surface covers the bone, whose depressions it accurately follows. It is united to the bone by small, fibrous prolongations; and, especially, by a prodigious quantity of vessels, which penetrate their substance. The periosteum unites the bones to the neighbouring parts. It assists in their growth, either by furnishing, at its inner surface, as M. Béclard demonstrated, an albuminous exudation, which becomes cartilaginous, and at length ossifies; — or by supporting the vessels, which penetrate them to carry the materials of their nutrition. See Medullary membrane.

Periosteum Internum, Medullary membrane — p. Orbitæ, Periorbita.

PERIOSTI'TIS, Periostei'tis, Inflamma'tio perios'tei, from periosteum and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the periosteum.

PERIOSTO'SIS. Tumour of the periosteum. Tumours are so called which are developed on bones, and formed by their outer membrane. These tumours are more rapidly developed, have a less degree of consistence, and sooner disperse than exostoses, which they resemble greatly.

PERIPHERAL, see Peripheral aspect.

Periph'eral, Periph'eric, Pericher'ical; from περι, 'around,' and φερω, 'I bear.' Relating or appertaining to the periphery or circumference.

Peripheral Aspect. An aspect towards the circumference of an organ.—Barclay. Periph'erad is used by the same writer adverbially to signify 'towards the peripheral aspect.'

PERIPHERAL VASCULAR SYSTEM, Capillary system.

PERIPHIMOSIS, Paraphimosis.

PERIPLEUMONIA, Peripneumonia.

PERIPLOCA INDICA, Hemidesmus Indicus.

PERIP'LYSIS, from περι, and πλυσις, 'the act of washing;' Profluvium. A copious discharge from any part, especially from the bowels.

PERIPNEUMO'NIA, Peripleumo'nia, Peripneumoni'tis, True peripneu'mony, from περι, 'around,' and πνευμων, 'the lung.' Inflammation of the substance of the lungs. — See Pneumonia.

Peripneumonia Bilio'sa. Inflammation of the lungs, accompanied with bilious fever.

Peripneumo'nia Catarrha'lis. Bronchitis or pulmonary catarrh, with pain in some part of the chest. Peripneumonia notha.

Peripneumo'nia Notha, P. spu'ria, P. pituito'sa, P. catarrha'lis, Pneumo'nia notha, Pseudoperipneumonia, Pseudo-pneumonia, Pseudo-pneumoni'tis, Bronchoc'ace, Blennotho'rax, Obstruc'tio pulmo'num pituito'sa febri'lis, Bronchi'tis asthen'ica, False or Bastard Peripneu'mony, (F.) Péripneumonie bâtarde ou fausse. An inexact name, under which some affections are comprised that resemble pneumonia; and, especially chronic bronchitis with pleurodynia. — See Bronchitis (chronic.)

Peripneumonia Pituitosa, P. notha.

PERIPNEUMONITIS, Peripneumonia.

PERIPNEUMONY, Pneumonia — p. Bastard, Peripneumonia notha.

Peripneumony, Latent. Peripneumony whose symptoms are so obscure as to be recognised with difficulty.

PERIPSYXIS, Catapsyxis, Perfrictio.

PERIPYE'MA, from περι, 'about,' and πυον, 'pus.' Suppuration around an organ; — a tooth, for example.

PERIRRHŒ'A, Perir'rhoē, from περι, 'about,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Afflux of fluids from every point of the body towards an organ which has to remove them from the economy. Also, enuresis.

PERIS, Perin.

PERISCELIS, Jarretière.

PERISCYPHISMUS, Periscythismus.

PERISCYTHIS'MUS, Periscy'thisis, Pery'scytis'mus, Periscy'tisis, Perisey'phisis, Periscyphismus, Scalping, from περι, 'around,' and Σκυθης, 'a Scythian,' that is, 'scalping after the manner of the Scythians.' An operation described by Paulus of Ægina. It consisted of an incision made around the cranium, and was employed in habitual weakness of the eyes, pains of the head, &c.

PERISPHAL'SIS, Circumduc'tio, from περι, 'about,' and σφαλλω, 'I move.' A circular motion impressed on a luxated bone, for the purpose of reducing it.

PERISSODACTYLUS, Polydactylus.

PERISTALTIC, Systaltic — p. Action, Peristole.

PERISTAPHYLINUS EXTERNUS, Circumflexus musculus — p. Inferior, Circumflexus musculus — p. Internus, Levator palati.

PERISTERA ANCEPS, Pelargonium anceps.

PERISTERIUM, Verbena officinalis.

PERISTER'NA, from περι, 'about,' and στερνον, 'the sternum.' The lateral parts of the chest.

PERIS'TOLĒ, Motus Peristal'ticus, M. compresso'rius seu vermicula'ris seu testudin'eus, from περι, 'around,' and στελλω, 'I contract,' 'I close.' The peristaltic action of the intestines, Motus peristal'ticus. It consists of a kind of undulation or vermicular movement, in appearance irregular, but in which the circular fibres of the muscular membrane of the intestine contract successively, from above downwards, in proportion as the chyme advances in the alimentary canal; so that, being compressed above, it is pushed into the next portion of the intestine, whose fibres are in a state of relaxation. When the fibres contract inversely, they occasion an antiperistaltic action. The peristaltic action is involuntary, and is not under the immediate influence of either brain or spinal marrow. It continues for some time after death.

PERISTOMA, Peristroma.

PERISTOMIUM, Mouth.

PERISTRO'MA, Peris'toma, Mus'cus villo'sus, Crusta membrana'cea, Crusta vermicula'ris, from περι, 'around,' and στρωννυμι, 'to spread.' The villous or mucous coat of the intestines.—Castelli.

PERISYS'TOLĒ, from περι, 'about,' and συστολη, 'contraction.' The interval that exists between the systole and diastole of the heart, which is only perceptible in the dying. — Bartholine.

PERITERION, Trépan perforatif.

PERITESTIS, Albuginea.

PÉRITOINE, Peritonæum.

PERITOME, Circumcision.

PERITONÆRIX'IS, Peritonæorex'is, from περιτοναιον, 'the peritonæum,' and ρηγνυω, 'I break.' Hernia formed by the rupture of the peritonæum.

PERITONÆ'UM, Peritone'um, Peritonæ'on, Peritonei'on, Peritonæ'os, Peritoni'on, Peritoneos, Velamen'tum abdomina'lē, Tu'nica præten'sa seu Operimen'tum prætensum seu Membra'na abdom'inis, Siphar, Syphar, Zepach, Ziphac, (F.) Péritoine, from περι, 'around,' and τεινω, 'I stretch.' A serous membrane, which lines the abdominal cavity; extends over the greater part of the organs contained there; envelops them wholly or in part, and maintains their respective relations by means of different prolongations and ligamentous folds:—the mesentery, epiploon, mesocolon, &c. Like all the serous membranes, the peritoneum is a sort of sac without aperture, which covers the abdominal organs, without containing them within it, and the internal surface of which is smooth, and lubricated by a serous fluid. In the male fœtus, the peritonæum furnishes a prolongation, which accompanies the testicle at the time of its descent, and, in the female fœtus, forms the Canal of Nuck. Below the neck of the gall-bladder, the peritonæum has a triangular opening, called the Foramen or Hiatus of Winslow, through which it proceeds behind the stomach, to form a sort of secondary cavity, called the posterior cavity of the peritonæum, (F.) Arrière cavité péritonéale ou Cavité des Epiploons.

PERITONÆUM DUPLICATUM, Epiploon, gastrocolic.

PÉRITONITE, Peritonitis — p. Puerpérale, see Peritonitis.

PERITONI'TIS, Empres'ma Peritonitis, Peritonæi'tis, Cauma Peritonitis, Inflamma'tio Peritonæ'i, Phleg'monē peritonæ'i, Phlegma'sia or Inflammation of the Peritonæ'um, from peritoneum, and itis, denoting 'inflammation.' (F.) Péritonite, Inflammation du Péritoine. The characteristic signs of acute inflammation of the peritonæum are, — violent pain in the abdomen, increased by the slightest pressure, often by the simple weight of the bed-clothes. It generally occurs in the parturient state; and begins on the second or third day after delivery. At times, a malignant epidemic, and perhaps contagious, variety has made its appearance, and destroyed numbers of females. This has been described under the name Puer'peral Fever, Metroperitoni'tis, Ene'cia Syn'ochus Puerpera'rum, (F.) Péritonite puerpérale, Métropéritonite puerpérale, Fièvre puerpérale, Typhus puerpéral, Erythemat'ic or Nonplas'tic Puerperal Peritonitis, Typhohæ'mic Peritoni'tis, Adynam'ic or Malig'nant Puer'peral Fever, Low Fever of Childbed. It is, according to some, a malignant inflammation of the peritoneum and uterus; according to others, a Uterine Phlebitis. In any form it requires active treatment, early employed. The appearances on dissection are such as occur whenever a serous membrane has been inflamed, and such inflammation has produced death:—effusion of fluid with flakes of coagulable lymph in it; appearances of vascularity, &c., in the membrane. The treatment — in active peritonitis — must consist of the same course as recommended under Enteritis. In the chronic kind, symptoms must be combated as they arise, and it may be advisable to excite a new action in the system by means of mercury. In the epidemic and malignant variety, unless bleeding be freely employed at the very outset, it does harm. If used early, it is of decided advantage. Every thing depends upon arresting the morbid process at the outset.

PERITONITIS, ERYTHEMATIC, see Peritonitis — p. Nonplastic, see Peritonitis — p. Puerperal, see Peritonitis — p. Typhohæmic, see Peritonitis.

PERITTOMA, Excrement.

PERITYPHLI'TIS; from περι, 'around,' and typhlitis, inflammation of the cæcum. Inflammation of the areolar substance surrounding the cæcum. See Typhlo-enteritis.

PERIWINKLE, LESSER, Vinca minor.

PERIZO'MA, from περιζωννυμι, (περι, and ζωννυμι, 'to gird,') 'to gird around.' A bandage; a girdle. In Fabricius Hildanus, a truss. Herpes zoster. The diaphragm.

PER'KINISM. A therapeutical means, first employed by Dr. Elisha Perkins, of Norwich, Connecticut, towards the termination of the last century, and named after him. It consisted in drawing over affected or other parts the pointed extremities of two metallic rods, called Metallic Tractors, each made of a different metal. The success obtained, was through the influence of the imagination; and, consequently, as a remedial agent, it ranks as high as animal magnetism, but no higher. The operation was, also, called Tractora'tion.

PER'KINIST. A believer in and practiser of Perkinism.

PERKINIS'TIC. Relating or belonging to Perkinism.

PERLA, Pearl, Paralampsis.

PERLE, Pearl.

PERMISTIO, Coition.

PERMIXTIO, Coition.

PERMOTIO, Motion.

PERNICIEUX, Deleterious.

PERNICIOSUS, Deleterious.

PERNIO, Chilblain.

PERNOCTATIO, Insomnia.

PEROCEPH'ALUS, from πηρος, 'deficient,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A monster with a defective head.

PEROCOR'MUS, Oligospon'dylus, from πηρος, 'defective,' and κορμος, 'trunk.' A malformation in which the trunk is defective, and too short, from the absence of one or more vertebræ,—the head and limbs being normal.

PERODACTYLEUS, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PERODYNIA, see Cardialgia.

PEROMEL'IA, from πηρος, 'wanting,' and μελος, 'a limb.' Congenital misconstruction, or mutilation of the limbs. A genus in the nosology of Good.

PEROM'ELUS. A monster possessed of the deformity mentioned above.

PÉRONÉ, Fibula—p. Col du, Collum fibulæ.

PERONE'AL, Peronæ'us, Fibula'ris, Fib'ular, from περονη, 'the fibula.' Belonging or relating to the fibula.

PERONEAL ARTERY, Fib'ular A., arises from the popliteal, and is situate deeply in the posterior and outer part of the leg. It gives off branches of little importance. Near the outer ankle, it divides into two branches. 1. The posterior peroneal, which descends behind the lower joint of the fibula, on the outer surface of the calcaneum. 2. The anterior peroneal, which crosses the inferior extremity of the interosseous ligament, to be distributed on the dorsal surface of the foot.

PERONEAL MUSCLES are three in number. 1. Peronæus Brevis, P. Secundus, P. anti'cus, P. Me'dius, Semi-fibulæ'us, (F.) Grand-péronéo-sus-métatarsien, Court péronéo-latéral, Moyen Péronier. A muscle, situate beneath the peronæus longus. It is attached above, to the outer surface of the fibula, and terminates, below, at the posterior extremity of the 5th metatarsal bone, after having been reflected beneath the malleolus externus. It extends the foot upon the leg, at the same time raising a little the outer edge. It may, also, act upon the leg, and extend it upon the foot. 2. Peronæus Longus, Peronæus primus seu posti'cus, P. max'imus seu poste'rior, (F.) Tibi-péronéo-tarsien, Long péronier latéral, Péronéo-sous-tarsien, (Ch.,) Muscle grand péronier. This muscle is situate at the outer part of the leg. It is long, thick, and triangular above; thin, narrow, and flat below. It is attached above to the outer edge of the upper extremity of the fibula, and to the upper third of the outer surface of that bone. Below, it terminates at the outer part of the posterior extremity of the first metatarsal bone. This muscle extends the foot on the leg, turning its point outward, and raising its outer edge. It acts, also, upon the leg, which it extends on the foot. 3. Peronæus Tertius, Nonus Vesa'lii, (F.) Péronier antérieur, Petit péronéo-sus-métatarsien (Ch.,) Petit Péronier. A muscle, situate at the anterior, outer, and inferior part of the leg. It is long and flat, and is attached, above, to the inferior third of the anterior margin and inner surface of the fibula; terminating, below, at the posterior extremity of the 5th metatarsal bone. This muscle bends the foot on the leg, by raising its outer edge. It can, also, bend the leg on the foot.

PERONEAL NERVE, see Popliteal nerves.

PERONEAL VEIN follows the same course as the artery

PERONE DACTYLIUS, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PÉRONÉO-LATÉRAL COURT, Peronæus brevis—p. Phalanginien du gros orteil, Flexor longus pollicis pedis—p. Sous-phalangettien du pouce, Flexor longus pollicis pedis—p. Sous-tarsien, Peronæus longus—p. Sus-métatarsien, Peronæus tertius—p. Sus-métatarsien, grand, Peronæus brevis—p. Sus-phalangettien du pouce, Extensor proprius pollicis pedis—p. Tibi sus-phalangettien commun, Extensor communis digitorum pedis—p. Sus-phalangien du pouce, Extensor proprius pollicis pedis.

PERONEUM, Fibula.

PÉRONIER, GRAND, Peronæus longus—p. Latéral, long, Peronæus longus—p. Moyen, Peronæus brevis—p. Petit, Peronæus tertius.

PERONODACTYLIÆUS, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PERONODACTYLIUS, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PEROSO'MUS, from πηρος, 'mutilated,' and σωμα, 'body.' A monster, whose whole body is imperfectly developed.—Gurlt.

PEROSPLANCH'NICA, from πηρος, 'wanting,' and σπλαγχνον, 'a viscus.' Congenital misconstruction of the viscera. A genus in the nosology of Good.

PERPENDICULUM HEPATIS, Suspensory ligament of the liver.

PERPERACU'TUS. 'Extremely acute.' An epithet applied to very violent and rapid diseases.

PERPLEXI MORBI, see Complication.

PERPLICA'TION, Perplica'tio; from per, 'through,' and plico, 'I fold.' A method of tying arteries, which consists in making a small incision in the side of the artery, near its bleeding orifice, introducing a small pair of forceps, seizing the open extremity, and drawing it backward, through the aperture made in the side of the vessel, so as to form a kind of knot.

PERROSIN, see Pinus abies.

PERSEA CAMFORA, See Camphor—p. Cassia, Laurus cassia—p. Cinnamomum, Laurus cinnamomum—p. Cubeba, Piper cubeba.

PER'SEA GRATIS'SIMA, Palta tree. A slender, very high tree of Peru, with a small dome-like top, which grows on the eastern declivity of the Andes, and rises, at times, to the height of more than 60 feet. Its fruit,—(S.) Palta—which is pear-shaped, is generally much liked. It dissolves, like butter, on the tongue, and hence is called, in some of the French colonies, beurre végétale.

PERSEA PICHURIM, see Pichurim beans—p. Sassafras, Laurus sassafras.

PERSIAN FIRE, Anthracion.

PERSICA VULGARIS, Amygdalus Persica.

PERSOLATA, Arctium lappa.

PERSOLLATA, Arctium lappa.

PERSOLUTA, Arctium lappa.

PERSPICILLUM, see Spectacles.

PERSPIRABILE SANCTORIANUM, Perspiration.

PERSPIRA'TION, Perspira'tio, Transpira'tio, Diffla'tio, Diap'noë, Diapnœ'a, Diapneu'sis, Perspirab'ilë Sanctoria'num, from per, 'through,' and spirare, 'to breathe, exhale.' The insensible transpiration or exhalation continually going on at the surface of the skin and membranes. Sensible perspiration is called sweat. The perspiratory fluid is secreted by an appropriate glandular apparatus, termed by Breschet diapnog''enous, or sudorip'arous glands, Gland'ulæ sudorip'aræ, Or'gana sudorip'ara, sweat glands, consisting of a secreting parenchyma, situate beneath the true skin, and of spiral ducts, which open obliquely under the scales of the epidermis. A certain portion of the perspired fluid is thrown off by ordinary physical evaporation.

The Pulmonary exhalation or transpiration is that which takes place into the bronchia, and is sent out with the expired air.

PERSUDATIO, Diapedesis.

PERSULTATIO, Diapedesis.

PERTE, Metrorrhagia — p. d'Appetit, Anorexia — p. de la Mémoire, Amnesia — p. de l'Odorat, Anosmia — p. de Sang, Hæmorrhagia — p. de la Voix, Aphonia — p. de la Vue, Cæcitas.

PERTÉRÉBRANT, Perter'ebrans; from per, 'through,' and terebrare, 'to bore.' The French give this epithet to an acute pain — Douleur pertérébrante — which occasions a sensation like that which would be produced by an instrument penetrating and lacerating a part; — the pain from whitlow, for example.

PERTES BLANCHES, Leucorrhœa — p. de Sang, Metrorrhagia — p. Séminales, Spermatorrhœa — p. Utérines, Metrorrhagia — p. Utérines rouges, Metrorrhagia — p. Utérines blanches, Leucorrhœa.

PERTICA PER SE, Penis.

PERTURBATIONES ANIMI, Affections of the mind.

PERTURBA'TRIX, (Medici'na) .Per'turbating Treatment, (F.) Méthode ou Médecine perturbatrice. A mode of treatment in which very active means are employed, and such as impress upon diseases a different course from that natural to them. It is the antithesis to the Medicina expectans. Much evil has resulted from such treatment, especially in febrile diseases.

PERTUS'SIS, from per, a prefix denoting excess, and tussis, 'a cough.' Tussis feri'na, T. convulsi'va, T. pu'eros strang'ulans, T. quinta, T. stomacha'lis, T. an'hela clamo'sa, T. stran'gulans, T. delas'sans, T. suf'focans, T. amphemer'ina, T. tussiculo'sa, T. spasmod'ica, T. asini'na, T. cani'na, Bronchi'tis convulsi'va, Bronchocephali'tis, Pneusis pertus'sis, Amphemer'ina, Orthopnœ'a tussiculo'sa, clango'sa, suffocati'va, clamo'sa, spasmod'ica, Morbus Cucul'lus, Morbus cuculla'ris, Cuculus, Bechorthopnœ'a, Bex convulsi'va, Bex therio'des, Hooping-cough, Whooping-cough, Chin-cough, Kin-cough, Kind-cough, (Germ. Kind, 'a child,') (F.) Coqueluche, Catarrhe ou Bronchite convulsive, Toux convulsive, T. quinteuse, T. bleue, Maladie cuculaire. A violent convulsive cough, returning by fits, (F.) Quintes, at longer or shorter intervals; and consisting of several expirations, followed by a sonorous inspiration or whoop. The fits of coughing generally recur more frequently during the night, morning, and evening, than in the day. It is esteemed to be contagious, and attacks the young more particularly. It is rare for it to affect an individual for the second time. The duration is various,—six or eight weeks or more. Although the paroxysms are very violent, it is not a dangerous disease. It may, however, give rise to other affections, as convulsions, pneumonia, &c., when the complication is very dangerous, as the cause cannot be removed. Those children suffer the least, who evacuate the contents of the stomach during the fit. In the treatment, all that can be done is to palliate. It must be borne in mind, that the disease will, in time, wear itself out. If there be much tensive pain of the head, or fever, bleeding may be required, but it is seldom necessary. Narcotics occasionally afford relief, but it is temporary. Gentle emetics, given occasionally, when the paroxysms are long and dry, give decided relief, and aid in the expectoration of the morbid secretions. After the disease has continued for some weeks, and persists in part from habit, change of air is essential, and this, even should the change be to an atmosphere that is less pure.

PERU, see Lima.

PERUNCTIO, Inunction.

PERVENCHE, Vinca minor.

PERVER'SION, Perver'sio, from per and vertere, 'to turn.' Dias'trophē, Diastrem'ma. One of the four modifications of function in disease: the three others being augmentation, diminution, and abolition. The humourists used this term also to designate disorder or morbid change in the fluids.

PERVERSION DE LA TÊTE DES OS ET DES MUSCLES, Loxarthrus.

PERVIGILIUM, Insomnia, Coma vigil.

PES, πους, Ichnus, (F.) Pied, 'the foot.' The inferior extremity of the abdominal member, representing a bony arch, an elastic vault, which transmits the weight of the body to the ground. It is divided into three parts;—the tarsus, metatarsus, and toes.

PES'SARY, Pessa'rium, from πεσσος, 'a small stone.' Pessus, Pessum, Pes'sulus, Supposito'rium uteri'num, Glans, Lemnis'cus. A solid instrument, composed of cork, ivory, or elastic gum, which is introduced into the vagina to support the uterus, in cases of prolapsus or relaxation of that organ; to keep vaginal hernia reduced, &c. The ancients made use of medicated pessaries, which they distinguished into emollient, astringent, aperient, &c. The form of pessaries is very variable; — round, oval, &c., according to circumstances.

Septica, Plague—p. Variolosa, Variola.

PESTLE, Pilum—p. Spring, see Pilum.

PET, Fart.

PETALE, Phtheiriasis.

PETASITES, Tussilago petasites — p. Hybrida, Tussilago petasites—p. Officinalis, Tussilago petasites—p. Vulgaris, Tussilago petasites.

PETAURUM. A seat suspended by ropes, in which a person taking the exercise sat, and was tossed about by assistants.—Juvenal and Martial.

PETE'CHIÆ, Petic'ulæ, Pestich'iæ, Pestic''iæ, Punctic'ulæ, Pur'pura malig'na, Por'phyra Græco'rum. Small spots, similar in shape and colour to flea-bites, which occur spontaneously upon the skin, in the course of severe fevers, &c. They are, under such circumstances, signs of great prostration.

PETECHIÆ SINE FEBRE, Purpura simplex.

PETECHIAL SCURVY, Purpura simplex.

PETECHIANOSIS, Purpura hæmorrhagica.

PET'ELA TRIFOLIA'TA, Shrubby Tre'foil, Swamp dogwood, Stinking Pra'irie Bush, Stinking ash, Wing-seed. A tall indigenous shrub—family, Xanthoxylaceæ—which flowers in June. It has been used as a tonic and antiperiodic.

PETER'S PILLS, Pilulæ Aloes et Cambogiæ — p. Worm lozenges, see Worm lozenges, Sherman's.

PETICULÆ, Petechiæ.

PETIGO, Impetigo.

PETINA, Sole.

PETIOLUS, Pediolus, diminutive of pes, 'a foot. A footstalk or leafstalk of a plant. A petiole.

PETIOLUS EPIGLOTTIDIS. The root of the epiglottis.

PETIOLUS MALLEI, Manubrium mallei.

PETIT COURIER, Influenza—p. Lait, Serum lactis—p. Lait d'Hoffmann, Serum lactis Hoffmanni — p. Mal, see Epilepsy — p. Sus-maxillo-labial, Levator anguli oris.

PETITE POSTE, Influenza.

PETRÆLEUM, Petroleum.

PETRÆUM, Solidago virgaurea.

PETRAPIUM, Bubon Macedonicum.

PÉTRÉOLE, Petroleum.

PÉTREUX, (OS.) see Temporal bone.

PETRO DEL PORCO, Bezoar of the Indian porcupine.

PÉTROLE, Petroleum.

PETRO'LEUM, Petrolæ'um, Petræleum, Petræoleum, Bitu'men Petroleum, Pisselæ'um In'dicum, Rock Oil, Petroleum Barbaden'sē, Barbadoes Tar, (F.) Pétrole ou Pétréole, from πετρος, 'rock,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' A bituminous substance of a fetid odour, and bitter, acrid taste. It is semi-liquid, tenacious, semi-transparent; of a reddish-brown colour; insoluble in water and alcohol; combines with fixed and essential oils and sulphur; and is partially soluble in ether. The petroleum found at Gabian, near Béziers, in France, has been called Oleum Gabia'num, (F.) Huile de Gabian, Petroleum rudrum.

PETRO-OCCIPITAL, Petro-occipitalis. Belonging to the petrous portion of the temporal bone and to the occipital bone.

PETRO-OCCIPITAL SUTURE is formed by the junction of the petrous portion of the temporal to the occipital bone. It is a deep groove separating the bones, which have between them a thin layer of cartilage.

PETRO-SALPIN'GO-PHARYNGEUS. A fleshy fasciculus, which extends from the sphenoid bone, from the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and from the Eustachian tube to the upper part of the pharynx. See Constrictor.

PETRO-SALPINGO-STAPHYLINUS, Circumflexus—p. Salpingo-staphylinus, Levator palati—p. Staphylin, Levator palati.

PETRO-SPHENOID'AL, Petro-sphenoida'lis. Belonging to the petrous portion of the temporal bone and to the sphenoid bone.

PETRO-SPHENOIDAL SUTURE; — a name given to the small suture which is formed by the anterior edge of the petrous portion of the temporal bone and the posterior edge of the sphenoid.

PETROLEUM BARBADENSE, Petroleum.

PETROLEUM SULPHURA'TUM, Bal'samum Sulphuris Barbaden'sē,—(Composed of petrol. Barbad. ℥xvj, flor. Sulph. ℥iv) has been used as a pectoral; and as a detergent to ulcers. It has been accounted antispasmodic and sudorific. Dose, gtt. x to xxx. Externally, it is used as a stimulant and discutient.

PETROSAL, Petrous.

PETROSELINUM, Apium petroselinum — p. Macedonicum, Bubon Macedonicum.

PETROSUM, OS, see Temporal.

PETROUS, Petro'sus, Petro'sal, from πετρος, 'a stone.' Resembling stone; having the hardness of stone.

PETROUS GAN'GLION, Petro'sal Ganglion, Ganglion of Andersch, is formed by the glosso-pharyngeal nerve, shortly after it emerges from the jugular fossa. From this ganglion, M. Jacobson of Copenhagen traced an anastomosing loop through the cavity of the tympanum, which left branches there, and was thence reflected downwards to join the Vidian nerve.—See Otic Ganglion. This has been called the Nerve of Jacobson, Tympan'ic branch of the glosso-pharyngeal, and the inosculation, Jacobson's Anastomo'sis.

PETROUS PORTION OF TEMPORAL BONE, see Temporal Bone—p. Process, see Temporal Bone.

PETROUS SI'NUSES, Petro'sal Sinuses, are two venous sinuses of the dura mater, connected with the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and distinguished on each side, into: — 1. The superior petrosal sinus. It arises from the cavernous sinus; follows the upper edge of the petrous portion which affords it a gutter; passes into the great circumference of the tentorium cerebelli, and opens into the lateral sinus where the latter experiences a bend near the base of the pars petrosa. Its form is triangular. 2. The inferior petrosal sinus arises from the cavernous sinus at the same point as the last, with which it communicates at the moment of its origin. It descends between the inferior edge of the pars petrosa and the basilary process; and terminates in the lateral sinus, at the sinus or gulf of the internal jugular vein. It is triangular, and broader at its extremities than at the middle.

PETUM, Nicotiana tabacum.

PEUCE, Pinus sylvestris.

PEUCEA BALSAMEA, see Piuus abies.

PEUCEDANUM, P. officina'lē, P. alsat'icum seu altis'simum seu panicula'tum seu terna'tum, Seli'num peuced'anum, Mar'athrum sylves'trē, Marathrophyl'lum, Pinastel'lum, Fœnic'ulum porci'num, Bonus Ge'nius, Hog's Fennel, Sulphurwort, (F.) Queue de Pourceau, Fenouil de Porc. Family, Umbelliferæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. The root has a strong, fetid smell—somewhat resembling that of sulphureous solutions—and an acrid, unctuous, bitterish taste. It has been recommended as antihysteric and nervine.

PEUCEDANUM ALSATICUM, Peucedanum—p. Altissimum, Peucedanum—p. Officinale, Peucedanum—p. Oreoselinum, Athamanta aureoselinum—p. Paniculatum, Peucedanum—p. Pratense, P. silaus.

PEUCEDANUM SILAUS, P. praten'sē, Ses'eli praten'sē, Sium sil'aüs, Ligus'ticum sil'aüs, Cnid'ium sil'aüs, Saxif'raga vulga'ris, S. An'glica, Hippomar'athrum, Fœnic'ulum er'raticum, English or Meadow Saxifrage, (F.) Séséli des prés. The roots, leaves, and seeds have been recommended as aperients, diuretics, and carminatives. Rarely used.

PEUCEDANUM TERNATUM, Peucedanum.

PEUPLIER NOIR, Populus.

PEXIS, Concretion.

PEY'ERI GLAN'DULÆ, G. Peyeria'næ, Pey'eri Plexus glandulo'si, Gland'ulæ muco'sæ coagmina'tæ seu agmina'tæ seu mucip'aræ racema'tim conges'tæ intestino'rum, G. intestina'les seu plexifor'mes seu spu'riæ, Corpus'cula glandula'rum simil'ia seu Gland'ulæ in agmen congrega'tæ intestino'rum, Enterade'nes, Peyer's Glands, Ag'minated or aggregate glands. Small glands or follicles, situate beneath the villous coat of the intestines. They are clustered together, having a honey-comb appearance—Plaques gaufrées—and are extremely numerous. They occur most numerously in the lower portion of the ileum. Their structure and functions are not well known.

PEZA, πεζα, Doric and Arcadian for πους, 'a foot.' The foot: according to some, the sole of the foot; and to others, the astragalus. The ankle.

PEZI'ZA seu PEZE'ZA AURIC'ULA, Tremell'a auric'ula, Auricula Judæ, Auricula'ria sambu'ci seu sambu'cina, Exid'ia auric'ula Judæ, Meru'lius auric'ula, Fungus sambu'cinus, Agar'icus Auric'ulæ formâ, Jew's Ear. This fungus is said to be astringent; but has chiefly been used as a gargle in relaxed sore throat.

PFEFFERS or PFÄFFERS, MINERAL WATERS OF, Thermæ Piperi'næ, Th. faba'riæ. These springs, which are in the Swiss Alps, are simply thermal: temperature 100° of Fahrenheit.

PHACĒ, Pha'cea, Phacus, φακη; a grain of the lentil, Ervum lens. Also, chloasma; the crystalline lens; and a flask for the application of heat, so called owing to its flattened lens-like shape.

PHACELLUS, Fasciculus.

PHACELUS, Fasciculus.

PHACHYMENITIS, Phacohymenitis.

PHACI, Ephelides.

PHA'CICUS, Phaco'tus, Phaco'des; from φακη, 'lens.' Lens-shaped, lenticular.

PHACI'TIS, Phacoïdci'tis, Lenti'tis, Crystalli'tis, Gleni'tis, from φακος, 'a lens,' and itis, a termination denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the crystalline lens. Inflammation of the capsule of the lens is termed Capsi'tis, Capsuli'tis, and Crystal'lino-capsuli'tis.

PHACO'DES, Phacicus.

PHACOHYMENI'TIS, Phakomeni'tis, Phachymeni'tis, Inflamma'tio cap'sulæ lentis; from φακος, 'a lens,' 'υμην, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the capsule of the crystalline.

PHACOIDEITIS, Phacitis.

PHACOMALACIA, Cataract, soft.

PHAC'OPIS, Phaco'tus; from φακη, 'lens,' and κοπις, 'a knife;' Scalpel'lum lenticula'rē. A lenticular-shaped knife.

PHACOPS'IS, from φακη, 'lens,' and οψις, 'vision.' The state of one who has chloasma or freckles on the face.

PHACOPTIS'ANA, Pha'cium; from φακη, 'lens,' and πτισανη, 'drink.' A drink of lentils. A poultice of lentils.

PHACOS, Ervum lens.

PHACOSCOTOMA, Cataract.

PHACOTUS, Phacicus, Phacopis.

PHACUS, Phace.

PHADARODES, Trachoma tuberculosum.

PHADAROSIS, Trachoma tuberculosum.

PHÆNIGMUS, Phenigmus.

PHÆNOMENOLOGIA, Semeiology.

PHÆNOMENON, Phenomenon.

PHAGÆNA, Boulimia.

PHAGEDÆNA, Boulimia, Phagedenic ulcer—p. Sloughing of the mouth, Cancer aquaticus—p. Gangrænosa, Hospital gangrene.

PHAGEDEN'IC, Phagedæ'nicus, Depas'cens, from φαγω, 'I eat.'

PHAGEDENIC ULCER, Nomē, Phagedæ'na, Ulcus depas'cens seu obam'bulans seu feri'num, is one which rapidly eats and corrodes the neighbouring parts.

Phageden'ic, in Materia Medica, is a substance used for destroying fungous granulations in ulcers, &c.

PHAKOHYMENITIS, Phacohymenitis.

PHALACRA, Calvities.

PHALACROMA, Calvities.

PHALACROSIS, Calvities.

PHALACROTIS, Alopecia.

PHALÆNA PINGUINALIS, see Ectozoa.

PHALAIA. A barbarous term, employed by Basil Valentine to designate a universal medicine or panacea.

PHALAN'GAL, Phalan'gian, Phalangia'nus. Having relation to a phalanx.

PHALANGARTHRI'TIS, from φαλαγξ, 'a phalanx,' αρθρον, 'a joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Gout in the fingers. Inflammation of the joints of the fingers.

PHALANGE, Phalanx.

PHALANGES DES DOIGTS, see Phalanx—p. of the Fingers, see Phalanx—p. des Orteils, see Phalanx—p. of the Toes, see Phalanx.

PHALANGETTES, see Phalanx.

PHALANGETTIEN. Professor Chaussier uses this term for any thing relating to the third phalanx of the fingers or toes,—Phalangien, for what relates to the first,—and Phalanginien, to the second.

PHALANGIAN, Phalangal.

PHALANGIEN, see Phalangettien.

PHALANGINES, see Phalanx.

PHALANGINIEN, see Phalangettien.

PHALANGIUM ESCULENTUM, Scilla esculenta.

PHALANGO'SIS, Hispid'itas, from φαλαγξ, 'a row of soldiers.' An affection of the eyelids in which the lashes are arranged in two or three rows. See Trichiasis. Also, dropping of the upper eyelid, from paralysis of the levator palpebræ superioris muscle.

PHALANX, Phalan'gē, Phalango'ma. Same etymon. A name given to the small bones which form the fingers and toes, because placed alongside each other like a phalanx. They are distinguished into the Phalanges of the fingers, Ossa seu Ag'mina seu A'cies seu Artic'uli seu Scutic'ula seu Scu'tulæ seu Nodi seu Interno'dia seu Scytal'ides seu Con'dyli Digito'rum Manûs; and the Phalanges of the Toes, Ossa seu Artic'uli seu Interno'dia Digito'rum Pedis. I. Phalanges of the fingers, (F.) Phalanges des doigts. They are, in each hand, fourteen,—three to each finger, and two to the thumb; and are situate one above the other. They are distinguished, numerically, reckoning from the base towards the tip of the finger. 1. The first or metacarpal, Procon'dyli, (F.) Premières phalanges ou Phalanges métacarpiennes. 2. The second or middle phalanges, (F.) Secondes phalanges ou Phalanges moyennes, Phalangines, (Ch.) 3. The third phalanges, Metacon'dyli, Phalan'ges un'guium, (F.) Troisièmes phalanges ou Phalanges unguéales, unguifères, unguinales, Phalangettes (Ch.), which terminate each finger, and support the nail. II. Phalanges of the Toes, (F.) Phalanges des Orteils. They are the same in number as those of the fingers, but much smaller, and of a very different shape.

The phalanges of a finger or toe are united with each other; and the first with the metacarpal or metatarsal bone. They are developed from two points of ossification; one for the superior extremity, and the other for the body and inferior extremity.

PHAL'ARIS CANARIEN'SIS, P. ova'ta, Cultivated Canary Grass, (F.) Alpiste. Family, Gramineæ. Sex. Syst. Triandria Digynia. The seed of this grass, Canary seed, (F.) Graines d'aspic, afford a nourishing meal. The ancients recommended them for allaying pains in the kidney and bladder.

PHALLAL'GIA, Phallodyn'ia, from φαλλος, 'the male organ,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the male organ.

PHALLANCYLOSIS, Chordee.

PHALLI'TIS, Priapi'tis, from φαλλος, 'the male organ,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the male organ.

PHALLOCAMPSIS, Chordee.

PHALLOCARCINO'MA, from φαλλος, 'the male organ,' and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Carcinoma or cancer of the penis.

PHALLODYNIA, Phallalgia.

PHALLON'CUS, from φαλλος, 'the male organ,' and ογκος, 'swelling.' Tumefaction of the male organ.

PHALLOPSOPH'IA, from φαλλος, 'the male organ,' and ψοφος, 'a noise.' Discharge of wind from the male urethra.

PHALLORRHAG''IA, from φαλλος, 'the male organ,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break out.' Hemorrhage from the male urethra. Stimatosis.

PHALLORRHŒA, Gonorrhœa.

PHALLORRHOÏS'CHESIS, from φαλλος, 'the male organ,' ροη, 'discharge,' and ισχειν, 'to withhold.' Sudden arrest of a gonorrhœal discharge.

PHALLUS, Penis.

PHANEROG'AMOUS, Phanerogam'ic, Phanerogam'icus, from φανερος, 'evident,' and γαμος, 'marriage.' An epithet used by botanists for plants whose sexual organs are apparent. It is, consequently, the opposite to cryptogamous.

PHANTASIA, Delirium, Imagination.

PHANTASM, Phantas'ma, Phanto'ma, Phasma, from φανταζω, 'I make appear.' A phantom, false appearance, apparition. Hallucination. Derangement of the sense of sight or of the intellectual faculties, causing objects to be perceived, which are not before the eyes.

PHANTASMA, Pseudoblepsia.

PHANTASMATICUS, Phantasticus.

PHANTASMATOSCOPIA, Metamorphopsia.

PHANTASMOSCOPIA, Metamorphopsia.

PHANTAS'TICUS, Inebriant. Creating phantasms—phantasmat'icus.

PHANTOM, Fantom.

PHANTOMA, Phantasma — p. Obstetricium, Fantom.

PHARMACEIA, Poisoning.

PHARMACEUM, Apotheca.

PHARMACEUS, Apothecary.

PHARMACEUTA, Apothecary.

PHARMACEU'TIC, Pharmaceu'ticus, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine.' An epithet for every thing belonging to pharmacy. Thus, we say, Pharmaceutical preparations, &c.

PHARMACEUTICE, Pharmacy.

PHARMACEUTIST, Apothecary.

PHARMACIEN, Apothecary.

PHARMACOCATAGRAPHOLOG''IA, Catagraphology''ia, Ars for'mulas concinnan'di, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' κατα, 'beneath,' γραφη, 'a writing,' and λογος, 'a description.' The art of writing prescriptions.—J. J. Plenck.

PHARMACOCHYMIA, Chymistry, pharmaceutical.

PHARMACODYNAM'ICS, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' and δυναμις, 'power.' Pharmacodynam'icē, Dynam'ical Materia Medica, Pharmacodynam'ica doctri'na, Pharmacodynamiolog''ia. A division of pharmacology, which considers the effects and uses of medicines.

PHARMACODYNAMIOLOGIA, Pharmacodynamics.

PHARMACOGNOS'IA, Aceognos'ia, Acognos'ia, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' and γνωσις, 'knowledge.' A division of pharmacology, which treats of simples, or unprepared medicines.

PHARMACOLOGIA, Materia medica.

PHARMACOMA'NIA, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' and μανια, 'mania.' One who has a mania for prescribing or for taking medicine.

PHARMACON, Poison.

PHARMACOPŒ'IA, Pharmacopœ'a, (F.) Pharmacopée, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' and ποειω, 'I make.' A work, containing a collection of formulæ for the preparation, &c., of medicines: generally published by authority. Formerly, a chemical laboratory, Laborato'rium chym'icum seu pharmaceut'icum.

PHARMACOPŒUS, Apothecary, Druggist.

PHARMACOPOLA, Apothecary, Druggist.

PHARMACOPOLE, Apothecary, Druggist.

PHARMACOPOLI'UM, Apothe'ca, Offici'na, Taber'na Med'ica. The shop of the druggist or apothecary, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' and πωλεω, 'I sell.'

PHARMACOPOS'IA, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' and ποσις, 'a potion.' A liquid medicine, especially one that is cathartic.

PHARMACO'SA MEDICAMEN'TA, from φαρμακον, 'a poison.' Medicines that contain poisonous substances.— Fallopius.

PHARMACOTHE'CA, φαρμακοθηκη, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine,' and τιθημι, 'I place.' A case for medicines.

PHARMACOTHERAPI'A, from φαρμακον, and θεραπεια, 'treatment.' Cure of diseases by remedies.

PHARMACTER, Apothecary.

PHARMACUM, Medicament, Poison — p. Ægyptiacum, Ægyptiacum—p. Amatorium, Philter.

PHAR'MACUM AD AURES, Ægyp'tium Medicamen'tum ad Aures. A name given to a medicine, composed of bitter almonds, white pepper, saffron, myrrh, opium, frankincense, castor, verjuice, sulphate of iron, vinegar, pomegranate-bark, unguentum nardinum, &c. It was believed to be useful for cleansing fetid ulcers in the ears.

PHARMACURGICUS, Apothecary.

PHARMACURGUS, Apothecary.

PHAR'MACY, Pharmaci'a, Pharmacew'icē, Pharmax'is, from φαρμακον, 'a medicine.' The art which teaches the knowledge, choice, preservation, preparation, and combination of medicines. It was formerly divided into Galen'ical and Chym'ical. The former, called after Galen, embraced the operations undertaken on medicines without chymistry; — the latter, Chymical Pharmacy or Pharmacew'tic Chymistry, Pharmacochym'ia, comprised the preparation of medicines, founded on the chymical action of their principles.

PHARMAXIS, Pharmacy.

PHARNA'CEUM LINEA'RĒ. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Paronychiaceæ, employed at the Cape in pulmonary affections. It is generally given in infusion.

PHARUS, Pharynx.

PHARYGATHRON, Pharynx.

PHARYGETHRUM, Pharynx.

PHARYNGÆ'UM (SAL.), from pharynx. A compound of cream of tartar, nitrate of potassa, burnt alum, and distilled vinegar. It was formerly employed, united with honey and plantain-water, to make gargles, which were advised in quinsy.

PHARYNGÉ, Pharyngeal.

PHARYNGE'AL, Pharyngæ'us, (F.) Pharyngé, Pharyngien. That which relates to the pharynx. A name given to the muscles, vessels, and nerves of the pharynx.

Pharyngeal Arteries. These are two in number. The one—superior or pterygo-palatine, Ramus Pharyngæ'us supe'rior of Haller — arises from the internal maxillary at the base of the zygomatic fossa, passes through the pterygo-palatine canal, and proceeds to be distributed to the pharynx and the corresponding part of the Eustachian tube. The other — the inferior — Pharyngæ'a ascen'dens of Haller — arises from the external carotid, on a level with the facial. It ascends along the lateral and posterior part of the pharynx, and divides into two branches: the one — the pharyngeal, properly so called — is distributed to the pharynx; the other — the meningeal — gives its branches particularly to the dura mater.

Pharyngeal Nerve. A branch sent by the pneumogastric to the pharynx. It descends behind the internal carotid; communicates with the glosso-pharyngeal; and divides, opposite the middle constrictor of the pharynx, into a great number of filaments, which anastomose, in a multitude of different directions, with filaments of the glosso-pharyngeal nerve, of the superior laryngeal branch, and of the first cervical ganglion. These different nervous filaments united constitute the pharyngeal plexus, the irregular meshes of which send numerous ramifications to the pharynx.

Pharyngeal Voice, see Voice.

PHARYNGEMPHRAXIS, from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and εμφραξις, 'obstruction.' Obstruction of the pharynx.

PHARNGETHRON, Pharynx.

PHARYNGEURYSMA, Pharyngocele.

PHARYNGICUS, Pharyngeal.

PHARYNGIEN, Pharyngeal.

PHARYNGITE, Cynanche pharyngea — p. Tonsillaire, Cynanche tonsillaris.

PHARYNGITIS, Cynanche pharyngea.

Pharyngitis Apostemato'sa. Abscess of the pharynx.

Pharyngi'tis, Diphtherit'ic, Angi'na pseudo-membrana'cea, A. membrana'cea, A. pellicula'ris, A. plas'tica, A. diphtherit'ica, A. malig'na, A. pseudo-membrano'sa, A. pestilentia'lis, Pharyngoc'acē, Pseudo-membranous Inflammation of the Throat, (F.) Angine couenneuse, A. gutturale couenneuse, A. pseudo-membraneuse, A. plastique, A. diphthéritique. Diphtheritic inflammation of the pharynx. See Cynanche maligna.

Pharyngi'tis, Follic'ular, Follicular Inflammation of the Pharynx, Angi'na folliculo'sa of the Pharynx, Acne of the Throat. Inflammation and enlargement of the follicles of the pharynx, occasionally extending to the larynx. Sometimes termed Clergyman's Sorethroat, Tubercles of the Larynx and Fauces, and Tuber'cular Sorethroat.

Pharyngi'tis, Gangrenous, Cynanche maligna.

PHARYNGOCACE, Pharyngitis, diphtheritic.

PHARYNGOCE'LĒ, Pharyngeurys'ma, Diverticulum seu Hernia seu Prolap'sus Œsoph'agi vel pharyn'gis, Œsoph'agus succenturia'tus, from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' An enlargement at the upper part of the gullet, in which the food sometimes rests in considerable quantity.

PHARYNGODYN'IA, from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain in the pharynx.

PHARYNGOGLOSSAL, Glossopharyngeal, Pharyngoglossia'nus. That which belongs to the pharynx and tongue.

Pharyngoglossal Nerve, Glossopharyngeal Nerve, Lingua'lis latera'lis, (F.) Nerf Glossopharyngien, Pharyngoglossien — a portion of the eighth pair—arises from the superior and lateral parts of the spinal marrow, between the facial and pneumogastric nerves, by several filaments, which soon unite into a single cord, that passes out of the cranium by the foramen lacerum anterius; goes downwards and forwards, and gains the posterior and inferior part of the tongue. Immediately after its exit from the cranium, it gives a branch to the meatus auditorius externus, and receives a filament from the facial, and another from the pneumogastric nerve. It then furnishes two other filaments, which descend upon the carotid artery, and unite at the bottom of the neck with branches from the cervical ganglions and cardiac nerves, and give two filaments to the stylo-pharyngeus muscle. The glossopharyngeus, after sending a twig or two to the tonsil, to the upper part of the pharynx and membrane of the epiglottis, divides into many branches, which run partly to the margin, and partly to the middle of the root of the tongue; supplying, especially, the papillæ majores, and the parts in their neighbourhood.

By some, this nerve is regarded as the controller of the associated motions of the tongue and pharynx. By others, it is esteemed to be the special nerve of gustation.

PHARYNGOG'RAPHY, Pharyngogra'phia, from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOL'OGY, Pharyngolog''ia, from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOLYSIS, Pharyngoplegia.

PHARYNGOPARALYSIS, Pharyngoplegia.

PHARYNGOPLE'GIA, from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and πλησσω, 'I strike.' Dyspha'gia paralyt'ica, D. tor'pida, D. aton'ica, Angi'na paralyt'ica, Asthени'a Deglutitio'nis, Pharyngol'ysis, Pharyngoparal'ysis Paral'ysis Œsogph'agi, Gulæ Imbecil'litas. Paralysis of the pharynx or œsophagus: commonly a symptom of general paralysis, or of approaching dissolution.

PHARYNGORRHAG''IA; from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and ραγη, 'rupture.' Hemorrhage from the vessels of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOSPAS'MUS; from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Spasm or cramp of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOSTAPHYLINUS, Palato-pharyngeus.

PHARYNGOTOME, Pharyngot'omus, from φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' An instrument, invented by J. L. Petit, used to scarify inflamed tonsils, and to open abscesses, which form in the parietes of the pharynx. It is composed of a long, narrow blade with a lancet point, enclosed in a sheath or canula of silver slightly curved. This instrument is carried to the part to be cut, and the point of the blade is made to pass out of the sheath, by pressing on a button at the end of the pharyngotome. A spring causes the blade to re-enter as soon as the pressure is removed.

PHARYNGOT'OMY, Pharyngotom'ia; same etymon. Some authors have used this word synonymously with œsophagotomy. It means, also, scarification of the tonsils, or an incision, made for opening abscesses there, &c.

PHARYNX, Pharyx, Pharus, Gula, Læmos, Fauces, Pharyg'ethrum, Pharyn'gethron, Pharyn'gethros, Pharygathron, Isthmos, Isth'mion, Inglu'vies, Princip'ium Gulæ, Os post'erum, (F.) Arrière-bouche, Gosier. A species of musculo-membranous, symmetrical canal, on the median line, irregularly funnel-shaped, and situate between the base of the cranium and the œsophagus, in front of the vertebral column. It is very narrow above; but dilates in the middle, and again contracts below, at its junction with the œsophagus. Into the anterior paries of the pharynx open, successively, from above to below, — the posterior orifices of the nasal fossæ; the Eustachian tubes; the posterior aperture of the mouth, and the top of the larynx. The pharynx is formed, externally, of a muscular coat, and, internally, of a mucous membrane, which is continuous, above, with the Schneiderian membrane; and in the middle, with that of the mouth; below, with that of the œsophagus; and, at the sides, with that of the Eustachian tubes. This membrane has no villi, and presents only a few inequalities, which are owing to the presence of muciparous follicles. The muscular coat of the pharynx is composed of the constrictor muscles, stylopharyngei, and pharyngostaphylini. The vessels and nerves are called pharyngeal. The pharynx serves as a common origin for the digestive and respiratory passages. It gives passage to the air, during respiration; and to the food at the time of deglutition.

PHARYNX, FOLLICULAR INFLAMMATION OF THE, Pharyngitis, follicular.

PHARYX, Pharynx.

PHASELUS, Phaseolus.

PHASE'OLUS, P. Vulga'ris, Phasi'olus, Phase'lus, Fase'lus, Fase'olus, Bona, Boona, Faba; the Kidney Bean; the French Bean, (F.) Haricot. Family, Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. When young and well boiled, this is easy of digestion, and delicately flavoured. It is less flatulent than the pea.

PHASEOLUS CRETICUS, Cajan, Cayan. A decoction of the leaves, according to Ray, restrains the hemorrhoidal flux when excessive.

PHASEOLUS VULGARIS, Phascolus.

PHASIA'NUS GALLUS, so called from the river Φασις, in Colchis, near the Black Sea: (F.) Coq The parts of generation of the cock, dried and pulverized, were formerly regarded as proper for increasing the quantity of semen. The fat was used as emollient and resolvent; the brain, in diarrhœa; the gall, in freckles and diseases of the eyes. These phantasies are now abandoned.

PHASIOLUS, Phaseolus.

PHASMA, Phantasm.

PHATNE, Alveolus.

PHATNION, Alveolus.

PHATNORRHAG''IA, Stomatorrhag''ia alveolo'rum, from φατνιον, 'an alveolus,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Hemorrhage from the alveoli.

PHAUSIN'GES, φαυσιγγες, plural of φαυσιγξ, from φαυζω, 'I roast.' Spots or blisters on the legs, produced by heat; and, in a more extensive signification, by any other cause. Also, a pustule.—Foësius.

PHELLANDRE, Phellandrium aquaticum.

PHELLAN'DRIUM AQUAT'ICUM, Phellandrium, Œnan'thē phellan'drium seu aquat'ica, Ligus'ticum phellan'drium, Fœnic'ulum aquat'icum, Cicuta'ria aquatica, Water Fennel, Fine-leaved Water Hemlock, (F.) Phellandre, Fenouil d'eau, Ciguë d'eau. Family, Umbelliferæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. This plant is stimulant and narcotic. It has been used in intermittents and dyspepsia. It has, also, been given in phthisis pulmonalis, and in cases of scrofulous atonic ulcers.

PHENIG'MUS, Phœnig'mus, Phœnig'mus, from φοινιξ, 'red.' Red Jaundice. A cutaneous affection, consisting of redness diffused over the skin, without fever. Sauvages makes it a genus of his order Icteritiæ. Also, the act of irritating a part by a stimulating application.

PHÉNOMÈNE, Phenomenon.

PHENOM'ENON, Phœnom'enon, (F.) Phénomène, from φαινομαι, 'I appear. An extraordinary and unexpected event. In Medicine, it means any change, appreciable by our senses, which supervenes in an organ or function: — as the phenomena of the circulation, respiration, &c. It is used in pathology, synonymously with symptom.

PHEUGOPHOBIA, Hydrophobia.

PHEUGYDRON, Hydrophobia.

PHI'ALA, A Phial or Vial, (F.) Fiole. A small bottle, in which apothecaries are in the habit of sending out their mixtures, draughts, &c.: hence called Med'icine Vials, (F.) Fioles à Médecine. They are usually sold in grosses, and assorted into vials of oz. 8; oz. 4; oz. 3; oz. 2; oz. 1½; oz. 1; and oz. ½.

PHILADYNAMICA, Debilitants.

PHILANTHROPUS, Galium aparine.

PHILETRON, Philter.

PHILETRUM, Lacuna labii superioris.

PHILIATROS, φιλιατρος, from φιλεω, 'I love,' and ιατρικη, 'medicine.' An amateur of medicine. One who studies medicine; Studio'sus medici'næ.

PHILOBIO'SIS, (F.) Philobiosie: from φιλεω, 'I love,' and βιος, 'life.' The love of life.

PHILŒ'NIA, from φιλεω, 'I love,' and οινος, 'wine.' Love of wine. Addiction to wine.

PHILOGYNIA, Muliebrositas.

PHILONIUM LONDINENSE, Confectio opii.

PHILOPATRIDALGIA, Nostalgia.

PHILOPATRIDOMANIA, Nostalgia.

PHILOSOPHER'S STONE, see Alchymy.

PHILTER, from φιλεω, 'I love.' Philtrum, Phil'etron, Phar'macum vel Poc'ulum amato'rium, Amato'rium venefic''ium, (F.) Philtre. A medicine or drink considered capable of causing love.

PHILTRUM, Lacuna labii superioris.

PHILYRA, Tilia.

PHIMA, Phyma.

PHIMOS, Capistrum.

PHIMO'SICUS. Relating to Phimosis.

Sauvages calls Ischu'ria phimo'sica, Ischu'ria urethra'lis à phimo'si, the retention of urine which depends upon phimosis.

PHIMO'SIS, Phymo'sis, Capistra'tio, Epago'gium, Ligatu'ra glandis, Strictu'ra præpu'tii,

Reduc'tio præpu'tii impedi'ta, from φιμοω, 'I bind up.' A disease which consists in a preternatural narrowness of the opening of the prepuce, so that it cannot be carried behind the corona glandis. This affection is most commonly congenital. Sometimes it is accidental, and dependent upon tumefaction of the glans, or of the prepuce, as occurs in syphilis. To remedy this state, the prepuce may be divided by means of a bistoury and director; or circumcision may be practised.

Phimo'sis Œdemato'des, Hydrophimo'sis. Phimosis with œdematous swelling of the prepuce.

Phimosis Puerilis, Ph. adnata.

PHLASMA, Contusion.

PHLEBARTERIODIALYSIS, see Aneurism.

PHLEBECTA'SIA, Phlebec'tasis, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of a vein, or of a portion of a vein.—Alibert.

PHLÉBECTIARCTIE. A mongrel term, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and arcto, 'I contract.' Contraction of a vein.

PHLEBES, (Arteries.) See Artery.

PHLEBEURYSMA, Varix.

PHLEB'ION, diminutive of φλεψ, 'a vein.' A vein.—Hippocrates. A small vein,—Ve'nula.

PHLEBIS'MUS; from φλεψ, φλεβις, 'a vein.' A term employed by Dr. Marshall Hall for the turgescence of veins, produced by impeded return of the blood. See Trachelismus.

PHLEBI'TIS, Inflamma'tio vena'rum, (F.) Inflammation des veines, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and itis, the termination for inflammation. Inflammation of the inner membrane of a vein, which sometimes follows blood-letting, and extends from the small wound made in that operation to the neighbouring parts of the venous system. The symptoms are, first, inflammation in the punctured part; and, afterwards, a knotty, tense, painful cord, following the direction of the vessel, and accompanied with more or less fever, according to the extent of the inflammation, the nervous symptoms, &c. Phlebitis, also, sometimes supervenes on the ligature or excision of varices; after amputation, gun-shot wounds, delivery (Uterine Phlebitis, Metro-phlebi'tis puerpera'lis, Phlebi'tis uteri'na, Metri'tis veno'sa), the ligature of the umbilical cord, &c. It may terminate by resolution, suppuration, ulceration, or gangrene.

Phlebitis, Crural, Phlegmatia dolens—p. Uterina, see Peritonitis, and Phlebitis.

PHLEBOG'RAPHY, Phlebogra'phia, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the veins.

PHLEB'OLITE, Phlebol'ithus, Vein stone, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and λιθος, 'a stone.' A loose concretion, varying in size from that of a currant to that of a pea, occasionally found in the veins. It would seem to be formed in the blood.

PHLEBOLITHUS, Phlebolite.

PHLEBOL'OGY, Phlebolog''ia, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the veins.

PHLEBOPA'LIA, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and παλλω, 'I palpitate.' With the ancients, pulsation, which they conceived to be produced by the veins. See Pulsus venarum.

PHLEBOPHTHALMOTOM'IA, Ophthalmophlebotom'ia, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' οφθαλμος, 'the eye,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' Blood-letting in the eye.

PHLEBOPLERO'SIS ECPHRACTICA, Inflammation.

PHLEBORRHAG''IA, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and ρηγνυμι, 'I break out.' Rupture of the veins; and, in a more extensive sense, venous hemorrhage.

PHLEBORRHEX'IS, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Rupture of a vein. Also, hemorrhage from a vein, Phleborrhag''ia.

PHLEBOSTENO'SIS; from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and στενωσις, 'contraction.' Constriction or contraction of a vein.

PHLEBOT'OMIST, from φλεψ, 'a vein,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' A bleeder. One who practises particularly the art of phlebotomy. See Blood-letting.

PHLEBOTOMUM, Fleam.

PHLEBOTOMY, see Blood-letting.

PHLEBS, Vein.

PHLEDONIA, Delirium.

PHLEGM, Phlegma, Pitui'ta, Pit'uite, Mucus, (F.) Pituite. One of the four natural humours of the ancients, which, according to them, was cold and moist, as atrabilis was cold and dry. It predominated, especially, in winter.

Pituita was afterwards applied to every aqueous or excrementitious humour, such as the saliva, nasal and intestinal mucus, serum, &c. The terms phlegm and pituita are no longer used in physiology,—the different humours having received particular names; but the vulgar still use phlegm to designate a stringy mucus, expectorated, or rejected by vomiting. The ancient chymists gave the name 'phlegm' to aqueous, insipid, and inodorous products obtained by subjecting moist vegetable matters to the action of heat.

PHLEGMA NARIUM CRASSUM, Nasal mucus—p. Vitrioli, Sulphuric acid (very dilute.)

PHLEG'MAGOGUE, Phlegmago'gus; from φλεγμα, 'phlegm,' and αγω, 'I expel.' A medicine, formerly believed capable of "cutting" or removing phlegm.

PHLEGMAPYRA, Fever adeno-meningeal.

PHLEGMASIA, Inflammation, Phlegmon—p. Adenosa, Adenitis—p. Alba dolens puerperarum, Ph. dolens—p. Cellularis, Induration of the cellular tissue—p. Glandulosa, Adenitis—p. Myoica, Myositis—p. of the Peritoneum, Peritonitis.

PHLEGMA'TIA, from φλεγμα, 'phlegm. Œdema, Anasarca, Hydrops.

Phlegma'tia Dolens, P. lac'tea, P. dolens puerpera'rum, P. alba dolens puerpera'rum, Leucophlegmasia dolens puerperarum, Scelon'cus, Scelal'gia puerpera'rum, Anasar'ca sero'sa, Ecphy'ma œdemat'icum, Spargano'sis puerperarum, Ecchymo'ma lymphat'icum, Is'chias a spargano'si, Œde'ma puerperarum, Œd. lacteum, Infarc'tus lac'tei extremita'tum, Metas'tasis lactis, Hysteral'gia galac'tica, Hydrophlegma'sia textûs cellulo'si, Crural Phlebi'tis, White leg, Swelled leg, Milk leg, White swelling of lying in women, (F.) Œdème des nouvelles accouchées, Œdème douloureux des femmes en couche, Dépot laiteux sur la cuisse, Œdème actif des nouvelles accouchées, Enflure ou Engorgement des jambes et des cuisses de la femme accouchée, E. laiteux des membres abdominaux. It occurs, for the most part, in the second or third week after delivery:—is limited to the lower extremity, and chiefly to one side; exhibiting to the touch a feeling of numerous irregular prominences under the skin. It is hot, white, and unyielding; and is accompanied, sooner or later, with febrile excitement. After a few days, the heat, hardness, and sensibility diminish, and the limb remains œdematous for a longer or shorter period. The disease frequently, if not generally, consists in the obstruction of the iliac or other veins. Owing to the pressure of the gravid uterus—the flow of blood being obstructed—the serous part of it is thrown out into the cellular membrane of the limb. Sometimes the vein is found completely obliterated.

The treatment consists in the use of antiphlogistics: — the application of leeches or cupping-glasses near the groin: fomentations to the limb, &c.; and, when the active state has subsided, the use of a roller, applied gently at first, but, afterwards, gradually tightened.

PHLEGMATIA LACTEA, P. dolens.

PHLEGMATIÆ, see Empresma—p. Membranosæ et parenchymatosæ, Empresma.

PHLEGMATOPYRA, Fever, adeno-meningeal.

PHLEGMATORRHAG''IA, Phlegmatorrhœ'a, Catarrh, from φλεγω, 'phlegm,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Stahl and his partisans gave this name to a copious secretion, by the nostrils, of a limpid and thin mucus, without inflammation. It is the Cory'za Phlegmatorrhag''ia of Sauvages. See Coryza.

PHLEGMHYMENITIS, Phlegmymenitis.

PHLEGMON, from φλεγω, 'I burn.' Phlogo'sis phleg'monē, Phleg'monē, Phlegma'sia, Incen'dium, Inflamma'tio. Inflammation of the areolar texture accompanied with redness, circumscribed swelling, increased heat and pain; which is, at first, tensive and lancinating; afterwards, pulsatory and heavy. It is apt to terminate in suppuration. It requires the antiphlogistic treatment, until suppuration seems inevitable, when the suppuration must be encouraged as the next favourable termination to resolution.

PHLEGMON PÉRINÉPHRÉTIQUE, Periphrenitis.

PHLEGMONE, Inflammation — p. Mammæ, Mastodynia apostematosa — p. Mastodynia, Mastodynia apostematosa — p. Parotidæa, Parotis — p. Peritonæi, Peritonitis—p. Parulis, Parulis—p. Musculorum, Myositis — p. Ventriculi, Gastritis.

PHLEGMONODES, Phlegmonous.

PHLEGMONOID, Phlegmonous.

PHLEG'MONOUS, Phlegmono'des, Phleg'monoid, from φλεγμονη, 'a phlegmon,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' That which relates or belongs to or resembles phlegmon.

PHLEGMONOUS INFLAMMATION is the active inflammation of the areolar membrane; in contradistinction to erysipelatous inflammation, or that of the skin.

PHLEGMOPYRA, Fever, adeno-meningeal.

PHLEGMORRHAGIA, Blennorrhœa.

PHLEGMORRHAGIE PULMONAIRE, Bronchorrhœa.

PHLEGMORRHŒA, Blennorrhœa.

PHLEGMYMENI'TIS, Phlegmhymeni'tis, from φλεγμα, 'phlegm,' 'υμην, 'a membrane,' and ιτις, the termination for inflammation. Inflammation of a mucous membrane.

PHLEGMYMENITIS ENTERICA, see Enteritis.

PHLEPS, Vein.

PHLOGIA, Inflammation.

PHLOGICUS, Inflammatory.

PHLOGISTIC, Inflammatory.

PHLOGISTICI, Empresma.

PHLOGISTON, Hydrogen.

PHLOGMUS, Verbascum thapsus.

PHLOGO'DES, from φλοξ, 'flame,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Infla'med, Inflamma'tus, Inflammato'rius, Inflammatory. An epithet employed particularly to express the red colour of the face.

PHLOGOPYRUS, Synocha.

PHLOGOSED, Inflamed.

PHLOGO'SIS, Incen'dium, Inflamma'tion. Some writers use this word exclusively for external inflammation — phlegmon; others, for that which is superficial or erysipelatous.

PHLOGOT'ICA, Inflammations. The second order in the class Hæmatica of Good.

PHLOIOS, Cortex.

PHLOMUS, Verbascum thapsus.

PHLOOS, Cortex.

PHLOR'IDZINE, Phloridzi'na, Phloridzin, from φλοος, 'inner bark,' and ριζα, 'root.' The bitter or active principle of the root and trunk of the apple, pear, cherry, and plum tree. It is deposited from the decoction on cooling; crystallizes in silky spicula of a dead white colour, when in masses, or in long slender prisms or tables, when crystallized with care. 1000 parts of water, at a temperature of from 32° to 71°, only dissolve about one part; but at from 70° to 212°, it is dissolved in all proportions. It is very soluble in pure alcohol, but only slightly so in ether; s. g. 1.429. It has been administered successfully in intermittents,—10 to 20 grains being generally required to arrest the paroxysm. It may be given either in the form of pill or powder.

PHLOUS, Cortex.

PHLOX, Verbascum thapsus.

PHLYCTÆ'NA, Phlyctæ'nis, Phlyctis, Phlyza'cion, Ampullæ, Holophlyc'tides, Phlyc'tides, Phlysis, from φλυζω, 'I boil.' Tumours formed by the accumulation of a serous fluid under the epidermis.

PHLYCTÆNULA, see Hydatid.

PHLYC'TENOID, Phlyctenoï'des. Resembling phlyctænæ. An epithet for a variety of herpes.

PHLYCTEN'ULAR, same etymon as Phlyctæna. Of or belonging to phlyctænula,—as phlyctenular ophthalmia, inflammation of the eye, accompanied with phlyctænulæ on the cornea.

PHLYCTIDES, Phlyctæna.

PHLYCTID'IUM, same etymon. A circular or annular spot of inflammation of the corium, encircled by a red ring or zone, within which suppuration takes place. The genuine small-pox pustule, and that produced by the application of tartar emetic ointment, are examples of it.

PHLYCTIS, Phlyctæna.

PHLYSIS, from φλυζω, 'I am hot,' 'I boil.' A cutaneous eruption. An ulcerative, subcutaneous tumour: flat, tensive, glabrous; diffused, hot, throbbing; at length fluctuating, with an acrid ichor. — Good.

PHLYSIS, Phlyctæna — p. Ecthyma, Ecthyma — p. Impetigo, Impetigo—p. Porrigo, Porrigo — p. Scabies, Psora.

PHLYZACIA, Ecthyma.

PHLYZACION, Phlyctæna.

PHOBODIPSON, Hydrophobia.

PHOCOM'ELES, from φωκη, 'a seal,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A genus of monsters, in which the limbs are shortened; the hands and feet appearing to exist alone, and to be inserted immediately on the trunk, as in the seals and the herbivorous cetacea. — J. G. St. Hilaire.

PHŒNICISMUS, Rubeola.

PHŒNIGMUS, Phenigmus — p. Petechialis, Purpura simplex.

PHŒNIX DACTYLIFERA, Date tree — p. Excelsa, Date tree.

PHONA'TION, Phona'tio, from φωνη, 'voice.' The physiology of the voice.

PHONE, Voice.

PHO'NICA, φωνικα, from φωνη, 'voice.' The first order of the class Pneumatica, in Good's Nosology. Defined: diseases affecting the vocal avenues: — the passage of the voice impeded, or its power suppressed or depraved.

PHONON'OSI, Phononu'si, from φωνη, 'the voice,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' Phonopathi'æ, Morbi vocis. Diseases of the voice.

PHONOPATHIA, Phononosi.

PHORA, Gestation.

PHORBE, Pabulum.

PHORONOM'IA, from φορεομαι, or φερομαι, 'I put myself in motion,' and νομος, 'law.' The doctrine of muscular motion.

PHOROUS, from φερω, 'I carry.' A suffix denoting conveyance. Hence, Galacto*phorous*, &c.

PHOS, Light.

PHOSPHAS CALCICUM STIBIATUM, Antimonial powder—p. Calcis stibiatus, Antimonial powder—p. Natricum, Soda, phosphate of.

PHOSPHAT'IC, Phosphat'icus, from Phosphorus. Relating to the phosphates; hence the Phosphat'ic Diath'esis is the habit of body which favours the deposition of the phosphates from the urine.

PHOSPHÈNE, Photopsia.

PHOSPHORE, Phosphorus.

PHOSPHORÉNÈSES. M. Baumes unites, under this generic name, diseases which he attributes to disordered phosphorization; i. e. to excess or deficiency of calcareous phosphate or its decomposition. Amongst these affections he ranks rachitis, osteo-malacia, and gout.

PHOSPHORES'CENCE, Phosphorescen'tia. The properties possessed by certain bodies of being luminous in obscurity, or under particular circumstances.

PHOS'PHORIC ACID, Ac"idum phosphor'icum, (F.) Acide phosphorique. A solid, colourless compound; highly sapid; very soluble in water, and vitrifiable by fire. It exists in bones combined with lime. It has been employed in medicine in the form of lemonade, in passive hemorrhage, typhus, phthisis, marasmus, &c., and in injection in cases of cancer of the uterus. It does not seem preferable to other acids.

PHOSPHORURIA, Urine, phosphorescent.

PHOS'PHORUS, Phos'phorum, Autophos'phorus, Ignis philosoph'icus, Lumen constans, from φως, 'light,' and φερω, 'I carry.' (F.) Phosphore. 'A light carrier.' An elementary or undecomposed substance; not metallic; solid; transparent or semitransparent; colourless; brilliant; flexible; of a sensible garlic odour; very inflammable, and susceptible of combining with the oxygen of the atmosphere, at even the ordinary temperature. It does not exist pure in nature, but is found frequently united to other bodies. Its fumes in the manufacture of lucifer and congreve matches have caused, it is said, necrosis of the lower jaw—'phosphorus jaw disease.'

Phosphorus has been used in medicine, dissolved in ether or suspended in the yolk of egg, as a stimulant; but the greatest precautions are necessary in its administration: hence it is rarely employed.

PHOSPHORUS JAW DISEASE, see Phosphorus.

PHOSPHURIA, Urine, phosphorescent. See Urine.

PHOTODAMPSIS, Refraction.

PHOTOMA'NIA, from φως, 'light,' and mania. Insane delirium induced by light.

PHOTOPHO'BIA, from φως, φωτος, 'light,' and φοβος, 'fear.' Aversion to light:—intolerance of light. Nyctalopia.

PHOTOPHOBICUS, Lucifugus.

PHOTOPHOBOPHTHALMIA, Nyctalopia.

PHOTOPHOBUS, Lucifugus.

PHOTOP'SIA, Visus lu'cidus, from φως, 'light,' and ωψ, 'the eye.' (F.) Phosphène. A false perception of light, as of sparks, flashes of fire, &c., occasioned by certain conditions of the retina and brain, and by pressure on the eyeball. When pressure does not induce the luminous appearance, the existence of amaurosis may be inferred. See Metamorphopsia.

PHOTU'RIA, from φως, 'light,' and ουρον, urine.' A luminous condition of the urine.

PHRAGMOS, φραγμος, from φρασσω, 'I enclose.' A row of teeth.

PHRASIS, Voice, articulated.

PHRASUM, Marrubium.

PHREN, φρην, 'the mind.' Also, the diaphragm and scrobiculus cordis.

PHRENAUX'Ē, Hypertroph'ia cer'ebri; from φρην, 'the mind, the organ of mind,' and αυξη, 'increase.' Hypertrophy of the brain.

PHRENATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia cer'ebri; from φρην, 'the mind, the organ of mind,' a, priv., and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Wasting or atrophy of the brain.

PHRENES, Diaphragm.

PHRENESIA, Phrenitis.

PHRÉNÉSIE, Phrenitis.

PHRENESIS, Delirium, Phrenitis.

PHRENETIASIS, Delirium, Phrenitis.

PHRENETISMUS, Phrenitis.

PHRENIC, Diaphragmatic.

PHRE'NICA, from φρην, 'the mind.' Diseases affecting the intellect; characterized by error, perversion, or debility of one or more of the mental faculties, (Phrenopathi'a.) The first order of the class Neurotica of Good. Also, remedies that affect the mental faculties—Phren'ics. Pereira.

PHRENICS, see Phrenica.

PHRENICULA HYDROCEPHALICA, Hydrocephalus internus.

PHRENISMUS, Phrenitis.

PHRENI'TIS, Phren'esis, Phrene'sia, Phreneti'asis, Phrenis'mus, Phrenetis'mus, Cephali'tis, Cephalal'gia inflammato'ria, Karabitus (Arab.), Sibare, Sphacelis'mus cer'ebri, Empres'ma cephali'tis, Siri'asis, Seiri'asis, Sidera'tio, Inflamma'tio phreni'tis, Encephali'tis, Cauma phreni'tis, Phrensy, Delirium, Brain Fever, (F.) Phrénésie, Inflammation du cerveau et du cervelet, from φρην, 'the mind,' and itis, denoting inflammation. A disease characterized by violent pyrexia, pain in the head, redness of the face and eyes, intolerance of light and sound, watchfulness, and delirium, either furious or muttering. Its causes are the same as those of other inflammations: sometimes, however, it is induced by a Coup de soleil; by inebriation; violent mental emotions, &c. Some authors have given the name Phrenitis and Meningitis to inflammation of the membranes of the brain; and that of Cephalitis, Encephalitis, or Cerebritis to inflammation of the substance of the brain; but there are no pathognomic symptoms, which can lead us to refer the seat of the disease to either of those parts exclusively. Phrenitis is, of course, a very dangerous affection, from the importance of the organ concerned. The most active treatment must necessarily be pursued. Repeated bleeding; purging; the application of ice to the shaved head; a position in which the head is raised; and the avoiding of irritation of every kind;—form the remedial means during the violent stage. After this has yielded, counter-irritants to the nape of the neck or to other parts of the body will be useful adjuvants. When the brain and meninges were affected only symptomatically, as in inflammation of the diaphragm, the disease was formerly called Paraphrenitis.

Hydrocephalus acutus is a variety of phrenitis.

PHRENITIS CALENTURA, Coup-de-soleil—p. Latrans, Hydrophobia—p. Potatorum, Delirium tremens—p. Verminosa, Vercoquin.

PHRENOLOGY, Craniology.

PHRENO-MAG'NETISM, Phreno-mesmer-

ism. A term applied to the condition of a mesmerized person, in which, when any cerebral or phrenological organ—so called—is touched, the functions of the organ are manifested. It has been established, that no such phenomena can be elicited in children, or in those who have never seen a phrenological cast or picture.

PHRENOPARALYSIS, see Paralysis.

PHRENOPATHIA, see Phrenica.

PHRENOPATHI'A ÆTHE'REA. The aggregate of encephalic phenomena induced by the inhalation of ether.

PHRENSY, Phrenitis.

PHRICASMUS, Horripilation.

PHRICE, Horripilation.

PHRICIA, Horripilation.

PHRICIASIS, Horripilation.

PHRICO'DES (FEBRIS,) from φρικη, 'a shivering;' Horrif'ica. A fever in which the chill is very intense and prolonged.

PHRYAGMA, Shuddering.

PHRYCTE, Colophonia.

PHRYG''IUS (LAPIS.) An earthy matter, found in Phrygia and Cappadocia, and formerly employed as an astringent.—Gorræus.

PHTHARMA CALIGO, Caligo—p. Cataracta, Cataract—p. Glaucoma, Glaucoma.

PHTHEIR, Pediculus.

PHTHEIRE'MIA; from φθειρω, 'I corrupt,' and 'αιμα, 'blood. A state in which the plastic powers of the blood are deteriorated.

PHTHEIRI'ASIS, Phthiriasis, from φθειρ, 'a louse;' Morbus pediculo'sus, M. pediicula'ris, Pruri'go pedicula'ris, Pedicula'tio, Malis pedic'uli, Peta'lē, Lousiness, Lousy disease, (F.) Maladie pédiculaire, Phthiriase. A disease which consists in the excessive multiplication of lice on the human body, under conditions in which it does not ordinarily take place, and in spite of cleanliness. It has been asserted that the affection has often caused death. Simple and medicated baths have been recommended for its removal; lotions of the decoction or infusion of tobacco and staves-acre, mercurial frictions, &c.

PHTHEIRIUM, Delphinium staphisagria.

PHTHEIROCTONUM, Delphinium staphisagria.

PHTHINAS, Phthisis.

PHTHIROPORON, Autumn.

PHTHISES: same etymon as Phthisis. In the classification of Fuchs, diseases attended with ulceration, hectic fever, and emaciation.

PHTHISIC, Phthisis.

PHTHISICAL, Phthisicus.

PHTHIS'ICUS, Phthino'des, Phthis'ical, Tis'ical, (F.) Poitrinaire; same etymon as phthisis. Belonging to phthisis. Also, one labouring under phthisis.

PHTHISIOSIS, Tubercular consumption.

PHTHISI-PNEUMONIA, Phthisis pulmonalis.

PHTHISIS, Phthoē, Phthinas, Tabes, Te'cedon. Consumption, Decline, Phthis'ic, Tis'ic; from φθιω, 'I dry, I fade.' This word, taken in a general sense, means progressive emaciation of every part of the body. It is usually, however, restricted to phthisis pulmonalis.

PHTHISIS, BLACK, see Anthracosis.

PHTHISIS, BRON'CHIAL, Phthisis bronchia'lis. Phthisis occasioned by the pressure of enlarged tuberculous bronchial glands, which, not unfrequently, communicate with caverns in the lungs, or with the bronchia.

PHTHISIS CALCULOSA, Lithiasis pulmonum.

PHTHISIS, CAN'CEROUS, Scirrhus, Carcinoma et Fungus Pulmo'num, Med'ullary or Enceph'aloid Tumour of the Lung, (F.) Cancer du Poumon. Cancer of the lung, which gives rise to carcinomatous phthisis, (F.) Phthisie carcinomateuse, of Bayle.

PHTHISIS LARYNGE'A, Chronic Laryngi'tis, Laryngi'tis et Trachei'tis chron'ica, Tuberculo'sis laryn'gis et trache'æ, Laryn'go et Tracheophthisis, Laryngophthisis, Ul'cera seu Helco'sis Laryngis, (F.) Phthisie laryngée, Ulcère du larynx, Laryngite avec sécrétion de Pus, is a species of consumption analogous to phthisis pulmonalis, produced by inflammation and ulceration of the interior of the larynx, and sometimes by caries of the cartilages. Phthisis trachea'lis, Trachcophthi'sis, is a similar affection, seated in the trachea. Chronic inflammation of the larynx and trachea may exist, however, without tubercles or phthisis.

This, at least, predisposes to it; and but a slight exciting cause may be required to rouse the predisposition into action. It is less a disease of the torrid zone; and, in the temperate regions of the globe, its pathology is often intimately allied with that of scrofula. It consists in the formation of tubercles in the lungs, which sooner or later inflame and break down. In such a constitution, ulcerations of the lungs do not readily heal; and hectic fever—the universal attendant upon irritability and debility—is established. This persists, and gradually wears down the patient, till he ultimately expires, exhausted by the irritative fever. The chief symptoms are the following. The patient feels a sense of uneasiness in the chest, with severe fits of coughing, or a short and dry cough with dyspnœa. This may be considered the incipient stage. The cough then becomes extremely troublesome, especially in the morning; and dyspnœa is increased on the slightest exertion. The expectoration is evidently purulent, with fever in the evening, and circumscribed redness of the cheeks; wasting and colliquative sweats early in the morning. This must be considered the confirmed stage,—Phthisis consumma'ta, Pneumophthi'sis. In the third, or last stage, the hectic is constant, with small pulse, pungent heat, colliquative sweats, and diarrhœa. The weakness becomes extreme, and the patient exhausted. Physical Signs. — 1. In the first stage, whilst there are yet scattered miliary tubercles,—the only appreciable change at the exterior of the chest, and this is not constant, is a want of freedom in the movements under one or both clavicles. Percussion will generally discover a slight diminution of sound corresponding to the summit of one lung. In the same situation, auscultation shows that the inspiratory murmur is either weaker, rougher, or confused. The sound of expiration is more distinct. The voice and cough are rather more resonant, and wheezing or mucous râles are occasionally heard in the same region. 2. When the tubercular deposition has become more abundant, the motion of the chest is more markedly diminished under one or both clavicles. The loss of sound on percussion is more distinct, the inspiration, on auscultation, is bronchial, the expiration louder and more superficial, and the resonance of the voice and cough is increased. The rest of the lung is perhaps healthy, or the respiration may be puerile. 3. When the tubercles are undergoing softening, —in addition to the preceding signs, auscultation exhibits a subcrepitant râle around the apex of the lung, decreasing from above downwards. It is most distinct during or after the cough, and at the close of a deep inspiration. As the disease proceeds, the bubbling becomes successively larger, and ultimately gargouillement is heard. The inspiration and expiration are cavernous or tracheal. The voice and cough indicate unusual resonance and pectoriloquy. The intercostal spaces are often depressed locally, and percussion may become gradually clearer and even tympanitic as the cavern increases.

It is only in the incipient state of this formidable disease, that advantage can be expected from any plan of treatment; and of all means that can be devised, that of removing to a climate in which air and exercise can be daily enjoyed during the autumnal, winter, and spring months is the best. See Climate. If this be impracticable, the patient must be kept in a regulated temperature, taking care that the chamber be duly ventilated; and gestation in the open air be used, whenever the atmosphere, although cold, is dry. The other indications will be: 1. To moderate inflammatory action: 2. To support the strength; and, 3. To palliate urgent symptoms. The whole treatment indeed is palliative. Counter-irritants relieve pain: demulcents and mild opiates alleviate the cough: the mineral acids, united with opium, relieve the colliquative sweats; and chalk and opium the diarrhœa.

Dr. Wilson Philip has pointed out a particular species of phthisis, which is characterized, in the early stage, by a deranged state of the digestive organs; flatulent, irregular bowels; furred tongue; impaired appetite; unnatural fæces; and the epigastric region more or less full and tender on pressure. The affection of the lungs is here secondary. He calls it Dyspeptic phthisis.

PHYMA, Phima, from φυομαι, 'I spring up.' With the ancients, this word was used with great latitude: sometimes, in the sense of phlegmon, for tumours larger than a boil, and perfectly suppurative. In the nosology of Sauvages, Phymata is an order of diseases, to which he refers erysipelas, œdema, phlegmon, emphysema, scirrhus, &c. In that of Dr. Good it is a genus, including hordeolum, furunculus, sycosis, and anthrax.

PHYSIOG'NOMY, Physiognom'ia, Physiognom'ica, Physiognom'icē, Physionom'ia, Physiognomon'ia, Physiognom'onē, Physiognomos'ynē, Physiognomosia, Anthroposcop'ia, Prosopomanti'a, Prosopolog''ia, Semiot'icē fa'ciei, Physiognomon'iea, Physiognom'ony, Metopos'copy, Prosopo'sis, from φυσις, 'nature,' and γνωμη, 'knowledge.' The art of knowing the dispositions of men from their external appearance; especially from the features. Every inference of this kind must necessarily be extremely fallacious, and cannot be reduced to rule, as was attempted by Lavater and others. In infantile diseases, numerous shades of expression are evident, which experience teaches how to appreciate; and which afford useful guides in understanding the pathology of that period of existence.

PHYSIOLOGICE, Physiology.

PHYSIOL'OGY, Physiolog''ia, Biol'ogy, Bion'omy, Biot'ics, Biophænomenolog''ia, Physiolog''icē, Œconom'ia anima'lis, Anatom'ia viva, Anat'omē anima'ta, Anthropolog''ia, Microcosmogra'phia, Microcos'mica scien'tia, Cognit''io physiolog''ica, Pars natura'lis medici'næ, Philosoph'ia cor'poris vivi; from φυσις, 'nature,' and λογος, 'a description.' Formerly, Physiology meant the same as Physics, in its extensive signification, now does. At the present day, it includes the science which treats of the functions of animals or vegetables; an acquaintance with the phenomena the aggregate of which constitute life. It is the science of life. It is divided into animal—Zoöphysiologia, and vegetable — Phytophysiolog''ia, according as it considers the life of animals or of vegetables singly. Comparative physiology comprises both. Physiology is, also, general or special, according as it treats of life in the abstract or in some particular species. To the latter belongs the Physiology of Man, — called also, Hygienic Physiology to distinguish it from Pathological Physiology or Pathology.

PHYSIS, Natura, Sex.

PHYSOCE'LE, Pneumatoce'lē, Hernia vento'sa; Oscheoce'lē flatulen'ta, Emphyse'ma Scroti, from φυσαω, 'I insufflate,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' An emphysematous tumour of the scrotum; probably a case of intestinal hernia, containing much flatus.

PHYSOCEPH'ALUS, from φυσαω, 'I inflate,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' Physoceph'alus. Emphysematous tumefaction of the head.

PHYSOCŒLIA, Tympanites.

PHYSO'DES; from φυσαω, 'I inflate,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Full of air; apparently full of air — applied to tumours, &c.

PHYSOME'TRA, Emphyse'ma U'teri, Hysteroph'ysē, Hysteropsoph'ia, Hysteremphyse'ma, Hystremphyse'ma, Metremphyse'ma, Ædœopsoph'ia uteri'na, Emphyse'ma uteri'num, Infla'tio U'teri, Tym'pany of the Womb, U'terine tympani'tes, from φυσαω, 'I inflate,' and μητρα, 'the womb. A light, tense, circumscribed protuberance in the hypogastrium, obscurely sonorous, with wind occasionally discharged through the os uteri.

PHYSON, Flatulence.

PHYSONCUS, Emphysema.

PHYSOPSOPH'IA; from φυσαω, 'I inflate,' and ψοφος, 'a noise.' A discharge of air with noise.

PHYSOSPASMUS, Colica flatulenta.

PHYSOTHORAX, Pneumothorax.

PHYTIVOROUS, Phytophagous.

PHYTOALOPECIA, Porrigo decalvans.

PHYTO-CHYMISTRY, see Chymistry.

PHYTOLAC'CA DECAN'DRA, P. vulgaris, Poke Weed, Amer'ican Night Shade, Cancer root, Poke, Skoke, Jucato Caleloe, (?) Jalap, Pigeon Berries, Julap cancer root, Sola'num racemo'sum America'num, S. magnum Virginia'num rubrum, Blitum America'num, Garget, (F.) Raisin d'Amérique, Phytolaque à dix étamines, Morelle en grappes, Mechoacan du Canada. Family, Chenopodeæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Decagynia. The leaves, berries, and roots are employed. The young stems, when boiled, are sometimes eaten at table; but when old, they must be cautiously used, as the plant is emetic and cathartic. It is most celebrated as a remedy in chronic rheumatism; and is given in the form of tincture of the ripe berries. It is, also, used in cutaneous eruptions; tinea capitis, itch, cancerous ulcers, &c.

The root is gathered and dried in the fall.

PHYTOLAQUE À DIX ÉTAMINES, Phytolacca decandra.

PHYTOLOGIA MEDICA, Botany, medical.

PHYTOPH'AGOUS, Phytoph'agus; Phytiv'orous, Phytiv'orus; from φυτον, 'a plant,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' Feeding or subsisting on vegetables.

PHYTOPHYSIOLOGIA, see Physiology.

PHYTOSPERM'A, (F.) Phytosperme; from φυτον, 'a vegetable,' and σπερμα, 'sperm.' Particles similar to the spermatozoids of animals, observed in vegetables, and presumed to possess a similar agency in reproduction.

PHYTOTOMY, see Anatomy, (vegetable.)

PHYTOZOON, Zoophyte.

PIA MATER, Pia seu mollis seu ten'uis Mater, Pia meninx, Meninx inte'rior, Meninx chorioï'des, Inner lam'ina of the Méninginc, (Ch.,) Membra'na vasculo'sa Cer'ebri, Membra'na Cer'ebri ten'uis seu mollis seu pro'pria, (F.) Pie mère, Méningette. The pia mater is a very delicate membrane, which covers the brain immediately, penetrates into its anfractuosities, and envelops, also, the cerebellum and the spinal prolongation, &c. Bichat does not regard it as a membrane, properly so called, but as a net-work of blood-vessels, united by a lax areolar tissue. The Pia Mater exterior is the portion of membrane which covers the exterior of the encephalon, and faces the arachnoid externally. The Pia Mater interior is that which lines the cerebral fossæ, into which it penetrates by a cleft situate between the posterior part of the corpus callosum and the fornix; and by two other fissures, situate between the corpora fimbriata and thalami nervorum opticorum. The pia mater contains a great number of granulations similar to the Glandulæ Pacchioni.

PIA MATER TESTIS, Tunica vasculosa—p. Meninx, P. Mater.

PIAN, Framboesia.

PIANS, MOTHER OF, Mama-pian.

PIAR, Fat.

PIARHÆ'MIA; from πιαρ, 'fat,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Fat in the blood.—Simon.

PICA, Malacia—p. Africanorum, Chthonophagia.

PICAC, Euphorbia corollata.

PICACISM'US, Pica'tio, from pix, 'pitch.' Depilation by means of a pitch plaster. Also, Malacia.

PICATIO, Malacia, Picacismus.

PICEA, Pinus abies.

PICERION, Butter.

PICHU'RIM BEANS. The seed of a tree, supposed to be Persea pichurim, Oco'tea pichu'rim, which grows in Brazil, Guiana, Venezuela, and other parts of South America. They are of an elliptical shape; flat on one side, convex on the other; of an aromatic odour between that of nutmegs and sassafras, and of a spicy, pungent taste. The medical properties are the same as those of other aromatics. For the bark, see Pechurim cortex.

PICKERELWEED, SHOVEL, Unisema deltifolia.

PICOTE, Variola.

PICOTEMENT, Pricking.

PICRÆNA EXCELSA, Quassia.

PICRIA, Bitterness.

PICRIUM SPICATUM, Centoubea alba.

PICROCHOLOS, Bilious.

PI'CROMEL, Bilin; from πικρος, 'bitter,' and μελι, 'honey.' A name given by Thénard to a colourless, soft substance, of an acrid, bitter, saccharine taste, nauseous smell, and very soluble in water.

It forms part of the bile, and is classed amongst the animal immediate principles.

PICROPE'GÆ, from πικρος, 'bitter,' and πηγη, 'a spring.' Mineral waters; bitter from the presence of chloride of magnesium.

PICROS, Amarus.

PICROTOX'INE, Picrotox'ina, Picrotox'in, from πικρος, 'bitter,' and τοξινον, 'poison.' A vegetable alkali, discovered by M. Boullay in the Menispernum Cocculus. It crystallizes in quadrangular, white, brilliant, semitransparent prisms; which are excessively bitter, soluble in three parts of alcohol, and in fifteen of boiling water.

The Cocculus Indicus owes its poisonous properties to this principle.

PIE MÈRE, Pia mater.

PIE-MÉPITE, Inflamma'tio piæ matris. A miserably compounded term, employed by M. Grisolle, to express inflammation of the pia mater:—from (F.) pie mère, 'the pia mater,' and ite, itis; a termination denoting inflammation.

PIÈCE, Hepatitis.

PIÈCES D'ANATOMIE ARTIFICIELLES, see Artificial.

PIESTER, Press.

PIESTERION, Press.

PIESTRON, from πιεζω, 'I press.' An instrument recommended by Hippocrates for breaking the bones of the fœtal head when too large to be extracted otherwise.

PIGAMON JAUNÂTRE, Thalictron.

PIGEON BERRIES, Phytolacca decandra—p. Breasted, see Lordosis—p. Tree, Aralia spinosa.

PIGMENT CELLS, see Cell, pigment.

PIGMEN'TAL, from pigmentum, 'paint.' Having relation to pigment or colouring matter.

PIGMENTAL APPARA'TUS, (F.) Appareil pigmental. The apparatus concerned in the coloration of the skin of the coloured varieties of man.—Flourens.

PIGMENTARIUS, Apothecary, Unguentarius.

PIGNUT, Earthnut, Groundnut. The bulbous root of Bu'nium Bulbocas'tanum. Called pignuts, from the fondness of the pig for them. They have been considered to possess a styptic quality; and are deemed serviceable in atonic affections of the kidney.—Hooper.

PIGNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

PIG'S FLARE, Adeps suillus.

PILA, Sphæra, Ball. A gymnastic exercise, much used by the ancients as well as moderns.—Galen. Also, a mortar and a pestle—Ac'onē.

PILA, Mortar, Pillar—p. Damarum, Ægagropila—p. Rupicaprarum, Ægagropila.

PILA MARI'NA, Sphæra Marina, Sphæra Thalas'sia, Halcyo'nium rotun'dum, (F.) Pelote de Mer. Certain light, round, depressed, or oblong masses—inodorous and insipid—in which rushes, hairs, and the débris of shells are met with. These are found on the sea-shores, and have been regarded by Spielmann as consisting chiefly of the roots of the Zos'tera Mari'na seu Marit'ima, Alga Mari'na, Phucagros'tis minor. Iodine is detected in the ashes, which accounts for their success in goître. They have also, been given as a vermifuge.

PILARE MALUM, Trichosis.

PILA'TIO, from pilus, 'a hair.' Fracture of the cranium in which the fissure is narrow, and has the appearance of a hair—a cap'illary fissure, (F.) Fente capillaire.

PILE, Hair.

PILEA PUMI'LA, Richweed, Clearweed, Coolweed; indigenous; Order, Urticaceæ; flowering from July to September; has been used as a wash in poisoning by Rhus. It has a strong, grateful smell.

PILEOLUM, Calotte.

PILEOLUS, Caul, Pileus.

PI'LEOUS, Pilo'sus, Pilose, Pilous, (F.) Pileux. That which relates to the hair. Hairy.

Pileous System of Bichat is that formed by the hair. It comprises the different species of hair of the human body.

PILES, BLIND, Cæcæ hæmorrhoïdes, see Hæmorrhois.
